Before marrying Randall requests Rockwell to give him a physical examination and Rockwell tells him it is not necessary but as the other is insistent he decides to do so. In making the blood test Rockwell's assistant accidentally substitutes infected blood for that of Randall's and in ignorance of the error Rockwell breaks the news to Randall, who leaves the country without any explanation to the girl.

Sometime later Rockwell is told of the mistake. He starts to send word to the girl when something whispers in his ear to wait and after some few months he betrays his friendship for Randall and marries Frances. However, as time goes on Rockwell's conscience gets the better of him and after injecting a poison into his system he writes a letter to Randall telling him of the mistake and then goes home to his wife and confesses to her. Randall returns in time to forgive the dying man and later is united with the girl he madly loves.

The rivals call upon Frances.

Triangle's Fourth Bill

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

THE current week's offerings at the Studebaker theater are, if anything, the best week's program that has yet been screened by the Triangle Film Corporation. "The Sable Lorcha," produced by Lloyd Ingraham of the Fine Arts organization, and "Matrimony," directed by Scott Sidney of the Ince forces, are about on a par as regards entertainment though they are of so entirely different a type that it is unfair to compare them.

This week not a single picture is personally directed by Griffith, Ince or Sennett, though all of these gentlemen supervised the offerings produced by their sub-directors. Ford Sterling and Roscoe Arbuckle are credited with the direction of the Keystone comedies in which they appear and two funnier comedies it would be hard to find.

Howard Hickman, Julia Dean and Thelma Salter in a scene from "Matrimony."

The program is opened by "His Father's Footsteps," which features Ford Sterling, and as the story of the son who flirted with the lady across the hall, until his father discovers the lady's attractiveness and himself gets into the game, is gradually unfolded, gales of laughter swept the house. The trick camera work in the dancing scenes is unusually good and gained laughs by the score.

Tully Marshall and Thomas Jefferson in "The Sable Lorcha" have a most melodramatic vehicle in which to make their debut, but so capably is the story handled that it seems almost possible ere it ends. The mystery of the thrilling Horace Hazeltine tale is most carefully kept up until the very end of the screened story, so that one's curiosity is constantly whetted and he finds himself gripping his seat time and again as fresh complications develop and the mystery grows more exciting. Mr. Marshall does a wonderful bit of work as Soy, the Chinaman bent on obtaining revenge for a deed committed many years before, and Thomas Jefferson as Robert and Donald Cameron, twin brothers, is above criticism. Loretta Blake as Evelyn is pretty and winsome, while Elmer Clifton makes a manly Clyde. Soy, Yup Sing and Murphy, a white conspirator, set out to obtain revenge upon Donald Cameron for his betrayal of a shipload of Chinamen he contracted to smuggle into the United States. Cameron deliberately imprisoned the helpless Chinese in the hold of the sable lorcha (a small Chinese junk) and then fired and scuttled it. For years the two Chinese and their white assistant hunt Cameron and at last they find his twin brother Robert, the man they think is guilty. By craft they drive Robert to the verge of insanity and when he seeks refuge from them on his private yacht they kidnap him and take him to the lowermost recesses of Chinatown, where they plan to drown him alive as he had drowned the helpless Chinese. Clyde and a squad of police arrive barely in time to rescue Robert in a sensational manner and prove that Donald, the twin brother, is the guilty man—and Robert has already been killed by Soy.

Joseph Jefferson in "The Sable Lorchia."

Roscoe Arbuckle and "Fickle Fatty's Fall" again set the house to laughing, for this comedy of the bathing beaches in and about Los Angeles is truly funny and affords Ivy Crosthwaite, a shapely mermaid, an opportunity to display her figure in a one-piece bathing suit. Its climax shows a wheeled chair and an automobile load of police diving off the end of the Venice pier into the ocean.

Julia Dean is the star of the Ince offering entitled "Matrimony," and a more splendidly photographed picture seldom finds its way to the screens of the country. The story raises the question of why a woman should be expected to have to "hold" her husband, when husbands as a general rule make little or no effort to "hold" their wives after marriage. The scenario was constructed by that master of script writing C. Gardner Sullivan, and tells a story of the neglected wife who won her husband back by neglecting him for other men. Howard Hickman convincingly portrays the husband and Thelma Salter is a most charming little daughter. The "other woman" is interpreted by Louise Glaum, and Elizabeth Burbridge lends her good looks to the role of Antoinette, the sister of the unhappy wife. That the story is convincingly told is fully demonstrated by the number of handkerchiefs that were dabbed at feminine eyes all over the house as the scene of the child's birthday party was flashed on the screen and the wife stole silently into the vacant place at the table and later into her former place in her husband's heart. "Matrimony" is a most charming comedy drama.

Thanhouser's "His Wife"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

GERALDINE O'BRIEN proves a most winsome leading woman in the Thanhouser master picture scheduled for release this week on the Mutual program, entitled "His Wife." The story was adapted from a novel by Charlotte Braeme and gives Miss O'Brien an opportunity for some emotional acting of which she takes full advantage.

H. E. Herbert as the husband gives Miss O'Brien ideal support and Lorraine Hurling, as Edith Danvers, proves an unconscious obstacle to the happiness of Nora Dennys and her husband. Special praise is also due Inda Palmer for the "bit" she does as Nora's mother in the scenes where John first meets Nora.

Photographically the production is fully up to the Thanhouser standard and enough thrills are introduced in the story to fully hold the attention of those who may not care for the sympathetically told little love tale upon which it is based.

John and Harry Dennys, brothers, are both in love with pretty Edith Danvers who lives next door, but John, some years later, upon returning from a visit to India, finds his brother gone away and Edith apparently his for the asking.

A scene from "His Wife."

A note left behind by Harry informs John that the hasty departure of the former was predicated upon good reasons, and John later discovers that Harry had gone deeply into debt and fled to avoid trouble.

When John seeks to win the hand and heart of Edith he is met with a reply to the effect that she admires and respects, but cannot marry him. John takes his heartache to the loneliest spot he can find and there, some weeks later, finds a new interest in life in the way of pretty Nora, a simple fishermaid he meets one day scrambling over the rocks in her bare feet, and with her hair blown about her face by the keen sea wind.

As the days pass John and Nora become more than friends and finally he asks her to become his wife and takes her back to his luxurious home in the city, where, on account of the simpleness of her previous life, she feels decidedly embarrassed and out of place.

Later when she meets Edith and beholds the latter in tete-a-tetes with her husband she mistakes their intimacy and friendship and believes the other woman is trying to rob her of her husband. One day when she surprises John with his arm about Edith she is sure of her suspicions and, later, when Harry Dennys unexpectedly returns from Australia and holds a tryst in the garden with Edith she believes the man with Edith's head upon his shoulder is her husband, for Harry is wearing John's overcoat and in the dim light easily passes for his brother.

Thoroughly desperate, Nora puts poison in a glass of wine which she believes will be accepted by Edith, but when her husband raises the glass to his lips she dashes it from his hand and flees to her own room to cry as though her heart would break. John, much puzzled by his wife's conduct, goes to her room to comfort her but finds a note saying she has returned to the sea from whence she came. Mystified, he wanders down to the water's edge and there, upon finding her lace scarf and frightened dog, comes to the belief that she has committed suicide.

In reality she had leaped into the waves to drown herself but had been rescued by some smugglers who take her ashore at a distant point and place her in a convent. Years later Nora, now a nun in the convent, volunteers to go to a leper colony in Australia, but changes cars at a station near John's home and out of curiosity visits the churchyard in the vicinity. There she finds her husband weeping before a tombstone erected in memory of his supposedly dead wife. Husband and wife face each other at last and then Nora discovers that John has always loved her and that his attentions to Edith were caused by the fact that the latter had been Harry's secret wife during all these years. Explanations occur on both sides and finally Nora learns that since she has not taken her final vows she need not remain a nun, but can return to her husband, which she does without delay.

"The Green Cloak"

Reviewed by George W. Graves

THE recent George Kleine contribution to the Kleine-Edison Feature Service, entitled "The Green Cloak," is a detective story in essence, although the honor of solving the mystery belongs to the Professor (William Anker), whose timely use of hypnotism determines more than circumstantial evidence and the deductions of the sleuths.

Irene Fenwick, not only a Broadway star in name but in ability as well, is splendid in the leading role of Ruth McAllister. Prominent in the remainder of the cast are: Anna Reader, Blanche Aimee, Richie Ling, John Davidson and Frank Belcher. The latter is an excellent type for the role of Sergeant Sims.

There are a number of well effected surprises the strongest of which probably is the scene depicting the sudden discovery of the dead Paul Duncan by the horror-stricken group gathered in the adjoining room. There is also sufficient mystery enshrouding the procedings to arouse a keen interest and eager speculation as to the outcome; the reward of a well-handled detective plot.

After Professor McAllister and his daughter return from the West, John Gilbert renews his attentions to Ruth, and is perplexed by her coolness. Soon after, a stranger calls at the house and asks for Ruth. Gilbert is further mystified to note the distress that the man causes her. Ruth introduces the visitor to her father as a Mr. Gerald, a man whom she had met while in the West.

While the professor and Gerald are having a quiet little chat, the latter is almost petrified with fear on receiving an omniously accusing glance from the butler, who appears at the door. In great agitation, Gerald attempts to excuse himself, claiming that he has several important letters that demand instant attention. But the professor insists that he write them in the library. Some time later, he is found dead at the writing desk—apparently strangled. Ruth breaks the startling news to the company that this man, whose real name is Paul Duncan, was her husband. They had married secretly in Denver, and Duncan had deserted her immediately after the ceremony.

A scene from "The Green Cloak."

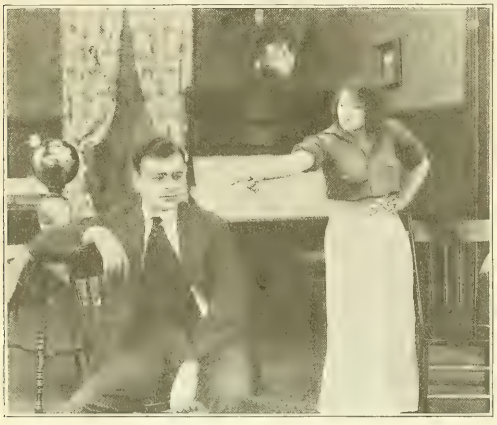
As a tassel from Ruth's coat is found clutched in the dead man's hand, the girl is in a decidedly compromising position. But through the discovery of tattoo marks on the maid similar to those on the wrist of the victim, and the subsequent hypnotism of the maid by the Professor, the truth comes out. The maid, butler, and Duncan were members of the same gang. Duncan had turned traitor and the man, disguised as a butler, had carried out the band's vengeance. The presence of the tassel in the man's hand is explained by the fact that the maid, passing through the library with her mistress' coat, witnessed the strangling of the victim, and the butler arranged circumstances which pointed to Ruth as guilty of the crime.

"The Better Woman"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy



A RATHER unusual character, unusual in romantic drama, is the central figure in the Equitable Pictures Corporation's release for November 1, written by Richard Campbell and entitled "The Better Woman." This character is a young girl who in her determination to enjoy the fulfillment of her love for a man betrothed to another, does not stop at an ignoble act, but later she gives substantial proof that her love is sincere.

In the beginning this girl promises to be of the type many playwriters use to disrupt a happy home or bring ruination upon a prospering young man, and one is surprised when she proves to be "The Better Woman," that is, she is better for this particular man. The other woman is just as good according to the standards of society but the young engineer decides that Kate is better for him. In other words he falls in love with her.

But then it is not essential that titles exactly qualitfy a certain character or plot. The character is an interesting one and, as with the others, it gives opportunities to Lenore Ulrich and a well chosen cast. The story has many dramatic moments and admits of spirited, entertaining action.

"The Better Woman" was produced by the Triumph Film Corporation under the direction of Joseph A. Golden. Mr. Golden has used attractive settings and as a whole his direction is ample. The entertainment which Kate provides for her guests at an affair consists of a series of living statues. Some famous sculptures are reproduced. This seems to meet with the entire approval of the guests for they applaud heartily.

Lenore Ulrich is featured. She renders a pleasing performance. Miss Ulrich makes Kate Tripler, the girl whose craving for love changes the current of three lives, human and quite convincing. Kate is a motherless, unlettered girl, who deceives a newcomer to the small town, causing him to believe that his fiancee, in the East, has jilted him. To quote a subtitle, he marries Kate "in haste, and repents at leisure."

A scene from "The Better Woman."

When he and Kate come to live in the East he learns that Aline has been true to him. His wife is devoted to him and he soon finds himself returning her love. Then he discovers that Kate has deceived him and he denounces her. She leaves him and returns to her father. Absence from her makes him realize that he is in love with Kate and he follows her. In the closing scene they are happily reunited.

Lowell Sherman is all of satisfactory as Frank Barclay, the engineer. The other parts also receive adequate treatment. The cast consists of Lucy Cotton as Aline, Charles Hutchinson as Jim Travers, Will Browning as Bill Carlin and Ben Graham as "pop" Tripler.

"The Diamond from the Sky"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

A N aeroplane falling through space offers only one of the many thrills that makes chapter twenty-eight of the North American film serial unique and interesting. The wreck of the aeroplane in this installment of the story is wonderfully handled by the director, and convincing in every way. So realistic is the fall of the giant man-made bird that one is almost ready to say that it is the photograph of a real accident.

Another particularly convincing scene in chapter twenty-eight, is the death of Luke Lovell beneath the wheels of Blair's automobile. So carefully has the film been cut that audiences all over the country will undoubtedly grip their seats and hold their breaths as the accident occurs on the screen.

The Gypsy camp sights the aeroplane.

As the current installment opens, one beholds Hagar, the gypsy, on her deathbed in a little camp, attended by Esther. Far away in Los Angeles Arthur Stanley, more recently known as John Powell, is seriously contemplating taking his own life since he has about decided that the world holds nothing more for him.

He pours out a glass of wine, and into this drops a deadly poison, but ere he can drink the potion, he is interrupted by the entrance of Luke Lovell, and turns to face the gypsy, who has come to levy blackmail upon the man whose secret he has learned.

This scene contains a touch of sardonic humor, for Lovell, after removing from Powell's finger a diamond ring, compels the millionaire to escort him to his bed chamber, and there he arrays himself in the clothes of Powell, helps himself to the other's watch, gloves and then, after surveying himself in the mirror, escorts Powell downstairs and, lifting the glass of wine from the table, drinks facetiously to the millionaire's health.

Too late he discovers that he has drunk the glass of poisoned wine. His throat begins to burn and he climbs out the window and into the open air in an attempt to quench the fire that seems to be consuming him. Half dragging himself he attempts to cross the roadway, but is struck by Blair's speeding automobile and ground to death beneath its wheels.

Blair and Vivian, who is his companion, look with horror upon the form of the man they have killed, since they believe it is Arthur himself, due to the fact that Luke was dressed in Arthur's clothing.

Blair and Vivian are returning from the aviation field at which Powell keeps his aeroplane, and there to insure his death, Blair has tampered with a bracing wire of the machine in the hope that when Arthur next went aloft, the wire would give away and the machine, crippled, would fall to earth.

Having seen Luke's death beneath the wheels of Blair's car, Arthur resolves to flee from the place to the aviation field, where he climbs into his aeroplane and goes aloft.

Several unusual scenes depicting the flight of the aeroplane are here inserted, and at last, as Blair had foreseen, the wire snaps and Arthur's aeroplane goes crashing toward the earth.

From the gypsy camp the drop of the aeroplane has been noted, and the gypsies gaze with horror as they see it go tumbling downward, turning end over end, to finally alight in the branches of a tree from which it bounces off and alights upon the ground.

Horrified, the gypsies rush up to the wreckage and frantically pull it aside to discover the corpse of the aviator himself. Just at this point the picture ends, to be continued a week later.

"The Rights of Man"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

LIBERTY through education is the basis of the Lubin five-part war drama, "The Rights of Man," released October 25, on the V. L. S. E. Program. In this story the responsibility for war is put upon the absolute monarchs, who inherit their power, which is that of man, and who call upon a divine power for aid in time of stress, which is often of their own making. While "The Rights of Man" is frank in its depiction of the misrule of absolute monarchs, and its principle is that peace will result from their overthrow, its contention is that this is to be brought about through enlightenment and not revolution.

Lohra quiets the revolutionists.

Those who believe that a military aristocracy is the cause of war are many. But as many, if not more, believe that while a war party may precipitate a war it is not really the cause. Trade jealousy, the control of foreign markets is just as logical a cause in every sense. But no matter, this play is a propaganda for peace. It makes its statements with directness and is strengthened by a highly intelligent argument.

Louis Reeves Harrison is the author of this admirably constructed play, which was written directly for the screen, and there are many evidences of Mr. Harrison's knowledge of screen requirements. Something distinctly novel about "The Rights of Man" is that the action all takes place in one day. From sun-up to sun-down the horrors of war are depicted, absolute monarchy is vigorously attacked, and a pleasing romance is concluded, in the action which occupies five reels. No nation is indicated, nor is there any attempt to ridicule the patriotism of peoples who adhere to their monarch, even though he be unworthy.

The story plays in an imaginary kingdom, and is the romance of a princess with an American surgeon, serving in a field hospital. The princess is a student and supports her father in his conviction that absolute monarchy is inconsistent. Her father is killed and the Princess finishes his uncompleted work of giving financial aid to a party of conspirators against the crown. After escaping from the debauched Crown Prince, who wishes to marry her, she returns to the surgeon and they decide to live in America.

This Lubin offering was produced by John H. Pratt, who had made the scenes of devastation and misery from wholesale slaughter strong in their suggestion. The horrors of war are vividly depicted without being overdone, or dwelled upon to the point of becoming depressing. The dramatic situations are plausibly reached and at times the interest becomes exciting, but somehow one feels that the action in many places could be speeded up.

In the cast are Richard Buhler, Rosetta Brice and Francis Joyner in the important parts. George Clarke, Charles Brandt, Margaret Moore and George Bliss are prominent in the large supporting cast.

"The Trail of the Serpent"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

A MELODRAMA of the kind that made motion pictures famous is "The Trail of the Serpent," the two-reel Mustang drama, scheduled for release on Friday, November 5. The story is laid in the West and gives ample opportunity for fast riding, narrow escapes and spirited action by such characters as a western miner, his pretty niece, a city crook who wants to steal the mine from her, a handsome hero who aids her in retaining it, a Mexican, and other typical western characters.

Then, to make doubly sure that it is a regular melodrama, the producer offers us the old mine and "the papers," possession of which is sought by both the villain and the hero, all of which results in the story becoming exceedingly exciting ere the end is reached. E. Forrest Taylor is the manly hero, Helene Rosson the pretty heroine, and George Webb the villain, who seeks to obtain the papers and later the mine. Harry Edmondson and Nell Franzen are Pedro and Carlotta, two Mexican characters, who lend "atmosphere" to the production.

Big Ben, a western miner, on his deathbed leaves his mine, "The Marguerite," to his niece, after whom the mine was named and makes Bob Hadley his executor. When Marguerite learns that she has inherited the mine, she immediately starts West to claim the property, and on the way encounters Knox, a crook, who ingratiates himself into her favor as a business advisor and suitor.

Hadley shows the fair Marguerite over the mining property, and advises the girl to sell it, since it is considered practically worthless.

Knox makes anything but a favorable impression upon Hadley, and the latter is, therefore, extremely surprised when Knox comes to him with a proposition to pay one thousand dollars for the mine, explaining that he does so only for Marguerite's sake.

The heiress visits her mine.

Hadley accepts the bid and gives Knox a deed to the property, but the latter, later, drops the deed on the street, and it is found by Carlotta, a Mexican girl, who returns it to Hadley, whom she loves.

In returning the paper Carlotta casually mentions that Pedro, a Mexican prospector, is securing much gold from the supposedly worthless Marguerite mine, he having found a secret tunnel that leads to a pocket in the mine.

Hadley discovers that Knox is aware of Pedro's discovery and had bought the mine because it was really valuable. Later, when the two come face to face in a local barroom, Knox brags of his easy victory over Hadley, and is much surprised later when he learns that Hadley has recovered the deed to the mine. Knox goes to Hadley's cabin to recover the deed, and when his silhouette appears on the window, Pedro, who is Hadley's enemy, shoots, thinking the shadow on the window is that of the man he hates.

Hadley, returning home, finds Knox dead, turns Pedro over to justice, and later marries Marguerite, who is thoroughly disillusioned as regards Knox.

American's "The Wasp"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

VIVIAN RICH, in "The Wasp," scheduled for release on Monday, November 1, has another opportunity to appear in men's clothing and star as the heroine of a melodrama.

In this last offering from the Flying "A" studios, Miss

The "Wasp" escapes her pursuers.

Rich is cast as the "Wasp," a female porch climber, who ultimately reforms and becomes one of the most vigorous workers in a charity bureau. Opposite Miss Rich plays Walter Spencer, in the character of J. Hart, a millionaire, who brings about the "Wasp's" reform and later contributes largely to her charitable enterprise.

As the picture opens, the "Wasp" is seen returning from one of her burglaries and examining a brooch, which she has stolen. The sight of the brooch recalls to her a scene of her early girlhood, when, at a feminine school to which she was sent by her father, she was accused falsely of theft.

This blot on her fair name at an early age, impresses her with the impossibility of keeping straight, and she soon sinks to poverty and from that to theft.

On another occasion the "Wasp" has an exceedingly narrow escape from the police and only manages to save herself by leaping into a beautiful automobile standing beside the curb. While the police are searching the vicinity the owner of the automobile, J. Hart, a millionaire, enters the car and is startled to find a beautiful girl dressed in men's clothing.

The "Wasp" throws herself completely upon the mercy of the man in whose car she has sought refuge, and tells him the story of her downfall. At the suggestion of Hart, the "Wasp" finally renounces her life of crime, and becomes the leading spirit of a charitable bureau, which attends to the wants of the needy. Later, she is the means of restoring to Hart a watch, stolen from him by a pickpocket who was a former pal of hers, and the millionaire, impressed by her act, offers to assist the "Wasp" at any time she may call on him.

Weeks later the charitable bureau finds itself short of funds, though the needy are in more distress than usual, and at last the "Wasp," driven to desperation by the suffering of those about her, returns to her life of burglary, and, by pawning the jewels she steals, succeeds in raising funds for the charity bureau.

In robbing Hart's home the girl leaves behind a note, explaining that the robbery was committed in order that the needs of suffering humanity might be met. Armed with this note, Hart seeks the girl he has reformed, and learning the truth of the statement in the note, contributes enough to place the charity bureau beyond all further need.

As the story ends it is clearly evident that Hart's friendship for the "Wasp" is soon to ripen into love and culminate in a wedding.

"The Master Touch"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THERE have been "professionals" of every description, but it remained for J. Rufus Wallingford to invent and introduce the "professional goat" into the world of finance. A professional goat is one who for a price accepts the blame of others. He is especially desirable to crooked bank directors who know full well that the day of reckoning is near. Wallingford offers his goat services to J. D. Prine, "half portion" town merchant and banker, who is fourth on Violet Warden's list, and who has made fake loans with almost every cent on deposit in the bank of which he is president.

"The Master Touch" is the title of this, the fourth adventure, in Pathe's picturization of George Randolph Chester's "New Adventures of Wallingford," this well known author's best known fiction. The ease with which Wallingford reduces J. D. Prine's large, unhealthily acquired bank account brings one to the conclusion that to get rich quick is not the difficult feat the innocent by-stander believes. Of course, like the well known egg of Columbus, it's very simple when you have been shown.

J. D. Prine, who owns a general merchandise store and is president of the bank in a country town, is made to pay the price of his folly in bringing about the ruination of Violet and Fanny Warden's father as follows: The girls learn from Qualey, who was discharged from the bank because he was too honest, that the directors have made loans to themselves with the depositors' money, and that they are loath to return their respective shares. With this information Wallingford takes himself off to the bank, and at a meeting persuades the directors to give him $100,000 to take over their debts.

A humorous moment in "The Master Touch."

Then Blackie spreads the news that the bank has been looted. The townspeople start a run on the place. Wallingford assures Prine that they will lynch him if he and his associates do not make up the deficiency. Prine is persuaded and makes good. J. Rufus sallies forth from the bank with a certified check for the amount charged for his services. In working his way into the good graces of the town Wallingford has taken an option on a building-site next to Prine's store. To be rid of this he has sent to him thousands of skunks. Prine objects, but he is told that these animals are necessary in the business he intends conducting. Rather than lose all his customers the merchant buys the option for double its price.

The action in this episode is breezy and of the kind that finds favor with screen patrons and there is some good comedy. The latter element being supplied by the peculiarity of that at once harmless and dangerous mammal, the skunk. Burr McIntosh and Max Figman bring forth the possibilities of their parts and are supported by an able cast which includes Lolita Robertson.

"A Western Governor's Humanity"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

SPECIAL interest is centered around Lubin's "A Western Governor's Humanity," a three-reel production to be released on November 3. The scenes of the story are laid in a country where once was a mighty desert, where pioneers toiled, cleared the ground and erected homes and out of their efforts was born a fertile valley and it stands today as a monument, represented by the children of Arizona.

Governor W. P. Hunt, the present governor of Arizona, actually takes part in this production and without a doubt this adds much to the realism and absorbing interest of the story. The story was written by Romaine Fielding and he also portrays the character of Robert McKnight, the son of Sheriff McKnight which part is played by Roscoe Karnes, Audell Higgins as Chicago Ann, Elsie Burns as Mrs. McKnight; Vinnie Burns as Beth McKnight and Pinky Bell as Pinky, Robert's little sister, complete the cast.

The sheriff and his posse are much chagrined over the fact that the horse thieves with "White Mask" their leader, have again stolen and escaped and the sheriff determines to let no one but his deputy know of the silent hunt which he takes up for the notorious gang.

At last he and his deputy come upon the rustlers' camp and Monte Red, one of the rustlers, shoots the deputy. The sheriff gets the drop on the men who are assisted by their outlaw leader, the "Mask." The sheriff calls the leader to his side and drawing the mask from over his head discovers it to be his own son, and when the sheriff asks who fired the shot which his deputy, Monte Red says that the

The sheriff's son, his mother and sisters.

"Mask" did it. Robert, the sheriff's son is taken to prison and there the sheriff makes a charge against his own flesh and blood of murder and says "The Law must take its course."

The boy's mother, his sister, Beth, and his little sister, Pinky, all visit the governor to plead for the life of the boy. The governor resists the mother's and sister's heart-breaking words but when Pinky calls upon him he listens with kindly attitude and then with the child hastens to the penitentiary and arrives just in time to save the son who is being hanged by the sheriff. He reprieves the boy and five minutes after the death which might have been, a deputy sheriff rides madly into the jail yard and delivers to the sheriff a signed confession of Monte Red, thus a western governor's humanity proved the saving of an innocent life.

"The Yellow Peril"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

GOOD acting and a colorful production play their important parts in holding the interest in the characters whose fortunes are dealt with in "Neal of the Navy." In the ninth episode, which is entitled "The Yellow Peril," the quality of these two elements and their importance in making for the success of this popular serial are more apparent than in any of the previous chapters.

If interest is centered upon the people in the play, their actions, even if they be commonplace and what is expected, seldom fall short of being interesting. The action in this chapter occurs on an obscure island in the southern seas and the carefully chosen settings and other details surround this action with an atmosphere which raises it above the ordinary.

A scene from "The Yellow Peril."

The acting of Lillian Lorraine as Annette Ilington, William Courtleigh, Jr., as Neal Hardin, and Edwin Brady in the part of the villainous Hernandez is, as it has been right along, largely responsible for the appeal of the picture. These players are always active, and this quick action does not give one time to take into account that some of their actions are not always the result of keen thinking, for with "Neal of the Navy," as with all serials, credulity is little heeded in the endeavor to procure thrills.

In the previous chapter Annette recovered the map which Hernandez had stolen, and in the beginning of "The Yellow Peril" she and her party sail further south in the hope of locating the treasure island. They stop at the Island of Tortuga, where the ship's doctor discovers a number of cases of yellow fever. Determined to be rid of Annette and Neal, Hernandez, who has made them his prisoners, takes them to a vast swamp to be the prey of the disease-carrying mosquitoes. After a number of exciting adventures they are rescued by a searching party from the village.

World's "Bought"

Reviewed by Hugh Hoffman

A MODERN drama with a new twist is becoming more and more of a rarity. Hence, when found, should be made note of. In this instance the principal honors go to the author, Lawrence McCloskey, for having turned out a society drama with a new kink and also a punch. The punch is literal as well as metaphorical.

The underlying idea is that of a handsome and healthy man selling himself to a woman. Rather a bold subject for anything but an experienced author to trifle with. In this play, however, the act of a man selling himself is ennobled by the skillful handling of Mr. McCloskey. True, there are certain times when probabilities stretch to the breaking point, but there is no doubt of it all being possible, and it is more than likely that this same state of affairs has existed in real life in more than one instance.

Scene from World's "Bought."

As the story runs, a society girl's fiance leaves for Europe. He was soon afterwards one of the victims of the Titanic disaster, and, without the father's knowledge, the girl's mother made arrangements with a poor struggling literary man to become the husband of her daughter. In short, he was bought for a price to cover up another man's sin. In doing this, the impoverished writer threw over the boarding house mistress' daughter, who loved him dearly. The young writer, after his marriage to the girl, found her to be cold toward him and inclined to intrigue with other men. Meanwhile he had ingratiated himself with her parents and had been taken into the father's business.

The wife's outside affections brought matters to the turning point and her husband left her father's business and his house after handing back the money with which he had been bought. The girl's father afterward became prostrated through business strain, and in a dying condition sent for his son-in-law to come and run his failing business during his illness. The son-in-law returned, and by hard work brought success out of failure. He, too, then collapsed from overwork and went back to his old boarding house, as he supposed, to die. He did not die, however, and in one of his awakenings he found his wife sitting at his bedside, and then and there their married life was begun over again.

The picture was produced by Barry O'Neill, it being his first production for the World Film Corporation. The leading parts were played by Frederick Lewis and Ethel Grey Terry. Miss Terry had a little edge on Mr. Lewis in the matter of convincing work, the former being a trifle stagy. The balance of the cast was made up of excellent actors in every part. The production as a whole is more than good and will make a most interesting feature on any program.

Employed Many Extras

George Lessey, director general of the Eastern Film producing forces has just finished the five reel production of "Cap'n Eri," the sea story feature by Joseph C. Lincoln, starring George Gunny, brother of the immortal screen comedian.

One of the effects called for in the production of "Cap'n Eri" is the burning of the village pool room and saloon and to obtain the proper realistic atmosphere for this spectacular event, Mr. Lessey secured the services of the entire Eastern Film Corporation staff, numbering three hundred people, together with twelve hundred extras which he secured from the town of Providence. Among the latter were many summer villagers and prominent residents of the town, who enjoyed their picture playing experience immensely.

"Cap'n Eri" contains many sensational and spectacular scenes and the title role is assumed by George Bunny, whose similarity of face and figure to that of his late brother is quite startling. "Cap'n Eri" will shortly be released on one of the feature programs.

Ella Hall of Universal

It is natural to suppose that the film children of today will be the film stars of tomorrow. Ella Hall, who for the past six months has been playing ingenue leads in the Rex Company of which Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley are co-directors, is just betwixt and between. She is sixteen years old, and she can still play the parts of a woman or a child. She has been on the stage or in pictures since she was a very little girl, but a glance at her career shows that she is progressing toward greater things.

Ella Hall.

Ella Hall was chosen by David Belasco to play the principal part in his production of "The Grand Army Man." This was her first stage experience. She understudied Mary Pickford in "The Warrens of Virginia" and following this engagement appeared with Isabel Irving in "The Girl Who Has Everything." While playing with Mabel Taliaferro it was suggested that motion pictures held great opportunity for her.

Shortly after this she began her career in pictures. She first worked under the direction of David Griffith with the Biograph for two years. For one year she was with the Reliance under James Kirkwood, and before joining the Universal forces she played in Bison dramas under the direction of Fred J. Balshofer.

Western Village Will Burn This Week

Interest is at a fever pitch at Inceville this week over the sensation that is in store for all Incevillians in a few days, when an entire western village will be razed by fire for some scenes in the current Ince-Triangle feature in which William S. Hart will be starred. Under the direction of Hart, in collaboration with Ince, the last scenes, requiring this set, are being made this week and before another fortnight has passed the picturesque group of buildings which now depicts a hamlet of the frontier days, will have become a smouldering mass of charred debris.

The fire will be kindled within a structure now serving as a church, and will, it is expected, last for more than an hour, so solidly have the various buildings been constructed.

Emmy Wehlen of Rolfe-Metro

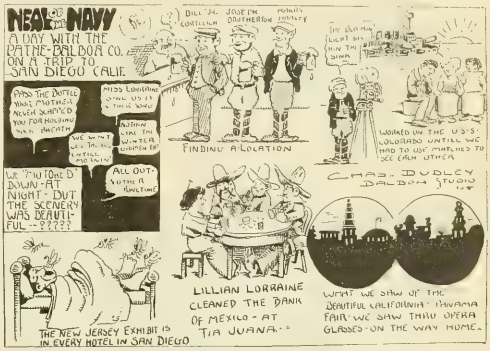
In "Tables Turned," the five-part feature production just completed at the Rolfe-Metro studio, Emmy Wehlen, the charming Viennese actress, wore specially designed gowns that were fashioned by the foremost modistes in New York and Paris, and many suggestions in design were made by Miss Wehlen, who is a genius in designing.

Emmy Whelen.

Although Miss Wehlen is perhaps best known as a star in musical comedy and light opera, she has displayed a remarkable versatility in her work as a screen artist. Her initial bow in the realms of the silent drama was in "When a Woman Loves," a Rolfe-Metro production. Her success was instantaneous. In "Tables Turned" she has surpassed her first effort, stamping herself as a permanent picture star.

Miss Wehlen was born in Vienna, but has lived in England since she was a child. She was the leading woman at the famed Gaiety in London for two years, and had the leading singing part in "The Merry Widow," "The Dollar Princess" and other big productions. Last season she appeared here in the stellar female role in "Tonight's the Night," the big Gaiety production which the Messrs. Shuberts brought over from London.

Adopts Offical Trade Mark



Here is a reproduction of the official trade mark of the Motion Picture Board of Trade, adopted and copyrighted by the publicity committee of the board. The spread-eagle with its shield and message of "Progression, Protection, Promotion," the organization's slogan, will hereafter appear on all stationery, circulars and printed matter issuing from the office of the board. It will be a distinguishing mark and evidence of standing in the trade for the users.

The trade mark will become a permanent part of the trade journals, and will also appear on the letterheads, films, lithographs, advertising matter and in the house organs of many of the manufacturers. Cuts of it will be made in a number of sizes, to accommodate the needs of those who wish to use it. Present plans are to have membership buttons made of the same design, also.

Some of the exhibitor-members have secured permission to use it in their programs and advertising matter and on their slides and lobby display. The trade mark, designed by Lambart Guenther, art director of the New York Tribune and one of the best artists in America, is easily handled for embossing, stamping or printing, and is a distinct sign of stability and permanency in the motion picture industry.

Balboa's Cartoonist

Balboa has a cartoonist who could make his way as funny man for the newspapers, as well as a screen artist. He is Charles Dudley, whose splendid work in many feature films put out by the Horkheimer brothers has made for him an enviable place in filmdom. At present Dudley is playing the part of Joe Welcher in "Neal of the Navy." Though it is that of a cad, Dudley's sincere work is always admired. In his spare moments, he depicts the lighter side of the players' lives on paper. Dudley's drawings are natural, as he has never studied cartooning. His likenesses are good. About the Balboa studio his drawings are highly prized.

A day with the Pathe Balboa Company on a trip to San Diego, California.

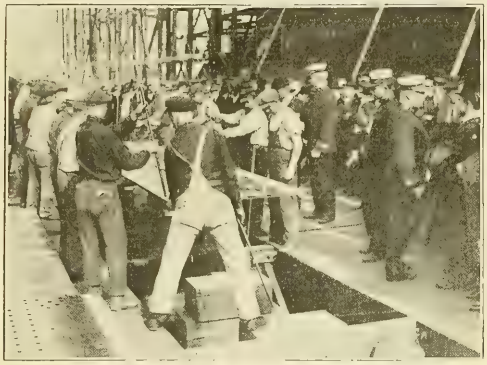
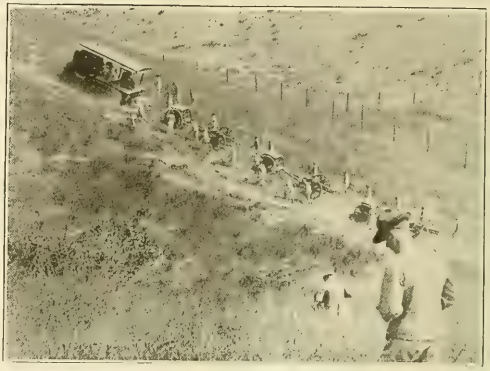
Ocean Company at Work



In the initial production of the Ocean Film Corporation, the name of which is being withheld until its release, the company now working at Jacksonville, Florida, under the direction of Joseph Smiley, has met a series of unexpected incidents that have tended to make life interesting.

In a scene intended to demonstrate the brute strength of character, the role assumed by Percy Standing, Mr. Smiley intended having Mr. Standing fell a huge pine tree with a few strokes of an ax, but little or no impression being made upon the sturdy tree, Mr. Standing essayed to push the huge pine over, which he successfully accomplished, the tree falling within less than a foot from William Marshall, the cameraman, who without a quiver kept grinding his camera.



The effect produced is said to be more than startling.

Among the many pretty young women who have joined the forces of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company at Universal City recently is Miss Constance Johnson, late of the Lasky Company. Miss Johnson has become a member of the company directed by Leon Kent.

News of the Week as Shown in Films

Laying of keel of the "California," the first electrically propelled battleship. Copyright, 1915, Universal Animated Weekly.

Special demonstration of new army transportation methods at San Diego, Calif. Copyright, 1915, Pathe News.

Results of serious landslide at the Culebra Cut, Panama Canal. Copyright, 1915, Pathe News.

President Wilson lays cornerstone of Memorial Amphitheater at Arlington, Va. Copyright, 1915, Universal Animated Weekly.

A view from the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial of "Shadow Lawn," President Wilson's new summer home. Copyright, 1915, International Film Service, Inc.

Scene from Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, showing the Rookies being attacked, at Chicago, Ill. Copyright, 1915, International Film Service, Inc.

Brevities of the Business

PACIFIC COAST NEWS

By "Capt. Jack" Poland.

Opening of the fall and winter festivities in motion picture circles will be inaugurated Thursday, October 28, at Shrine Auditorium, by a grand masque costume ball given under the personal direction of Charlie Murray, the well known Keystone comedian. Big vaudeville features, including two orchestras of fifty pieces, will be provided and it is rumored that all the big people of filmdom will be there to greet Charlie and his ball de masqueraders. A big confetti battle will be fought. This is advertised as the only ball of its kind ever held west of Madison Square Garden, New York City.

The real select affair of the season is promised for Thanksgiving night, when the Hotel Alexandria management, under the personal invitation of Manager Morgan, the prince of western hotel men, plans a grand Thanksgiving ball and dinner at the famous California hostelry to be given as a courtesy to the newly formed Motion Picture Directors' Association and the stars of the film world sojourning in Southern California. This promises to be the most notable party of the early season.

And still another one is announced, the Exhibitors' Association, the organization that takes the place of the former Southern California Exhibitors' Association, plans a big Welcome-back-to-California ball early in December in honor of Mary Pickford, queen of the films and star of the Famous Players.

The newly organized Motion Picture Directors' Association is meeting with strong and substantial encouragement. A movement is already under way to establish a permanent club house in one of the most desirable sections of Los Angeles, where weekly meetings, receptions and social affairs may be held. The idea of the directors' organization seems to be for the men who produce motion pictures to get closer together, study out serious and important problems that confront the industry and to work harmoniously and efficiently for the furtherance of the great cause they so ably represent. Names on the membership list comprise many of the most successful directors and producers of the country, and it is proposed to bring in members from every studio in the world, either as active or associate affiliators.

George Kann, former secretary and assistant treasurer of the Universal New York offices, has arrived in Los Angeles and assumed the business management of the $1,000,000 Universal City studios of the big organization he represents. Mr. Kann has been greeted and welcomed by heads of staffs and department managers, directors, stars and players, many of whom he has known for several years, and he promises to maintain out west the able and intelligent prestige he established as an executive of the company in the East.

Henry M. ("Pathe") Lehrmann, president and general manager of the L-Ko Company, has returned from a business trip to New York, and is again in harness producing new and laughable comedies for the Universal program under L-Ko brand.

Tom Chatterton, former NYMP director, who is now playing opposite Edna Maison at the Universal studios, is making good and adding to his prestige as a player of film roles.

A private exhibition at Tally's Broadway theater Wednesday evening of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Plays rendition of "Carmen," featuring the celebrated operatic star, Geraldine Farrar, drew unanimous approval and expressions of delight from a large audience of motion picture celebrities and invited guests. Producer Cecil B. DeMille was congratulated on all sides and the work of the noted star, Farrar, was pronounced the highest in feature class. The details of the great production were worked out most artistically.

Carl H. Pierce, special representative of the Bosworth, Inc., organization, made a hurried visit to Los Angeles headquarters this week, coming from Columbus, Ohio, and stopping in several cities en route in the interests of the production, "Hypocrites." He says he is the busiest man in the game just now, fighting politics, etc.

Your correspondent is in receipt of many kind words from motion picture people over the able newsy manner in which the Pacific coast sections are covered by Motography each week, all of which adds to the pleasure of representing, even in so small a way, such a large and reliable trade paper.

After the festivities in connection with the visit of the sixty-one Universal Beauties to the picture city were over, Miss Gloria Fonda was one of the several girls who were decided upon by the Universal officials for picture work. Miss Fonda was given a small part in one of the productions, and showed a talent that surprised everyone. Later she was given a more important role in Carter De Haven comedy-drama, "The College Orphan," and did it so well that Director-General McRae had Miss Fonda cast for the leading part in "The Masked Substitute," a one-reel drama which William C. Dowlan is directing and playing lead as well.

Gloria Fonda in "The Masked Substitute."

NEW YORK NOTES

Arthur James spent last week-end with his Peerless in the Wading River section of Long Island. Monday morning he returned to his chair at the head of the Metro publicity department, permanently free from all material memories of the cold which recently settled on his chest and threatened to start something.

J. W. Binder, active organizer and executive chairman of the Motion Picture Board of Trade, returned from Chicago early this week.

Film Market Quotations and Financial Gossip

Supplied by R. D. Small of A. E. Butler & Co., Chicago.

	Bid	Asked
American Film Co., Inc....	86	95
Biograph Company	42	57
Colonial M. P. Corp.....	1¼	4	*
General Film Corp., pref...	40	48
Mutual Film Corp., pref....	49½	53
Mutual Film Corp., com...	49	52
N. A. Film Corp., pref.....	73½	..
N. A. Film Corp., com.....	65	80
New York M. P. Corp.....	64	71
Thanhouser Film Corp....	1¾	3¼*
Triangle Film Corp.....	6⅝	7	*
Universal Film Mfg. Co...200		..
Vogue Films, Inc.....119		..
World Film Corp.....	3½	4¼*

*Par $5.00.

North American Film Corporation will release its thirtieth and last chapter on November 22. Immediately thereafter competition for the suggestions for the best sequel will be open to the public, the winner to receive $10,000. It is stated in New York that new bookings in smaller cities where exhibitors are just now beginning the picture with chapter one, are coming into the executive offices with a steadiness that indicates a long life for this serial when the big towns are through with it. There will have been issued on November 22 twelve miles of negative on this serial from which prints have been made, totaling 6,000,000 feet or 1,000 miles of positives.

Universal Film Manufacturing Co. Bidders appeared in the market for stock at $200 per share, which is 50 points higher than the previously published bid. In justice to Universal it should be stated that seldom if ever does any of this stock come on the market, and a bid of even this figure may represent a waste of time on the prospective purchaser's part.

New York Motion Picture Corporation eased off during the week with sales reported at 65 in New York, but firmed up within the last two days and 68½ and 69 has been bid.

Triangle Film Corporation registered a slight decline at the close of last week and the volume of trading at this lower level has increased, according to the records of the New York Curb. The quality of the pictures—in the opinion of many of the film fans—has been advanced since the first production, thus affording a fair average as to what Messrs. Ince, Griffith and Sennett will be expected to do.

W. A. Williams, formerly of the Excelsior Film Company and more recently connected with the exchange department of the film business in the capacity of manager of the Williams film exchange, returned to the production end of pictures a few weeks ago as leading man in "How Molly Made Good," a feature produced by the Photo Drama Company.

Nicholas Power received endless congratulations on Friday, October 22. It was his sixty-first birthday.

CHICAGO GOSSIP

John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, came to Chicago on Friday last. Mr. Freuler went to Milwaukee to look over his many interests there before returning to New York.

Arthur H. Sawyer, who is in Chicago representing the Cort Film Company and meeting feature buyers from all over the country who are anxious to obtain the new Cort picture featuring Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle, entitled, "The Whirl of Life," was a visitor to Motography's office on the 25. Mr. Sawyer feels like a permanent resident of Chicago, having been here four weeks.

"Jack" Cunningham, the able publicity representative and general assistant to Capt. Harry Lambert of the Mirror Film Corporation, was a visitor to Motography's office on Monday. Cunningham has proven his metal by putting over an interview with Capt. Lambert in every Chicago newspaper, together with a description of the Mirror Film Corporation's plan. The firm of A. J. Coleman & Co., in the First National Bank Building, Chicago, will handle the sales of stock of the Mirror Company.

A. M. Gollos went to Minneapolis on Tuesday, October 26, where he intends to cancel his arrangement with the Rowe-Woskie Feature Film Company, which has been handling Gollos' films in Minnesota. Whether Mr. Gollos will open an office of his own or not in that city has not yet been decided.

E. J. Cox, the Chicago theatrical agent recently organized the Metropolitan Amusement Company which last week took over the Family theater of Moline, the Orpheum theater at Clinton, and the Illinois theater at Rock Island. Mr. Cox states that he has installed Bartola musical instruments in all of his houses and that it is his intention to improve the program of these three houses and later on add more to their string.

J. E. O'Toole, Chicago manager of the Kriterion Film Corporation, who has been able to keep his exchange going even during a period when the producing company was unable to furnish him with weekly releases, states that his receipts have increased each week and that now the Kriterion Company will release its productions weekly he expects to close some contracts now pending. Lee Sonneborn, president of the Kriterion Company of New York, is expecting to visit Mr. O'Toole on Friday.

Thomas Alva Edison with his wife and a few friends passed through Chicago last week en route to the San Francisco exposition.

F. H. Franke mentioned to the writer last week that he has just had the California theater at Twenty-sixth street and Trumbull avenue redecorated and has put in two new motor driven Simplex machines, a Northwestern rotary converter and a Mirroroide screen. Mr. Franke uses the G. F. service.

J. W. McCarthy, the general manager of the Epoch Film Company, which has charge of the "Birth of a Nation," was a Chicago visitor last week.

J. Stuart Blackton of the Vitagraph Company returned to New York on Thursday of last week.

Allen Lee Haase, Jr., is giving a birthday party on October 28.

Special to W. N. Selig. I brought back some fish Sunday, but as usual, where were you? W. N. Selig, who put Chicago on the film map over twenty years ago and who has become one of the foremost manufacturers of films in America, was honored this week by being named by Mayor Thompson as one of his appointees to the board of education. This is a signal honor and Motography joins with all of Mr. Selig's friends in congratulating him.

Paul H. Bush writes from New York city on a letterhead which states that he is eastern manager of the Indian Film Company. Paul states he has not been lonesome in New York, as he has not had time, being the manager, office boy, shipping and booking clerk, also attending to the details of booking the Chicago Tribune's five-reel picture entitled "The German Side of the War." Bush is now working on the other set of films taken on the Russian front, and predicts just as big a success for them.

Mae Marsh came to Chicago on Friday last, and Fiske, the clever publicity man for the Colonial theater, put over a good story in the Chicago newspapers about the door-tender of the Colonial refusing her admission to watch herself work in the "Birth of a Nation," because she was under age. This was a clever satire on the pink permit system used by the censorship division of the Chicago police force.

Mabel Condon, formerly of Motography's staff, in a letter to Neil G. Caward, editor of Motography, states that she is acting as publicity representative for the Little Theater Company of Los Angeles and is also handling the publicity for several of the film folks out in that neck of the woods.

George L. Cox was discovered in the office of the Scandinavian line last week inquiring about the sailing dates and steamer accommodations, together with transportation to Germany. Our notion of a good place to stay away from at present is Germany. Why not try some easy or pleasant stunt, George, such as capturing a few mountain lions by the tail?

J. W. Binder of the Motion Picture Board of Trade gave a business luncheon at the La Salle hotel on Saturday.

Durbrow and Reiss, two local photographers, have returned from the scene of war with some films purporting to be taken on the various battle fronts. The films are undoubtedly reminiscent of the kodak pictures which one sends home to admiring folks showing the various points of interest.

"Walt" Bloeser of the Chicago Tribune postcards the writer from "Boothby's," Philadelphia. Bloeser is on his way to New York, where special arrangements have been made for his welcome. Joe Brandt of the Universal Film Company is furnishing an Oregon boot which he thinks will hold Bloeser for a while.

William J. (Bill) Sweeney called at Motography's office Tuesday to discuss the Cleveland exhibitors' convention, where Sweeney was tendered an ovation. He brought regards from Herrington and the boys. Thanks, fellers.

W. J. Knill, formerly advance man for Elsie Janis and Joseph Santley, is now manager of the Studebaker theater, succeeding George Sammis.

NOTES FROM ALL OVER

George DeCarlton, now with the cast of The Ocean Film Corporation, at Jacksonville, Florida, as manager of productions, is taking a course in aviation between times. George says that since he has tied up with this new outfit, things have been so agreeable that he has not had any cause to go up in the air even once. And George is getting out of practice.

Left background—Anna Little. Left to right—E. Forrest Taylor; William Bertram, director; Larry Peyton, and Art Accord of the American Mustang Company.

A complete electric lighting plant has been installed at the Selig Jungle-Zoo at Los Angeles. William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, also recently ordered constructed about a mile of new roadway at the Zoo. This roadway has been oiled and made a perfect boulevard. Other extensive improvements at the Selig Zoo are contemplated.

Arthur James, director of publicity for the Metro Pictures Corporation, who has been ill for a week, is recouperating in a week-end vacation and motor trip around the Wading River section of Long Island.

There is perhaps no actor who has come to motion pictures from the speaking stage who regards the new art more seriously than Tyrone Power, and certainly none who has a greater appreciation of the dramatic power of Kathlyn Williams, whom he will play opposite in the new Selig production, "Sweet Alyssum," released through the V. L. S. E. November 15, than he. This is the first time that these two strong "leads" have appeared together in moving pictures, and it may be expected that the new production will be unusually noteworthy in its dramatic power.

George Spink, composer of many successful vaudeville acts, among which are "The Country Club" and "At the Waldorf" has been added to the Scenario Department of Lubin's. Mr. Spink will write both comedy and dramatic subjects, basing some upon his more successful song lyrics.

"Silent Bill" Haddock is bringing some of his quick melodramatic action into the one-act Casino Star Comedy he is making for the Gaumont Company. In one day recently he made 35 scenes—and with actors new to the screen, at that.

Edward Brennan, who will be remembered by many motion picture patrons as "Dunbar, the Man of Mystery" with Norma Phillips in the "Mutual Girl" series will be featured with Marie Empress in the Rolfe-Metro five part photo-dramatization of "The Woman Pays," in which Valli Valli has the stellar role. In this picture it is said that Mr. Brennan will be seen in the best work of his career.

Helene Rosson and Wallace McDonald with Richard Willis, the Western Publicity vender.

Vivian Rich is happy. This is nothing unusual, but the particular angle of happiness at this particular time is that she is to be featured in a series of photoplays by the American Company in which she has a wonderfully sympathetic part. Vivian will be seen as a girl who rises from the slums until she becomes an ideal woman. The series promise to be unusually interesting, for they will depend largely upon real, genuine heart interest and Vivian's personality.

An entire English village is being constructed by the Quality Pictures Corporation in Hollywood, Cal., for the big production, "Rosemary," a five-part picturization of the famous play by the same name, in which Marguerite Snow will be starred and Paul Gilmore, the noted romantic actor, and new comer to the Quality-Metro forces, will be featured.

Cissie Fitzgerald, one of the best known comediennes the American theater has known, is the latest recruit of a small army of fun-makers now engaged in the laugh-making business at the Kleine Studios. The company is headed by Bickel and Watson, the invariable laughing hit of all vaudeville programs of which they have been a part, and the two artists who did so much to add to the gayety of nations in the early Ziegfeld "Follies" shows. In addition to Cissie Fitzgerald they are supported by Crimmons and Gore, long known to the American public; Snitz Edwards, one hundred pound star of "The Queen of The Moulin Rouge" and "The Silver Slipper," Maxfield Moree and Florence Morrison whose amplitude acts as an excellent foil for the diminutive Edwards.

At Universal City William Worthington has just completed a two-reel picture which, in the opinion of critics, is regarded as the best picture in which Herbert Rawlinson has appeared for months. "The Ne'er Do Well" is the title and in it Rawlinson is supported by Jean Taylor, Jack Wells, F. M. Wells and Barney Furey.

Director Jack Pratt with Richard Duhler, Rosetta Brice and the balance of his company, who have been at Block Island for the past week on the production of Pratt's own story "A Man's Making," returned to Philadelphia on Thursday last.

Ann Neilsen, the wife of Guy Coombs, who has been starred in several Kalem pictures, is playing a prominent role in the supporting cast now making "Barbara Fritchie," the five-part feature production now being made at the Popular Plays and Players studio for release on the Metro program.

The life and rise to fame of Audrey Munson, America's favorite artists' model, who posed for much of the sculpture work adorning the various buildings and arches of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, as well as the Maine and numerous other monuments and paintings, has been woven into a five-part screen drama, entitled "The Inspiration." It will be released as a Mutual Masterpiece. The Thanhouser people, who filmed it, are all enthusiasm over her success as a screen player.

One of the Kalem players who took part in "The Coquette," a four-act feature, was painfully injured in falling from a swiftly moving auto while one of the important scenes was being filmed. As the result of this accident, the performer was confined to his bed for several days.

Mary Moore, of the famous family of photoplayers, sister of Owen, Tom and Mary Moore.

Matt Moore, has joined the Lubin Company. She will make her first appearance in the Lubin picture "The Great Divide."

The new Paragon Film, Inc., Maurice Tourneur, vice-president and general manager, will start work on its first big five-reel photoplay at its new studio and factory, now nearing completion at Fort Lee, N. J., on or about Dec. 1. Entirely new stage mechanisms and lighting effects are expected to produce something in motion pictures which will be a distinct step forward in their development.

Mr. A. G. Steen, one of the oldest exchangemen in the country, now president of the Steen Film Producing Co., Philadelphia, has been in New York negotiating for a franchise with the Associated, and after a thorough investigation has finally closed a deal for a franchise of a one-reel comedy weekly.

Marguerite Snow, who has been playing leads opposite Francis X. Bushman, in Quality-Metro productions, has been given a company of her own and hereafter will be featured alone in four and five reel productions.

Chas. Fais, who has been in the "show" business for the past twenty-five years in every capacity, and more recently associated with the large film companies in their business departments, has been placed in charge of the Purchasing Department of the Keystone plant by Business Manager George Stout.

James Hicks, manager of the Tri-State Film Exhibiting Company of Ashland, Kentucky, has secured the booking rights on "Silver Threads Among the Gold" from the K. & R. Film Company for the state of Kentucky. Mr. E. T. Peter of Dallas, has also secured the rights on "Silver Threads Among the Gold" for Texas and Oklahoma.

Richard Stanton has completed a stirring photoplay in "Riches" and, besides producing it, he played in vigorous style as the hero. He will put on a story of his own next—one he has had in pickle for some time. Stanton's work as a writer is well-known.

Ed J. Le Saint is busy making preparations for the Universal series photoplay "The Journal of Lord John," in which William Garwood will be featured with Stella Razeto playing opposite him.

Charles Nichols, the famous ex-baseball pitcher of the Boston National Baseball Team, is now a member of the George Kleine selling forces, traveling out of the Kansas City office.

Out in St. Louis, where the exchange men are having a Bowling League, Paramount, according to late dispatches from the Kansas City Exchange of that company, is well in the lead. The following item from one of the players will show the standing of the clubs: "Paramounts retained their immaculate record in the M. P. O. League by whitewashing Generals and increased their victories to a dozen, while Universal took the odd from Mutuals and annexed second place with five victories and seven defeats. Mutuals have won four and lost eight and Generals 3-9.

Arnold Daly announces as the cast for his next Pathe Gold Rooster Play "The House of Fear," the following: Mr. Daly in the lead, supported by Sheldon Lewis; Ina Hammer (who has supported Maude Adams and Robert Edson), Martine Sabine (who was leading man with John Drew), William Bechtel and Charles Laite.

Besides receiving congratulations on his election as one of the vice-presidents of the Screen Club, Harry Myers is celebrating his fifth year in the world of motion pictures.

Mme. Alice Blache, the only woman producer and director in the motion picture business, has bought a quaint little cottage nestled in the woods near Fort Lee, N. J., so that she can be near the studios of the Popular Plays and Players, where she directs productions for the Metro program.

Alice Dovey, new star with Gaumont.

Miss Martha Mattox, the clever comedienne, who plays the part of Selina Tubbs in the Selig pastoral comedy series "The Chronicles of Bloom Center," is an author of unusual ability, and in her leisure moments is engaged in writing the book for a musical comedy soon to be produced on Broadway.

California's fastest car—or at least one of the fastest—was destroyed when Henry King's Mercer back-fired and burned up. The Balboa star was driving home from Los Angeles, in company with Gypsy Abbott. Seven miles out from Long Beach the trouble ensued. As it was late at night help was not obtainable. As Mr. King did not have very much insurance on the car, he suffers a loss of about $2,000. All that was left, when the blaze died out, was a heap of scrap iron.

Remains of Henry King's Mercer.

Recently a scenario of a one-act comedy came to the Gaumont office which had one character, "Stuffy, the Press Agent." Unquestionably this could be none other than Glenmore ("Stuffy") Davis, the press agent in times past for Luna Park, Barnum & Bailey's Circus, and the big "Cadillaqua" spectacles at Detroit. Gaumont's policy is to get players to fit the parts, and consequently a hurry-up call was sent to Broadway for "Stuffy" Davis himself. He was found, and pressed into service to play the part that was obviously written for him. It is his first venture into pictures.

On account of the unusual difficulties attendant to staging an animal picture, David Horsley recently assigned Jay Hunt, recognized as one of the foremost directors of the day, to put on his Centaur Features, which are animal subjects in an advanced form and featuring the Bostock collection of dumb performers. Mr. Hunt has a long line of successful productions to his credit and is well qualified for the task.

Although suffrage was defeated last week in New Jersey, the Mutual Weekly was not defeated. The most interesting event naturally was the casting of his ballot by President Wilson. The suffragists all over the country will have an opportunity to see the fist citizen of the land record his conviction that women should have the vote.

Clara Kimball Young is sure to delight her innumerable admirers in a forthcoming World Film production to be called "The Spirit of the Joss House," Rex Ingram is directing the picture, the scenario of which he also prepared.

The scenario department of George Kleine reports a superabundance of splendid stories as the result of its recent advertising campaign for comedy and dramatic subjects. As plenty of material is now in hand to date, scenario writers are asked to send no more manuscript for the present.

Within three hours after Col. Joe Smiley arrived at Jacksonville, Florida, with the cast now engaged in making the initial production for the newly organized Ocean Film Corporation, of which John L. Dudley and Jesse J. Goldburg are the executive heads, Col. Joe was the recipient of visitor's cards of admission to all the clubs in Jacksonville. The Colonel's reception hours at the Mason hotel are from 10 p. m. to 11 p. m.

World Film's picturization of Frank Norris's "McTeague of San Francisco," will present the famous actor, Holbrook Blinn, in a role of singular power and characterization.

The management of the Strand theater of New York has arranged to show moving pictures in colors of the latest styles for women. These pictures were taken in Paris and in this country and will embrace street and evening dresses for ladies of all ages, cloaks, riding and other sporting habits; in short everything pertaining to women's wear. These fashion shows will be presented every afternoon, in connection with the regular program, and will be changed every week.

Beverly Bayne, who will be starred with Francis X. Bushman in "The Yellow Dove," a forthcoming Quality-Metro production, is nerving and acclimating herself these days in trial flights in an aeroplane at Long Beach, L. I., preparing for several exciting and thrilling scenes which she will have aboard the air craft.

Chester Conklin, the Keystone comedian, not to be outdone by his associate, Mack Swain, has purchased a 320 acre ranch near Mojave, California. Conklin has just received a shipment of bean seed from the Government Experimental Station at Tucson, Arizona, which he will plant as his first crop.

"Over Night," the William A. Brady comedy which had six months at the 48th Street Theater, New York, is to be picturized under the direction of James Young, who made such a striking success of Philip Bartholomae's other World Film Comedy "Little Miss Brown." As far as possible the original cast will be presented in the photoplay: Vivian Martin; Herbert Jost; Jere Austin; Ada Stirling; Lucile LaVerne; Dorothy Farnum; Arthur Aylesworth.

D. L. Burke and N. D. Smith of the Associated Film Sales Corporation made a hurried trip to the Coast to make arrangements for a larger output.

Rollin S. Sturgeon is again working on the desert near Randsburg, taking scenes for "Flower of the Desert." His company includes Mary Anderson and William Duncan. Mary writes that she is having a lovely time—her first experience with the Desert.

Recently five beauties from the Universal Film Manufacturing Company appeared in the Palace Theater's Fall Fashion show, in New York, as a part of the $1,000,000 display of gems, gowns, furs, lingerie, hats, feathers, sport clothes and boots from the supreme creative artists in style. The Universal beauties who lent charm to the occasion were Violet Mersereau, Rosemary Theby, Dorothy Phillips, Betty Gray and Edna Hunter. Their gowns were designed by Harry Collins, costumer of 29 West 38th street, and were worn with great effect by the young ladies who have been so prominent in the minds of motion picture fans as stars in different Universal high class photoplay productions.

Antonio Moreno, a prominent Vitagraph leading man, will essay his first straight comedy role in motion pictures in the forthcoming production of the two-part feature "A 'Model' Wife," by E. Lawrence Gibson, an author new to motion picture fans.

Charles O. Baumann, vice-president of the New York Motion Picture Corporation and one of the directors of the Triangle Film Corporation, arrived in Los Angeles this week on a tour of inspection of his Inceville studies. He will remain for several weeks, during which time he will acquaint himself with the current activities at the big Ince plant in the Santa Monica mountains, and then return east to resume his duties at his desk in the Longacre Building.

An all-star cast that includes Charles Richman, James Morrison, Eleanor Woodruff, Zena Keefe, Anders Randolf, Charles Wellesley and Paul Kelly are enacting the final scenes in Cyrus Townsend Brady's navy drama, "Colton, U. S. N." The players under the direction of Paul Scardon, are now at Annapolis, Md., where they will take scenes showing the Naval Academy.

At last, William S. Hart has bought an automobile! The noted portrayer of Western types succumbed to the persuasions of the energetic salesman last week and invested in a large, graceful-looking touring car. Another Incevillian to purchase a car recently is Monte Katterjohn, author.

Henry "Pathe" Lehrman, managing director of the L-Ko Motion Picture Kompany of Hollywood, Cal., who has been paying New York City an extensive visit in the interests of his Billie Ritchie L-Ko comedies, secured while here the services of Stanley C. Kingsbury to act as his special representative.

The Vitagraph Company, ever on the alert to keep abreast of the demands of the exhibitors and their growing patronage, have arranged a weekly programme, beginning with the first week in November, to include a series of releases, each one of which will be a representative Vitagraph picture, whether it be a one-part subject or a feature. Twenty-four of the Vitagraph stars are represented in the first week's releases, who worked under the direction of seven different directors to make the separate stories.

William F. Russel, the active Stanley Blair of "The Diamond from the Sky" screen novel, met William N. Selig for the first time one midnight of last week at Levy's—(there's only one Levy's and it's in Los Angeles). "Bill Russell?" quoted Mr. Selig, remembering something. "Why, you're the man that Director Lawrence Marsden told me I couldn't make pictures without!" "But," said Mr. Russell, "you are still making pictures." Mr. Selig agreed; then naturedly and after a few seconds thought he suddenly exclaimed, "Yes, but I wonder now what Lawrence Marsden did mean!"

Bill Russell and a member of his ranch at Santa Barbara, Calif.

J. Warren Kerrigan is going to appear in a new series of Terrence O'Rourke pictures. Such is the decision of Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, after having wrestled for months with one of the most intricate problems he has ever been called upon to solve. The "problem" is all caused by the insistent demand of picture fans requesting that the Terrence O'Rourke pictures be re-issued. But Mr. Laemmle has decided that instead of reissuing the famous pictures, he will present Mr. Kerrigan in a novelty serial.

Ashley Miller, who with Arnold Daly is producing Pathe's "Ashton-Kirk" series, has had a theatrical career of fifteen years, starting in as a player of juvenile roles with Walker Whiteside when that star was still presenting Shakesperian plays in the smaller cities of the land. Subsequently he appeared in support of Otis Skinner, Henrietta Crosman, Ezra Kendall, Louis James and Katheryn Kidder, and Anna Held.

Billy Mason was not smiling; it was past dinner time and Billy was still dinnerless. "I like comedy," he stopped en route home from the studio to explain, "And I admit I am a comedian—but I can't see any comedy situation in standing in a bath-tub full of icy water and being directed to make funny faces and not splash in the lens of the camera.

Arthur Shirley, the Universal lead who on the west coast lot they call "the big Australian," was the sole figure recently in one hundred feet of film which the Australian fan public sent Harry Higgens all the way from Australia to procure. Mr. Shirley was Australia's favorite legitimate star until his coming to America and the Universal company six months ago. The statement of his mission to the Pacific coast, by Mr. Higgins was a tribute Mr. Shirley feels deeply.

Billy Sherwood, the versatile New Orleans juvenile, has been engaged by the Kalem company to play the heavy in the next issue of "The Ventures of Marguerite," featuring Marguerite Courtot. Billy's versatility must surely be remarkable when we remember that his last part was the young lover in the Geo. Kleine five-reel feature "Canavan, the Man Who Had His Way," while now he is a villain.

Winnifred Kingston in Pallas picture "The Call of the Cumberland."

SOME NEW THEATERS

Alabama.

The Odeon Two Theater company is the latest motion picture company organized in Birmingham, and it has taken over the management of the Odeon Two theater, formerly owned by the Strand Theater company. L. B. Leftwich, president of the new company, will manage the well-known playhouse.

Articles of incorporation have been recently filed incorporating the Allentown Film corporation, with a capital stock of $2,000. The object of the corporation is to manufacture films and their accessories at Allentown, the new town building near Florence. The officers for the first year are: M. F. Sherfesee, San Antonio, Tex., president; Frederick Stellar, Birmingham, vice-president; H. C. Bennett, Birmingham, secretary and treasurer. The incorporators are: S. M. Anderson, Greenwood, Miss.; M. J. Sherfesee, San Antonio, Tex.; Frederick Stellar, Birmingham; H. C. Bennett, Birmingham.

Arizona.

The Crystal theater on Sullivan street, Miami, was opened Wednesday evening, October 13. The theater presents a very beautiful appearance and is managed by Norcross and Garrett.

California.

Articles of incorporation of the Yeldah Film company have been filed, the purpose of the company being that of engaging in the moving picture business in Stockton on a broad scale. The company is capitalized at $75,000. The directors include Mayor R. R. Reibenstein, W. R. Clark, W. H. Reicks, J. L. Craig, E. M. Hadley, R. C. Pardoe and Dave S. Matthews.

Colorado.

The new Orpheum theater recently erected in Steamboat Springs by W. J. Franz and which is under lease to Griffin and Sharp has been opened. The building is very attractive and furnished nicely. The seating capacity is 325.

Florida.

Tampa's fine new theater, the Strand, will shortly be opened.

Georgia.

Work will begin in a few days on a handsome two-story motion picture house for Tifton. The building will be one of the most modern and up-to-date picture houses in this section and will be occupied by the Star theater.

Illinois.

T. D. Wilson will finance the proposed new picture theater to be built on Neil street, Champaign. The building will be 90x145 feet, and will be modern and thoroughly fireproof. The seating capacity will be from 1,000 to 1,200 and cost about $60,000. W. W. Moorehead is one of the promoters.

Fox Theater company, Aurora; capital, $1,000; incorporators, Morris G. Leonard, Palmer M. Gunnell, Thyra Carlson.

W. C. Fisher has sold the Lyric theater in Centralia to James O. Adams. In the near future Mr. Adams will enlarge the theater.

State Street Theater Co., Chicago. Operate places of amusement; capital, $600,000.

Indiana.

The Alhambra theater in Indianapolis, which has been running feature photoplays, has been bought by B. V. Barton and Charles M. Olson, from Dickson & Talbot. The new owners took possession October 9.

The new owners have put in two new motion picture machines and expect to remodel the front and put in a changing letter electric sign. A five-piece orchestra also is to be added. The program is to be changed every other day and feature photoplays of the higher class are to be run.

The Star theater in Princeton has been sold by C. W. Woods to G. W. Barrett of Lawrenceville, Illinois, who took possession October 11.

Iowa.

Moulton will shortly have an opera house. Stuart Mace and George Carson are the new proprietors of the new show house, which is now being erected on Main street. It is constructed of cement blocks with a brick veneer.

The Princess theater in Cedar Rapids, which has been in the hands of the contractors since August 16, being remodeled, has reached a completed state. The rear wall has been extended forty-one feet and the seating capacity has been increased 160, making a total of 624. The painters and decorators have transformed the theater until it is resplendent in a new coat of dark blue blending into pearl gray ceiling with ivory trimming. The ventilation and exits are all that could be desired while the mirror screen will add to the enjoyment of patrons of this house. J. P. Martin is manager and with the remodeling completed announces a new policy which marks the opening of the theater October 15, and only feature plays will be presented.

The Lyric theater in Albia is now under the management of Mr. and Mrs. Weber of Waverly.

G. W. Hart & Son, of Grinnell, announce that they will erect a two-story moving picture theater in the spring, on the west side of Main street. The theater will have a seating capacity of 500 and have all modern improvements.

W. W. Wood, owner of the Gem moving picture theater in Armstrong, accidentally shot himself and died from the effects.

The Casino theater in Mason City has been opened after being remodeled throughout.

Kansas.

The new Princess theater was opened October 15 in Hoisington.

Maine.

Barker-Swan Film Service, Portland.—Film exchange business, moving picture machines, etc.; capital, $250,000.

Maryland.

J. N. Bowers, 930 West Baltimore street, Baltimore, plans an addition to his theater to cost approximately $3,000.

Massachusetts.

Papers have passed in the sale of the property of the Olympia Theater Company of Lynn to the Olympia Theaters, Inc., of Boston, incidental to the consolidation of the Olympia Moving Picture interests into one corporation, which now control seven Olympia theaters in New England. The Lynn property has a frontage of 104 feet on Washington street, and extends back 153 feet to Willow street.

Missouri.

A moving picture theater to cost about $50,000 is to be erected this fall by Ferd Warner on the north side of St. Louis avenue, St. Louis, a few steps west of Grand avenue, on ground which was recently purchased. The theater will have a seating capacity of about 2,000 persons. It will cover a lot 50x183 feet, and the adjoining lot of the same size is to be improved next spring by Warner with an airdome.

Frank L. Newman, manager of the Royal theater, Kansas City, has leased the two-story building at 109-11 East Twelfth street and will erect a picture theater as soon as the building which now occupies the site will be razed.

The Tenth Street theater, 15 West Tenth street, Kansas City, is now open for the fall and winter season. The theater, a handsome edifice, has been newly decorated and only first-run pictures will be shown.

Minnesota.

The Grand theater in Virginia has been sold by R. A. McLean to E. A. Malley.

Montana.

The Empress theater, Missoula, enlarged and beautified during six weeks of remodeling, has been reopened. The whole house has been included in the plans for remodeling, and chief among the new features is a spacious balcony, with party boxes on either side. The seating capacity is 620. A new fotoplayer will be installed as soon as it arrives from the factory.

The Empire theater in Butte City, closed for several weeks, will be opened under new management and will be devoted to motion pictures.

October 18 the Imperial theater was again opened to the public in Great Falls, having undergone extensive improvements.

Nevada.

The Grand theater in Reno has been reopened after being closed for nearly three months, undergoing extensive repairs.

New York.

The Tifft theater corporation, Buffalo, has filed incorporation papers. It is capitalized at $1,000 and the directors are Robert H. Tifft, Martin J. Niemen and Harry L. Byrne.

Royal Divorce Film company, incorporated, Manhattan, $100,000; Kate M. Brown, Marius S. Joy, Harry Mountford, Manhattan.

The new Regent theater on East Water street, Elmira, was opened October 4 and is a very attractive playhouse. J. W. Schwartzwalde is manager. Feature pictures will be shown.

Jelenk & Hansen, Brooklyn, theaters, opera houses, photoplay houses, $5,000; Morris Hansen, Sadie and Theodore Jelenk, 1,977 Douglass street, Brooklyn.

George W. Beynon, Inc., Manhattan, theatrical, motion picture, etc., publish and print music; capital, $50,000. Incorporators, W. C. Stickles, 634 West 135th street; E. Greenberger, 246 West 119th street; S. M. Cohen, 375 Manhattan avenue, New York city.

Plutuscope Corporation, Manhattan. Manufacture motion picture machines, apparatus and supplies; manufacture mechanical devices, etc. Capital, $1,000,000. Incorporators, G. W. Martin, T. H. Ross, 215 Montague street; J. Roth, 265 East 22nd street, Brooklyn.

Zenith Motion Picture Co. Manufacture of moving picture machines and all kinds of photographic films. Capital, $500,000.

Percy G. Williams has leased the theater known as the Oxford, at Flatbush avenue and State street, Brooklyn, for a term of ten years, to the Unity Amusement company, incorporated, Oscar Muller, president, and Samuel Schwartz, treasurer, owners of the West End theater, New Utrecht avenue and Fifty-second street, Borough Park, Brooklyn. After extensive alterations Muller & Schwartz will open the house as a high-class photoplay theater.

Pontiac Theater Corporation, Saranac Lake, theatrical, motion pictures, $40,000; Walter Sagendorf, Louis Bernstein, Walter Clusett, Saranac Lake.

The Mummers' Production Corporation, theatrical, motion picture, realty, construction, $5,000; Richard K. Mackay, Agatha I. Joerg, Aaron C. Thayer, 32 Nassau street, Albany.

Coles Picture Machine Corporation, moving picture machinery, $50,000; Olga Schultheis, William H. and Howard Coles, 544 West 157th street, Albany.

Complete Record of Current Films

Believing the classification of film pictures by the nature of their subjects to be of greater importance to the exhibitor than classification by maker, MOTOGRAPHY has adopted this style in listing current films. Exhibitors are urged to make use of this convenient tabulation in making up their programs. Films will be listed as long in advance of their release dates as possible. Film manufacturers are requested to send us their bulletins as early as possible. Reasonable care is used, and the publishers cannot be responsible for errors.

General Program

Monday.

D	10-25	Arline's Chauffeur	Biograph	1,000
D	10-25	The Destroyer	Essanay	3,000
D	10-25	The Price of Ambition	Kleine	2,000
D	10-25	The Net of Deceit	Kalem	3,000
D	10-25	The Inevitable Penalty	Lubin	1,000
C	10-25	Shoo Fly (No. 2 of the Chronicles of Bloom Center)	Selig	2,000
T	10-25	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 85, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	10-25	The Prince in Disguise	Vitagraph	1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-26	A Mystery of the Mountains	Biograph	2,000
D	10-26	Miss Freckles	Essanay	2,000
C	10-26	The Knaves and the Knight	Kalem	1,000
C	10-26	Playing in Tough Luck	Lubin	1,000
D	10-26	The Race for a Gold Mine	Selig	1,000
D	10-26	To Cherish and Protect	Vitagraph	3,000

Wednesday.

D	10-27	Harvest	Biograph	3,000
C	10-27	The Seventh Day	Edison	1,000
C	10-27	Dreamy Dud in "Up in the Air"	Essanay	500
S	10-27	Scenic	Essanay	500
D	10-27	By Whose Hand	Kalem	2,000
D	10-27	The Man of God	Lubin	2,000
C	10-27	Itsky, the Inventor	Vitagraph	1,000

Thursday.

D	10-28	A Trick of Fate	Biograph	1,000
C	10-28	Fun at a Ball Game	Essanay	1,000
D	10-28	The Strange Unknown	Lubin	3,000
	10-28	Title not reported	Mina
T	10-28	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 86, 1915	Selig	1,000
D	10-28	The Unforgiven	Vitagraph	1,000

Friday.

D	10-29	The Coming of Angelo	Biograph	1,000
D	10-29	The Mystery of Room 13	Edison	4,000
D	10-29	Broncho Billy's Cowardly Brother	Essanay	1,000
D	10-29	The Wonder Cloth	Lubin	1,000
C	10-29	A Case of Eugenics	Vitagraph	1,000
D	10-29	When Appearances Deceive (No. 1 of the Ventures of Marguerite)	Kalem	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-30	The Sheriff's Trap	Biograph	1,000
S	10-30	Niagara Falls	Edison	500
E	10-30	Yardville Folks	Edison	500
D	10-30	The Lighthouse by the Sea	Essanay	3,000
D	10-30	Rescue of the Brakeman's Children	Kalem	1,000
C	10-30	His Body Guard	Lubin	1,000
D	10-30	When California Was Wild	Selig	1,000
C	10-30	The Shabbies	Vitagraph	2,000

Monday.

D	11-1	Fifty-Fifty	Essanay	3,000
D	11-1	The Coquette	Kalem	4,000
D	11-1	The Sacred Bracelet	Lubin	1,000
D	11-1	The Flashlight	Selig	2,000
T	11-1	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 87, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	11-1	Between Two Parts	Vitagraph	1,000

Tuesday.

D	11-2	Between Father and Son	Biograph	2,000
D	11-2	Despair	Essanay	3,000
C	11-2	Diana of the Farm	Kalem	1,000
C	11-2	Up Against It	Lubin	1,000
C	11-2	Athletic Ambitions	Selig	1,000
C	11-2	The Sultan of Zulon	Vitagraph	2,000

DAILY LICENSED RELEASES

MONDAY: Biograph, Essanay, Kalem, Kleine, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

TUESDAY: Biograph, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

WEDNESDAY: Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Knickerbocker, Lubin, Vitagraph, Biograph.

THURSDAY: Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Mina, Selig, Vitagraph.

FRIDAY: Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Vitagraph.

SATURDAY: Biograph, Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Lubin, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday.

D	11-3	Dora Thorne	Biograph	4,000
C	11-3	The Parson's Button Matcher	Edison	1,000
C	11-3	The Fable of "The Escape of Anthony and the Salvation of Herbert"	Essanay	1,000
D	11-3	The Sign of the Broken Shackles	Kalem	2,000
D	11-3	A Western Governor's Humanity	Lubin	3,000
C	11-3	A Family Picnic	Vitagraph	1,000

Thursday.

D	11-4	The Passing Storm	Biograph	1,000
C	11-4	The Night Sophia Graduated	Essanay	1,000
D	11-4	When War Threatened	Lubin	2,000
C	11-4	The False Hair	Mina	1,000
D	11-4	Their Sinful Influence	Selig	3,000
T	11-4	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 88, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	11-4	The Ebony Casket	Vitagraph	1,000

Friday.

D	11-5	The Musketeers of Pig Alley	Biograph	1,000
D	11-5	Friend Wilson's Daughter	Edison	3,000
D	11-5	Broncho Billy's Mexican Wife	Essanay	1,000
D	11-5	The Rogue Syndicate (No. 2 of the Ventures of Marguerite)	Kalem	1,000
D	11-5	The Urchin	Lubin	1,000
C	11-5	Beautiful Thoughts	Vitagraph	1,000

Saturday.

D	11-6	Waifs of the Sea	Edison	1,000
D	11-6	On the Little Mill Trace	Essanay	2,000
D	11-6	Danger Ahead	Kalem	2,000
C	11-6	The Cellar Spy	Lubin	1,000
D	11-6	The Lost Messenger	Selig	1,000
D	11-6	Anselo Lee	Vitagraph	3,000

V. L. S. E. Program

Sept.	20	The Circular Staircase	Selig	5,000
Sept.	27	Tillie's Tomato Surprise	Lubin	6,000
Sept.	27	The Great Ruby	Lubin	5,000
Oct.	4	Dust of Egypt	Vitagraph	5,000
Oct.	11	In the Palace of the King	Essanay	6,000
Oct.	11	The Valley of Lost Hope	Lubin	5,000
Oct.	18	A Black Sheep	Selig	5,000
Oct.	18	The Man Who Couldn't Beat God	Vitagraph	5,000
Oct.	25	The Rights of Man	Lubin	5,000
Nov.	1	The Turn of the Road	Vitagraph	5,000
Nov.	8	The Raven	Essanay	5,000

Mutual Program

Monday.

D	10-25	Out of the Ashes	American	2,000
C	10-25	Tillie, the Terrible Typist	Falstaff	1,000
C	10-25	Hobo Nerve	Novelty	1,000

Tuesday.

D	10-26	The Conscience of Juror No. 10	Thanhouser	2,000
S	10-26	See America First, No. 7	Gaumont	500
C	10-26	Keeping Up with the Joneses	Gaumont	500
C	10-26	Touring with Tillie	Beauty	1,000

Wednesday.

D	10-27	The Blood of Our Brothers	Centaur	3,000
C	10-27	Love and Artillery	Novelty	1,000

Thursday.

D	10-28	The White King of the Zaras	Centaur	2,000
C	10-28	The Soap Suds Star	Falstaff	1,000
T	10-28	Mutual Weekly No. 43	Mutual	1,000

Friday.

D	10-29	Playing for High Stakes	Mustang	2,000
D	10-29	The Smugglers' Cave	American	1,000
C	10-29	Jerry to the Rescue	Cub	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-30	The Idol	Clipper	3,000
C	10-30	An Auto Bungalow Fracas	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	10-31	The Feud	Reliance	2,000
C	10-31	Zabisky's Waterloo	Casino	1,000
D	10-31	The Fisherwoman	Thanhouser	1,000

Monday.

D	11-1	The Wasp	American	2,000
C	11-1	Freddie, the Fake Fisherwoman	Falstaff	1,000
C	11-1	Putting Papa to Sleep	Novelty	1,000

Tuesday.

D	11-2	The Commuted Sentence	Thanhouser	2,000
E	11-2	See America First, No. 8	Gaumont	500
C	11-2	Keeping Up With the Joneses	Gaumont	500
C	11-2	One to the Minute	Beauty	1,000

Wednesday.

D	11-3	The Devil's Darling	Rialto	3,000
C	11-3	The Fortune Hunters	Novelty	1,000

Thursday.

D	11-4	When Avarice Rules	Centaur	2,000
C	11-4	"Clarissa's" Charming Calf	Falstaff	1,000
T	11-4	Mutual Weekly No. 44	Mutual	1,000

Friday.

D	11-5	The Trail of the Serpent	Mustang	2,000
D	11-5	On Secret Service	American	1,000
C	11-5	Who's Who	Cub	1,000

Saturday.

D	11-6	Mr. Meeson's Will	Than-o-play	3,000
C	11-6	Billy Van Deusen's Campaign	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	11-7	The Law of Duty	Reliance	2,000
C	11-7	Does It Pay to Advertise	Casino	1,000
D	11-7	Mistake of Mammy Lou	Thanhouser	1,000

Universal Program

Monday.

D	10-25	The College Orphan	Broadway	6,000
C	10-25	An Heiress for Two	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

	10-26	No release this week	Gold Seal
C	10-26	By Return Male	Imp	1,000
D	10-26	The Millionaire Paupers	Rex	3,000

Wednesday.

D	10-27	A Life at Stake	Victor	2,000
C	10-27	Tears and Sunshine	L-Ko	1,000
T	10-27	Animated Weekly No. 190	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

	10-28	No release this week	Laemmle
D	10-28	The Flag of Fortune	Big U	2,000
C	10-28	Lady Baffles and Detective Duck in "The Lost Roll"	Powers	1,000

Friday.

D	10-29	The Craters of Fire	Imp	3,000
	10-29	No release this week	Victor
C	10-29	The Frame-Up on Dad	Nestor	1,000

Saturday.

D	10-30	The Superior Claim	Bison	3,000
	10-30	No release this week	Powers
C	10-30	A Day at Midland Beach	Joker	1,000

Sunday.

	10-31	No release this week	Rex
D	10-31	The Man From Argentine	Powers	2,000
C	10-31	Father's First Murder	L-Ko	1,000
D	10-31	The Broken Coin, No. 19	Universal	2,000

Monday.

D	11-1	The Long Chance	Broadway	6,000
C	11-1	A Circumstantial Scandal	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

D	11-2	The Measure of Leon Dubray	Gold Seal	3,000
	11-2	No Release This Week	Rex
C	11-2	When Beauty Butts In	Imp	1,000

Wednesday.

	11-3	No Release This Week	Victor
C	11-3	The Idle Rich	L-Ko	2,000
T	11-3	Animated Weekly No. 191	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

D	11-4	The White Feather Volunteer	Laemmle	2,000
D	11-4	The Markswoman	Big U	1,000
C	11-4	The Thinking Cockatoos	Powers	500
E	11-4	Insect Celebrities	Powers	500

Friday.

D	11-5	The Reward	Imp	3,000
	11-5	No Release This Week	Victor
C	11-5	Father's Helping Hand	Nestor	1,000

Saturday.

D	11-6	The Mettle of Jerry McGuire	Bison	2,000
	11-6	No Release This Week	Powers
C	11-6	20th Century Susie	Joker	1,000

Sunday.

D	11-7	Such a Princess	Rex	3,000
	11-7	No Release This Week	Laemmle
C	11-7	Cupid and the Scrub Lady	L-Ko	1,000
D	11-7	The Broken Coin, No. 20	Universal	2,000

Miscellaneous Features

York State Folks	Gra-ko		5,000
A Mother's Confession	Ivan		5,000
Sarah Bernhardt at Home	Photoplay Releasing		2,000
Romance of Elaine	Pathe		24,000
The Victory of Virtue	United Photo Plays Co.		5,000
The Pearl of the Antilles	Picture Playhouse Film Co.		5,000
The Flame of Passion	Picture Playhouse Film Co.		5,000
The Corsican	Sun Photoplay Co., Inc.		5,000
The Whirl of Life	Cort Film Corp.		6,000
A Woman's Honor	Great Northern		4,000

Associated Service.

Released week of

Nov.	2	Hilary of the Hills	Santa Barbara	2,000
Nov.	2	Duel of Hearts	Ramona	2,000
Nov.	2	Out for a Million	Empire	2,000
Nov.	2	And He Came Straight Home	Atlas	1,000
Nov.	2	In and Out	Banner	2,000
Nov.	2	Unexpected Reward	Liberty	1,000
Nov.	2	Life in the West	Alhambra	1,000
Nov.	2	Rosie's Many Thorns	Federal	1,000

Kleine-Edison

Released week of

Oct.	6	Vanity Fair	Edison	7,000
Oct.	13	The Magic Skin	Edison	5,000
Oct.	20	The Green Cloak	Kleine	5,000
Nov.	3	The Sentimental Lady	Kleine	5,000
Nov.	10	Children of Eve	Edison	5,000

Metro Features.

Released week of

Oct.	4	Song of the Wage Slave	Metro	5,000
Oct.	11	The Stork's Nest	Metro	5,000
Oct.	18	The Final Judgment	Metro	5,000
Oct.	25	My Madonna	Metro	5,000
Nov.	1	Tables Turned	Metro	5,000

Mutual Masterpieces.

Released week of

Sept.	23	The House of a Thousand Scandals	American	4,000
Sept.	30	The Price of Her Silence	Thanhouser	4,000
Oct.	7	Bred in the Bone	Reliance	4,000
Oct.	14	The Brink	N. Y. M. P.	4,000
Oct.	21	The Miracle of Life	American	5,000
Oct.	28	His Wife	Thanhouser	5,000
Nov.	4	The Seventh Noon	Reliance	7,000

Paramount Features.

Released week of

Oct.	4	Zaza	Famous Players	5,000
Oct.	7	A Girl of Yesterday	Famous Players	4,000
Oct.	11	The White Pearl	Famous Players	5,000
Oct.	14	Blackbirds	Lasky	5,000
Oct.	18	The Chorus Lady	Lasky	5,000
Oct.	21	The Secret Sin	Jesse L. Lasky	5,000
Oct.	25	The Yankee Girl	Oliver Morosco	5,000
Oct.	28	The Masqueraders	Famous Players	5,000
Nov.	4	Still Waters	Famous Players	5,000

Pathe.

Released Week of

Oct.	25	New Adventures of Wallingford, No. 4	Pathe	2,000
Oct.	25	Police Dog to the Rescue	Pathe	500
Oct.	25	An Intimate Study of Birds	Pathe	500
Oct.	25	Pathe News, No. 86	Pathe	1,000
Oct.	25	Pathe News, No. 87	Pathe	1,000
Oct.	25	The Eleventh Hour	Victory	3,000
Oct.	25	Whiffles Woos and Trouble Brews	Pathecolor	1,000
Oct.	25	Neal of the Navy, No. 9	Panama	2,000
Oct.	25	Comrade John	Gold Rooster	5,000
Oct.	25	Dough Nuts	Starlight	1,000
Nov.	1	New Adventures of Wallingford, No. 5	Pathe	2,000
Nov.	1	Giving Them Fits	Phunphilms	1,000
Nov.	1	Children of the Netherlands	Photocolor	500
Nov.	1	Human Movements Analyzed	Globe	500
Nov.	1	Pathe News, No. 88	Pathe	1,000
Nov.	1	Pathe News, No. 89	Pathe	1,000
Nov.	1	Adventures of a Madcap	Pathecolor	4,000
Nov.	1	Neal of the Navy, No. 10	Panama	2,000
Nov.	1	Whiffles' Futile Flivver	Pathecolor	1,000
Nov.	1	The Menace of the Mute	Gold Rooster	5,000
Nov.	1	Flats and Sharps	Starlight	1,000

Triangle Film Corporation.

Released week of

Nov.	7	The Lamb; Douglas Fairbanks	Fine Arts	5,000
Nov.	7	My Valet; Raymond Hitchcock	Triangle Keystone	3,000
Nov.	7	The Iron Strain; Dustin Farnum	Triangle Kay Bee	6,000
Nov.	7	A Game Old Knight; Chas. H. Murray	Triangle Keystone	2,000
Nov.	14	The Coward; Frank Keenan	Triangle Kay Bee	5,000
Nov.	14	Old Heidelberg; Dorothy Gish	Fine Arts	5,000
Nov.	14	Stolen Magic; Raymond Hitchcock	Triangle Keystone	2,000
Nov.	14	A Favorite Fool; Eddie Foy	Triangle Keystone	2,000

World Features.

Released week of

Oct.	3	The Flash of an Emerald	Shubert	5,000
Oct.	3	The Price	Triumph	5,000
Oct.	10	The Family Cupboard	Brady	5,000
Oct.	10	Blue Grass	Equitable	5,000
Oct.	17	The Heart of the Blue Ridge	Shubert	5,000
Oct.	18	Bludgeon	Equitable	5,000
Oct.	24	Salvation Nell	California	5,000
Oct.	25	Divorced	Equitable	5,000
Oct.	27	The Master of the House	Equitable	5,000
Nov.	1	Bought	Shubert	5,000

Brief Stories of the Week's Film Releases

General Program

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 85—HEARST-SELIG—OCTOBER 25.—New England suffragists parade with Miss Virginia Tanner in Boston; Mayor Thompson of Chicago receives medal on Chicago Day at Panama-Pacific Exposition; check for Red Sox share of the world's series is received by Manager Carrigan; fashions posed by Lucile, Lady Duff Gordon; President Wilson accepts offer of "Shadow Lawn" as new summer White House; opium pipes and drugs destroyed by fire at Los Angeles, Calif.; passenger coach plunges through bridge into creek and fatally injures score of persons at Randolph, Kansas; the famous Bersaglieri, soldiers of Italian army, make their way to the Izonzo front.

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 86—HEARST-SELIG—OCTOBER 28.—Thomas A. Edison greeted by thousands on Edison Day celebration at exposition; George M. Cohan lays cornerstone for Friars Club new headquarters; dredges working day and night to remove gigantic landslide at Culebra Cut, Panama Canal; Eliseo Arredondo, Carranza agent, named next Mexican ambassador; two hundred and fifty thousand San Francisco school children sign petition to President Wilson asking him to visit Panama Fair; suffrage parade in New York City; oil well fire burns in California oil field; General Botha returns from the front to Capetown, South Africa, and is hailed by citizens; Crown Prince Alexander of Serbia and staff visit the firing line at Austro-Serbian front.

Waifs of the Sea—EDISON—NOVEMBER 1.—Cast includes Richard Tucker and Grace Williams. This drama plays in a fishing village. Two children are washed ashore. A bachelor adopts the boy and Hiram and his wife adopt the girl. Years later the waifs announce that they have become engaged. A jealous youth whose father has taken some papers from the dead man who was washed ashore at the same time, claims that they cannot marry as they are brother and sister. Jack asks him for proof. A fight ensues and by accident Jack finds the papers, which explain that he and Jill are not brother and sister.

Fifty-Fifty—(THREE REELS)—ESSANAY—NOVEMBER 1.—Harry Dunkinson, Lillian Drew, Edmund Cobb and Vida Ramon featured. Mr. Blake invites Jack Collins to his home, where he proceeds to humiliate his wife. Mrs. Blake, by a clever scheme, makes her husband believe that he has annoyed another woman while intoxicated, and through his lawyer he pays this supposed wife

$10,000. The neglected Mrs. Blake comes out in a number of new gowns and Mr. Blake finally learns that he has been the contributor instead of some other man.

The Coquette—(FOUR REELS)—KALEM—NOVEMBER 1.—Featuring Rea Martin. Doris, with the aid of her sweetheart Don, who is employed in the same office with her father, saves him from disgrace, but the crime is shifted to Don's shoulders and he is sent to prison. Later Doris is forced to become engaged to Lane, a wealthy man, but she fascinates Harris, one of the prison guards and promises to marry him if he will free Don. However, Harris is killed and Don and Doris are wed, and being on the verge of desperation Doris tells the truth concerning her father's speculation, and he is overtaken by retribution, while Don and Doris know happiness once more.

The Sacred Bracelet—LUBIN—NOVEMBER 1.—Featuring L. C. Shumway, Melvin Mayo and Adda Gleason. Pedro Roman, a Filipino outcast, attacks and tries to wrest a bracelet, which her sweetheart had given her, from the wrist of Helen Rand, the daughter of Colonel Rand, but he is captured and he discloses the following history of the bracelet. Years before Pedro had stolen the bracelet from the arm of the image of the Virgin Mary with which to buy medicine for his dying mother. Meeting John Gault, Helen's sweetheart, he persuaded him to purchase it and with the money he hastens home, but it is too late, for his mother is dead. He confesses the theft to the priest and he excommunicates him from the church. Helen, upon learning the story, returns the bracelet to Pedro and he replaces it on the arm of the Virgin and is taken back into the church.

Between Two Fires—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 1.—Featuring Flora Finch, Kate Price, William Shea and Isadore Marcil. Finley Jones, a bachelor, rents a cottage in the suburbs. On either side of him live two maiden ladies, Ann Hooley and Belinda Byers, and both ladies determine to set their caps for Jones. He has a sick spell and the two maiden ladies shower him with attentions, and then both send him leap year proposals, and that settles it. The next day the women see a "To Let" sign on the door and the moving van carrying off the furniture.

Despair—(THREE REELS)—ESSANAY—NOVEMBER 2.—Featuring Edna Mayo and Bryant Washburn. Lois Tanner, a beautiful girl, is a member of a gang of crooks who plan to rob the house of Robert Spurier, editor of a newspaper. The girl is caught in the act by Spurier and he gives her a chance to live honestly, and she becomes a member of his newspaper staff. She sees Spurier come out of a church with his bride and decides to end her life, but instead returns to the old life and once more Spurier's house is picked for a robbery. However, she is discovered by Spurier, but is shot as a burglar and, dying, Spurier kisses her, to his bride's dismay.

Between Father and Son—(TWO REELS)—BIOGRAPH—NOVEMBER 2.—Featuring Franklin Ritchie, Louise Vale and Jack Drumeir. Dan McGrane, contractor, leader of the political ring, holds his position by hard methods. Unable to beat McGrane at his own game, the opposition try to pit his son against him and this is accomplished by Ada Blake, wife of the banker, who infatuates Tom. On being appointed reform candidate Tom is disowned by his father, and Blake gives him a job at the bank. Mrs. Blake is heavily in debt and Tom offers to get the money from the bank. A burglar enters and after holding Tom up he backs into the vault and sets a can of nitroglycerine on the floor. McGrane enters at this moment and he fires at the burglar, who fires at the can on the floor and is killed by the explosion. Later McGrane and his son are reconciled.

Diana of the Farm—KALEM—NOVEMBER 2.—Featuring Bud Duncan and Ethel Teare. Bud makes a hit with Diana, a farmer's daughter. He and Bill try to milk the farmer's cow, but his name is Tom and he butts the two back within the farmer's reach. Diana goes to the river's edge, dons a bathing suit and goes in for a swim and later Bud vows to drown her father unless he will consent to let Bud marry Diana, but luck is against Bud and they are left in the middle of the river and while the farmer chortles with glee, the two are claimed by Davy Jones.

Up Against It—LUBIN—NOVEMBER 2.—Featuring D. L. Don. Wilson and Barrett, a small time vaudeville team, are up against it. They try to elude their landlady and escape with their grips, but she surprises them and demands that their baggage be left as security. They hit upon a great idea and decide to go to Hankville and open a barber shop, one to be the manicure and the other the French barber. Upon arriving at Hankville they open their barber shop and do a thriving business. Soon, however, my lady, "Wilson" wrecks too many loyal husbands' hearts and the shop is wrecked and the vaudeville team mysteriously disappears.

Athletic Ambitions—SELIG—NOVEMBER 2.—Featuring Tom Mix. Vicky tells the cowboys that she could not love a man who is not an athlete. Tom and Sid start in practicing physical culture. Tom, while practicing, throws a sheep hide over his shoulder and a party of picnickers think he is a wild man and give chase. Vicky sees Tom running and, noticing his wonderful speed, decides he is the man for her.

The Sultan of Zulon—(TWO REELS)—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 2.—Featuring Hughie Mack, Donald MacBride and Dorothy Kelly. Bam Si Ko, the Sultan of Zulon, advertises for an American bride to add to his harem of beauties and sends the picture of Frank Kent, a U. S. government consul, purporting it to be his own. Amy Leigh, a young American seamstress, answers the ad and when she finds who the real sultan is she faints away. Kent has followed the girl and at the critical moment does the hero act and rescues her. He is challenged to a duel with the sultan, and later is made sultan and Amy becomes sultana.

Dora Thorne—(FOUR REELS)—BIOGRAPH—NOVEMBER 3.—Featuring an all-star cast. Ronald, heir of Lord Earle, marries Dora Thorne, the daughter of the lodge keeper of Earlescourt and is disowned by his father. They leave for Italy and there Ronald pursues his art studies and wins a little success. Two children are born to the happy couple and later he is commissioned to paint a picture for Prince Borgezi. He wishes to use Dora as his model, but she is too engrossed in the babies to appreciate what he wants of her. Dora becomes jealous of one Valentine Charteris, whom Ronald has used for his painting and she determines to leave him. Lady Earle cares for Dora and her two children, Beatrice and Lillian, and years later when they are grown to womanhood Beatrice falls in love with Lord Airlie and forgets Hugh Fernely, her former lover, and in an effort to escape the latter is drowned and over their dead child Ronald and Dora are reconciled.

The Parson's Button Matcher—EDISON—NOVEMBER 3.—The cast includes Julian Reed and Raymond McKee. The parson complains to his coachman that the congregation gives him buttons in the Sunday collection. The tramp coachman takes the buttons and matches them with those on the clothes of the parishioners. Then he helps himself to a cow from one, a good harness from another, and various other useful articles. When they accuse the parson with stealing their goods Algernon shows them the buttons and all make a hurried exit from the parson's home.

The Escape of Arthur and the Salvation of Herbert — ESSANAY — NOVEMBER 3.— Featuring Charles J. Stine and Camille D'Arcy. Arthur's wife is a recipe shark and family doctor, and whenever Arthur had a cold she would start dosing him with her home remedies, vinegar tea and lumps of sugar soaked in kerosene, until he was driven to drink. However, when little Herbert arrived his wife let up on him and worked on Herbert and when six years old he joined a gang and shied bricks at a teamster's child. The experienced mother threw a back-twister and wondered why her system failed. Moral: As the father is bent the child is inclined.

The Sign of the Broken Shackles—(TWO REELS)—KALEM—NOVEMBER 3.—Featuring Alice Hollister and Harry Millarde. Basil, who is sent to a West Indian island to look after his brother's interests, antagonizes the planters and he is slain under peculiar circumstances, which causes Irene, who has just inherited her father's plantation, to believe herself the murderess. The girl goes to America where she meets Sir Henry Harcourt and the two fall in love. Blake, the head of the organization in West India which Irene had joined, comes to America and orders her to lure Sir Henry to her apartments, where he is to be slain, but the girl resolves to die in her sweetheart's stead. Later Cara, Irene's West Indian maid, confesses that she had killed Basil and she dies in Sir Henry's place.

A Western Governor's Humanity—(THREE REELS)—LUBIN—NOVEMBER 3.—Featuring Governor W. P. Hunt of Arizona and Romaine Fielding. The sheriff learns that the horse thieves have again stolen and escaped and determines to permit no one excepting his faithful deputy to know of the still hunt which he takes up after this notorious gang. He and his deputy come upon the rustlers' camp, and Monte Red, one of the rustlers, shoots the deputy and then gets the drop on the rest of the gang and captures them, and also discovers that the leader of the gang is his own son. Robert is accused by Monte Red of the shooting of the deputy and the sheriff proceeds to the prosecuting attorney's office. The sheriff's son is tried, convicted and sentenced to be hanged. The boy's mother and sister plead with the governor, but he firmly resists their heart-breaking words. When little baby Pinky calls upon him and tells him of her "Bruvver Bobbie," the governor calls his car and with the child hastens to the penitentiary, arriving just in time to save the son. Later a deputy rides into the jail yard and delivers to the sheriff a signed confession of Monte Red, thus "A Western Governor's Humanity" proved the saving of an innocent life. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

A Family Picnic—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 3.—Featuring a comedy cast. Mr. Jones, his wife, six children and the great Dane pup start for a picnic. They get into a row with a group of Italians and later, when Jones jumps into the water to save the dog's life, he gets his clothes wet and gets into a barrel until they dry off. He tries to get rid of the dog and thinks he has surely lost it by dropping it from a taxi window, but when they arrive home Mr. Pup is sitting on the front doorstep.

The Passing Storm—BIOGRAPH—NOVEMBER 4.—Featuring Alan Hale, Claire McDowell and Vola Smith. The young wife of a blacksmith discovering that a theatrical manager is in the village implores him to give her a chance on the stage, and he tells her to call at his office. She leaves home, and her husband, heart broken, moves to another place and begins life anew. A young girl in the neighborhood takes a fancy for his child and the intimacy thus begun ripens into love. A theatrical troupe is passing through the town and the wife, taken ill, is put off the train in care of a doctor. She wanders away and fate brings her to the home of her husband. Seeing the girl's intimacy in the house she believes her husband married again and she steals away and later her husband finds her body at the foot of a deep precipice and in his grief the girl again comforts him.

The Night That Sophie Graduated—ESSANAY—NOVEMBER 4.—Featuring Margaret Joslin, Victor Fotel, Harry Todd and Robert McKenzie. Slippery Slim and Mustang Pete both rush to escort Sophie to her graduation exercises. Slim arrives first and just as he and Sophie are on the railroad crossing the horse refuses to go farther, and Mustang Pete happens along and ties the horse to the train which is on the siding. Slim is sent sprawling in the mud and Sophie remains in the buggy. Later Slim and Sophie arrive at the exercises, but the audience is thrown into a panic when Pete sets fire to the building.

When War Threatened—(TWO REELS)—LUBIN—NOVEMBER 4.—Featuring L. C. Shumway. Robert Grant, a secret service man, is in love with Myra Hamilton, the teacher of lip reading in the Deaf Institute. An important treaty, the contents of which if known may precipitate a war, is drawn up between Great Britain and the State Department, and Nami, the representative of another country, is anxious to obtain it. Selene, the daughter of Beltros, one of the spies, and also an inventor of a new wonderful ray, tells Nami she will obtain it. She is in the act of getting it, when Robert discovers Selene and follows her, but loses track of the girl near Myra's home. He later discovers the spies, but he is captured and the powerful ray is turned on his eyes. He manages to free one hand, and through field glasses Myra is able to read his message, thanks to the light shining on his face. Later the spies are captured and the treaty is safe and all danger of war is averted.

Their Sinful Influence—(THREE REELS)—SELIG—NOVEMBER 4.—Bessie Eyton featured in the story of Rose, the daughter of Rev. Dr. Karr, who becomes entangled in society functions, amongst them being a dog dinner, at which she smokes her first cigarette and tastes wine for the first time. The second function is a Grecian fete, the third function a Babylonian marriage mart, and the last one, which eclipses them all, an indoor surf bathing tea. She meets one Earl Bayley, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, and Herb Bright, her lover, objects to his attentions. At the last function Bayley takes advantage of Mrs. Croll's absence and attacks Rose. She is saved by her father, who, learning her whereabouts, has come after her. The following Sunday in a bitter sermon her father denounces the society women for their part in having attempted to pollute the mind of his innocent daughter, and the society women leave the church for good.

The Ebony Casket—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 4.—Featuring an all star cast. Aunt Cornelia pays Milton Trent, her nephew's, bills, but insists that he marry her niece, Letha. Auntie's heart is wrapped up in her Angora cat and when it gets sick she phones for Dr. Black, but the cat dies. Milton gets into trouble and steals the ebony casket in which is aunt keeps her jewelry, and is seen by Letha. Upon opening the casket he finds that it contains only a beautiful example of the taxidermist's art, the stuffed cat. Later Auntie gives her consent to the marriage of Will and Letha.

The Musketeers of Pig Alley—BIOGRAPH REISSUE—NOVEMBER 5.—Featuring Lillian Gish and Walter Miller. On her way to the sweatshop the girl is accosted by a gang leader, but will have nothing to do with him. Returning home she finds her mother dead and the young musician she loves is too poor to marry and goes away to better fortunes. A girl friend takes the little lady to a ball and she again encounters the gangster who attempts to dope her, but he is foiled by the rival gang leader. The musician, returning home flushed with triumph, is blackjawed by the gang leader, who robs him, and later to avoid arrest returns the money after the girl has lied to save him from the police.

Friend Wilson's Daughter—(THREE REELS)—EDISON—NOVEMBER 5.—With Gertrude McCoy as Phoebe Wilson, whose father urges her to marry Jacob Haas, known as a merchant, but really a spy in the employ of the English king. Phoebe, however, has given her heart to Burke Richmond, aid to General Lafayette. Haas steals some despatches from Burke and substitutes papers which cause suspicion to fall upon him. Phoebe pleads with Lafayette to pardon Richmond. The general hears her story and becomes suspicious of Haas, and upon investigation confirms his suppositions. In the face of such circumstances, Friend Wilson agrees to the union of his daughter and Richmond.

The Rogue Syndicate—KALEM—NOVEMBER 5.—Episode of "The Ventures of Marguerite," featuring Marguerite Courtot. Marguerite is requested to call at Ferris', her partner's, home, and clear up some important work. Here she comes upon some documents which show her employers in their true light. Ferris, discovering that Marguerite is taking his papers, seizes her and attempts to throttle her, but the girl is saved by Enright, her chauffeur. Later Fenton, Ferris' partner, comes into the room and in his attempt to escape he shoots and wounds Ferris, and when the police arrive the men are shackled together and led away under arrest.

The Urchin—LUBIN—NOVEMBER 5.—Featuring Brooks McCloskey. Unable to get money for food, the boy, who is passionately fond of his old grandfather's violin, manages to get the violin away without his grandfather's knowledge and buys food with the money he received, but on returning home he discovers his grandfather has died. He returns to the dealer and he manages to sell back the bread for his violin. Later it is stolen from him by a tramp, who sells it to a little girl. Some time later the little girl's auto runs down the urchin and he is taken to her home, where he recognizes the tones of his old violin. He crawls downstairs, and getting the violin in his arms starts playing. He tells them his story and a happy future opens before him.

Beautiful Thoughts—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 5.—Featuring Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew. Henry Latimer's wife becomes imbued with the tenets of the "Beautiful Thoughtists." He gets tired of the posing and speeches of his wife and Mrs. Todd, her friend, and determines to cure his wife of her fad. He takes some girlies out to dine, and after absorbing a goodly quantity of wine he returns home in a beautifully elated mood and makes love to Mrs. Todd in his wife's presence. That drives all the beautiful thoughts out of Mrs. Latimer's head and his plan succeeds perfectly.

On the Little Mill Trace—(Two Reels)—Essanay—November 6.—Featuring Nell Craig, Hugh E. Thompson and Thomas Commerford. May Curtis, finding her husband untrue, goes into the mountains, arriving at "Little Mill Trace." Shortly afterward a boy is born and when he is five years old he is kidnaped by his father. May becomes a school teacher and after thirty years in the place she becomes ill and only the skill of a famous surgeon can save her. The surgeon arrives and she recognizes her own son. The operation is successful and May lives to enjoy the comforts of a son.

Danger Ahead—Kalem—November 6.—An episode of the "Hazards of Helen" railroad series. Sterling and Ella steal a jewelry case and make their getaway on a passenger train. The jewelry bag is dropped and comes into Helen's possession. However, the thieves leave the train, board another one at a station further down and overhear two detectives, who were sent to the station to recover the stolen bag. By a clever ruse they throw the sleuths from the train and hoodwink Helen into giving them the jewelry case and board an outgoing freight. Helen's suspicions aroused, she commandeers a high-powered auto and goes in pursuit, reaching a crossing just in time to leap from the auto to one of the flat cars and bring about the capture of the thieves.

The Cellar Spy—Lubin—November 6.—Featuring Billie Reeves and Mae Hotely. Bill is jealous of his wife, but the worst of it he can never verify his suspicions. He purchases a complete stock of dictographs and then has them connected to the coal bin in the cellar, lays in a stock of provisions and some water and prepares to make the hackneyed trip out of town, which means around the block and back. His wife discovers his scheme, however, and salts the water and the food and then borrows some men's clothes and stages a very brisk little drama. She steals away leaving Bill to bitter thoughts and salted commissary until the next afternoon, when he is glad to get out, and he never was so glad to see his wife in all his life.

The Lost Messenger—Selig—November 6.—John Gladding and his daughter, Kate, live in the jungle. Gladding traps animals for an American circus and Charles Clancy, a hunter, arrives at Gladding's home and falls in love with Kate. Kate's father is seized with the plague and he is left alone with his daughter and dies. Kate sends for help and her appeal falls into the hands of Clancy, who rescues her and later makes her his wife.

Anselo Lee—(Three Reels)—Vitagraph—November 6.—Featuring Antonio Moreno and Naomi Childers. Anselo Lee, son of an old fortune teller of the gypsy tribe, falls in love with Gertrude, daughter of the wealthy Mrs. Carlton, and the two are at once attracted to each other. Mrs. Lee opposes the affair, for Gertrude is a frail girl and the old witch had read in her palm that she would die young. Mrs. Carlton makes strenuous efforts to cure her daughter of the fascination because of social barriers. Anselo teaches Gertrude the wildly beautiful Romany love songs, and some time later affairs come to a climax and the two are separated. After many months Anselo locates Gertrude and after a brief period of happiness she dies in his arms, and he is left to wander the Romany roads grief-stricken and alone.

Mutual Program

The Reformers—Casino—October 24.—Through the zeal of Mammy, who has been paid to keep the secret of her mistress' recent marriage, much trouble results. In an argument with the porter, Mammy pushes him off the rear platform of the train. The porter goes to Mr. Baggs, a lawyer, who is best known as the husband of a famous reformer. Mrs. Baggs happens to be traveling on the same train with the newly married couple, Edna and Wilton. When Mammy denies that the two are just married, Mrs. Baggs is sure that she has found a flagrant case which will make her talk that night more spicey. At the hotel, the young couple are attacked by Mrs. Baggs and her supporters. But the wedding ring proves the truth and Wilton enters a complaint against the reformer for defamation of character. Baggs and the porter arrive in court, having caused the arrest of Mammy for assault and battery. Things straighten out and the couple proceed joyously on their honeymoon.

The Conscience of Juror No. 10—(Two Reels)—Thanhouser—October 26.—As his love for his wife means more than his honor, Milton Calhoun accepts bribe money for helping to convict Jonathan Moore. He does not stop to go into the merits of the case, thinking only of his sick wife and how he can send her to the mountains. Then comes the trial. As the case proceeds, it becomes more and more clear to Juror No. 10 that Moore is innocent. Still Calhoun holds out doggedly. Looking out of the window of the jury room he sees a little child fall out of a drifting boat into the river. He flings himself out of the window, but Moore is before him, having gone out for some air. Calhoun receives from Moore's arms his half-drowned baby girl. A little later, Calhoun makes a clean breast of everything. Moore sees that Calhoun and his wife shall lose nothing by the confession.

Jerry to the Rescue—Cub—October 29.—It is a case of love at first sight between Goldie, the daughter of Farmer Weed, and Jerry. As she is serving him with two of her own pies, Terrible Tom comes along in his car. The ensuing scene is not in the villain's favor, and he and his henchmen later brew a plan of revenge. Jerry is tied up in a deserted shack, and Goldie is chained to the railroad track. Given strength in desperation, Jerry frees himself and his love in the nick of time. Jerry gets on the trail of the gangsters, a pitched battle follows, and, with the help of the police, defeat overtakes his enemies.

The Wasp—(Two Reels)—American—November 1.—Vivian Rich is featured as a female porch climber and burglar, who is finally reformed by a millionaire, in whose auto she seeks refuge when pursued by the police. She takes up charity work and finally induces the millionaire to contribute heavily to the cause. A longer review will be found on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

Zablitzeky's Waterloo—Centaur—October 31.—Featuring Monsieur Jean Pierre Pierard and Cissy Fitzgerald. Zablitzeky, champion wrestler, thinks he is a lady killer. He gets a note from a girl who describes herself as pretty after a bout and she tells him to meet her in the park next day, and that he will know her as she will wear a white chenille dress. Zablitzeky's friend, Squid, butts in on all ocasions, and the champion doesn't know what chenille is and he accosts every girl dressed in white. He finally meets his charmer, but the other girls bring a crowd of men to beat him up because he had spoken to them. Zablitzeky's wife appears and gives him a good drubbing. The last seen of him he is meekly wheeling the baby carriage home.

Putting Papa to Sleep—Novelty—November 1.—Another doleful recital of what happens to papa when he tries to put a kink in the course of true love. Papa is arrested for trying to blow up his own safe. But he is not the only one that comes in for trouble. The two crooks quaff some of the opiated wine that is meant for papa, and thus they are easily caught. Two officers of the law later imbibe some of the same beverage and easily succumb. Through the seeming help of the lovers, papa recovers his money and he bestows his blessing upon them.

One to the Minute—Beauty—November 2.—John Dillon with his one-reel comedy has produced a rather melodramatic comedy, the title of which refers to the fools who are born at the rate of one a minute. Neva Gerber and Frank Borzage are the featured personages, and the story has to do with a prominent club man, who, on a bet robs all his fellows, only to discover later that he has turned the results of his robbery over to a real thief, but eventually he succeeds in capturing the thief and restoring to the victims the property that they lost. N. G. C.

Ho and Bo—Novelty—November 3.—Two tramps steal a parson's preaching clothes. In the pockets they find a five-dollar bill, a ticket to Hicksville, and a letter which reveals the fact that the Rev. Harris is expected in Hicksville that morning to rehearse a young couple who are to be married that noon. Ho, the taller of the tramps dons the clothes and he and his pal journey to the scene of activity. But the minister sees them board the train which he misses, hires a farmer to drive him like mad to Hicksville and arrives in time to expose the impostors. Ho and Bo flee from the house, pursued by a volley of dinner plates.

When Avarice Rules—(Two Reels)—Centaur—November 4.—Featuring Goldie Colwell and a strong cast. Adam Flint, Marie Summers' guardian, when he finds out that she has accepted John Carney's proposal, arranges with Antonio,

HEADQUARTERS
FOR MOVING PICTURE
CAMERAS
TRIPODS
PRINTERS, ETC.
PATHE, MOY & PRESTWICK
GOODS, ALWAYS IN STOCK
MOTION PICTURE APPARATUS CO., INC.
810 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY, N.Y.

a keeper of wild animals, to kidnap the girl, and it is suggested that she be imprisoned in a hut guarded by a number of ferocious lions. After the girl has been kidnaped, Flint tells Marie that to gain her freedom she must marry him, and she refuses. He returns home to abscond with the remainder of her fortune. Carney goes to the zoo and Marie is saved, and Flint is implicated by Antonio and is overpowered by the officers of the law. The entire scheme is exposed, and Carney and Marie are now happy in each other's love.

On the Secret Service—American—November 5.—Winifred Greenwood and Edward Coxen are featured in this one-reel melodrama, concerning a gang of moonshiners and counterfeiters, who are finally run to earth by a secret service man. The story is splendidly photographed and interesting throughout. N. G. C.

Who's Who — Cub — November 5.—Featuring George Ovey. Father and mother quarrel. May, one of the twins, sides with mother, and June sides with father, and father and daughter leave home. After a number of years May marries Jack and, accompanied by mother, they go on a honeymoon trip, and to the same hotel comes father and June. June spies Jerry, her sweetheart, and shortly afterward Jerry finds May in the lobby and embraces her. She is rescued by her husband and later, after much disturbance, he is thrown out of the room. After many mix-ups, the mother enters the scene and solves all the complications and in the end father goes to mother, June to Jerry and May to Jack.

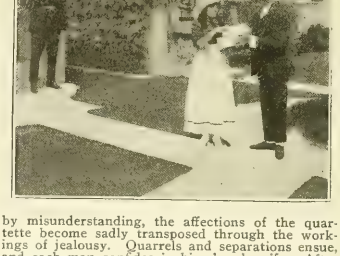
The Trail of the Serpent—(Two Reels)—Mustang—November 5.—A typical western drama with a hero, a villain, a beautiful girl, a couple of Mexicans and the always present "papers." A longer review will be found on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

Billy Van Deusen's Campaign—Beauty—November 6.—Archer MacMackin has produced a thoroughly laughable comedy in this one-reel subject that features John Steppling and Carol Halloway. The comedy deals with the political campaign of Billy Van Deusen, and the unique methods taken by Billy to win the women's vote. N. G. C.

The Law of Duty—(Two Reels)—Reliance—November 7.—General von Lomberg receives a message from the Emperor permitting the general's son to continue his studies in France. The boy is to be placed under the personal tutelage of Professor Henri DuBray. A sentimental reason also enters into von Lomberg's choice, as Mme. DuBray was a former sweetheart of the general's. Young von Lomberg has an interview behind locked doors with the emperor, before crossing the border. Before long the young man finds himself in love with Valerie, DuBray's daughter. When the German student joins the French army as an aviator, his father disowns him. Some months later, the general, victorious, takes possession of a portion of Northern France and the DuBray house is commandeered as his headquarters. Lieutenant von Lomberg is captured and brought before his father. How the play solves the terrible dilemma with which the stern war chief is confronted is shown in the remaining scenes.

Universal Program



Universal Animated Weekly, No. 190—Universal—October 27.—Carlisle team defeated 45-0 by Penn State at Pittsburgh, Pa.; daughter of ex-President Tyler of U. S. dedicates giant shaft at Richmond, Va.; "Joe" Cannon denounces country's Mexican policy at St. Louis, Mo.; drugs and pipes seized by police and go up in smoke at Los Angeles, Calif.; latest creations in gowns made in America; dedicating Masonic Temple at Washington, D. C.; invading tars repelled by citizen soldiers at Chicago, Ill.; victims of disaster of British training ship laid to rest at West Thurrock, England; lord mayor reviews jackies at London, England; views of the battle line; President Wilson casts vote for suffrage; cartoons by Hy. Mayer.

The Measure of Leon Dubray—(Three Reels)—Gold Seal—November 2.—Leon Dubray, a trapper, and his mother live in the Northland. Near by lives Janet Beeson and her father, who is secretly a poacher. Janet and Leon have pledged their love. Roget, the forest ranger, is in league with the poachers. The mounted police offer $500 for the capture of the gang, and Roget, being hard pressed for money, betrays his pals, accusing Leon of turning in the men in order to get money for his mother's operation. This is told to Janet in such a manner that she believes it, and the two become estranged. Leon's mother dead, he seeks employment in the city. In the meantime the ranger is accepted by Janet, but she discovers some of his crooked work and runs away to the city. Beeson escapes from the prison and Leon gives him a change of clothes. At Janet's room, Leon forces the ranger, whom he finds there, to put on Beeson's prison suit, and Beeson, Janet and Leon escape, after hiding Roget in the closet. The three plan to be on their way to another country before Roget has proved an alibi.

A Circumstantial Scandal—Nestor—November 1.—Ray and Neal are pals, and their girls, Billie and Corinne, are chums. The four are always found together. During an automobile ride they decide to get married. The wedding is as follows—Billie to Ray, and Neal to Corinne. The tranquillity of "Lovejoy Court" is disturbed when, by misunderstanding, the affections of the quartette become sadly transposed through the workings of jealousy. Quarrels and separations ensue, and each man confides in his chum's wife. After an exciting taxi episode, the two couples come to peaceful terms.

When Beauty Butts In—Imp—November 2.—"Slim" Hoover, Mrs. "Slim" and the five little "Slims" take a day's outing at the beach. "Slim" strays from the family corral in pursuit of Miss Magneto, a beach beauty, who with her girl chums, puts him through some paces. Mrs. "Slim" worried over her husband's absence, searches for her husband, leaving the little five with Willie, for whom they provide plenty of trouble. "Slim" gets his when Mrs. "Slim" discovers him with Miss Magneto.

The Idle Rich—L-Ko—(Two Reels)—November 3.—Mr. Rawsberry, while in the park, tries to get acquainted with a dreamy girl, but his satisfaction only amounts to a black eye administered by that little one's fist. At his wife's lawn party he meets the censure by relating how he saved a little child from a railroad accident. This works finely until his wife introduces him to the guest of honor. The latter is the beauty who has made such a striking effect on his eye. Her escort gets a little bit too "gay" and the storm is precipitated. After many painful developments it ultimates that Mrs. Rawsberry determines to give no more lawn parties.

The Markswoman—Big U—November 4.—At a trading post in the Northwest, Mary Hall lives with her father and crippled brother, Billie. Jules Du Boise, a French Canadian, tries to force his love on Mary and is ejected from the house by Hall. Jules swears revenge and seems to be getting it when, later, he steals a large sum of money from the Halls' cabin. As Mr. Hall is away, Billie and Mary set out in a canoe in pursuit of the thief. Mary shoots the paddle out of Jules' hand, but in the chase on shore she is disabled by spraining her ankle. Jules gets possession of Billie's gun and throws him over a cliff into the water below. Hall appears on the scene, but as he is struggling to save his crippled son in the water below, Jules takes aim at him. Then Mary crawls up, pulls out her revolver and shoots Jules dead. The money is recovered and all ends well.

A White Feather Volunteer—(Two Reels)—Laemmle—November 4.—The white feather is a symbol of neglected duty and cowardice which the women have hit upon to stimulate recruiting during the war. Alice Simms is discharged from the office where she works because the lawyer catches her making a subtle love appeal to John Brown, the clerk. The latter, however, has always been indifferent to her. To avenge her wounded pride, she sends the white feather to Brown, knowing that he has already been refused enlistment, being too old. Johnny, his son, declares it a "dirty" trick upon his father. Brown shaves off his moustache, lies about his age, and enlists. When at last he returns home, an invalid, it is after he has saved Tom, Alice's brother, by sacrificing his right arm. With aching heart, John learns that his little son has enlisted. Alice begs forgiveness of the man whom she has wronged. Later, Alice, a Red Cross nurse, comes upon little Johnny's dead body. In his pocket is the feather which she had sent his father.

The Reward—(Three Reels)—Imp—November 5.—Featuring King Baggot. At a notorious cafe and gambling house, Jack Hutchinson rules as a sort of manager and overseer. No one suspects that the real owner is Big Jim Davis, who keeps in the background. In private life Big Jim is a retired banker living quietly with his two children, Edgar and Claudia. Claudia and a number of friends come to the cafe on a shamming expedition. Jack protects the little society girl from her intoxicated escort and the two are strongly attracted to each other. Later Claudia meets Jack in the park and invites him to her home. Here he is astounded to learn that Big Jim is in reality Smythe, the retired banker. Jack's first affinity, being jealous, puts a detective on the track and learns the same thing. She informs Big Jim that she knows his identity and tells him of Jack's love. Jack is immediately discharged. But he is able to do Big Jim a favor later, and he wins the gratitude of that man. Jack turns out to be the son of one of Smythe's friends, having run away some few years earlier after a quarrel with his father. Father and son are reconciled and the way is opened for the development of the romance between Jack and Claudia.

Cupid and the Scrub Lady—L-Ko—November 7.—Gwendoline, a sentimental scrub lady, loves a business man who has offices on the top floor of the skyscraper. Forbidden to use the elevator, she climbs the stairs many times a day in order to see the boss. He ignores her, and her sentiments anger the janitor, who loves the stenographer. The latter is worshiped by the clerk. The stenographer loves the boss and Cupid seems to have bewildered everyone in the building. A Black Hand man who has been refused money wrecks the office. Gwendoline saves the day and is liberally rewarded by the boss, who saves her from suicide. She sinks into his arms, a happy woman.

Such a Princess—(Three Reels)—Rex—November 7.—Prince Norman is the son of King Normanus. Before the death of the latter, he issues a decree that the Prince must marry within ninety days or give up the throne to Prince Charles. The ninety days are nearing an end, but the Prince will not marry against his liking for all the kingdoms in the world. Prince Charles plots against Norman and takes him out on a hunt the day before the time is up. When Norman meets Wild Flower, a beautiful girl of the forest, he falls in love at once, marries her and takes her back to his kingdom. Thus Prince Charles' plot fails. Wild Flower shocks the court by her manners, and, feeling unhappy in her surroundings, starts back to her home. She is hailed by the castle ghost, who bids her follow him. He takes her to the place where Charles' advisors are plotting and tells her to beware of them. He vanishes, and her Fairy Godmother appears and shows her, in a cauldron, a plot to assassinate Prince Norman. Wild Flower hurries back to the palace in time to save him and all ends auspiciously.

The Mettle of Jerry McGuire—(TWO REELS)—BISON—NOVEMBER 6.—Helen is operator at Bells. Jerry McGuire, engineer on the local freight, and Tom Thornton, his fireman, are both rivals for the girl's hand. After Jerry has married Helen, he swiftly falls from grace through the malicious efforts of Tom, who gets him to drink. From bad, Jerry goes to worse, finally landing in the penitentiary. After five years he is released, wanders to the depot and meets his little daughter. While Jerry is in the office talking to Helen, the little girl gets in the cab of a standing train, opens the throttle, and off it starts. Jerry and his wife miraculously save the train from colliding with another, and after the rescue, Jerry and his family make a fresh start.

Father's Helping Hand—NESTOR—NOVEMBER 25. Ray enjoys a life of ease as "Secretary" to his wealthy and indulgent father. But when the office becomes cluttered with bill collectors, father becomes irate and tells Ray that he is discharged until he can pay his own bills. Ray finds out that bill collectors get 50 per cent and he concludes that it will be a clever idea to open a collection agency and dun his father. Disguised, Ray returns to his father's office and demands payment for his son's bills. Father flatly refuses to pay, but opens up later when Ray assumes the guise of detective. Later, with his hands full of the 50 per cent cut he returns to father in the role of a prodigal son who has made good, and father welcomes him with open arms.

Feature Programs

Fox

The Soul of Broadway—(FIVE REELS)—FOX.—Featuring Valeska Suratt as Grace Hamilton, with whom William Craig is infatuated. When poverty threatens him she jilts him for an elderly millionaire and Craig later shoots and wounds her in the neck and he is sentenced to five years in the penitentiary. After three years he is released and later marries Emma Lawton. Emma's father poses as a prosperous business man, but in reality is a gambler. After meeting Grace Hamilton, he arranges with the manager to star her in a dancing act. Craig and his wife attend the opening night and recognize Grace, who makes an appointment to meet him at Lawton's gambling house. Craig's wife finds the half-burned note and follows him and, overhearing their conversation, learns the truth of the affair. Craig decides it is better to let the whole scandal come out than to keep it a secret any longer, but before Grace can carry out her plans she is suddenly stricken with madness and dies.

Kleine-Edison

The Green Cloak—(FIVE REELS)—GEORGE KLEINE.—When Ruth McAllister returns with her father from the West, she breaks her engagement with John Gilbert, a young attorney. A stranger, calling at the moment, is introduced by Ruth as "a Western friend." An hour later he is found strangled to death in the McAllister home. When the police arrive Ruth confesses that the dead man was her husband and is promptly accused of his murder. How the tangled skeins of destiny are unraveled constitutes the subject of the story. The elucidation of the mystery is that the victim was murdered by a member of the gang which he had tricked out of their booty. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Metro

Her Reckoning, or Tables Turned—(FIVE REELS)—METRO—NOVEMBER 1.—Featuring Emmy Wehlen. Howard Sherbrook induces his friend Leslie to arrange a sham ceremony, as he fears he will be disinherited by his father if he marries Ethel Stratton. Leslie engages a real minister and the marriage is regularly performed. A year later Howard deserts Ethel, telling her she is not his wife, and announces his engagement to a wealthy girl. Leslie hears this and with the minister arrives in the city on the day of Howard's wedding. Fearing disgrace Howard kills himself. Months later Ethel and Leslie are married. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Morosco

The Yankee Girl—(FIVE REELS)—MOROSCO.—Blanche Ring featured in this screen version of her musical comedy success by George V. Hobart. Jessie Gordon accompanies her father to South America, where he is to acquire a land concession. Arrived there, the father is prevented from making the initial payment on his option by a rival company. Jessie enlists the aid of the American consul, who proves to be an old sweetheart of hers. With Jack's aid she outwits the rival company's agent and secures the land for her father. Jack's reward is Jessie's promise to marry him. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Mutual Masterpictures

His Wife—(FIVE REELS)—THANHOUSER.—Geraldine O'Brien featured in an adaptation of Charlotte Braeme's novel about Nora, a fishermaid who becomes the wife of a rich man and later suspects she is losing her husband because he pays attention to the secret wife of his brother. Nora becomes a nun and her husband thinks her dead, until by chance they meet, the misunderstanding is cleared up, and they finally find happiness together. A full review appears on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

North American

The Falling Aeroplane—(CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT OF THE "DIAMOND FROM THE SKY")—(TWO REELS)—AMERICAN.—A thrilling fall of an aeroplane and the death of Luke Lovell beneath the wheels of a racing automobile, are the two big thrills in this installment of the exciting serial, a full review of which appears on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

"BUILT BY BRAINS"

You Can't Show a Beautiful Film on a Poor Screen.

When you buy a Minusa Screen you don't merely buy it by the square foot. Minusa Screens are "BUILT BY BRAINS" to suit all the particular requirements of YOUR particular theatre.

Write for our literature

Minusa Cine Products Co.

St. Louis, Mo. Houser Building
Calgary, Canada Grand Theatre Bldg.
San Francisco 117-19 Golden Gate Ave.
New York 19 W. 23rd St.
Chicago 154 West Lake St.
Pittsburg 422 First Ave.

Tell me how long your throw is, the size of your house and what size picture you want and I'll tell you

The Screen You Ought to Have

We make Rembusch Patented Glass Mirror Screens. Glass transparent screens for rear projection and all kinds of cloth curtains for motion picture projection. Gold fibre screens. Silver fibre screens. Mirror cloth screens. White opaque screens. Seamless, with stretchers or rollers. Mirrors of all kinds and re-silvering. Poster frames.

FRANK J. REMBUSCH, Pres.
MIRROR SCREEN CO., Shelbyville, Ind.

Mr. Exhibitor:
Your patrons demand better Music.
Install a

Bartola Orchestra

and your music problem is Solved. Sold on easy payments.

Write for Catalogue

Bartola Musical Instrument Co.

Chas. C. Pyle, General Sales Agent
710-711 Mallers Bldg., Chicago, Ill.
Factory: Oshkosh, Wisconsin

THE TALK OF THE MOTION PICTURE FIELD
GOES POSTERS
POST THEM AND PACK YOUR THEATRE
GOES—CHICAGO

Paramount

Blackbirds—(Five Reels)—Lasky.—Laura Hope Crews featured as Leonie Sobatsky, assistant leader of a gang of crooks. She becomes acquainted with a wealthy American family named Crocker, who have in their possession a valuable rug and Leonie substitutes a false rug for the antique. She joins the Crocker party, and the Honorable Trask, a British crook, also joins the party and they journey back to America together. Leonie and Trask fall in love with each other, each believing the other to be respectable, and Leonie resolves to leave the gang. As Leonie is leaving the house with the false rug she comes upon Trask opening the safe, and with their true characters revealed to each other they resolve to turn straight.

Pathe

Pathe News, No. 84—Pathe—October 20.—"Shadow Lawn," the summer residence which President Wilson has leased; a new machine invented for carrying cotton to sacks; serious landslide on the Panama Canal; wireless telegraphy outfit, carried in the pocket, invented by Dr. Barringer Cox; cartoon by W. C. Morris; Pathe fashions; seven hundred jackies from Great Lakes Naval Training Station attack the rookies' training camp at Fort Sheridan.

Pathe News, No. 85—Pathe—October 23.—George M. Cohan, famous comedian, lays cornerstone of the new Friars Club building at New York City; officers of the Government Reclamation Commission greeted by the tribal chiefs during their visit to the Blackfeet Indians at Glacier Park, Mont.; members of the Ancient Scottish Rite of Freemasons dedicate the House of the Temple at Washington, D. C.; electrically worked coal chute used to load coal at Charleston, S. C.; California girls arrive at the White House to invite President Wilson and his fiancee to visit the Panama-Pacific Exposition; German prisoners captured by British arrive at Southampton, England; blind soldiers of the French army decorated by General Parreau at Paris, France; Mayor Thompson returns from exposition and is greeted by admirers in Chicago, Ill.; commercial parade held at Jersey City, N. J.

The Eleventh Hour—(Three Reels)—Pathe.—The Princess Mercedes determines to learn who murdered her fiance. After an investigation, she feels reasonably certain that Captain Orloff is guilty. She becomes acquainted with Orloff and plans to induce him to confess his crime. She arranges with the police to be within hearing of her conversation. Orloff admits that he killed her fiance, but he proves that he was a spy and a traitor to her country. The princess allows Orloff to escape and gives misleading information to the police who set out in pursuit. The picture is beautifully produced and comes from the Italian studios.

The Master Touch—(Two Reels)—Pathe.—Fourth episode in the "New Adventures of Wallingford" series, featuring Burr McIntosh and Max Figman. Wallingford learns that J. D. Prime, the store owner and bank president of a small town, and his associates, have made fake loans with the deposits. He agrees to assume the blame for $100,000, and the directors accept his terms. Then he gives them the double-cross and frightens them into making good the money they stole from the bank. In preparing the game Wallingford has been forced to buy a building site. To be rid of this, he imports a quantity of skunks. As the lot is next to Prine's store and he does not wish to lose all his customers, Prine buys Wallingford's option for double its price. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Comrade John—(Five Reels)—Pathe.—Gold Rooster play produced by Balboa. The picture, founded upon the novel of the same name by Samuel Merwin and Henry K. Webster, features William Elliot in a cast that includes Ruth Roland and Lewis J. Cody. "Prophet" Stein induces the many followers of his new cult to subscribe funds to its maintenance. He pretends that his "Dream City" has been built by his comrades, as the motto of the sect is "Beauty through toil." Stein has employed an architect to build the temple and other structures. When Stein refuses to force his attentions upon one of his beautiful girl followers the architect exposes him. The comrades cry for vengeance upon learning that they have been defrauded and set fire to the "Dream City." Stein is killed in the fire. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Whiffles Woos and Trouble Brews—Pathe.—A foreign comedy featuring Arthur Prince. Whiffles makes love to a charming girl and invites her to take tea with him. Two men attempt to blackmail him by saying that one is her father and claiming that he has compromised the girl. Whiffles signs a paper promising to marry the girl and pay a sum to the "father." The girl intervenes, however, and prevents this. After sending off the impostors, Whiffles obtains the real father's consent to marry the beautiful girl.

Doughnuts—Pathe-Starlight.—Heinie and Louie spend their last nickel for a loaf of bread. In the bread they find a lady's purse. The woman who lost the purse has called the police and they are in search of the men who robbed her. While Heinie and Louie are gloating over their prize the police come. In the chase they outdistance the cops.

Intimate Study of Birds—(Split Reel)—Pathe.—No. 10 of the series picturing wild life. The pheasant and birds of prey are the subjects. On the same reel with:

Police Dog to the Rescue—Pathe.—Animated cartoon by Anderson produced by the Bray studios.

Neal of the Navy—(Two Reels)—Pathe-Balboa.—Ninth episode entitled "The Yellow Peril." The Martin party travels further south in search of Lost Island. They land on the island of Tortuga, where the ship's doctor finds many cases of yellow fever. After a hazardous journey Hernandez and his associates arrive there. The smuggler lures Annette and Neal to his hut. The girl refuses to give him the map. He decides to be rid of Annette and her foster-brother and takes them to a vast swamp, where they are the prey of the disease-carrying mosquitoes. They are found there by a searching party. News of the missing girl's rescue is joyfully received in the village by the natives, who appreciate her kindness in caring for the fever-stricken people. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Universal Special

The Broken Coin—(Between Two Fires)—Episode 20.—After a long and fruitless search for the papers, Sachio returns to King Phillip at Grahoffen. The latter is enraged and orders Sachio to make preparations for a final attack on the Kingdom of Gretzhoffen. Kitty, Count Frederick, and the colored sailor are rescued from the blood-thirsty natives and taken aboard a Mr. Wyndham's yacht. Wyndham makes a brutal advance upon Kitty, and Frederick comes to her rescue. This results in the irons for Frederick and the demented sailor. Frederick, however, escapes, and sends a wireless message to the Prime Minister at Gretzhoffen before he is again put in chains. As the episode fades out, Wyndham advances towards the helpless Kitty.

V. L. S. E. Inc.

The Rights of Man—(Five Reels)—V. L. S. E.—October 25.—A war drama by Louis Reeves Harrison. Produced by Lubin under the direction of John H. Pratt. It is the romance of a princess and an American surgeon serving at one of the field hospitals. Her father is killed by a shell. The princess carries on the work commenced by her father, to give financial aid to a party of conspirators against the crown. After completing this work she returns to the surgeon and expresses her willingness to go with him to America. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

World

The Better Woman—(Five Reels)—Equitable—World Film—November 1.—Lenore Ulrich featured as Kate Tripler, the unlettered country girl whose craving for love leads her to deceive the man she loves and trapping him into marrying her. Just when her husband begins to return her love he learns of her act and denounces her. She returns to her father, but soon Frank realizes his love for Kate and follows her. At the home of her father there is a happy reunion. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Bought—(Five Reels)—Shubert—November 1.—Ethel Gray Terry and Frederick Lewis featured. Frambers, a literary man, promises to marry Helen Talbot, who is about to become a mother and whose lover went down with the Titanic, and receives $10,000 and a position in Mr. Talbot's office. He marries the girl and the child dies. Helen despises her "bought" husband and Frambers resigns his position and pays her back the $10,000, telling her he will get a divorce. Frambers helps Talbot's business and returns to his room to die, but when he recovers from his illness he finds Helen by his side and they are made happy with a happiness that has not been "bought."

Associated Service

Released Week of November 2.

The Duel of Hearts—(Two Reels)—Romona.—Jess, the village telegraph operator, loses her position when a new girl is sent from the city and is forced to obtain employment in a dance hall and saloon as bar maid. Curley Bradford, a professional gambler, becomes infatuated with Alice, the new operator, and Jess falls in love with Curley, though the latter is unaware of this. Alice discovers what she thinks an affair between Curley and Jess and sends him a note telling him to never see her again. Later through Jess the two are reconciled.

And He Came Straight Home—Alta.—Jones, a middle aged business man, arrives at his home at 2 a. m. in the morning badly intoxicated. His wife meets him on the porch and Jones begins to explain. Jones' explanation apparently does not prove satisfactory, for as he finishes his tale she is eyeing him suspiciously. She takes one wallop at her husband and the last we see of her she is slamming the door while Jones lands in a mud puddle.

Hilary of the Hills—(Two Reels)—Santa Barbara.—Ted Grayson is sent by his father, a mine owner, to investigate the trouble at the mine and here he meets Hilary Durland and they become interested in each other and their friendship ripens into love. Later Hilary sees Ted meet his sister Leila, who years before was disowned by her father for marrying a gambler, and not knowing the relationship between them she becomes jealous. Ben, the town bully, learns that Mr. Grayson is coming to the mine with the pay roll and with two confederates plans to hold him up. After a desperate fight Ben is killed and Mr. Grayson is also shot. Leila learns of her father's accident and goes to the Durland home to see him and here a reconciliation is effected and Hilary learns that Leila is not Ted's sweetheart, and he induces her to fill that place.

SOME NEW THEATERS

The Rex moving picture theater, owned by Albert Carney, in Dubuque has been reopened.

The Empire theater, Fort Madison, has been reopened under the management of Kleppisch and Matson. The theater has been improved.

Michigan.

Contract has been let to John Benkema for the erection of the new motion picture theater on Bridge street, Grand Rapids, for C. and G. Budde. It will be of cement, brick and hollow tile, costing $5,000.

The Royal theater, in Marquette, which has been closed for four months, was reopened October 1 by Allen & Rytkonen, managers of the Star, who have had a lease on the house since January 1. The theater will be in operation on Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

Minnesota.

Frank Soutar is having a new front installed in the Grand theater building in Luverne.

E. R. Crosby, who has been contemplating the erection of a motion picture theater in St. Charles, has purchased ground north of Pfeffkorn's hardware store and work will be pushed as fast as possible. The building will be 28x90 feet.

The Empress theater in Brainerd has been sold by W. S. Wolf to F. S. Workman of Howard Lake, Wisconsin, who took charge October 2.

The Elite theater of New Duluth has been sold by D. J. Kulaszewicz.

Missouri.

The Gertrude Amusement company recently closed a ten-year lease and will convert the Lorelei Natatorium, near Taylor avenue and Olive street, St. Louis, into a motion picture theater. It will be known as the Lorelei Feature Playhouse. The entire interior will be redecorated and the walls and ceiling will be trellis panels. An inclined flooring will be placed over the pool and this will seat about 1,400 people. The seats and aisles will be spacious and comfortable, while the present walk around the pool will be converted into thirty-four loges with a seating capacity of eight in each loge. J. I. Landay is president of the company.

MOTOGRAPHY

The MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

GRACE VALENTINE
WITH GAUMONT

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, NOVEMBER 13, 1915 No. 20

LUBIN

Monday Nov. 15TH
L.C. SHUMWAY
IN THE WALL BETWEEN ONE REEL DRAMA

Tuesday Nov. 16TH
D.L. DON
IN AN ACCIDENT POLICY
ONE ACT COMEDY

Wednesday Nov. 17TH
FRANCIS JOYNER
IN
IN LOVE'S OWN WAY
THREE ACT DRAMA

Thursday Nov. 18TH
L.C. SHUMWAY
IN MARGIE OF THE UNDERWORLD
TWO ACT DRAMA

Friday Nov. 19TH
L.C. SHUMWAY
IN THE DEATH WEB
ONE ACT DRAMA

Saturday Nov. 20TH
BILLIE REEVES
IN HIS WIFE'S NEW LID
ONE ACT COMEDY

GENERAL FILM
LUBIN
RELEASES

Success and Triangle Are the Same, Evidently

It may be that you know Abernathy of Birmingham, Ala. If you do, it is a safe wager that you have heard he won his success with his Strand Theatre by poor judgment. Abernathy thinks hard, weighs evidences and acts. He's a Triangle exhibitor now—to the extent of over $30,000 a year.

Wassman of Nashville is coming across with the same amount—for Triangle service for his Knickerbocker Theatre because he is a sane human being. He figured that if 500 people would pay to see a good picture, 1000 would hurry to pay him quicker to see the best pictures. Being wide awake and demonstratedly successful, Wassman signed Triangle on.

Frue of Hartford, has a prophetic name. Frue deals in cause and effect. He knew that quality caused people to part with money. The effect is a profit for somebody. He decided to be that somebody. He is making Triangle Plays the cause—which cost him over $25,000 a year—and he knows that the effect will be increased wear on the plate glass sheets of the box office window.

Frue—Wassman—Abernathy, three wise men who know that Triangle and Success are synonymous terms. Is your wisdom working?

TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION
71 WEST 23rd ST. NEW YORK

Orrin Johnson, Seena Owen and A. D. Sears in a scene from the Triangle-Griffith supervised production, "The Penitentes."

MOTOGRAPHY

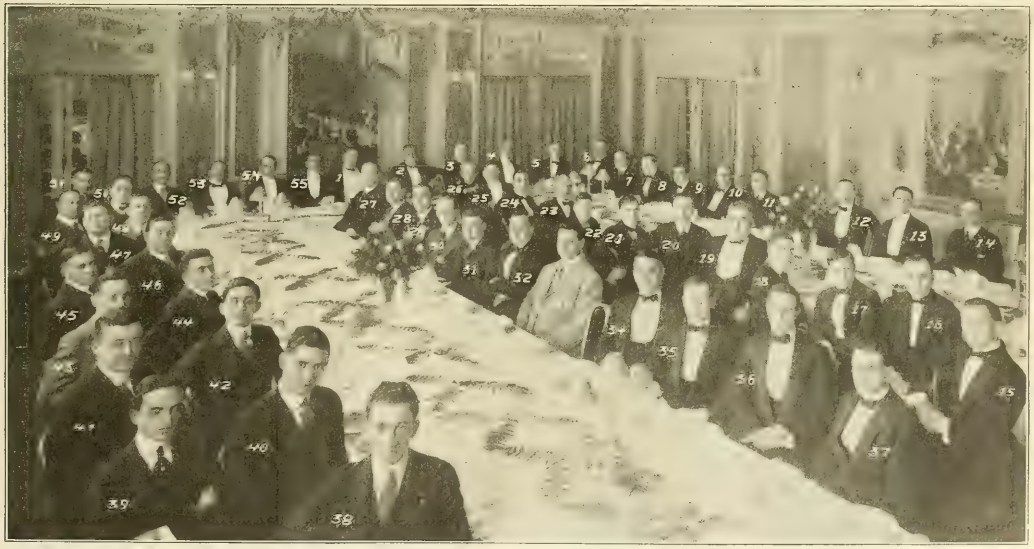
WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED THE NICKELODEON

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, NOVEMBER 13, 1915 No. 20

World Film Holds Sales Convention

SELZNICK ADDRESSES MANAGERS

LEWIS J. SELZNICK, vice president and general manager of the World Film Corporation, rewarded "his boys" who have been attending a three days' sales convention in Chicago for the past three days, by tendering them a banquet on Tuesday evening, November 2.



The East Room of the LaSalle hotel was tastily decorated and about seventy-five film people sat down to the finest meal ever served by the LaSalle hotel on a similar occasion.

Five pieces of music enlivened the occasion, several songs were rendered by performers engaged for that purpose and speeches by the various salesmen, division managers and officers of the World Film and Equitable Film Corporations were made.

A surprise was handed to Mr. Selznick, who had appointed Mr. Metzenbaum as toastmaster, when Mr. Metzenbaum called upon one of the salesmen to make the initial address, which was a gracefully worded presentation speech accompanying a solid silver loving-cup presented to Mr. Selznick, having engraved thereon, "To Lewis J. Selznick, founder and father of the World Film Corporation, from the boys in the field, November 2, 1915." Mr. Selznick made a fitting reply and stated he would later attempt to express his thanks more fully.

Surprise number two came in the form of the presentation of a solid gold watch to Harry C. Drum, general sales manager, having engraved on the inside case, "To Harry C. Drum from his loyal World Film associates, Nov. 2, 1915." Mr. Drum made a graceful acknowledgment.

Short speeches were made by several of the road men and division managers and Leander Richardson, newly appointed publicity manager for the World Film Corporation; Alfred Hamberger, Arthur H. Spiegel, Banquet given World convention delegates and friends by Louis J. Selznick at the Hotel LaSalle, Chicago, the evening of November 2nd. 1—L. J. Selznick, New York; 2—A. H. Spiegel, Chicago; 3—M. J. Spiegel, Chicago; 4—E. L. Swikard, Chicago; 5—Sydney M. Spiegel, Chicago; 6—H. E. Landis, Chicago; 7—President of the Crystal Film Co., New York; 8—Arthur Jacobs, New York; 9—Joseph Rabinean, Chicago; 10—Alfred Hamberger, Chicago; 11—William Hollender, Chicago; 12—J. L. Friedman, Chicago; 13—A. H. Sawyer, Chicago; 14—Mr. Reynolds, Chicago; 15—William A. Ruiz, Indianapolis; 16—Sam. E. Morris, Cleveland; 17—Harry C. Drum, Chicago; 18—Theodore Mead, Chicago; 19—Rapley Holmes, Chicago; 20—Harry Warner, New York; 21—Myron Selznick, New York; 22—A. M. Landau, New York; 23—A. L. Haase, Chicago; 24—Billy Arenson, Chicago; 25—Ed. Mock, Chicago; 26—H. L. Reichenbach, New York; 27—Leander Richardson, New York; 28—Geo. P. Endert, Seattle; 29—Hugh Rennie, Salt Lake; 30—W. E. Knotts, San Francisco; 31—Charles Gilmour, Denver; 32—Ralph H. Clark, San Francisco; 33—Fred. Radevigne, Los Angeles; 34—Clay Brehm, Cincinnati; 35—J. O. Kent, Detroit; 36—Denham Palmer, Cleveland; 37—I. H. Hirsch, Pittsburg; 38—H. Goldberg, Atlanta; 39—Jos. Klein, New Orleans; 40—L. C. McHenry, Dallas; 41—M. F. Barr, New Orleans; 42—Phil Goldstone, Omaha; 43—T. Y. Henry, Kansas City; 44—W. W. Drum, Chicago; 45—I. A. Salter, Minneapolis; 46—E. W. Dustin, St. Louis; 47—I. Leon Klasky, Chicago; 48—Sam. Slawitsky, Chicago; 49—F. H. Vine, Boston; 50—G. J. Schaefer, New York; 51—C. W. Bunn, Washington; 52—S. J. Schaefer, Chicago; 53—Capt. H. T. Lambert, Chicago; 54—Chas. Essen, New York; 55—Jas. Metzenbaum, Cleveland.

Mr. Landis, Sidney Spiegel and H. M. Spiegel, all executives of the Equitable Film Corporation; Ed J. Mock, publisher of MOTOGRAPHY; Rapley Holmes, Captain H. T. Lambert of the Mirror Film Corporation; Lewis J. Selznick, William Hollander, Chicago Daily News; Harry L. Reichenbach, publicity manager for the Equitable Film Corporation; Art Jacobs, one of the Equitable producers, and the toastmaster.

Mr. Selznick, in his speech, told some inside facts about the film business, quoting prices freely and telling the way in which he acquired the World Film Corporation from the men who had founded the World Special Film Company, relating some of his early experiences with the Universal and later with the Warner Film Company. Mr. Selznick thanked the road men for their splendid assistance in the field and also offered them the opportunity to work their way to his own position, adding that he did not care how soon they got his job, although it was a job that paid very good money.

The boys present will probably never forget Harry Reichenbach's humorous story regarding his advent in the film business with the Cameraphone Company about eleven and a half years ago.

The toastmaster, Mr. Metzenbaum, who, since he was seven years old, has known Mr. Selznick, made a stirring address, eulogizing the latter. The expression of his heartfelt admiration for the man who is now his employer was a sincere gift, more valuable than any number of silver cups could ever be.

The menu follows:

Blue Points a la Essen — Pot-au-Feu a la Spiegel
Filet of Bass a la Feist — Potatoes Hollandaise a la Drum
Supreme of Spring Chicken a la Selznick
Virginia Ham a la Reichenbach
Grilled Irish Potatoes a la Richardson
Cauliflower au Gratin a la Schaefer
Salad a la Palmer
Frozen Nesselrode a la Klein — Assorted Cakes a la Knotts
Camembert Cheese — Toasted Crackers
Bronz Cocktail — Cigars
Coffee

STRAND COMPANY'S BIG PLANS

Organization Which Gave Chicago Its First Taste of De Luxe Motion Pictures to Build Many Theaters

An important announcement is made this week by the Strand Theater Company of Chicago. The firm has been organized and capitalized for $1,000,000. This is the first step in the development of the world's largest film exhibiting organization. Announcement of the capitalization, as well as of plans for five more Strand playhouses, was made by President E. C. Divine.

Chicago will have the finest modern playhouse in the United States when the Strand Theater Company's central amusement palace is erected in the loop district. It will be the structural heart of the great new photoplay exhibiting system, and initial work will be started without delay. In addition to the downtown palace, four other theaters of beauty and magnitude will be opened in central locations in each of the four residential divisions of Chicago.

There will be one Strand theater for the north side, one for the south, one for the west and one for the northwest side. The present New Strand theater, Wabash and Seventh streets, opposite the Blackstone, will be retained as a link in the Strand chain.

A satisfactory summer season at Orchestra Hall, followed by success beyond all dreams or expectations at the New Strand since the opening night, was the basis of the decision to expand the Strand organization to million dollar proportions—with even greater things in view.

In discussing the phenomenal success of the "Strand Idea" and resultant growth of the organization of Chicago business men of prominence who are behind it, President Divine said:

"Stock of the Strand Theater Company on its new million dollar basis was very readily subscribed and is closely held, owing to the consistently growing success of the company. An indication of the progress of Strand principles in exhibiting photoplays is contained in the first week's receipts at the New Strand. In seven days there were 33,000 paid admissions. Geraldine Farrar in the Lasky-Paramount production of 'Carmen' is a great drawing card, of course, but the vast Strand clientele of discriminating playgoers, built up at Orchestra Hall, has been literally carried to our new location. This record of paid admissions is without precedent in Chicago's theatrical history."

In addition to President Divine, the officers of the million-dollar Strand company are J. S. Inderrieden, vice president; A. J. Pardridge, treasurer, and F. M. Tracy, secretary. There is a directorate of thirteen, all well known Chicago business men.

"The Strand Theater Company now leads the leaders in recognizing and acting upon the vast possibilities of motion pictures," continued the president. "The directorate consists of conservative business men who possess sound vision. They perceive the urgent need of an exhibiting organization greater than anything heretofore dreamed of in the motion picture industry. From an artistic experiment last spring, the 'Strand Idea' has grown to a million dollar idea within a few months.

"We adopted as our slogan, 'Built up to a standard, not down to a price,' and faithful adherence to this maxim has brought success beyond anticipation. The gigantic crowds at the New Strand every afternoon and evening form a sufficient answer to the skeptical ones who doubted our wisdom in every move we made, from giving the public so much for its money to selecting our present location."

The Strand's new loop theater will have a capacity of at least 3,500, it is announced. Besides being an artistic revelation, it is claimed it will be the most scientifically constructed picture playhouse in the world.

Herrington Explains

President Fred J. Herrington of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, whose authority for calling the recent Ohio state convention was questioned by a few scattered exhibitors, explains in an open letter, addressed to exhibitors everywhere and issued this week, his reasons for believing that he acted within his rights.

Mr. Herrington points out, first, that National Secretary Wilson, who was elected to his present post at the Dayton convention in July, 1914, is also state secretary of the Ohio branch, and consequently in a position to know that his state branch had not paid its per capita tax to the national organization during his term of office. Next, Mr. Herrington declares he was assured by the executive board of the national body that he was perfectly within his rights in calling the Ohio meeting, and lastly, he himself felt that the only way to secure a united organization was to call a convention and, after assembling the Ohio exhibitors, explain to them the need of harmony all over the country and the duty they owed themselves as progressive business men to join in all loyalty with the national aggregation.

The national president thinks that the large attendance at the Ohio convention and the enthusiasm there developed is fitting proof that the exhibitors of Ohio, themselves, approved his call by responding to it.

Percy Winter, Raver Director

The Raver Film Corporation which will inaugurate its advent in the feature manufacturing field with Augusta Thomas' dramatic success, "The Other Girl," has engaged Percy Winter as director of the production. Mr. Winter is well known and thoroughly experienced as a motion picture director. He has been prominent in the film game for a little over two and one-half years and before that time he was a director of both legitimate Broadway productions and a great number of stock companies. Mr. Winter is the son of William Winter, who recently retired from the position of dramatic editor of the New York Tribune. He held this position with the New York Tribune for a great number of years, entering upon his duties in 1865 and retiring in 1909, a term of forty-four years. He is rapidly closing up the last few selections of the huge cast of five hundred necessary to portray "The Other Girl." In addition to James J. Corbett, Paul Gilmore and Becky Bruce, President Harry R. Raver announces the engagement of Frances Thompson, Mona Ryan, Horace Vinton, Mortimer Martini, Louis Thiel, Rawland Ratcliffe, Harry Redding, Ten Eyck Clay, Zola Telmzart and Lizzie McCall.

Percy Winter.

Bullock Jury Disagrees

After four hours of deliberation, the jury which heard the case of Samuel Bullock, owner of the Boulevard theater of Cleveland, Ohio, charged with violating the Ohio censor law, returned to the court room to announce that it had been unable to reach a decision, and it was dismissed. It is rumored the jury stood seven to five for conviction.

The case was brought to test the state censorship law. It is charged that Bullock displayed a sub-title which recited that the board of censors was "conceived in iniquity, born in sin and dying in disgrace," with moving pictures of the West End Business Men's Association picnic last summer. The sub-title had been ordered stricken out by the censors.

The claims upon which Bullock is making his fight are that ordering expressions of opinion from films abridges the constitutional right of free speech and that censors are not allowed to bar sub-titles or parts of films, but must accept or reject a film in its entirety.

The censors insist that the law gives them the right to cut any part of a film. Miss Fern Rayburn, of Columbus, who viewed the film for Charles G. Williams, chairman of the censor board, and Williams himself, were the principal witnesses.

Attorneys George B. Harris and C. R. Bell, who prosecuted the case, said they would seek to have a retrial next week. Bullock declared he would welcome it.

Equitable Wants Scripts

Russell E. Smith of the scenario department of the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation is out with an announcement that the Equitable is in the market for the highest class stories suitable for production as five reel features, either in synopsis form or completed scripts. It wants only stories that are big, really big in theme and purpose, in drama and situation, rather than big in masses of men and exploding steamships and such melodramatic plots, which usually pass for big stories; the bigness of the price it will pay will be commensurate with the bigness of the story, and the lowest price will be $100 per reel, but stories are wanted that are worth a great deal more than that. Equitable wants them from authors of great reputation, from novelists and playwrights, as well as from strictly photoplaywrights. It is frank in saying that it believes playwrights and novelists who write stories especially adapted for the screen will give more of the material it wants than the strictly photoplaywright. This is in no way derogatory to the photoplaywright in particular, but it is obvious that the trained writer of books, plays and stories, as a plot builder, is bound to have something worth doing in more cases than the photoplaywright.

America's telephone magnates photographed while visiting Inceville. They are, from left to right, B. E. Sunny, president Chicago Telephone Co.; U. N. Bethel, president N. Y. Telephone Co. and senior vice-president American Tel. & Tel. Co.; George E. McFarland, president Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co.; C. E. Yost, president northwestern group of the Bell System, and Charles F. Mason, division commercial superintendent Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co.

It has long been said that the photoplaywright has never had a chance to do really big work, that the manufacturers did not want the big themes, etc., but Mr. Smith asserts Equitable does, and if the photoplaywright of today is as good as it is hoped he or she is, it would like to see them send something that they think is too good for the average film company to produce.

Edison's New Director General

In the nature of a triumph for the Edison organization is the winning over to motion pictures of Frank Smithson, the noted Broadway theatrical producer, to become its director general under Leonard W. McChesney, studio and motion picture division manager. For a bright galaxy indeed it would make were the players' names to be mentioned who owe to Mr. Smithson's acumen their present eminent position on the stage and screen, and, in the majority of these cases, owe their very theatrical or screen existence to his judgment and advancing of them. It may safely be said without danger of being gainsaid that there is probably no other one man who has such a string of theatrical successes and money-makers to his credit. A few of these, within easy memory, are "The Girl from Paris," said to be "a world beater" among productions for the money it made; "Monte Carlo"; "Hotel Topsy Turvy"; "The Defender," in Boston, when Blanche Ring first came into prominence; "The Chaperones," "The Orchid," "The Blue Moon," "The Top of the World," "The Motor Girl," "The Beauty Spot," "The Giddy Throng," "King's Carnival," "Nancy Brown," "Queen of the Moulin Rouge," "Louisiana Lou," and "High Jinks." Mr. Smithson had but just returned from Chicago, where he staged a big success, when he jumped into the rehearsing of another in New York. When this task is finished, he will take up his new duties, about November 22, at the Edison studio. Twenty years of a most active life have been spent in America by Mr. Smithson, who, however, was a well known leading comedian in England before he came here. There he was associated with Sir Augustus Harris, William Greet, and others of prominence.

Frank Smithson.

Mr. Smithson will work hand in hand with Studio Manager McChesney, but the former will enjoy more latitude and authority than has heretofore been allotted one in a similar position, in recognition of Mr. Smithson's uncommon and successful experience and ability. The Edison organization long negotiated with Mr. Smithson before he could hear the call of motion pictures, but now that they have been successful, there is a feeling that he will be a motive and energetic factor in placing Edison releases in an enviable position and that he will be no small force in the constant betterment of screen artistic and dramatic standards.

FAMOUS STARS ARE ENGAGED

Triangle Film Corporation Secures Two Wonderful Additions to Its List of Stars in Anderson and Tree

Filmdom gained new laurels for itself when negotiations were completed last week by the Triangle Film Corporation whereby the internationally famous Mary Anderson de Navarro—the famous Mary Anderson of days gone by—and Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree signed contracts binding themselves to appear in film productions in the near future.

Mme. de Navarro, after consistently declining managerial offers to return to the stage, has consented to perpetuate her art under the direction of Thomas H. Ince. Sir Herbert Tree is to be seen in plays directed by D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation." The date of Mme. de Navarro's return has not been announced, but Sir Herbert is expected to arrive in New York November 15. He will go direct to California for the Triangle Film Company, to appear in versions of "The Tempest" and probably "Henry VIII." After three months he will return to New York for a season of repertoire.

As Mme. de Navarro collaborated with Robert Hichens in "The Garden of Allah," it is expected she will write her own scenarios. Mr. Ince believes she is actuated to appear in films in order to contribute the greater share of her earnings toward ameliorating the suffering of the war's wounded in Europe.

Bell's "Big Bear" Bill

The W. H. Bell Feature Film Corporation, which has secured the Chicago agency for the Great Northern feature films, staged a private showing of the November offerings of the "Big Bear" brand, at the Studebaker theater in Chicago on Wednesday morning, November 3. The house was well filled with exhibitors, who seemed to thoroughly appreciate the wonderful photography and stirring action of the subjects screened. Not a little of the success of the exhibition is due to the splendid musical accompaniment and the handling of the sound effects that were used. Four productions were screened, and all of them were four reels in length. Betty Nansen, the celebrated continental star, was featured in "The Heart of Lady Alaine," while Rita Sacchetto was starred in "A Woman's Honor" and "Without a Country," and Ebba Thomsen and A. Blutecher were the principals in "Through the Enemy's Lines."

The Feature Film Corporation, releasing through the Pathe Exchange, will in the near future start work upon a series to be written by one of the best writers of the day. The series will be produced by Managing Director Edward Jose, whose various Gold Rooster Plays are winning for him a fine reputation. George A. Smith, serial manager of the Feature Film Corporation, has left upon an extended trip which will cover all the big cities west of New York to arrange for the newspaper syndicating of the stories.

Big List of Theaters for Triangle Service

RELEASES START NEXT WEEK

THE Triangle Film Corporation announces that up to the end of October, 1915, contracts have been made with more than 200 theaters for the Triangle service, the first week of which is released November 7 and 8. It is considered probable that the service will start with at least two hundred and fifty houses. Judged by the eagerness of exhibitors to enlist under the Triangle banner, the opening of the New Year should witness double that number of theaters giving the Triangle plays.

One reason for this is a considerable number of the contracts signed thus far are with so-called "service" theaters. Leading exhibitors like W. H. Kemble of Brooklyn, Jake Wells of Norfolk and Richmond, Hulsey of Dallas and Houston, expect to widen out the service from their own immediate houses to allied neighboring houses that appreciate the enormous prestige and great drawing powers of film attractions supervised by Griffith, Ince and Sennett.

Looking over the list of more than two hundred Triangle exhibitors, one notes the unusual number of "big city" legitimate playhouses included therein. Thus the Kernan Estate interests in Baltimore, represented by Messrs. Renton and Schanberger, are remodeling the Auditorium theater there for the Triangle plays, and will keep the house up to the same high standard as their Maryland theater, the home of "big time" vaudeville. It is rumored that one of the most important downtown playhouses in Pittsburgh will have the service as soon as a great attraction, now playing there, completes its run. Poli's will have it in New Haven, the Mishler & Scherer houses in Johnstown and Altoona, the Liberty in Cleveland, the Gaiety in Springfield, Ill., the New Isis in Denver, the Minneapolis in Minneapolis, the Liberty theaters in Seattle and Spokane, the Majestic at Des Moines, the Proctor houses suburban to New York, the Trent in Trenton, the Jake Wells theaters in the Eastern South, the Crescent (now the Triangle) in Brooklyn, the Powers in Grand Rapids, the Southern in Columbus, and many others.

Among the picture magnates who have taken the Triangle for their distinctively picture-exhibition theaters may be named B. S. Moss, A. L. Shakmann, Picker & Bennett in Manhattan and the Bronx; Nathan Ascher, A. M. Andrews and A. Bartelson in Chicago; Simpson & Gordon in Rochester; W. A. True in Hartford; C. J. Gross in Dayton; S. M. Baxter in Denver; J. G. Evins for Atlanta; T. S. Abernathy for Birmingham; Wassman for Nashville; E. H. Hulsey for Dallas, Houston, Galveston and Waco; Jensen for Seattle, and Clune for Southern California theaters. These are names of exhibitors picked almost at random from the list.

Small towns as well as medium-sized ones, and all the large cities are in the list. The exhibitor at Plainfield or Watertown or Moline or Massillon or Gadsden will of course give only a sixty or ninety-minute entertainment and the musical features will necessarily be less pretentious than (say) the Auditorium, Baltimore, can afford; but the films will be identical. The small-town patron will get "The Lamb," "The Iron Strain," "My Valet" and "A Game Old Knight," with Fairbanks, Farnum, Hitchcock and Murray, probably in split programs.

Publicity aids to the exhibitor include The Triangle, a weekly illustrated magazine packed with news; weekly illustrated press sheets, containing notices of all the plays; electros showing the stars and stills of each picture; program copy, including the model theater programs furnished at cost if the exhibitors wish them; poster and lobby display drawn and executed by Flagg, Sarg, Covey, Falls, Townsend and other poster artists of international note.

No such line of publicity, it is believed, has ever been issued by a film corporation. Another excellent feature is the furnishing to exhibitors, when desired, of the complete music scores of the plays as prepared by William Furst and published by the corporation. Whether an orchestra or a mechanical organ or just piano and drums be used for the music, this service will be found invaluable.

As Arnold Daly looked at the finished print of "The Menace of the Mute," his second Gold Rooster play, he remarked that the picture made him think of the advertising slogan used in connection with a certain product, "more than a little better."

COMING ESSANAY FEATURES

President Spoor Announces Big Walthall Picture for January Release and Detective Drama for December

George K. Spoor, president of Essanay, announces for the Essanay January release on the V. L. S. E. program, one of the most successful plays of the speaking stage in recent years, "The Misleading Lady," by Charles Goddard. Henry B. Walthall will take the leading role which was portrayed on the stage by Lewis Stone. Miss Edna Mayo will take the leading feminine role, playing opposite Mr. Walthall.

This play lends itself peculiarly to photoplay art, being filled with action and dramatic climaxes. It is replete with thrilling incidents, such as the kidnaping of a society girl by the wealthy western mine owner after she had led him to propose as a bet at a house party, making him the butt of the joke. Their experiences in the rough north country where he has abducted her, and where she finally learns to love him are intense in interest.

Essanay also will release a special five-act feature in December, "A Daughter of the City," taken from the play by H. S. Sheldon. This is a thrilling story of mystery, and romance with John Junior, the well known stage star and Marguerite Clayton in the leading roles. The play is directed by E. H. Calvert, who also plays a prominent part.

The regular December release is "The Alster Case," written by Rufus Gillmore, author of "The Opal Pin," and numerous other detective novels. J. Charles Haydon, director, has just completed the production and it promises to be one of the greatest of Essanay's multiple reel successes.

Why "Molly" Should be Popular

The initial public performance of "How Molly Made Good," the Kulee feature with twelve illustrious dramatic stars, was given at the Metropolitan Opera House, Philadelphia, on Monday, November 1. The widespread interest already created in Philadelphia on the announcement of this notable engagement augurs well for a phenomenal success of this new idea in motion picture productions. If the multiple reel feature received its greatest impetus from the acquisition of legitimate stars, and moreover, if great names are of value to arouse the interest of the public to the moving picture feature, then it is clear that twelve great names should make "How Molly Made Good" one of the biggest box-office winners the moving picture has ever known. In devising ways and means of utilizing twelve big stars and giving each star an equal opportunity to score, recourse was had to a subject which has always interested the public, namely, the private life of the great actors, and by utilizing this phase of the stars' lives, a most interesting vehicle was created.

Marguerite Gale as Molly in "How Molly Made Good."

To begin with, the story has a charm of sustained interest. The girl is to be put upon her mettle to complete a task within a certain limited time. This gives an element of speculation to her work, which is beset with handicaps, and there is always the chance of her failing, and it is this uncertainty that keeps the audience on edge.

We are first introduced to Madame Fjorde, the celebrated singer of the Royal Opera, Berlin, on board ship, and on her arrival in this country. Here begins the chain which binds the twelve stars together. We have Lulu Glaser, the celebrated singing comedienne, whose success in "Dolly Varden" made her name a household word. At her home, we are introduced to her mother and are given a view of her domestic circle. We are then transported in rapid succession to the homes of Cyril Scott, Robert Edeson, Julian Eltinge, May Robson, Henrietta Crosman, Julia Dean, Leo Ditrichstein, Henry Kolker, Charles J. Ross, Mabel Fenton, and are shown just how the great stars live when they are away from the theater, and in the charmed circle of their families and their pets. There are thrills aplenty, but all of a plausible character, enough to hold the audience on edge.

It is unlike any other feature picture ever made and it is quite unlikely that ever again twelve stars of equal importance will be seen in one feature.

It was devised for the purpose of attracting the crowds, and that it will fulfill the purpose of its creation can scarcely be doubted. The technical part was made by the Photo-Drama Company.

Travers Badly Injured

Richard C. Travers, an Essanay leading man, was seriously injured in taking a scene in the three-act Essanay photoplay, "The Undertow." Mr. Travers plays the part of a hobo. The company went to Niles Center, Ill., a small town, to get the rural atmosphere required by the play. In one of the scenes Mr. Travers had to "flip" a freight train. The train had gathered considerable speed when Dick attempted to leap on the first car back of the engine. The engineer was interested and was looking out of the window. His cap blew off and struck Travers in the face, momentarily blinding him. The result was that he missed the handle of the car and was struck and hurled on the track. He made a lightning turn and escaped being run over, although the wheel tore an eight-inch gash in his left arm. He also suffered a severe injury to the knee cap and broke several bones of his left hand. His physicians state that it will be some weeks before he is able to be around again.

Pearl White Signs New Contract

Pearl White, world famous as the heroine of the Pathe serials, "The Perils of Pauline," and the "Elaine" trio, has just signed a contract for another year with Pathe. She will first star in the famous theatrical success, "Hazel Kirke," which will be put into pictures by the Whartons, and then will probably be featured in a new serial. Miss White will be under the personal management of M. Ramirez-Torres, assistant managing director of Pathe. Miss White has for several years been one of the three or four of the best known stars in the business, practically all of which time she has been identified with Pathe pictures. In fact, "The Perils of Pauline" may be said to have been her first great chance and the starting point of her fame.

Miss White possesses a marked individuality upon the screen—she resembles no other player before the public. Her popularity is tremendous as is amply evidenced by the bewildering amount of her daily correspondence which comes from all parts of the civilized world. For nerve and willingness to take chances while working before the camera she easily stands first among all the leading women in pictures. It will be good news to the fans when they learn that she is to continue her work with the company with whom they have learned to identify her.

Business Good in Canada

D. Cooper, of Toronto, manager of George Kleine's Canadian interests, was a visitor in New York last week.

In response to an inquiry Mr. Cooper said: "Canada is neither bankrupt or going to be. Business in Toronto is 'fair-to-middlin,' in the parlance of Missouri, and the picture business is exceptionally good. If you could see the number of big, new houses going up in my territory you would not think the War God such a demon commerce destroyer as he's generally supposed to be. Now and then a one-legged soldier, fresh from the battlfield, stumps down King street and promptly becomes the cynosure of curious eyes; and every little while a Highlander fife and drum corps goes gaily by in search of recruits. But these are the only external evidences of the war, unless you count a few theaters in the poorer section of the city which have reduced admission prices from ten to five cents.

"Intelligent exhibitors are making money just as usual. Take the beautiful Strand theater for example. Mr. Marvin, whom I regard as one of the shrewdest exhibitors in America, is getting more money out of his house than ever before. He had a ten-cent gallery that wasn't doing much business. You know how difficult it is to induce good patrons to go upstairs for pictures even when the gallery is on a dead level with the curtain and better for viewing purposes than the main floor. Well, Mr. Marvin pulled out two rows of these ten-cent seats and put in some very pretty loges. These he offered at a quarter and fills them very night.

"The new Kleine-Edison program is pleasing exhibitors mightily and, I think, is better represented among the Dominion playhouses than any other. We are going to open more offices in Canada very shortly, which is the best proof of the increasing popularity of the Kleine-Edison product. 'The Woman Next Door,' 'The Money Master,' and 'Vanity Fair' are booking solid and seem to be giving the utmost satisfaction to theater-goers. I am looking for a sane and normal increase in all lines of business. The Canadian giant was a bit dazed by the first blow of the war, but he's on his feet now and coming back with all his native strength and youth."

Next California Offering

Elaborateness of sets and costumes will be an outstanding feature of the early scenes of Edwin Milton Royle's "Unwritten Law" as it is now being produced in motion pictures by the California Motion Picture Corporation at its San Rafael studio. It is reported that for this production the gowns of Beatriz Michelena alone will run far up into the thousands of dollars.

Beatriz Michelena in "The Unwritten Law."

This announcement is particularly interesting to Miss Michelena's large following of admirers, since it will be hér first opportunity to appear on the screen as a daughter of wealth and it will consequently stand out in sharp contrast to the great majority of her previous roles. Heretofore she has won her way to the hearts of the motion picture public in such impersonations as "Salomy Jane," "Mignon," "Lovey Mary" of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," "Lily" of "The Lily of Poverty Flat," and "Nell Sanders" in "Salvation Nell." In each of these characterizations the predominating environment was one of poverty. In the present picture, however, Miss Michelena is to be introduced as the bride of a millionaire attorney with aspirations for the governorship, and the wealth of her sursoundings is to be emphasized for purpose of contrast with later scenes. An elaborate ball, a fashionable cabaret, and a boudoir, nursery and drawing room of unusually rich appointments are among the big early scenes of the production.

Will Soon Have Club Room

At the October meeting of the Reel Fellows Club of Chicago at the Movie Inn, final arrangements were completed whereby the club will, at its next meeting, be able to assemble in new quarters on the second floor of the building occupied by the Movie Inn. In helping to bring about this long awaited result Don Bell, of Bell & Howell, donated the sum of $50 and a plan was discussed whereby members of the organization can render financial support to the organization at this time with little expense to themselves. E. A. Hamburg, of Hamburg-Engstrom & Co., made an offer to donate a number of handsome pictures of prominent players as a decoration for the new club rooms. His offer was accepted and both he and Mr. Bell were given a vote of thanks.

W. D. Hildreth, on account of other duties, was forced to resign as secretary of the club and M. G. Watkins was unanimously elected to fill the vacancy. Several new applications for membership were read and referred to the membership committee for action. With plans completed for a permanent clubroom and a bigger membership than at any previous time in its career, the Reel Fellows Club seems to have a rosy future before it and during the next few months it is likely the membership will be still further increased.

Raver Leases Studio

Harry R. Raver, president of the Raver Film Corporation has secured a studio for the forthcoming Augustus Thomas productions to be presented by the Raver Film Corporation commencing with "The Other Girl." The studio is located in Staten Island and is the property of W. Lindsay Gordon and his associates. According to the terms of the agreement existing between the producing company and the studio builders, Mr. Raver assists in the installation of lights, selection of scenery and the complete equipment of the enclosure. It is ideally located in a most picturesque section of Staten Island, widely reputed for the abundance of its scenic splendor and suits the needs and purposes of the company in every way.

Kleine Moves Offices

George Kleine's executive headquarters removed to the big uptown studio at 805 to 813 East One Hundred and Seventy-fifth street, New York City, November 1. The office at 11 East Fourteenth street will be closed, all departments, including the auditing, advertising and scenario, removing to the new address.

Signal Film Corporation's Plans

WILL PRODUCE RAILROAD SERIAL

HELEN HOLMES is to be featured in "The Girl and the Game," a film novel in chapters to be produced by the Signal Film Corporation, the first release of which will be December 13. The story is from the pen of Frank Hamilton Spearman, whose stories have appeared in McClure's, Collier's, and other publications, earning for him a reputation for literary virility that few authors of the day possess. J. P. McGowan will produce this latest screen novel under the general supervision of Samuel S. Hutchinson, the master producer of "The Diamond from the Sky," and President John R. Freuler of Mutual Film Corporation, for which organization "The Girl and the Game" will be a "special feature," will have general direction of the distribution. Helen Holmes, as "the girl," will have abundant opportunities to display the daring for which she is famous, and which has brought more thrills to the motion picture patrons than the work of any other actress on the screen. The "game" is society today, finance and intrigue interwoven with a background ranging from the marble pillared offices in Wall street and the mansions of the elect, to lamp-lighted switch shacks and smoke-filled roundhouses with their coal-eating guests of iron.

Helen Holmes.

Left to right are G. McDaniels, heavy, Helen Holmes, heroine, and Leo Maloney, hero of "The Girl and the Game."

Miss Holmes has long been known as "the railroad girl." Her father was a railroad man of prominence. She was born and reared in Chicago and became famous there as an artist's model. She was the model for "The Santa Fe Girl," who has decorated posters all over the world. She is an exponent of the strenuous life of the open—athletic, five feet five, brown hair and eyes, a master hand at the wheel of an auto or motor boat, and can handle a yacht like a born sailor. She is able to handle the train board, set the semaphores, or go out in the yards and make a flying switch.

A special studio has been built for the Signal Film Corporation for the production of this series. This is the most thoroughly equipped "railway studio" in the world. This studio backs right up to a real railroad. A station, water tank, roundhouse and various other structures necessary have been built with the most faithful attention to realism.

J. P. McGowan.

Further, the Signal Film Corporation has entry to the property of three railroads, and there is nothing necessary to the making of the picture, from a box car to a transcontinental passenger train, that is not at once available to Mr. McGowan and his company.

A depot was built, practicable in every way inside and outside, and a switch tower was erected at a point on the trackage laid on the Signal grounds.

Switches, semaphores, and all the mechanical safeguards and hazards of the rails have been installed. So complete is the equipment at this new studio that in the actual taking of the first chapter of the forthcoming novel, Director McGowan, thirty minutes after the author's script was delivered to him, had a train consisting of Pullmans, day coaches, parlor cars, diner, baggage car and engine, ready for the camera.

One of the first scenes to be taken was a collision, a freight train smashed into a siding, and a thrilling leap by Miss Homes to safety. This is all in the first chapter, making a sensational cascade of tense situations, red-blooded and virile, tinged with a human expectancy all compelling and a femininity pretty and dainty as a debutante's frock.

Mr. Spearman has in his writings all of the romance of railroad making, from the secret intrigue in the private offices of the magnate to the nerve racked but cool-headed men whose skill drives the big iron horses over the great steel rails. There is in his story the spirit of fight, a struggle for a purpose, with all of the ramifications of the human tangle in the present-day battle of man to man.

He is the author of "Whispering Smith," one of the most successful serials ever run in American newspapers. "Held for Orders," one of the most melodramatic contributions to American literature, came from his pen, as did "The Nerve of Foley," "Dr. Bryson," "The Daughter of a Magnate," "Robert Kimberly" and "The Mountain Divide."

Altogether it is predicted by Director McGowan that "The Girl and the Game" will have more actual "thrill punches" than any picturized novel thus far produced. He has set himself to outdo Director Taylor, producer of "The Diamond from the Sky," in the matter of thrill-making.

"We want to emphasize right now that this is a series—not a serial," said President John R. Freuler of the Mutual Film Corporation, in discussing the production. "I have had reports from the installments which have been made and those whose judgment I trust as first-class assure me that they are wonderful pictures."

"The Girl and the Game" will run through fifteen releases of two reels each.

Chaplin in New Role

Charles Chaplin of the worn-out shoes and old clothes, appears in a new role in the latest Essanay-Chaplin comedy, "A Night in the Show," which soon is to be released.

In this play Mr. Chaplin doffs his old costume and appears in dress suit and silk hat. But even in this disguise it is impossible not to recognize the Chaplin walk, the Chaplin capers and the inimitable Chaplin mannerisms. He is Charles Chaplin, whether in the garb of a hobo or a man of society.

This comedy proves conclusively that it is not Charles Chaplin's make-up, funny as that has been considered, that endears Chaplin to the photoplay public. His success lies deeper than that; it is personality, and individuality that always is found no matter in what garb he appears.

And Chaplin loses none of his funniness; in fact, critics who have watched him at work on his newest piece declare that he is funnier than ever, although a new Chaplin in a new role. His versatility is surprising and leads one to wonder what will be next in his line of antics.

Bryson Heads New Company

James V. Bryson, manager of the Universal's Minneapolis branch, announces that he has made arrangements with President Laemmle for a leave of absence from the office, the same to take effect Monday, November 1. This is voluntary on his part, as he needs a rest of both mind and body after nine years of a hard grind.

Dan B. Ledermann, formerly manager of the Laemmle Film Service, Des Moines office, will succeed Mr. Bryson. To him will fall all the active and executive duties of conducting the business.

Mr. Ledermann is said to be a broad man, willing at all times to co-operate with his customers and to give them the best that is in him for the mutual and financial interest of both.

In discussing the change Mr. Bryson says:

"As to my future plans, I have not yet made permanent arrangements, but I wish to advise you that I have incorporated a company which will be known as the Northwestern Motion Picture Equipment Company, which will be the distributing agent of Power and Simplex machines for the entire northwest, and will endeavor at all times to carry such a line of supplies and accessories that when you visit our office located at 622 Hennepin avenue, in the New Garden theater building, you will find everything necessary to equip your house. Associated with me will be David G. Rodgers, a man known to almost every exhibitor in the northwest, and we will work at all times for the interest of the exhibitors in endeavoring to take care of your wants."

Why Board of Trade Opposes Constitution

"I think it would be a good thing if the press could be censored," declared Chairman Louis Marshall of the Bill of Rights Committee of the New York legislature, to the representatives of the motion picture industry who attended a hearing before the committee last summer. "I believe, too," he continued, "that the motion picture should be censored."

Those declarations by a man of the prominence, standing and character of Louis Marshall prompted the principal speaker for the motion picture people to say to the noted chairman, that if these were his views, then he doubted whether he or his committee was a proper body to consider the subject fairly. Believing this, the speaker requested the committee to report the amendment under discussion (guaranteeing to the motion picture the same freedom from pro-publicity censorship now enjoyed by the press) to the body of the convention where it might be accorded a fair and fuller hearing.

Because the amendment was not so reported, the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America has declared itself opposed to the adoption of the constitution and began waging a determined campaign again its ratification through the medium of the motion picture theaters of the state.

Assemblyman Mitchell of the Bronx, who introduced a state censor bill at the last session of the legislature, which died in committee, is also being vigorously opposed by the Board of Trade. He is running for re-election on the platform of censorship being necessary and is promising his constituents to introduce at the next session, if elected, an even more drastic measure.

"The motion picture has too long been the football of legislators and would-be reformers," said J. W. Binder, executive secretary of the board. "We are today the fifth industry in the country, and we propose to assert our rights just as the other great industries are doing. Opposing hostile and unjust legislation occupies a prominent place on this program."

What Pallas Pictures Mean

General Manager Charles Eyton waxes scholarly and gives us the official facts concerning the interesting figure in Greek mythology after whom Pallas Pictures, the new Paramount producing company, has been named.

"What Pallas meant to her day and age suggested the appropriateness of associating her name with moving pictures, undoubtedly one of the most significant institutions of today. Pallas Pictures were accordingly so named because it was a big name and because they mean to be big pictures.

"Pallas, or Pallas Athena, or, in the Homeric usage, Athene, came closer to a truly spiritual quality than any diety ever created in the fertile imagination of the ancient Greeks and placed in the Olympian gallery of devotional mythology. The sympathy her unusually human, straightforward traits beget makes Pallas seem today the most modern of all the children of Zeus.

"Pallas had a broad jurisdiction. She was Wisdom. She was Womanhood, and patroness of female arts and industries. She was War, but in the sense that she embodied prudent and intelligent tactics as against brute force and rashness. In this way she was found oftenest on the side of the defender, and the modern word 'palladium' hints of her renown as the protector of cities when not a community in all Attica dared go without a statue of the goddess within its walls.

"Phidias, whose immortal marbles were the first to personify Pallas to the popular satisfaction, caught the true spirit of the great goddess, and his sculptures always represented her as a being of calm earnestness, self-conscious might and clearness of intellect. The eyes were slightly cast down betokening an attitude of thoughtfulness; the forehead was clear and open; the mouth indicated firmness and resolution.

"Of all the Greek deities Pallas seems to have impressed herself the most upon the Latin mythology of the later Romans, and the wisdom of Minerva, the power of Mars and to a degree, the chastity of Diana all reflect the virtues of the Etruscan original."

Pathe's "The Shrine of Happiness"

The first five-reel photoplay ever hand-colored is "The Shrine of Happiness," a forthcoming Balboa release on Pathe's Gold Rooster program. It is a simple heart story featuring Jackie Saunders, supported by William Conklin and Paul Gilmore. D. F. Whitcomb, one of Balboa's staff writers, wrote the scenario.

Bertram Bracken, the dean of Balboa's producers, directed this picture and it is replete with the deft touches for which he is so well known. "The Shrine of Happiness" does not depend on so-called thrills or punches. It is gripping because of the intensely humane thread that runs through the story. Pathe's color treatment of the subject is bound to make it a big feature when released, adding immeasureably to the effectiveness and convincing force of this Horkheimer production.

A scene from Pathe-Balboa's "The Shrine of Happiness."

Julius Steger Joins Metro

Julius Steger, the well known stage star, who recently appeared with tremendous success in the photoplay versions of "The Fifth Commandment" and "The Master of the House," is the latest addition to the long list of stars under the Metro banner, which includes Ethel Barrymore, William Faversham, Emily Stevens, Mme. Petrova and others equally notable. Mr. Steger has signed a contract with the Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc., to appear exclusively on the Metro program. His first appearance will be in the stellar role in "The Blindness of Love," a comedy drama by Ruth Comfort Mitchell. It will be released on the Metro program in December.

Julius Steger.

Mr. Steger has had a varied career on the stage, displaying remarkable versatility. He has appeared in everything from musical comedy to tragedy, but it is in strong dramatic roles that he excels. He was born in Vienna, the home of light opera, and came to New York when a youth. He first attracted attention on the stage as the leading support of Marie Tempest. Since he has created the leading roles in numerous musical productions on Broadway.

Edison to Make "The Destroying Angel"

"The Destroying Angel," Louis Joseph Vance's famous novel, is now being filmed by the Edison Company for release on the Kleine-Edison Feature Service program, December 8. Mabel Trunnelle, Marc McDermott, Walter Craven, George Wright, Fred Jones, John Sturgeon and William West will handle the various leads. "The Destroying Angel" is one of the most popular of Vance's many noted stories.

"Quo Vadis?" Does Wonderful Business

George Kleine's "Quo Vadis?," first of the great film masterpieces and unquestionably the best known picture in the annals of the business, packed the Hamilton, Canada, Grand Opera House for three days last week. "Quo Vadis?" was given a modest billing throughout the city and played October 14, 15 and 16, to almost $1,000 at popular admission prices.

"Quo Vadis?" was released in the spring of 1913 and has played Hamilton return dates, as well as every other city of its size, in both the United States and Canada.

Paramount-Klaw & Erlanger Alliance

$2,000,000 CORPORATION FORMED

CONTRACTS have been signed by the Paramount Pictures Corporation and Klaw & Erlanger, by which a new corporation to be known as the Paramount-Klaw & Erlanger Company has been formed. The new organization will have for its purpose the extending of the Paramount service to cities which it does not now reach and the procuring of suitable theaters in those cities for the showing of Paramount pictures.

The Paramount distributes the pictures made by the Famous Players Film Company, the Lasky Feature Play Company, the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company, and the Pallas Pictures, Inc. Some time ago it adopted the continuous service system of booking used by Klaw & Erlanger in booking theatrical attractions for many years. The new corporation will build up a chain of high class picture theaters throughout the country.

The new company has announced that it has no intention of fighting any other company or usurping the place of any other, and that it has been formed merely to perfect the service of an organization that already exists and to better generally the exhibition service of theaters throughout the country.

The new corporation will be capitalized at $2,000,000. The executive board will consist of Marc Klaw, Abraham Erlanger, Adolph Zukor, Samuel Goldfish, W. W. Hodkinson, and Raymond Pawley. An associate board of directors will be named later. The present interests of the companies included in the new combine will not be disturbed, nor will the status of any theaters having the service of either the picture or the theatrical company.

What the Paramount Pictures Corporation has done to revolutionize the motion picture business since its formation, as the first feature program company, a year and a half ago, and what Klaw & Erlanger have done in the legitimate theater, are well known. What the result of their alliance will be is not hard to imagine.

Launching the first feature program in the face of terrific odds, instituting policies which were unheard of in the motion picture business, Paramount proved that its ideas were correct. Today, bigger and better theaters, such as the Strand in New York, have sprung up throughout the country, and in every instance the backbone of their program is Paramount pictures. Automobiles are now seen at motion picture theaters; people in evening dress attend; it is all a part of the "better pictures for better people" policy of Paramount Pictures Corporation.

Longer runs and rebookings with the added value of national advertising have proved successful, and other companies are fast assimilating the ideas which had their conception and fulfillment in the operations of the Paramount Pictures Corporation.

Thought was evinced in every dealing of the big company; everything was planned ahead. One of the largest advertising campaigns ever launched in the motion picture business was not begun without nearly a year of investigation on the part of Howard E. Spaulding, one of the best known advertising men in the United States.

Step by step Paramount has spread its gospel throughout the country and many exhibitors now swear by the corporation which has brought them the new religion of higher prices, better theaters, better patrons and better music.

As the publicity man says: "The alliance of the largest and most important companies booking motion pictures and plays was bound to come in the natural sequence of events. It marks the signing of the peace pact between the silent and spoken drama."

FIRE SUCCESSFULLY STAGED

Producer Thomas Ince Burns Whole Western Village as Spectacular Climax to William S. Hart Picture

An entire village was destroyed by fire at Inceville, this week, for the closing scenes of the current Ince-Triangle feature in which William S. Hart will be starred. The fire is said to have been the most spectacular event in the history of the big plant. Thirty-three distinct buildings were razed to the ground while nine cameras registered the conflagration.

The western village built at Inceville to be destroyed by fire.

The scenes depicting the fire form the climax to what is declared to be the most powerful story in which Hart ever played. They represent a lawless, western hamlet going to its doom, in punishment for its long existence in crime and vice, and provide the drama with opportunities for spectacle as well as thrills.

The same village one-half hour later.

Ince built the village about six weeks ago atop the extensive plateau within the N. Y. M. P. domain.

He ordered every building erected sturdily, in order that the fire would not burn too rapidly and thus appear "faky." Hence solid lumber was used throughout every structure.

In filming the fire, Ince stationed his camera men at various points of vantage on the adjoining mountains. Then, by the use of white flags, he signaled them to commence turning and the torch was applied, first to a mammoth building representing a dance hall and saloon. Quickly the flames licked the oil-soaked timbers and soon spread to the next building—a hotel. A strong wind fanned the flames into a fury and within twenty minutes the entire village was ablaze.

Great volumes of black smoke arose from the scene and soon the Inceville telephones were ringing furiously, as inquiries concerning the appearance of the smoke poured in from outside sources. The whole beach district with thrown into a pitch of excitement as the report that Inceville was afire gained foundation.

Blanche Sweet to Remain with Lasky

Reports having reached the Lasky Feature Play Company that certain motion picture manufacturers, believing that Miss Blanche Sweet's contract to appear exclusively in Lasky productions on the Paramount Program had expired or was about to expire, had made overtures of employment to her, Messrs. Wise and Lichtenstein, attorneys for the Lasky Company, this week made known generally that Miss Sweet will continue for a considerable period under the Lasky direction.

Blanche Sweet.

The determination to make a public announcement of the contractural relations between the noted producing firm and the star was decided only after a circular letter had been sent to various manufacturers calling their attention to the existing contract between the Lasky Company and Miss Sweet. Many of the companies responded to the letter of warning and expressed pleasure that the Lasky firm had seen fit to stop senseless reports of Miss Sweet's sudden termination of her Lasky contract.

Who Said "Heathen Chinee"?

Milwaukee is the home of one of the most unique experiments in the motion picture world—not, as might be supposed, some new stunt in displaying pictures, but the establishing of what might be called a school for the education of theatrical managers of film playhouses.

But this is not the most unique phase of the experiments, for the school is to teach Chinese young men how to run motion picture theaters, so that they can go back to their native land and open playhouses on American lines, with the most up-to-date methods of America's great film industry at their command.

There are six Chinese young men now studying this problem, and their teacher is himself a Chinaman, who has developed from a chop suey retailer to a theater owner and promoter.

Left to right, Moy Wah, Loo Wah, Moy Hop, Moy Tog, and Lester Lee.

Charlie Toy, who twenty years ago was an upstate laundryman, at Oshkosh, and who later came to Milwaukee and opened the first chop suey restaurant in the city, is the film magnate who is trying this experiment. Toy is now probably one of the wealthiest Chinamen in America. From a restaurant owner he has developed a huge importing business and is today the largest importer of Chinese foodstuffs in America. His consignments of mushrooms alone, for instance, come in two ton lots, and he pays Uncle Sam nearly $100,000 a year in customs duties on these imports.

Not content with this, however, he developed a motion picture theater, with a typical American play on his own name. Three years ago Toy invested $100,000 in a down town six story building, devoted chiefly to his restaurant and wholesale business, but built in the style of old China. The defaulting in rent of one of his tenants gave him a new idea, and he used a portion of his ground floor for the development of what he calls the Toy theater. His theater is Chinese in style, interior and exterior, but plays to an exclusive patronage, the prices being double those of any of the other standard houses in Milwaukee, and the attractions being entirely four to six reel high priced features.

With this as his combination school and theater, Charlie Toy has started out to make film theater experts of Chinese boys with money, who want to learn the business and then go back to China and start in business for themselves. The first of his students will leave in a month, Moy Wah and Moy Hop being the two who will make the first plunge into the Chinese field as American trained managers. Both have studied at the University of Wisconsin, and are thoroughly Americanized. Charlie's two sons, Moy and Charlie, are at present handling the local interests of their father, but are about to contract for a location for a Toy theater in Chicago, where their father is already the real, though not nominal, owner of one of the biggest Chinese restaurants. Lester Lee and Loo Wah are also being trained in the film business.

Skyrocket Financiers a Real Menace

SO DECLARES ROWLAND

PRESIDENT RICHARD A. ROWLAND of the Metro Pictures Corporation is optimistic on the motion picture situation, but in an interview this week he pointed out some of its present difficulties. Mr. Rowland said:

"Motion pictures have grown far enough away from the swaddling clothes period to assure the exhibitor and the public of one big definite fact. There will be no revolution in the making of motion pictures, either long or short, and the nature, character and quality of the business is not scheduled for any overnight changes. There will be a continued growth toward better, finer pictures, but the progress will be evolutionary rather than revolutionary.

"I am moved to call the attention of motion picture men to these facts because there seems to be an impression in some quarters that motion pictures are going to be transformed by the magic wand of printer's ink and great capital so that masterpieces will spring up from the ground or blossom out on trees.

"Speaking for Metro and for Metro only, I may be permitted to say that we are aiming at and striving for and concentrating on a consistent feature service. Our manufacturers are more anxious to make good than to make money, and making good pictures of course means profit to the producer and to the exhibitor.

"With no desire to indulge in personalities or register complaints against any one in the great motion picture industry, I cannot refrain from giving a word of warning against what I believe is the most serious menace to the entire business. I refer to over-capitalization and frenzied finance. Those acquainted with the conditions surrounding the actual manufacture of motion pictures know that a successful business makes a swollen capitalization unnecessary, and they know also that of the huge sums raised only a modest percentage goes into the actual cost of picture making. The big balances go to the promoters or into the enormous wastage that has marked the recent progress of the business.

"As in all businesses somebody has got to pay for all this. The interest on all these great capitalizations must be met, to say nothing of the dividends that have to be provided for if the business is to be continued at a profit. I believe sincerely that the skyrocket financiers constitute the most serious problem the industry has to consider, because as a whole the motion picture business is now on firm ground and proceeding satisfactorily along progressive and substantial lines.

"There is no cause whatever for alarm among exhibitors. The exhibitors generally are wise enough to know that a fairly consistent service is as good as anybody can expect, and that with a fairly consistent service they can successfully continue in business on a good profit basis.

"I am firmly of the opinion that Metro pictures are their own best proof of excellence and I had rather have an exhibitor see the pictures than to tell him about them.

"Reference is being frequently made to the high quality of Metro advertising, but my invariable answer is that our advertising must be of the highest class to live up to the pictures themselves."

Horsley Invents Cameramen's Guide

Though busily engaged in supervising the production of three brands of pictures, the Cub Comedies, the Centaur Features and the Centaur Star Features, David Horsley still finds time to devote to the invention and perfection of contrivances that save time and money and make for better results. The inventor of the Horsley duplex double exposure camera, the Horsley printer, the Horsley polisher and other devices, always interested in photography, has just come forward with another arrangement which is sure to result in even better photography in his pictures than has ever been attained before.

This arrangement is a cameraman's guide. It consists of two pieces of blackened wood hinged together, to close up for convenience in carrying, and is small enough to be carried in the side pocket of a man's coat or can be carried in a magazine case. It is used by the cameraman for the purpose of identifying his scenes after development and is held up in front of the camera before each scene is exposed and after the scene is finished. On it is written the name of the cameraman and the director, also the number of the scene being taken. A watch is inserted in the board to show at what time the negative was exposed. The value of this lies in the fact that in case the negative does not turn out perfectly under the time and conditions then in force, the cameraman can be guided by the result in future operations. The watch also shows at what time the first scene in the morning was taken, and all the scenes for the same day.

Six sets of figures are also marked on the board to indicate the diaphragm openings. Whichever opening is used is chalked off on the board. Here also, if the negative is not properly exposed, the cameraman having a record of the opening used, can use the proper opening in the future.

A letter "S" and a letter "C" appear on the board. The "S" stands for sunshine and the "C" for cloudy. A chalk mark is put through either one according to circumstances. If a scene is taken in the studio a chalk mark is made between the two letters.

A record is also made of the shutter opening used. The board is a complete record of conditions under which all scenes are photographed, and with this information the cameraman can readily gauge all future efforts to the betterment of his work.

Enlarging Morosco Offices

The continuous growth of the business at Oliver Morosco's eastern film offices has for some time demanded larger quarters and in order to facilitate the increased activities, the New York offices will be moved to a more spacious suite in the Candler building.

A floor space of almost twice the size of that now occupied by the offices has been taken over by the company and it is expected that the staff will be comfortably installed in its new home the early part of next week. There will be three private offices occupied by Carl H. Pierce, who is at the head of the eastern headquarters, Julian M. Solomon, Jr., accessory and advertising manager, and Pete J. Schmid, publicity representative. A large space will be allotted to the stenographic and billing departments. The store-room fitted out with steel shelving for the accessories and special advertising boosters, the mimeograph, multigraph and addressograph machines, cut cabinets, etc., will be in charge of Carl Berger.

A little over a year ago Carl H. Pierce, with the assistance of Julian M. Solomon, Jr., represented the company in the east, occupying desk room at 440 Fourth avenue. The rush of business soon compelled them to take an office in the Candler building when Pete Schmid joined them. Stenographers and other assistants were steadily added to the staff and the space in which to work, together with the store room, soon became overcrowded. A new exhibitor's aid department has just been installed under the care of George K. Henken.

Pollock Likes Film Position

H. C. Pollock, sales agent for the Pathe exchange in Mississippi, Alabama, and Florida, finds the sunny south very much to his liking. His bookings of "Neal of the Navy," "J. Rufus Wallingford," and the Pathe masterpieces, the Gold Rooster plays, during the past three months in Dixie have so far weaned him away from his newspaper work, he says he has cut out politics forever and is going to devote the remainder of his days to "radiating life" through his work with the house of Pathe.

Lubin Star Changes Her Name

With the release of the Lubin four-reel drama, "Heartaches," during the week of November 29, there will appear in the character of Kate Merry, the winsome little country miss, a new name in photoplays, and, although photoplay fans will recognize in the features of this dainty and talented little actress Miss Vinnie Burns, they too will be forcefully impressed with the new name which Miss Burns has adopted.

June Dave.

Recently there was released a Lubin picture, "The Desert Honeymoon," in which Miss Burns appeared in the leading role. The excellent performance which she gave in this production earned for her a new host of friends and among the letters she received was one from a young girl admirer of Philadelphia, who, writing on behalf of her many friends, requested that Miss Burns grant her an interview at the studios. Miss Burns agreed and stated the time. Promptly there was the writer of the letter and with her a committee of fifty young Philadelphia girls, and with an apt speech they presented to their idol a magnificent bunch of fifty American Beauty roses, bearing a card which read, "To Our Favorite, June Daye."

Impressed with the symphony of the two names, Miss Burns agreed and now she wants the rest of her friends of the country to know that beginning with her appearance as Kate Merry in "Heartaches," released some time during the week of November 29, she will be known only as June Daye.

Gilmore in "The Other Girl"

Harry R. Raver this week announces the engagement of Paul Gilmore to portray the role of the Reverend Clifton Bradford and co-star with James J. Corbett in the Raver Film Corporation's first Augustus Thomas production, "The Other Girl." Gilmore interprets in the minister a character brim full of personality and delightfully likable. It well befits his dash, vim and comely appearance. Exhibitors and their patrons will recognize Mr. Gilmore from two different angles, the legitimate and motion picture. This matinee idol has appeared in films as a star only in important productions recently, among which was "The Penitentes," a Griffith feature. To be exact, Mr. Gilmore departed from California October 30 and will arrive at the Staten Island studio of the Raver Film Corporation Friday morning, November 5. In the legitimate, Paul Gilmore appeared in such productions as "At Yale," "The Boys of Company B," "Captain Debonnaire," "Mistress Nell," in support of Henrietta Crosman and in an all-star revival of "The Three Musketeers." With the above vehicles he also toured the United States. However, it is the south and southwest that claimed him as their own, because of his long stretch of success in that territory at the head of his own companies, presenting "The Mummy and the Humming Bird," "King Charles," "The Tyranny of Tears," "The Call of the North," "The Havoc," and the aforesaid "At Yale," "Captain Debonnaire," and "The Boys of Company B." Mr. Gilmore is a splendid example of that doubly valuable class of theatrical celebrity popular in both domains of the profession and in all parts of this country.

Police Chief Backs Water

A typical illustration of the arbitrariness of a certain class of public officials toward motion pictures was provided in Newark, N. J., last week, when the chief of police of that city ordered an exhibitor not to show the widely-known V. L. S. E. feature, "The Blindness of Virtue."

The exhibitor immediately got into communication with F. F. Hartich, the manager of the New York office's booking department of the V. L. S. E. An attorney himself, and supported by General Manager Walter W. Irwin, a counsellor of note, Mr. Hartich immediately began to make thing hum.

Among the preliminary steps to legal action, Mr. Hartich submitted the tribute to the great moral lesson "The Blindness of Virtue" teaches, by Rev. Thomas B. Gregory. He also pointed out the inconsistency of the action at this time, in view of the fact that "The Blindness of Virtue" had already been shown in Newark eleven times. Thereupon, the police department apologized to the exhibitor and informed him that he might show this play at any time that he desired.

Infinite Variety of Mutual Offerings

FREULER SELECTS ODDITIES

NOT only is the remarkable variety of the Mutual Film Corporation's new $8,000,000 program but its steadfast purpose to furnish "feature" quality at regular program prices again displayed in the announcement of a number of exceptional motion pictures of recent or immediate release.

President John R. Freuler, in accordance with his well known policy to obtain the widest range of subjects, and to give the Mutual fans picturizations of current events, as well as high class drama and the best the comedy field affords, has just completed negotiations with the World's Series Film Company for the exclusive rights to two reels of pictures taken when the recent world's championship series was played between the Boston Red Sox and the Phillies at Philadelphia, October 8 to October 13.

This remarkable picture, which was taken by the company which had the authentic consent of the National Commission, is the only accurate pictured account of the series. From three to six camera men were stationed all the time at vantage points on the diamond and in front of the grandstand, and as a result the picture which will be released in the Mutual program on November 15 contains the most complete record of any series of sports which has ever been made in film.

Not only are the individual members of the team shown, but their plays, in coherent sequence, as they were made. The enthusiastic fans, the arrival of President Wilson and his fiancee, Mrs. Galt, the throwing of the ball by the former, and all other events of importance and interest are shown. The Mutual's two reeler entitled "The World's Championship Baseball Series" will take the place of the regular Monday and Wednesday "Novelty" comedy releases of that week.

In direct contrast to this picture, and one which will illustrate the variety of Mutual releases, is the two part Thanhouser picture, "The Spirit of Audubon" which gives a glimpse of the life of Audubon, the great lover of birds. Some of the most interesting photography of this picture was taken by Herbert K. Job, expert on applied ornithology for the National Association of Audubon Societies. It is picturization of bird life on the islands off the Louisiana coast, which are reserved by the government as the habitat of birds. Included in the film showing the islands, is a picture of Theodore Roosevelt, who accompanied Mr. Job on his trip.

The picture is receiving the enthusiastic support of Audubon societies all over the United States. It will be used in the propaganda work of the societies.

Another picture of a nature which would qualify it to be used in propaganda work against war, is an allegorical drama written by Crane Wilbur, and starred in by him, entitled "The Blood of Our Brothers." This picture was a three part Centaur release of October 27. The story is universal in its application, although its immediate plot deals with Kindheart, a simple, peace-loving shepherd, who becomes a fiend incarnate when the horrors of war have been forced upon him, and he finds that his wife and babe have been destroyed by other men who did not feel as he did about his fellow men. Mr. Wilbur is supported by Celia Stanton, Carl Von Schiller, Ed. Collins, Harry De Rey and Victor Rottman.

Of still another nature are the humorous series of comedies "Buck Parvin in the Movies," the Mustang release in the Mutual program, in which Arthur Acord is distinguishing himself as an actor of a very unique type.

Then there are "The Devil's Darling" and "The New Adam and Eve," two Rialto Star features, produced by the Gaumont company to be released November 3 and 17. Both pictures are said to be of feature magnitude, with unusual plot, expertly handled, and are headed by stars whose names are known wherever the fame of Broadway penetrates.

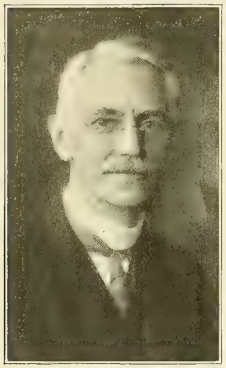
"The Devil's Darling" portrays vividly the struggle for a soul. It is an allegorical picture of one woman's conpact with the devil. The leading role of "Alice Lane" is played by Francine Larrimore, the present star of "Some Baby" at the Fulton theater. She is supported by Flavia Arcaro, John Reinhard, N. W. Pemberton, Sydney Mason and Charles U. Travis. "The New Adam and Eve" gives Grace Valentine, the popular actress who appeared last season in "Yosemite" at Daly's theater and this season in "Brother Masons," unusual opportunity for interesting dramatic interpretations in her role of "Eve."

H. Rider Haggard's great novel, "Mr. Meeson's Will," featuring Florence La Badie, supported by Justus D. Barnes, Bert Delandt, Ethyle Cook, Dorothy Benham and Lawrence Swinburne, is another three-part Than-o-play release of November 6.

The weekly Centaur releases, showing the Bostock animals, the weekly Gaumont scenic split reel, "See America First" and the animated cartoon "Keeping Up With the Joneses," the Mutual News Weekly, the exquisite American and Thanhouser one reel dramas, the numerous comedies, including the "Cob" (featuring George Ovey), Falstaff, Casino, Novelty, Mutual and Thanhouser are all testimonies to the effectiveness of the policy which President Freuler holds as the Mutual's ideal.

Metro Film Christens Wurlitzer Theater

The Wurlitzer theater, 120 West Forty-first street, one of the most novel institutions in New York City, was formally opened on Thursday, October 28, when the big five-part feature, "Pennington's Choice," the Quality-Metro production in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are starred, was shown to the New York critics and a party of guests invited by Metro officials. This screen masterpiece proved a fitting feature for the opening of this scrumptiously appointed little institution. The theater occupies the entire ground floor of the Wurlitzer building which was recently completed. It is conveniently located just a few steps off Broadway in West Forty-first street.



The theater was primarily constructed to demonstrate the Wurlitzer organ and other musical instruments, but it will be rented to film companies who desire to give private presentations of their motion pictures. The interior of the theater is fashioned on an Egyptian scheme of designing and carries out an elaborate plan. There are one hundred and fifty comfortable chairs attractively arranged with ample space on either side of them. The place is carpeted and rich purple velvet hangings give the whole a pleasing effect. The walls and pillars are covered with gold leaf and artistically decorated with a hand painted design. There are two large motion picture theater organs arranged along one wall, and every known modern appliance and equipment is found in the place.

The Efficiency Man

By F. M. Taylor

A man in the employ of one of the big moving picture producing companies has on his card under his name the words Efficiency Department. "Just what does that mean?" is the question often put to him.

F. M. Taylor.

The efficiency expert in a manufacturing establishment is the man expected not only to thoroughly know the administrative part of the business, but he must be familiar with materials which go into the construction of the output, the details of moulding and assembling the parts. He must study to eliminate waste of time and material. The buying, the selling, everything must be systematized, so that the cost of production can be figured down to a penny. To obtain the maximum of results it is essential that the employes be of good character and industrious, and that the skilled workmen should be really skilled. The question of sanitation, light, heat and general comfort of all the workers is an important one. In most industrial plants one day is like any other day. There is a certain routine, and when there is a high standard of efficiency, cost and results can be estimated for weeks, months or perhaps two or three years in advance. A factory puts out a great many articles of standard design and quality, and there is a standardization of parts, or labor also. Not so with the moving picture industry. There is no standardization of parts or material or workmanship. There are no two productions alike. There are no two days alike, and one can never safely predict what tomorrow's results may be. The moving picture even in its early, crude state was an instant success. The films at once appealed to the masses and there was an immediate world wide market to be supplied. Production could not keep pace with the demand, consequently many producing companies early in the game made barrels of money. Capitalists were quick to see this opening for get-rich-quick investment.

How many picture studios, think you, have sprung into existence in the past ten years? Many have gone the pace that kills; their wrecks strew the pathway of filmdom. But there are many still in the field, and new ones being launched every day. The market is already showing its limitations. Trash that heretofore has had such ready sale is beginning to pall. Higher grade productions are demanded. Competition is becoming keen in all classes of films, good and bad. Many companies have been overwhelmed by disaster simply because they could not market their goods.

There has been much reckless waste in the business both in time and material. In the earlier days of the motion picture industry, this was scarcely taken into account because time was the great essential when profits were so large. Producers are beginning to realize the need of greater economy. Some one in Motography once said: "Turn a business systematizer loose in a picture studio. Then you make dynamic the ever latent antipathy and antagonism between art and business." There is no legitimate excuse for the aforesaid antipathy and antagonism. Art for art's sake is all very well as a rich man's fad, but if a man must make his living by his art he must combine business with art, and there must be full co-operation. In earlier days there was a scarcity of available talent. Now, the woods are full of artists of both sexes. Just see how competition is affecting the photographic end of the business. The other day a cameraman was heard to say, "five years ago I was getting $125 a week. I am doing twice as good work today, but am glad to hold my job at $55 per."

The artist must lay aside his prejudices and forget there ever was any antagonism between art and business or prepare very soon to enter some other line of endeavor, as there is some one at the door waiting to take his place (yes, five or six of them). None can deny that there is great waste of high salaried time in the delays incident to unpreparedness and lack of co-operation. This can and should be remedied to a large degree. Film artists are keen to display their talents and are the happiest when at work. Long delays tend to ennui and discontent. Idleness breeds petty feuds which go far to impair artistic production. We would not propose iron bound rules as the solution of these problems. Diplomacy of a high order is what is required in the film studio. The efficiency man in the studio must first be gentlemanly in his deportment toward all, and be respected by all. He must be quick in judgment and uniformly consistent in his rulings. The least suspicion of favoritism begets jealousy, dissatisfaction and poor work.

A thoroughly competent managing director is the ideal efficiency man. His should be the duty of getting the best there is in them from his sub-directors, the actors and the cameramen. Another there should be equally entitled to respect who should look after the other branches of the industry, the office, developing department, scenic and prop departments, carpenter shop, garage and the numerous other branches which must be so systematized as to give the most effective support, with least loss of time, to the stage work.

The producing companies which neglect to train and install high grade efficiency experts simply invite financial disaster.

Story Is Based on Fact

It is little known that the strange and terrible religious order of the Flagellantes, which flourished in many parts of Europe during the twelfth century, once caught a foothold in America. This was about 1600, in the old Spanish days of New Mexico.

The "Penitentes" sought purity of spirit by cruel scourgings of the body, and some branches of the order held an annual ceremonial crucifixion in which the chosen penitent was bound or even nailed to the cross for hours and later died from the ordeal.

It is this fact that forms the theme of a story by R. Ellis Wales which has just been made into a Triangle play by D. W. Griffith's Fine Art's studio and will shortly be released.

The story centers in the love of two young Penitentes, played by Orrin Johnson and Seena Owen. The element of conflict is provided by the opposition of the Catholic church, in the person of the mission fathers, to the fanatical religious sect and is aided by the revengeful fury of a band of Indians.

Following an Indian massacre the hero, Manuel, still a child and heir to a great estate, is found and raised by the Penitentes and the estate converted to their use. Fifteen years later, fearing discovery of the trick, they plan to be rid of Manuel by choosing him for the crucifixion. In a religious ecstasy he dedicates himself to the sacrifice and it requires all the forces of love, the church and the military to save him at the last moment.

Apart from its powerful emotional appeal and a breathless suspense that never lags, the play has distinction for the wild beauty of its desert scenes and the tender charm of those laid among the sheep herds on the hills and at the old Spanish mission. A scene from this play forms the frontispiece of this issue.

Edison Players Spend Wild Night

Edison players, including Viola Dana, engaged in the filming of "Children of Eve," the Edison release through the Kleine-Edison Feature Service November 10, passed three of the wildest hours of their respective careers one night last week.

In "Children of Eve" there is a scene portraying a typical gangsters' dance such as New York police are frequently called upon to "squelch" to prevent possible murder. Director John H. Collins experienced considerable difficulty in finding suitable types despite several visits to the usual supply sources. Finally, however, he recruited a number of men and girls from questionable Manhattan haunts and took them to the Edison studios. Rehearsals progressed favorably until the men discovered that the "goils" were getting more pay than they, when a strike was called immediately. Director Collins promptly discharged them all.

Late that evening he learned of a bonafide gangsters' dance scheduled for that night. Commandeering the studio motor car brigade he and assistants hurried there, and through financial and other persuasion were permitted to string a line of Allison-Hadaway lights.

In order to get his scene it was necessary that Viola Dana, portraying "Fifty-fifty Mamie," mingle with the dancers. This she did heroically and the film will show the talented little star in these boisterous and unfamiliar surroundings. Of fifty or more persons engaged in this scene, there are only five of the regular "Children of Eve" company. The others are real simon-pure gangsters or their prototype.

"Adolfi Camp," Ausable Chasm, where Director Jack Adolfi produced the exterior scenes of "Joan O' the Hills," a Universal feature, at dinner time. Reading from the left the company is: Dave Willis, cameraman; Sidney Bracy, Violet Mersereau, Harry Benham, Director Jack Adolfi, Assistant John W. Kellette and George Olkein. "Capers," the puppy working in the picture, is in front of Sidney Bracy of "Million Dollar Mystery" fame, and Violet Mersereau, the popular "Little Blond Imp."

Sales Manual of Each Feature

What is unquestionably one of the most complete as well as the most helpful—from the standpoint of the exhibitor—pieces of business literature that the film field has seen, is now being issued by John W. Grey, assistant to A. E. Smith of the Vitagraph Company, with every Blue Ribbon feature released through V. L. S. E., Inc. This is a folder 9x12, giving the complete description of the production, together with a reproduction of all the advertising and publicity matter available for the exhibitor's use in exploiting the play. The pocket of this folder, printed in four colors on the outside and inside pages, shows the half, one, three, six and twenty-four sheets in full colors together with a synopsis of the high-lights of the story.

Enclosed in this is a press sheet, three columns wide, of regular newspaper measure, and of such size as to make it easy to clip, containing the story of the feature, human interest incidents in connection with its filming, personality sketches of the leading players and extraneous press material. This matter is so indexed that the busy exhibitor or editor can turn to the type of story he wishes instantly, without poring through a great mass of other information.

The second insert consists of reproductions of the electrotypes prepared by the advertising department of the Vitagraph Company for the exhibitor's use in the newspapers. With this sales manual before him, the exhibitor has every available scrap of information he can possibly need to know about a feature for intelligent consideration, effective advertising, and correct staging.

Metro Books Two Biggest Houses

After scouring the market for what they considered the biggest and most pretentious current film offering for the auspicious opening of the New Hippodrome in Boston, the week of October 25, the management selected the Rolfe-Metro five-part feature production, "The Final Judgment," in which Ethel Barrymore is starred. The New Hippodrome is said to be the largest theater in New England and has a seating capacity of 4,000. This is claimed to give Metro the two largest theaters in New England, for the Boston theater, seating 3,500, has gained its wide popularity with Metro features.

The choice of the Metro feature by the New Hippodrome is considered a triumphant compliment, because the keenest sort of competition existed among the big motion picture companies for the feature place on the new program. Metro won out despite the fact that the Boston theater was already showing Metro feature pictures. Both theaters are run by the Keith interests.

The prices at the New Hippodrome range from twenty-five cents to one dollar for admission. For the opening week an added feature was Creatore and his band of fifty pieces.

Florence Rockwell with Morosco

Closely following Oliver Morosco's announcements effecting his engagement for motion pictures of Anna Held and Constance Collier, the progressive producer from the West has added another star of prominence to the long list of celebrities who appear on the screen under his banner, in the person of Florence Rockwell, the well known favorite of the drama. The name of Florence Rockwell is familiarly known to patrons of the drama all over the country and her possibilities as a screen actress can readily be realized by the many thousands who have seen her. Under the management of various big producers in the theatrical field, Miss Rockwell has won just praise from critics and public alike for her excellent work.

Florence Rockwell.

Miss Rockwell is already at work at the Morosco studio in Los Angeles, where she is starring in a film adaptation of the well known book, "He Fell in Love With His Wife," which scored as one of this country's best sellers. On account of a hitch at the eleventh hour and in order to get the scenario in readiness for Miss Rockwell, Mr. Morosco was compelled to prepare this himself in New York City and wire the entire script to the studio in Los Angeles, where the star and the entire company was waiting to start work. This telegram was the longest ever sent over the Western Union wires. The scenario was to have been done by a local writer in Los Angeles, but due to an unforeseen incident the plans as scheduled failed to materialize.

Gaumont Company off to Jacksonville

With the cheers of several hundred friends ringing in their ears, fifty actors and members of the producing staff of the Gaumont Company sailed from New York, Tuesday, October 26, for a winter in Florida. The last farewells to little old New York were said at one o'clock, when the Mohawk cast off and the stubby little tugs pulled her out into the stream. The party was in charge of William F. Haddock, a director of one of the Gaumont dramatic companies.

In South Jacksonville, the Gaumont Company has leased the Dixieland theater property. Here the companies making the Rialto Star features will begin work at once. A little later a comedy company will also share the studios, making Casino Star comedies.

Gaumont troopers bound for Jacksonville. The gentleman in the foreground is William F. Haddock, Gaumont director.

The first invasion by the Gaumont organization has been heralded to Jacksonville by the arrival there last Monday of John S. Martin, the New York representative of the company. Mr. Martin arranged the final details and took over the Dixieland theater property. He plants to return to New York shortly, as his time is well taken up with engaging Broadway stars for Gaumont productions.

George Du Bois Proctor, Gaumont's new scenario editor, has accepted several tense photodramas for immediate production, and an announcement of these features and the stars who will appear in them will be made as soon as the order in which they are to play has been arranged.

The party included Miss Lucille Taft, Miss Mathide Baring, Miss Flavia Arcaro, Miss Madge Orlamond, Miss Martin, Fritz Orlamond, technical director; Charles W. Travis, Leonard Graske, Albert Macklin, Sidney Mason, Henry W. Pemberton, James Levering, and John Reinhard. Among the unofficial members were Mrs. Haddock, Mrs. Mason and Mrs. Reinhard.

Aitken Stock Absorbed

Without any fuss or furor, President Freuler of the Mutual Film Corporation, with two associates, last week acquired all the Mutual stock held by H. E. Aitken, the former Mutual president. The purchase price is said to have been approximately 45 and some 7500 shares are said to have changed hands. After acquiring the stock President Freuler graciously permitted some of the older Mutual managers, as well as some of the earlier stockholders in the Mutual organization to take over certain small allotments of the newly acquired stock at the same price. As a result of the transaction the stock of the Mutual Film Corporation is now all held by the executives, managers and close friends of the organization and the stockholders may be considered as one big family, each member of which is ready to co-operate in any fashion to better and perfect the Mutual service and win new friends for the distributing mediums.

Thanhouser Advocates Nude in Films

NO REASON FOR PRUDERY

WITH publication in a number of trade journals of scenes from "Inspiration," a Thanhouser-Mutual Master-Picture, has come an avalanche of comment on the status of this kind of subject in motion pictures. This is the production for which Mr. Thanhouser engaged specially Miss Audrey Munson, known as the "Panama-Pacific Girl," and nationally famous for her endowment of physical charm for art purposes. In the photographs which have been given out for publication she appears a number of times not in various stages of dishabille, but altogether in the nude. The scenes show her in an artist's studio where she has become his inspiration and as she stands on the dais near the figure of her which he is modeling, it is only her head of luxuriant hair that tells which is the figure and which is the subject. The production was staged by George Foster Platt, who is well remembered for his high ideals during his association with Winthrop Ames, and as director of the New Theater. In such hands there is no doubt but that the most delicate subject will find diplomatic treatment. The wise owls in the film business, however, are beginning to figure that nudes are too delicate a matter for even the undisputedly extensive experience of Edwin Thanhouser. When interviewed on the subject, however, Mr. Thanhouser had this to say:

Audrey Munson and Thomas Curran in Thanhouser's "Inspiration."

"It is all so laughable to me in view of the inconsistencies of the various statements which have come to me. I shall not discuss 'Inspiration' as a picture, but more the class of picture which 'Inspiration' represents. I think the time has come when nudes should be as acceptable in motion pictures as they unquestionably are in sculpture and paintings. To me, it resolves itself merely into a matter of treatment. Nudes have been displayed in paintings and in all branches of art since time immemorable; yet 'September Morn' brought down a storm of criticism. The critics' best argument against it was that it was not a frank nude—that the posture of the figure gave it a suggestive interpretation which robbed it of its artistic beauty. That same figure, differently treated, would not have called for any comment at all.

"It appears to me that the realm of the motion picture today is as much one of the art of ocular appeal as of dramatic value. I long for the day when a 'Fountain of Ceres' or a 'Birth of Venus' will find reproduction in motion pictures on the same basis as on canvas or in sculpture. There is no more reason why a Diana in motion pictures should not be as acceptable as a Diana on a public building. It is with this appreciation of the element of art that I undertook to produce 'Inspiration' and I want to take the emphatic stand now that it is my purpose to follow this with many more of its kind. I think that where it is so absolutely unquestionable that Audrey Munson is the object of the admiration of the artistic world, no untoward motive can be ascribed to displaying those same beauties in motion pictures. I stand for a broad, liberal interpretation of all things relating to art, be they the film, stage, canvas, stone or bronze. I should feel very much behind the times if it were revealed to me that art in the film is to be restricted by limitations of hypocritical prudery. I do not want to be understood as favoring the indiscriminate display of physical charm solely and purely on the ground that the model carries artistic value. Not that. For I realize that motion pictures meet the eyes of people who are not expected to hold an aesthetic viewpoint on such matters. Therefore, I say that with the confidence that the nude is being accorded the careful treatment which is so vitally necessary, I look forward with pleasant anticipation to the time when my confreres in the industry will join me in this class of work. And who knows but that time will bring about the mechanical possibility for displaying film art in museums for future generations in the same way that a Raphael or a Van Dyke is given a place of honor in the art institutions of the world?

"It is my conviction that in 'Inspiration' I have furnished the industry with a good illustration of what my ideal in this class of work is. I believe that no man who has the advancement of this art-industry at heart will fail to appreciate in this production a motive which contemplates that advancement more clearly than ninety-nine per cent of the productions now being generally marketed. It is purely from the standpoint I have here expressed that 'Inspiration' is offered."

"Inspiration" will be in five reels and Audrey Munson is supported in it by a competent cast, which includes Thomas A. Curran, George Marlo, Bert Delaney, Carey L. Hastings, Ethyle Cooke and Louise Emerald Bates.

Completing First Ocean Release

The newly formed Ocean Film Corporation of which John L. Dudley is president and Jesse J. Goldburg vice-president and general manager is rapidly completing its initial five-part feature at Jacksonville, Florida, and Dahlonaga, Georgia.

The entire cast, consisting of five principals and eleven subordinates, left for Florida three weeks ago in charge of Mr. Goldburg, who also is the author of the scenario. Joseph W. Smiley, formerly leading director for Lubin, is the director for this production, the name of which is being withheld until its release. Percy Darrell Standing, William W. Cohill and Miss Lucy Cotton assume the leading roles.

The varied atmosphere embraced in the scenes takes within its range the semi-tropics of Florida, the mountains and canons of interior Georgia, the deserts of the far west, the decks of a schooner and an ocean liner at sea, as well as the streets of New York.

Although the Ocean Film Corporation will form is own regular program of two features a month for the first three months and thereafter a feature a week, the initial production will be sold in all probability on a state right basis although this has not been definitely determined by the offices of the company.

Negotiations are pending with several stars of the legitimate stage who have never appeared in photoplays, looking toward their joining the forces of the Ocean Film Corporation. It is expected the first release of this company will be issued about November 15.

Cyril Maude of Premo

Harley Knoles is to go down in motion picture history not only as a maker of artistic pictures but as one able to direct with lightning rapidity. It is now being discussed in the field how when Premo Feature Film Corporation was first organized that Harley Knoles in two months engaged his star Nat C. Goodwin, engaged his supporting cast, hired his studio, wrote an adaptation of the play "The Master Hand," made the pictures and arranged for releasing through the World Film Corporation.

Cyril Maude.

And the wonder of it was that "The Master Hand" was a truly artistic rendition. In "The Antique Dealer" Mr. Knoles has done scarcely less remarkable wonders. Mr. Knoles has been particularly sagacious in his selection of the supporting stars, many of whom have been with Mr. Maude in previous engagements and others of whom have all been motion picture headliners.

The Laemmle Service Company's new building in Des Moines, Iowa, as it now appears under construction.

Kalem Company on Mojave Desert

James Horne has just returned from the Mojave Desert where he has been filming scenes for "Stingaree," the series adapted from the novel by that name by Hornung, who wrote "Raffles," and other well known detective stories. Mr. Horne and company travelled in a special train carrying one hundred horses for the making of these scenes. Mr. Horne is seen in the picture explaining how he wants a scene made, and talking over the story with True Boardman, who plays "Stingaree," the outlaw, Paul Hurst, and Jonasson.

James Horne, director; True Boardman, Frank Jonesson on the Mojave Desert filming scenes for "Stingaree."

Four Acres of Studios

Increased demand for the Flying A, Beauty and Mustang photoplays put out on the new Mutual program has resulted in impressive additions to the plant of the American Film Company at Santa Barbara, California.

Within a few days work will be completed on a new glass studio and related structures covering a total of 25,000 square feet, giving the American an aggregate of four acres of studio space at its plant which has recently been enlarged to cover a plot of ten acres.

The new glass studio covers an area of 80x130 feet and is 22 feet in the clear inside. Adjoining the studio is a great new scenery dock, workshops, property store rooms and transformer rooms. President S. S. Hutchinson of the American now claims the "world's greatest motion picture plant."

A Pathe Star Reviews His Film

C. Aubrey Smith, the famous English star of the Frohman Company, personally appeared at the request of C. E. Holah, branch manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., Cincinnati office, at the Pathe offices in Cincinnati on Friday, October 22, and reviewed his latest film production on the Pathe Gold Rooster program, "John Glayde's Honour," produced by the Frohman Amusement Company for Pathe's program.

Pathe's Next Extraordinary Series

WELL KNOWN STARS ENGAGED

AFTER months of careful preparation Pathe announces the completion of plans for the series "Who Is Guilty?" which will follow "Neal of the Navy." The first release of the new series will be on December 11, the week after the release of the last episode of "Neal of the Navy."

Emmy Wehlen, the famous favorite of the legitimate stage, and Howard Estabrook, the very best of Broadway's younger stars, will play the leads. The engagement of these "top notch" players at a very high cost is an assurance that Pathe intends to make this series the most pretentious of all the long list of successes identified with its name.

The Arrow Film Corporation will produce "Who Is Guilty?" at its studios in Yonkers, N. Y., and the series will be under the personal direction of Howell Hansel, the well known director, who is now director-in-chief of the Arrow Film Corporation. Miss Wehlen and Mr. Estabrook will be featured throughout the series. The supporting players will doubtless be changed from time to time to meet the requirements of the scenario. At present the supporting cast includes Lila Chester, Henry West, Mrs. Balfour, Stanley Walpole, E. J. de Varny and Katherine Reichart.

Emmy Wehlen is easily one of the most prominent players of the day. She was strongly attracted to the stage when a child only six years old, and even at that early age her ambition was to one day become a theatrical star. While she was in school she was the leading spirit in various little plays the students put on from time to time. Attending a musical conservatory for two years she devoted herself to preparing for a career in grand opera. Learning, however, that there is no royal road to success in that line, and that four more years of study were required she decided to take up musical comedy and studied under the best masters. She appeared in musical comedy in various European countries, but the scene of her greatest success was England, where she played the title role in "The Merry Widow," that famous production which took the civilized world by storm. Then came a long engagement in "The Dollar Princess." She first appeared on the American stage in "Marriage a la Carte," an English play. On the expiration of her engagement here she returned to England to become leading lady at the famous Gaiety theater. She returned to America with "The Girl on the Film." She may be said to have been almost a trans-Atlantic commuter, for she went back to England to take the lead in "After the Girl," with which production she returned to the United States. Miss Wehlen expresses a great liking for work in motion pictures, and is an ardent "picture fan" herself. Night after night she goes to the picture houses to see "what other people are doing."

No one can talk to her without being convinced that she is a thinker and gifted with more than the ordinary amount of brains. She says of "Who Is Guilty?" after reading the scenarios, that in it she recognizes a most unusual medium for motion pictures, and that she feels sure the series will not only amuse but instruct to a rare degree.

Howard Estabrook, who is co-star with Miss Wehlen in the Pathe series, has enjoyed an almost meteoric career upon the stage. No list of Broadway celebrities would be complete without his name. He was born in Detroit, Michigan, and it is interesting to note how he came to adopt a theatrical career. His uncle was county treasurer and young Estabrook's first position after leaving school was as assistant cashier in his uncle's office. With a boy friend he turned a vacant room in one of his father's buildings into a theater and gave shows there for the edification of juvenile friends. It happened that a short distance

Emmy Wehlen.

Howard Estabrook.

Mrs. Wilson Woodcock

down the street from the county treasurer's office was a theater playing stock. They needed a juvenile and young Estabrook applied for the job and got it. For a while he held down both positions at the same time. Then came his chance. The stock company put on "Shenandoah," and he was offered a good part. He took it and made good with a bang. The result was that he wrote to Mr. Seymour of Charles Frohman's interests applying for a job, and got it—with William Collier in "The Dictator." He played with that company from coast to coast and afterwards before both King Edward and the later King George of England. "On the Quiet" was his next engagement and with it he came back to New York. "Brown of Harvard" saw his first important part and in it he made a big hit. It resulted in his election to the Lambs Club, and in his being tendered a number of very flattering offers. Clyde Fitch made one of them and got the prize for which they were all angling. The medium in which he was placed was "The Straight Road." This was followed by the lead in "The Boys of Company B," under Daniel Frohman's management. After that engagement he married Gretchen Dale, the daughter of a San Francisco banker, and with his bride toured Europe for two years. On his return he wrote and produced "Mrs. Avery," putting it on at Weber's theater. As a result he was elected to membership in the Society of American Composers and Dramatists. Then followed engagements with Holbrook Blinn in "The Boss," and one with Wilton Lackey, in both of which he assisted in the stage direction. He was in the original cast of "Within the Law," and when that play was sold by Mr. Brady was withdrawn and placed in the part of "Laurie" in "Little Women." Leading man with Grace George in several of her plays and revivals came next, and then the leading part in "Things That Count," which had an all-season run at the Playhouse.

David Belasco then secured him for "The Vanishing Bride." When "Search Me" was put on this past summer at the Gaiety he was at the same time playing the lead in Edward Jose's Gold Rooster Play, "The Closing Net," which picture has only been released a short time, but has made a big hit. He is now appearing with Elsie Janis at the George M. Cohan theater in "Miss Information." His daily routine at the present time is enough to intimidate anyone. He rises at seven and as soon as he has finished breakfast goes to Yonkers, works in "Who Is Guilty?" then returns to New York, takes a hasty dinner, and at seven goes to the theater from which he doesn't get back home until 12:30 a. m.

Howell Hansel, who will direct "Who Is Guilty?" is one of the best known producers in the business. He promises that the production will be of the most elaborate quality, and his record insures a thoroughly artistic series of pictures. He was connected with the dramatic stage ever since he was nineteen years old up to three years ago. He was born in Terre Haute, Indiana, and made his debut with Mme. Modjeska in "As You Like It," at the Union Square theater in New York. He was for three seasons with Charles Frohman, two with the Lieblers, and has appeared with James O'Neill, Margaret Mather, Kyrle Bellew and Henrietta Crosman. He went into the motion picture business immediately on the conclusion of his last engagement, and has been with Thanhouser, the World film and Lubin. He directed "The Million Dollar Mystery" from start to finish.

As for the stories of "Who Is Guilty?" they have been written for newspaper syndication by Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, the famous novelist. They are put into scenario form by George Brackett Seitz, who has written many Pathe successes. The series will be in fourteen chapters of two parts each, each chapter complete in itself. The theme deals with various social problems of the day, and will be treated in a thoroughly unconventional manner. The question of "Who Is Guilty?" for the various infractions of man-made laws will be left to the observer and the subject will always be handled in the most truthful manner possible consistent with good taste.

H. H. Van Loan, Universal Manager

Another appointment announced from the manager's office of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company this week, is that of H. H. Van Loan's promotion to manager of the publicity department. This is the position formerly held by Joe Brandt, prior to becoming manager of the home office. For a while he had charge of both offices, but Mr. Van Loan's ability in placing the publicity department in a most flourishing condition prompted the officials of the Universal in making him head of the publicity department, where he has supervision over a staff of twenty men and women.

H. H. Van Loan.

Some of the big campaigns Mr. Van Loan has promoted include the Universal Beauty Contest, without a peer in publicity achievements, in which forty-eight newspapers in all parts of the country were lined up with the Universal. The Pavlowa, Bernhardt, "Graft" and Universal City campaigns are other tributes to his fertile brain. Another campaign which is now in preparation and which bids fair to surpass even the Beauty contest, is that of "Who is the handsomest man in America."

Ince Leases Theater for Own Use

In order that, in future, he will not be compelled to cast about for a suitable place in which to make a final inspection of his productions, Thomas H. Ince this week signed a lease which gives him the exclusive right to the Brooks theater, sometimes known as the Mozart, in Los Angeles. The theater will be used each week for the showing of the Ince-Triangle features before they are shipped to New York for distribution. These exhibitions will not be public but will be viewed only by Ince himself and his staff of assistants. The actual work of cutting and assembling of the Ince films is done in the Inceville factory, but at the studio there are no adequate facilities for projecting the pictures with the full and original musical accompaniment, which has proven such a tremendously valuable asset of the Triangle plays. Hereafter, a thirty piece orchestra will render the music written by Wedgwood Nowell, Ince's musical director, and his two subordinates, Joseph Hurnburger and Victor L. Schertzinger.

Gaumont Secures John Daly Murphy

Exhibitors and motion picture fans are coming to recognize the full value of the Gaumont slogan, "A new star every time." Now comes the announcement that Gaumont has secured John Daly Murphy for a Casino Star Comedy, "A Tangle in Hearts." This will be released November 14, on the Mutual program. Mr. Murphy is favorably known everywhere in America for his excellent work in such productions as "The Girl From Rector's," "The Man From Cook's," and in support of such prominent stars as May Irwin and Valeska Suratt.

John Daly Murphy.

During his youth John Daly Murphy was well known on the American turf. As a rider he was always sure of a mount, since his percentage of wins was high. In motion pictures his first engagement—and the only one before Gaumont lured him from the lgeitimate drama for "A Tangle in Hearts"—was a number of years ago as a gentleman jocky. At the last minute no other white jockeys were to be had to ride against him in a steeplechase. Negro stable boys were employed, although the scenario called for gentlemen riders. A trial was made, and when the film was developed Mr. Murphy looked as black as the stable boys because of bad light. The film was allowed to stand, no further effort being made to get white riders.

Thomas H. Ince and Billie Burke enjoying a laugh at the expense of Inceville's publicity manager, Kenneth O'Hara.

Universal City Given a Treat

Tuesday, October 12, was not only celebrated at Universal City as a day commemorating the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus. The members of the motion picture municipality will long remember it as a day of ice cream festivities.

Ice cream manufacturers of America gather at Universal City.

On that day several hundred ice cream men were present on a visit of the only motion picture city in the world, all delegates to the convention of the National Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers, who held a two-day session in Los Angeles. As a part of their itinerary the delegates were led by the president of the associations, W. L. Luick, of Milwaukee, to Universal City, where they made a thorough inspection of the eighth wonder of the world.

National Acquires New Studio

One of the announcements of the week is the news that William Parsons, president of the National Film Corporation, of Los Angeles, is moving the National Film Corporation studios and laboratories to the present Metro Quality studios, at the northwest corner of Gower and Sunset boulevard, Los Angeles, which studio and property President Parsons has purchased from Fred J. Balshofer, who in turn moves his Quality studio to New York City.

The new National plant is modern, up to date and one of the best in Los Angeles, with great facilities to make pictures and will give great opportunities for turning out some excellent work for Albert W. Hale, who has been appointed as director for the National, by President Parsons. Mr. Hale is too well known as a producer to need any further comment.

The first of the month, after the National has settled in its new quarters, Director Hale will immediately start on a big five-reel feature of which details are being kept a secret.

"The Orpheum Weekly Herald"

In the Orpheum Weekly Herald, a four-page newspaper-like house organ which reaches us this week from Aberdeen, South Dakota, we find one of the newsiest little sheets that has come to our desk in a long time. It is edited by A. W. Walker in behalf of the Orpheum theater of Aberdeen, and announces on its editorial page that its purpose is to "give the people a wider and broader knowledge of amusements in general and create a closer bond of sympathy between the Orpheum management and the patrons of the house." Interesting stories of forthcoming feature films and little items regarding the personalities of the players appearing in them, are scattered throughout the four pages of the Herald, together with tasty ads relating to the coming offerings at the Orpheum. The theater is booking Fox and V. L. S. E. service.

Frederic Arnold Kummer Joins Metro

With the increasing demand for authors of photoplays who are especially gifted in this comparatively new profession, it is interesting to note that Frederic Arnold Kummer, the well known novelist and playwright, who is devoting a major part of his time in writing for the screen, declares photo drama authorship calls into play a more deep and vivid understanding of human emotions than was ever required in any writings of the past. Mr. Kummer has several Broadway plays to his credit, besides scores of books and short stories. Among some of his plays are "The Other Woman," "A Daughter of Eve," "The Brute," "Mr. Buttles," "The Painted Woman," and others. His novel, "A Song of Sixpence," was one of the six best sellers in 1913.

Frederic Arnold Kummer

Mr. Kummer is now at the Rolfe-Metro studio where his latest novel, "One Million Francs," was picturized under the title of "One Million Dollars," and which will be an early release in the Metro program with William Faversham in the stellar part. Mr. Kummer began his literary career about eight years ago, giving up a paying position as chief engineer of a large contracting company in New York to devote his time to writing.

Actor Suffer Real Blows

Katharine Kaelred not only shed real tears but shook with emotion recently during the filming of one of the strong scenes in "The Winged Idol," the five-part Ince-Triangle feature in which she is starred. Her grief was occasioned by the intense pain she had caused House Peters, who supported her in the production, by striking him in the face with a Russian knout.

One of the big scenes in "The Winged Idol" is that in which servants bind Peters hand and foot to a bed post, and in order to punish him for drinking Miss Kaelred whips him with the knout. The scene was directed by Thomas H. Ince. Peters agreed with Ince that for the sake of realism a real knout should be used. One was obtained from a Russian who had escaped from Siberia but who now is in Los Angeles.

Peters urged that Miss Kaelred use all her strength in striking him and gamely agreed to stand the pain. When Producer Ince ordered "action," Miss Kaelred took her place and began lashing Peters with the whip. Stung by the knotted buckskin strands, Peters had no need to feign agony. He writhed in pain and just as Miss Kaelred directed another blow at his body, his head dropped and the full force of the knout fell across his face.

The actor moaned and nearly fainted, while Miss Kaelred dropped to the floor, crying hysterically. The actors playing the parts of the servants stepped forward and released Peters and carried him to the bed. It all happened so quickly that the camera man did not stop photographing. Then Ince realized that, with the exception of the blow in the face, the action had occurred just as it had been outlined in the script.

When the scene was thrown on the screen in the projecting room, it was discovered that the camera had registered the welts made by the knouts on Peters' face and forehead, so soon had they appeared after the blow was struck.

Joseph Singleton of Reliance

Joseph Singleton, prominent leading man of the Reliance (Mutual) studios, famed for his character portraits on the screen, and for his unusual facility in the art of "make up," comes before the public in a new and timely role in "The Law of Duty," a multiple reel drama released in the regular Mutual program, November 7.

Joseph Singleton.

This stirring drama of the great struggle now being fought on European battlefields, features Singleton as "General von Lomberg," a veteran of the Franco-Prussian war who, in his unique "make up" is easily recognized as impersonating General von Hindenburg, one of Emperor William's most trusted and popular commanders. In his "make up," Singleton is every inch an exact counterpart of the famous German field commander.

In order to make his disguise as near perfect as possible, Singleton spent many hours studying various photographs of von Hindenburg and on one occasion journeyed to Los Angeles to witness several performances of a set of war pictures taken on German battlefields in several scenes of which von Hindenburg is prominently shown.

M. J. Knill, a well known theatrical man, took over the management of the Studebaker theater in Chicago last week for the Triangle Film Corporation, succeeding George W. Sammis, who superintended the opening of the house.

Strong "Big Four" Features Coming

NOTABLE STARS TO APPEAR

WITH two powerful war plays already attracting widespread attention—Vitagraph's "The Battle Cry of Peace," and Lubin's "The Rights of Man"—the producing companies making up the V. L. S. E. are offering during the next quarter three other dramas of strife which are said to be unusually strong in their drawing qualities.

The first of these, an Essanay extra, is called "The Crimson Wing." It differs from its contemporary productions in that the heart interest of the present war is emphasized, rather than some sociological phase of it. The first review of this production had probably the wealthiest audience ever assembled at an entertainment, other than that of the opera, the combined capital of the spectators aggregating some $200,000,000. Among them were Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, Harold and Cyrus McCormick, Orville Babcock, James Ward Thorne, Scott Durand, Howard Shaw and Edward S. Moore, vice-president of the Rock Island railroad.

Following this war play, Lubin will release through V. L. S. E., a drama of preparedness against war called "The Nation's Peril." This is scheduled to appear November 22. It will probably be in five reels, featuring Ormi Hawley and Earl Metcalfe.

The entire Atlantic squadron, including battleships, torpedo boats, submarines, destroyers and a marine corps were utilized in making this picture. It was directed by George W. Terwilliger.

Selig is the remaining manufacturer of the Big Four to capitalize upon the public's interest in the question of international argument. Its release, scheduled for December 13, will be a Red Seal play entitled "I'm Glad My Boy Grew Up to Be a Soldier." The production will probably be in five reels. It is said that thousands of soldiers participate in the battlefield scenes, and the staging of the whole production has been most realistic. The slogan of "preparedness" is again dealt with in a manner that is most deft yet vitally convincing.

From the advance announcement of the other releases for the forthcoming quarter, it would appear that there is very healthy competition among the manufacturers of the "Big Four" to excel one another in the interest-creating qualities of their productions.

"The Raven," to be released November 8 by Essanay, unquestionably is going to materially advance the artistic standard of the screen. Those who have seen the play say that the acting of Henry B. Walthall as Edgar Allan Poe will stand as a high-light in the photoplay school of interpretation for a long time to come.

Essanay will follow this feature with a five part drama, to be released December 6, called "The Alster Case," featuring Bryant Washburn and Ruth Stonehouse. On December 20, "A Daughter of the City," in five parts, showing E. H. Calvert and Marguerite Clayton, will be released. Mr. Walthall again makes his return on January 3, with Edna Mayo in a six part drama from the Broadway success "The Misleading Lady."

Selig's contribution to the V. L. S. E. program for November will be an idyllic production of Charles Major's story, "Sweet Alyssum," in which Tyrone Power and Miss Kathlyn Williams will be starred. Colin Campbell produced "Sweet Alyssum." It is heralded as a picture play with an appeal, that will win a most sympathetic reception.

The next Lubin release after that of "The Nation's Peril" will be on December 6, when the story of sea-life captioned "The Man's Making" will be released. This was produced by Jack Pratt, with Richard Buhler in the leading role, Rosetta Brice supporting. It is in five parts.

On December 20 this company will show Edgar Lewis' first production for the Lubin Company, dramatized from Henry Vaughn Moody's "The Great Divide." It was produced at the Grand Canyon, Arizona, with Ethel Clayton and House Peters. Others of the cast are Mary Moore, Warner P. Richmond and Haydon Stevenson. This also is in five parts.

In January, Raymond Hitchcock will be seen in a Lubin comedy in five reels called "The Wonderful Wager," based on the story of "The Ford Fliver," written by George V. Hobart and adapted for the screen by Mark Swan. In this picture the entire Washburn circus will be used.

Three V. L. S. E. releases are announced for November by the Vitagraph Company. "The Turn of the Road," a five-part feature produced by Tefft Johnson, in which Virginia Pearson, Joseph Kilgour, Bobby Connelly, Naomi Childers and Robert Gaillard will be seen in the portrayal of the principal roles, is the first, to be released November 1.

A Cyrus Townsend Brady story, "Heights of Hazard," that contains every known thrill, will add additional interest to the month's program. It will be released November 15. "Heights of Hazard" is also a five part feature and will introduce Charles Richman, Eleanor Woodruff and Charles Kent in the leading characterizations. An automobile elopement, an escape from an aeroplane, a sabre duel, an African lion hunt and thrilling motor boat races keep the interest at fever heat during the entire length of the picture.

Robert Edeson, Fay Wallace, Lillian Burns, Charles Eldridge, John T. Kelly and a special cast of Vitagraph players will be seen in "The Cave Man" on November 29, produced under the direction of Theodore Marston.

On December 13 there will be released "A Price for Folly," one of the strongest dramas on the Vitagraph program. It was written by George P. Dillenbeck, and produced in five parts by George D. Baker, with Edith Storey, Antonio Moreno, Harry Morey, Charles Kent, Louise Beaudet, Ethel Corcoran and Arthur Cozine. The scenes of "A Price for Folly" are laid in Paris and special care has been taken to depict in all the splendor of wealth and detail the handsome home of a French nobleman.

Frank Daniels, the inimitable king of comedy, whose first Vitagraph release, "Crooky," established him as a screen comedian in a class by himself, will round out the year's Vitagraph Blue Ribbon features on December 27 in "What Happened to Father," written especially for him by Mary Roberts Rinehart. It is a story of the theater; a story of that region known as "back stage," that has always been a mystery to the uninitiated. It is a story that gives Mr. Daniels opportunity for the exercise of his inimitable talents. A strong Vitagraph cast supported Mr. Daniels in the enactment of the comedy, which was produced in five parts by C. Jay Williams.

Dorothy Davenport Joins Lasky

A member of a family that has been prominent in the American theater for many years, Miss Dorothy Davenport has been engaged as a regular member of the Lasky Feature Play Company.

Dorothy Davenport.

Miss Davenport made her first appearance in Paramount theaters in the Lasky production of Lou-Tellegen in "The Explorer." Universally she won praise for her playing. She will be the heroine in the picturization of "Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo," supporting Theodore Roberts and Carlyle Blackwell.

Miss Davenport is a daughter of the noted comedian, Harry Davenport, and the celebrated actress, Alice Davenport. She is a niece of the late Fanny Davenport, for many years the reigning favorite of the Broadway stage. Her career on the legitimate stage was brief, however. After a few seasons as a child in vaudeville, she joined the Biograph Company at sixteen, and has appeared at different times with the Reliance, Nestor, Selig, Ince, and Universal. With the latter organization she played leading roles with Wallace Reid, a screen romance that ended in their marriage. Her first motion picture was in support of Henry B. Walthall in "Life's Cycle."

Will Offer Review Service

An announcement of interest to exhibitors who book feature pictures has been recently made by the newly organized Exhibitors' Film Review Service, Inc. This company, according to its announcement, will aid the exhibitor to book only the better productions released each week, by affording him a fair, unbiased and thoroughly dependable review of the feature output of the week.

This important and rather unique service will be personally conducted by B. P. Fineman, formerly motion picture editor of the New York Press, and lately identified with the press department of one of the feature producing companies. David A. Levy, one of the officers of the Exhibitors' Film Review Service, has been for a long time connected in an executive capacity with a large chain of motion picture theaters, and was actively concerned with the booking of features for this circuit.

ROTHAPFEL-MUTUAL TOUR

Famous Showman Who Is Literally Eating His Way Around the United States Is Now in the Far West

Samuel L. Rothapfel, covering the country on the "Rothapfel-Mutual Tour," is now doing the west, with the success of the excursion growing with each successive "port of call."

In Philadelphia, Washington, New Orleans, Dallas and El Paso, Mr. Rothapfel has addressed large gatherings attended by a majority of the aggressive exhibitors in each territory.

Next immediately in turn upon the schedule are: Los Angeles, October 30 to November 2; San Francisco, November 3 to 5; Portland, November 7; Seattle, November 8. Thence the route leads eastward through Salt Lake, Denver, Kansas City and through the principal cities of the middle west.

"Slightly hoarse but full of banquet grub and pep," comes the report off the wire from "Roxy" just as he filed it en route to Los Angeles. "Had a great meeting in Washington, a corker in New Orleans and a big crowd in Dallas and a good one at El Paso, where I was careful to stay out of the Mex war zone. The meetings are getting better right along the line. Exhibitors are wiring ahead on my itinerary urging the fellows ahead not to miss the meetings. Lots of fun and meeting a lot of live exhibitors. Never had such a succession of banquets in my life. Eating my way around the U. S."

The Washington function at the Hotel Raleigh is typical of the tour. Mr. Rothapfel was introduced there by Gardner Mack of the Washington Times and the gathering included men from all the film exchanges of the city, leading exhibitors and representatives of the Washington papers which are taking a new interest in the motion picture industry.

Mr. Rothapfel took a wallop at the oft repeated and sometimes believed "axiom" credited to a famous showman of yester-year. "Put your show above the public," said Mr. Rothapfel, "make the public look up to you and make the public want what you want to give them. That's the road to success. And the public is not going to be fooled, either. It is a wise public today, not the public Barnum was dealing with, and you must be wiser than the public."

Plans have been made to give "Our Mutual Traveler" Mr. Rothapfel a rousing time in Los Angeles. There he will visit the great institutions of the motion picture industry and meet some old friends who with him have climbed to fame in the picture business. At Los Angeles and San Francisco Mr. Rothapfel's schedule allows him a breathing spell and a chance to stir about a bit between banquets.

J. B. Dugger, of the Dallas office of the V. L. S. E., is responsible for the novel idea of using hotel menus for the announcement of attractions of photoplay theaters. The "Big Four" salesman has taken the matter up with a number of hotels in the southwest, and gained their consent to the appearance of such notices, on the ground that they were rendering their patrons a service. Mr. Dugger pointed out that every night there were a number of traveling men in every good-sized town who had nowhere especially to go, and would appreciate a suggestion on the bill-of-fare.

Los Angeles and the Film Industry

SOME SURPRISING STATISTICS

"SPEC" WOODS, a prominent member of the Los Angeles film colony, with a taste for figures, has compiled some mighty interesting statistics relating to the importance of the motion picture industry to Los Angeles. In part his "dope" reads as follows:

There are approximately twenty producing studios in Los Angeles and nearby vicinity, employing all the way from one to twenty directors with their companies of stock players. Probably one-half of these directors are making what are termed "regular program releases." The other half are engaged in making multiple reel "features."

One way of estimating the amount of money brought to Los Angeles and distributed there in the way of salaries and other expenses in the production of pictures, is to take the average amount of money spent by each director per week.

The average one and two reel pictures will cost around $1,000 per week for each director. Feature pictures will run from $2,000 per week up. Upon this basis you will find that sixty directors on regular releases would expend $60,000 a week, and sixty directors on features would expend $120,000 a week—making a total of $180,000 per week. Multiply this by fifty-two and you have $9,360,000.

To this must be added the extra expense for feature stars, running all the way from $500 to $2,000 or $3,000 per week. Suppose we call the average $1,000 for each star, sixty stars would be $60,000 per week spent in this way.

We must then estimate the amount of money spent in building studios and other permanent improvements, which are constantly increasing. The cost of Universal City is unknown to me, but it must be considerable. Our own plant is valued around $100,000—nearly all having been built within the last year and a half.

The total of these expenditures must run well over $12,000,000 per year; some people have estimated it at a total of $20,000,000, although I do not think it will reach this sum. The main point, however, is that nearly all of this money is brought to Los Angeles to stay, and comes entirely from the outside.

The money which the city of Los Angeles contributes to the motion picture interests is only nominal in comparison; the city furnishes only about 1 per cent of the motion picture income of the United States, and of this 1 per cent only a small percentage finds its way back to the producing company, as a large part of the receipts goes to the exhibitors and to the exchange companies.

Taking the number of people employed—using our own plant as a basis—we may figure about 10 regular actors or actresses to each director, and an average of 20 extra people given occasional employment. For the 120 directors employed in Los Angeles, this makes 1,200 regular and 2,400 extra people, a total of 3,600 actors and actresses who make their living from motion pictures.

We must add to this the other studio, office, camera and factory employes which would double this number at least.

The following is a list of producing studios, with the approximate number of directors employed in each one. There may be some companies omitted from this list, and it should be noted that some of the companies do not operate in Los Angeles in the summer time, but do operate in the fall, winter and spring; and in this case I have given the number of directors ordinarily employed by them while here.

Fine Arts Films	10	Directors
New York Motion Picture Co.	8	"
Keystone (Sennett)	8	"
Vitagraph	8	"
Kalem	2	"
Selig	8	"
Lubin	2	"
Famous Players	4	"
Lasky	5	"
Zodiac	3	"
Universal	24	"
Rolfe	4	"
Crown City	2	"
Balboa	4	"
Albuquerque	1	"
L-Ko	4	"
Quality	2	"
Feature Ideals	2	"
Bosworth	2	"
Biograph	6	"
Essanay	3	"

"THE OLD HOMESTEAD" AT LAST

Famous Players Film Company Takes First Scenes in Adaptation of Denman Thompson's Beloved Masterpiece in Newly Acquired Quarters

By a rare coincidence, the first scene taken in the old Durland Riding Academy which was acquired for studio purposes by the Famous Players Film Company after the burning of its Twenty-sixth street headquarters, was the opening of "The Old Homestead," the celebrated rural classic which for over thirty years served to endear itself, and its star and author, Denman Thompson, to the American public.

Wherever the stage is known there "The Old Homestead" is also known. Its picture of rustic life, written by a man who knew it by personal experience, for Mr. Thompson lived for years on his old New Hampshire farm, is one of the most interesting human documents that ever was written. The very simplicity of the characters and of the story gave it its universal interest and caused it to outlive by years many a melodrama and thriller that for the moment gained great popularity. But when these meteoric successes were long forgotten, "The Old Homestead" still remained undisturbed in the affections of the people. It was the sort of play that one saw many times with always the same keen enjoyment because there were no great thrills whose edge was dulled by repetition, and the intense humanity of the play, together with the whole-heartedness of the humor, made it a never-ending pleasure.

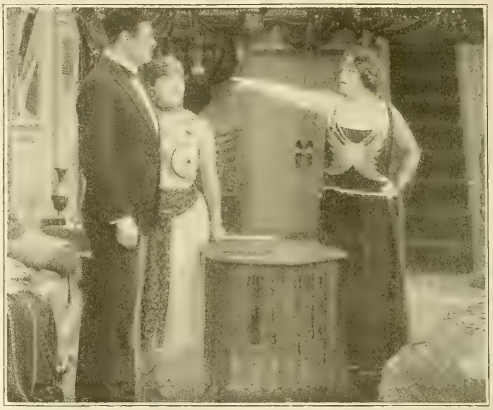
It is doubtful if any other play is as well-known to the masses as "The Old Homestead," with the possible exception of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." It is one of the few plays which the great motion picture public knows as it knows its alphabet. And for that reason it will be appreciated by the public more than any sensational adaptation which has ever been made.

King Baggot of Universal

King Baggot, widely known leading man of the Imp brand of Universal motion pictures, was born in St. Louis, Missouri, thirty-two years ago. He is the son of William King Baggot, who during his lifetime was a popular and successful real estate operator in St. Louis. Young Baggot was educated at Christian Brothers College, St. Louis. His early ambitions were divited. He did not know whether he would rather be a great actor or a great ball player.

King Baggott.

He finally worked his way up from one line speaking parts to playing juveniles in a stock company in St. Louis known as Koerner's Garden stock company. After one season of principal parts in this stock company he obtained a position as leading juvenile with James H. Wallick's "Queen of the Highway."



Mr. Baggot attracted the attention of the Lieblers and they engaged him for a period of four years. For them he appeared as Mr. Bob in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" and in other parts in their $2 attractions. He left the Lieblers to accept an engagement as leading man with Marguerite Clark in "The Wishing Ring." That was his last season on the stage.

In 1909 Baggot went into motion pictures, joining the Imp Company, and he has been with that company ever since, which makes his engagement one of the longest of any known in the business. Besides having achieved distinction as a leading man he is also looked upon as the guiding spirit of the photoplay profession. He is the founder of the Screen Club, New York.

"Bella Donna" Completed

The adaptation of Robert Hichens' celebrated novel and play, "Bella Donna," with Pauline Frederick in the title role, has been completed by the Famous Players Film Company under the joint direction of Edwin S. Porter and Hugh Ford. It was in this familiar role that Mme. Nazimova won her first great American triumph, far eclipsing the reputation she had gained in her Ibsen roles.

The story of the novel, which ranked among the "best sellers" at the time of its publication, has been strictly adhered to, but the more sensational points of the story have been softened in order to avoid offending even the most conservative tastes.

Pauline Frederick in a scene from Famous Players' "Bella Donna."

For the purpose of obtaining the famous desert scenes in the description of which Hichens displayed some of his most wonderful artistry, Messrs. Porter and Ford took a company of players to Florida, the outbreak of the war having rendered impossible the original plan of the producers to stage the play in Egypt. The sandy wastes of Florida, however, have made an admirable substitute for the African backgrounds.

In support of Miss Frederick there appear Thomas Holding, who already distinguished himself by his excellent work opposite the star in her previous screen subjects, Julian L'Estrange, who has been seen before in the same star's company, Eugene Ormonde, George Majeroni and Edmund Shalet complete the list of principals.

After witnessing the first showing of the picture, Edwin S. Porter declared that in his opinion Miss Frederick had done the greatest work of her motion picture career.

"That sounds like the traditional statement for a director to make," declared Mr. Porter, "but what I mean is this: The other roles which Miss Frederick has played all had some redeeming feature by which the character won sympathy from the audience before the story was brought to a close. There is nothing in Bella Donna herself which can possibly enlist our sympathy for a moment. She is treacherous, a potential murderess, an ingrate—there is but one side to her nature, and that side is repulsive. Zaza was bad, but her love for Henri was real and sincere, while her overwhelming affection for his little girl developed the power of forgiveness in her savage nature and won the admiration of the audience.

Pallas Picture's cameraman scales dangerous heights in San Bernardino Mountains for "The Call of the Cumberland."

"Bella Donna, on the other hand, though a far more cultured woman than Zaza, is moved by nothing but greed and hate in all that she does. Yet, despite the character of Bella Donna, I venture to say that Pauline Frederick will win the sympathy of every person who sees her able interpretation. And that, to me, seems to be the final test of an actress' ability, and above all, her wonderful, irresistible personality."

Mutual Enjoins Another Film

The legal department of the Mutual Film Corporation reports the granting of another injunction against the advertisement of a film entitled "A Victim of Sin" as a photodrama based on that great moral play "Damaged Goods." This time the offending film appeared in Detroit, Michigan. The injunction there is against J. H. Kunsky, Inc., David Mundstuck and Jonas Rosen, who had been supplied with the film and the infringing advertising matter from the New York concern against which an injunction was issued recently. One by one the infringers are being run down and prosecuted. Action in these cases is brought in the name of the American Film Company, the makers of the original and genuine "Damaged Goods" with Richard Bennett and his Broadway cast of coworkers. Actions are pending or shortly to be instituted in a number of other cities.

Vitagraph Employes' Benefit Ball

On Wednesday night, October 27, the employes of the Vitagraph Company of America gave a benefit ball at McLaughlin's Bays Casino, Sheepshead Bay, N. Y., for the hospital and sick fund. This is the second annual ball of this generous institution, and its great success reflects commendably upon the co-operative spirit behind the activities of this progressive film company.

Late new additions to the American studios at Santa Barbara, Cal.

A busy day during the filming of "Cap'n Eri," the Eastern Film Corporation's five reel production.

The programs distributed at the ball were unique, as well as complete directories of the dances and members of the Vitagraph forces. On the pages following the appreciative introduction and the trinity of unity, William T. Rock, J. Stuart Blackton and Albert E. Smith, were pictures of all of the players seen in Vitagraph productions. Most of these players were present in person, also.

Dick Leslie, as usual, was a gracious and omnipresent master of ceremonies. Among those who figured prominently in making the affair a huge success and good time and who are not included in the list of players and directors are: Victor Smith, Sam Spedon, Sheldon Lewis, John W. Grey and numerous Vitagraph friends and screen players from other studios.

Metro Boosters Club to Dine

The Metro Boosters Club will give its first dinner at Kenn's Forty-fourth street chop house on Thursday evening, November 4.

This organization has been formed within the Metro Pictures Corporation and its allied companies, and at the first dinner there will be present President Richard A. Rowland, Joseph W. Engel, treasurer, E. A. Rolfe and Max Karger, manager of the Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc., all the directors who are making the Metro pictures, and these include John W. Noble, Edwin Carewe, Charles Horan, Edgar Jones, William Nigh and Herbert Blache, together with the local managers, members of the publicity staff and the directors of the corporation and others of the Metro family.

The dinners will be informal, and will be followed by a picture showing each week, with a general Metro discussion for mutual helpfulness. Once each month the representatives of the trade press and other important members of the motion picture industry will be invited as guests of the club. Joseph W. Engel will be master of cermonies at the first dinner, and Paul Henkel has arranged a special menu of Metro dishes.

"The Nation's Peril," the big Lubin feature film of the topic of the hour, our country's preparedness and the hyphenated Americans, which for the past four months has been under the course of construction by Director George Terwilliger and his Lubin Company at Newport, R. I., has its finishing touches at the Lubin plant and is scheduled for release on November 22 through the V. L. S. E., Inc., offices.

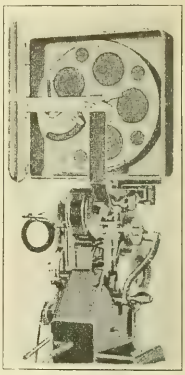
Helen Osborn of Balboa

Balboa claims to have the youngest leading lady before the public today in Helen Marie Osborn. Only recently she celebrated her third birthday anniversary and on that occasion she was elevated to stellar honors, playing opposite no less a screen favorite than Henry King. Until this event, the little lady was known about the Balboa studio as "Baby Marie"; but now she takes exception to such address, and out of respect of her position she is called Miss Osborn. She comports herself with unspoiled dignity, is childishly frolicsome and withal ladylike.

Helen Marie Osborn.

Helen Marie Osborn is a native of Denver, Colorado. Her parents are both professionals. As "Babe" St. Clair, her mother is known to many people of the stage. Leon T. Osborn is the father. Both are members of the Balboa playing force. But since Helen Marie is doing leads, she has become the most important member of the family. Mother is acting in capacity of maid to her daughter; while father serves as the manager.



Three months' studio experience preceded Helen Marie's promotion. During that period she played the usual line of child parts in "Maid of the Wild," "The Lady of Perfume," and several other Balboa features; but in such an unusual way that the Horkheimer Brothers had a story specially written to feature the little lady.

Marguerite Clark in Famous Players', "Still Waters."

Feed Films from Center of Reel

One of the commonest causes of fires in motion-picture operation is the necessary exposure of the film during the process of rewinding after it has been exhibited. Before it can be shown again it must be rolled to another reel so that the beginning of the picture will be on the outside of the roll, and in this handling there often is danger of the accidental ignition of the inflammable celluloid through contact with a spark of flame from some source. Films are often scratched and torn in this re-winding process, while it takes up a great deal of the operator's time.

A New Feed.

A new device which can be attached to any standard motion-picture projector draws the film from the center of the roll instead of the outside, making rewinding unnecessary. An electric motor revolves the reel at a speed governed by the speed of the projecting machinery, loosening the inner-most coil of the film enough so that it can be pulled through the machine without undue strains or twists. After passing through the projector it is received on a standard reel in the ordinary manner, and from this reel may be fed directly into the machine again without rewinding.

Camera for Nature Photography

For the benefit of the nature photographer who after cautiously approaching a bird or animal is often unable to get a picture because his camera cannot be adjusted quickly enough, a new motion picture camera has been invented which is suspended from an aluminum frame in such a way that it levels itself from its own weight almost instantly. This camera is strong and light, weighing twenty pounds. The camera and tripod head are formed in a single unit and may be placed on a rock or stump and the tripod disregarded. A motor device is provided which may be attached to the camera so that the instrument may be held in the hand when it is possible to obtain a proper support. An important feature of the camera is a panoramic arrangement which allows it to be swung in any direction with steadiness and uniformity of speed and to take pictures straight up or straight down if desired. A special gate behind the lens keeps the films from being touched during its passage from the dispensing to the receiving retort, a feature which prevents the films from being scratched by dust or other substances.

With the engaging of Marie Doro at the Fine Arts Films studio, the list of favorites under contract now includes DeWolf Hopper, playing in "Don Quixote;" Helen Ware, playing in "Cross Currents;" Douglas Fairbanks in "His Picture in the Papers;" Jane Grey and Tully Marshall in "Mother of Seven," and many others.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 1022 LONGACRE BUILDING
Forty-second Street and Broadway
Telephone Bryant 7030

Editors: ED J. MOCK, PAUL H. WOODRUFF

Associate Editors
Nell G. Coward — Thomas C. Kennedy
John C. Garrett — Charles R. Condon

Advertising Manager: ALLEN L. HAASE

This publication is free and independent of all business or house connections or control. No manufacturer or supply dealer, or their stockholders or representatives, have any financial interest in Motography or any voice in its management or policy.

Entered at Chicago Post Office as Second Class Mail Matter

MOTOGRAPHY

THE MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY
ELECTRICITY MAGAZINE CORPORATION
MONADNOCK BUILDING
CHICAGO, ILL.
Telephone: Harrison 3014—All Departments

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS

Changes of advertising copy should reach the office of publication not less than fifteen days in advance of date of issue. Regular date of issue, every Saturday. New advertisements will be accepted up to within ten days of date of issue, but proof of such advertisements can not be shown in advance of publication.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE

Per year $3.00

Canada - - - - Per year, $4.00
Foreign - - - - Per year, 5.00
Single copy - - - - - - .10c

FOR SALE AT ALL NEWS STANDS

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS

REMITTANCES — Remittances should be made by check, New York draft or money order, in favor of MOTOGRAPHY. Foreign subscriptions may be remitted direct by International Postal Money Order.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS — The old address should be given as well as the new, and notice should be received two weeks in advance of the desired change.

If Your News Dealer Will Not Supply You — Please Notify Us

Volume XIV CHICAGO, NOVEMBER 13, 1915 Number 20

The Story Writers' Opportunity

A FICTION writer succeeds in the literary field by reason of two characteristics—a good, practical imagination and the ability to put words together. The writer of motion picture scenarios needs but one of these—the imagination. A good many literary workers get by with only the word-fitting ability; that is, their style and construction are so good that people enjoy reading them even when they show little or no imagination. On the other hand, there are thousands of men and women with fiction-imaginations who remain unknown because they lack the talent for word-building. Myriads of good story-plots are lost to the world because their inventors cannot properly set them down.

It has been suggested that the motion picture scenario offers the ideal outlet for these imprisoned stories. But that is not wholly true. We said the fiction writer must have a good, practical imagination; and that means, to a certain extent, a trained imagination. While the sale of stories depends largely on the technique of their writing, the inventive faculties of their authors are trained and made practical by the very act of weaving a lucid sequence of story events. The imagination which is not accustomed to the control of logical exposition cannot produce a practical story for either type or film.

For the better of its subjects, therefore, the motion picture is still dependent upon the fiction writer who is already successful in the magazine and novel field. His actual writing talent is useless, but it is the only safe criterion of his ability to construct a logical story.

If there were dire need, a plan might be worked out for educating brilliant but untrained imaginations in the art of film writing. That does not mean conducting a scenario school. It merely means taking the trouble to drill the embryo writer in the technique of the studio, so that his action may flow evenly and uninterruptedly through the hands of the producer. Such training comes unconsciously to those associated with the work of picture making. That is why so many publicity men, players, even clerks in the employ of film manufacturers, who have never in their lives tried to write fiction, blossom forth suddenly with scenarios of undoubted worth and excellence.

Between the two, and with the imaginative faculty equal, the man or woman familiar with studio practice but without any writing experience will make a better scenario than the trained fiction writer without knowledge of studio usages. Therefore to obtain the best possible film stories it is necessary to combine the virtues of both. The successful writer of magazine fiction who will familiarize himself with the production of pictures, so that he can mentally follow every move of the director, is bound to make good scenarios. And in that work there is opportunity for writers that few of them realize.

Broadly considered, the prices paid for scenarios today average higher than those paid by the magazines for stories. It is difficult to make comparisons; for most publications pay so much a word, and have definite standards of excellence established by long experience, while the film manufacturer must pay by merit only and is forced to do considerable editing before the script can be used. It may not be generally known, but the editor of a fiction magazine does mighty little editing in the ordinary sense of the word. A story that needs doctoring before it can be printed is usually rejected. The scenario editor who adopted such a course would run out of material in a week. The accepted magazine story is a finished product, ready for the printer. The accepted scenario often is little more than an idea; the script that can go to the studio floor without change is a rarity. Considering this condition, we repeat that the pay for scenarios averages higher than the pay for magazine stories. The complaint of some writers that the price of scenarios is inadequate is answered by the counter-complaint that their work is only half done. The perfect script demands a good price.

Original scenarios, written expressly for pictures, at present come in the main from two classes of writers: The unsuccessful class who hope to find a market that the magazine field has not granted them, and the very successful class who are actually invited by the manufacturers to contribute. The former occasionally land a fair script at a mediocre price. The latter get bigger prices than they deserve in many cases because of the lack of competition. Without counting the work done by salaried employes of the producing companies, there is a third, numerically inconsiderable, class of experienced though perhaps not famous writers, who have made an honest and thorough study of studio requirements and are now cashing in on the new work. We need more of them.

The present output of films is tremendous, and there is no abatement in sight. Artistic requirements are constantly ascending. The use of scenarioized magazine stories and novels is limited and cannot be satisfactorily extended. The work of a staff of employes cannot maintain the necessary freshness and novelty, any more than could similar work on a high grade magazine. Even the famous writers at high prices must become inadequate. A middle class of writers, the kind that make the success of the popular magazines, must develop.

Magazine writers are interested in their work. That is the first requisite to success beyond the hack-writing stage. They are enthusiastic enough to study their markets, to know the peculiarities of editors and the styles of publications. The business of motion picture writing demands an equal enthusiasm and interest. Those who give it that attention will succeed. Those who persist in regarding the scenario as a by-product, an outlet for rejected stuff, will continue to complain about the market. There are too many who hold that attitude; for there is a big opportunity wide open for the writers who can hear it knock at the door.

One of the novel features of the railway exhibits at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition is a motion picture theater made of two standard steel passenger cars. The cars have been placed on parallel tracks about twelve and a half feet apart from center to center, and the adjacent sides of the cars removed. The space between them has been bridged over with temporary side sills, laid with standard car flooring, the side sills being tied together with a few temporary steel braces and tie rods. The roof has been filled out to cover the gap between the cars, and the final result is an excellent moving picture theater with four rows of comfortable, upholstered seats, and window panes ornamented with various designs symbolic of the country through which the railroad runs.

Just a Moment Please

Picked out your Thanksgiving turkey yet?

—

Thanks. Neither have we.

—

If you suddenly hear that we've left for Hattiesburg, Miss., don't be surprised.

It won't be a love for the sunny south that will drag us thither, but the following description of the seats in the Lomo theater as published in the News of that burg.

All the seats in The Lomo are thirty-one inches apart, providing ample leg room for the long, tall man who suffers misery in the average theater. Eighteen inches is the generally observed distance. In the old Lomo, where the seats were very comfortable, the distance was twenty-eight inches. In the new Lomo the distance is three inches greater than this, so it will not be possible for anyone to become cramped.

—

Now, how could the manager of the Nomo have possibly known that we're six feet one, seventy-three inches, (count em yourself) in height, and that full forty-nine of these inches are taken up in the distance between our great trochanter and the condyles? (Note to Lloyd and Pete:—Try those two on your dictionaries!)

—

SPEAKING OF TRIPLE PLAYS

That old time favorite, "Tinker to Evers to Chance," has a modern equivalent in "Hasse to Finn to McLaughlin," but the joke is too good to explain in more detail.

—

Nearly every exhibitor is familiar with the critic's oft repeated reference to "a gripping scene," but probably never has this w. k. phenomenon been exhibited to better advantage than in the illustration below which is a reproduction of a still picture submitted by the Ocean Film Corporation as a scene from a forthcoming release as yet unnamed. Give a look!

—

WHICH SHALL WE BELIEVE?

From Julian M. Solomon, self-confessed publicity expert, president of the King Amusement Company, publisher of Reel News, Philadelphia representative of the Motion Picture News, manager of the Susquehanna theater, and editor of the Susquehanna Theater News, we receive the following "scoop" story by wireless:—

The friends of Pete Schmid, better known as the "Terrible Teuton" or the Celery Sheriff, are very much grieved to learn that he was defeated in his home town of Grantwood, N. J., by a vote of 9 to 3. Pete would have received another vote, but the thirteenth voter of the town had rheumatism and could not get to the polls.

We wish to tender our sympathy and to assure Pete that his press copy about Morosco Photoplays will be just as acceptable even though he cannot sign his name as Sheriff.

The same mail brought from the esteemed "Pete" himself a flowery billet doux which was concluded by the following post-script:—

Don't know if you denied that Sheriff story about me, but take it from me, 'taint so. You were one of the very few that did not fall for that dream invented in the mind of an ambitious youth who someday hopes to be a press agent.

—

Is there treason in the camp?

—

We wonder. N. G. C.

Some Current Releases Reviewed

Universal's "The Frame Up"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

A GRIPPINGLY powerful story of politics and intrigue is "The Frame Up," which Universal will offer this week as its Broadway Universal feature. The play features George Fawcett, legitimate star of no little renown, and he is ably supported by a company which includes Maude

The mayor denounces his wife.

George, Harry Carter, Albert MacQuarrie, Olive Golden and Lule Warrington.

Otis Turner is credited with both the adaptation of the story for the screen and the direction of the production, and he has made a finished job of it. The story is well plotted, develops naturally to a stupendous climax and though of such a character that the Chicago Board of Censorship would only permit it to be shown under a "pink permit," is not unconventional enough to harm the morals of anyone.

Mr. Fawcett, the legitimate star who was selected to play the principal role, that of a mayor who could not be purchased by a political boss, while not in any sense a matinee idol type of star makes of Luke Simms a most convincing sort of character, one whom screen patrons will admire and respect, and a man big enough to overlook the shortcomings of others, once he understands their weaknesses.

The picture begins with a number of scenes depicting a picnic given by Luke Simms, alderman from a certain city ward. In these Mr. Fawcett is easily able to register the sort of an individual he is, and one learns that he has a fondness for children and is exceedingly plain in his tastes, preferring buttermilk to champagne.

Richard Sears, known as "The Power" in city politics, is seeking a candidate for the mayoralty and when he finds that none of his henchmen stands an outside chance of being elected, he authorizes his minions to bring about the nomination and election of Simms, believing that after the latter's election he can make him a tool. The election over, Sears proceeds without delay to test his power, but discovers with dismay that Simms cannot be controlled.

When the new mayor vetoes a street car ordinance that Sears has arranged to have passed by the council, the two men clash and Sears, who has discovered that Simms is without a wife, arranged to have Florida Everett, a woman he has been keeping, fascinate the recently elected mayor. The woman is successful in her mission and ere long becomes Mrs. Simms, much to the satisfaction of Sears.

Meanwhile Nellie, Sears' stenographer, falls a victim to her employer's wiles and after suddenly disappearing from home and her employer's office is next seen in a maternity hospital. Ned, her brother, is much distressed over Nellie's absence, but Sears replies to all inquiries made at his office that the girl left his employ months before. After losing heavily on the ponies, Ned is induced to try his hand at burglary, but while attempting to rob Mayor Simms' home is captured, recognized and later given a chance to turn over a new leaf when he is made the mayor's secretary.

Finding Florida, now Mrs. Simms, is unable to induce her husband to sign the street car ordinance, Sears commands her to call at his country home at a late hour at night. He there holds her prisoner until the following morning and then threatens to reveal her whereabouts and disgrace her husband, unless the latter agrees to sign the ordinance. Simms, at first, refuses to credit his wife's visit to Sears, but later is convinced of the truth and after a stormy interview with the lady who bears his name, goes to call on Sears.

The two men quarrel and Sears attempts to stab the mayor but is shot down by Ned, who has learned from his sister that the politician is the man who wronged her. Simms believes himself guilty of murder, since he has held a pistol in his hand when Sears dropped dead, but after being acquitted at his trial, due to the story told by his wife on the witness stand, learns that Ned shot Sears. The sincere love of Florida, exhibited during the stormy days of the trial, convinces Simms that she cannot be all bad and the picture ends with a reunion between husband and wife.

"The Crimsom Wing"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward.

ON NOVEMBER 1, the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company will offer as an extra feature photoplay on the V. L. S. E. program a spectacular picturization of "The Crimson Wing" written by Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, Chicago and Washington society leader and litterateur.

The picture, which is a story of warfare and utilizes hundreds of supernumeraries, is produced under the direction of E. H. Calvert, who himself enacts one of the leading roles, that of Count Ludwig von Leun-Walram.

While the picture portrays war with stirring vividness it in no way takes sides with either faction and the war scenes serve only as a thrilling background for an interesting love story.

The picture is unique in that many of the scenes were taken on the estates of Chicago's wealthiest citizens, and many of the backgrounds pictured are views on the grounds of not only Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, the author, but also glimpses of the homes and lawns of such notables as Harold and Cyrus McCormick, Orville Babcock, Edward S. Moore,

A tense moment in "The Crimson Wing."

James Ward Thorne, Scott Durand and Howard Shaw. Several hundred feet of film were also exposed in France and Germany, showing actual armies in their maneuvers, and lend convincing realism to many of the battle scenes. Such bits as an actual Zeppelin rising from the ground and real French troops mobolizing add much to the pictured story.

An all-star cast is used in presenting the picture, for besides Mr. Calvert, who plays the leading role, Beverly Bayne, Ruth Stonehouse, Bryant Washburn, Betty Scott, Harry Dunkinson and John Cossar have important roles.

As the story runs Count Ludwin von Leun-Walram, an army officer, meets Marguerite Clarion, a famous actress, and is surprised when the girl falls in love with him. Ludwig rejects her advances, but does so in such a kindly fashion that she only admires him the more.

Later, the count meets Marcelle de Lambach, daughter of a general of a neighboring country's army, and falls deeply in love with this girl, whom he had known in childhood.

Ere their marriage can be consummated, however, war breaks out and Count Ludwig is called back to his country, while Marcelle, his fiancee, who is intensely patriotic, goes to the front with her father. In one of the interesting battle scenes the girl leads a troop of soldiers against a scouting party of the enemy, when the commander of the troop is killed in battle. As a result of this incident the girl is captured by Count Ludwig's troop and after being held prisoner for a few hours is returned, under escort, to the lines of the enemy.

Meanwhile Marguerite Clarion, the actress, is ardently wooed by Paul D'Arblay, a spy, whom she thoroughly detests. D'Arblay swears that he will yet compel her to marry him and he follows her when she joins the army as a Red Cross nurse.

Later, when she finds Count Ludwig badly injured, after being shot from his horse, and takes the count to her aunt's home for the purpose of nursing him back to health, D'Arblay discovers the count's identity and swears to Marguerite that unless she will consent to immediately marry him, he will expose the count's hiding place to the enemy and denounce him as a spy.

To save Ludwig's life Marguerite promises D'Arblay, if he will withhold his information until Ludwig is restored to health, that she will be his. D'Arblay consents and a few days later Ludwig, once more himself, rejoins his troop.

D'Arblay, who has seen him depart, hastens to claim Marguerite, but upon entering the house is amazed to find her dead, she having taken poison rather than marry the man she detests.

Count Ludwig, meanwhile, at the conclusion of the war, hastens to renew his engagement with Marcelle and as the final scene fades from the screen it is easy to foresee that a wedding will shortly follow.

"The End of the Road"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward.

A PICTURE of a most unusual sort is "The End of the Road," the five-reel Mutual Master-Picture scheduled to be released on November 11, under the American brand.

From the spectacular standpoint the picture has seldom been equaled by producers of the American staff, for it contains within its five-thousand feet not only a pleasing and entertaining story, but scenic effects of a most unusual character.

For instance, there is a terrific rainstorm than envelops the old mill, pictured in the fourth reel, that for convincing reality has never been equaled. Not only are the scenes in the interior of the mill during this storm surprisingly realistic, but the exteriors, which include the striking of the old mill by a bolt of lightning and the final washing away of the foundation, resulting in the mill itself toppling into the swollen stream and being swept away by the torrent before one's very eyes, are equally good.

This is one picture in which the reviewer can positively assert that real and not imitation lightning is shown on the screen, for this reviewer knows that the American Company in its desire for realism, sent a cameraman to the roof of the Chicago studio on a stormy night and actually photographed a display of lightning. This negative was later double exposed in the scenes of the photoplay that illustrate the storm and the result is beyond all criticism.

It must not be supposed, however, that the picture depends on the spectacular element alone for its success, since Harold Lockwood and May Allison, the two leading players, ably acquit themselves in the roles assigned and are splendidly supported by such well known favorites as Helene Rosson, William Stowell, Harry Von Meter, Beatrice Van and Nan Christie.

The story, as most every producer is aware, is an adaptation of a novel and is produced under the direction of Thomas Ricketts.

Paul Harvard, the son of a wealthy northerner, goes to Carolina Pines for his health and through the instrumentality of Judge Bulstring and Doctor Sterling Duke, forms an acquaintance with Grace Wilson, a comely southern girl, who lives at Magnolia Hall, a beautiful estate. Soon after Harvard's appearance, another northerner arrives on the scene in the person of Wilbur Grant, a federal agent, who comes to run down some counterfeiters and illicit whiskey distillers, who are supposed to have their headquarters in the vicinity.

Grant strikes up an acquaintanceship with Richard Quigg, in reality the leader of the counterfeiters, but who purports to be a real estate man and actually does hold a mortgage on Magnolia Hall, Miss Wilson's home. When Grace becomes frantic over her inability to raise funds with which to pay the debt, Quigg offers to cancel the mortgage if Grace will marry him. She indignantly refuses and orders Quigg from the house.

Paul Harvard in the meantime has taken up his residence with the Tollivers, simple mountaineers, and pays some slight attention to Caroline Tolliver. One day when the girl is anxious to purchase a simple frock which a wandering peddler offers for sale, Paul supplies the money and, later, when Caroline is placed in an embarrassing position as a result of her secret marriage to Richard Quigg, gossips, who have noticed Harvard's gift to her, assume that he is the man who betrayed her.

The fight at the old mill.

Jack Tolliver, Caroline's brother, sets out to wreck vengeance upon Harvard for the wrong done his sister and lures the young northerner to an old mill used for the manufacture of the illicit whiskey, for the purpose of attacking him. When Harvard enters the mill during a terrific storm, he is attacked by those within and when a bolt of lightning strikes the structure, totally wrecking it, and all the others flee, Harvard is rescued by Grant, who has been concealed within the building, and the two escape just as the old mill, its foundation washed away, topples into the torrent and is swept down the stream. The Tollivers are at length convinced of Harvard's innocence and Jack and his sister publicly exonorate Paul of the charges made against him.

Meanwhile the mortgage on Magnolia Hall is foreclosed and Quigg demands an auction be held that he may collect payment. Harvard bids for the place against Quigg, but when he offers a check in payment is told that cash offers only will be considered. Paul immediately mounts a horse and rides to the bank to cash his check, but in his absence Quigg bids in the homestead and Paul arrives to find that the place has been sold. When Quigg presents a roll of bills in payment Grant leaps forward, seizes the money, declares his identity as a federal officer and asserting that the bills are counterfeits, arrests Quigg.

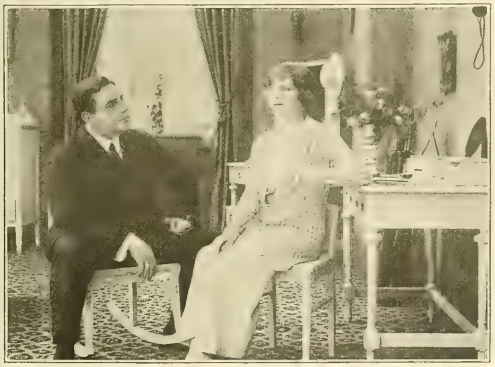
Caroline, seeing Quigg disgraced, declares that he was the man who wronged her and the unhappy real estate operator is led away to jail as Harvard turns to present the homestead he has bought to Grace Wilson, whom he plans to make his wife.



"The Sentimental Lady"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

IRENE FENWICK has a worthy vehicle in "The Sentimental Lady," a five-part George Kleine production, released through the Kleine-Edison feature service. She plays Amy Cary, the up-to-date, practical, but pronouncedly sentimental American girl, who is won by a young man who uses heroic methods to save her from an unworthy rival. Miss Fenwick's part calls for little dramatic action, the story, while dramatic in spots, being in a light vein. Miss Fenwick's Amy Cary is a self-reliant, spirited and wholly appealing young woman. She is plentifully active, but never over-acts, and is refreshingly natural.

The picture is founded upon the novel by Owen Davis. Two young people stranded on an island is a situation often used in pictures, and it has served the purposes of drama, farce and comedy. In this story comedy predominates and the situation is aptly used. "The Sentimental Lady" moves along at a good pace and during the course of the plot's unfolding there is much enjoyable comedy and interesting action.

It is an outdoor story and plays in the Adirondack mountains. The scenes have attractive mountainous settings. The scenery is really pretty and gives the story a breezy, a refreshing air. The photography is thoroughly good and the work of an able camera man is most noticeable in the scenes on the lake, where the lighting effect is splendid. What few interior settings there are show good taste.

A scene from "The Sentimental Lady."

Jack Devereaux is cast as Bob Nelson, who takes the advice of a friend and "pulls the cave-man stuff" to save Amy from an undesirable union with the insincere Norman Van Aulsten. On the principle that "the end justifies the means" Bob's strenuous methods are not to be looked upon with disfavor. The supporting cast includes Frank Belcher, Richie Ling, John Davidson, Anna Reader, Ben L. Taggart, and Della Connor.

"Pennington's Choice"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN'S latest appearance is in a play written around his especial talents. In "Pennington's Choice," he boxes, wrestles, and makes love, all in the most approved style. Mr. Bushman's host of admirers know full well how effectively he does the latter, and while most everyone has heard of his athletic skill, few have had the opportunity to see him box or wrestle. It may be said that his reported ability in these, the manly arts, has not been overestimated.

Mr. Bushman gives a good account of himself in a lively bout with no less a fistic celebrity than James J. Jeffries. In addition to its suitability to the star, "Pennington's Choice" is a well constructed and entertaining romance with a touch of melodrama. The introduction of a twin sister who is quite as pretty and charming as the girl Pennington is striving to win adds weight to the plot. At first it seemed as though the critically observed young man was going to yield to the temptation of having a flirtation with his fiancee's sister.

Penn and "Marie" come to be good friends.

But he remains loyal and everything turns out well for him. In the end he discovers that Marie is none other than Eugenia who desired to test his love. The story is an adaptation from the novel by John C. Culley and was produced by the Quality Pictures Corporation, under the direction of William Bowman. The film, in five parts, will be released by Metro on November 8. The action has a delightfully atmospheric setting. It is of particular scenic beauty and the photography is of the best.

Briefly, the story is of a wealthy society idler, a former college athlete, who is put to a test of his physical courage and loyalty to the girl he desires to marry by her father. The arrangement is that he is to spend a month in the mountains, where Blondeau lives, and weather the difficulties of life there. Blondeau and the girl plan matters and the test is a thorough one. After fighting two men, who have continually dogged him, into submission and giving other proof that he is worthy of Eugenia, Blondeau gives his consent to the marriage.

Beverly Bayne plays oppostie Mr. Bushman. The co-starring of these two experienced screen artists is highly successful, for the material provided them is skillfully used. Miss Bayne has the part of Eugenia, the girl for whom Pennington is willing to give up everything. She has opportunities and handles them adequately. Wellington Playter, Lester Cuneo, Helen Dunbar, Morris Cytron, H. O'Dell and William Farris are in the supporting cast. James J. Jeffries walks into the picture carrying a deer over his shoulder and a rifle in his hand, and later he appears in ring costume and does things the renowned Jeff is famous for. Taken as a whole, "Pennington's Choice" is an excellent vehicle for Francis X. Bushman.

"The Seventh Noon"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward.

THOUGH Ernest Glendenning, a handsome young star of the legitimate stage, has the leading role; though Winifred Kingston, a good-looking actress of undoubted talent is seen in the role opposite Glendenning, and though the supporting cast is large and apparently well selected and the photography above criticism, "The Seventh Noon," the Mutual Master-Picture scheduled for release this week, doesn't seem to come up to the high standard set for the Master-Picture releases and faithfully maintained up to this week. At least that seemed to be the concensus of opinion of the many who saw it in the projection room of the Chicago Mutual office.

It is well nigh impossible to tell specifically what is the matter with the production, for the story is interesting, the players well chosen, the photography most excellent and the stage settings appropriate, but somehow it fails to convince. Doubtless, however, packed houses all over the country will view the picture with complete satisfaction and go away proclaiming it "a masterpiece," thus proving how worthless is a reviewer's opinion of the worth of a picture.

The story was adapted from a novel from the pen of Frederick Orin Bartlett and tells how Peter Donaldson, a young lawyer without clients, upon learning of a subtle poison invented by his friend, Professor Barstow, which is guaranteed to be absolutely fatal at the end of seven days, deliberately swallows a glassful of the deadly stuff and then sets out to spend the seven days remaining to him in the most exciting fashion possible.

Donaldson is convinced of the potency of the poison by witnessing an experiment of Barstow's upon a dog. He sees the puppy fall over limp and lifeless precisely seven days following the administration of the poison, and, satisfied that he has found a sure and certain way of ending his life without pain, he helps himself to a vial of the poison, and precisely at noon one day swallows the potion in a toast to death.

Drawing all his money from the bank he sets out to "really live" for the seven days remaining to him. Going to a hotel he engages an expensive suite and then descends to the cafe for a meal. There he is attracted by the strange actions of a couple at an adjoining table, one a young man who is apparently dazed and dopey, the other a beautiful girl. Later he rescues the young lady when her companion hurls her into a waiting auto, and leaping into the driver's seat throws on the power and speeds away.

As a result of this adventure he learns the young woman is Ellen Arsdale and the man her brother Ben, who is a user of opium. Ben escapes from his home that night and the morning papers chronicle a robbery in the neighborhood, the only clue to the perpetrator being a handkerchief bearing in one corner the initials "B.A." Both Donaldson and Ellen believe Ben to be guilty and set out to find him.

Donaldson, after many adventures, finds Ben in an opium den and returns him to his sister, repentant and promising never to indulge his evil habit again. When Donaldson, overcome by Ellen's gratitude to him for rescuing her brother, is about to propose he remembers he has but two days to live and rushes from the house. As he leaves he encounters Police Inspector Saule and learns that the latter is about to arrest Ben for the robbery. Knowing his hours are numbered and believing he can give Ben a real chance to reform (for he still believes Ben guilty of the theft), Donaldson confesses to Saule that it was he who committed the robbery, and is led away to jail.

Two days later Saule discovers that Jacques, the son of Marie, Ellen's housekeeper, is the guilty man, and Donaldson is released from jail. Desirous of living he rushes to the laboratory of his friend, Dr. Barstow, to seek a possible antidote for the poison he has swallowed, and is amazed to have the puppy he had previously seen rush out to meet him. Barstow explains the poison has proved ineffective, and Donaldson, glancing at his watch discovers the seventh noon has already passed and that he is still alive.

Demanding the dog which has taught him the value of life, Donaldson hurries away to ask Ellen to marry him.

The Current Triangle Bill

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward.

THIS week's offering at the Studebaker in Chicago is a fifty-fifty split of honors between the Ince and the Griffith studios, for apparently the audience found it hard to choose between Bessie Barriscale in "The Golden Claw," and Douglas Fairbanks in "Double Trouble," though one is a comedy of the broadest sort and the other a preachment with an unmistakable moral. To round out the bill two uproarious Keystone comedies are screened, the first one, entitled "The Best of Enemies," featuring Joe Weber and Lew Fields, and the other, called "Saved by Wireless," giving Mack Swain, Chester Conklin and Andrew Anderson a chance to perform their peculiar pranks.

Weber and Fields, that inimitable team of funmakers, run true to form in their Triangle-Keystone debut, and big Lew and Little Joe are at sword's points during most of the picture, though they find themselves true friends ere the comedy is ended. Joe and Lew, after quarreling over a debutante, separate, and Joe, to revenge himself upon Lew for winning the girl's heart, pretends to have been drowned by his enemy, and sees Lew lead away to prison. The murder trial is burlesque of the broadest sort, and Lew's conversion of the obstinate juror brought roars of laughter from the audience. After Lew succeeds in escaping from his cell and Joe, who replaces him, is lead into the execution chamber, events begin to move with the customary Keystone speed and end in a perfect riot of complications. Frank Griffith is credited with the direction of the production under the supervision of Sennett.

Douglas Fairbanks, who returns to the Triangle screen this week, is given far better opportunities for his style of comedy than was the case in "The Lamb." In the roles of Florian Amidon and Eugene Brassfield, Fairbanks is presented in characters of the most extreme types, Florian being a Sunday School boy of the ribbon counter type, while Eugene is a sporty politician, a plunger and a Romeo with a girl on every corner. He shifts back and forth between the two personalities with the aid of Madame Leclaire, a psychic medium, and is equally convincing in either role. As Florian he leaves home, is injured in a rough and tumble fight, and wakes up some five years later in a sporty suit of clothes to learn that he is wealthy, a candidate for mayor, engaged to Elizabeth Waldron, and strong for Daisy Scarlett, a strawberry blonde, while his name has been changed from Florian to Eugene.

Bessie Barriscale and Frank Mills in one of the big scenes in "The Golden Claw."

After winning the election, throwing down his sporty associates, ditching Daisy and happily combining the suave Florian and the businesslike Eugene personalities, thus obviating further need for the assistance of Madame Leclaire, he marries Elizabeth and settles down to live happily ever afterward, much to everyone's satisfaction. The feature, which was adapted from a novel by Herbert Quick, has been splendidly produced by W. Christy Cabanne.

To Olga Grey falls the role of Madame Leclaire and she plays it most capably. Margery Wilson is Elizabeth Waldron in a quiet unassuming fashion, and Gladys Brockwell makes Daisy Scarlett a most distinct personality. Richard Cummings portrays the role of Judge Blodgett, a friend of Florian's, and Monroe Salisbury, W. E. Lowry, Tom Kennedy, Kate Toncray and Lillian Langdon each has a small part. Special praise is also due the individual who chose the subtitles for this subject.

Douglas Fairbanks during one of his hilarious moments in "Double Trouble."

In "Saved By Wireless," produced by Walter Wright, diplomatic intrigue runs riot. To begin with there's the code book with all its secrets. This book becomes even more important to the plot than the well known "paapers" which used to figure in the melodramas. The chief spy, his trusty aid and their accomplice succeed in stealing the code book and throwing suspicion upon the innocent hero, who is eloping with the beautiful heroine. Ere the chief villain meets his death and the beautiful heroine is rescued from certain destruction, automobiles, motor cycles, power boats, light houses, dynamite bombs, some jagged wave-washed rocks and a whole squad of Keystone police are hurled into the plot and each one brings laughs by the score.

Weber and Fields in "The Best of Enemies."

"The Golden Claw," most aptly titled, is a story of a greedy woman who was raised from childhood to believe that money is all powerful and that without money life is scarcely worth living, but who comes to understand, in later years, that love is worth far more than gold and precious jewels.

Bessie Barriscale, as Lillian Hillary, is above criticism, and Truly Shattuck, as Lucy Hillary, Lillian's mother, is the exact type needed for the important part she portrays. After the few scenes needed to register the genteel poverty of Lillian and her mother, we see Lillian deliberately choose between the wealth and power of Bert Werden, a wholesome millionaire, and the riches and position of Graham Henderson, another millionaire, though one of an unscrupulous type.

The girl elects to become the bride of Werden and in time turns him into a mere moneygrubbing machine, whose sole aim and ambition in life is to pile up more riches. When his fortune is suddenly swept away, Werden gamely sets out to win a new fortune and succeeds in a big fashion, but in so doing neglects his wife and gives Henderson, who has all these years waited his chance, an opportunity of again seeking Lillian's admiration. The story is vividly told and will undoubtedly bring hime its lesson to many a man and woman who sees it on the screen. Photographically it is a gem, while its cast is readily seen to be an all star one.

"All for a Girl"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

MISS RENEE KELLY is cast in the leading role of the Nielsen Film five-reel production, "All for a Girl." This heart interest photodrama is from the play of the same name written by Rupert Hughes. Miss Kelly, as Antoinette Hoadley, the "$10,000,000 heiress," is supported by a strong cast including E. G. Longman as Harold Jepson, the son of Arthur Jepson, a railroad magnate who is ruined; Roy Applegate as Arthur Jepson; Sue Balfour as Mrs. Van Epsen and Frank De Vernon as Mr. Dinwiddie.

Arthur Jepson, a railroad magnate, is caught in the stock trap set by Dinwiddie and Briggs, and is ruined. His son, Harold, reared in luxury, is left penniless. Antoinette Hoadley, the "$10,000,000 heiress," becomes disgusted with the boldness of the men who seek to marry her for her money, and with her aunt, Mrs. Van Epsen, goes to a farm boarding house and there poses as a poor woman.

Mrs. Van Epsen persuades Harold to appear on the scene and win the girl's hand by professing to believe that she is poor. Soon after they arrive at the farm house Mrs. Van Epsen receives word from Arthur that he will not come. She leaves with her maid, and Harold, seeing them depart, believes the maid to be Miss Hoadley. Later he meets the heiress and they fall in love with each other and he secures a position at $25 a week and when she consents to live on his earnings alone they are married. Some time later he enters into a railroad deal which makes him a wealthy man.

"The Menace of the Mute"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE John T. McIntyre "Ashton-Kirke, Investigator" stories, in their ready adaptability to the screen, are worthy of the skillful production of Arnold Daly and Ashley Miller and a cast of notable players headed by Mr. Daly, who plays the name part. The second adventure is entitled "The Menace of the Mute" and in every respect it is qual, of not superior to "An Affair of Three Nations" which was the first of the series. Judging from the first two of these pictures the Arnold Daly Productions will hold a conspicuous place on the Gold Rooster program.

In "The Menace of the Mute," a murder mystery, preceded by developments which make it food for much speculation, and command a close attention to the action, is unraveled by the detective who is a student of ancient lore and who delights in solving problems that prove too intricate for the police. The detective finds enough circumstantial evidence to fasten the crime on two people, who later are found to be innocent, but these he disregards and in a most logical manner finds the guilty parties.

Though the spectator is given a clear insight into the plot and its characters which makes the ending understandable without cumbersome explanations, the element of mystery is carried to the end. Detective stories depend for their interest, of course, on this preserved mystery, but some facts concerning the final outcome must be shown for if too much must be taken for granted the interest lags, and the ending comes too suddenly and is confusing.

Arnold Daly makes admirable use of his opportunities as the observant Ashton-Kirke, and his performance stands out for its natural effect. If the role of photoplay detective has been thrust upon him, at least he has made the most of it in varying his expressions and relieving both himself and his admirers of the burden of sameness.

A tense moment in "The Menace of the Mute."

In the supporting cast Sheldon Lewis' characterization of the repelling, drunken David Hume, the man who taunts

Morris and is murdered, is the most noteworthy. Louise Rutter is a beautiful and sympathetic Edyth Vale. William Harrigan is a manly and convincing James Morris. Martin Sabin, Charles Laite and George Melville are included in the cast.

"The Truth About Helen"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

ON November 12 the Edison Company will release a four-part drama dealing with an impulsive young woman who stands to lose her good reputation through the villainy of one man and who is spared this catastrophe through the self-sacrifice of another. The title of this society-political play, written by William Addison Lathdrop, is "The Truth About Helen." The villain is of the usual sort, but the other characters are well handled by both author and players.

There are many good points about this story, it has several good situations, and at times is dramatic, but while the theme is one of possibilities it is developed conventionally. The breakdown of the eloping couple's auto, their visit to the nearest hotel and the politician who threatens to make known the embarrassing circumstances if his opponent does not withdraw, seem familiar mostly because they are treated in an ordinary manner.

Frank McGlyn directed "The Truth About Helen," and he has made rather good use of his material, the settings and locations are helpful to the action. The photography is well up to the Edison standard. Robert Conness as Hugh Graham and Grace Williams as Helen Moore have the leading parts. Both are effective. Augustus Phillips plays the role of Raoul Kent, the scapegrace and ungrateful nephew of Senator Foote. The latter part is played commendably by Bigelow Cooper. Herbert Prior, Harry Linson and Robert Brower are also in the cast.

Raoul Kent induces Helen Moore to elope with him, telling her that they will be married at a nearby town. Their auto breaks down after they have traveled a short distance and Kent takes her to the roadhouse. Her friend, Hugh Graham, arrives there to attend a political meeting, and saves Helen from Kent, who shows his real intentions. As Graham and Helen leave the place they are seen by Robert Marsden, Hugh's political opponent.

The next day Marsden calls on Graham and threatens to cause a scandal if Graham does not withdraw from the contest. Graham agrees. Helen leaves the town to pay a visit to her father's friend, Senator Foote. Kent is Foote's nephew. He has contracted debts and accepts a bribe to make known the contents of the Senator's new bill. In the night he attempts to steal the document. He is discovered by Helen and in a struggle is shot with his own revolver. After his death the truth about Helen comes to light and she marries Graham.

"The Diamond From the Sky"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

THE interesting North American serial, "The Diamond From the Sky," is now drawing to a close. Chapter twenty-nine, "A Deal With Destiny," serves to develop the plot of this story to an amazing degree. This tale of the family heirloom which caused much unhappiness has been very interesting, and motion picture fans are eagerly looking forward to a $10,000 sequel which is to come.

Chapter twenty-nine was especially noteworthy for its abundance of beautiful scenes and excellent photography. Every detail has been carefully worked out. The gypsy wedding is not only splendidly produced, but is most interesting, and one of the biggest settings ever seen on the screen is the scene showing Stanley Hall in England.

Destiny plays a great part in our lives. Arthur Stanley has dealt with destiny and that his life was lost was a certainty when we last saw him falling through the air in his aeroplane, but by some miracle his life was saved. Destiny had intended him to live, renounce his old associates, give up the drug habit and marry the girl of his dreams—Esther.

Arthur is found by the gypsy band and Esther, who realizes that Hagar is at the point of death, urges him to come with her to bid his mother farewell. They arrive just in time, and the gypsy mother places Esther's hand in Arthur's and with her dying breath blesses them. Then the gypsy band start back through the Blue Ridge and the journey across a nation's breadth was a happy one for Arthur and Esther.

Blair Stanley and his wife, who was Vivian Marston, arrive in England. They have the "Diamond From the Sky," and feel perfectly safe to take up their life at Stanley Hall, because they think that Arthur Stanley was killed. Detective Blake, knowing that Esther is the rightful heir to Stanley Hall, goes to the gypsy camp and there is told by her that she does not care for wealth, but intends to live the life of a gypsy and remain with Arthur.

The wedding festivities for Esther and Arthur.

In London Blair and Vivian are received with some ill-grace by Marmaduke Smythe, and in due time Blair is inducted into the house of lords. The time comes when they are to be presented at court at the coronation of King George V. and to this Blair will wear "The Diamond From the Sky." He and Vivian are busy with court tailors and dressmakers, while day by day the suspicions and distrusts between them and Marmaduke Smythe grows in intensity.

Meanwhile, in the fastness of the Blue Ridge there is a royal wedding, the nuptials of royalty in Romany, King Arthur marries Queen Esther and gypsies from all over the land gather for the event. There is a Maypole dance, music, the vans are garlanded, the little children strew flowers and Quabba leads the gypsy musicians.

DeVaux, who is in London, discovering that Blair Stanley has "The Diamond From the Sky," manages to gain entrance to Stanley Hall and secretes himself in the armor of Sir Goeffrey Stanley in Agincourt. Blair Stanley, clad in his regal robes, ready for the coronation and with the jewel gleaming on his throat, descends the stairs. The mailed arm is slowly uplifted, bringing down the battle mace with smashing force upon the yet uncoronated head of Blair Stanley. The figure in armor bends over the crumpled, bleeding figure and draws away the "Diamond From the Sky."

"The Come Back of Percy"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward.

AS the third offering of the Bloom Center Chronicles, the new series of comedies being presented to the public by the Selig Polyscope Company, a two-reel subject entitled "The Come-Back of Percy" will be released on Monday, November 8.

The story of this particular chronicle shifts back and forth from the present to the past, this change in time being necessary to show Percy before his "come-back" and the reasons therefor. Many of the characters already introduced to the public in the earlier numbers of the series are again in evidence, among them being Constable Plum, Postmaster Ira Pash, Miss Selina Tubbs, Druggist Phil Pickle, Chubby Green and Johnny West.

Photographically the picture is all that can be desired, though from a comedy standpoint it can scarcely be said to be up to the standard set by the first Chronicle. On account, however, of the many scenes depicting the adventures and pranks of a number of typical young Americans, the offering should go big in houses that cater particularly to children and many a staid old businessman will find recollections of his own boyhood coming to mind as he witnesses the scenes at the old swimming hole, the incident of the pirate crew and the joke played upon the young lovers in the hammock.

Percy Pinkham, smartly dressed, debonair and self-possessed, is seen descending from the train at the Bloom Center station as the story opens, and Percy promptly proceeds to hunt up a number of old-time acquaintances and without introducing himself boldly assaults each and every one of them. After the indignant victims have vented their wrath in words, they assemble en masse about the corpulent form of Constable Plum and insist that he, as the leading representative of law and order in Bloom Center, proceed without delay to arrest the young man who has terrorized the community.

A scene from "The Chronicles of Bloom Center."

Percy is found in conversation with the pretty editor of the Bloom Center Bugle and upon being asked the reason for his pugnacious behavior, proceeds to recall to each of his victims an incident of the long ago in which he suffered indignities at their hands.

To one he mentions the time when he was whipped because a lot of the other boys had gone swimming without the consent of their respective mothers; to another he recalls the moment when a base ball was hurled through the drug store window and he was left to face the indignant druggist, while to still others he pictures the cutting of a hammock rope when two lovers were blissfully spooning, the kidnapping of himself when he was supposed to be guarding his baby sister, and the taunts he endured when he said an affectionate farewell to the tiny maid who now has grown into the pretty editress of the Bugle.

As Percy unfolds his story each victim is made to feel that his punishment was deserved, though all are frank to confess that they never dreamed Percy would "come back" to wreak vengeance upon them. Percy adds the final touch to his story by presenting his card which announces that he is the champion lightweight pugilist of the world.

As the final scene fades from the screen the pretty editress of the Bugle makes him an offer to become a reporter on the local weekly, and Percy, who in the long ago had much admired the winsome miss, promptly accepts.

"A Butterfly on the Wheel"

Reviewed by Hugh Hoffman

ANOTHER of the Schuberts' former stage successes is offered in this five-part production of the World Film Corporation. It is scheduled for release Monday, November 8. It looks like another World Film success. The skill with which it is produced is so noticeable that a moving picture man sometimes finds himself admiring the technique of the director, Maurice Tourneur, as much as the story or the acting.

In theme the story is rather trite; that of an innocent wife compromised with an admirer through the underhanded work of a female mischief maker. The young wife through her husband's great application to his business finds herself lonely and drifts dangerously near to divorce. If the story has a moral it is that business men should knock off work at six o'clock and go home and entertain the wife, no matter how many important deals are on, or take the consequences.

The master hand of the director is plainly visible at all times. The settings, both interior and exterior, are very ornate but in perfect good taste and in keeping with the story. Holbrook Blinn as the deeply engrossed business man is perfectly suited to the part and he puts it over in the most convincing way. Vivian Martin as the doll wife is also happily cast and contrasts well with Mr. Blinn for the purposes of the story. John Hines does some clever work in the juvenile part. George Ralph as the guilty lover is quite effective, and June Elvidge handles a heavy part in a most artistic way.

The big punch in this picture is a theater fire. A setting showing the auditorium of a theater from various angles is one of the biggest things of its kind that has ever been done, and there is no doubt that all who see it will be duly impressed with its magnitude. Several hundred extra people in evening clothes took part in the theater scenes, all of which are as realistic as can be. On a general summary it is a good strong feature and one that any one will feel well repaid in spending the time and money to see.

"Should a Wife Forgive?"

Reviewed by George W. Graves

CONSIDERING the title question, the impression, after seeing this picture, is that she decidedly should not. Such is the extent of our wrath inspired by the deeds of Jack Holmes, practically abandoning the wife who has given him money and a beautiful child, for the affections of a bare-shouldered dance-hall entertainer. Lillian Lorraine, in this role, however, is not without her charms, and they make it easier for us to understand Jack's supreme coldness and indifference towards his affectionate wife, even though it may be difficult for some to comprehend the wife's silent submission to the fate that befalls her.

This is an Equitable Features Corporation production, in five reels. Some of the dramatic situations are very compelling. The several different types of humanity represented have been chosen with great care: each member of the cast proves himself to be ideal for his part. Lillian Lorraine attains the ends of conviction and reality as La Belle Rose, but some of her laurels should properly be shared with Mabel Van Buren, who makes a decided impression as Mary Holmes. In fact, it seems that the latter gets more sympathy, although she is not by any means the only one wronged. Henry King, as Jack Holmes, participates in the rendition of the story as the chief cause of trouble. As well as being causative he is also effective in the results obtained.

Jack Holmes, prosperous on his wife's money, becomes infatuated with La Belle Rose, a dance-hall entertainer, and his affections for his wife, Mary, decrease. To forget her troubles, Mary accompanies her mother to the theater where La Belle Rose is playing and is surprised to see Jack there, as he is supposed to be out of town. Later she witnesses his infatuation for the actress at a restaurant, and her suspicions are justified. She then learns from the manager that Jack owns Rose's show—the deposition of a large amount of money she (Mary) had given him some time before. Finally Mary visits Rose in the sumptuous dwelling that Alfred Bedford, a wealthy young admirer, has placed at her disposal. In the guise of newspaper reporter Mary finds out all she needs to know, i. e., that Rose, thinking Jack unmarried, has accepted his proposal.

The dance hall beauty and her two infatuated lovers.

Mary loses no time in writing to Rose, telling her that she is Jack's wife, and that her's is the money that Jack has been spending so freely. The letter lies on Rose's desk for some time, but is read while Jack is calling on her that evening. A dramatic scene follows, and Rose writes a note stating that she is ending her life. She then tries to get Holmes to do the same thing, proposing that they die together. At this moment Bedford, her other lover, rushes in with drawn revolver. Holmes turns out the lights and there is a struggle in the dark, in which Rose is shot, and lies apparently dead. The men tumble out of the house in a frenzy and Bedford tells Holmes that he intended to kill him, not Rose. The two men are saved from arrest because the note Rose left on her desk points to attempted suicide. Rose, at a hospital, lives with the hope of becoming Sister of Charity. Holmes begs Mary to take him back, but the wife informs him it is too late. Then Holmes starts forth to win the battle of regaining his self-respect, and to perhaps be, some time in the future, worthy of his wife and child.

"The Turn of the Road"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE author of the five-part Blue Ribbon Feature, "The Turn of the Road," released through V. L. S. E. on November 1, has concerned herself more with characters than plot. Isabel M. Johnston, who wrote the story, has sketched a group of wholly human and distinctly interesting people, and while they move through a story made up of familiar material which is familiarly handled, these characters are convincing in their strength or weakness, as the case may be. With such interesting characters and a cast of such efficient players, "The Turn of the Road" deserves a place among the best V. L. S. E. features.

The story deals with a devoted husband who becomes infatuated with his wife's school chum. The "girl" is a born flirt, who considers no one in seeking the fulfillment of her desire to attract and play with the affections of men. It takes an automobile accident and a fire to bring about happiness for all. The wife is one of the sanest women ever dealt with in a screen drama. She makes a sacrifice to some purpose when she pockets her woman's pride and in doing so saves her husband from himself.

Too much praise cannot be given the cast, whose members interpret the parts with rare good judgment. Virginia Pearson has a part filled with opportunities and difficulties in Marcia, the temptress. The part demands much, but in every instance Miss Pearson is equal to the occasion. As the light-hearted flirt, in the love scene where she and John agree to elope and in her actions after the loss of her reason, she is artistically expressive and convincing.

Scene from Vitagraph's "The Turn of the Road."

Joseph Kilgour gives a forceful impersonation of John King, the husband, who elopes with Marcia. King eases his conscience with the thought that he has reached "The Turn of the Road," and that his wife, while faithful and of noble character, neglects him in her devotion to their child and the home. Mr. Kilgour is eminently suited to the part and he makes his points with finished ease.

Helen, the wife, as played by Naomi Childers, makes a strong appeal. The character is an admirable one, to be sure, but Miss Childers' sincerity brings out the full strength of the part. Robert Gaillard is a business-like physician as Dr. White, another willing slave of Marcia's. Bobby Connelly, Edwina Robbins and Mabel Kelly complete the cast.

Tefft Johnson directed the production, which in regard to settings and photography is highly satisfactory. The automobile accident is an exciting incident and the fire, at which John proves that he has entirely recovered from his infatuation, is realistically staged. The exterior as well as the interior of the house is shown in flames.

"This Is the Life"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

THE third of the Buck Parvin stories to be filmed by the American Mustang Company is "This Is the Life." This is a three-reel production to be released on November 13, featuring Adele Farrington, who suggested to Charles Van

After a thrilling rescue from the burning building.

Loan, the author of the Buck Parvin stories, the plot of this particular one. There are great possibilities for very humorous situations in this story of "motion pictures," and William Bertram has made the best of these possibilities, and with the aid of the cast, which does splendid work, has created a photoplay which is lively and a splendid specimen of good clean comedy.

Adele Farrington is cast as Addie Gibble, whose desire of becoming a motion picture star causes her much discomfort and when one sees the numerous stunts which she has to go through I am sure their desires to become motion picture stars will be somewhat dampened. Charles Newton as Elmer Gibble, Addi's husband; Mother Ashton as Martha, her faithful colored maid; Lawrence Peyton as James Montague, director of the motion picture company; Ashton Dearholt as the leading man and Art Acord as Buck Parvin complete the cast.

Addie Gibble, whose husband is a prosperous business man, longs to shine as a moving picture star, but her husband wishes her to remain home. She announces her intention of joining a company one day and says she is going to apply to James Montague, director of the Titan Moving Picture Company, for a place. Her husband sees Mr. Montague first and he makes certain arrangements with that gentleman.

Mrs. Gibble appears and secures a place. Her first disillusionment comes when she is shown her small dressing room and then is instructed to dress for the part of a cook in a mining camp. She is compelled to don a dirty gingham dress, bake pancakes over a red hot stove and then have to put her hands in a washtub and scrub. In the next scene

Buck Parvin spurns and hurls her to the floor in all her fine clothes and she returns home that night very tired.

The next morning, however, she returns to the studio, and in her next scene she is compelled to appear in a "chase." She runs until she drops from exhaustion and Buck Parvin after the day's work remarks to her "This is the life," and that night when her husband inquires about her work she gamely responds, "Oh, this is the life."

The straw that breaks the camel's back comes after having to jump from a tree into a pool of stagnant water. She is let down on a rope from a burning building and there is left dangling and screaming while she is drenched with water from the fire hose. After this strenuous exercise Mrs. Gibble faints and the next morning when her husband asks her if she is ready to leave for the studio she tells him she is going to stay home, her ambition to be a motion picture actress having been murdered.

"Alice of Hudson Bay"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

MOTION picture directors are discovering every day that realism is a trait in their productions which must be carefully worked out. In the past years there have been many death-defying leaps and tumbles in motion pictures, but in most of them dummies have been used. For a length of time the public sat awe-stricken at these "thrillers," but soon they found out that they were being fooled and began demanding r-e-a-l-i-s-m. In "Alice of Hudson Bay," the two-reel American picture to be released November 8, George Field injects realism into the production. He miraculously escapes death in a headlong tumble over a cliff down a mountain side.

In this dramatic tale of the northwest, Ed. Coxen is cast as Frank Moss of the Northwest Mounted Police. Winnifred Greenwood is a charming Alice, daughter of John Gale, owner of a trading post, which part is portrayed by Charles Newton. George Field takes the part of Ralph Martin, the man from the States. The entire cast do splendid work and the production is clearly photographed.

As the story opens John Gale, a trapper, with his daughter, Alice, lives in the Canadian woods. Frank Moss, of the Northwest mounted police, is in love with the girl, and they become engaged. About this time a stranger enters the trading camp, who turns out to be one Ralph Martin, who twenty years before was a fellow clerk in the office with Gale at the time he was accused of murder and had fled with Alice to the northwest.

Martin reminds Gale of the past and forces his attentions upon Alice. He then notifies the police of Gale's whereabouts and Frank has to arrest Gale. Alice breaks her engagement with Frank and later goes to the jail and manages to release her father and they make their escape to the distant gold fields.

The man from the States is told to leave.

Frank is dismissed for allowing Gale to escape and Martin is placer-mining near where Gale and his daughter are living and one day he discovers Alice. He forces his attention upon her again and she screams, and just at this time Frank, who has also come to the gold mines, rescues her. In the fight which follows, Martin is hurled from a cliff and mortally wounded. Before dying he confesses to the murder of which Gale was accused and the police, who have come to arrest Gale, free him, and Alice and Frank are reconciled.

"The Ghost of the Twisted Oaks"

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

"THE Ghost of the Twisted Oaks," the three-reel Lubin production to be released on November 11, is a very pretty dramatic story interwoven with glimpses of the scenic beauty of the south. The picture is very well presented by a cast which includes Valentine Grant as Mary Randall, a young salesgirl, who inherits from her uncle an estate in Florida known as "The Twisted Oaks," Florence Walcott as Mary's mother, and James Vincent as Jack Carlton, a young southerner, who saves Mary from a terrible death.

Amongst the most impressing scenes in the production are those showing the arrival of the "Blue Gums" on the plantation, their religious ceremonies and their worship of the fanatical Voodoo. The double exposure scenes are very well handled, and the photography is up to the usual Lubin standard.

As the story opens we see Mary Randall, a salesgirl, who has just lost her position. That same day she receives a letter informing her that her late uncle's estate, "The Twisted Oaks," in Florida, has been left to her, and with her mother she leaves for the south. Upon her arrival there she meets Jack Carlton, her neighbor, and they become very good friends; their friendship soon turning into love.

A scene from "The Ghosts of Twisted Oaks."

About this time the "Blue Gums," negroes, arrive to work in the turpentine forest on the plantation. The Voodoo priest finds an enormous specimen of the rattlesnake in search for a Diety, and then proceeds to incite his superstitious followers. Mary observes this action and orders him off her plantation, and he vows vengeance. The next day Mary and Jack are having tea at the "Twisted Oaks" and the old colored mammy tells them the legend of the "ghost of the Twisted Oaks," which is as follows:

Miss Madeline, the sweetest little lady in Florida, was loved by all the slaves on the plantation. She was engaged to be married to Master Billy. Billy and Justin, his rival for Madeline's hand, fight a duel and Madeline learning of this rushes to the spot and is killed by a stray bullet. Ever since then the "Ghost" haunts the Twisted Oaks plantation.

At worship the fanatical Voodooes make a sacrifice of blood from the arm of one of their women. This is observed by Mary who, discovered in hiding, is dragged to be used as a sacrifice.

The vision appears before Jack and he is led to the sacrificial altar and is just in time to save Mary. The priest accidentally sticks his hand into the serpent's cage, is bitten and dies from the wound. The "Blue Gums" are driven from the plantation and Madeline's spirit rests in contentment, while happiness comes to Jack and Mary in the after years.

"The Lilac Splash"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

VIOLET WARDEN'S quick change of mind in the fifth episode of the "New Adventures of Wallingford" series is the last touch and we now know that Violet is a real woman. In "The Lilac Splash" this charming young lady changes, almost in less time than it takes to tell it, from an attitude of revenge toward Andre Perigourd, another one of the many men who brought ruination upon her father, to compassion and back again to revenge. The first change displeases Wallingford and Daw so, naturally, her second change is good news to them.

Of course Violet has sufficient cause for this, but nevertheless one feels certain that she would do the same thing with or without cause if the mood struck her. This and other incidents as natural make "The Lilac Splash" just as interesting and a trifle more attractive than the former adventures.

With such interesting stories, splendid characterization and skillful production, "The New Adventures of Wallingford" promise to be the most popular series the Pathe forces have ever offered. The well drawn characters and genuine good humor of George Randolph Chester's stories as picturized by the Whartons, have a broad appeal. It is an easy matter to become interested in Wallingford and Daw and their further adventures in a precarious profession. These characters are thoroughly likable even if they are "con" men.

This scene is found in Pathe's "The Lilac Splash."

A card game between a burglar and Blackie is one of the most entertaining incidents of this episode. The burglar knows a lot about fixing a hand, but not quite as much as Blackie. After the game they advise the second-story man to reform and lead an honest life like they do; and he promises.

The victim, Andre Perigourd, takes his bitter lesson philosophically. He does the proper thing when he determines to turn his loss to profit by returning to France and playing the same game, only from the winner's end. "The Lilac Splash" tells how Perigourd, who desires to get rich quick, practically forces his $60,000 on Wallingford, that is, after he has been taken in by Blackie's accounts of the wonderful returns one receives from amounts invested with J. Rufus Wallingford.

"The Rolling Terror"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

CHAPTER ten of the Pathe-Balboa Serial, "Neal of the Navy," carries a real thrill in the latter part of the second reel. This comes when a "rolling-car," or in other words a freight car running wild on a down grade, becomes unmanageable and all but collides with a passenger train on which Annette and Mrs. Hardin are passengers. This fast moving "terror" is derailed by the huge Brute Man, and crashes through a shed near the track.

The destruction of the building, and perhaps the car, is most effective, and does not leave one with the feeling that some perfectly good property has been needlessly, wantonly destroyed, which seems to be the case every time the proper effect is not procured. The title of this chapter is "The Rolling Terror" and in it the crafty Hernandez again gains possession of the charts. With so many and such willing aids, it is a question if one can call the smuggler crafty, but so far he has held his own in the battle of wits, and brawn for the possession of the map.

In "The Rolling Terror" the deceitful Inez Castro, who has professed friendship of Annette while she schemed with

A tense moment in "The Rolling Terror."

Hernandez, makes a blunder and her lie becomes apparent to Annette. The identity of the brute man has not yet been disclosed, which is something to be remarked since he has frequently shown a great liking for the girl and on many occasions saved her from harm. In this chapter he again answers some unaccountable impulse and, to the chagrin of Hernandez, saves Annette from death. As if to make the incident more peculiar a subtitle is then flashed which asks the spectator the question "Why does the Brute risk his own life to save Annette?" or words to that effect.

Lillian Lorraine, William Courtleigh, Jr., Edwin Brady, and William Conklin in the important parts continue to act them satisfactorily. Miss Lorraine has a tussel with Inez in this episode, but we were sure she would win, for we have seen and remarked before Miss Lorraine's ability in her struggles with the broad-shouldered Hernandez. The quality of the direction is most noticeable in the excitement attending the wrecking of the rolling car, which is worked up by "cut-backs" to the bound and gagged Annette and Mrs. Hardin in the motionless train. Neal is beginning to enjoy the fruits of his fine work in the navy, as he now receives promotion to the rank of commissioned officer.

Essanay's "Despair"

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

EDNA MAYO, Bryant Washburn, Anna May Walthall and William V. Burns all have roles of importance in "Despair," the three reel offering of the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, scheduled for release on Tuesday, November 2, and all of them make the most out of the role assigned.

Miss Mayo, throughout the greater part of the drama, appears in male attire and she makes a most captivating boy. Though cast as a girl brought up among crooks and trained to steal and rob, she enacts the role in such a manner that one involuntarily sympathizes with her and views with regret her death in the last few scenes of the final reel.

Bryant Washburn is seen as the city editor of a big newspaper and is his usual handsome, debonair self. In William V. Burns, who appears as "Butts" Miller, a young yeggman, the Essanay company seems to have a real "find," for Mr. Burns positively lives the role given him to interpret and in many of the scenes came dangerously close to taking the big situation away from the other principals. His face is unusually mobile and expressive and he registers the different emotions he is supposed to experience in a wonderful fashion. While comparisons are always invidious, Burns' mannerisms bear such a striking resemblance to many of those peculiar to Robert Harron, the popular young star with the Griffith forces, that one can scarcely avoid noting the similarity. His future work on the screen will be watched with interest, for, if he can keep up the high standard set by his appearance in "Despair," he gives promise of becoming an actor of note.

A humorous moment in "Despair."

Lois Tanner, while a tiny girl, is abandoned on the doorstep of a city tenement and, upon being found there by the leader of a band of crooks, is taken to their headquarters and trained to become a thief. On account of her inherent cleverness she is able to operate in many places where a male thief would be sure of capture.

One night while attempting to rob the house of Robert Spurier, city editor of a daily newspaper, Lois is caught ere she can escape and, her cap coming off, she is exposed as a girl. Spurier, instead of turning her over to the police, offers her a post on his newspaper and urges her to lead an honest life.

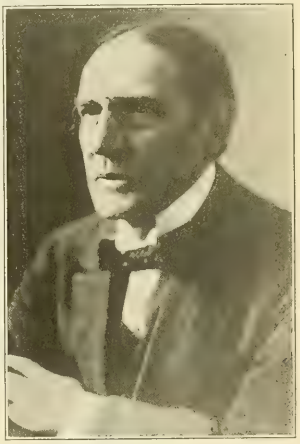
Gratefully she accepts and for a time proves a most valuable member of the newspaper's staff. As time passes she falls hopelessly in love with the editor and accordingly her heart breaks when she one day learns of his marriage to a prominent society girl. Overcome by despair she resolves to commit suicide, but chances to encounter "Butts" Miller, one of her old associates, who induces her to return to the old life.

Returning to the rendezvous of the crooks, she dons her boy's clothing again and goes forth with "Butts" to prey upon the rich. Gradually her heartache ceases amid the thrills and excitement of her thievery, and then one night she and "Butts" unwittingly select the new home of Spurrier for one of their robberies. Breaking into the house is easy and soon they are busy in front of the safe which stands in the library.

Spurrier and his wife are awakened by the intruders and after Miller goes down before a bullet from the editor's revolver, another shot sends Lois reeling into the arms of the man she loves, mortally wounded. Ere life departs, the girl opens her eyes to discover the Spurrier is holding her close in his embrace and as she smiles happily up into his face the editor prints a kiss upon the lips of the fair burglar, much to the surprise of his wife. A look of peace and contentment flits across the face of the wounded girl and as Spurrier bends above the little form the eyes close and with a little sob Lois sinks back—dead.

Another Producing Company

Formation of a new motion picture producing concern, to be known as the Unique Film Corporation, with an office at 207 Broad street, Elizabeth, N. J., was made public with the filing of a certificate of incorporation in the office of County Clerk Calvert.



The authorized capital stock is fixed at $250,000, divided into 50,000 shares of the part value of $5 each. The incorporators are Manny Cohen, of 1482 Broadway, New York, who has subscribed to 20,000 shares of stock; J. Watson Scott, of the same address, five shares, and B. Leslie Koppenhagen, residing at the Hotel Astor, New York, five shares. According to the papers of incorporation the objects are to create, produce and sell motion pictures, plays, operas, etc., to acquire theaters and generally to carry on amusement enterprises.

At present the concern has a studio in New York City and it is said to have contracted with many prominent stars to appear in its productions.

Eric H. Johansson, former agent with the Levitt-Meyerhoff and Col. Ferari carnival companies, will look after the publicity interests of the new company.

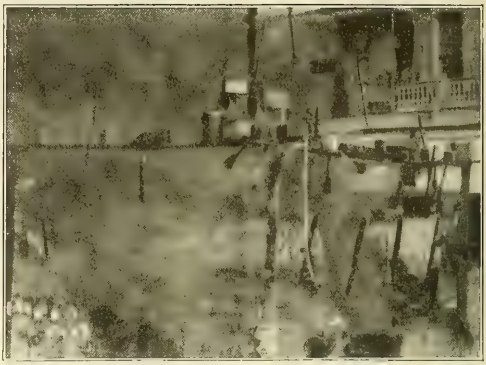
Cooper Cliffe of Metro

H. Cooper Cliffe, the eminent English dramatic actor, who has been featured in several Metro feature productions, has just completed work in the new five-part picture, "Tables Turned," produced by the Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc., in which Emmy Wehlen is starred. Mr. Cliffe is also featured in "The Final Judgment," another Rolfe-Metro production now being released, in which Ethel Barrymore appears in the stellar role.

H. Cooper Cliffe.

As a dramatic leading man Mr. Cliffe occupies an enviable position, distinctly his own, on both the speaking stage and the screen. He is a direct descendant of the celebrated family of Kembles, and as a young man possessed a wonderful baritone voice. He made his professional debut in grand opera, but after one year at the Convent Garden Sir Henry Irving induced him to take up the dramatic stage.

He first came to this country with Mr. and Mrs. Kendall, playing in New York and on tour. Then he joined E. S. Willard and later appeared with William Faversham in "The Squaw Man." He added to his laurels in "Everywoman," by his artistic creation of the mystic role of "Nobody." Mr. Cliffe's first appearance in motion pictures was with Robert Warrick in "The Face in the Moonlight." Then he joined the Rolfe-Metro forces, and was seen in an important role in support of Hamilton Revelle in "An Enemy to Society."



"Nation" Breaks All Records

The final four weeks of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Liberty theater, New York City, was announced from B. W. Griffith's offices this week. This means that the wonderful run of the spectacle will close on Saturday night, November 27. At the end of that engagement Griffith's masterpiece will have been seen for 725 consecutive performances in New York, making the greatest run in the history of the American stage for a continuous engagement.

News of the Week as Shown in Films

Luther Burbank, Thomas Edison and Henry Ford meet at San Francisco Exposition. Copyright, 1915, Pathe News.

Great quantities of opium are destroyed in San Francisco, California. Copyright, 1915, Universal Animated Weekly.

C. A. Youngren, inventor of a new life saving garment. Copyright, 1915, Mutual Weekly.

Mexican Bandits wreck train at Olnite, Texas. Copyright, 1915, Pathe News.

A scene from the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial showing conspirators who plotted to destroy U. S. ships carrying arms to Allies. Copyright, 1915, International Film Service, Inc.

A scene from Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, showing the U. S. S. "Nevada" making its first trip. Copyright, 1915, International Film Service, Inc.

Brevities of the Business

PACIFIC COAST NEWS

By "Capt. Jack" Poland.

This is a busy week in motion picture circles. Fun, frolics and festivities, high class feature productions, and other things have attracted much attention to screen interests.

Much rivalry has been in evidence between Tally's Broadway and Miller's theaters over the productions of the wonderful pictures of "Carmen." At Talley's the famous star of operatic fame, Geraldine Farrar, with local color, produced by the Lasky company under the direction of Cecil B. DeMille has been the rage, playing to crowded houses. At Miller's the equally notable Theda Bara has been playing her version of "Carmen" to unusually large houses, and everybody is getting their money's worth. Both houses have been filled to capacities every performance.

Colonel Thomas H. Ince has taken over the beautiful Brooks theater on Grand avenue, which will in future be used for private showing of Ince productions for Triangle program releases. W. A. Brooks, a former employe and old friend of Colonel Ince, will manage the theater and semi-exclusive audiences will greet future showings by invitation only.

Thomas A. Edison, the great inventor, motion picture magnate, and specialist in electricity, accompanied by Henry Ford, the automobile manfacturer, both multi-millionaires, arrived in Los Angeles recently, accompanied by a large party of personal friends and business aides. They visited the local studios and were well pleased with their inspections and the attention showed them. The visitors were special guests of William N. Selig at the $1,000,000 Zoo, and took great interest in the wonderful sights and completeness of this great plant. Pictures were taken of the notables while they were Selig guests.

Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 27, Thomas A. Edison was the personal guest of Director General Henry McRae of the Universal Pacific Coast studios, and he personally deposited the copperplate in the corner stone of the great new electric studio now in course of construction while bands played and the several thousand employes of Universal City applauded. Business manager George Kann and executive officers of the Big U studios left nothing undone that might add to the pleasure of the famous electrical wizard during his brief stay at Universal City. A number of excellent pictures were taken of the corner stone laying ceremonies featuring Mr. Edison, for release on Universal programs.

The Charlie Murray Maske Ball, Carnival and Mardi Gras so extensively advertised was held at Shrine Auditorium Thursday night with one of the largest attendances ever recorded at a motion picture social event. Many stars of filmdom, celebrities of the profession participated in costume. DeWolf Hopper, Dustin Farnum, Weber and Fields, Kolb and Dill, Willie Collier, Mack Sennett, Harry Williams, Jean Havez, Courtenay Foote, D. W. Griffith, Colonel Thomas H. Ince, Henry McRae, director general of the Universal, George Kann, business manager, Universal, and William N. Selig, participated in the events de cabaret during the evening, playing opposite such celebrities as Blanche Ring, Valeska Suratt, Edna Goodrich, Lillian Gish, Mabel Normand, Bessie Eyton, Myrtle Stedman, Lillian Lorraine, Blanche Sweet, Grace Cunard, Ruth Roland, Margaret Gibson, Ella Hall, Truly Shattuck, and other costumed stars, all adding to the piquancy and pleasure of the affair, which was pronounced a most gratifying success, adding much to the fame and prestige of that gifted comedian Charlie Murray. The grand-march was led by Hon. Charles E. Sebastian, mayor of Los Angeles, and a bevy of motion picture queens as special escorts. An unusual grand march event. They were followed by most all the film notables now at Southern California studios.

Many other social events for screen and motion picture people are planned for the coming season, which promises to be the gayest ever known in motion picture circles of the Pacific Coast.

SOUTHERN ITEMS

Florida.

Jacksonville will have ten motion picture companies here in the next few weeks.

The Thanhouser Film Company has started work on a glass studio on Eighth street. It is the intention of Mr. Thanhouser to operate five companies here and he may keep them in this section of the country permanently.

The Gaumont Company will operate three companies at the Dixieland theater across the river.

Kalem intentions are to bring three companies here.

The Ocean Film Company is using the Lubin studio at Riverside.

A new company, organized here, known as the Seminole Motion Picture Company will have for its director John J. Hayes, a well-known motion picture director and leading man. They will feature the charming Helene Dale in their Seminole Features.

CHICAGO GOSSIP

Lewis J. Selznick, vice president and general manager of the World Film Corporation, has been a Chicago visitor since Sunday, October 31. A convention of all of the road men and division managers of the World Film is being held at the LaSalle Hotel. Mr. Selznick, who is vice president of the Equitable Film Corporation, was the host at a little luncheon party on Tuesday to Ed. J. Mock of Motography. The party included Harry L. Reichenbach, Arthur Spiegel, Niel G. Caward and A. L. Haase.

Harry Drum, the manager of sales for the World Film Corporation, was an exceptionally hard worker at the World Film convention in Chicago this week.

Harry L. Reichenbach, publicity representative of the Equitable Film Corporation, the world's greatest telegram writer, acted as personal representative to Lewis J. Selznick in Chicago for the past four days. Harry is still dazzling the multitude with his rapid fire quips.

J. A. Berst returned to Chicago on Friday last from New York.

Aaron Gollos returned from Minneapolis Saturday last, reporting a successful termination of his arrangement with a feature concern there which had previously handled the Gollos pictures in that territory.

W. H. Bell gave a private showing to the exhibitors on Wednesday, November 3, at the Studebaker theater. Quite a few

Film Market Quotations and Financial Gossip

Supplied by R. D. Small of A. E. Butler & Co., Chicago.

	Bid	Asked
American Film Mfg. Co....	85	93½
Biograph Company	43	58
Colonial M. P. Corp.....	1¼	4	*
General Film Corp., pref...	40	49
Mutual Film Corp., pref...	49½	52
Mutual Film Corp., com...	48	50
No. Am. Film Corp., pref..	73	..
No. Am. Film Corp., com..	63	78
N. Y. Motion Picture Corp.	65	70
Thanhouser Film Corp....	1¾	3½*
Triangle Film Corp.....	7	7½*
Universal Film Mfg. Co....200		..
Vogue Films, Inc.....119		..
World Film Corp.....	4⅛	4⅜*

*Par $5.00

Vogue Films, Inc., makes its first release of a one-reel comedy the first week in December. In the company are "Russ" Powell, the 300-pound comedian of the "Chocolate Soldier," and other well-known musical comedies; Priscilla Dean, who was with James A. Hearne; Lillian Leighton, William Scott, who plays the lighter parts and scored successfully under Kelcey & Shannon and later with Maude Adams; Wilton Welch, M. Morante and others. Stock has been in demand during the past week, but there are no offerings at the present time.

Triangle Film Corporation.—This stock scored a slight advance during the last several days, and at this writing sales have been made at 7¼. A number of new contracts were secured in the last ten days, and critics concede that the productions have shown a progressive merit.

Mutual Film Corporation.—It is now generally known that a large block of both common and preferred (reported to be about 2,000 shares) formerly owned by some of the interests that organized the Triangle Film Corporation was sold at prices under 50 for both classes of stock. The block was divided up into smaller holdings and ultimately found its way into the hands of a number of the exchange managers of the Mutual organization and to a few of the more substantial stockholders. The present market has as yet not entirely adjusted itself to this transaction. Common may be had at 50 and preferred at 52.

exhibitors turned out to see the splendid Great Northern films which will hereafter be handled by the Bell organization. Bell has a new one up his sleeve. Ask him about it.

Charles E. Nixon was appointed general press representative for the Chicago Grand Opera Company for this season.

George S. Anderson, who was in charge of the brokerage office selling Cort film stock, states that he is closing up the Chicago office and that other arrangements will be made to carry on this business from New York.

A. M. Andrews has contracted for a portion of the Triangle program in the loop for one year.

The Prairie theater at Fifty-eighth and Prairie avenue, Chicago, is Alfred Hamberger's latest acquisition, which will open early in November. Mr. Hamberger now controls more theaters in this district than any other exhibitor or corporation.

Arthur H. Spiegel, president of the Equitable Film Corporation, conducted Mr. Selznick and Mr. Reichenbach of the World Film Corporation, through his factory in this city on Tuesday last. Mr. Reichenbach stated that Mr. Spiegel's factory has the largest seating capacity in the world, he maintaining that he walked through six miles of warehouses piled to the roof with chairs.

Kitty Kelly, the little girlie who reviews films for the Chicago Tribune, was happily married on Sunday last to Al Chase, one of the sub-editors of that newspaper. MOTOGRAPHY extends to the young couple sincere wishes for their continued happiness.

Gerda Holmes, formerly a member of the Chicago film colony, is now a permanent resident of New York City, having signed a contract with the Equitable Film Corporation. Her large and experienced chauffeur-husband was left behind and by the time he is asked to come to New York will have a million or more miles registered on the speedometer of the Overland coach he drives.

W. N. Selig is expected to arrive in town this week from Los Angeles where he has been putting in some hard licks straightening out affairs in his western studios.

William Noble, the Oklahoma correspondent for MOTOGRAPHY, was a visitor to our office on October 29, on his return from Oyster Bay, to which point he had traveled at the request of Theodore Roosevelt.

The postmaster at College View, Neb., a town of 1,508 inhabitants, advises us that there is no moving picture theater in his city.

H. C. Miller, manager of the President, Rose and Alcazar theaters, Chicago, an old time subscriber to MOTOGRAPHY, advises us that he is now running first run pictures in all of the houses, that he reads and likes MOTOGRAPHY and asks whether it will be possible for us to print reviews of pictures sufficiently in advance so that he would have the information prior to booking the pictures. We wish to advise Mr. Miller that we print reviews of pictures just as soon as the manufacturer will allow us to look at the subject.

Edward J. Gaylor, Jr., the lithographing shark, was seen piloting Percy J. Morgan, head of the Morgan Lithograph Company, around this week.

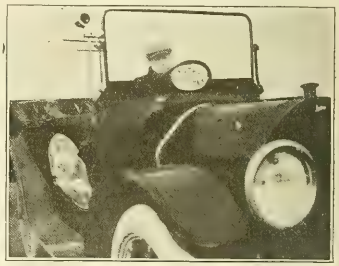
"Walt" Bloeser, the well known and very efficient representative of the Chicago Tribune, is in New York this week calling upon film manufacturers and advocating the making of better stills for use in newspaper advertising by exhibitors. Mr. Bloeser is also gathering facts and figures for an elaborate article he is preparing for publication in a near issue of MOTOGRAPHY. Mr. Bloeser is a strong advocate of the importance of the exhibitors in advertising campaigns, and we understand his ideas on this subject have met with the hearty approval of every film manufacturer with whom he has discussed the matter.

Mary Anderson of the Vitagraph Company, who became a fairly good shot during her stay on the desert while Roland Sturgeon was producing "Flower of the Desert."

NOTES FROM ALL OVER

The Rialto theater, being erected at Forty-second and Broadway, will be equipped with typhoon fans, as also will be the little Bijou theater at Park Row, New York.

Three times in as many weeks has Enid Markey, the beautiful Ince leading woman, met with mishap. Her latest accident occurred this week while she was enacting another big scene with Frank Keenan and a company of 100 players in the current Ince-Triangle feature in which Keenan is to be starred. Miss Markey is playing the part of a military commander's daughter, who barely escapes ignominies at the hands of a despot who covets her. She seeks shelter in a convent, and as the barbarians rushed past the door Miss Markey was carried off her feet and thrown to the ground. Before she could rise, a half dozen men had trampled upon her during the excitement. Prostrate, she was carried to her dressing-room and there revived.



The advent of E. W. Hornung, the English author, and famous as the creator of "Raffles" and "Stingaree," as a writer for motion pictures, has been announced by the Kalem Company. "Stingaree," considered by many to be the best work of this versatile author, has been purchased at a cost of $10,000 and the first episode of the series, "And Enemy of Mankind," will be released on Wednesday, November 24.

Irving Cummings, who was featured in the North American Film Corporation's serial, "The Diamond from the Sky," and who was recently added to David Horsley's list of stars, will make his initial bow on the Mutual program under his new auspices in "The Explorer," a two-reel Centaur feature, which will be released some time in November.

Because of her excellent portrayal of the part of "Devotion" in "The Blood of Our Brothers," the Centaur star feature just released on the Mutual program, in which she made her debut as a David Horsley player, Miss Celia Santon has been re-engaged by Mr. Horsley to play an important part in the next Crane Wilbur release.

Little Marion Harlan, only daughter of Otis Harlan, the comedian, is going to emulate her father and enter motion picture work. She will make her initial debut in Hoyt's "A Temperance Town," now in course of production at the Chicago studio of the Selig company.

After making a whirlwind tour of New York state in an automobile, E. M Saunders, general manager of the New York Metro Film Service, Inc., distributors of E. M. Saunders, manager of New York Metro exchange.

Metro feature productions, says he was surprised to find such a universal demand for big feature pictures, even in the smaller towns. Mr. Saunders went by train to Buffalo, where he was joined by C. A. Taylor, manager of the Metro branch in that city, and together they spent two weeks in the tour before returning to New York City.

Albert Capellani, the renowned World Film director, who has produced "The Face in the Moonlight," "The Impostor," "The Flash of an Emerald" and is hard at work on "Camille," an up-to-date version of Dumas' famous drama, in which Clara Kimball Young is starred, has a brother and a famous and gifted one at that. He is to play opposite Miss Young in the part of Armand Duval, the lover.

Oriental beauty vied with American beauty at Universal City one day last week. The occasion was the visit of fifteen Japanese dancing girls, who had come down from the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco, and who were to play an engagement at Los Angeles. The dainty maidens from the land of Nippon were attired in national costume, and attracted attention wherever they went "on the lot." Some of the directors took advantage of the visit of these Japanese girls to use them in several scenes.

William Duncan in a Vitagraph three-reel Broadway star feature, "The Wanderers."

Under the capable direction of Tom Brierly, stage manager for Thomas H. Ince, work was commenced, this week, on the erection of an immense set on the first completed stage at the new Culver City studios which Ince is erecting for the production of Triangle features. This set, when completed, will depict the New York Stock Exchange and will be used for many of the biggest and most important scenes of the current production, in which H. B. Warner will be starred.

Owing to the enthusiasm with which the public has received the new society detective, "Ashton Kirk," in which Arnold Daly is appearing on the screen, it has been decided to extend the new Pathe series beyond the originally intended length. Ashley Miller, Mr. Daly's director, is now at work on the third episode, which has been named "The House of Fear" and in which several brand-new ideas and novel screen effects are to be employed.

A pleasant little party was given last week at Zeisse's hotel, Philadelphia, by Kemp Greene, as an aftermath to a visit of the Lubin moving picture players to the Broadway theater, Camden. The stock company of the Camden theater were all present, as also were the players of the Walnut Street theater, Philadelphia. During the supper many entertainers contributed songs and speeches. H. A. D'Arcy, after reciting some of his famous poems and stories, took opportunity to address the hundred or more guests upon the subject of the proposed million-dollar fund to endow the Actors' Fund and Home. The speech was vigorously applauded and earnest co-operation was promised by the entire party.

Arthur Shirley has been signed by Thomas Dixon, Jr., to play the heroic lead, that of John Vassar, in Mr. Dixon's big picture, "The Fall of a Nation." The part is one that seems especially suited to "the big Australian," as he was known at the Universal studios, and the coming week marks his active affiliation with the Dixon company.

L. V. Jefferson, who since last April has written and sold nearly one hundred photoplays, has been added to David Horsley's scenario staff, which also includes Charles Mortimer Peck and Miss Theodora Harris.

October 12 was "Transportation Day" at Universal City. On that day 400 delegates to the annual convention at San Francisco of the American Electric Railway Association and the American Electric Railway Manufacturers' Association visited the picture plant of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company at Universal City. Accompanying the delegates were California state officials and officials of the city of Los Angeles.

"Smiling" Billy Mason, the comedian of the Essanay Company, of "Ring Lardner Series" and latterly of the Universal company, has smiled himself into a niche that seemed to have been waiting for him over at the Keystone studios. Billy Mason and Keystone sound like the right combination and the blonde, who is known best by the bigness of his smile, seems to have found the right home at last.

But two days' work remain on the Smalleys' production of Booth Tarkington's novel, "The Flirt." Their next picture is to be a five-reel story adapted by Lois Weber from the story, "Dope," by Rufus Steele, the well-known author. No cast thus far has been chosen.

A notable addition to the Kalem comedy forces is Charles Inslee, who will add his mirth-making talents to the other Kalem stars in his character of "Spike." Judging from his work in the first two in which he has appeared, Spike is going to be a welcome addition to the forces.

David Horsley has appointed Bert Von Klein as his business manager of his studios in Los Angeles. Mr. Von Klein has been with Mr. Horsley since July as assistant to Director Frank E. Montgomery in the production of "The Rajah's Sacrifice," "The Woman, the Lion and the Man," and the "Stanley's Adventures in Africa" series, the latter now being released under the Centaur Feature brand name.

B. S. Moos, proprietor of many theaters and a motion picture producer of magnitude, has entered into an agreement with the Triangle Film Corporation whereby he will present their program in conjunction with the present policy of popular-price vaudeville now in vogue at his Regent, Hamilton, Jefferson and 86th Street theater, New York City, beginning November 15.

Willie Collier arrived in Los Angeles thoroughly fatigued from a long journey across the continent, but glad to be in the land of sunshine. After a week's rest he will immediately go into rehearsal for a Triangle-Keystone comedy under the direction of Mack Sennett. Willie is anxious to get things moving and try his comedy before the camera, as this will be his first appearance on the celluloid ribbon.

The Universal Film Company, which is packing up and preparing to leave Bayonne for Fort Lee, N. J., is also busy making plans for the comfort of its many employes, who will move out of Bayonne with the company. Plans are under way for a bus service that will carry the Universal employes who will reside in Bayonne after the company moves, to and from work, and while the plan has not been adopted, it is quite probable to go through very shortly.

The Ajasee Manufacturing Company (A. J. Clapham), located at 123 Liberty street, New York City, has become part of the Novelty Slide Company through arrangements completed October 20.

Yale Benner, Edison, is around again at the Edison studio, rather weak but cheerful as ever, since a serious operation which he recently underwent. Mr. Benner became ill shortly after his appearance in the Kleine-Edison release, "Vanity Fair."

Billy Sherwood has finished work as the young lover in George Kleine's coming five-reel feature, "Canavan, the Man Who Had His Way," has undertaken a different sort of character in the sixth episode of "The Ventures of Marguerite," the new Kalem serial. He will be seen in this as the heavy, opposite Miss Marguerite Courtot.

The same cast that appeared in the first "Chimmie Fadden" picture has been assembled and will appear in the new series. This includes Camille Astor, Mrs. Lewis McCord, Anita King, Florence Dagmar, Raymond Hatton, Tom Forman, Ernest Joy and Dorothea Abril. Victor Moore, the star, now is the proud possessor of a bungalow near the Lasky plant.

In pursuance of its policy to give the public a new star with each Gaumont production, Harry Vokes is now at work at the Flushing studio on a Casino Star comedy, to be released under the name of "Beauty in Distress." Mr. Vokes was for years a co-star with "Hap" Ward. Probably no team in America has made more people laugh than Ward and Vokes.

George W. Coleman, president of the Boston City Council and former president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, was at Universal City recently with William Woodhead, publisher of Sunset Magazine; F. J. Wadleigh, secretary of the Ad Club of Los Angeles, and John Lindsay, also a member of the Ad Club.

Albert Macklin, well known in pictures as a juvenile actor, sailed with the Gaumont companies to spend the winter in Florida. He will appear in the Rialto Star Feature photodramas.

The Eastern Film Corporation of Providence, R. I., which is specializing at present in feature photoplay productions of stories of the sea, owing to the close proximity of beautiful water locations, has just purchased the fishing schooner Conquest. This boat, which cost the company $3,000, will be dynamited by Director Lambert Hillyer in the big scene of the forthcoming feature, "Partners of the Tide," by Joseph C. Lincoln, the famous writer of sea tales.

E. J. Le Saint has returned to Universal City from San Francisco, where he has been filming scenes to be used in his production of the series, "The Journal of Lord

Bill Russell, Ed. Kaufman and Mabel Condon in the Sierre Madres Mountains of California.

John," in which William Garwood is being featured.

Bryant Washburn, Essanay leading man, was the guest of honor of H. M. Rubens' Princess theater in Joliet, Ill., recently, and entertained 5,000 persons who packed the theater to see the photoplay hero in real life. Mr. Washburn spoke to nine different audiences and a huge portrait of Mr. Washburn was placed in front of the Princess theater, attracting hundreds of passers by.

The latest director to join David Horsley's forces at the Los Angeles studios is R. B. Broadwell, who has staged many productions for different organizations on the Coast. He is now engaged in putting on "Could a Man Do More?" a three-reel Centaur Star Feature, with Crane Wilbur, which will be released on the Mutual program November 24.

The Francis Ford company at Universal City has started the production of the twenty-first installment of "The Broken Coin" serial. Upon the completion of this episode there will remain but one more to make before the close of the story.

Hobart Bosworth, J. Warren Kerrigan, Grace Cunard, Jane Novak, Myrtle Gonzales and Carmen Phillips of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company at Universal City each contributed a doll to the "Celebrity Doll Show" which was a part of the baby hospital charity bazaar held in Oakland, Cal., on October 15 and 16.

Rollin S. Sturgeon of the western Vitagraph started for the Great Bear Valley to begin work on the big V. L. S. E. Blue Ribbon feature, "God's Country and the Woman." He will probably be absent a month or more. The principals in this feature will be the well-known Vitagraph players, William Duncan, lead, and George Holt as the heavy. Nell Shipman has been specially engaged to play the female lead.

Dick Jose, the star of the K. & R Company's photoplay, "Silver Threads Among the Gold," is receiving ovations in every city in California where he is appearing.

Bessie Barriscale will be seen in Triangle productions for a long time to come. She has a long-term contract with Thomas H. Ince, which precludes her accepting the numerous tempting offers made her to return to the speaking stage.

Carlton King, Edison, who for a number of years has been one of the most popular character actors in that company, and was recently made a director, has been returned to the screen, following persistent requests from exhibitors and patrons to that effect.

Pursuant to instructions received from Postmatser-General Burleson, Walter J. Desmond, postmaster at Long Beach, Cal., has just completed the negotiations started some time ago by the Balboa Amusement Producing Company for a million of the green one-cent Balboa postage stamps. This is one of the largest orders ever executed by the United States Postoffice Department, according to the authorities.

Audrey C. Berry, one of the youngest of the Vitagraph stars, celebrated the ninth anniversary of her birth on Saturday, October 23, when she was guest of honor at two parties. One was tendered her by a number of the Vitagraph stock members, who held a reception in the main studio and showered the little star with presents. The other party was by her school girl and boy friends, who played games and ate ice cream and cake in her new home on East Fourth street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

William D. Taylor, fresh from his triumphs as producer of the big American serial, "The Diamond from the Sky," has had his little holiday and is ready to settle down to the grind once more as director of the Bosworth, Inc., producing Pallas pictures.

William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, will appear in one of the Selig pictureplays for probably the first time in his life. Mr. Selig was sitting on a circus seat at the Selig Zoo talking to a friend. A circus picture was in the course of making. The place filled up unnoticed by Mr. Selig, the director rushed matters, and the beloved proprietor of the Selig Zoo found himself watching the ring performances totally unaware that he was being photographed.

The new Lasky developing laboratory is now nearing completion and the installation of the new printing and developing machines.

For the first time in the history of screen presentations, a complete opium outfit, exactly as it was used during the days of San Francisco's world-famous Chinatown, has been employed. In its production of "The Dream Seekers," the Kalem Company introduces a scene in an opium joint, and it was only through the friendship that the district attorney of the Golden Gate City has for James W. Horne, who directed the picture, that it was obtained.

Irving J. Brasky, director of publicity for the Associated, was appointed war correspondent for the New Yorker German Herold. He will leave for the German battle front just as soon as he receives his passports and closes some of his personal affairs. Mr. Brasky has always had the reputation of making good on anything he has tackled, and there is no doubt that he will bring back some wonderful pictures of the present conflict in Europe.

Valeska Suratt has begun her engagement at the Lasky studio in a photodrama written especially for her. Miss Suratt closed her season on the Orpheum circuit here and at once moved her thirty-five trunks to Hollywood. The new scenario gives her ample opportunity to display her many sensational gowns.

There is one young man in the film game that is certainly deserving of success, and that is Georgie Orth, who is the man without a title of the Pluragraph Company. George first started in the game in 1909 with the old Gaumont Company in Flushing. From there he went with the Eclair, Biograph, Republic, Yankee and numerous other film concerns, where he gained a wide knowledge of all branches of the business that he is using to good advantage now. With the Pluragraph Company he does everything that his employers demand of him, and then some. You find him in the office, in the studio and most everywhere there is something to be done, for George has the interests of his company at heart and it is his ardent hope to make it, or rather help to make it, the best-known in the game.

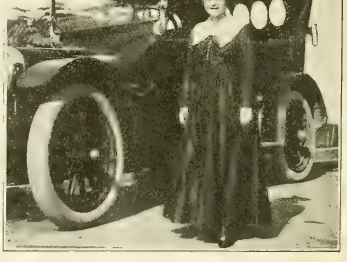
Marshal Neilan, the well-known director and star, has returned to the Selig Polyscope Company after being called to New York City. He will work at the Selig studios in Los Angeles, Cal.

Henry Otto has the chance he has been praying for. He is to produce "Undine," in five reels, for the Universal, with Ida Schnall in the title role, Douglas Gerrard in the male lead and with Edna Maison in a big acting part.

The shootin' irons used by William S. Hart, the star in the powerful western drama, "The Disciple," as produced by Thomas H. Ince for the Triangle program, are heirlooms which have been handed down to the popular portrayer of western characters by relatives. They are two six-shooters and were used by the James boys in the days when they were the terrors of the middle West.

Arthur Shirley, who has been associated with the Kalem and more recently the Universal company, has resigned under pleasant conditions to play the lead in the big spectacular photoplay to be produced by Thomas Dixon.

In order to give the great American public "Lessons in Love," Hal Forde left for the Gaumont studios at Jacksonville, Fla. "Lessons in Love" will be released as a multiple-reel Rialto Star Feature. It is being directed by Richard Garrick.



Al. E. Christie, having recovered from a severe attack of blood poisoning, has returned to the Universal City studios and has started the production of a one-reel story entitled "Wanted, a Leading Lady." Lee Moran, Eddie Lyons and Jane Waller appear in the leading roles.

George Melford is resting up by taking a fishing trip before starting in on the second Goodrich picture, which is being especially written for her by Hector Turnbull of the Lasky photo-dramatic staff.

The prairie schooner which William S. Hart, the star, drives when he is introduced in "The Disciple," the five-part Ince-Triangle feature, is one of the relics of the western pioneer days collected by Thomas H. Ince for use at Inceville.

Harris Weinstock, head of the California State Industrial Commission, who is known as the "millionaire commissioner," recently made an inspection of the Balboa studio.

C. O. Sprenger, a newspaper man who for many years was on the staff of the Denver Times and the Rocky Mountain News, and who for the last five years has been doing general publicity work and ad writing in California, has been placed in charge of the publicity work for the David Horsley interests at the Los Angeles office.

Neva Gerber of the Beauty Co.

Complete Record of Current Films

Believing the classification of film pictures by the nature of their subjects to be of greater importance to the exhibitor than classification by maker, MOTOGRAPHY has adopted this style in listing current films. Exhibitors are urged to make use of this convenient tabulation in making up their programs. Films will be listed as long in advance of their release dates as possible. Film manufacturers are requested to send us their bulletins as early as possible. Reasonable care is used, and the publishers cannot be responsible for errors.

General Program

Monday.

D	11-1	Fifty-Fifty	Essanay	3,000
D	11-1	The Coquette	Kalem	4,000
D	11-1	The Sacred Bracelet	Lubin	1,000
D	11-1	The Flashlight	Selig	2,000
T	11-1	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 87, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	11-1	Between Two Parts	Vitagraph	1,000

Tuesday.

D	11-2	Between Father and Son	Biograph	2,000
D	11-2	Despair	Essanay	3,000
C	11-2	Diana of the Farm	Kalem	1,000
C	11-2	Up Against It	Lubin	1,000
C	11-2	Athletic Ambitions	Selig	1,000
C	11-2	The Sultan of Zulon	Vitagraph	2,000

Wednesday.

D	11-3	Dora Thorne	Biograph	4,000
C	11-3	The Parson's Button Matcher	Edison	1,000
C	11-3	The Fable of "The Escape of Anthony and the Salvation of Herbert"	Essanay	1,000
D	11-3	The Sign of the Broken Shackles	Kalem	2,000
D	11-3	A Western Governor's Humanity	Lubin	3,000
C	11-3	A Family Picnic	Vitagraph	1,000

Thursday.

D	11-4	The Passing Storm	Biograph	1,000
C	11-4	The Night Sophia Graduated	Essanay	1,000
D	11-4	When War Threatened	Lubin	2,000
C	11-4	The False Hair	Mina	1,000
D	11-4	Their Sinful Influence	Selig	3,000
T	11-4	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 88, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	11-4	The Ebony Casket	Vitagraph	1,000

Friday.

D	11-5	The Musketeers of Pig Alley	Biograph	1,000
D	11-5	Friend Wilson's Daughter	Edison	3.000
D	11-5	Broncho Billy's Mexican Wife	Essanay	1,000
D	11-5	The Rogue Syndicate (No. 2 of the Ventures of Marguerite)	Kalem	1,000
D	11-5	The Urchin	Lubin	1,000
C	11-5	Beautiful Thoughts	Vitagraph	1,000

Saturday.

D	11-6	Waifs of the Sea	Edison	1,000
D	11-6	On the Little Mill Trace	Essanay	2,000
D	11-6	Danger Ahead	Kalem	2,000
C	11-6	The Cellar Spy	Lubin	1,000
D	11-6	The Lost Messenger	Selig	1,000
D	11-6	Anselo Lee	Vitagraph	3,000

Monday.

D	11- 8	Twice Into the Light	Essanay	3,000
D	11- 8	The Woman of the Sea	Kalem	3,000
D	11- 8	The Orgy	Lubin	1,000
C	11- 8	The Come Back of Percy (No. 3 of the Chronicles of Bloom Center)	Selig	2,000
T	11- 8	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 89, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	11- 8	No Tickee, No Washee	Vitagraph	500
E	11- 8	California Scrap Book	Vitagraph	500

Tuesday.

D	11- 9	Weaver of Clay	Biograph	2,000
D	11- 9	Wine, Women and Song	Essanay	2,000
C	11- 9	The Hoodoo's Busy Day	Kalem	1,000
C	11- 9	Half a Million	Lubin	1,000
C	11- 9	The Chef at Circle G	Selig	1,000
D	11- 9	For the Honor of the Crew	Vitagraph	3,000

Wednesday.

D	11-10	The Laurel of Tears	Biograph	3,000
C	11-10	Cartoons on a Yacht	Edison	1,000
C	11-10	The Fable of "Handsome Jethro Who Was Simply Cut Out to Be a Merchant"	Essanay	1,000
D	11-10	The Dream Seekers	Kalem	2,000
D	11-10	The Secret Room	Lubin	2,000
C	11-10	Hats is Hats	Vitagraph	1,000

Thursday.

D	11-11	Rosa and the Author	Biograph	1,000
C	11-11	Cupid's Bath	Essanay	1,000
D	11-11	The Ghost of the Twisted Oaks	Lubin	3,000
	11-11	Title Not Reported	Mina
T	11-11	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 90, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	11-11	Sis	Vitagraph	1,000

Friday.

D	11-12	The God Within	Biograph	1,000
D	11-12	The Truth About Helen	Edison	4,000
D	11-12	The Indian's Narrow Escape	Essanay	1,000
D	11-12	The Kidnaped Heiress (No. 3 of the Ventures of Marguerite)	Kalem	1,000
D	11-12	A Knight in Old Spain	Lubin	1,000
C	11-12	The Midnight Prowlers	Vim	1,000
C	11-12	Romantic Reggie	Vitagraph	1,000

Saturday.

D	11-13	A Broth of a Boy	Edison	1,000
D	11-13	The Second Son	Essanay	3,000
D	11-13	The Girl and the Special	Kalem	1,000
C	11-13	His Three Brides	Lubin	1,000
D	11-13	The White Light of Publicity	Selig	1,000
D	11-13	The Woman's Share	Vitagraph	2,000
C	10-28	Kidding the Goats	Mina	1,000

V. L. S. E. Program

	Sept. 20	The Circular Staircase	Selig	5,000
	Sept. 27	Tillie's Tomato Surprise	Lubin	6,000
	Sept. 27	The Great Ruby	Lubin	5.000
	Oct. 4	Dust of Egypt	Vitagraph	5,000
	Oct. 11	In the Palace of the King	Essanay	6,000
	Oct. 11	The Valley of Lost Hope	Lubin	5,000
	Oct. 18	A Black Sheep	Selig	5,000
	Oct. 18	The Man Who Couldn't Beat God	Vitagraph	5,000
	Oct. 25	The Rights of Man	Lubin	5,000
	Nov. 1	The Turn of the Road	Vitagraph	5,000
	Nov. 1	The Crimson Wing	Essanay	6,000
	Nov. 8	The Raven	Essanay	5,000
	Nov. 13	Sweet Alyssum	Selig	5,000
	Nov. 15	Heights of Hazard	Vitagraph	5,000

Mutual Program

Monday.

D	11-1	The Wasp	American	2,000
C	11-1	Freddie, the Fake Fisherwoman	Falstaff	1,000
C	11-1	Putting Papa to Sleep	Novelty	1,000

Tuesday.

D	11-2	The Commuted Sentence	Thanhouser	2,000
S	11-2	See America First, No. 8	Gaumont	500
C	11-2	Keeping Up With the Joneses	Gaumont	500
C	11-2	One to the Minute	Beauty	1,000

Wednesday.

D	11-3	The Devil's Darling	Rialto	3,000
C	11-3	The Fortune Hunters	Novelty	1,000

Thursday.

D	11-4	When Avarice Rules	Centaur	2,000
C	11-4	"Clarissa's" Charming Calf	Falstaff	1,000
T	11-4	Mutual Weekly No. 44	Mutual	1,000

Friday.

D	11-5	The Trail of the Serpent	Mustang	2,000
D	11-5	On Secret Service	American	1,000
C	11-5	Who's Who	Cub	1,000

Saturday.

D	11-6	Mr. Meeson's Will	Than-o-play	3,000
C	11-6	Billy Van Deusen's Campaign	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	11-7	The Law of Duty	Reliance	2,000
C	11-7	Does It Pay to Advertise	Casino	1,000
D	11-7	Mistake of Mammy Lou	Thanhouser	1,000

Monday.

D	11- 8	Alice of Hudson Bay	American	2,000
C	11- 8	Lulu's Lost Lotharios	Falstaff	1,000
C	11- 8	Something in Her Eye	Novelty	1,000

Tuesday.

D	11- 9	The Little Captain of the Scouts	Thanhouser	2,000
T	11- 9	See America First, No. 9	Gaumont	500
C	11- 9	Keeping Up With the Joneses	Gaumont	500
C	11- 9	Her Adopted Father	Beauty	1,000

Wednesday.

D	11-10	Father and Son	Reliance	3,000
C	11-10	Love and Bitters	Novelty	1,000

Thursday.

D	11-11	Stanley of Starvation Camp	Centaur	2,000
C	11-11	The Film Favorite's Finish	Falstaff	1,000
T	11-11	Mutual Weekly No. 45	Mutual	1,000

Friday.

D	11-12	Man to Man	Mustang	2,000
D	11-12	To Rent Furnished	American	1,000
C	11-12	The Double Cross	Cub	1,000

Saturday.

D	11-13	This is the Life	Mustang	3,000
C	11-13	Almost a Widow	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	11-14	A Romance of the Alps	Reliance	2,000
C	11-14	A Tangle in Hearts	Casino	1,000
D	11-14	In Baby's Garden	Thanhouser	1,000

Universal Program

Monday.

D	11-1	The Long Chance	Broadway	6,000
C	11-1	A Circumstantial Scandal	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

D	11-2	The Measure of Leon Dubray	Gold Seal	3,000
	11-2	No Release This Week	Rex
C	11-2	When Beauty Butts In	Imp	1,000

Wednesday.

	11-3	No Release This Week	Victor
C	11-3	The Idle Rich	L-Ko	2,000
T	11-3	Animated Weekly No. 191	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

D	11-4	The White Feather Volunteer	Laemmle	2,000
D	11-4	The Markswoman	Big U	1,000
C	11-4	The Thinking Cockatoos	Powers	500
E	11-4	Insect Celebrities	Powers	500

Friday.

D	11-5	The Reward	Imp	3,000
	11-5	No Release This Week	Victor
C	11-5	Father's Helping Hand	Nestor	1,000

Saturday.

D	11-6	The Mettle of Jerry McGuire	Bison	2,000
	11-6	No Release This Week	Powers
C	11-6	20th Century Susie	Joker	1,000

Sunday.

D	11-7	Such a Princess	Rex	3,000
	11-7	No Release This Week	Laemmle
C	11-7	Cupid and the Scrub Lady	L-Ko	1,000
D	11-7	The Broken Coin, No. 20	Universal	2,000

Monday.

D	11- 8	The Frame-Up	Broadway	5,000
C	11- 8	Those Kids and Cupid	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

D	11- 9	On the Level	Gold Seal	2,000
D	11- 9	The Parson of Pine Mountain	Rex	1,000
C	11- 9	Getting His Goat	Imp	1,000

Wednesday.

	11-10	No Release This Week	Victor
C	11-10	Silk Hose and High Pressure	L-Ko	3,020
T	11-10	Animated Weekly No. 1912	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

	11-11	No Release This Week	Laemmle
D	11-11	Hearts That Are Human	Big U	3,000
C	11-11	Actors From the Jungle	Powers	1,000

Friday.

D	11-12	Honor Thy Husband	Powers	2,000
D	11-12	Promissory Notes	Victor	1,000
C	11-12	Father's Lucky Escape	Nestor	1,000

Saturday.

D	11-13	What the River Foretold	Bison	3,000
	11-13	No Release This Week	Powers
	11-13	Title Not Reported	Joker

Sunday.

D	11-14	Liquid Dynamite	Rex	1,000
D	11-14	The Masked Substitute	Laemle	2,000
	11-14	No Release This Week	L-Ko
D	11-14	The Broken Coin, No. 21	Universal	2,000

Miscellaneous Features

York State Folks	Gra-ko	5,000
A Mother's Confession	Ivan	5,000
Sarah Bernhardt at Home	Photoplay Releasing	2,000
Romance of Elaine	Pathe	24,000
The Victory of Virtue	United Photo Plays Co.	5,000
The Pearl of the Antilles	Picture Playhouse Film Co.	5,000
The Flame of Passion	Picture Playhouse Film Co.	5,000
The Corsican	Sun Photoplay Co., Inc.	5,000
The Whirl of Life	Cort Film Corp.	6,000
A Woman's Honor	Great Northern	4,000

Associated Service.

Released week of

Nov.	9	School Day Memories	Banner	1,000
Nov.	9	All Balled Up	Liberty	1,000
Nov.	9	The Jitney Submarine	Atlas	1,000
Nov.	9	The Crimson Circle	Santa Barbara	2,000
Nov.	9	The Bond Between	Santa Barbara	3,000

Kleine-Edison

Released week of

Oct.	6	Vanity Fair	Edison	7,000
Oct.	13	The Magic Skin	Edison	5,000
Oct.	20	The Green Cloak	Kleine	5,000
Nov.	3	The Sentimental Lady	Kleine	5,000
Nov.	10	Children of Eve	Edison	5,000
Nov.	17	The Politicians	Kleine	5,000

Metro Features.

Released week of

Oct.	4	Song of the Wage Slave	Metro	5,000
Oct.	11	The Stork's Nest	Metro	5,000
Oct.	18	The Final Judgment	Metro	5,000
Oct.	25	My Madonna	Metro	5,000
Nov.	1	Tables Turned	Metro	5,000
Nov.	8	Pennington's Choice	Metro	5,000

Mutual Master-Pictures.

Released week of

Sept.	23	The House of a Thousand Scandals	American	4,000
Sept.	30	The Price of Her Silence	Thanhouser	4,000
Oct.	7	Bred in the Bone	Reliance	4,000
Oct.	14	The Brink	N. Y. M. P.	4,000
Oct.	21	The Miracle of Life	American	5,000
Oct.	28	His Wife	Thanhouser	5,000
Nov.	4	The Seventh Noon	Mutual	7,000
Nov.	11	The End of the Road	American	5,000

Paramount Features.

Released week of

Oct.	4	Zaza	Famous Players	5,000
Oct.	7	A Girl of Yesterday	Famous Players	4,000
Oct.	11	The White Pearl	Famous Players	5,000
Oct.	14	Blackbirds	Lasky	5,000
Oct.	18	The Chorus Lady	Lasky	5,000
Oct.	21	The Secret Sin	Jesse L. Lasky	5,000
Oct.	25	The Yankee Girl	Oliver Morosco	5,000
Oct.	28	The Masqueraders	Famous Players	5,000
Nov.	1	Carmen	Jesse L. Lasky	5,000
Nov.	4	Still Waters	Famous Players	5,000
Nov.	8	Madame Butterfly	Famous Players	5,000

Pathe.

Released Week of

Nov.	1	New Adventures of Wallingford, No. 5	Pathe	2,000
Nov.	1	Giving Them Fits	Phunphilms	1,000
Nov.	1	Children of the Netherlands	Photocolor	500
Nov.	1	Human Movements Analyzed	Globe	500
Nov.	1	Pathe News, No. 88	Pathe	1,000
Nov.	1	Pathe News, No. 89	Pathe	1,000
Nov.	1	Adventures of a Madcap	Pathecolor	4,000
Nov.	1	Neal of the Navy, No. 10	Panama	2,000
Nov.	1	Whiffles' Futile Flivver	Pathecolor	1,000
Nov.	1	The Menace of the Mute	Gold Rooster	5,000
Nov.	1	Flats and Sharps	Starlight	1,000
Nov.	8	New Adventures of Wallingford No. 6	Pathe	2,000
Nov.	8	Bughouse Bell-Hop	Phunphilms	1,000
Nov.	8	Pathe News, No. 90	Pathe	1,000
Nov.	8	Pathe News, No. 91	Pathe	1,000
Nov.	8	Bolt From the Sky	Balboa	3,000
Nov.	8	Neal of the Navy, No. 11	Panama	2,000
Nov.	8	Nedra	Gold Rooster	5,000
Nov.	8	Bungling Burglars Burgle	Starlight	1,000

Triangle Film Corporation.

Released week of

Nov.	21	The Disciple; William S. Hart	Triangle Kay Bee	5,000
Nov.	21	Martyrs of the Alamo; Griffith Players	Fine Arts	5,000
Nov.	21	Her Painted Hero; Hale Hamilton	Triangle Keystone	2,000
Nov.	21	Saved by Wireless; Mack Swain	Triangle Keystone	2,000
Nov.	28	Matrimony; Julia Dean	Triangle Kay Bee	5,000
Nov.	28	The Sable orcha; Tully Marshall and Thos. Jefferson	Fine Arts	5,000
Nov.	28	Stolen Magic; Raymond Hitchcock	Triangle Keystone	2,000
Nov.	28	His Father's Footsteps; Ford Sterling	Triangle Keystone	2,000

World Features.

Released week of

Oct.	10	Blue Grass	Equitable	5,000
Oct.	17	The Heart of the Blue Ridge	Shubert	5,000
Oct.	18	Bludgeon	Equitable	5,000
Oct.	24	Salvation Nell	California	5,000
Oct.	25	Divorced	Equitable	5,000
Oct.	27	The Master of the House	Equitable	5,000
Nov.	1	Bought	Shubert	5,000
Nov.	1	The Better Woman	Triumph	5,000
Nov.	8	The Little Church Around the Corner	Blaney	5,000
Nov.	15	A Butterfly on the Wheel	Shubert	5,000

Brief Stories of the Week's Film Releases

Mutual Program

Tillie the Terrible Typist—Falstaff—October 25.—Tillie, the typist, is a beautiful creature. Her three favorite admirers are a young man whose only occupation is cigarette smoking, a renter of dress suits and fancy ball costumes, and a rich plumber. Tillie at last accepts the latter and he gives her a locket containing his picture and a lock of his hair. Trouble brews in the future because of this locket and affections are alienated all around. Finally, as Tillie has lost her job and her other suitors, she accepts the costumer.

The Soap Suds Star—Falstaff—October 28.—Some of the vaudeville manager's "star acts" fail him and others are detained abroad. He tells his press agent to secure a vaudeville team which "must be extremely funny and extremely cheap." Sophie, the laundress, is wrecking her establishment with a former actor who tried to get away without paying his money. The agent happens along in time to see this bit of comedy and hires the two at a joint salary of $15. But the pair soon leave vaudeville and try classics. Sophie's bad temper, however, spoils her artistic career, and the balcony scene of "Romeo and Juliet" ends in a farce.

The Fisherwoman—Thanhouser—October 31.—The Fisherwoman has built up a prosperous business for herself. Her son returns from college and helps her for a while, but contact with the world has spoiled him for a narrow life and his mother allows him to live his own life. Some time after the Fisherwoman receives a picture of her son's bride. As the boy's correspondence becomes more and more infrequent, the mother begins to hate the wife. One day the Fisherwoman spies an overturned boat well out to sea. Clinging to it is a man and woman, but before she reaches them the man has disappeared out of sight. The woman is her son's wife. She and her husband have gradually drifted apart. On a yachting trip the wife has run away with another—the drowned man. As the Fisherwoman realizes that the wife has only been weak, she sends for her son, telling him that his wife has come to visit her. The husband never knows the real truth.

See America First—(Split Reel)—Gaumont—November 2.—Boston, the city of culture and tradition, viewed through the pretty eyes of the Mutual Traveler, constitutes the theme of this scenic. A flying trip out to Cambridge is also taken. The second half is devoted to the animated comic, "Keeping Up With the Joneses."

Does It Pay to Advertise?—Casino—November 7.—Featuring Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Waters and "Stuffy" Davis. Johnny and Emma Murphy, members of a vaudeville team, tell their manager they will quit unless their name gets into the paper. "Stuffy" Davis, the press agent, rents a baby and has it sent to Mr. and Mrs. Murphy, asking them to adopt it, and then the reporters are tipped off to the story. The baby was procured from Mrs. O'Hara, a washerwoman. The reporters came in droves and the Murphys got their publicity but also a lot of trouble. The night clerk at the hotel asks the Murphys to leave and a fight starts and they are taken to the station. Mrs. O'Hara was to have her baby back at nightfall and fearing it had been kidnapped goes to the station the first thing in the morning and there finds her infant. The Murphys discover they have been tricked and "Stuffy," because he wasn't clever enough to keep the reporters from learning of the deception, is discharged.

Alice of Hudson Bay—(Two Reels)—American—November 8.—Featuring Winnifred Greenwood and Ed Coxen. The story of Alice, the daughter of the owner of a trading post, and her love for a member of the Northwest Mounted Police, the discovery that her father had escaped from the States years before on account of a murder and finally the clearing of his name. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

J. C. G.

Her Adopted Father—Beauty—November 9.—Featuring Frank Borzage, Estelle Allen and Lucille Ward. Marion Cosgrove, a young widow, places her little daughter, Sue, in the care of Mrs. Grimpus, who becomes intoxicated and then the little girl runs away. She comes across Edward Hart, a gay and dissipated young bachelor, and when a policeman comes up to them she tells him that Ed is her father. After a couple of days Hart adopts the little girl and Sue transforms her adopted father into a better man. When the little girl's mother returns she cannot find her daughter, but eventually locates her and takes her away from the bachelor. A few days later the man comes to call on Sue and her mother and the little girl says "Daddy, when are you coming to stay with us?" He tells her it is up to her mother and proposes that they come to stay with him, and mother consents.

Stanley in Starvation Camp—(Two Reels)—Centaur.—Stanley, with the assistance of Bonavita, struggles on through the jungle, followed by Ada, Nina and Jack with the "old hag," who is guiding them. The White King, determined to force Ada to become his wife, plots to lead the party astray and he sends a lieutenant, who tells the party that he has forsaken the White King and wishes to help them. That night they light a fire to keep the animals away and this is a beacon for the White King, who abducts Ada. He takes her to the edge of a remote village and is about to marry her when a raiding king enters the village and while the White King is gathering his forces to offer battle Ada escapes, joins her party again and they watch the fight between the two kings. The raiding king wins the battle and Ada with her companions is captured and brought back to camp. Stanley arrives with a rescue party, but nothing can be found of Ada, Jack or Nina.

To Rent, Furnished—American—November 12.—Featuring Vivian Rich and Walter Spencer. Kate Proctor and Billie Tilton are in love. Bill procures a marriage license and Kate is angered at his sureness. The Rev. and Mrs. Jones, owner of a pretty bungalow in the mountains, decide to rent their home during their vacation and Kate arranges with Mrs. Jones for the bungalow, while Bill gets it through an agent and after many exciting moments she is sure there is a burglar somewhere around. She locks herself in her bedroom and then Billie enters the house. Later she discovers that it is Billie and begs him to stay with her and protect her against the burglars. Just then the Jones, who have learned of the double renting, appear at the bungalow, Billie produces the marriage license and he and Kate are married.

Man to Man—(Two Reels)—Mustang—November 12.—Featuring Jack Richardson and Anna Little. Bill, the foreman of Diamond "D" ranch, falls in love with Pearl, the niece of Robert Chalmers. On a ride through the mountains they meet Millie Thompson, a half-demented girl, and Bill tells Pearl her story of how she had bid farewell to Jim Clawson, her lover, and how he had been buncoed in New York and committed suicide. Bill vows that he would avenge Jim's death. Pearl returns East and Bill, while drowning his sorrow in drink, meets a cowboy friend who tells him he found the man who had swindled Jim Clawson in the person of Ralph Martin. Bill immediately starts for New York, goes to the office of Ralph Martin and grabs him by the throat, but at this moment he sees a photograph of Pearl on Martin's desk and when Bill asks him what the picture is doing on his desk and the reply is "That is the girl I am going to marry," Bill releases his hold, but at this moment

Your Personal Subscription

for

Motography

America's Leading Film Magazine

$3.00

a year

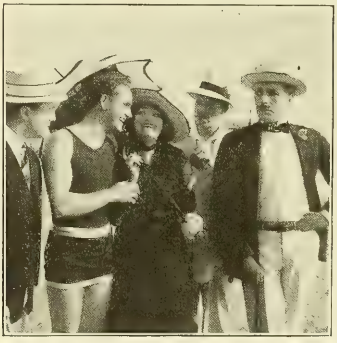
would prove both a convenience and a means of real profit. Each issue is of vital interest and practical value to every man in the motion picture business. If you miss one copy, you may miss an article or an idea that would have a vital effect on your work.

As a regular subscriber, you would be able to read Motography carefully and systematically at your leisure, and to preserve a file of copies for reference and for binding.

Bound volumes of Motography form the best foundation for a reference library.

We suggest that you have the magazine sent to your residence.

Address



Motography

Monadnock Bldg., Chicago

Pearl enters and breaks her engagement with Martin and a few months later Pearl and Bill find their hearts' desire in the great West.

The Double Cross—CUB—NOVEMBER 12.—Featuring George Ovey. Jack receives a letter from his aunt saying that she is about to visit him, and wishing to escape the ordeal of entertaining her gets Jerry, whom he finds sitting on the curb, to impersonate him. Jerry takes possession of the home and is given a large sum of money. The aunt proves a comely woman of middle age and Jerry is very attentive to her. Later Jack returns to get his bank vault keys, but Jerry kicks him off the porch. He calls the police and says he wishes to enter his own home, but he cannot prove his identity. Later, however, Jack explains away all the questionable and astonishing happenings to his good-looking aunt and they become the best of friends. Meanwhile Jerry languishes in jail, having been double-crossed.

Almost a Widow—BEAUTY—NOVEMBER 13.—Featuring Frank Borzage, Neva Gerber, Lucille Ward and Beatrice Van. Henrietta Jones and her niece, Edna, go to Sea Hurst for their vacation and occupy the tent next to Jack White and his friend Joe. The widow Millionbucks also arrives at Sea Hurst. Joe and Edna fall in love while Henrietta falls in love with Jack. He meets the widow Millionbucks and wins her affections. That night Henrietta is frightened by a rat and Jack is attracted by her screams and rushes into the tent clad in his pajamas. The owner of the tents apepars and demands the reason of the unusual situation and Henrietta says they are going to be married. Jack in his flimsy nightdress flees to the beach and jumps into the water and he doesn't return. Joe and Edna are married and later Jack, who managed to escape from the water, marries the widow Millionbucks, while Henrietta goes into deep mourning for the husband she lost.

The Tangle in Hearts—CASINO—NOVEMBER 14.—Featuring John Dale Murphy as the man who doesn't love Rose, yet he does not know how to get out of the entanglement. To make matters worse, when he returns to his office after buying an engagement ring he falls in love with Bess, the new stenographer, while Rose meets a chap driving an automobile and falls in love with him and forces her mother to write Harry that the engagement is broken. Harry sees a man he thinks is Rose's fiance making love to another girl and when he tells Rose of this she switches back to Harry. Bess finds Rose with her arms around Harry's neck and there is a big row until the hearts are untangled by the discovery that Harry had not seen the man Rose wanted to marry.

General Program

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 87—HEARST-SELIG—NOVEMBER 1.—U. S. S. Nevada, largest battleship in the world, leaves Quincy, Mass., for drydocking at Brooklyn Navy Yard; fifty-ninth annual conclave of Knights Templars of Illinois held at Chicago, Ill.; Education Day at Panama-Pacific Exposition; military maneuvers held on Boston Common as part of Preparedness Day Celebration; night rally of University of California students is held in the Hearst Greek Theater at Berkeley, Calif.; Robert Fay, alleged German officer, and Walter Scholtz, arrested as leaders of conspiracy to dynamite munition ships, the Holborn Battalion of the Volunteer Training Corps, composed of wealthy business men of London, England, drills for guard duty; fierce artillery actions mark Austro-German advance into Serb mountains, Austro-Serbian front.

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 88—HEARST-SELIG—NOVEMBER 4.—Luther Burbank escorts Thomas Edison through experimental gardens at Santa Rosa, Calif.; brick-laying contest held at San Francisco, Calif.; late fashions; Oregon "Aggies" beat University of Michigan football players 20-0 at East Lansing, Mich.; pretty milk maids compete for prizes to amazement of forty Holstein-Friesian cows, San Francisco; four lion cubs added to the lion house in Central Park menagerie, New York; fire destroys St. John's parochial school at Peabody, Mass.; detachment of Bersaglieri departs for skirmishing and reconnoitering expedition against Austrians, Italian-Austrian front.

Twice Into the Light—(THREE REELS)—ESSANAY—NOVEMBER 8.—Featuring John Lorenz. Perry Waldo, who was born blind, becomes an accomplished musician, and at the age of twenty-five his sight is restored. He marries Laura and they go to Idaho, where he is placed as foreman of a construction gang, replacing Semple, who swears vengeance. Waldo being unable to handle the men, resorts to playing his violin for them. The chief arrives and finding the men idle smashes the violin, while Waldo accidentally falls over a cliff, losing his memory. He wanders about the country for a year and by chance wanders back to camp, where he sees Semple with his wife, and after being dealt a blow his memory is restored and he later achieves fame and fortune as a violinist.

The Woman of the Sea—(THREE REELS)—KALEM—NOVEMBER 8.—Featuring Jackie Saunders. Sir Arthur Chelton finds Sonia cast up by the sea. He takes her to his home and later the girl, who has lost all remembrance of the past, marries him. Sir Arthur's nephew, Harry, deeply in debt to Ivan, promises him to get the plans of the fortification in Sir Arthur's possession and Ivan meets Sonia at the embassy ball and the girl's memory returns to her. He compels her to leave the fortification plans where Harry can obtain them. After Harry has gotten the plans Sonia breaks down and confesses to Sir Arthur her part in the theft and tells him how she had been forced to marry Ivan and had escaped from him and the vessel upon which she was aboard had gone down. Later Ivan is killed by Nickolas, his accomplice, and Sir Arthur imparts the information to Sonia.

The Orgy—LUBIN—NOVEMBER 8.—Featuring Ethel Clayton and Francis Joyner. Frank Pemberton, a middle aged man, throws Nan, his ward, under his hypnotic influence and she denounces Stanton, with whom she was in love before under the influence of Pemberton, and he plots to steal her away. When Stanton comes he is engaged in a struggle with Pemberton, and then Stanton's chauffeur levels a revolver at Pemberton's back and fires. At this moment we see Pemberton with a book on hypnotism in his hand and when Nan enters the room he throws his arms around her and when Stanton comes in he brings them together.

The Come Back of Percy—(TWO REELS)—(THIRD IN THE CHRONICLES OF BLOOM CENTER)—SELIG—NOVEMBER 8.—Percy Pinkham, much abused as a small boy in Bloom Center, returns to the village in later years and wreaks vengeance upon all those who had tormented him when he was but a lad, ending by presenting his card, which announces that now he is the champion lightweight pugilist of the world. He ends by accepting a position as reporter on the Bloom Center Bugle. A full review of this picture appears on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

The Chef at Circle "G"—SELIG—NOVEMBER 9.—Featuring Tom Mix. Tom, after being discharged by Blake, returns disguised as a young woman, and is engaged as a cook. He makes known his identity to Rose, Blake's daughter, with whom he is in love, and later Squinty, discovering Tom with his wig off and making love to Rose, is caught by Tom, who ties him in the corral. Later it is found that Squinty is the hold-up man who has been robbing the stage coach, and then Blake, through admiration of Tom's cooking and bravery, finally consents to Tom's marriage to Rose.

No Tickee-No Washee—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 8.—Featuring William Shea and Kate Price. Mike Callahan sends his one collar to Wing Lee's, the chinaman, but his son loses the ticket and when Mike goes for his collar he is told "No Tickee—No Washee." He gets mad and gives battle to the chink, but they soon appear from all parts of the laundry and chase him. Afterward they go back to the laundry and, protected by the police, Mike searches until he finds his collar.

The Weaver of Claybank—(TWO REELS)—BIOGRAPH—NOVEMBER 9.—Featuring Ivan Christy and Mary Malatesta. The schoolmaster's daughter falls in love with Tom Weaver, who is always ready to drop his odd jobs of carpentering and snuffle a prayer for the poor whites of Claybank. The schoolmaster, to divert his daughter's attentions from her lover, takes her to a neighboring village and he leaves her there. However, she tells him she will walk home. She does not arrive and as Weaver is not at his shop, the schoolmaster thinks he is responsible for the girl's disappearance. In the woods the girl's hat is found and signs of a struggle are apparent. Later the girl is found in a shack over which the town bully is standing guard with an axe. Weaver comes out, overcomes the bully and hands him over to the sheriff and then the girl tells of how she was attacked by the bully and taken to the shack, where Weaver arrived just in time to rescue her. Then it is that the schoolmaster consents to receive Weaver as his son-in-law.

Wine, Woman and Song—(TWO REELS)—ESSANAY—NOVEMBER 9.—Featuring G. M. Anderson and Lee Willard. Jack Dobbs squanders his entire fortune in the gambling hall and soon is heavily in debt to the proprietor. In desperation he forges a check to pay his debts, is caught and sent to prison for fifteen years, at the end of which time he leaves the prison an old and broken man, finally dying the death of a pauper after going for days without food.

The Hoodoo's Busy Day—KALEM—NOVEMBER 9.—Featuring Bud Duncan, Charles Inslee and Ethel Teare. Bud gets a position as assistant to a house painter. About this time Spike in running away from a limb of the law runs directly beneath the scaffold on which the painter is working and accidentally Bud, who is manning the windlass, lets go and down comes the painter, but he is suddenly raised skyward by Bud, who is again manning the windlass, but is soon dropped again atop the struggling trio below, while Bud flees for his life.

Half a Million—LUBIN—NOVEMBER 9.—Featuring D. L. Don. Mr. and Mrs. O'Malley and their son Jack, when they receive word that Mr. O'Malley has inherited three million dollars, immediately change their lives. Son Jack is smitten with Carry, as also is his father. Jack finally discovers his father and Carry in a cafe and in the meantime Mrs. O'Malley, who is an uplifter and devotes her time to temperance cause, comes into the cafe. John places a blank check in front of his father and tells him to sign it or he will call mother. This O'Malley does and John wins Carry's promise to marry him.

For the Honor of the Crew—(THREE REELS)—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 9.—Featuring James Morrison and Muriel Ostriche. Robert Brent, son of a wealthy man, and Dick Morgan, a poor chap, are chums at college and both fall in love with Viola Scott. Both are candidates for the Varsity crew, but Morgan loses his ambition, breaks training and loses out in his examinations, and when Brent passes with high honors and is favored by Viola, Morgan's jealousy and hate know no bounds. The night before the big boat race Morgan goes to the boat house and succeeds in cutting one of the oars and the next day at the critical moment Brent's oar breaks, and only by his leaping overboard, thus lightening the boat, are the Varsity crew enabled to win. That night his engagement to Viola is announced and an attendant tells Brent that Morgan cut the oar, but "for the honor of the crew" the affair is kept secret and Brent helps Morgan get away and secure a fresh start in life.

The Laurel of Tears—(THREE REELS)—BIOGRAPH—NOVEMBER 10.—Featuring Vera Sisson, Madge Kirby and G. Raymond Nye. Esther Bourne, whose ambition is to become an authoress, is told by Leonard Ames, writer and critic, that "Fame is a laurel of tears." One day a girl applies for employment at Esther's office and tells of how her recent employer had insulted her and, afraid to return for her wages, she had sought employment in vain. Esther takes Dora Thomas home with her and installs her as housekeeper of the little flat and then goes to Mason Downs' office for the girl's wages. He takes her card and later goes to Esther's office and has an employe follow her home because Dora is there. Downs tries to bribe Dick Stuart, a mining engineer, to make a favorable report on a worthless mine, but failing to do this he forges a new report above the engineer's signature and takes the work to Esther. Later Esther, who tells Stuart of the forgery, loses patronage and is forced to close her office, while the young engineer falls in love with Dora. Later Dora answers an offer of employment and finds herself in Downs' clutches. He tricks her into sending for Esther and when she arrives she waits until he is off his guard and then sets fire to the house and frees Dora. Under the title of "The Love that Failed" Esther writes her life's story and wins fame—the laurel of tears.

Cartoons on a Yacht—EDISON—NOVEMBER 10.—The theatrical manager refuses to give Harcourt a part in his production until he proves that he can act. Harcourt steals aboard the manager's yacht dressed as a tramp. The guests are highly entertained with "the animated Grouch chaser." The tramp walks up to them and at the point of a gun demands their valuables. When he reveals his identity the manager promises him a part. The animated cartoons by Raoul Barre show some new adventures of Kid Kelly; a vaudeville show by Mr. Grunt and Miss Quack and other humorous animated sketches.

The Secret Room—(TWO REELS)—LUBIN—NOVEMBER 10.—Featuring L. C. Shumway. Amos Lee, a gambler, loses everything, including his home, to Robert Duncan. Lee shoots himself and his body falls into the river. His son, who is in love with Dorothy, Duncan's daughter, is told by Duncan that the ghost of Lee appears to him in his study. Duncan discovers Dorothy and Arthur together and in his fright at the appearance of Lee he overthrows a lamp and Fairview Manor is burned to the ground and Arthur is missing. Later Dorothy finds an iron door covered with the debris and through this she descends and finds Arthur and Jasper, the Lee's colored servant. He tells of how Lee had been hidden in the cellar and burned in the mansion the night of the fire, but how he had saved Arthur's life. Later Dorothy and Arthur are reunited.

The Dream Seekers—(TWO REELS)—KALEM—NOVEMBER 10.—Featuring Marin Sais, True Boardman. Martin, an old violinist who is an opium fiend, gives his violin to Ling Foy, proprietor of a joint, to pay for the drug and is told that when he brings two new customers he can have his violin back again. Drake, a plain clothes man, meets Martin's daughter Annie, and falls in love with her and later he persuades Martin to take him to the den and thus gains admission to the place. The following day Annie and her father call upon the chinaman and the oriental makes them both prisoners. Drake heads a raiding party and smashes into the den just in time to free the girl and the old musician. His lesson learned well, Martin vows never to touch the drug again.

Hats is Hats—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 10.—Featuring Hughie Mack. Mike, the Interurban Express agent, receives a consignment of one calf, uncrated, and a package marked "Handle with care, valuable." Just then the phone rings and an old maid calls up and says that the precious package is a $50 hat and Mike turns from the phone just in time to see the calf step on the precious box and devour the hat. Wondering how he can deliver the hat he finally decides to deliver the calf and all, and when the old maid learns the circumstances she faints dead away with a shriek.

Rosa and the Author—BIOGRAPH—NOVEMBER 11.—Featuring Augusta Anderson, Charles Perley and Hector V. Sarno. Rosa, belle of the Italian colony, falls in love with a young author. Pasquale, her faithful sweetheart, knows of this and when the author goes away and promises to return, but never does, Pasquale and Rosa sing in the street. Here the girl attracts the attention of an impressario and a stage career is open before her. Years later when she is famous the author meets her, but does not recognize in her Rosa of the East Side. Pasquale attacks the author, but his hand is stayed by Rosa, who tells the author she will not marry him now and turns to faithful Pasquale.

The Ghost of the Twisted Oaks—(THREE REELS)—LUBIN—NOVEMBER 11.—Featuring Valentine Grant and James Vincent in a story of Mary Randall, a sales girl, who inherits a fortune and after making her home on an old plantation meets Jack Carlton with whom she falls in love. Later Mary's colored mammy tells them the legend of the "Ghost of the Twisted Oaks." For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

Sis—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 11.—Featuring Arline Pretty. Sis, a pretty country girl, and Bill, her lover, have a quarrel. Harold, a city boarder, meets Sis and pays court to her and she accompanies him to a picnic. Bill follows along and while Sis and the fellow from the city are sitting on the shore of the lake a piercing shriek is heard. A child is adrift in a canoe and nearing a rapid falls. Harold does not jump at the opportunity to make himself a hero and Sis, disgusted with his cowardice, dives into the lake herself, as also does Bill. That evening Sis renounces Harold in scorn and promptly accepts Bill's proposal.

The God Within—BIOGRAPH—(REISSUE)—NOVEMBER 12.—Featuring Blanche Sweet, Lionel Barrymore, Henry Walthall and Claire McDowell. When the child of the "woman of the camp" is born dead the doctor, who has another maternity case on the outskirts of the camp, where the trapper's wife dies in giving birth to a child, gives to the woman the child of the dead trapper's wife. The trapper and the woman are brought together through the child, but at this moment the woman's former lover returns to make such amends as he can. At the doctor's suggestion

The Business Obligation

At the lowest estimate for weekly program rentals the subscribers to MOTOGRAPHY spend every week the astounding sum of

$417,860.00

If they use one feature each week in addition to their service, at a fair price for features, this sum is increased weekly to

$893,260.00

If these theaters spend a few dollars each week for supplies, posters, oil, rewinds, heralds, etc., the sum total of the average weekly expenditures of MOTOGRAPHY'S subscribers is

OVER

$1,000,000.00

exclusive of salaries, rent, light, etc.

To talk to this Million Dollar Crowd every week

Plant Your Advertisement

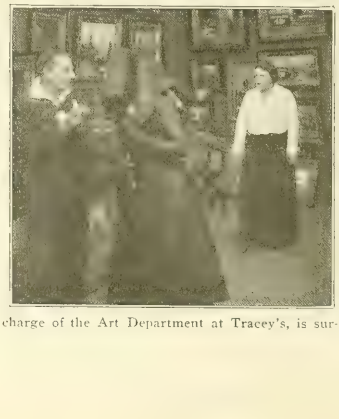
in

Motography

the woman chooses between the two men and at last places her hand in the trapper's palm.

The Truth About Helen—(FOUR REELS)—EDISON—NOVEMBER 12.—Hugh Graham's political opponent demands him to withdraw from the contest or he will make known some circumstances which will implicate Helen Moore in a scandal. Graham accepts Marsden's proposition. Later the truth is made known, Helen has been the victim of an unscrupulous man, but in reality there is nothing that could not be made known. Graham later is elected to an important office and marries Helen.

The Kidnaped Heiress—KALEM—NOVEMBER 12.—An episode of "The Ventures of Marguerite." Upon learning from her maid, Frances, that her husband is in the power of a band of crooks, Marguerite promises to aid him. She is captured by the thieves, who hold her for a ransom, and Frances informs her husband of Marguerite's peril, and with his help she is enabled to make her escape.



A Night in Old Spain—LUBIN—NOVEMBER 12.—Featuring a strong cast. Mary after telling her lover Jed that her lover must be brave and noble, falls asleep and dreams that she is back in the romntic days of old Spain, where she meets Alonzo, a handsome young gallant. El Belvidero, a bandit, plans to kill Alonzo and Mary overhearing the plot rushes to the church tower to ring the bell in alarm. The fight is stopped just in time and Mary learns that Alonzo is a prince and throws hreself into his arms, but the king angered at her presumption orders her executed. Then Mary in moving the hammock causes a broom handle to fall across her neck and in terror she rushes to the field and is comforted when Jed puts his protecting arm around her.

Midnight Prowlers—VIM—NOVEMBER 12.—Featuring Pokes and Jabbs. Mr. Jabbs hires a female Sherlock Holmes and Mrs. Jabbs engages a male sleuth, unbeknownst to each other. While the two detectives are busy following each other Gun Shoe Pete, a cracksman, gets into the house. Jabbs wakes up and awakes Mrs. Jabbs, but each thinking it is the detective, goes back to sleep again. Meanwhile the female Sherlock and the male Nick Carter are spooning and holding hands in the moonlight. The cracksman makes a noise and is heard by the detective. Mr. and Mrs. Jabbs and the detectives all arrive on the scene at the same time. Mrs. Jabbs is grabbed by the female sleuth and Mr. Jabbs is seized by the male sleuth and start for the station. Just at this time the real cracksman appears at the front door and is caught and lugged off to the lock-up.

Romantic Reggie—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 12.—Featuring Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew. Reggie, in charge of the Art Department at Tracey's, is surprised when a tall, slender, well-dressed lady, with a heavy veil over her features, steps up to him and gives him a card which reads "You are my soul-mate. I will wait for you midst the Hills of Kuperskill. Princess Marie." Reggie's sweetheart, Peggy, is heart-broken until she learns that the veiled lady is a crazy woman from the Kuperskill Asylum, and she determines to teach Reggie a lesson. Disguised with a heavy veil she leads him a merry chase right up to the door of the Kuperskill Asylum, and what happens is cause for much laughter.

The Broth of a Boy—EDISON—NOVEMBER 13.—Andrew J. Clark as Tim Connolly. Tim's mother is in poor health and he is her only support. One day he finds a purse containing a considerable sum. He inserts a "found-ad" in a newspaper, and takes the purse home with him. The physician advises him that his mother requires more and better food, and as Tim is without money he decides to appropriate a portion of his findings. He is arrested on suspicion. While he is in court Mr. Sullivan, the man who lost the purse, enters and persuades the judge to allow Tim to go. Sullivan, who has always admired the boy, arranges to have Mrs. Connolly cared for, and promises to pay for Tim's education.

The Second Son—(THREE REELS)—ESSANAY—NOVEMBER 13.—Featuring Nell Craig with an all star cast. John Trevor is the favored son of General Trevor, while Roland, his younger brother, is considered the "Black sheep." In reality John is a scoundrel and in order to obtain money for a crook he has hired to commit a crime, John paves the way for the crook to rob his father's safe. Roland enters the room as the pair are at work and raises the alarm and the crook escapes and Roland is accused by John and sent to prison. Two years later finds Mrs. Trevor at the point of death and Roland hearing this returns home, where his mother recovers and John is revealed as a criminal by his accomplice.

The Girl and the Special—KALEM—NOVEMBER 13.—Episode of the "Hazards of Helen" railroad series. Burgess and Whelan manage to uncouple the special from the train and enter the drawing room of Nina Mallette in order to get the actress' gems. Helen sees the uncoupled cars and rushes to the bridge under which they must pass. She waits until the train is underneath and leaps down upon the roof and enters the actress' apartment, via the window. Later the train is backed to the spot where the uncoupled car has been brought to a halt and the desperadoes lay the fireman low and beat the engineer severely. However, they are finally overpowered and Helen runs the freight back to Harding, where a relief crew is waiting.

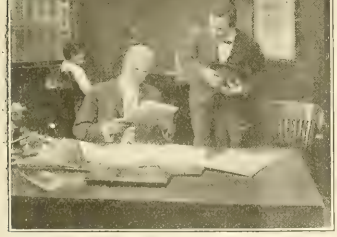
His Three Brides—LUBIN—NOVEMBER 13.—Featuring Billie Reeves. Willie Montague, an old gentleman, meets Deborah Pottle, an elderly widow, and also Sue, Gladys and Annette, three charming girls. He finally in order to solve the question of which one he should marry, mails each of the girls a proposal and the three girls determine to punish him and come to his house dressed in bridal attire. The girls have also sent the widow one of the proposals and she comes around to marry Willie also. At this he collapses and when he is seen by Deborah taking off his hair and out his eyes and teeth she flees, leaving him to the bachelor's life forever.

The White Light of Publicity—SELIG—NOVEMBER 13.—Featuring Bessie Eyton. Clyde Maury, after seeing in the paper that Violet Lonsdale has attempted suicide because of an unknown man, leaves for the seaside and there is followed by Grace Reeves, a newspaper woman, and Billy Hardie, a press agent, who think that he is the man responsible. At the hotel Grace meets Maury and tells him she wants an interview with him. The hotel clerk misconstrues the relationship of Clyde and Grace Reeves and orders her from the hotel and Maury makes him apologize. Grace then resigns from the newspaper staff, refusing to use her interview of Maury. Later she tells him that the story concerning the actress was but a sham, for she wanted publicity, and the friendship of the newspaper woman and Maury promises to ripen into love.

The Woman's Share—(TWO REELS)—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 13.—Featuring George Holt and Anne Schaefer. Silas and Martha Hummel are narrow-minded farmers. Martha decides she wants a new dress and takes a basket of eggs and swaps them for some calico. Silas accepts an offer from a Western prospector to join him in a hunt for gold at Death Valley and after prospecting for weeks in vain he gets lost in the valley and in the scorching desert his predicament brings home to him what a miser he has always been. After some time he is found by a hermit-prospector and is cared for. He later returns to his home, renounces the gold lust forever and wins back his wife's love and respect.

Universal Program

Insect Oddities — (SPLIT REEL) — POWERS— OCTOBER 21.—This film shows many tropical members of the insect world. Among the interesting exhibits are some Egyptian scarabs, a luminous beetle, the cricket at close range, katydid, walking-stick bug and the centipede.



A Day in Midland Beach—JOKER—OCTOBER 30. —Tweedledum receives a note from his sweetheart asking him to meet her on a certain boat that leaves for Midland Beach. Leaving the faucet running in his bathtub, he rushes out and makes the boat. During the sail, the boat blows up and Tweedledum floats ashore with his girl. They have a fast day of it, but when at last the girl discovers that her escort's bag contains a dainty assortment of womens' effects, there is a lovers' quarrel and Elsie leaves him in the lurch. Sadly Tweedledum wends his way home and, finding the bathroom flooded, he throws himself into the water and sinks out of sight.

Universal Animated Weekly No. 191—UNIVERSAL—NOVEMBER 3.—Knight Templars' monstrous parade, Chicago, Ill.; secret service men seize explosives after arrest in plot to blow up munition ships, at Weehawken, N. J.; pocket size motorcycle exhibit at Baltimore, Md.; war game on famous Boston Common in which "foes" are repelled; Mexican bandits wreck train near Brownsville, Texas; film stars show fashions. U. S. submarine torpedoed in Baltic by British E. boat, runs ashore near Copenhagen, Denmark; U. S. superdreadnaught Nevada off for speed trials in New York City; Cartoons by Hy Mayer.

His Twentieth Century Susie—JOKER—NOVEMBER 6.—Farmer Stickney receives a letter from his sister Susanne, whom he has not seen for twenty-five years, informing him that she is coming to take care of his household. Ezra Snuck, the "ladies' man" of the village, is present when Stickney receives his letter. The latter shows Ezra a picture of Susie taken while she was eighteen years old. Ezra falls in love with the picture, and through his zeal all the farmers of the community await the arrival of the pretty Susie. But on the arrival of the old maid, the young farmers who have temporarily deserted their loves get their just desserts, and Ezra subsequently gets a ducking in the river at the hands of the disapointed farmers.

Those Kids and Cupid—NESTOR—NOVEMBER 8.— Ray calls on his girl. While passing around the candy to the family the kids take too much and are spanked by papa. They play a trick on Ray, stuffing his pockets with the family silver and then tying the door on the outside. In the early morning when Ray starts to go father hears the noise, and thinking it is a burglar chases Ray out of the house with his old muzzle loader. The next day dad comes to the station house to claim his goods. Fortunately for Ray, the kids appear on the scene and confess their trick.

On the Level—(TWO REELS)—GOLD SEAL— NOVEMBER 9.—Jim Graham takes the blame that rightfully falls to his brother Frank, and is ordered from the house by his father. Thrown upon his own resources, Jim writes a play. He receives aid from Mag, a slavey, who is in reality the actress Elsie Le Roy. Desiring a slavey part in the next season's production, she has determined on actual experience in a cheap lodging house. Mag furnishes Jim the money to put on a good front, and he takes his manuscript to the manager. Meanwhile, Frank, wounded, and thinking he will die, confesses his guilt to his father. Then Jim is called home. He later squares himself with Mag, and learns her real identity.

Getting His Goat—IMP—NOVEMBER 9.—Bill falls into the river. Hanging up his clothes, he jumps back into the water to await their drying out. A goat eats up Bill's clothes, and Violet and her girl friends spread their picnic luncheon nearby. A snake chases the girls off long enough for Bill to wrap himself in the table cloth and escape. Bill finally falls into the hands of the sheriff, but is released when the latter visits the scene of misfortune. In an old boat Bill finds a note from Violet and he calls on her, taking to his heels when he sees she is an old maid. Violet follows him and the chase leads across the fields. Finally a bull puts in his oar and when Bill rescues the girl most of her disguise is gone.

Silk Hose and High Pressure—(THREE REELS) —L-KO—NOVEMBER 10.—It all starts when the actress-wife gives a midnight party to her former associates, and Bill and Mr. Jowlish try to horn in on the revelry. Her husband also is to have a quiet little party with Violet Vere de Vere, the soubrette, but she invites him to the same one his wife is giving. Meetings like this lead to murder. The killing starts with mere pistols, but rapidly branches out until fire hose, cops, explosions, geysers and volcanoes are in the itinerary. Never since have the bachelors flirted nor has the wife given a party.

The Parson of Pine Mountain—REX—NOVEMBER 9.—The parson and Steve Boscombe are both in love with Lizzie, the daughter of Marvin, a hardened mountaineer. Lizzie is in love with Steve, but the latter incurs the enmity of her father by calling on her in a drunken condition, while she is alone in the cabin. The minister wins the old man's affection by reviving him after a wound sustained in a raid on Marvin's whiskey still. But seeing the girl's unshaken love for Steve, the minister does not take advantage of the father's good will. He makes a manly sacrifice, helping Steve make up with the old mountaineer and marrying the happy pair.

Father's Lucky Escape—NESTOR—NOVEMBER 12. —In his love for the popular actress, Neil is very ardent, but has to contend with his disapproving father and the theater manager. Neil disguises as a waiter and the couple cause the downfall of the manager. Father is brought around when he is discovered by Neil in a prearranged flirtation with the actress. The couple have married, but it is up to father to forgive them or take the consequences. They then return home to mother, who receives them with open arms.

Promissory Notes—(LITTLE STORIES OF REAL LIFE—EPISODE NO. 1)—VICTOR—NOVEMBER 12.—

Jack Cuthbert is so busy toiling to supply the needs of his extravagant wife that he finds no time to supply demands of companionship and affection. Mason, a pretended friend of Cuthbert, supplies the necessary requisites. When Cuthbert fails financially, his wife realizes the extent of her love and agrees to accept money from Mason, to help him. She meets Mason that night at his office. Cuthbert's note to Mason has fallen due, but Cuthbert receives a telegram from his business partner urging him to stall Mason off for another day. This is how Cuthbert happens to find his wife in Mason's office. At first he denounces his wife, but a thief who has witnessed the whole affair comes out of the closet and straightens matters out.

Honor Thy Husband—(TWO REELS)—POWERS— NOVEMBER 12.—Urged on by her selfish mother, Flora Kellette marries a well-to-do owner of a vineyard, Mathew King. She imagines herself in love with Frank Wolff and has refused him only because of his poverty. King is brokenhearted to find Wolff on such intimate terms with his wife, but he institutes a plan whereby he can gain her respect and love. Finally Flora realizes where her real love lies, to the shame of Wolff and her selfish mother.

What the River Foretold—(THREE REELS)— BISON—NOVEMBER 13.—After years of fruitless searching, Jim and his partner discover gold. Jim is eager to return to his sweetheart, Maggie, and takes Bill along to act as best man. From the start Bill exerts a strange influence over Maggie, and she finally discovers that she loves Bill and not Jim. Maggie elopes with Bill, and Jim, heartbroken, returns to the desert. Bill takes to a life of gambling. Many years later, for diversion, Jim gets into a faro game. The dealer cheats, but Jim, recognizing in him his former pal, tries to protect him from the angry players. He recovers his $50,000 and then discloses his identity to Bill. Before Bill is hung by the furious mob, he gives Jim his daughter's address. Maggie has died long since. Jim, out of love for his former sweetheart's child, writes her, telling of her father's accidental death, and enclosing the $50,000.

The Masked Substitute—(TWO REELS)—LAEMMLE—NOVEMBER 14.—June Clay, a mountain girl, is loved by Jim Dexter, a forest ranger. She returns his love but longs for the wealth and luxury that is displayed at the hunting lodge

HEADQUARTERS
FOR MOVING PICTURE
CAMERAS
TRIPODS
PRINTERS, ETC.
PATHE, MOY & PRESTWICK
GOODS, ALWAYS IN STOCK
MOTION PICTURE APPARATUS CO., INC.
810 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY, N.Y.

The manufacturer who brands his films and advertises them in Motography is so sure of their quality that he is willing to stand the full force of possible complaints.

He is making something for which he is proud to be responsible. His trade mark secures for him the increased sales that result from satisfaction and identification. At the same time it secures to the great mass of exhibitors the certainty of quality which the known manufacturer must maintain if he is to continue to be successful.

When you book films, book films that are trademarked and advertised in Motography. The manufacturers of such films stand behind them. Your satisfaction is vital to the continued success of the trade-marked advertised films.

Trade marks and advertising in Motography are the two greatest servants in the film business today. Their whole tendency is to raise qualities and standardize them while reducing prices and stabilizing them.

nearby. At the lodge lives Earl Metcalf. The announcement of his marriage to Olive, his father's ward, is to be made at the masked ball that night. But Olive has become fascinated by Victor Melville, and just before the ball he persuades her to leave with him, June taking Olive's place at the lodge. Victor inveigles Olive into a road house, and starts to insult her. Just then Jim peers through the window, and thinking the girl is June, shoots Victor. Soon after June and Earl burst through the door. Explanations follow. Olive realizes the worth of her childhood sweetheart, and June knows that Jim is the only "Prince Charming" for her.

Liquid Dynamite—Rex—November 14. — Joe Temple camps near the cottage of old man Belton and his daughter. Belton, in charge of the power house station, receives a letter from headquarters warning him to be careful of strangers, as a charge of dynamite was found under power house No. 2. Tex, Belton's daughter, and Joe have become quite thick, but one day she sees him, while near the power house, take a thermos bottle out of his knapsack. After a struggle with herself, she returns to the cottage after her father. It takes a long time for the astonished Joe to learn why he is being arrested, and after finding out, it requires much encouragement to get the man and his daughter to approach the "inferno machine" in order to find out that it contains only hot coffee.

Feature Programs

Fox

Carmen — (Five Reels) — Fox. — Featuring Theda Bara. The general outline of the story is the same as the opera version, though some of the incidents are different. Don Jose, a young soldier, is betrothed to Micaela, but after meeting Carmen forgets the girl and she persuades him to join a band of smugglers. Carmen meets Escamillo, hero of a bull fight, and discards Don Jose, who follows her to the bull fight, where she has gone to applaud Escamillo, and stabs her through the heart.

The Family Stain—(Five Reels).—Frederick Perry featured. About twenty years before the action of the play takes place the baby son of Valerie Gerdy and the heir of Richard Cameron are supposed to be changed by one Claudine LeRouge, who acts under order from Cameron. When Noel Gerdy grows up he finds letters which lead him to believe he is the heir of Richard Cameron, and upon further investigation finds that the substitution did not take place, but that Claudine and his mother are the only ones who know the truth of the situation. Later one night Claudine is found murdered and three men are suspected, her husband, an old sailor, Albert Cameron, the real son and another, Noel Gerdy. It is finally found that Noel Gerdy is the guilty man, but he commits suicide before he is caught.

Kleine-Edison

The Sentimental Lady—(Five Reels)—Kleine-Edison—November 3.—Adapted from the novel by Owen Davis and featuring Irene Fenwick. Norman Van Aulsten proposes marriage to Amy Cary because he desires to gain control of her stock in the People's Gas Company. She accepts Norman. Bob Nelson knows the latter's intentions and attempts to dissuade Amy, but is not successful. Bob then determines to adopt strenuous methods. He invites her to go for a row with him and sets out for an island, where her uncle is supposed to be. Alone on the island, their boat having drifted away, Amy comes to the conclusion that she loves Bob better than Norman, and later when she learns of Norman's real intentions she unhesitatingly promises to marry Bob. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Metro

Pennington's Choice—(Five Reels)—Metro—November 8.—Featuring Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne. Jules Blondeau puts Robert Pennington, who desires to marry Eugenia, to a test of his courage, telling him that it is not enough that he give Eugenia only wealth and social position. Pennington is to live in the North Woods for a month. He visits the camp of his friend James Jeffries and there goes through some training stunts. He then fights and bests the two men who have dogged him. He not only proves his physical courage but his loyalty to Eugenia and in the end receives Blondeau's consent to the marriage. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Mutual Master-Pictures

The Seventh Noon—(Five Reels)—Mutual.—Ernest Glendinning and Winifred Kingston are featured in this well-photographed story of a lawyer's attempt to end his life by poison and his relief upon discovering the poison ineffective. A complete review appears on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

North American

The Diamond From the Sky—Chapter 29—"A Deal With Destiny."—Arthur and Esther marry and Esther refuses to go to Stanley Hall as its rightful heir, preferring the life of a gypsy. Blair Stanley, with his wife, who was Vivian Marston, with "The Diamond From the Sky" in their possession, go to London and there take up their life. De Vaux, who has followed the pair to London, manages in a clever way to get the jewel from Blair Stanley, and as we last see the young American Earl he is lying unconscious on the stairway in Stanley Hall. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

Paramount

Carmen — (Five Reels) — Lasky. — Featuring Geraldine Farrar. This elaborate picture, featuring the well-known grand opera star, Geraldine Farrar, was given a long review in the October 30 issue of Motography, page 883.

The Secret Sin—(Five Reels)—Lasky.—Featuring Blanche Sweet. In the Martin family are the twin sisters, Edith and Grace, together with a brother, Dan, and their mother. Grace, through an ignorant doctor, becomes addicted to the use of morphine. Dan strikes it rich and a year later we see Grace now thoroughly bound to the habit. Edith is in love with Jack Herron and Grace, who is jealous, lies to Herron, saying that she takes morphine, and a party is proposed for Chinatown whereby Herron can see where the drug comes from. While he is dancing with Edith Grace slinks away into an opium den and there becomes unconscious. Later she is taken to a hospital, where she has a good chance for recovering, and Jack begs Edith's forgiveness for his suspicion, and the two lovers are reconciled.

Pathe

Pathe News No. 86—Pathe—October 27.—Lieut. Robert Fay is arrested at Weehawken, N. J., while testing explosives supposed to be for use against munition works; Luther Burbank, Thomas A. Edison and Henry Ford arrive in San Francisco; Madame Tamaki Miura, Japanese prima donna, arrives in New York to sing in grand opera; Pittsburgh University beats Philadelphia 14-7; Washington market, built on site of old fire station, opened in New York City; famous munition works in full blast at Le Creusot, France; Mexican bandits burn bridge and wreck a train on the St. Louis-Mexico Railroad; Pathe Paris fashions; submarine L-14, built for British Government, undergoes her trials at Providence, Mass.; model yacht contest held at San Francisco; suffragette parade in New York City.

Pathe News No. 87—Pathe—October 30.—Winston Churchill, who inaugurated the unfortunate Dardanelles expedition, urges munition workers to produce shells to their utmost capacity, London, England; monument surrounded by a cannon from the Battleship Maine, unveiled at White Plains, N. Y.; great recruiting campaign, London, England; Illinois Naval Militia men have training in marksmanship on board the gunboat Isla de Luzon on Lake Michigan; Pathe American fashions; cartoon by Vincent Colby; St. John parochial school at Peabody, Mass., is burned with the loss of twenty-one lives; U. S. S.

Nevada leaves for speed trials, Brooklyn, N. Y.; "Pop" Geers, noted race horse track man, races against time for Tennessee records at Nashville, Tenn.; Knight Templars' demonstration held in Chicago, Ill.

The Menace of the Mute—(FIVE REELS)—PATHE-GOLD ROOSTER.—Play produced by Arnold Daly, who plays the leading role, and directed by Ashley Miller. The cast includes Sheldon Lewis and Louise Rutter. James Morris confesses to his fiancee that there is something in his life about which he cannot tell her at present. She consults Aston-Kirke, who unravels mysteries for the pleasure it gives him. Morris is known to have made frequent visits to David Hume, who, like himself, is a marine architect. Hume is murdered and through force of circumstances Edyth and Morris suspect each other. Kirke learns that Hume was in possession of drawings of a submarine which he had stolen from Morris' father. Everything points to Morris as the murderer, but Kirke's deductions lead him to the guilty man—a mute who knew of the drawings and who was one of Humes' former business associates. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

The Lilac Splash—(TWO REELS)—PATHE.—Fifth episode in the "New Adventures of Wallingford" series, produced by the Whartons and featuring Burr McIntosh, Max Figman and Lolita Robertson. Andre Perigourd, American representative of a Paris modiste, allows the firm's competitors to copy the designs. Perigourd is on Violet Warden's list of men who ruined her father. Blackie, in all confidence, tells Perigourd that Wallingford is a shrewd investor and never fails to triple the money his clients entrust to him. He is allowed to make a few small investments, which are most successful. He then insists upon playing big, and forces Wallingford to take his $60,000. The next day he receives a note informing him that he is broke. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Neal of the Navy—(TWO REELS)—PATHE-BALBOA.—Tenth episode entitled "The Rolling Terror." Annette and her party leave the island of Tortuga and journey further South in search of her inheritance, Lost Island. They are followed by Hernandez, Ponto and the Brute Man. On shipboard Annette learns that Inez Castro, who has pretended friendship, is in league with Hernandez. Inez escapes from the "Albany" and joins her friends, the smugglers. Later Hernandez boards a train Annette is riding on, and after taking the map of Lost Island overpowers the crew and leaves the train standing. Neal and a squad of sailors, who are following on a rolling "flat-car," is unable to stop it, as the brakes have been put out of working order by Ponto. Moved by some strange instinct, the brute man averts a tragedy by derailing the "rolling terror." T. C. K.

Universal Special

A Timely Rescue—(21ST EPISODE OF "THE BROKEN COIN").—In Gretzhoffen, the Prime Minister receives Frederick's wireless message and with a few soldiers boards a swift yacht. Kitty, Frederick and the old sailor are rescued from "The Princess." Not far off on the same sea are King Phillip and Count Sachio, bound toward the same port (Gretzhoffen), intent on destroying that town. Nearing the port Kitty's party accidently learn of Sachio's intended attack and land in time to scrape together an army. Sachio's forces are worsted, and realizing the necessity for quick action, Sachio leaves the battlefield for the palace, where he hopes to find the jewels and treasures. His departure is noticed by Kitty, and she and Frederick corner the Count. In the ensuing scuffle Kitty succeeds in getting Sachio's coins, but he sneeringly remarks that they are worthless. Kitty surprises both the men by taking the other coin out of her blouse. Then she starts for the torture chambers with the real coins to find the secret place of the treasures of Gretzhoffen.

The Frame-Up—(FIVE REELS)—UNIVERSAL.—George Fawcett is featured in this splendidly produced story of dirty politics, in which Fawcett plays the part of an honest mayor who cannot be bribed or threatened. The picture is fully reviewed on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

V. L. S. E. Inc.

The Crimson Wing—(SIX REELS)—ESSANAY—NOVEMBER 1.—E. H. Calvert, the producer of this story from the pen of Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, himself enacts the leading role, supported by Beverly Bayne, Ruth Stonehouse, Bryant Washburn and other Essanay favorites. The picture is unique in many ways and against a background of war presents an interesting love story. A longer review of the offering appears on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

The Turn of the Road—(FIVE REELS)—V. L. S. E.—NOVEMBER 1.—A Blue Ribbon Feature produced by Tefft Johnson. Cast with Joseph Kilgour, Virginia Pearson and Naomi Childers. Helen King's school chum, Marcia Wilber, comes to visit at the King home. She is a born coquette and practices all her arts on John King. They decide to elope. King, driving his car, loses control and the machine plunges over a cliff. Marcia and King are brought to his home. She temporarily loses her reason. In the end John and Helen are reunited and Marcia marries Dr. White. For a longer review see another page of this issue. T. C. K.

Associated Service

Released Week of November 8.

School Day Memories—BANNER.—Harry, who is happily married, comes across a photograph of an early sweetheart and his thoughts of the past are depicted on the screen, which shows him the leader in the school-room pranks and later change to early manhood at college, and then the commencing of his occupation of life. When his dreams are ended the material element of life in the person of his beautiful wife comes to tell him that dinner is served.

All Balled Up—LIBERTY.—Sid and Pat, two sun bathers, catch sight of pretty Ann Blaum, who is taking an early ride through the park, and Pat and Ann are immediately smitten with each other. Pat and Sid hire a couple of livery horses and ask Ann to accompany them on a ride. However, Sid's horse is stolen so Pat and Ann ride away, leaving Sid. He engages three hobos to kidnap Ann, but they steal Ann's stout cook and when Sid appears with a marriage license and beholds the astonished cook he is thunder-struck.

The Jitney Submarine—ATLAS.—Professor I. N. Tinker, an inventor, invents a submarine which will cost the country about 1,000 pesos in Villa's money or 14 cents in American money. In the making of this submarine things begin to happen and they happen too fast to describe. The story is written around the latest rumors of the Ford submarine.

The Crimson Circle—(TWO REELS)—SANTA BARBARA.—Carlo Marino, an aged musician, is trying to separate himself from the survivors of a secret society who are working under the title of "The Crimson Circle." However, Luigi, the ruler of the circle, tells Carlo he must appear at a meeting that evening and attempts to carry into execution a plot he has formed to rob an express office, where Floria, Carlo's daughter, works. Later the old man is lured to a den, but is rescued by Floria and succeeds in breaking up the gang.

The Bond Between—(THREE REELS)—SANTA BARBARA.—Ruth, the daughter of a gambler, meets Jack Blair, the brother of her friend Clara, and they immediately fall in love with each other. Jack leaves for the West and Ruth arrives in time to frustrate an attempt, made by her father, to kill him. Jack and Ruth are married and five years they are happy in the possession of a comfortable home and a boy. Jack's memory is a blank from injuries inflicted by Ruth's father and the arrival of his mother and his sister precipitates a climax, as they are held up by Garstone's gang and a satchel stolen which contains a family picture. As the picture closes Ruth and her child are folded in the arms of the man to whom the baby boy had proved "The Bond Between."

SOME NEW THEATERS

California.

Manager Charles E. Hart, of the Peninsula theater in San Mateo, is preparing to entirely remodel his show house.

The Star theater, Mayfield, which has been under new management the last two months, has again changed hands, and is now managed by J. P. Schafer.

Delaware.

Exhibitors Mutual Film Corporation,

"BUILT BY BRAINS"

You Can't Show a Beautiful Film on a Poor Screen.

When you buy a Minusa Screen you don't merely buy it by the square foot. Minusa Screens are "BUILT BY BRAINS" to suit all the particular requirements of YOUR particular theatre.

Write for our literature

Minusa Cine Products Co.

St. Louis, Mo. — Houser Building — Calgary, Canada — Grand Theatre Bldg. — San Francisco — 117-19 Golden Gate Ave.

New York — 19 W. 23rd St. — Chicago — 154 West Lake St. — Pittsburg — 422 First Ave.

Tell me how long your throw is, the size of your house and what size picture you want and I'll tell you

The Screen You Ought to Have

We make Rembusch Patented Glass Mirror Screens. Glass transparent screens for rear projection and all kinds of cloth curtains for motion picture projection. Gold fibre screens. Silver fibre screens. Mirror cloth screens. White opaque screens. Seamless, with stretchers or rollers. Mirrors of all kinds and re-silvering. Poster frames.

FRANK J. REMBUSCH, Pres.

MIRROR SCREEN CO., Shelbyville, Ind.

Mr. Exhibitor:

We can convince you that the

Bartola Orchestra

is superior to any other for your Theatre. Give us a chance. Write for catalogue.

Sold on Easy Terms

Bartola Musical Instrument Co.

Chas. C. Pyle, General Sales Agent — 710-711 Mallers Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Factory: Oshkosh, Wisconsin

THE TALK OF THE MOTION PICTURE FIELD

Goes POSTERS

POST THEM AND PACK YOUR THEATRE

GOES—CHICAGO

of Delaware, capital, $800,000; Martin E. Smith, T. Morley Smith, Enoch B. Sadler, Wilmington.

Pennsylvania.

Franklin Film Manufacturing Corporation, Philadelphia; $200,000.

Washington, D. C.

Mrs. C. H. Hughes will shortly make some improvements to her motion picture theater at 800 H street, northeast.

Illinois.

The Heiman Theatrical Syndicate has taken a lease for ten years on the moving picture theater to be built on the site of the present Burke barn on South Neil street, Champaign.

The Crystal theater in the Fraternity building, La Salle, is now open and giving two shows a week. The building has been remodeled and renovated and is as near fireproof as can be made.

Clarence Heltness of Rochelle is contemplating opening a motion picture show at Byron.

J. R. Bennett, who recently sold the Gem theater in Macomb, has purchased a moving picture theater at Milton, Iowa. It is the only show in the town, with a seating capacity of 700.

Indiana.

Medcalf & Haugland of Dale have leased the opera house in Tell City from Charles Werner and will operate it as a motion picture theater.

Homer C. Barcus has bought the interest of his partner, Fred Mater, in the Gem theater, Crawfordsville. Mr. Mater has leased the Theatorium of A. S. Miller.

One of the finest moving picture houses in this section is planned by the Ashby-Sergeant Company on the site now occupied by the William E. French store, 216-218 Main street, Evansville. The plan as announced by Mr. Ashby will call for the erection of a new building and will cost about $100,000.

The Crystal theater in Columbus has been reopened after being closed for a few months. It has been thoroughly remodeled and its seating capacity is now 800. E. E. Norman, manager, says he will show two acts of vaudeville, and pictures.

Ben Cohn, Spokane jeweler, has just completed in Indianapolis the organization of a corporation which will erect a six-story building to house a $250,000 moving picture theater on Monumental circle in that city. Work on the construction of the theater will be started immediately. The house will seat 3,000 people, and will be one of the largest in the United States.

Iowa.

The Casino theater in Davenport is being completely redecorated and renovated. Louis XIV style of decoration in old rose and gray has been decided upon. There will be a complete refurnishing of silk tapestries to harmonize with the general color scheme, while numerous small details will be added to make the theater as pretty as possible.

Kansas.

E. L. Martling, manager of the Crawford theater, Wichita, and S. M. Chambers, manager of the Princess in the same city, together with some other theatrical men of Wichita, are now building a $75,000 moving picture theater. It will have a seating capacity of 1,800 people.

The old Universalist Church on Cross street, Somerville, is to be used as a motion picture house.

Maryland.

J. E. Laferty, architect, is preparing plans for a one-story theater, 50 by 150 feet, to be erected at North avenue and Ninth street, Baltimore, for the Walbrook Amusement Company. Plans will probably be ready for bids in about two weeks.

Michigan.

Muskegon Heights is to have its first moving picture show. John A. Lafayette of Muskegon will erect a fireproof playhouse to cost about $5,000 on McKinley avenue. The front will be of colonial design. The theater will seat 300. Mr. Lafayette says his playhouse will be ready for its formal opening about December 1.

Ed J. Butler has awarded the contract for the new theater to be built on Main street, Ishpeming. Work has been started and will be rushed in order that the building can be opened during the holidays. It will be known as the Ideal and seat 700.

H. W. Beecher of Grand Rapids is planning on the construction of another motion picture theater. Architect Pierre Lindhout is drawing the plans. The theater will be built at Leonard street and Alpine avenue, N. W., and will have a seating capacity of 500.

Work has been started on the foundation for a building to be used as a motion picture show on West Leonard street, Grand Rapids, for S. Rose.

Mississippi.

The Lomo, in Hattiesburg, the largest motion picture theater in Mississippi, was opened October 21. It is constructed of brick and reinforced concrete. The front is of stucco, with one large entrance in the center and two smaller entrances, one of which leads to the offices and operating room on the second floor and the gallery on the third floor. The walls are plain white and are paneled. The wood used throughout is of a dull mission finish. Seating capacity 1,000.

Missouri.

The Ritz theater, on the east side of Sixth street, St. Louis, will be opened November 13, as announced by F. H. Van Crannenbroek, vice-president of the company. The theater will have a seating capacity of 800, 500 of which will be on the main floor. The foyer, with its brown tile floor and beautifully decorated walls and ceilings, will be separated from the theater proper by a low oak-paneled screen. The lower walls of the auditorium will be paneled in oak and the side walls and proscenium are to be decorated with paintings. The color scheme will be ivory buff and peacock blue, with touches of gold and bronze.

Nebraska.

Houghton & Ansell have been given the contract for building the new Boulevard theater, a moving picture house, for Hugh McCaffrey at Thirty-third and Leavenworth, Omaha. It will cost about $10,000, and will be 42x100 feet in size.

New York.

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Grandin Films, Inc., dealers in motion picture films, at 1402 Broadway, and 69 West Ninetieth street. Assets and liabilities not given. The sole petioning creditor is James A. Whitman of Cliffside, N. J., $2,000.

Leland R. McLeod of Penn Yan has purchased the lease of the Sampson theater held by A. B. Hilkirk of Geneva, possession being given October 18. L. E. Barger, the present manager, will continue to manage the theater.

Coles Picture Machine Corporation, Manhattan. General moving picture machinery and devices, etc.; capital, $50,000. Incorporators: H. R. Coles, W. H. Coles, 544 West One Hundred and Fifty-seventh street, New York City; O. Schultheis, 128 Cornelia street, Brooklyn.

Ohio.

Shortly after the first of the year Delaware can boast of a large new moving picture theater with a seating capacity of 800. Such is the announcement made by the Delaware Realty Company, successors to the Hotel Donavin Company, who closed a lease with Henry Bieberson, Jr., of Wheeling, W. Va. The new theater is to be located in the west half of the building on East Winter street now occupied by the New York Cash Store company. Work of remodeling the building will be begun within the next few weeks. Architects are now preparing the plans and it is hoped to let the contract within several weeks.

Frank Berrill of Grafton has purchased the Pastime theater in Lorain from John K. Peters.

The Colonial moving picture theater on East Main street, Ashland, has been attractively improved. The interior has been prettily decorated, new curtains hung and a noiseless cork carpet placed in the aisles. The Colonial is managed by Myers & Brubaker.

The East Liverpool Photoplay Company, East Liverpool; capital, $10,000; moving picture business. Incorporators: Sherman T. Martin, John A. Medcalf, Frank Demetros, Victor Biddle and Lee Von Tilburg.

The Mystic theater, one of the larger motion picture houses of Tiffin, has been sold by Jacob F. Peter and George Knestrict to J. Frank Daugherty and Charles T. Lambertson. Mr. Lamberton will have active management.

The Princess theater in Youngstown will be remodeled. I. M. Hartzell is manager.

Oregon.

The Star theater, at Park and Washington streets, Portland, has been closed for two weeks to permit the house to be remodeled and redecorated. A new lobby is to be constructed, opening on both Washington and Park streets, which will be finished in marble and tiling. There will be a marquise over both entrances. The interior of the house will be redecorated, and the lighting system will be changed for both the interior and exterior. The plans anticipate making of the Star one of the model moving picture houses of the city. The cost of the improvements will approximate $4,000.

MOTOGRAPHY

The MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

MARY PICKFORD, WITH FAMOUS PLAYERS—PARAMOUNT.

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, NOVEMBER 20, 1915 No. 21

LUBIN

MONDAY NOV. 22ND

L.C. SHUMWAY

IN

"An Ambassador from the Dead"

ONE ACT DRAMA

TUESDAY NOV. 23RD

D.L. DON

IN

"Limberger's Victory"

ONE ACT COMEDY

WEDNESDAY NOV. 24TH

FRANCIS JOYNER

IN

"The Medolesome Darling"

TWO ACT DRAMA

THURSDAY NOV. 25TH

L.C. SHUMWAY

IN

"As the Twig is Bent"

THREE ACT DRAMA

FRIDAY NOV. 26TH

L.C. SHUMWAY

IN

"Meg of the Cliffs"

ONE ACT DRAMA

SATURDAY NOV. 27TH

BILLIE REEVES

IN "Blaming the Duck"

OR "Ducking the Blame"

ONE ACT COMEDY

GENERAL FILM

LUBIN

RELEASES

The Triangle Plan Based on Values

In establishing Triangle Service plain-well-known normal commercial rules have been followed—the rules that have proved the foundation of every great enterprise.

Men and women will pay a dollar for a dollar's worth, but they won't knowingly pay that sum for half values. In New York at the Knickerbocker Theatre people are paying $2.00 to see Triangle Plays. They are patronizing these products because they are getting $2.00 in valuable entertainment. They would not do this week after week if they did not believe they benefited equitably: if they did not get value for value.

In other cities throughout this country, Triangle Quality is proving its worth in similar fashions. Men of experience have viewed Triangle productions, have estimated their value, and have gone back home to Columbus, Cleveland, Louisville, Norfolk, Richmond, Brooklyn and so on, to offer these film dramas to their regular patrons at regular theatre prices. These managers know the people they have dealt with for years. They are saying:

"We have never sold you cheap or inferior goods. We will not now. Triangle Plays are worth what any other good play is worth."

How many film dramas do you suppose that could be said of?

TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION
71 WEST 23rd ST. NEW YORK

One of the intense moments in Metro's multiple reel feature "Barbara Fritchie."

MOTOGRAPHY

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED THE NICKELODEON

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, NOVEMBER 20, 1915 No. 21

Triumph Plans Important Productions

ENGAGING NEW STARS

WITH the Equitable program now practically outlined for the forthcoming half year, Equitable's chief producing ally, the Triumph Film Corporation, of which Arthur H. Jacobs is the executive head and Joseph Golden director in chief, announces, as its more important activities of the next six months, six releases in which eight of the foremost stars and noted players of the legitimate stage will make their appearance.

Triumph's past releases on the Equitable program included Hilda Spong in "Divorced," Lenore Ulrich in "The Better Woman," Julius Steger in "The Master of the House," and Helen Ware in "The Price," all of which were supervised by Director Golden himself.

Through General Manager Jacobs arrangements were entered into last week whereby Harriet Ford, author of "The Argyle Case," "The Dummy," and other big legitimate successes, will in the future devote her time to constructing scenarios exclusively for Triumph. This is a tremendous advance in scenario work, for Miss Ford is considered one of the most prolific and versatile of dramatic writers of the day, and at present has contracts for four different legitimate productions for Broadway appearing during the forthcoming season.

Henry Kolker, who is now working in "The Warning," under the directorial auspices of Edmund Lawrence, has been engaged for three additional productions, which will characterize the Equitable releasing chart at periods of from three to four months apart. Mr. Lawrence will begin work immediately upon the production of "The Ransom," in which the estimable Julia Dean will star. Miss Dean recently began rehearsing for her latest starring vehicle, which opens at a Broadway house soon, and it will be necessary for her to divide her time between studio and stage, but as Equitable will not release the Dean picture until early in January, ample time is allowed for her legitimate work.

Marie Empress, last seen in "When We Were Twenty-One," in which she portrayed the role of the vampire woman, will be featured by Triumph in a sensational dramatic offering based on one of Guy De Maupassant's stories which is now in the making. Miss Empress will begin work about November 14 upon the completion of a large wardrobe. The De Maupassant script calls for elaborate apparel.

Charles J. Ross, now playing in "The Senator," William H. Crane's former vehicle, is at work at Washington, D. C., under director Joseph H. Golden. "The Senator" will be seen on the Equitable program about December 20.

The Triumph scenario department is now in complete charge of Eve Unsell, formerly with Famous Players, Harriet Ford, Mr. Golden and Arthur Jacobs.

HERRINGTON ISSUES CALL

Summons Exhibitors of Baltimore, Washington, Richmond and Surrounding Towns to Meet with Him at Baltimore

Fred J. Herrington, national president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, has issued a call to the exhibitors of Baltimore, Washington, Richmond and the surrounding towns for a meeting to be held at the New Howard hotel, in Baltimore, Md., on Sunday, November 14, for the purpose of forming an organization of exhibitors in that territory and later affiliating this organization with the National League.

In this call Mr. Herrington points out that there are many important matters in the way of legislation affecting the motion picture industry which will be discussed at the coming session of Congress, included among them being such matters as the war tax and the question of a National Censor Board for Motion Pictures, and the exhibitors to date have not organized sufficiently to earnestly combat this legislation.

Mr. Herrington appeals to the exhibitors as business men, asking them to lay aside any personal grievances that may exist and to unite with their brother exhibitors in other parts of the country in creating a gigantic organization, which when called upon to meet detrimental legislation will have force enough at their command not only to secure a hearing before either state or national legislative bodies, but also to win out in their demands.

Surely every exhibitor, in the territory mentioned by Mr. Herrington in his call, will respond, and if he cannot be present himself will at least send a representative to Baltimore for the purpose of meeting with the other exhibitors.

Two More Big Ones on the Way

The production of two new Ince-supervised Triangle features was begun this week at Inceville. One will serve to introduce Frank Keenan and Mary Boland as co-stars, while the other will have at the head of its cast William H. Thompson, the dean of the American stage, whose work in support of Billie Burke is expected to merit the highest praise.

The Keenan-Boland vehicle is in the hands of Director Reginald Barker. It is a virile play of modern life with New York as its locale and a forceful financier as its dominant character. The script demands the erection of many massive settings, the first of which will be ready, it is expected, in another fortnight. In the meantime the company is enacting exterior scenes. Among those prominently cast in support of Mr. Keenan and Miss Boland is Robert McKim, who has scored a noteworthy success in "The Disciple," the Ince-Triangle feature starring William S. Hart. C. Gardner Sullivan is the author.

The story in which William H. Thompson has started work as a star is a sea drama from the pen of J. G. Hawks. It is replete with thrills and is declared to offer the veteran actor unequalled opportunities. Owing to the fact that a number of the scenes are laid in mid-ocean, it will be necessary for the principals and a large company to make a voyage many miles from shore. This will be done aboard the Fremont, Ince's barkentine, now at anchor in Los Angeles harbor. The principal support to Mr. Thompson will be contributed by Jack Standing and Louise Glaum. Both these favorites are working now in support of William S. Hart, who expects to conclude work on his current feature in another week. The Thompson production is being directed by Charles Giblyn.

OCEAN COMPANY'S FIRST FILM

New Producing Organization Has Nearly Completed First Offering, Which Will Be Entitled "Life Without Soul" and Features Percy Standing

The inital production of the Ocean Film Corporation promises to be a most sensational feature. The photoplay was written by Jesse J. Goldburg, the vice-president and general manager of the company, and the cast returned last week after spending three days at St. Augustine, Fla., two weeks at Jacksonville, Fla., and five days at Dahlonega, Ga., returning to New York from Savannah by steamer, in order to procure scenes on deck of an ocean-going liner at sea.

Being the initial production of the Ocean Film Corporation, it was determined to produce a feature with as much varied atmosphere as was possible to procure. The photoplay embraces scenes of the deserts, in the semi-tropics, on the high seas in a three-masted schooner as well as a passenger liner, and also in the mountainous regions of interior Georgia, winding up in the metropolis of New York.

The name of the production has heretofore been kept secret, but announcement is now made that the feature will be entitled "Life Without Soul."

Four hundred and sixty-three scenes are incorporated in the script, and the marvelous scenic beauty which the company promises has seldom been equaled in any photoplay, is enhanced and supported by a story unusual in its intensity, dealing with the artificial creation of a being who acts as the nemesis of its creator. In the course of the making of the picture, a fight is staged between the Creation and the crew of the three-masted schooner, in which Percy Standing, who assumes the role of the Creation, precipitates the entire crew overboard.

Hazardous exploits were engaged in, one of which called for the blowing up of the side of a mountain, in order to cause a landslide, the huge boulders blocking up a cave in which the Creation has taken refuge.

Besides Percy Standing, the leads in the cast include William A. Cohill, Jack Hopkins, Lucy Cotton, Josephine Marshall and Sue Balfore.

A scene from Ocean Film Company's "Life Without Soul."

The Ocean Film Corporation was organized by John L. Dudley, representing a group of capitalists, and Mr. Goldburg. While the initial production will be disposed of on a state rights basis, the company will proceed to manufacture and release five-part features under a franchise which will be awarded to exchanges throughout the country. George DeCarlton has been engaged as manager of productions. No stock company will be employed, but each production will have a separate and independent cast specially engaged. Offices have been engaged in the Candler building, 220 West Forty-second street, New York City.

The company has been organized with a capital stock of $200,000, under the laws of the state of New York, and particular stress is laid by the management on the fact that none of the stock is for sale to the public.

Mr. Goldburg states it will be the policy of the company to produce unusual features of themes never heretofore touched, largely adaptations from literary masterpieces. The company will have ultimately eight producing companies, in order to allow each as much time as is necessary to complete a perfect photoplay, without the haste that has characterized some of the features heretofore made.

World Film's New Purchasing Agent

Lewis J. Selznick believes in youth and always gives it its chance. Joe Harnd is only twenty-five years of age, but he is the purchasing agent of the World Film Corporation. His face and his record speak for themselves. Here is his record.

He was five years purchasing agent for a large silk firm; then he worked for two years for the United States Printing and Lithographing Company. He has been with the World Film for a year, in which organization he started in a lowly position, before he attained his present promotion. Mr. Harnd is a hard worker, conscientious in the performance of his duties, and, above all things, loyal to his company. Loyalty and ability are the things that count with World Film. He will be successful, because he has a character that makes for success.

Marguerite Clayton of Essanay

Marguerite Clayton, who is so well known as leading woman with "Broncho Billy"—G. M. Anderson—at Essanay's western studio at Niles, Cal., now is at the eastern studios at Chicago, where she is taking leading parts. Miss Clayton, who is 21 years old, has been in motion picture work but two and a half years, but rose rapidly from an extra girl to leads. She joined the Essanay company by answering an advertisement for a position. She is a girl of the western plains, having been born and raised in Ogden, Utah, where her father is a civil engineer.

Marguerite Clayton.

Her first play with the eastern company is "A Daughter of the City," a five-act feature, which is released on the V. L. S. E. program in December. Miss Clayton plays the lead, the part of a daughter of the city. E. H. Calvert plays the leading masculine role, that of the wealthy business man, who has become a vulture. The hero role is taken by John Junior, well known for years on the speaking stage.

Miss Clayton is remarkably well fitted for her part, that of a young and innocent girl, poor and beautiful, who easily falls into the clutches of the vulture, but whose inherent goodness and horror of evil finally extricates her from the net set for her. The play itself is a strong morality drama and one that sounds a note of warning to all girls to keep far from the primrose path. The play was directed by E. H. Calvert.

Universal Fort Lee Studios

Ten years ago the little borough of Fort Lee, New Jersey, was in every particular a rural hamlet.

But great change came with the advent of the motion picture industry. One day not many years ago some prominent motion picture men from New York, casting about for a place to erect a studio, decided to come to New Jersey and look about for a desirable spot.

This visit was the beginning of the motion picture business in Bergen county; and in a very few years, eight or ten of the representative motion picture companies had studios and finishing plants in Coytesville and Fort Lee.

What is claimed to be the greatest of all, however, is not yet finished, but is so well under way that in two weeks' time Fort Lee will have what is said to be the greatest motion picture plant in the world. It is the Universal Film Manufacturing Company which has chosen a site in South Fort Lee for its largest buildings and greatest equipment for the manufacture of motion pictures.

The new plant consists of two enormous buildings and one smaller one. The largest of all contains the studios, with huge glass roofs, where pictures are taken, and great scenes are stored; in the other building is the developing, finishing, perforating end of the business, where the exposed films are turned over for the various processes they must go through before they are sent to the distributing agencies.

The plant is equipped with newly invented film tanks, perfected modern cutting, developing, drying and shipping departments. Just to show to what ends the film manufacturer has gone to perfect his products, it might be mentioned that he has installed a complete modern ice-making machine to cool the air in summer in the drying room, so that the film may not lose an atom of its original brilliancy and smoothness.

In one of the departments certain valuable chemicals and minerals, such as silver, are used. In order that not a speck may be wasted, the tables on which these minerals are used are equipped with vacuum pumps. The left-over shavings of silver are sucked into pipes and transferred into a retaining vault in a separate building, where they are refined and again rendered usable.

Perhaps one of the greatest features of the new Universal plant is its absolute immunity from fire. In the first place, the studios and developing and finishing departments are constructed of fire-proof materials. But this is not the only preventive; a complete sprinkler system has been installed. One end of a room can be completely shut off from any other part of the building by a sheet of water. Flames can be raging in one place, while the rest of the plant can be made completely free from danger.

The plant will, however, be insured. In order to convince the insurance companies that there is practically no danger of destruction by flames, a test was arranged at which the chief the New York fire department and many other prominent fire experts were present.

The test was made essentially to explode the old theory that celluloid films are capable of bursting into flame by spontaneous combustion. But the test also showed that the building in which the Universal films are stored is fireproof.

While a host of experts watched, an electric button was pressed which set fire to the films stored in a small building in the rear of the great finishing building. Flames shot out from the room as the combustible material went up in smoke, but not an atom of damage was done to anything else, except a tree near a window of the building, which was badly scorched. The test was succcessful; it proved that even if fire should occur, the modern equipment installed will prevent any serious damage.

The Ghent theater of Norfolk, Virginia, a Paramount house, recently ran a question contest which, it has been announced, was won by F. L. Russell of 908 Redgate avenue.

The burning question was: "What is the greatest advantage of the neighborhood house?" and Mr. Russell's answer follows:

No street car fare,
Good pure fresh air,
Clean, comfortable seats
And the people one meets
Make the Ghent Picture Show
The best place to go.

DO YOU CARE TO CONTRIBUTE?

Here's a Plan Whereby You May Add Your Mite to the Fund Being Raised for Trade's War Unit.

MOTOGRAPHY is in receipt of the letter reproduced below, which seems self-explanatory:

THE CINEMATOGRAPH TRADE AMBULANCE FUND

Under the auspices of the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St John

APPLICATION BY THE WAR OFFICE

President
DR R T JUPP

Chairman of Executive Committee
MR J FRANK TROCKLISS.

Hon Treasurer
MR W F JURY

Vice Presidents:

Organising Director: DR R T JUPP

Secretary: WILLIAM BARNETT.

Bankers: LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN BANK

SUB-COMMITTEE FOR AMERICAN PRESS AND TRADE.

Chairman:
MR. PAUL KIMBERLEY

166 SHAFTESBURY AVENUE,
LONDON, W.C.

20th October, 1915.

The Editor,
MOTOGRAPHY,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir: We, the undersigned members of a committee representing the British film trade, desire to enlist your sympathy and aid in carrying through to success a project to provide a complete ambulance unit for use at the front.

We think it is hardly necessary to enlarge on the immense usefulness of such an idea, which it is proposed shall include fifty ambulances with various supplementary vehicles, including a store car, a repair wagon, ten motorcycles and four ordinary cars, the total cost of which will be $150,000.

This scheme is the outcome of a desire of the British film industry to exhibit their sympathy in a practical manner and in view of the immense American interests in the British film market it has been suggested that those of the American trade interested would welcome an opportunity to assist this cause by contributions.

It will readily be agreed that from considerations of humanity, the project is a worthy one. An ambulance corps knows no nationality. They labor with but one object in view—the assuagement of pain and the saving of life.

It is the strongly expressed desire that the whole of the funds for this proposal shall be raised exclusively within the moving picture trade. The entire trade press of the British industry have entered whole-heartedly into its support.

We are therefore taking the liberty of approaching you, as one of the newspapers of the American film trade, to solicit your aid, without which it will not be possible to reach all the interested members of the American moving picture industry.

The organization of this effort has already commenced on this side, and we would therefore be glad to receive from you as early as possible your views, and to learn whether we can rely upon your support through the medium of your valuable journal.

Might we suggest that you open a subscription list in your journal for this fund, as we feel certain that many of your regular readers will be interested in this matter.

We are enclosing copy of a resolution which was passed at the big mass meeting in London when the whole trade were called together to support this fund.

Thanking you in anticipation for your interest and support in this good cause, we remain,

Yours very truly,

(Signed)—
A. F. Wagner, Director and Manager, Thomas A. Edison, Ltd.
W. C. Scott, Director American Company, Ltd.
H. A. Spoor, Essanay Film Manufacturing Company.
J. D. Tippett, Trans-Atlantic Film Company.
A. E. Mainwaring, Western Import Company.
Paul Kimberly, Managing Director, Thanhouser Films, Ltd.

The resolution which is mentioned in one of the letter's paragraphs was passed at a big mass meeting held in London and reads as follows:

Resolved, That as a thank-offering for the success of moving pictures in the British Isles, and to show appreciation of the patriotic devotion displayed by a large number of cinema patrons and members of the trade now serving with H. M. forces, this mass meeting of the cinematograph and allied trades pledges itself to present to the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St. John a convoy of motor ambulances and auxiliaries for the use of the army in Flanders or elsewhere.

It is estimated that at least 7,000 persons who were connected with the motion picture trade in Great Britain have joined the army, and many of them have already won honors for valor and a few of them the Victoria Cross.

In England it has been suggested that the exhibitors seek to raise money for the fund by the following plans:

1. Where Sunday opening is allowed for charity, you can ask the promoters of that charity to devote one of the day's profits to our fund.

2. Where circumstances will permit, you may arrange a Sunday concert.

3. By pushing the sale of tickets for "Cinema Ambulance Day" entertainments, and also by selling tickets for the Grand Matinee at the London Opera House on November 16.

4. By obtaining subscriptions from patrons and firms with whom you do business.

5. By installing a collecting box or barrel in your vestibule or theater, where this is not objected to.

MOTOGRAPHY, while not prepared to open a subscription list for this fund, strongly urges its readers who feel so inclined to forward whatever sum they can afford to W. F. Jury, Esq., treasurer of the Cinematograph Trade Ambulance Fund, 19-23 Oxford street, West, London, England, without delay.

A Flowery Tribute

Richard Lohrmann, whose horticultural creations of the past few years rank him with such wizards as Burbank and Purdy, recently developed two new species of dahlia at his San Rafael nurseries and named them the "Mignon" and the "Salome Jane," respectively. These names were chosen in honor of the heroines impersonated by Beatriz Michelena in two of her first photoplays.

Lohrmann is now working on still a third variety of the dahlia which will be known as the "Michelena." Of the two flowers already perfected, the "Mignon" is colored a very delicate pink and white; the "Salomy Jane" is a brilliant red outside and a deep gold inside the petals. Both have received most favorable recognition among florists and in horticultural publications.

The Elliott & Sherman Film Company, the well-known firm of Minneapolis, has recently acquired the following Great Northern productions for its territory: "The Heart of Lady Alaine," featuring the celebrated tragedienne, Miss Betty Nansen; "Pro Patria," featuring Valdemar Psilander, the monarch of the silent drama; and "John Redmond, the Evangelist," also featuring Valdemar Psilander.

Palo Alto Corporation Formed

POSSESSES UNIQUE ASSET

A FEATURE film company recently formed and now about to begin its first big, five-reel picture, is that of the Palo Alto Film Corporation, with offices in Palo Alto and San Jose and a studio in course of erection in the vicinity of the former city. The company's incorporation, under the California law, is at a capitalization of $300,000.00. A choice of three New York releasing mediums has been submitted the Palo Alto Company, a careful selection of three directors is being made from the big Los Angeles picture center and the cast is being picked from people who already have made names for themselves on the motion picture screen. On the technical and executive ends of the company are men who have had a long acquaintance with the motion picture industry.

An asset, convincing and unusual, and in the possession of which the Palo Alto company must necessarily hold a unique place among other picture companies, is the specified good-will and co-operation of one of the biggest universities in the world—that of the Leland Stanford Jr. University at Palo Alto. The faculty has endorsed the formation of the Palo Alto Corporation and one of its members, Harry C. Peterson, director of the Leland Stanford Jr. University Museum, is a director of the feature film company.

That Palo Alto, in 1872, was the birthplace of the motion picture is a matter of record, but one not generally known until Professor Peterson, in the November 1915 issue of Sunset magazine, publishes the data, together with illustrations from the first motion picture ever made. His article is entitled "The Birthplace of the Motion Picture." The campus of the Stanford University was the place of its making and Senator Stanford, the University's founder, was its inspiration.

The Palo Alto Company, after giving much thought to its choice of a script for its first production, and believing that the story is the first and biggest consideration, has decided upon a five-reel offering which carries with it the name of a well-known and recognized scenario writer. The company has paid more than the usual figure for this original script and is prepared to pay a high price for other themes and ideas of originality. This will be possible to the Palo Alto company since it will not be necessary to limit its expenditures to any established footage cost; and quality, in product, is its aim. To safeguard its realization, an agreement has been made by the stockholders providing for a participation in not more than ten per cent annually of the investment, all surplus profit to be put back into picture quality and studio improvement.

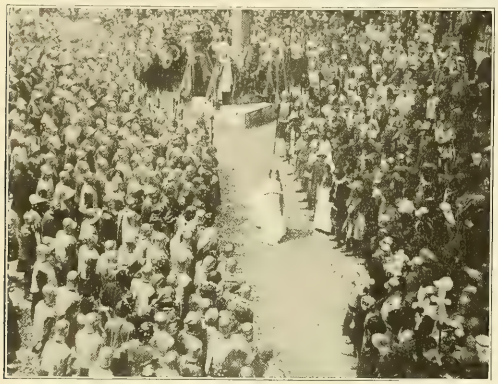
The new feature film company is especially fortunate in its choice of studio location; this comprises twenty acres at the foot of the Santa Cruz Mountains, in close proximity to the Stanford University. This particular section has been said, by the United States and the Guggenheim interests, upon experiment, to be the mose equable in the world, second to Jamaica. This light condition must necessarily result in fine photography. The location is within easy commuting distance from San Francisco, is fifteen miles from the famous Big Trees and the Big Basin, is close to the ocean, beaches, mines, and to rugged country, and offers every advantage for the making of worth-while features.

Fighting Sunday Closing

Out in Grand Junction, Colo., an election was eminent last week for the purpose of deciding whether or not the motion picture houses of that city might remain open on Sunday. For weeks previous the house organ of the Majestic theater of Grand Junction, which is edited by Charles Decker, manager of the house, has devoted columns to an explanation of the need for Sunday pictures, together with an appeal to the patrons of the theater to support the Sunday shows at the polls. The daily Sentinel of Grand Junction also devoted several columns of its space to a discussion of the question, quoting at length Mr. Decker's arguments which have appeared in the Majestic theater's house organ, and also publishing letters from several clergymen of the vicinity, taking the opposite view of Sunday closing.

The industry will watch with interest the result of the election and MOTOGRAPHY joins with a host of exhibitors in expressing the hope that the voters of Grand Junction will not be so short-sighted as to cast their ballots in favor of closing an amusement that has always been so clean and wholesome as the motion picture show.

Historical Play With Big Cast



More than 4,000 persons, including a cast of noted screen players, headed by Miss Blanche Forsythe, famous throughout both hemispheres for her many successful portrayals in screen productions, are presented in "The Strife Eternal," a colossal production in five reels and over 200 scenes, to be released by the Mutual Film Corporation, November 25, as a Mutual Master-Picture.

This monster production, filmed at a cost of many thousands of dollars, depicts the enthralling romance of Jane Shore, favorite of King Edward IV, of England, who rose from the sphere of an humble goldsmith's wife to a life of lavish splendor at the English court, to finally end her existence as a beggar in the streets of London. The story as revealed in "The Strife Eternal" forms one of the most tragic narratives ever filmed.

Leading authorities, who witnessed a private showing of this new Master-Picture in the Mutual's projection room recently, announced it to be one of the most enthralling screen productions that they had ever witnessed. The settings and the costuming, of the Renaissance period of English history, are done on an exceptionally elaborate scale.

Vividly depicted on the screen, the drama is a pageant of beauty. Old London forms a quaint, medieval background for gracefully moving throngs of gorgeously clad people, the pomp of the processional, the festicities of the court, the gaieties of the gilds and the artisan folk. Exceptionally interesting are the wonderful battle scenes, in several of which between 3,000 and 3,500 men are employed. These scenes represent as nearly as possible, the gathering of the Lancastrians, King Edward's return from Flanders and the landing of his vast hordes of fighting men at Ravenspur. Exceptional pains were taken in selecting the cast for the screening of this important historical play. Old portraits of the historic personages that appear in the productions were studied with infinite care, in order that appearance, manner, dress and personal peculiarities of those who played such a big part in the page of history on which this production is based, might be minutely reproduced.

One of the big scenes in "The Strife Eternal," a coming Mutual Master Picture.

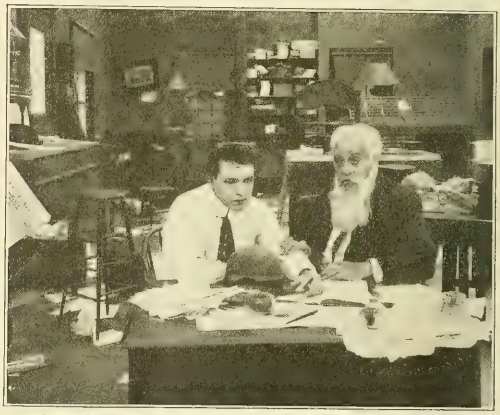
King Edward IV, impersonated by Roy Travers, is strikingly true to the annals of that day. Richard, Duke of Gloucester, afterwards Richard III, is convincingly played by Rolphe Leslie, who has succeeded in putting into the part all the ugliness and diabolical cunning of that famous tyrant. Dora De Winton, in the role of "Margaret," the jealous cousin of Mathew Shore, renders one of the most pleasing characterizations ever screened, while Jane Shore lives again before our eyes in the triumphant art of Miss Forsythe.

Audience Votes for Higher Prices

One of the creeds of "The New Religion," which is the guiding force of the V. L. S. E. sales organization is "Better Features at Better Prices." Frequently an exhibitor feels that he cannot pay the slight margin of advance asked for some Big Four features, without making a corresponding increase in his admission charge—a step which he hesitates to take for fear of the attitude of his patrons.

Richard McKenney, manager of the Peabody theater, Peabody, Mass., was in this position when he appealed to George Balsdon, manager of the Boston office of the V. L. S. E. for co-operation.

Mr. Balsdon suggested to Mr. McKenney that he try one Big Four feature, and after showing it, throw upon a screen a slide advising the audience that this company's productions involves a greater expenditure than was customary, and that he would have to raise the price of admission if he continued showing them. The patrons were to be the deciding factor of the future policy of the house. If they approved of the increased admission, they were to indicate their approval by applause.



Mr. McKenney used the suggestion, and subsequently advised Mr. Balsdon that from the hearty round of applause received, the audience was unmistakably in favor of first grade pictures at advanced prices. Mr. McKenney is the second exhibitor in Mr. Balsdon's territory who has made a success of this plan.

Initial Pallas Subject on November 25

The initial production to be offered on the Paramount program by Pallas Pictures will be released November 25 and presents Booth Tarkington's well known novel, "The Gentleman from Indiana," starring Dustin Farnum.

In producing this subject Pallas Pictures has gone to unlimited pains and expense to give it a most pretentious background, as is evident in the elaborate sets and immense scenes which have been included in the photoplay. In order to get the desired atmosphere a replica of an entire Indiana town of true Hoosier type was built and mob scenes including over five hundred people are displayed with striking realism. Among the spectacular features presented are the mob riots, election parades and campaigns, an electric storm at night resulting in the destruction of many buildings, and a circus parade on which occasion the entire town turns out in true "circus day" style.

Many dramatic situations are entrusted to Dustin

Scene from "The Gentleman from Indiana," a Pallas release.

Farnum, which he handles in his usual effective manner. The supporting cast includes such artists as Winifred Kingston, Herbert Standing, Howard Davies, Page Peters, Signor Juan de la Cruz, Elsie Cort, Helen Eddy, C. Norman Hammond, Joe Ray and others of equal abality.

Hal Clarendon Director for Moss

Hal Clarendon, director, will join the B. S. Moss Motion Picture Corporation within the next two weeks in the capacity of director general. During Mr. Clarendon's stay at the Thanhouser plant he directed the "Kiddie" photoplays with marked success.

Prior to joining the Thanhouser forces, Mr. Clarendon was connected with the Famous Players for two years and a half, during which time he not only created important roles in thirty-four photoplays, but also acted as co-director to J. Searle Dawley.

ROTHAPFEL MEETINGS A HIT

Coast Cities Warmly Welcome Famous Exhibitor Who Is Touring Country on Behalf of Mutual Organization

Samuel L. Rothapfel, who is covering the country on the Rothapfel-Mutual tour, is now in the far west visiting the coast cities. The tour is proving a progressively increasing success as it extends from city to city.

Mr. Rothapfel, who gained national fame through his success in the showing of pictures at the Strand theater on Broadway, New York, and who is shortly to take charge of the Rialto theater, now building at Forty-second and Broadway in New York, is delivering a "message of success" which is largely the story or his experiences and adventures in his remarkably successful career as an exhibitor of motion pictures. President John R. Freuler of the Mutual Film Corporation arranged the tour to give the exhibitors of the country the benefit of Mr. Rothapfel's interesting experience, as a contribution to the progress of the industry.

The Rothapfel-Mutual tour banquet held at Tait's in San Francisco on November 5 brought together the biggest gathering of motion picture men ever held on the coast. Exhibitors and film men from all sections were present and took part in the enthusiastic function.

Samuel L. Rothapfel, the guest of honor, spoke for two hours, holding his audience about the tables in the most tense attention. He was followed by a number of other speakers, including Marcus Loew, of New York; Aaron Jones of Jones, Linick and Schaefer, of Chicago; H. W. Mosby, commissioner of exposition from Australia; Irving Ackerman, president of the Hippodrome Circuit; C. W. Midgely, of the Franklin theater, of Oakland; Jack Partington, of the Imperial theater; E. B. Johnson, of the Turner-Dahnken circuit; and Sidney Grauman, of the Empress theater. Eugene H. Roth, of the Portola theater, one of the biggest theaters on the coast, was toastmaster. At the conclusion of the speaking a standing vote of appreciation was given by the entire assemblage.

Among those in attendance were: W. F. Hanell, Chester Roeder, A. M. Bowles, Louis G. Stang, R. H. Hergert, Joseph A. Ruff, H. E. Schmidt, Emil Kerrelein, F. Habekoss, Joseph E. Levin, W. S. Bastar, Leon D. Hetter, C. E. Thornton, Everett Howell, M. L. Markowitz, A. Markowitz, F. E. McCoy, A. S. Newbargh, Ben Michaels, William S. Webster, C. Mell Simmons, Fred W. Voight, Sol. L. Lesser, D. D. Tompkins, F. S. Peachy, Herman Wobber, N. K. Herzog, E. B. Johnson, Louis R. Greenfield, and Rex W. Midgely.

Every city in the territory was represented at the Rothapfel-Mutual luncheon held in Los Angeles at the Christofers on November 2. There was a tremendous ovation at the conclusion of Mr. Rothapfel's address.

All the picture exhibitors of Southern California turned out to the luncheon and met Mr. Rothapfel, who spent a part of his three-day stay visiting the film studios and picture communities in the city and vicinity. Among those at luncheon were: W. M. Hughes, J. M. Goertz, Seth D. Perkins, H. J. Siler, S. G. Crickmore, M. W. Swearinging, S. U. Anderson, T. L. Lally, Fred A. Miller, J. G. Knapp, C. E. Walker, H. B. Breckwedel, D. S. McCarthy, Maitland Davies, P. Kehrlein, G. H. Campbell, T. J. Shirley, Rod McDonald, W. A. Gaston, M. Whitmoyer, S. McIntyre, A. F. Neely, R. W. Woodley, R. M. Campbell, Dr. Sam Atkinson, Edward Mozart, A. P. Tugwell, F. J. Croxall, Henry W. Warner, Joseph Moent, R. W. McKinney, E. L. McCrea, P. T. Davidson, C. W. Blake, Mrs. C. J. Marley, J. A. Quinn, J. C. Jessen, Clark Irvine and Monroe Lathrop.

Anna Held Leaves for Morosco Studio

With a farewell kiss directed toward Broadway, motion picture and newspaper photographers snapping her picture and a host of friends bidding her good-by, Anna Held boarded her special car attached to the Twentieth Century Limited at the Grand Central, New York, and left for Los Angeles, where the French comedienne will make her motion picture debut at the studios of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company.

On entering her limousine at the Savoy hotel which was to rush her to the Grand Central, Miss Held was confronted by several persistent newspaper reporters who tried to secure a confession of her reported engagement to a Russian prince. The star cleverly avoided all direct replies to the many questions put to her by the newspaper men and blandly smiled at the determined efforts of her interviewers. The story, which Miss Held neither denied nor affirmed, involves a nobleman who met the star on board the steamer St. Louis during her trip to this country several weeks ago. Since arriving in this country it is stated that the actress and the Russian have been seen together most every evening at the theaters. The Russian had business with his government's consul here and it is confidently expected that an announcement of marriage will be forthcoming when Miss Held reaches Los Angeles.

Anna Held and Oliver Morosco signing $25,000 contract for the star's first motion picture appearance.

Just before boarding her car Miss Held said: "I can hardly wait until I get to the studios. I have heard so much about these wonderful motion pictures and have seen such marvelous things on the screen that now it really surprises me when I think that I have kept away from this new field so long. I have brought over a collection of new gowns which I will wear in the picture and which represent an outlay of a fortune. Besides my new gowns I have brought over a $25,000 Russian sable coat and a $20,000 ermine cloak. Outside of its other qualities I think you will find my film a fashion bazaar."

Irene Howley of Metro

Irene Howley, who will make her debut under Metro auspices in "The Yellow Streak" being featured with Lionel Barrymore, in the Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc., five part feature now in production, was taken into by a stern limb of the law in a small upstate town on election night. It was a slip of her tongue and a skid of her machine that caused Miss Howley her liberty for the time being. The company of players, under the direction of William Nigh, worked on some exteriors until late in the afternoon, when they turned back with New York City their goal. It was about forty miles distance, which usually means one hour to Miss Howley. She was driving her own Simplex roadster of recent vintage, and a constable who saw Miss Howley coming down the pike thought two hours to New York would be a better speed. He halted the machine and took the young lady to task. In a discussion over the speed she was making the constable inquired the make of Miss Howley's car.

Irene Howley.

"Simp!" she replied. Then she wondered why he became angry with her, and tugged nervously at his chin whiskers. (Constables, in real life, as well as in fiction, invariably have chin whiskers.) Only through the intercession of the suave and diplomatic Mr. Barrymore was Miss Howley allowed to go. There was some mention about her machine, in action, looking like a "Yellow Streak," as the crowd hurried in to hear the returns on woman suffrage.

Miss Howley was born in Brooklyn, but she doesn't brag about it. She made her debut in motion pictures with the Reliance company, under the direction of Oscar Apfel. She was engaged by D. W. Griffith, then with the Biograph, where she appeared in feature pictures for two years. She was starred in "The Moth and the Flame," with the Famous Players, and appeared in support of Hazel Dawn in "The Heart of Jennifer." In vaudeville she was known as "The Manhattan Girl."

Business Improving in South

Characterized by the best exhibitors in that section of the country as the most progressive and able motion picture salesman in the south, C. E. Tandy, head of the Southern Paramount Pictures Company of Atlanta, whose territory embraces North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama and Florida, paid a visit to New York during the past week. His mission was one that spells prosperity for the land of the cotton gin. He came to make arrangements for an additional print of Paramount Pictures in order to meet the vast increase in business which has developed in his territory.

"I attribute this condition," Mr. Tandy said, "to three things. First, the consistent merit of Paramount pictures. They are the keynote to the success of all Paramount exchanges. Second—to the fact that there has been a great change in business conditions in the south of late. Cotton is now being sold in large quantities, money is easy and people are beginning to spend. I have never seen a more promising situation in the southern states than that in which I find myself at present. Third, the great Paramount national advertising and publicity campaigns. To the latter I attribute 25 per cent of the great increase of business done by our office. In this connection let me say that I do not mean simply the very fine newspaper advertising done by the Paramount Pictures Corporation throughout the country, but also the numerous aids to the exhibitors which this company is continually furnishing. Never has there been such accord between the exhibitor and the newspaper as that which has been engendered by the advertising and publicity departments of the Paramount Pictures Corporation after steady planning during the last months."

Mr. Tandy has now succeeded in closing up all the available towns in his territory except those of five thousand population and under and he is signing them up at a terrific rate.

"As I said before," he continued, "I attribute this to better business conditions in the south and an increasing appreciation on the part of both exhibitors and motion picture patrons to the true aims of the producers and distributors of Paramount pictures. The close co-operation between all the departments at the home office and the exchange is also largely responsible for the growing efficiency of all branches. We are all making a sincere effort to give real service to the exhibitor though there are times when the proposition becomes so big we are physically unable to accomplish our purpose but we feel encouraged by success of the great Paramount chain to keep at it with renewed vigor."

Mr. Tandy's trip was indeed a flying one. Arriving on Friday morning he left New York for Atlanta on Saturday afternoon fully determined to carry the gospel of Paramount to the smallest village and hamlet of his territory.

Essanay's Anti-Tuberculosis Film

Essanay has just completed a two-act photoplay for the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association of Milwaukee. The film, which is called the "Power of the Penny," depicts all the horrors of consumption and shows all the detail of the work being done by the association to stamp it out. The plot contains a powerful love story and is an intensely interesting romance as well as a technically instructive story. Scenes were made in the streets of Milwaukee, in hovels where entire families were stricken with the disease and at the sanatorium and free dispensary. The work of the physicians in the hospital as well as the life of the patients is shown in detail. The photoplay will be shown throughout the state in the association's fight against tuberculosis. It will afterwards be loaned to other organizations for exhibition, in order to show the public the conditions existing, and arouse it to determined action to wipe out the white plague from the country. The photoplay was written by Louise F. Brand, on a Milwaukee paper and directed by Richard Foster Baker. A staff of Essanay actors take the leads

The Importance of the Film Technician

BERST DISCUSSES FACTORY WORK

J. A. BERST, vice president and general manager of the Selig Polyscope Company, has an enviable reputation as an expert in photoplay technique, evolving good stories out of bad ones in film, and introducing beautiful and unusual effects on the motion picture screen. For many years Mr. Berst has been a close student of the motion picture art, and through his extensive study and immediate perception of the beautiful, his contributions to cinematography have materially aided in the artistic worth of film releases. Mr. Berst was interviewed recently on the subject of the technical side of motion picture production, and his statements will not only be found interesting but instructive to others.

J. A. Berst.

"Too little attention is paid to the cutting, trimming, and editing of motion pictures," said Mr. Berst. "I am speaking now of the filmed production, when the story has been produced and goes to the cutting and trimming department. A story will frequently read well in manuscript and will produce well. Then, after it is presented in the projection room, many and varied errors and incongruities are noticeable.

"An expert film technician should be able to quickly perceive the weaknesses in the completed film. Perhaps the continuity has been lost or the film is not clear enough for the mind of the theater-goer, or sub-titles show lack of clearness. It is for the expert to perceive these items and to remedy them. I am a busy man, but I have time to visit the Selig laboratories almost daily and personally aid our film technicians in improving our motion picture productions in every possibly way. I have seen feature productions delivered by the studios to the film companies' technical departments in deplorable condition; the clever experts are frequently enabled to make new stories by taking scenes from the first reels of motion picture plays and placing them in the final reels. I have, myself, taken a story with little meaning in film, and by the judicious use of sub-titles, inserts and transposition of scenes, made that production clear, entertaining, and a hit.

"Tinting and toning of film is an art that is too often neglected. The color tints should be applied with judgment and care. Many unusual effects that add to motion picture realism can also be applied by the technician, with the co-operation of the factory manager, who is also often an experienced technician. One successful way of obtaining multiplicity of color effects is, first, to tone the film, then tint it, then give the film a coating of celluloid, and then retint it again. The toning and the two tints add greatly to the value of the parts so treated.

"On other occasions, to add a touch of realism it is advisable to color a small portion of the film, say a flag or a signal, when they play important parts in the story. It is good practice always to tint exterior night scenes blue, and interiors in amber, when such rooms are lighted, as the public is now familiar with those effects and understands them. The effect of a bolt of lightning can be made very realistic in certain motion picture scenes by drawing a line to represent lightning on the negative. Sun and moon effects are made by painting in the sun or moon on the negative, and utilizing proper tinting and toning effects.

"Sometimes a story as constructed and produced does not work out well and it is found that some portion would be better if used as a dream or a vision. In such cases, the trimmers are handicapped because dissolve fades are not in the film, and if the expert is not talented he will not be able to get best results. The expert will find it possible to manufacture missing fades, using the film delivered by the studio, without the necessity of having scenes re-enacted. There are two ways to make fade-outs and fade-ins in laboratories. One way is to use a camera and make a positive from a negative. This is accomplished by putting negative and positive in about the same way as is done in a printing machine.

"The camera will be operated the regular way and, according to the style of the camera, either shutter or diaphram will be gradually opened at the beginning of the picture and gradually closed at the end, to obtain the fade-in or fade-out of the positive. From this positive, a controtype negative will be made and then used instead of the original negative. Another method of fade-in and fade-out is the use of the chemical process. To obtain the fade out, the end piece of the negative it is desired to fade will be treated with a dissolvent, hypo for instance, and an expert will be careful to dissolve gradually.

"Great care must be taken in trimming the film. Carefulness is really the prime essential, for the least mistake made in trimming a film production may result in sadly handicapping the artistic whole of that film. Take a scene, for example, where a man is being struck on the head. If this scene is trimmed carelessly, the blow may either fall short, or it may be made plainly evident that the blow is faked.

"The film subtitle is a vital portion of the completed photoplay. Personally, I believe that the fewer the subtitles, the more artistic the film production. Subtitles at the best are explanatory material. They are supposed to make the story clearer and more comprehensive. The better written the scenario, the more carefully produced the film play, the less need for subtitles. Those film plays which carry forward the story in a clear manner, with the need of only a few subtitles, are the best productions.

"The Selig Company pays careful attention to the subtitle. We view every film released several times, holding weekly conferences, when we carefully review the productions with an endeavor toward improvement. Lists of all subtitles for every photoplay are made out and these are carefully gone over and edited by three or four individuals and the approved result appears on the screen.

"In comedy productions the subtitle is of even more importance. I have known many a comedy film to be saved by original, cleverly written subtitles. Comedy subtitles should be in the vernacular—that is, in the atmosphere of the play. If the comedy is of rural atmosphere, the spoken subtitles should be in rural dialect. This is an art not easily attained, and only comes from close study and application."

Hal Forde in Gaumont Comedy

The announcement that Hal Forde, of musical comedy and picture fame, had left for Jacksonville, Fla., to take the lead in a Rialto Star feature of the Gaumont Company brought prominently to the front in a news way the continuous development of this company's policy of having a new star in each of these multiple reel releases. One deviation is to be noted. Whereas the majority of these releases on the Mutual's new $8,000,000 program are photodramas, Mr. Forde's well-known and enjoyable gifts for comedy determined the management to star him in a light and joyous production.

Hal Forde.

The scenario chosen to exploit Mr. Forde's charming light comedy is entitled "Lessons in Love." It has been written by Paul M. Bryan with this particular star in mind. Mr. Forde has many friends in Jacksonville, as his first work in pictures was done at a studio in that city. He enjoys picture work exceedingly, and has confessed that his ambition is to direct his own pictures. "Lessons in Love" is being directed by Richard Garrick, who went south with the comforting feeling that he had just completed a brilliant piece of work—according to the encomiums of those who have seen his "The New Adam and Eve," which will be released November 17.

Hal Forde is fond of athletics, and in this picture will have opportunities to show the results of his early training.

Only the timely arrival and the heroic efforts of the cowboys at Universal City saved that film company from a staggering loss when a fire of unknown origin started in the company's western street set Saturday evening, October 23, and, running before the wind, threatened to sweep on to other and more expensive sets nearby.

Mystery Puzzled Players

Bryant Washburn, John Cossar, Ruth Stonehouse, Anne Leigh and other members of the cast in "The Alster Case," Essanay's five act release through the V. L. S. E., worked through the entire production without knowing who committed the murder of Cornelia Alster, around which the story centers, until it developed naturally in the course of the play.

The play, written by Rufus Gillmore, author of "The Opal Pin" and other well known detective novels, is a story of mystery which is not divulged until the end.

J. Charles Haydon, who directed the play, believed that the players would carry out their parts better and add to the mystery if they themselves did not know who committed the crime. Consequently, while they studied their parts thoroughly, they were not permitted to study the denouement until they came to it.

Thus throughout the production of the piece they did not know whether they themselves committed the crime or some one of the other players. In the photoplay there is not an indication by the slightest expression of features as to who the criminal could be.

John Cossar, the detective assigned to the case, follows out his clews just as would a real detective who is hunting for a murderer, unconscious as to where they will lead. He goes on the wrong scent several times before the real slayer is discovered. This is one of the strong features of the play, that the interest is keyed up to the highest pitch to discover the murderer until the very end.

As the play unfolded the actors became intensely interested in the outcome, and wagered gloves, candy and cigars on who killed Cornelia Alster.

Farnum Takes Short Vacation

Dustin Farnum, the popular Pallas Pictures star, has temporarily discontinued his activities on the west coast and arrived in New York City Friday evening en route to his home in Bucksport, Me.

Mr. Farnum came east to take a few weeks' vacation in the Maine woods where he will enjoy a hunting trip. "Dusty" has just completed his second production for the new Pallas Pictures-Paramount organization, "The Call of the Cumberlands," Charles Neville Buck's well known romantic drama, which the former thinks is even a bigger production than his first subject for this company, Booth Tarkington's "The Gentleman From Indiana," the photoplay that is expected to score one of the biggest hits of the season.

A strange coincidence occurred when Mr. Farnum arrived in New York. He had just left the Grand Central Station when the first friend that he met was Charles Neville Buck, himself, the author of the book of which he had just finished a screen adaptation.

At the New York offices of the Pallas Pictures, the matinee and screen idol related many interesting experiences in connection with his work during the production of his first two subjects under the new banner, and recited several exciting incidents in which he took part. Mr. Farnum is under a long term contract with Pallas Pictures and is most enthusiastic with regard to the outlook of this newcomer in the producing field.

Immediately upon the termination of his short vacation he will return to the Pallas Pictures studios to commence work on "Davy Crockett."

Edgar Jones, Metro Director

Edgar Jones, the director who has several Metro screen masterpieces to his credit, and who has been selected to direct the big Columbia-Metro five part picturization of Booth Tarkington's novel, "The Turmoil," has been in the picture business practically all his life. He began his career in pictures at Steubensville, Ohio, where he had a small art store. That was in the days before "September Morn" and similar subjects became household works of art, and the business not being over-remunerative, Mr. Jones shook the dust of Steubensville from his feet and made a wild dash for Broadway.

Edgar Jones.

When he came to New York Mr. Jones had not even appeared in a lodge minstrel's benefit, but he had a hankering for the stage nevertheless. He was successful in obtaining a small part with Kyrle Bellew in "A Gentleman of France." From that time on Mr. Jones was a full fledged actor, and his rise in the profession was rapid.

Mr. Jones then answered the call of motion pictures. He accepted the stellar role in a feature production at the Lubin studio in Philadelphia, and on its completion was offered a permanent position as leading man and director. He continued in this capacity with the Lubin forces for three and a half years, making many big western and war pictures. Mr. Jones was the first to make night photography for motion pictures, and his efforts in that line have since been widely copied. This innovation was introduced in the Lubin feature, "Stonewall Jackson's Way." There are few tricks in either photography or the staging of scenes that Mr. Jones is not conversant with, and he puts them to good use. He arranged and directed a realistic storm scene in "The Woman Pays," in which Valli Valli is starred, a new Metro feature, which has just been completed at the Rolfe studios.

"Who's Guilty?" Progressing Rapidly

The production of Pathe's new series, "Who's Guilty?" is under full swing at the Arrow Film Corporation studios in Yonkers. Howell Hansel, director-in-chief, is having his hands full, for in one week he has screened three big mob scenes in as many different sets.

A great star in a big feature is not an unusual thing in pictures, but two great stars of the stage such as Emmy Wehlen and Howard Estabrook appearing in two-reel pictures is such a novelty as to require comment. Miss Wehlen, who was secured by the Arrow Film Corporation through the courtesy of Metro Pictures Corporation, has had to renew acquaintance with a riding habit and a side saddle, all this past week. In England she is known as a daring rider to hounds, but in this country she has had no chance as an equestrienne until she took up her "Who's Guilty?" work. She is a real rider, not of the park-path type, but of the broad fields and high jump sort. Howard Estabrook, her co-star, is having the time of his life and takes to his picture work like a duck to water.

Mr. Hansel did something new last week when he took a number of scenes in City Judge Beall's court room in Yonkers. The judge not only consented to the use of the court room for these scenes, but also agreed to sit on the bench for Mr. Hansel while they were being taken. All the real court attendants also served as members of the cast for the time being, with the result that a really normal and natural court has at last been screened.

In addition to this "coup" Mr. Hansel secured the use of Samuel Untermyer's magnificent Yonkers estate, "Greystone," for most of the exterior scenes in "Dross and Diamonds," the first episode of "Who's Guilty?" to be released. Mr. Untermyer willingly consented to have some hundreds of men and women overrun his fine lawns for the better part of a week. With the great Hudson River gleaming through the trees, "Greystone" made a magnificent background.

TRIANGLE SERVICE BEGINS

Two Hundred and Sixty-Five Exhibitors Screen Triangle Subjects This Week and Big Business Is Reported

Triangle film service throughout the country started Sunday, November 7, to 265 exhibitors. These included many of the leading theaters in the large cities, among them the Auditorium in Baltimore, the Jake Wells houses in Norfolk and Richmond, the Hexter houses in Cleveland, the American in St. Louis, the Ascher, Andrews and Bartelson houses in Chicago, the Dusenberry house in Columbus, the Walnut street in Louisville, the Hulsey houses in Texas, the Isis in Denver, the Clune houses in California, the Jensen houses in the Pacific Northwest, and many score eastern theaters too numerous to recapitulate.

The films will have an extraordinary showing in Greater New York. A. L. Shakmann has been advertising them in the New York dailies for the Eighty-first Street theater, which will combine Triangle features with several acts of vaudeville. B. F. Moss, Picker & Bennett, the Classic, are other Manhattan or Bronx exhibitors to show the Triangle, while in Brooklyn W. H. Kemble had a very successful first week at the Triangle theater, and followed it up with the second week's programme Monday, November 8. The policy of the Triangle Film Corporation is to aid the exhibitor in every manner. By means of the model theaters—the Knickerbocker in New York; the Studebaker, Chicago, and the Chestnut Street Opera House, Philadelphia—the goods are displayed on the counter, so to speak, and the exhibitor can learn for himself the best means of their individual exploitation.

Releases of November 7 were Douglas Fairbanks in "The Lamb," Dustin Farnum in "The Iron Strain," Raymond Hitchcock in "My Valet," and Charles Murray in "A Game Old Knight." Many of the large theaters will show the whole bill twice a day, as at the Knickerbocker. Others will show three or four times a day, splitting the service with the Griffith feature and a Keystone the first half of the week, and an Ince feature and a Keystone the second half. Next Sunday, November 14, Triangle houses throughout the country will present the great Keenan picture, "The Coward;" "Old Heidelberg," Eddie Foy in "A Favorite Fool," and Roscoe Arbuckle in "Fickle Fatty's Fall," the latter being one of the very best of the new series Keystones.

Craufurd Kent of Lubin

Born in Shepherd's Bush, England, not many years ago, Craufurd Kent began at a most tender age to look longingly at the stage as a future for himself. During his early schooling he displayed a wondrous ability in his studies of music and as early as twelve years he had made his debut on the concert stage as one of the leading boy sopranos of England. His schooling was completed at Godolphin College at Hammersmith, England, where for three years he was master at the piano, a position dignified and known for its import.

Craufurd Kent.

Following the completion of his college term, Mr. Kent began a concert tour of England, singing in both concert and oratorio at nearly all of the leading auditoriums of the country and also Scotland, Ireland and France.

Little less than four years ago Mr. Kent was persuaded to come to America to accept the tenor role in "Adele." This engagement he followed with an appearance in "The Pink Lady" and "Miss Gibbs," returning with each production to his native land and back to America again, finally to accept an offer to appear in motion pictures. His first appearance before the camera was made but a few months ago, but an instantaneous success has been accorded him. He will be remembered for his appearances in "The Deep Purple," "Nedra," "Greater Love Hath No Man" and others. His first appearance with the Lubin Company is in the role of Garrick in Anthony P. Kelly's story, "The Rift in the Lute," which is being produced by Director Joseph Kaufman.

Raver Cast Completed

The Raver Film Corporation, which is producing the famous plays of Augustus Thomas, dean of American dramatists, in taking over the new W. Lindsay Gordon studios at Staten Island and beginning operations in its new home on the elaborate interior scenes of its inaugural production, "The Other Girl," has acquired a studio absolutely new in erection and up to date to the minutest facility. These studios have both the advantages of daylight through glass and adequate artificial lighting equipment, whereby scenes may be photographed either at night or day. Five sets can be erected simultaneously.

Harry R. Raver, president of the Raver organization, is highly satisfied with the results of his producing staff in completing the huge cast of the first Raver-Thomas production. More than two hundred performers were called by Percy Winter, chief director of the Raver forces, before the final selection of the fourteen principal characters of the widely known Thomas play was arrived at. Among these characters persons in many walks of life are presented. Genuine types were insisted upon, as make-up is not permitted under the Raver policy. Ranging from children of four and five up to men and women of sixty and seventy years of age, the characters used to portray Mr. Thomas' "The Other Girl," include an ex-champion pugilist, a minister of the gospel, an anaemic society fop, a celebrated health specialist, a judge of the Supreme Court, a corps of trainers of the cauliflower-eared type, a vivacious girl of eighteen possessing rare beauty, an unusual police captain, a sedate young woman of twenty-one, a butler who thinks himself guardian of an entire family, a wealthy banker with a heart, a cook who finds time to dabble in family affairs, a reporter with a keen sense of humor but a decent sort, a music hall dancer with a following, an intelligent dog, a chauffeur with a speed mania, together with types found in fashionable theater audiences, typical devotees of the prize ring, kids and kiddies of the country school and men and women about town.

"The Other Girl" will be ready for market distribution about December 15.

CHAPLIN WITH THE ALLIES

Famous Essanay Comedian Goes to the Front in France and Entertains Troops With His Celluloid Antics

Charles Chaplin has been to the front, "Somewhere in France," and has served as a target in the British trenches. Of course, he was wrapped up in film, but his visit was appreciated much more by the troops than were those of the literary ladies and gentlemen who have been turning out reams of sob-stuff and descriptions of the warring troops in the trenches.

The Essanay company's London office received an order and sent several reels of Chaplin comedies to France for the entertainment of the entrenched troops. A letter received by the company from an officer in the 6th Divisional Supply Column of the British Army at the front, tells of the reception accorded to the comedian by the British troops. Says the writer:

Gentlemen: I have to thank you for the letter of September 11, forwarded to me today, and for the gift of films.

It is impossible to make you realize how they were appreciated, and I truly wish you could have heard the cheer that went up when Chaplin appeared on the screen.

The posters, i. e., cardboard figures of Chaplin, were carried off during the night to the trenches, and have been made the subject of great attention by the opposing factions.

W. Murphy, Major, A. S. C.

The Gaumont policy of "new faces in each production" brings to the studios at Flushing Miss Eleanor Fairbanks, late star in "A Pair of Sixes." Miss Fairbanks closed in the Frazee farce to appear with Harry Vokes in the Casino Star comedy, "The House Party," by Adrian Gil Spear.

NEW WEEKLY TOPICAL READY

Paramount Newspictures Make Debut on November Eighth and New Standard For This Style Release Is Aimed For

The departure for the Balkans of Donald C. Thompson, the camera correspondent who helped to take the Chicago Tribune European war pictures, marked the firing of the first gun in the attack on established precedent by the Paramount Newspictures. The installation of a news-ticker in the office of Walter E. Green, who is in charge of the Paramount News Weekly, which made its initial appearance November 8, marked the second, and skirmishes are expected at regular intervals from now on.

"Paramount Newspictures," said Mr. Green, "will truly be all that the name implies, not an assembled collection of photographs taken here, there and everywhere, thrown on the screen in a haphazard manner, with no thought for their proper presentation. They will contain the news of the world in pictures; current events, science, sports, fashions, household economics, and anything in which there is public interest. Paramount Newspictures will be edited in an advisory capacity by men of national reputation in the publishing world today and will be presented on the screen as only Paramount productions can be. It will be departmentized, and each department will be in charge of a competent authority on the subjects under discussion. This unique presentation of the Newspictures has in itself caused considerable interest and unquestionable enthusiasm. In addition to the national service, Paramount Newspictures will have a local feature which will greatly enhance their value in every locality. Through arrangement with the Paramount exchanges and with one of the largest and most important news-gathering associations in the world, a camera man will be located at each office, and he, in turn, will be constantly out procuring up-to-date, live local news." The Paramount Newspictures will be released every Monday.

Paramount Newspictures should not be confused with Paramount Travel Pictures, which have been playing in the best theaters everywhere for the last thirty weeks. The South American series deals, of course, only with that country, and does not in any sense form a news service.

Paramount Newspictures are what their name implies; animated newspictures containing photographic stories from all over the United States, and, in fact, all over the world. The two do not conflict, and already a large number of wide-awake exhibitors have signified their intention of booking both.

Staging Two Big Ones

Cecil B. De Mille, director general of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company and the man who taught Geraldine Farrar, the famous prima donna, to act before the motion picture camera, just cannot abide by the old adage that one must not let one's right hand know what the left is doing. For Mr. De Mille at the Lasky studios in Hollywood is directing simultaneously these days two massive productions for the Paramount program. A change in release dates has made this necessary, but a quickening of the Lasky output has been met with perfect order.

The two productions under Mr. De Mille's personal direction at the present time are photoplays in which the stars are Miss Fannie Ward, the famous comedienne, and Miss Edna Goodrich, the beautiful American actress, who will make her debut as a star of the screen on November 18 in "Armstrong's Wife." Miss Goodrich at present is busy on her second production, an original photoplay by Hector Turnbull. Mr. Turnbull, formerly dramatic critic of the New York Tribune, also is the author of Miss Ward's photoplay in which the star has the support of Jack Bean, Sussue Hayakawa and a large company.

As if these two productions were not enough to take all his time, which he has divided between the day and night, Mr. De Mille also is writing an original photocomedy. He is supervising the construction of the new laboratory at the Lasky studio and generally looking after five other stars and companies at work under other directors.

Metro Ads Set New Standard

An advertising campaign which has attracted as much attention as any series in the history of motion pictures, and which has aroused genuine admiration in the trade, is the smashing type now being put out by the Metro Pictures Corporation. It is especially worthy of comment because many believe it has set a new high standard of quality in both power and art in motion picture advertising.

The campaign which has been under the personal supervision of Arthur James, the Metro's publicity director, has art without being high-brow, power without bad taste and punch without loss of dignity. Both the color and black-and-white double pages are unusual for their simplicity, their small amount of type matter and the direct statements of fact without extravagant claims for the feature pictures advertised.

Ever since it entered the feature field Metro has aimed high both in its pictures and in its business methods. The present advertising inaugurated in August, and still continuing, has been representative of Metro standards and it has evidenced the strides made by picture advertising. The Metro colors are black and red, and Ruffells of London, the continental agent for Metro, is using the same color scheme and keeping close to the American type of Metro copy.

The Metro advertising is a matter for congratulation both to the Metro Company and to the trade in general because it represents the newer, better type of display copy.

Edelman Goes to Kriterion

Joseph S. Edelman, recently director of advertising for the World Film Corporation, has been engaged by the Kriterion Film Corporation to direct its advertising and publicity releases. The New Kriterion Sales Corporation plans to release a program of exceptional merit, featuring well known players of film and stage —one and two-reel pictures that will have the strength and drawing power of a feature, crowded into one or two reels of interest and action. It is in line with the policy of quality that Kriterion has outlined that it has engaged a man of Mr. Edelman's reputation and ability to insure the quality of its advertising matter, doing justice to its film releases.

Mr. Edelman, whose work with World Films attracted considerable attention and who was one of the first men to introduce artistic posters into the film field, is president of the Sterling Advertising Service and earned his commercial reputation in the advertising field by his exceptional work for Joseph P. Day, Robert H. Ingersoll & Bro., M. Morgenthau, Jr., and many others. The same character and quality of advertising helps that Mr. Edelman planned for World Film features will be used for Kriterion program. He will have a complete system of advertising helps for exhibitors, artistic posters made from original sketches by the finest men in the commercial field, exceptional lobby displays and a number of other things new to the film world.

Zola Telmzart of Raver

The Raver Film Corporation has chosen Zola Telmzart as one of the principals in its forthcoming Augustus Thomas production, "The Other Girl." Miss Telmzart will play in support of such well known screen celebrities as James J. Corbett, the famous prize fighter, Paul Gilmore, who has a wide reputation as one of the foremost artists in motion pictures, and Becky Bruce. This is Miss Telmzart's first appearance in a feature film of merit and the Raver Film Corporation is very lucky to have secured her services.

Zola Telmzart.

Miss Telmzart's work on the legitimate stage won her recognition and she worked in support of such artists as Bessie Barriscale in the road show of Morosco's "The Bird of Paradise," as Rose Mailey in support of Nat Goodwin in "Oliver Twist," and her chief prominence was won through her interpretation of the leading role, that of Marya Varenka in the road show of "The Yellow Ticket." Several seasons ago Miss Telmzart was very prominent in stock work, playing leads in the Morosco Company in the headquarter theater, the Burbank, in Los Angeles, California.

Metro Boosters Feed

The first of a series of dinners arranged for the Metro Boosters' Club, the new social organization within the Metro Pictures Corporation and its allied manufacturers, was given on Thursday evening at Keen's Chop House in Forty-fourth street, New York City, and the new organization was launched with a preponderance of the element known as "pep." Paul Henkel arranged a special menu of Metro dishes and covers were laid for thirty-five. Informal addresses were made by President Rowland, Treasurer Joseph Engel, producing directors Noble, Carewe, Jones and Belmore, and then the makers of pictures had a chance to learn what the sellers of pictures thought of them and their product.

Louis B. Mayer of Boston, Harry Weiss of Chicago, E. M. Saunders of New York, James A. Fitzgerald of Detroit, John D. Clarke of Philadelphia and Cressohn Smith of Des Moines, Metro managers in their respective territories, all spoke of the satisfaction expressed by their exhibitors with the consistency of Metro pictures and congratulated the manufacturers on the great strides in the high artistic quality and increasing power of their pictures as box office attractions. Maxwell Karger, general manager of the Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc.; Lawrence Weber, president of the Popular Plays and Players, and George A. Wiley, manager of the Quality Pictures Corporation, spoke for the manufacturers.

At the close of the dinner Treasurer Joseph W. Engel distributed tiny gold pins, with the word "Metro" in letters of attractive design on a blue enamel background, among the diners. Every Metro booster is expected to wear one of them in his coat lapel and the demand has already exhausted the supply.

The menu was as follows:

METRO BOOSTERS' CLUB
Dinner Number One
Keen's Chop House in West Forty-fourth Street, New York
Thursday, November Fourth
1915

FOOD IN THE ORDER OF ITS APPEARANCE
(Close Up)
Cocktail Canape Caviar Petrova
A la Engel Crabflakes Balshofer
Celery, Wehlen Olives, Rhodes
Chicken Gumbo, Minter
Sauterne, Jones
Filet of Kingfish Sauté, a la Clarke, Fitzgerald and Clarke
Murphies, Horan
Sweetbreads, Nigh Fresh Mushrooms, Wiley
Claret Blaché
Punch, Metro a la Rowland
(Dissolve)
Beer, Saunders
Southdown English Mutton Chops, Noble
Spuds (cut back), Maddock
Hearts of Lettuce, Carewe, with Roquefort Cheese, Atkinson
Peach Melba, a la Bushman
Edam Cheese with Crackers, Karger
Cauchois Coffee, a la Mayer
(Fade out)

Baltimore Has Gertrude McCoy Theater

The Lord Calvert Theater Company of Baltimore had a gala opening of its new and fourth theater, the Gertrude McCoy, located at Fulton avenue and Baker street, on October 30. It is an exclusive photoplay theater embodying the most modern up-to-the-minute and distinctive requisites and has a seating capacity of eight hundred.

Gertrude McCoy and Duncan McRae of the Plimpton Epic Pictures, Inc., journeyed to Baltimore to be present at the opening, and were treated to real southern hospitality as the guests of Frederick Baker, president of the company. There was round after round of applause from the fans when Miss McCoy was introduced from the stage. After a brief address in which she expressed the deepest gratitude for so royal a reception and appreciation of her work on the screen, the lights were dimmed and "Through Turbulent Waters," written by herself and in which she plays the leading role, was exhibited.

Miss McCoy was busily engaged after the performance in distributing mirror souvenirs which the management had supplied for the occasion.

Rowland Discusses Essentials of Success

CONSISTENT PICTURES NECESSARY

THREE things are essential to the success of a motion picture theater under present conditions, according to President Richard A. Rowland of the Metro Pictures Corporation, who, as an exhibitor, is qualified to talk to exhibitors.

These three essentials are consistent pictures, a proper price and the right stimulation by advertising in the neighborhoods on which the houses must depend for their patronage. In discussing present conditions Mr. Rowland developed several points which will be news to those who are not owning and running motion picture theaters.

"The knockout picture, so called," said Mr. Rowland, "is depended upon, under present conditions, to pay all the bills and bring in the profits. Many exhibitors today are running their houses at a loss of from $10 to $15 a day for Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday and depending on Saturday's receipts to pay for all these losses and bring the week's income to the profit point.

"This is an unhealthy condition. It is a condition which cannot be permitted to continue if the exhibitor is to receive the profits to which his business entitles him.

"Times have so changed that the motion picture business is totally dissimilar to its conduct in the old days. Only a few years ago an exhibitor could equip a small theater at an outlay of from $5,000 to $10,000 and get service for $25. His admission price of five cents netted him a good profit, because his expense was small. Today an investment of from $75,000 to $150,000 is necessary if the house is to meet with the demands of the public. In addition to the interest on the larger investment the service costs far more today, because the pictures themselves cost more money to manufacture. The public demands big themes, big stars, lavish settings and handsome entertainment. These cost great sums.

"These costs must be borne by the service charges. Further expense is found in the conduct of the present theaters as against the older and smaller houses. Good music is essential, extra janitor service, extra ushers and other house expenses have increased far out of proportion to the increase in income, because prices of admission have not advanced in keeping with the advance of theater and picture costs.

"Houses that used to charge five cents now charge ten cents, but this advance is way below the equally advanced price that should be charged. I believe that many exhibitors do not raise their admission price to the proper standard because of lack of courage or lack of confidence in their entertainments.

"In one of the theaters with which I have had personally to deal, we raised our price to twenty cents and with a consistent service of pictures we have done an even greater business in point of numbers than we did at ten cents.

"In my opinion the necessities are these: First, consistent pictures that will guarantee to the audience a complete evening's entertainment. Second, the charging of a proper admission price, and third, the continued stimulation of business by advertising in the neighborhood from which the theater draws its patronage. The patrons of a theater should be absolutely assured that at their playhouse they will be entertained by good pictures no matter when they choose to go. In this the regular patron, the most profitable of the theater's assets, becomes fixed in his habits and will go to such a theater to the exclusion of other houses.

"It is impossible for any manufacturer or any group of manufacturers to put out an unbroken series of knockout pictures. The best that the exhibitor can reasonably expect or demand is consistent pictures of a uniform high standard of excellence, pictures that are bound to be entertaining even if they do not set the world afire.

"Of course there are other elements which enter into the successful conduct of the theater, such as its ventilation, its music, and the proper presentation of a picture. On these subjects I shall have more to say at a later time, but I wanted to point out what occurred to me as the immediate necessities for the exhibitor to consider. As I have said before, Metro has been concentrating on consistent pictures, but no feature program can make money for the exhibitor unaided. A very important part of the success of the theater rests with the theater management, and, as I have pointed out, if consistent pictures are provided the admission price and the local advertising are the other two essentials."

PITTSBURGH POLICE GRAB FILM

Universal Cameraman Arrested While Taking Scenes of a Fire and His Negative Destroyed—Legal Action Will Follow

What is alleged to be one of the rankest attacks ever made upon a motion picture concern was that of the Pittsburgh, Pa., police department during the recent big fire in that city when Cameraman Albert Schmidt of the Universal Animated Weekly staff was arrested and placed in a cell while the police destroyed his film, saying that such pictures could not get out of Pittsburgh.

The fire was one of the biggest Pittsburgh has had in the last ten years, and 22 girls were trapped in the flames. Cameraman Schmidt was in Pittsburgh on some work, and he started out the moment he heard the alarm, arriving on the scene about ten minutes after the alarm was rung, with a placard on his camera reading "Universal Animated Weekly of New York." Having a police pass, he went inside the police lines, but had no sooner set his camera up than a big policeman yelled to him, "Hey there, young feller, we won't have you take pictures of this; if you do we will smash your camera to pieces, as we won't like to show this stuff to the public," claims Schmidt.

Schmidt did not pay any attention and began to turn the crank. All at once flames were seen shooting out of the top story windows and some of the girls jumped to the telephone and telegraph wires, where they hung for a few seconds and dropped to the ground. Schmidt had about 150 feet of this scene taken when two policemen seized him and attempted to break his camera, but as he held it firmly they were unsuccesful. However, they took him and his camera, threw him into the police patrol and drove him to the police station, where he was placed in a cell, while the police opened his camera, removed the magazine and destroyed the film, saying as they did so that a film like that could not leave the city.

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company has instructed its attorneys to look into the matter and undertake any prosecutions necessary to obtain satisfaction for this infraction of the rights and privileges of its men, and will fight to the end any unlawful oppression against any of its men.

This is an important case, not only to the Universal but also to every other film company, for if these tactics are to be adopted generally, the police can arrest and seize any and all films which they may not wish to have shown, regardless of their power to do so. As the Universal Animated Weekly claims to be a motion picture newspaper, and a distributor of intelligence, it will claim that its "rights of free speech and liberty of the press" have been trampled upon.

Katherine Franek of Vitagraph

Katherine Franek, who is fast forging to the front as a valued member of the Vitagraph stock company, says she became an actress through the exercise of a woman's "I will" against the repeated opposition of her parents. Miss Franek received her education at the De Land Seminary in De Land, Florida, where she studied until she was sixteen. During her school days she was a most enthusiastic member of school theatrical clubs and was not only prominent in class plays, but enlivened society entertainments with a clever singing and dancing specialty of which she was the originator.

Katherine Franek.

Miss Franek's brother was in the managerial end of the theatrical profession and during one of her summer vacations she decided she would become an actress. Her parents objected and her brother talked against it, but she was obstinate, and finally, more to get rid of her continual pestering, her brother gained the consent of her father and mother for her to go on the stage and secured for her a part in the original cast of "The Flaming Arrow."

Motion pictures appealed to Miss Franek, and, watching them daily, it was but natural, with her inclination for stage work, she would apply to the producing firm most convenient, for a position as a screen actress. In October, 1914, she joined the Vitagraph Company as a stock member and in this organization, where there was more opportunity for advancement, continued her climb up the ladder to motion picture stardom. She is fully determined to become a recognized film star and is continually studying to fit herself so that she may gain this distinction.

TRAVELOGUE IS GOING BIG

Business Men Discovering That They Can Learn About South America Through Paramount Travel Pictures

The series of travel pictures, being shown weekly by the Paramount Pictures Corporation, is proving tremendously popular, due probably to the fact that the trade searchlight is at this time focused on the great continent of opportunity.

Thousands are learning for the first time that the republics of South America form something more than just merely a nondescript continent to the south. In the minds of many, South America is just considered some kind of a jungle, inhabited by monkeys, parrots, snakes and swarthy-faced, blanket-covered Indians, and productive of rubber, coffee and a few other things remembered from grammar school days.

People are now learning that in South America there is a beautiful, prosperous city, larger than Philadelphia; that one of its mountains is the highest elevation in the western hemisphere; that the Iquassu Falls are higher and wider than Niagara. How many people in the United States today know that the police force of Buenos Aires is nearly twice as large as that of New York? As a matter of fact, in Argentine there are from 800,000 to 900,000 people with all the hopes and possibilities of the best among our people of the northern continent.

The people who have been following the Paramount Travel Pictures have also learned in a recent release that Chili is one of the most progressive South American countries, having wants innumerable and the money to pay for them; that the United States Steel Corporation is about to invest $10,000,000 in iron properties there. It is the most important contributor to the nitrate market and the United States is furnishing the chief market for this, and in return will sell Chili most of her necessities.

The answer is that exhibitors everywhere are realizing the drawing power of the travel pictures and that there has been an immediate increase in bookings recently.

Selig Declines Nomination

While appreciating the honor conferred upon him, William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, upon his recent return from Los Angeles to Chicago, declined the nomination to membership on the Chicago Board of Education. Mr. Selig was recently nominated as a member of the Board by Mayor William Hale Thompson, of Chicago. Mr. Selig finds his business interests too extensive to permit him giving attention to the duties of a school board member.

Vim Comedies have secured the services of Helen Gilmore, popular for her clever screen characterizations. She comes to the Vim Players fresh from her triumphs in Universal Comedies. Prior to that time she was for three seasons with the New York Hippodrome and on the road with the "Count of Luxemburg."

Board of Trade Scores Victory

The defeat of Harold J. Mitchell, candidate for re-election to the New York Assembly from the twenty-first New York district, is a distinct triumph for the Motion Picture Board of Trade.

Mitchell introduced a bill at the last session of the legislature creating a state censor board composed of three persons who were to be vested with full and final power to say what pictures might be shown within the state and what must be excluded. The bill was killed in committee largely through the efforts of the men and companies who now constitute the Board of Trade. They held that the public is at all times the best censor of the pictures shown and that the creation of the new board would open up the same avenues of favoritism and even more sinister abuses as have always followed the establishment of such boards in other states.

Mitchell in his campaign for re-election made the re-introduction of the censor bill at the coming session of the legislature one of the principal planks in his platform. He promised, if re-elected, to use all his energies to have the measure passed.

The Board of Trade waged a vigorous publicity campaign against Mitchell in which theaters in his district co-operated by running slides reading:

We believe this audience is the best censor of the pictures shown here. Oppose all forms of legalized censorship.

The Board also helped in defeating the proposed New York Constitution because of the scant courtesy accorded a committee of the industry which appeared before the Bill of Rights Committee and asked that the motion picture—one of the three great mediums of thought expression—be accorded the same freedom from censorship now guaranteed to the other two, the press and free speech.

"The success attending the initial efforts of the Board of Trade in the field of politics," said J. W. Binder, the executive secretary, "proves the truth of its claim that in the motion picture screen lies a power second only to that of the press, and that when this power is used, as it will be used by the Board, in defense of the just rights and the good name of the motion picture industry, it will be invincible."

Balboa Studios Busy

November is going to be the banner month for the Horkheimer Brothers since they entered the motion picture production field, because work from their Long Beach studio will be featured prominently on three of the big programs before the public.

One of the month's most notable Horkheimer releases will be the five-reel production featuring Lillian Lorraine, by the Equitable Company, on the World Film program. This is entitled, "Should a Wife Forgive." It is a screen adaptation made by Will M. Ritchey of Joseph Howard's stage success of a few years ago, "The Lady of Perfume." Henry King directed the picture and played the lead opposite Miss Lorraine. It promises to have a rare charm in view of the many beautiful novelties offered.

Under the Gold Rooster emblem of Pathe, "Comrade John," which is a Balboa feature, will be seen this month. It stars William Elliott, the well known Broadway favorite, and Ruth Roland. The story is an unusually gripping one. It has been put on spectacularly by Bertram Bracken and should attract widespread attention.

Jackie Saunders will be seen in three big releases. "The Shrine of Happiness," which will be a Pathe Gold Rooster offering, is in five reels. It has been hand-colored in France and is considered by many one of the best features yet produced. William Conklin and Paul Gilmore are the supporting players. D. F. Whitcomb wrote the scenario.

Miss Saunders will also be seen as the featured player in "The Adventures of a Madcap," another November Pathe release in colors. In this she appears in her favorite role, that of a carefree nature child. It is a picture of romance and virile freshness.

In "The Woman of the Sea," which Kalem will release, Jackie Saunders has an altogether different part. It demonstrates her versatility as a dramatic artist. Another Horkheimer production which Kalem will release is "The Woman's Wiles," in which the featured players are Alma Ruben and Philo McCullough. This piece has a Parisian setting and is atmospherically colorful.

In addition to all of the foregoing, November will see four episodes in the latter part of "Neal of the Navy," which Balboa has been filming for Pathe. This patriotic serial has been increasing in popularity steadily, because it is rising to an effective climax. The Panama brand, under which it is being released, is a new trade name for Horkheimer productions. As soon as "Neal of the Navy" is finished, another serial from the Long Beach studio will be put out under it.

More Scenario Writers for Ince

Two additions to the Ince-Triangle scenario bureau, this week, were made by Producer Thomas H. Ince, in the persons of Frank Tannehill and James Montgomery. Tannehill will be best remembered, perhaps, for his long affiliation with the famous Gus Hill productions of the legitimate stage, though for thirty years he has been a prominent figure in the footlight realm. His present duties will be to collaborate in the writing and revision of manuscripts. Later, it is understood, he will assist Ince, J. Parker Reade and Dave Hartford in the general supervision of productions.

Montgomery is famed as the author of "Ready Money," the Broadway success, that has won for him a fortune in royalties. He has already begun the work of submitting stories to Ince and before long, it is likely, he will be heard from as the author of a powerful Ince feature. The acquisition of Tannehill and Montgomery augments the number of regular staff writers to six. The others who are now turning out scripts for Ince-Triangle productions are C. Gardner Sullivan, J. G. Hawks, Richard V. Spencer and Monte M. Katterjohn.

Who'll Get Gold Watch?

An exceedingly novel incentive to more efficient and more aggressive promotion of features by exhibitors, is that being conducted by Tom North, manager of the Seattle office of the Big Four. Mr. North has offered a watch to be awarded to the exhibitor who uses the most and best advertising schemes in giving publicity to the productions of the V. L. S. E. and who receives the largest number of votes from his brother exhibitors in the Seattle territory. Many of the exhibitors have had the "stunts" they originated photographed and sent in to the house organ of the Seattle branch, The V-L-S-E Pals. All have been unanimous in stating that the various ideas have materially increased the business done on the pictures for which they were devised.

One of the latest and most original ideas conceived was that of Manager Oswald of Bremerton, in advertising "The Man Trail." Using an old automobile tire, he cut it into pieces resembling the sole of a shoe. Six of these were attached to the rear tire of his automobile, and on the under side of the mud guard was fastened a heavy scrubbing brush that had been perforated with holes to allow a slowly fed stream of whitewash to saturate through. As each footprint rubbed against the brush it was thoroughly whitewashed, and the imprint transferred to the pavement. Every paved street in town was covered with these prints, with the result that there were few people who did not know of the showing of "The Man Trail."

To advertise this same feature, an exhibitor in Renton engaged two men to decorate the city streets with red paint and then to walk in this paint. The men covered the entire town, but always started from the outskirts and worked toward the theater. The result was that all these tracks focused in front of a liberal display of six-sheets, announcing the showing of "The Man Trail" for that day. It is said that the idea filled the house three times and left many standing.

Mutual Has Unique War Film

Bearing a special permit issued by the War Office in Paris, and accompanied by two officers especially designated by the commanding officer, a Mutual Weekly photographer, shortly after the now historic Anglo-French drive in the Champagne district, late in September, penetrated the fighting zone, where he secured a number of interesting pictures, depicting the life of the French soldiers and their officers now entrenched in that section. These pictures make up part of Mutual Weekly No. 44, which will be released in the regular Mutual program, November 4.

One of the many pictures obtained by the photographer of special interest, is that showing the peculiar construction of the French trenches, dug by the heroic sons of France in zig-zag fashion through a greater section of the forest in the immediate vicinity of which considerable fighting took place before the Germans were driven from their positions. Another picture shows the life of the French soldiers and the various forms of entertainment indulged in by them behind the trenches, safely protected from the enemy's gun fire by a curtain of heavy woodland.

The barbed wire entanglements erected by the Germans and taken by the French, after a heavy loss of life, are also shown in this exceptionally novel group of war pictures. Other pictures show the French soldiers widening and reinforcing the forest roads to permit the passage of heavy guns and ammunition trains. Still another picture of exceptional interest shows a French lookout, located far in advance of his comrades, watching the movement of the enemy by means of a powerful pair of field glasses and signaling the enemy's position to the gunners in charge of the heavy field pieces and reporting the effects of the fire.

These war pictures, the first to reach this country since the French and British drive, are considered by some the most interesting of their kind ever taken. The Mutual Weekly photographer at the front with the French is a member of the French Union of Cinematographers, delegated and authorized by the French government.

Crowd in front of building that was constructed and burned to make a single scene in a coming Keystone-Triangle feature.

Dodging Bullets No Fun

Stanley Hollibone, head of the laboratory for the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company, has had a spectacular career. Established as a camera man for the Russells, the royal photographers in London, and apparently settled down for life, Hollibone caught the moving picture fever early in the game and joined the Urban Eclipse, for whom he developed all the negative of the government's official film of the Boer War. He next toured France, Spain, Africa, China and other parts of the world, and relates a thrilling experience at San Sebastian in Spain, where he was sent to film a fight between a tiger and one of the powerful Andalusian bulls. The bull tossed the tiger out of the caged ring into the amphitheater, and in the ensuing panic the excitable armed guards lost their heads and began to blaze away from all corners. Fortunately the tiger was too done up to be dangerous, but the bullets accounted for over twenty people. Stanley's arrival in America so soon afterward rather suggests it was his first stop after the shooting began.

Harvard to Build Large Studio

The Harvard Films is soon to have one of the largest motion picture studios in the east at 231-233 Tenth avenue, New York, where it now has its printing and developing plant, with a capacity of one million feet per week.

The same people that built the Willat, Universal and other large studios are to build the Harvard, which will cost in the neighborhood of sixty or seventy thousand dollars. It will have both an interior-exterior stage and the Cooper-Hewitt lighting system.

Billy Quirk is being featured in the Harvard comedies which will soon be released. J. T. Reardon is president of this company, and Frank P. Donovan manager of productions. Otto C. Gilmore is the photographer.

Albert Capellani is treasurer of the Paragon Films Inc., which is to operate the new Paragon studio at Fort Lee, N. J., when completed. By an oversight, Mr. Capellani's name has been omitted from the news items which have already been sent out on this subject.

Yep, They're Grafters

The accompanying illustration shows what is alleged to be the greatest bunch of grafters ever gathered under one roof. Fifteen of 'em, and every single one a different variety of a grafter, but a grafter nevertheless. These are the fifteen characters who will appear, one in each release, of "Graft," the new Universal Film Manufacturing Company serial, which is being written by fifteen different authors. You might say that some look to be perfect gentlemen. They are in real life, but in reel life they are some of the world's most noted criminals. The first of the "Graft" series will be released the first part of December, immediately following the three weeks' serial of J. Warren Kerrigan in the new adventures of Terrence O'Rourke. The first chapter is by Irvin S. Cobb, and is now being made at Universal City.

Billy Horne.

Illustrated in the small picture above is Billy Horne, famous throughout the film trade as the "First Deputy Goat," in his makeup as one of the grafters. The Goatman is extremely worried over Billy's debut as an actor but trusts it is not too late to reform him.

The whole fifteen of 'em.

A Tri-Star Combination

For the first time since the inception of the Triangle program, a tri-star combination will be offered in one production, when, during the latter part of November, Thomas H. Ince will present Mary Boland, Willard Mack and Frank Mills in an absorbing drama of love and intrigue from the pen of C. Gardner Sullivan, entitled "The Edge of the Abyss." Each of the trio is a notable figure of the legitimate stage and this, for one reason, is why additional importance attaches to the production.

Miss Boland, who for many years gained fame as John Drew's leading woman in most of that actor's big successes, has the part of a butterfly type of a girl, "whose idea of life is constantly to sip from the flowers of luxury in the garden of idleness." It is a role that is declared to suit her talents remarkably well and this, together with the fact that she has "screened" admirably, is expected to advance her still farther in the estimation of her admirers.

Mills is fittingly cast, it is said, in the role of a prosperous criminal lawyer, upon whose disregard of his wife in favor of his business rests the plot of the story. He always has been at home in a role of this kind on the speaking stage, and he required, therefore, little coaching in his work before the camera, except in the mechanics of the art.

Mack, the third star of the combination, will be seen as a professional burglar—a characterization which is believed to be one of the very best of the kind either contributed to the screen or the stage. The fourth member of the cast is Robert McKim, the Ince "heavy," who has come rapidly to the front since the Triangle opening.

Elaborate settings serve to make "The Edge of the Abyss" what is believed to be one of the most beautiful of all Ince productions. The picture was directed by Walter Edwards and supervised of course by Ince.

An Unusual Vitagraph Week

Comedy subjects will predominate during the third week of November in the releases announced by the Vitagraph Company, the entire program, however, being so strongly characteristic of that spirit of progressiveness and willingness to share the best in photoplay productions that has become a part of this company's business methods, it is almost imposible to pick one subject, either comedy or dramatic, that stands out more forcibly than another.

Monday will be the most important release day of the week, only because of the fact there will be two pictures released, a Cyrus Townsend Brady story, "Heights of Hazard," and one of the Sonny Jim series by Elaine Sterne. "Heights of Hazard" is a five-part Blue Ribbon feature introducing a no less distinguished actor than Charles Richman in a cast that includes Eleanor Woodruff, Charles Kent and Frank Holland in the principal characters.

In direct contrast is the second Monday release in which the inimitable Bobby Connelly figures in another adventure of Sonny Jim in "Sonny Jim and the Great American Game." Bobby, Mabel Kelly, Edwina Robbins and Logan Paul enact the principal characters under the direction of Tefft Johnson.

Tuesday, November 16, a two-part feature is announced in "The Gypsy Trail," presenting Antonio Moreno, Frankie Mann, Donald Hall, Josephine Earle and Nellie Anderson in contrasting characterizations that go to make a story of strong dramatic appeal. It is a story of Gypsy life, redolent of the atmosphere of that freedom characteristic of the wandering tribes.

Anita Stewart and Earle Williams will make of the Wednesday release a gala one, in their presentation of "The Counts," a one-part comedy written and produced by Ralph W. Ince. It is seldom this trio of well known artists are identified with a single-part subject, and a release to which their names are attached is a welcome addition to any program. In "The Counts" Mr. Ince uses as his theme American wives for American husbands, and by burlesquing the arrival of a distinguished nobleman, who aspires to the hand of a wealthy American girl, not only extracts innumerable comedy situations, but introduces Miss Stewart and Mr. Williams in characters that are congenial. Albert Roccardi, Hughie Mack, William Dangman and Donald MacBride are the chief assistants of the two Vitagraph stars in the funmaking.

A new star in filmdom, Jewell Hunt, will make her initial bow to motion picture fans in "A Motorcycle Elopement," a one-part comedy, announced for Thursday, November 18. Miss Hunt's is the type of beauty that registers emphatically on the screen, and she is possessed of inborn talents that will soon place her in the front rank of moving picture stars.

Another interesting announcement included in the week's program is the regular "Sidney Drew Day" release, "Diplomatic Henry," in which Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew are exceptionally well cast as a pair of newly-weds. The story is rich in laughable situations and replete with typical Drewian comedy.

The program is further enriched on Saturday by a powerful Broadway Star feature entitled "Heredity," by Seymour Galland, produced under the direction of William Humphrey. Carolyn Birch, Rose Tapley, Thomas Mills, Templer Saxe, Jay Dwiggins and Denton Vane are the Vitagraph players prominent in its enactment.

EDISON LAYS CORNERSTONE

Great Inventor Himself Puts in Place Copper Plate That Marks Cornerstone of Universal's Big Electric Studio

Some weeks ago Sigmund Lubin, head of the moving picture manufacturing company which bears his name, was entertained at Universal City and was shown all over its vast extent. He was tremendously impressed. Now it is Thomas A. Edison who has been attracted to the great film producing center—Universal City. Mr. Laemmle, who expected to be present at the laying of the cornerstone of the great electrical studio which is just being started at Universal City, asked Thomas A. Edison if he would do him the honor of laying this cornerstone, and Mr. Edison gladly accepted.

Thomas A. Edison laying corner stone of new Universal electric studio.

At 6:30 on Friday night last, before an immense audience which cheered repeatedly, Mr. Edison was handed a large copper plate bearing an inscription which chronicled the date, the building, the fact that Mr. Edison laid the cornerstone, and other important data in connection with the starting of an enterprise which marks one of the notable events, not only in the history of filmdom, but in the history of electricity as well, for the equipment of this studio which has just been ordered by William Sistrom, purchasing agent of the Universal, promises to be the most important electrification of a single building which the contractors have ever attempted. Representatives of the Klegel people, the Cooper-Hewitt people, and several other important manufacturers of electrical apparatus were present, and several of them have been commissioned to furnish electrical supplies for the building.

Kneeling on the ground, Mr. Edison placed the copper plate upon the stone, and it was fastened there while the crowd cheered the great inventor to the echo. The Klegel lights had been arranged in such a way that excellent motion pictures were taken of this interesting event. These will be shown in the Universal Animated Weekly.

After the ceremony Mr. Edison entered the beautiful Universal theater, where all of the films taken at the Coast are shown the heads of departments, and there viewed moving pictures made of himself and his party, which consisted of Mrs. Edison and her sister, taken at Santa Barbara at one o'clock that same afternoon by the Universal Animated Weekly cameraman.

"Speedy work," was Mr. Edison's comment after the film had been run.

Some Josher is Gilmore

When Percy Winter, director of productions for the Raver Film Corporation, made up his mind to cast Paul Gilmore and no one else to portray the character of Rev. Clifton Bradford in the first Raver production of Augustus Thomas' play, "The Other Girl," to co-star with James J. Corbett, he found that Gilmore's engagement in Los Angeles prevented the dapper star's release before November 2. However, herculean efforts were undertaken to counteract the effects of any delays incurred, and Gilmore was telegraphed the following instructions:

Carry necessary wardrobe for Rev. Bradford on train arriving here Sunday. Our representative will meet you at station and convey you by motor to studio. No time can be lost. Holding people and scene for you.

Gilmore's reply is indicative of his sense of humor and experience before the camera.

Have Bible and pulpit ready. Arrive 9 a. m., Pennsylvania, Sunday, November seventh, cassock, clasped hands, heavenly look and all. Three cheers for my chance to return to good old New York and the East, Staten Island included.

World Film Prominent at Cinema Ball

World Film Corporation was ably represented at the Bronx Cinema Ball, held at the Hunts Point Palact, on Monday evening, November 1. More than one thousand balloons, pennants and post-cards were distributed. The first number on the program was World Film's wonderful picturization of "Trilby" with Miss Clara Kimball Young in the stellar role. The audience was enthusiastic over it.

The Grand March was led by Miss Clara Kimball Young, the famous World Film star, and Mr. Earle Williams of the Vitagraph Company.

Premier Program Enters Feature Field

WILL RELEASE WEEKLY

THE Premier Program Corporation, with main and executive offices at 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York City, announces its entrance into the field of feature programs.

Although the name Premier Program, under which this company will release fifty-two features annually, is a new one in the industry, the company is not a newcomer in the field, inasmuch as the five producing companies who will release on this program are and have been established as successful producers of features for years. Thus all the benefits of experience, coupled with the advantages of a modern, progressive and aggressive sales plan accrue to this organization.

The plans of the Premier Program are comprehensive, based, as already stated, upon the production of one five reel feature weekly by one of the five producing companies.

Each feature is made under the supervision and subject to the approval of the Premier Program Corporation. It must not only meet the standard set by each producer for his own work, but must also undergo an examination at the hands of the sales company. For these reasons every picture released on this program will reach the exchanges only after having undergone a double scrutiny by competent, efficient and critical judges.

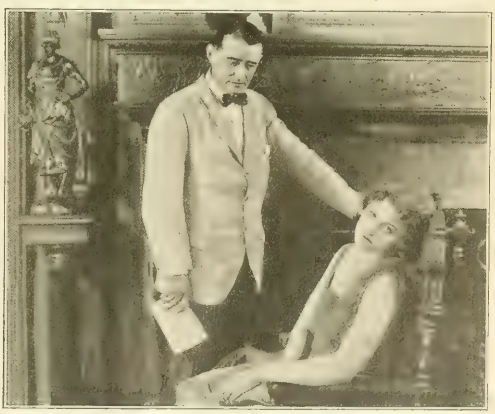
Premier pictures will be released through independent exchanges, the attitude of the corporation being that the best interests of both the exhibitor and his patrons demand that the rental, distribution and care of picture plays can best be served by the local exchange.

Premier pictures will be sold outright to the exchange man, and will be his property. The plan does not include any of the percentage or profit sharing schemes used by some sales companies.

Large cash deposits masquerading under the names of franchises, guarantees, etc., are also no part of the Premier program, as this corporation is amply financed and need ask no aid from the exchangeman. In fact, the contrary attitude is that assumed by the marketers of Premier photoplays, who maintain that the exchange man and exhibitor are entitled to and will receive more consideration at the hands of the company than has usually been accorded to them in the past.

G. Blake Garrison, secretary of the Premier Program Corporation, said: "Our organization is founded upon the great modern business tendency of co-operation. We are all firm believers in accomplishing the best results by working together. Our success is dependent on and bound up with the success of the exchange man and the exhibitor and we are all going to work together for the maximum good of all concerned and the Premier Program.

A Valuable Little Book



In "The Movie Man's Friend," by Frank Harding, of Grinnell, Iowa, a forty-eight page little book, splendidly printed and neatly bound, a most interesting little volume is found. In his preface the author frankly states that the matter within its pages was compiled from the experiences of certain successful motion picture exhibitors, with the purpose of aiding both experienced and inexperienced theater managers in getting more business. That he has succeeded few will doubt, after a careful reading of the text, for the little volume is brimful of helpful plans for boosting box office receipts, descriptions of schemes and contests put on by other exhibitors that actually did help their theaters, and suggestions that ought to work out well in most any small town.

Within the book Mr. Harding discusses several unique and quite out of the ordinary styles of advertising, mentions outdoor bally-hoo stunts that have pulled business for him, hints as to new arrangements of lobby displays for special pictures, odd stage decorations, good plans for benefit performances that brought new business to the house giving them, and in fact a thousand-and-one suggestions for the exhibitor in the small neighborhood theater or good-sized country town.

CHARLES CHERRY'S FILM DEBUT

Frohman Star in Famous Players' Adaptation of Isaac Henderson's Great Dramatic Success, "The Mummy and the Humming-Bird"

Charles Cherry, well known as the star of many Broadway successes, makes his motion picture debut by special arrangement with the Charles Frohman Company, in the Famous Players Film Company's adaptation of Isaac Henderson's great drama, "The Mummy and the Humming-Bird." This subject is scheduled for release on November 11, by Paramount.

Charles Cherry in scene from Famous Players' "The Mummy and the Humming Bird."

Mr. Cherry's delightful impersonation of the absent-minded peer who neglects his wife in order to devote his time to scientific experiments, is one which he may justly be proud to add to the personal triumphs gained on the stage in support of such well known actresses as Mary Mannering, Henrietta Crosman, Maxine Elliott and Ethel Barrymore.

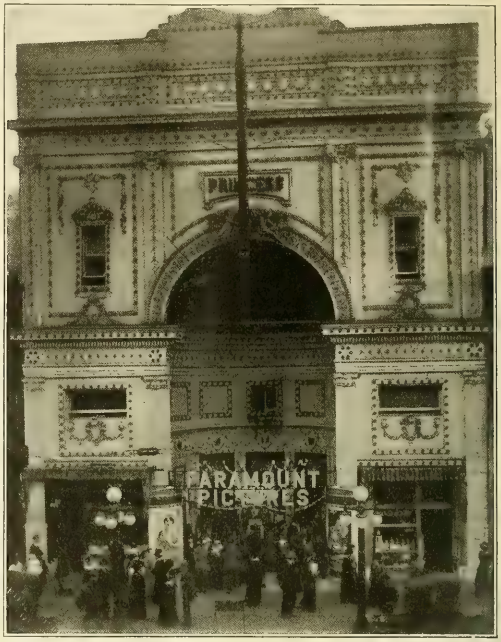
The absent-mindedness of Lord Lumley (Mr. Cherry) and his failure to pay attention to his beautiful and vivacious wife lead to many and varied complications. There is an Italian author, D'Orelli, who looks upon the beautiful woman with more than passing interest. Captivating as he finds her to be, he thinks that her husband's apparent indifference can be turned to his material advantage. He begins a violent courtship of Lady Lumley, who responds more in order to save herself from boredom than because of any real interest in the Italian.

This is not the first affair of the same ilk in which D'Orelli has participated. Before leaving his native land he reduced the home of Guiseppe, a compatriot, to ruins. His victim has followed him to London in the hope of gaining revenge. By the greatest good fortune, Guiseppe is employed by Lord Lumley, whose blindness and indifference earn him the sobriquet, "The Mummy."

Circumstances force upon Lord Lumley the realization that his wife is in danger, and there begins a thrilling struggle for the woman whose innocence has led her into the wiley Italian's trap. Using Guiseppe as his pawn, the peer wages a desperate battle of cunning against the intriguer. The contest reaches a powerful climax in which the peer, who has held the reins, loses control of Guiseppe.

It is a brilliant play, depicting the crafty wiles of three able men whose efforts to out-think each other in this gripping struggle for the beautiful Lady Lumley forms an absorbing tale, full of suspense.

Every effort has been made to give the piece the exquisite settings which it richly deserves. The views of the Lumley estate will prove especially pleasing to the critical eye. In support of Mr. Cherry there appear Lillian Tucker, William Sorelle, Arthur Hoops, Claire Zobelle and others of equal merit.



Ellison's Unique Advertising

H. E. Ellison, proprietor and manager of Denver's Princess theater is one of the most enterprising exhibitors in Colorado and has lately hit upon a color scheme in the way of lobby decorations, which enables his regular patrons, while still a block away, to tell whether or not their favorite is, that day, on the Princess screen.

For instance, Mr. Ellison on days when Mary Pickford is the featured star, uses baby blue ribbon in his lobby decorations, baby blue color in his advertising cards and other literature, also in streamers that spread out across the entrance to his theater. When Marguerite Clark is the star, deep purple is used; when Blanche Sweet is being featured yellow is the prevailing color, and brown is used for Pauline Frederick, while for "Carmen," the famous Laskey production featuring Geraldine Farrar, crimson will denote the appearance of that picture at the Princess.

Manager Ellison declares that, although he only started the use of this color scheme some three weeks ago, his patrons already have cultivated the habit of looking for the daily color and already are expressing much interest, as well as appreciation, for this rather unique announcement of the day's star.

In the photograph showing the front of the Princess theater, which accompanies this story, will be noted a fine "gold" ring which has been made for the appearance of Blanche Ring, the ring being so arranged that it fits over the opening in the box office and patrons have to purchase tickets through it. Mr. Ellison declares that he had once thought of presenting Blanche herself with the ring, but fears it might cause talk.

View of the Princess Theater, Denver, Colo.

Motography is indebted to George E. Carpenter of the Notable Feature Film Company of Salt Lake City, Utah, for both the picture of Mr. Ellison's house and the data about his unique advertising scheme.

"How Molly Made Good" Shown

The novel six-reel film "How Molly Made Good," which is being booked in the Chicago territory by the General Feature Film Company, was given a private advance showing to exhibitors at the Ziegfield theater on Michigan avenue, Chicago, on Wednesday of last week, and many of those who witnessed it went away enthusiastic over the unique offering, which includes in its all star cast such favorites as Leo Ditrichstein, Henrietta Crosman, Robert Edeson, Julia Dean, Julian Eltinge, Cyril Scott, Lulu Glaser, Henry Kolker, May Robson, Charles Ross, Mabel Fenton and Mme. Fjorde of the New York Metropolitan Opera House.

Kane Opens Office of His Own

Arthur S. Kane, well known in the film industry through his former holding of prominent positions with several of the big film companies, has opened an office of his own at 901 Chandler building, New York City, and is there renewing acquaintances with many of his former exhibitor friends.

GAUMONT SIGNS HARRY VOKES

Comedian for Thirty-One Years Member of Team of Ward & Vokes to Be Featured in Two Casino Star Comedies

The list of prominent thespians who are making America laugh at Casino Star comedies which the Gaumont Company is making for the Mutual program, has had another addition in that king of laugh-makers, Harry Vokes. Mr. Vokes is working at the Flushing studio under the direction of Edwin Middleton. He has just completed "Beauty in Distress," a comedy by Miss Dorothy Rogers and Sully Guard, and is now at work on "The House Party," a comedy by Adrian Gil Spear. In the former, Mr. Vokes has the support of Miss Dorothy Rogers, who has been appearing recently as a headliner in vaudeville. The supporting cast of "The House Party" has been strengthened by giving Mr. Vokes the assistance of Miss Eleanor Fairbanks, who closed as star in "A Pair of Sixes" to join the Casino Star comedy company.

The comedy of Harry Vokes is well adapted for screen purposes. His name itself will draw well, since for thirty-one years he was a member of the team of Ward & Vokes, touring the country from coast to coast. Wherever comedy along broad, farcical lines was welcomed—and that was everywhere—Ward & Vokes always played to standing room. Consequently, he is both well and favorably known. How little is required to start an entertaining personality on the road to fame and fortune is well illustrated in the case of Vokes. The first production in which he and Ward starred cost just $625 to raise the first curtain. After that it was just a question of counting the money. Of course both men had had long experience in the theatrical business, and before that Mr. Vokes had secured his groundwork for broad comedy by clowning in a circus. Pictures are a novelty to him, but he is demonstrating that the methods which brought him fame upon the stage register with equal ease upon the screen.

Harry Vokes in a scene from Casino's "Beauty in Distress."

On November 20, when the Screen Club for the second time holds its ball at the Hotel Astor, the famous World Film star, Clara Kimball Young, will lead the Grand March.

Universal Entertains Odd Character

Universal City has had quite a variety of visitors, but was treated to a new one last week, when a woman "hobo" dropped in. She was Mrs. Emma Enault, who had left her home in Chicago to make a journey across the continent as best she could. She slept in barns, box cars—seldom in a real bed—and most of the time on the ground. She encountered all kinds of weather in the seven months she has been on the road, having left Chicago March 10. Mrs. Enault claims to have encountered three mountain lions while sleeping in the open, but she trusted to her .38 calibre revolver and felt safe. She sold postal cards of herself to raise money for her food, and says the largest amount she ever obtained in any one place was at Leadville, Colo., where the dimes and quarters came in to the tune of $20.25. She was known along the route as the "Queen of the Hoboes," and she takes pride in holding this title without having any jealous contenders. She intends to write a book of her journey from Chicago to Universal City, and then make an effort to journey around the world.

Mrs. Enault.

Equitable's Casting Director

William Sheer, formerly with William Fox films, and before that one of the youngest headliners in the Keith vaudeville theaters, is now a permanent member of the Equitable staff and, in addition to playing principal male roles opposite women stars, occupies the important position of general casting director, whose duty it will be to engage no less than two thousand people a week for the seven companies now actively engaged at the various Equitable studios.

Last week Sheer successfully cast Gail Kane's company, which will leave the city for distant locations, within the next few days. His recent work in supplying a theater full of exceptionally well dressed extra people and in a very short time, was an example of his efficiency. The theater seated sixteen hundred people and Sheer had the house dressed an hour before the director and his crew arrived.

William Sheer created his most favorable impression by his work in "The Regeneration," in which he carried off the honors of the production. He was with Keystone for a year and his work opposite Alexandra Carlisle in "Creeping Tides," which goes over the Equitable circuit shortly, stamped him as a thorough screen artist and he became forthwith a permanent Equitable asset.

Mr. Sheer began his professional career as a dancer. His rise was rapid. Four months after he appeared as an amateur at Miner's Bowery theater he became dancing partner for Valeska Suratt and then launched out as a high class "single" act and maintained a high standing of artistic creations until the very day he decided to renounce the stage for the screen.

Toomey With Mirror

W. C. Toomey.

Mirror Films, Inc., announces that William C. Toomey has taken the helm as vice-president and general manager and is also a member of the executive board. Mr. Toomey is known in the trade as one of the strongest executives and guided the destinies of the Mutual Film Corporation in a similar capacity. He was for many years associated with James J. Hill and is a recognized organizer. His experience in the film business in general, and especially in the distribution of motion pictures will no doubt prove a splendid asset for a new concern. Mr. Toomey is surrounding himself with a staff of thoroughly experienced motion picture men, and aims to make Mirror Films be one of the most progressive and most famous of film organizations in the country.

A Florence Turner Feature

The fact that Florence Turner is to appear in an M-in-A Comedy should prove of more than ordinary interest to the exhibitor. "Florence Turner Impersonates Film Favorites" will be the title of the M-in-A release of November 25.

A pioneer of the screen, Florence Turner is as much in demand today as she was 14 years ago when she started to gain poularity as a Vitagraph player. In those bygone days Miss Turner is said to have held an executive position as well—on nice days posing before the camera and on cloudy days performing the duties of cashier of the Vitagraph Company. The earliest multiple reelers projected featured Florence Turner and she will long be remembered for her work in such features as "A Queen for a Day," "Auld Lang Syne," and "A Tale of Two Cities."

Not long ago Miss Turner moved to London and, there, leading her own company, has gained enviable popularity in England.

In "Florence Turner Impersonates Film Favorites" she demonstrates her remarkable versatility with the following impersonations: The old style Pathe heroine; Ford Sterling; the old Biograph star; Mabel Normand; Broncho Billy; the "Divine Sarah."

Impersonations on the screen are rare; and this unique subject, coupled with the featuring of Florence Turner, should indeed prove a novelty.

A scene from Pathe's "At Bay."

Famous Players Sign Frank Losee

Contracts have just been signed whereby the Famous Players Film Company obtains the exclusive services of Frank Losee, the distinguished character actor, who has already appeared in numerous feature productions of that concern.

Mr. Losee's first role since becoming a permanent member of the Famous Players' staff will be that of Josh Whitcomb, the beloved character in "The Old Homestead," which the late Denman Thompson rendered unforgettable by his quaint and charming impersonation. Work on the screen production of this play has already begun, the first scenes being taken in the newly acquired studio at Fifty-sixth street.

The first important role which Mr. Losee played upon the screen for the Famous Players was the villainous Baron Bonelli in "The Eternal City," in which he attained a great success in support of Pauline Frederick. Mr. Losee has been seen in a number of other big Famous Players productions, the last of which is "The Masqueraders," in which Hazel Dawn is starred.

Cort Picture Making Good

"The Whirl of Life," the six-reel picture featuring Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle in a thrilling melodramatic subject, is still packing them into eastern houses, where it is being shown, and the popular Castles seem to be meeting with as much favor on the screen as they have already done in real life on the legitimate stage. The picture is being shown to out-of-town buyers by A. H. Sawyer, who is to be found at the Celebrated Players' Film Exchange in Chicago. Though the film is highly melodramatic and sensational in many respects, this seems to add to its attractiveness from the box office standpoint as those who do not care for the dancing portion of the subject will undoubtedly find much to entertain them in the spectacular happenings.

Paper Issues Film Special

The Los Angeles Record of Saturday, October 30, was a special motion picture edition, and in its twenty-four pages devoted nearly one-half of the text, as well as a great part of the advertising section, to matters of interest pertaining to the motion picture industry, which has been so important in the development of the city of Los Angeles. Practically every star and every film organization on the coast was represented both in the text matter and in the advertising columns, and it is clearly evident that the citizens of Los Angeles and the vicinity, will more than ever, appreciate the importance of this industry to the community.

Editors: ED J. MOCK and PAUL H. WOODRUFF
Associate Editors
Neil G. Caward Thomas C. Kennedy
John C. Garrett Charles R Condon
Advertising Manager: ALLEN L. HAASE

NEW YORK OFFICE, 1022 LONGACRE BUILDING
Forty-second Street and Broadway
Telephone Bryant 7030
CHARLES R. CONDON, Eastern Representative

This publication is free and independent of all business or house connections or control. No manufacturer or supply dealer, or their stockholders or representatives, have any financial interest in Motography or any voice in its management or policy.

Entered at Chicago Post Office as Second Class Mail Matter

MOTOGRAPHY

THE MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY
ELECTRICITY MAGAZINE CORPORATION
MONADNOCK BUILDING
CHICAGO, ILL.

Telephone: Harrison 3014—All Departments

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS

Changes of advertising copy should reach the office of publication not less than fifteen days in advance of date of issue. Regular date of issue, every Saturday. New advertisements will be accepted up to within ten days of date of issue, but proof of such advertisements can not be shown in advance of publication.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE

Per year $3.00

Canada - - - - Per year $4.00
Foreign - - - - Per year 5.00
Single copy - - - - .15

FOR SALE AT ALL NEWS STANDS

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS

REMITTANCES—Remittances should be made by check, New York draft or money order, in favor of MOTOGRAPHY. Foreign subscriptions may be remitted direct by International Postal Money Order.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS—The old address should be given as well as the new, and notice should be received two weeks in advance of the desired change.

If Your News Dealer Will Not Supply You Please Notify Us

Volume XIV CHICAGO, NOVEMBER 20, 1915 Number 21

Unusual Systems for Unusual Productions

AN individual may be either conservative or radical, according to his temperament. Business, in the large, is always conservative. The average layman might be heard to observe that the motion picture business was an exception to this rule. But it is a fact that although its changes come fast, they are logical; its growth is along paths already cut, though the cutting may be very recent. An unusual and untraditional business course attracts as much attention in the picture industry as it does in any other.

Thus a producer who established an arbitrary rule that exhibitors must pay four weeks' rental in advance might, at first blush, be regarded as radical. As a matter of fact, when that very thing happened, it was so regarded by the trade—which only goes to prove the rule that the tendency of all business is toward the conservative. Here was an institution comparatively new—though substantial and able enough, to be sure—rushing boldly up a steep path that no one else had cared or thought to explore. Of course, the usual conservative predictions of failure flowed freely: The exhibitior did not have to stand for it—ergo, the exhibitor would not stand for it.

But the conservatives overlooked the vital feature of the situation. In this particular case it happened that the producer had the goods. Meaning, of course, that if the sales method was radical in its departure from custom, the pictures were radical in their excellence.

Here was apparently discovered a new principle of logic. It is often said that two wrongs never make one right. But, it becomes obvious that two radicals may make one conservative. Here is a different system, to be sure; but it is designed for a different class of picture. Looked at in this light, the innovation does not appear quite so anarchistic.

After all, it is wholly up to the exhibitor—who, at last, is beginning to be recognized as the real umpire. When a producer has something he wants he will meet any reasonable condition to get it. A month's advance on the rental does not look unreasonable to him because it represents not that much money spent, but merely tied up. No doubt he thinks it an excellent place to tie it up. He is a good judge of pictures and of picture producers. He knows his four weeks' rental money is working at a good job; to wit, the improvement of those very pictures whose excellence, as already achieved, moved him to the investment.

It might be remarked that an organization clever enough to work this system is foreordained to prosperity. Not, of course, unless its product is exceptional and its distribution scheme satisfactory. But given those conditions, prosperity for the manufacturer is what the exhibitor wants. Liking the brand, he wants assurance that it will continue; that it will, if possible, improve with time; that he can get it, after varying periods of time, at almost any price he elects to pay for his service.

In brief, the exhibitor insists that his film supply be properly taken care of. His business is running theaters. In getting his show he wants as little friction as possible and as good pictures as possible, with a sliding scale of rentals so accurately worked out that he can get all these things whether he has much or little to spend. Where he sees a guarantee of such desirable circumstances, he is perfectly willing to tie up to it with his signature and his money.

All of which goes to illustrate the moral that a good product and considerate treatment of customers are the factors that control the situation. Service with those conditions is worth more than service without them. The exhibitor is a good example of the American temperament. He wants not the cheapest he can get, but the best he can afford to buy. The producer whose picture-making talent and scheme of delivery gives him that can have both his money and his admiration.

Children Unaccompanied

A CLEVELAND newspaper makes the astonishing editorial declaration, regarding the protection of children from the picture shows, that the children rather than the pictures need attention. Heretofore it has been the general attitude that the children should be allowed to run wild while the films were restricted for their irresponsible benefit. If the shows interfered with their bedtime, or their school-time, close the shows. That was the sentiment, if not the practice.

The greatest weakness of our American social tendency is the neglect of our children. To their appearance, manners and education their parents give ample attention; but a good part of the time they don't know where the kids are, even after dark. The entertainment they seek, and find, may be entirely innocent, and, to give them credit, it generally is. But when their parents do awaken to the possibilities of the situation, as occasionally happens, they proceed to attack indiscriminately all the outside attractions.

It is perfectly obvious and self-evident that a well conducted picture theater is a much safer place of an evening for children and youths than the streets, the parks, or anywhere else except a church social.

But, on the other hand, the motion picture has outgrown the limits of a children's show. Today the parents are the patrons who make the business profitable. And while regulating strictly what their children shall see, they themselves want to see something not quite so regulated.

It cannot be denied that, as the Cleveland paper suggests, many films entirely harmless and even beneficial to grown-ups are not good mental fodder for the very young. Furthermore, the characteristic immoderation of youth leads to too much indulgence in anything that is good, whether it be pie or pictures. The remedy for that is in the home, not in the show.

In Ohio the exhibitors themselves have adopted a sort of curfew regulation whereby each showman takes upon himself the responsibility of sending home, at 9 p. m., all unaccompanied children in his house. Very creditable and praiseworthy of the Ohio exhibitors, who have thus disarmed criticism, forestalled legislation, and made friends with the parents.

But we still think the matter is properly one of child training rather than one of exhibitor training. Let the parents be responsible for their children. Why should it be necessary to put the children out at nine o'clock? Why should there be any to put out?

The question is broader than its application to the show business. It touches much that is vital to the welfare of the next few generations. Perhaps some film producer will be clever enough to work the theme into a series of pictures, thereby cashing in on some much needed propaganda and gaining the thanks of the harassed exhibitors.

Just a Moment Please

How'd you like to be an oiler for a sculptor?

—

Those of you who don't "get" this one should beseech "Ruby" to give them a private showing of Thanhouser's "Inspiration."

—

Then they'll tumble.

—

GOSH, WHAT A CHANCE FOR ADVERTISING.

The Reelplays Corporation, one of the recently formed producing organizations, announces the near release of "The Cowpuncher," a western mellerdrama in which Little Bull is one of the principals. Just think what a live wire exhibitor might do with an announcement of this picture, and Little Bull.

—

We're not sure whether it was the stinging editorial written about her criticisms or the halo of the honeymoon which still lingers over her, but at any rate the w. k. Kitty Kelly of the Chicago Tribune is growing more lenient with the film manufacturers, and it's been a whole week now since she has taken a real wallop at a picture.

—

Cheer up, fellers!

—

A LIFE SAVER'S MEDAL FOR US, PLEASE!

Sir:—

Unless you print this, thereby permitting me to "make your column three times in succession," and in so doing win a bet that I could pull off the stunt, I'll jump off the Clark St. Bridge.

MAC.

—

Speaking of the publication of squibs reminds us that we seem to have "gotten in wrong" with certain supposed friends in the East, all on account of that sheriff story we ran about Pete Schmid, for we have a certain note that closely resembles a black hand message, signed by Julian M. Solomon, Jr.

—

And Pete is still to be heard from.

—

Just now the easiest way out for us appears to be to force the election of Pete as a sheriff and then appeal to him for protection.

—

How about it, Pete, can we depend on you?

—

Gosh, but it was some shock for us to read the Triangle cast of last week's "Double Trouble" from the Fine Arts studio, for there in black and white it was clearly stated that one of the politicians was Tom Kennedy. We've always known our Tom was a diplomat, but we never suspected him of being a politician as well.

—

Whaddayer doing, Tom, working in "pics" in your spare time?

—

Speaking of film titles and such, we hope "Ruby" meant to cast no reflections upon the well known and always popular John Rock and his car when he entitled a recent Thanhouser release "John Rocks and the Flivver."

—

ANYBODY SEEN BILL?

The last we heard of him good-natured Bill Sweeney was about to remove his Lares and Penates from where he has long resided to a new abiding place. As over a week has elapsed since that time and no report has been received, we're growing anxious.

—

We imagine we can discern the fine Italian handiwork of Tarleton Winchester in some of those "phoney" wires received by Anita King, the Paramount Girl, during the dinner given in her honor at the Hotel Alexandria in Los Angeles upon her return from New York. For instance take a slant at this one:

Congratulations on success of drive. Started one myself but had a blow-out. Lord Kitchener.

Or this one:

Congratulations on your success. Hear you are to be featured. We are sending a wreath of poisoned ivy. League of Moton Picture Actresses.

—

Gosh, fellers, the boy's clevah.

N. G. C.

MUTUAL SPECIAL FEATURE

—and now

The Mutual Film Corporation
Announces

A New Stupendous RAILROAD FILM NOVEL

In Fifteen Chapters

THE GIRL AND THE GAME

featuring
The Fearless Film Star
HELEN HOLMES

DETAILS INSIDE !

MUTUAL SPECIAL FEATURE

THE GIRL AND THE GAME

What It Is--What It Means To Exhibitors

"THE GIRL AND THE GAME" is a tremendous feature absolutely new to the world of motion pictures. It is a film novel, gripping in exciting action, and plot interest. The "girl" is that fearless film star, Helen Holmes, the most daring bit of femininity that moving pictures have produced—the "game" is that great, baffling, and always exciting game of railroads, social intrigue, love, and high finance. Nearly 1,000 leading newspapers will publish the story, week by week.

"The Girl And The Game" is a powerful film novel in fifteen highly thrilling chapters. Each chapter is complete in itself, bound into the story by a strong connecting link of splendid romance. One two-reel chapter will be released each week, beginning Monday, December 13th.

The Story by Frank H. Spearman

Noted Author of Railroad Stories

"The Girl And The Game" will pack your theatre regularly, for, it is built on the true American, red-blooded type of stories that everybody loves. It comes from the brain and pen of Frank Hamilton Spearman, the foremost author of railroad stories of the world. Mr. Spearman is a master creator of plots. He stands absolutely unrivalled in his chosen field of literature—a field that smacks of thrills and realism—of great deeds done in the face of tremendous odds. Frank Spearman has written such successful novels as "Whispering Smith," "Robert Kimberly," "The Mountain Divide," "Held for Orders," "The Daughter of a Magnate," "Dr. Bryson," "The Nerve of Foley," and a score of other widely published works. In "The Girl And The Game," Mr. Spearman has woven wealth of personal experience and observation He lays bare the cold blood code of rail finance— the money trickery of the silk-hatted few wh fight to control the webs of steel that gird ou continent. Through every chapter of the stor runs the struggle and eventual triumph of a beau tiful young girl who fights the railroad monste It is a fight to a finish—and the young girl wins

The Author

The Fearless Film Star— HELEN HOLMES

In all the world there is bu one actress whose capabilities fit her t interpret the heroine role in this stupendou screen novel. That one is Helen Holmes—Helei Holmes, the fearless film star. She has the nerv to dare and do. She possesses the grace and th beauty, the ability to "wear the clothes," tha are so essential in the interpretation of the re markable role to which she has been assigned Further, Helen Holmes is known. She is th empress of dare-deviltry, the fearless film star— and as such has a tremendous following fron Broadway to the smallest country crossroads

The Director— J. P. McGowan

The Director

Samuel S. Hutchinson, filmdom's maste producer has selected J. P McGowan to direct "The Girl And The Game." Mc-Gowan has always directed Helen Holmes. He is known as the greatest spectacular and unique director in the motion picture field.

MUTUAL SPECIAL FEATURE

rills!
Thrills!
Thrills!

`here is a su-
lative Thrill very chapter of e Girl And The ne."

he Distributor
nal Film Corporation

The Girl And The Game" be distributed through-the United States and ada exclusively by Mu-
Film Corporation. Sam-
S. Hutchinson, the master
ducer and John R. Freu-
the master distributor, sident of Mutual Film
poration, are the men bed this motion picture mas-stroke. It is being pro-ed by Signal Film Coration, Los Angeles. A st assortment of tremenu s advertising aids are dy for exhibitors. Nearly 00 leading newspapers will blish the story week by ek.

and Mail
Applica-
re NOW!

MUTUAL SPECIAL FEATURE

THE GIRL AND THE GAME

IS NEW DIFFERENT

The First Railroad Novel Ever Offered Exhibitors

RUSH IN YOUR RESERVATION FOR THIS BIG FEATURE RIGHT NOW!

NEVER before have exhibitors been offered such a stupendous feature. "The Girl And The Game," a railroad film novel in fifteen chapters, is a production of the highest class. Helen Holmes, the fearless film star, in "The Girl And The Game," will crowd your theatre regularly—will bring the crowds back, and that's what pays in this business!

Signal Film Corporation

SAMUEL S. HUTCHINSON, President

Studios: Los Angeles, Calif.

Fill Out and Mail This Reservation Blank RIGHT NOW—No Obligation.

"The Girl And The Game" Reservation

Date_____

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION,
71 West 23rd Street,
New York City

I hereby apply for a reservation and complete booking information on the coming Mutual Special Feature, "The Girl And The Game." Please send prices and full details at once

Name of Theatre_____

Manager_____

City_____ State_____

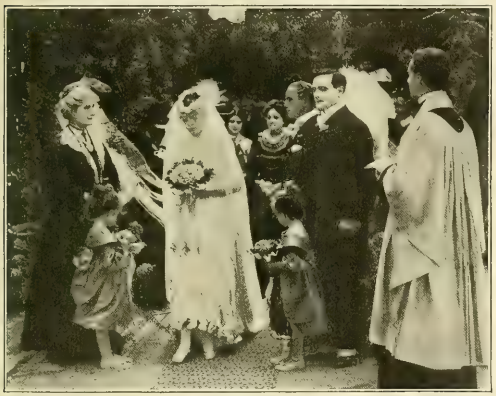
Street Address_____

Seating Capacity_____ Admission Price_____ Population of City_____

Service Now Being Used_____

Be First!

Be the first in your locality to book "The Girl And The Game." Don't let your competitor beat you to it. Act now! Not every theatre can secure this feature as we must protect our customers.



Some Current Releases Reviewed

The Current Triangle Bill

This Week's Offerings From Ince and Griffith Studios

Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

OVER at the Studebaker theater this week Manager Knill is offering his patrons a program of Triangle films that, as a whole, surpasses any week's bill up to date. It includes "Aloha Oe" from the Ince studios, "The Lily and the Rose" from the Griffith forces and two Keystone side splitters entitled "A Janitor's Wife's Temptation" and "The Village Scandal."

The Wedding of the Lily in Fine Arts "The Lily and the Rose" featuring Lilian Gish.

The laughs begin at about the second sub-title of "A Janitor's Wife's Temptation" and come thick and fast from then on. Fred Mace as the janitor of an apartment house has a role that's just to his liking, and the things he does and the way he does them beggar description. Marta Golden as the janitor's wife has troubles of her own, and Harry Gribbon, as the artist who lives on the floor above, proves himself a clever dodger of both his landlord and his bills. The final scenes in the restaurant, when Mace is bouncing about like a rubber ball in the fountain, are guaranteed to cure the worst grouch that ever attacked a man. Del Henderson is responsible for the production.

Lillian Gish and Rozsika Dolly are the featured personages in "The Lily and the Rose" and rightfully so, for it is about them that the story centers. Paul Powell is given credit for the direction of the piece and the story is most carefully developed from the opening scene up to the tragic climax which brings it to an end. Mary Randolph is a most innocent, and, as the boy who loves her says, "adorable" Lily, as interpreted by Lillian Gish, and one can scarcely blame Jack Van Norman, played in a dignified fashion by Wilfred Lucas, for falling in love with her. That the Lily ever became so sophisticated as she finally grows to be seems wonderful when you behold Miss Letty Carrington and Miss Molly Carrington, her maiden aunts, who were responsible for her bringing up. Loyola O'Connor and Cora Drew each have a chance for some wonderful character "bits" in these two roles and Elmer Clifton is equally convincing as Allison Edwards, a bookworm who lives next door to the Lily. To Rozsika Dolly, recruited from the musical comedy stage, falls the interpretation of the Rose, and she plays it masterfully. In the wonderfully tinted scenes at the seashore, where she dances on the beach for Jack, Miss Dolly was particularly good, and, while proving her ability to dance, in the theater scenes, she demonstrated also that she can get over an emotional scene by the way she acted upon discovering Jack's suicide.

Mary Randolph, raised from childhood by two maiden aunts, and loved by Allison Edwards, who lives next door, one day meets and is wooed by Jack Van Norman from the city. She later becomes his wife, only to learn that, in secret, he is paying attention to the Rose, a dancer in musical comedy. Leaving him, Mary returns to the home of her childhood, where a child is soon afterwards born to her. Jack goes to Rose, but later, in his absence from the city, the dancer entertains other men and is discovered. Jack ends his misery in suicide, and Mary, months later, finds happiness at last with Allison Edwards, who is still faithful.

Raymond Hitchcock makes his third Triangle appearance in "The Village Scandal" and is ably assisted by Roscoe Arbuckle and Flora Zabelle, in private life Mrs. Hitchcock. The scenes of this two-reel absurdity are laid in a small country town and Roscoe has the time of his life as the village fat boy, while Hitchcock as a wandering magician appears to even better advantage than in previous releases. Al St. John, who deserves more than his name on the program for his interpretation of "the boarder who understands the art of eating beans with a knife," and demonstrates it at every meal, just about rocked the house on its foundations.

Willard Mack and Enid Markey have the leading roles in "Aloha Oe," supported by such favorites as Margaret Thompson, Frank Borzage, J. Frank Burke and J. Barney Sherry. Mr. Mack as David Harmon, a brilliant attorney, gives one of the most magnetic performances that the screen has witnessed of late. In the trial scenes, particularly during his address to the jury, he falls little short of being wonderful. Producer Thomas Ince proves his mettle in the scenes depicting a storm at sea and the result as shown on the screen was so good as to bring hearty applause from all portions of the house. The tropical scenes illustrating life on a South Sea isle and the eruption of the volcano were well handled and convincing, while the accompanying music, specially arranged and adapted by J. E. Nurnberger, added much to the enjoyment of the picture. As the story runs, after winning a big criminal case, David Harmon, a brilliant lawyer, is shipped aboard a sailing vessel to cure him of a love for liquor, and later is wrecked on the shore of a tropical isle. He rescues Kalaniweo, the chief's daughter, when she is offered up as a human sacrifice to stop the eruption of an active volcano, and later, after winning the girl's love, returns to America to marry the girl of his choice. There he discovers her the bride of his friend and finally is led to return to Kalaniweo, whom he knows is faithful.

Willard Mack.

"The Raven"

Essanay Six Reel Masterpiece Released Nov. 8

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

THE Essanay Company will present on November 8 "The Raven," a remarkably superb production adapted from George C. Hazelton's romance of Edgar Allan Poe, whose literature is in every home. This highly dramatic offering is powerful in conception and will prove a sensational success. Recognition and fame came to Poe after his untimely death, but the screen version of "The Raven," one of his most famous poems, will bring to the Essanay Company laurels from the world over. It has created a production which will immediately gain world-wide reputation and stand on the supremest heights of motion picture attainments.

Henry B. Walthall, the famous screen star, gives a most convincing presentation of Edgar Allan Poe. There is no one who could give a better portrayal of this character than Walthall. He is "right at home" when in exceedingly emotional roles and he has a large field in which to portray his wonderful dramatic ability in this production.

Henry Walthall and Edgar Allan Poe will be to those who see this photodrama synonymous. Walthall is Poe reincarnated. Warda Howard, who has already proven her ability to portray love, happiness, sorrow, pathos and despair, was chosen to portray the roles of Virginia Clemm, Poe's wife; Helen Whitman, the girl who resembles Virginia, and the "Lost Lenore." She does some of the best work of her career in these roles. Harry Dunkinson is cast as Tony, Poe's chum, and his characterization of this part is exceedingly good. The others who complete the cast are Ernest Maupain as John Allan, Poe's step-father; Eleanor Thompson as Mrs. Allan; Marion Skinner as Mrs. Clemm; Grant Foreman as George Graham, publisher; Hugh E. Thompson as David Poe, Jr.; Peggy Meredith as Mrs. Poe; and Frank Hamilton as David Poe, Sr.

Edgar Allan Poe when but a young lad is adopted by the Allan family. In later years he goes to college, where he incurs many debts and is finally sent home in disgrace. He is in love with Virginia and they are about to be married when Poe's foster father denounces him for his conduct at school and orders him from the house and the girl leaves with him.

Later they are married and Poe tries to make a living by writing, but he cannot succeed. His wife becomes ill and finally dies, because her husband cannot furnish her even with the bare necessities of life. He is plunged into great grief and despair and tries to drown his sorrow in the cup. He broods over his loss and through his distorted imagination

Poe comes to call on his sweetheart.

he sees the ominous raven enter his room to croak gloomy forebodings and also the spirit of his wife visits him. Torn by terrible doubts as to whether the raven's prophecies that he shall see his beloved "nevermore," or whether the spirit's promise that he meet her in the elysian fields shall be fulfilled, Poe finally sinks unconscious to the floor and is stricken by death and his spirit is wafted to heights supernal, where he is reunited with his lost "Lenore."

Photographically this production is a gem and the illusions, richness and artistry of the settings are without parallel. Poe's cottage in Fordham, near New York, was used in this production and adds much to the realism of it.

"Inspiration"

Thanhouser Mutual Master-Picture Released Nov. 18
Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

EXHIBITORS of Chicago and vicinity on Tuesday of this week were given an advance showing of Thanhouser's "Inspiration," the five-reel Mutual Master-Picture to be released on Thursday, November 18, in which Audrey Munson, the famous artist's model, is featured.

This is the picture which features a nude woman in many of its scenes and which many exhibitors, from reading the advance publicity matter, have doubtless grown to consider a most sensational offering. The cold, hard truth of the matter is there is nothing sensational, disgraceful or "horrible" about the picture at all. It is a beautiful production, photographed in splendid fashion, and Audrey Munson, who is a real artist's model and not a make-believe one, does "take 'em all off" before the picture is over, but her nude figure, instead of inspiring thoughts of a suggestive or immoral nature, rather has just the opposite effect, and leads the observer to ponder upon the perfection of God's handiwork.

Audrey Munson and Thomas Curran in Thanhouser's "Inspiration."

In many respects this picture might be dubbed an "educational," for one entire reel of its length is taken up with a detailed illustration of the method by which casts are obtained from living models for the purpose of molding statuary, and a most interesting process it is, too. One sees the model's figure bathed in oil, then spread with a mixture of plaster of paris and water, and finally completely covered with a thicker plaster which is allowed to harden, and some sixty-five minutes after the operation began the plaster is cut away and the sculptor has the mold from which the statue itself can be made.

Miss Munson goes through this entire process before the eye of the camera, but instead of her nude figure being something to be eyed askance and talked about in whispers, you find that for all the effect it will have upon the average audience she might as well be a bit of marble. Being a real artist's model, accustomed to pose daily in the nude before an artist and his pupils, she is as innocent or rather unsexual as it is possible for anyone to be. The posing before the Thanhouser cameras was just a job with her and so considered by all who participated in the picture.

After the story has shown the plight of the artist who finds himself unable to complete a group of statuary for a fountain he is designing, because he has been unable to secure a suitable model, we learn that his friends are seeking an ideal model—a girl who may perhaps correspond to the girl of his dreams. At last she is found in the person of Miss Munson and the sittings begin. As time passes and the fountain group nears completion, Audrey falls in love with her artist employer, but the busy sculptor is only in love with the creation of his chisel.

After Audrey has posed for such statues as "Evangeline," which was the work of Daniel Chester French, and stands before the home of the poet in Cambridge; the fireman's monument in New York City; the "Ascending Night" of Adolph Weinman, and "The Fountain of Eldorado" by Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, both at the Panama Exposition, and the Maine Monument in Columbus Circle, New York City, she goes away in despair because her artist lover seems to be more interested in a society queen than her. After her disappearance the artist finds that since she has been his inspiration and the means of his fountain winning the grand prize, he is more enraptured by her than he had thought possible. In time he finds himself aware that he is in love with her, and at last he finds her hungry, desolate and lonesome on the steps of one of the statues for which she posed, and there he tells her of his love and she consents to become his inspiration for life.

"The New Adam and Eve"

Rialto's Three Reel Feature of Nov. 17 Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE Rialto Star Feature, "The New Adam and Eve," in three parts and for release November 17 on the regular General Film Program, which features Grace Valentine, who has created leading roles in numerous stage productions, deals with a story strictly dramatic in intent and treatment. It is the story of two young people who put the luxuries of wealth above the happiness which the fulfillment of their love will bring them.

A scene from "The New Adam and Eve."

"The New Adam and Eve" is a modern adaptation of the story by Nathaniel Hawthorne. Miss Valentine is beautiful of face and form, while her acting in a part calling for highly dramatic expression is pleasing. As the new Eve she is best, for she is permitted to portray emotions more appealing than that of humility at the hands of her foster-father's sister.

The opening scenes depict the affection Colonel Sheldon has for his adopted daughter Belle. Sheldon dies suddenly and as there is no will his estate is claimed and won on legal grounds by Mrs. Preston, the colonel's sister. The colonel's attorney and friends know it was his desire to have Belle inherit his fortune, but such matters are adjusted by laws. Mrs. Preston immediately takes possession of her brother's home, and gives Belle to understand that she is under obligations while she remains there.

The socially ambitious Mrs. Preston also objects to the proposed marriage of her son and Belle. Sheldon was an admirer of Montague's and had encouraged this match. Both Montague and the girl fear that their union, though their love is sincere and deep, will be unsuccessful without wealth, so they continue to live with Mrs. Preston in what comfort her wealth offers. Mrs. Preston falls ill. Ashley Callum, a social waster, urges the girl to take what he insists is hers—securities which Mrs. Preston keeps near her—and elope with him.

Belle decides to do this and is only prevented when she has a dream in which she as the new Eve and Montague as the new Adam learn the true value of wealth. They visit the homes of the wealthy hospitals, prisons and other public institutions and their eyes are opened to the shallowness of life as they have lived it. Upon awakening she dismisses her plan and agrees to marry Montague. Just then the nurse startles them with word that Mrs. Preston has died, so the colonel's wealth reverts to Belle.

In the "New Adam and Eve" portion of the story, which is artistically produced, the double exposure is used entirely, and to splendid effect. The fact that one is not familiar with the mechanical process by which this effect is obtained may explain the wonderment caused by such steady and perfectly "timed" examples as those of "The New Adam and Eve."

Richard Garrick, who is seen as Colonel Sheldon, directed the picture. Leonard Craske plays opposite Miss Valentine as Montague Preston, the young man who is financially dependent upon his mother, and Mathilda Baring deserves high praise for her performance as Mrs. Preston. Frank Goldsmith, Elaine Ivans, William W. Cahill, Charles W. Travis, Lucille Taft and James Levering are included in the cast, which makes the most of the material provided.

"Sweet Alyssum"

Selig V. L. S. E. Drama, to be Released on Nov. 15 Reviewed by John C. Garrett

MANY well known stories have been filmed and have proven great successes. The latest story to be screened by the Selig Polyscope Company is a human heart interest tale of love and happiness with a trace of unhappiness and dissatisfaction. "Sweet Alyssum," the story, is from the pen of Charles Major and makes a very pretty dramatic picture.

A splendid cast has been selected for this photodrama. Tyrone Power, the well known actor, does convincing work as Roanoke Brooks. He is supported by Kathlyn Williams, who is happily cast as Daisy Brooks, his wife, whose love for pretty clothes leads her to forsake her child and husband. Edith Johnson as their daughter Elizabeth, better known as "Sweet Alyssum"; Wheeler Oakman as Wynne Garlan, son of Robert Garlan, played by Frank Clark, who is the man responsible for Daisy Brooks leaving her home, and little Gene Frazer, who is a most winsome "Little Alyssum," complete the cast.

This five-reel production deals with the story of Daisy Brooks, wife of Roanoke Brooks, night watchman in the factory of Robert Garlan, who doesn't love her husband or her beautiful little daughter Elizabeth, whom they call "Little Alyssum." She enters the primrose path with Garlan in order to satisfy her love for finery, and he also neglects his infant son Wynne for worldly pleasures.

In time Daisy's double life is discovered by her husband and he traces her to an apartment where she shoots and kills herself, and Garlan, the guilty man, jumps through a window and falls to his death. Roanoke Brooks with his savings takes his baby daughter, "Sweet Alyssum," and buys a little farm and there the girl reaches womanhood and is happy with her father.

William Garlan, Robert Garlan's son, has married a woman of the world, and she wishing him out of the way, enters into an affair with Thurlow, cashier of the bank where Wynne is employed. He steals from the bank and Wynne is suspected of the crime and in terror of arrest escapes and arrives in the country near Roanoke Brooks' farm. Here he meets Elizabeth Brooks and is immediately attracted to her, but on account of his wife in the city he doesn't dare tell her of his love. He hears from a friend in the city that his wife has obtained a divorce and then it is that he succumbs to the girl's beauty and they elope and are married.

Two years pass and Sweet Alyssum has become the mother of a beautiful child and all is happiness in Roanoke Brooks' home. Thurlow, the crooked bank clerk, arrives in the small town and recognizes Garlan, who is known there as Wyatt. He informs the sheriff that Garlan is a crook and has deserted his wife in the city. The sheriff goes to Roanoke Brooks and tells him of this. Garlan on his way home confronts Thurlow and the sheriff and they tell him he is under arrest and as he enters the gate of his home he is seen by Roanoke Brooks, who seizes a rifle and as he is about to fire on Wynne, Sweet Alyssum places her child between her father's rifle and her husband. Then it is that the girl's father says that if she loves him that well he will do all in his power to clear the boy's name.

"Sweet Alyssum" meets the new school teacher.

The sheriff has telegraphed to the city of Garlan's whereabouts and receives the following message: "Garlan obtained divorce two years ago. No charge against him for bank robbery. Hold Thurlow. He is your man." With his name cleared Garlan is once more happy with his wife and their little son.

"In Love's Own Way"

A Lubin Three Reel Production, Released Nov. 17 Reviewed by John C. Garrett

THE story of the Lubin three-reel production, "In Love's Own Way," to be released on November 17, while in the main resembling many other motion picture stories, has one commendable feature and that is that the final ending it not only different from the general run of stories on this order, but is unexpected. The plot deals with the love of a girl in a small town for a man of rural parentage, who becomes the governor of a state and forgets the girl. Later he doesn't return to marry the girl, but she falls in love with his secretary and happiness is promised for them.

The photography is up to the general Lubin standard, and John E. Ince, who directed the photodrama, also takes the leading part, that of John Clark, and a strong cast has been chosen to support him. Mary Charleson plays the part of Mary, the farmer's daughter, and Josephine Longworth as Jane Guyton; Clarence Jay Elmer as Bob Denton; Francis Joyner as Henry Worden; James Daly as the farmer; and William H. Turner as Jane Guyton's father complete the cast.

John Clark, state senator of a rural district, is in love with Mary, a farmer's daughter. Clark enjoys a rapid rise in his political aspirations and is elected governor of the state. He becomes enamored of Jane Guyton, daughter of his campaign manager. Jane and Clark are married and Mary is forgotten. Jane becomes deeply in debt through card playing and accepts a loan from Worden, a state senator, who, anxious for the passing of his irrigation bill, exacts in making the loan a promise from Jane that she will influence the governor's acceptance of the bill. Jane attempts to sway the governor, who has misgivings as to her interest. He investigates and finds Worden responsible.

Mary learning of the bill and appreciating that its passing means the ruination of her father's farm lands, goes to the governor to plead for his veto. Jane fearing serious results from her bargain with Worden, goes to his apartments to return the borrowed money. There she meets Mary, who at the governor's suggestion has come to plead with Worden for amendments in the bill. Clark is informed by his enemies that his wife is at Worden's apartment, whither he goes to verify his suspicion. Mary and Jane both hide in an adjoining room, and when Worden is accused by the governor, Mary comes from hiding to shield Jane, who escapes from the rear of the house. She explains that the senator has agreed to the proposed amendment and leads Clark to his home, where Jane is found, resolved that her cards have passed from her life forever. Happiness comes again in the senator's family and Mary is wooed and won by Bob, the governor's secretary.

A tense moment in "Love's Own Way."

"The Masqueraders"

Famous Players Five Reel Drama Released Nov. 1. Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE picturization of Henry Arthur Jones' celebrated drama by the Famous Players Company presents Hazel Dawn in an attractive role. She is seen as Dulcie Larondie, a girl of gay mien and good family connections, who is forced by poverty to become a bar maid, which is a part she finds no difficulty in portraying to telling effect. It is not in the dramatic moments, for the part gives her few, that Miss Dawn makes her appeal. It is in her consistently natural bearing throughout. She makes no attempt to add to the dramatic force of the situations, but is satisfied to be unaffected and graceful. The story is strong enough of itself and requires no heroic work on the part of the cast.

The conflict of hearts.

Director James Kirkwoood has seen fit to treat the story in an almost leisurely manner, and in spots perhaps too leisurely to realize its fullest possibilities. There are scenes which could be shortened and made more effective thereby. At the Stagg Inn there is the atmosphere of Merrie England, but hardly sufficient action to justify the length of time spent there. By this it is not meant to convey the impression that the play is lacking in action and does not hold the interest, for such is not the case. The gambling scene, where Sir Brice and David play and Dulcie is the stake, is well presented, it being played to the limit of its suspenseful opportunity.

The story concerns Dulcie Larondie, who marries the wealthy Sir Brice Skene, in preference to David Remon, a conscientious, sincere but poor astronomer. Three years elapse in which Dulcie has had a rude awakening, for her husband is far from ideal. He drinks and spends most of his time and income at the card table. She learns that David is to leave for Africa on a dangerous expedition and writes him a note asking him to call on her. At the house events lead up to the card game in which Sir Brice stakes his wife and little daughter against Remon's bank account and loses. Shortly after this, Sir Brice is murdered by a man whose sister he has outraged and Dulcie is left free to marry David.

Elliott Dexter gives a good performance as David Remon, Dulcie's ardent suitor. Mr. Dexter judiciously plays his part in a manner in keeping with Hazel Dawn's. Frank Losee is a good type for his part as Sir Brice Skene and acts it well. Russell Bassett, Nina Lindsey, Charles Bryant, Ida Darling, Evelyn Farris and Norman Tharp make up a highly commendable supporting cast. The settings, especially that of the Stagg Inn, are appropriate and pleasing. The photography is good, but not up to the usual Famous Players standard of excellence.

"The Dreadful Pit"

The Eleventh Episode of Pathe's "Neal of the Navy"

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE absence of any spectacular scene of the kind calculated to thrill causes no disappointment in the eleventh episode of the William Hamilton Osborne serial, "Neal of the Navy," for the story, that is, this chapter of the story, which contains interesting development in excess of two of some former chapters, proves self-sufficient. It can be confidently said that this chapter, as far as the play itself is concerned, is the most interesting of any since the first, and perhaps it is even more interesting than the first episode. It is well known that the intervening chapters have been marked by something unusual in exciting scenes, but it is possible for one to become "fed up" on thrilling scenes that are strictly episodic, even in continued photoplays.

To those who have followed this Pathe-Balboa installment offering, "The Dreadful Pit," which is the title of the eleventh chapter, will be of great interest, for there are developments which may surprise some, but which were looked for just the same. Also, those who have not seen any of the previous chapters can become quite interested and thoroughly enjoy "The Dreadful Pit," as it amount to almost a complete story. There is a reason, and the great majority are plausible reasons, for all the action which takes place.

A scene from "The Dreadful Pit."

The horrible end to which Ponto comes, where Hernandez is robbed of a valuable assistant, and Annette's recovery of the map, or rather the original grant which gives the exact location of Lost Island, are the important developments of this release. Another incident of note is that the Abbot of Santa Maria, who was a friend of the girl's father, notices something vaguely familiar about the Brute Man. The latter, or so it would seem from the ending, has deserted Hernandez, which would make Annette's determination to gain her rightful inheritance more easy of accomplishment in the future.

As many times as the appropriate settings and locations have been mentioned in previous reviews, it is only fair to Director Harry Harvey to mention the quality of those important factors in "The Dreadful Pit." It is probable that the quickened pace of the story improves all departments of the production, but regardless of the conditions, the direction, acting and photography in "The Dreadful Pit" seem to be better than they have been right along.

"Midnight Prowlers" and a "Pair of Birds"

Two Vim Comedies, Released on General Program

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

SINGLE-REEL "slap-stick" comedies are looked upon with favor by screen patrons and, naturally enough, by exhibitors, but the great difficulty has been to obtain subjects of this type that are free from coarseness and vulgarity. The producers of "Vim" comedies, the new brand released on the General Film Program, have expressed their intention to give exhibitors slapstick comedies worthy of the classification "comedy" which will be high class and absolutely free from the objectionable coarseness which so often makes up the substance of slap-stick.

"Midnight Prowlers" marks the first release under the new brand. The second release will be "A Pair of Birds." Both live up to the promises of the producers and there is every reason to believe that they will continue to do so. These pictures, the first two at any rate, can be recommended to the exhibitor catering to any one of the various so-called classes of patrons. There is nothing in either to give offense to the most correct and they have laughable incidents.

Of late we have heard much from the actors and producers of comedies. In analyzing, or in attempting to analyze them, all have insisted that a plot is necessary to success, as there must be a cause or there will be no effect. "Midnight Prowlers" and "A Pair of Birds" contain plots, or the necessary amount. Of course they hardly amount to a story, but the incidents are connected, and if, for instances, "Pokes" and "Jabs" take to their heels (they do it frequently) the spectator, as well as the characters, knows why. This is something that cannot be said of every comic character's actions.

The comedians featured in "Vim" comedies are well known on the stage and screen. They are Walter Stull and Bobbie Burns, who have appeared in several pictures in their roles of Pokes and Jabs. In "Midnight Prowlers" and "A Pair of Birds" they fall, run and use mallets on each other's heads in much the same way as they have in their former pictures.

For that matter, all strenuous comedians look alike when they do these things. Unfortunately, there appears to be only one way. But they are given every opportunity to make the most of their talents, being provided with comic situations and good support. Prominent in the support of Stull and Burns is Ethel Burton, who has a deal of vivacity and good looks.

"Midnight Prowlers" deals with the complications arising out of the rumor that burglars are making a systematic round of the neighborhood. A playful kitten causes the one big disturbance which leads Mr. Jabs to hire a woman detective, and Mrs. Jabs to retain the services of Mr. Pokes, scientific investigator. Both are in ignorance of the other's act and one case of mistaken identity follows another in rapid succession. The kitten should be mentioned, for she, or is it he, performs splendidly.

In "A Pair of Birds" Pokes and Jabs are in prison, and like everybody else there, they are keen to get out. In the first attempt they hide in a bag being carted away. The cart is pulled to the top of a hill and they roll off. When they venture to look and learn their whereabouts they find themselves within the hated walls; having rolled all the way back to their starting point. The second attempt is more successful, for both Pokes and Jabs have a few hours' recreation at an amusement park before the keepers find them. The idea of two men in one fat man's suit of clothes is good, and Stull and Burns use it to advantage.

"The Cowardly Way"

Equitable's Five Reel Production, Released Nov. 15

Reviewed by George W. Graves

NOVEMBER 15 is the date set for the release of "The Cowardly Way," a five-reel picture produced by the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation under the direction of John Ince. The story is from the pen of Marc Edmond Jones, and develops toward the end a highly imaginative trend, involving a photographic technique as elaborate as it is clever. One scene alone calls for five exposures.

Florence Reed does some emotional acting with much feeling and skill in the part of Eunice Fielding, who has to work out of an inveterate selfishness, even after death. Eunice's demise does not by any means conclude the story; it goes tranquilly on, her spirit "hovering near" and reaching her insane husband through clairvoyance. Bennett Southard is strong in the part of Jack Harcourt and puts plenty of realism into his portrayal of the deportment of an insane man. Three other contributors to the merit of the picture are Isabel MacGregor, Ferdinand Gidmarsch and Maud Hill.

Oblivious to her faults, Jack Harcourt marries Eunice Fielding, the pampered daughter of wealthy parents. Funds become low, and Jack, making his first sacrifice, calls his sister Marjorie back from college. She at once lends a hand in the household cares. Jack becomes so tied up in business that he is compelled to neglect his wife, and she believes Marjorie the cause. Eunice runs heavily into debt through society gambling. About to become a mother, she learns that Jack has become bankrupt through delayed negotiations in the west and resorts to the "cowardly way"—suicide.

After death Eunice learns that she has only destroyed her body, and must remain in her life as usual until she works out her salvation. Her tests continue and she finally begins to think of others. Jack has become insane, and this state renders him clairvoyant, able to communicate with Eunice's spirit. Death (personified) has told the wife that Jack's mind will be restored whenever she wishes, but that then intercourse with him will be cut off, and she will be left alone.

Eunice breaks down after trying to kill Marjorie.

Marjorie has meanwhile married Bob, her lover, and they have become parents. As Eunice and her husband have been informed that the spirit of Marjorie's child should have been born to them, Jack breaks loose and rushes to the nursery. He is about to dash Marjorie's baby to the floor when at last Eunice conquers her selfishness, pleads with Death to restore Jack's mind, and renounces her cherished companionship with her husband. Jack becomes sane instantly and the baby is saved. Eunice is then told she has secured her salvation, and Death leads her away.

"The Alternative"

A Clipper Three Reel Drama Released November 20 Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

A GAME of cards for the possession of a woman forms the climatical scene in "The Alternative," a Clipper three-reel drama scheduled for release on the Mutual program on Saturday, November 20.

The production was produced under the direction of Arthur Maude, who himself plays one of the leading roles, and features in addition, Constance Crawley, who is known to both patrons of the legitimate theater and the motion picture houses throughout the country.

The card game with the woman as stakes.

While it is far from pleasant to say so, the truth is, the leading lady appears to a decided disadvantage in this production, for she is cast for a role that evidently belongs to a younger and fairer woman, and the camera, which faithfully records what it sees, makes her task even harder.

Though the cast of characters furnished by the manufacturer fails to name the player who enacts the role of Woodburn, it must be said in all fairness that he most capably enacts the part assigned him, and with many will probably prove more of a favorite than either of the featured stars. The usual splendid American photography records the lavish stage settings in all their grandeur.

That Pendleton and Woodburn are desperately in love with May Van Buren, a wealthy society man, is revealed in the early scenes, but Woodburn, while awaiting his charmer, accidentally discovers one of May's bills which convinces him that her extravagances are beyond his pocketbook. He thereupon withdraws from the field leaving Pendleton, his rival, to woo the lady.

Ere the engagement is announced, Woodburn inherits a fortune and hastens to again call upon May with the intention of renewing his attentions. He finds Pendleton and May in the garden and is told by Pendleton that May has just consented to be the latter's wife.

Bitter with disappointment, Woodburn plans to ruin Pendleton on the stock market, and taking advantage of the latter's absence on his honeymoon, Woodburn drives down the stocks in which his rival is interested. May rather resents the flood of telegrams that interrupt their honeymoon, all of them demanding that her husband hasten back to New York and uphold the market price of his stocks, and succeeds finally in persuading him to neglect his business.

On the verge of ruin, several days following his return to the city, Pendleton appeals to Woodburn for a loan of $50,000 and the latter proposes that the two shall deal a hand of poker. If Pendleton wins he is to be given the loan, but if he loses Woodburn is to have May and Pendleton is to disappear. A few tense moments pass and Pendleton loses. Heartbroken, he returns home, and after writing a confession procures a revolver from his desk.

Woodburn, meanwhile, in his own home boasts to his mother of his success over Pendleton. The mother surprises him by replying that Pendleton's father once saved them from ruin, and that out of gratitude he ought to help the son out of his difficulties. Touched by his mother's plea, Woodburn writes Pendleton a note declaring that though he has won he shall not claim his victory, and with the note he encloses a check for $50,000.

Woodburn's note arrives in time to prevent a tragic scene between husband and wife, and Mrs. Pendleton, who now realizes that her extravagance has been, partially at least, responsible for her husband's losses, suggests that they begin life anew, with happiness their goal rather than wealth.

"The Diamond from the Sky"

Final Chapter of American Serial Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

IN "The American Earl," next week's two-reel release of the North American film novel, "The Diamond from the Sky," comes to a close, thus ending the thirtieth and final chapter of what is generally conceded to be one of the most interesting motion picture serials ever offered the public.

In saying this ends the story the reviewer is technically wrong, for the closing episode asks for the suggestion of a ten-part sequel to the story, and upon the conclusion of the contest by which this sequel will be secured, ten more chapters will be screened.

It now remains for the scenario writers of the country to suggest what becomes of Blair Stanley and Vivian, what happens to the child, and who finally possesses "The Diamond from the Sky," the facts that are expected to form the basis for the sequel to the present serial.

Photographically and from the standpoint of the sensational, chapter thirty of "The Diamond from the Sky" is fully as sensational as was chapter one, for the last chapter contains a most realistic automobile collision, together with the revealment of the document which proves Arthur Stanley's right to his name and title, and results in the diamond heirloom being bestowed upon Arthur's little son, who thereby becomes the American earl and inherits the Stanley fortune.

As the picture begins we see that DeVaux, who at the conclusion of the last chapter struck down Blair Stanley with a battle mace, dropped the diamond, which he had taken from Blair's neck, and that the jewel fell into the upturned hat of Marmaduke Smyth, the lawyer. Upon discovering the relic, Marmaduke carefully conceals the gem in his coat pocket and goes in to interview Blair. After a stormy session, in which Marmaduke clearly makes it known that he doubts Blair's right to the Stanley fortune, the lawyer is dismissed.

In picking up his belongings, Marmaduke accidentally discharges a rifle and the bullet, striking the deer head which Marmaduke had lugged all over America, releases a spring that permits the deer head to fall forward from the wooden shield on which it had been supported, and reveals on old and tattered bit of paper within, which falls to the floor.

Arthur and Esther are happy at last.

Examining this document, Marmaduke discovers with surprise that it is dated 1680 and is nothing less than the marriage certificate, which proves that the first Sir Arthur Stanley really married the gypsy maid who, later, bore him a son after leaving him and assuming her former name of Harding.

Blair, upon learning of this document, insists on Marmaduke giving it to him, but at this moment Scotland Yard detectives arrive with extradition papers, demanding the return of Blair to Virginia for the murder of Dr. Lee.

Blair and Vivian have a tearful scene following his arrest, and then Blair, without handcuffs, is escorted to a taxicab to be taken to police headquarters.

At a street intersection DeVaux, in a heavy automobile, collides with the police automobile, upsetting the big car and Blair crawls out of the wreckage, leaps into DeVaux's car and succeeds in escaping. Weeks later Marmaduke arrives in Virginia for the purpose of consulting the church records and finding if they agree with the marriage certificate he has found.

Being satisfied that the document is genuine, Marmaduke hastens to find Arthur, who, with Esther, is living in a gypsy camp. A tiny son and heir has been born to them and a great celebration follows when Marmaduke makes known his discovery and tells them that Arthur's child is legally entitled to the Stanley fortune, the estate of Stanley Hall in England, and the title of earl.

As the story ends, Quabba is made king of the gypsy camp, since Arthur and Esther renounce all further allegiance to the wandering tribe and go to take up their home in Richmond.

The film subtitles, hinting at the main points to be covered in the contest for a sequel to this story, bring the reel to a close.

"A Bit of Lace"

Essanay Three Reel Drama to be Released Nov. 16

Reviewed by John C. Garrett

EVERY detail in "A Bit of Lace," the three-reel Essanay production to be released on November 16, has been arranged with consummate skill. H. Tipton Steck is the author of the story, which is dramatic and interesting and a most fitting vehicle for the stars who have been chosen to portray the leads. The story contains lots of action and many tense moments. Its theme is written around a clerk who is married and living a "hand-to-mouth" existence. His meeting with an old college chum, who has acquired wealth, makes a vast change in his life and results in his utter downfall and in his wife leaving him.

Edna Mayo does some splendid work as Ruth Fenwick, wife of Douglas Fenwick, which tensely emotional role is portrayed by Sydney Ainsworth. Darwin Karr is splendid as Bruce Carton, Fenwick's college chum, who has acquired wealth. The photography throughout the production is exceptionally good.

Bruce Carton, having made his fortune, returns from the West to Chicago and establishes himself in a sumptuously furnished apartment. Douglas Fenwick is a struggling clerk in the city and he doesn't take his lot happily. By chance he happens to meet Carton, who is an old college chum, and invites him to dine with he and his wife that evening. In Fenwick's simple four-room apartment he, his wife and Carton have an enjoyable time talking over old college days and Carton is charmed with Mrs. Fenwick.

Fenwick remarks that he is but a struggling clerk getting $20 a week, while the boss gets $100 a week and does not deserve it any more than he does. Carton offers him a position at $35 a week as his private secretary and Fenwick begins working next morning.

There is a change in the existence of the Fenwicks; they now have an elaborately furnished apartment, keep a maid and a car. Mrs. Fenwick invites Carton for dinner one evening and he is surprised to see how well Fenwick manages to live on but $35 a week. The next morning he questions Fenwick and he says that he has invested in stocks and thus made a fortune.

By chance Carton receives a letter which enlightens him as to how Fenwick is getting all his money; he has been misappropriating funds which Carton has been giving to charity. He shows Fenwick the letter and discharges him. Fenwick arrives home and tells his wife that Carton's suspicions are unfounded, but fearing prosecution persuades his wife to go to Carton's apartment to steal the letter.

Against her will Mrs. Fenwick goes to Carton's apartment and while the butler is phoning manages to get into Carton's library and then gets the letter. Just as she is leaving Carton returns from his club and Ruth Fenwick slips into his bedroom and shuts the door. Carton comes into the room and is about to seat himself when he notices a bit of lace caught in the door of his bedroom. He walks to the door and opens it and there confronts Mrs. Fenwick. Knowing that she has come for the letter and has it he asks her for it and then tries to prove to her that her husband is guilty of theft.

However, she does not believe him and to prove his story he sends for Fenwick to come to his apartment. Fenwick arrives and not seeing his wife and thinking she has gotten the letter says, "I knew she would get the letter, as you always rather liked her." Carton attacks the man and just then Ruth steps in between them and says she now knows the truth. She returns home with her husband, dons her street apparel and leaves him in abject misery, although he pleads with her to return.

The wife leaves her husband.

"The Substitute Minister"

An American Two Reel Feature of Nov. 15 Reviewed by Neil S. Caward

ALFRED VOSBURGH, a newcomer to the American studio, makes his debut as the leading man in a two-reel "Flying A" drama entitled "The Substitute Minister," scheduled for release on Monday, November 15, and, if his work may be fairly judged by his appearance in this picture, is going to become a great favorite with picture play patrons.

Mr. Vosburgh, who is good looking, well built, and has an expressive face, plays the role of a hero, though in this his first production, he is handicapped by having to appear as a villain during the early part of the picture and so handicapped by having to win one's sympathy under adverse conditions, proves his mettle as an actor. Vivian Rich is his leading woman and most capably enacts the role of Ethel Drysdale.

Reaves Eason directs the production and has most carefully chosen the backgrounds used in the telling of the story. They are in all cases convincing and the scene in the church where Drummond discloses his false position before his parishioners is most splendidly worked up to a climax.

As the story begins John Drummond, who is found in company with a band of thieves, narrowly escapes capture in a police raid and, fleeing, conceals himself in Bishop Gould's house. Finding a clergyman's coat and hat on the hall-tree, he boldly dons these and prepares to escape, but on leaving the house comes face to face with a detective who is on his trail.

At the same moment a messenger boy, thinking him Bishop Gould, delivers a telegram from Rev. Drysdale, pastor of the Cedarville church, asking for a substitute preacher, and Drummond boldly accepts the message and replies that a substitute will be sent. He then uses the telegram as a proof of his identification as Bishop Gould, and the detective departs.

Ethel surprises the minister.

Drummond boards the train for Cedarville and aboard meets Ethel Drysdale, who informs him that she is to be his housekeeper when in Cedarville, when she learns that he is going to substitute in her father's church. When Drummond realizes there is no way to escape, he actually takes up his duties as the new pastor, though time and again he is attempted to throw off his mask and escape. Edith's growing affection for him results in his staying, though he knows each hour he lingers it will increase the chances of his ultimate capture.

Meanwhile Rev. Drysdale, upon leaving the hospital, calls on Bishop Gould to thank him for sending a substitute pastor, and learns with surprise that the Bishop knows nothing of his request. The detective who is still seeking Drummond throws light on the mystery by stating that Drummond may be impersonating the substitute minister and all three depart for Cedarville.

It is Sunday morning as they reach the scene of their quest, and at the request of Bishop Gould the detective and Drysdale go to the church intent on arresting the impostor when services are over. Drummond, in the pulpit, sees them enter and knows his arrest is sure to follow. Rising in his place he explains to his congregation that a sinner is in their midst, and then relates the story of his life, explaining his inability to secure a job and how he was finally tempted to join a band of thieves in its operations, and while still debating whether it was right or not to take this wrong step the den of the thieves was raided by the police and he made his escape by means of window and later found refuge in Bishop Gould's house.

As the story ends Bishop Gould finds that Drummond is his long lost son and publicly forgives him for the error he has committed, while the detective slips quietly out of the door and returns to the city.

"Nedra"

Pathe's Five Reel Production, Released November 8 Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON'S highly imaginative adventure story, "Nedra," loses none of its interest and really makes important gains in the Edward Jose five-part production released November 12 on the Pathe Gold Rooster program. Mr. Jose has, above all things, given the story an atmospheric and attractive setting, but he has not lost sight of the story itself in his availing attempt to secure powerful and strikingly beautiful scenic effects. With all its marks of the producer's craft, "Nedra" amounts to more than a mere succession of skilfully handled episodes. The direction in every instance is all of excellent. Credit for the well-devised scenario must be given George B. Seitz.

The story, like the other works of McCutcheon, has been widely read. Certainly it is eminently suited to the screen, containing opportunities for the execution of those dramatic effects which belong to the photoplay alone. Not one scene bears any similarity to the stage drama, and the vast difference between the spoken and silent drama is most noticeable. This is a photoplay that precludes any comparison with stage offerings, illustrating as it does the wide gap which separates these two entirely different forms of amusement—amusement is the admitted prime factor of both.

The acting and photography are in keeping with the high quality of the other departments of the production. George Probert, who established himself as a stage star long since and who won prominence as Peter in "The Spender," is cast in the heroic role. In Hugh Ridgway, the young society chap, who is strictly American in his ability to meet unusual situations as they arise, Mr. Probert has a part better suited to him than that of "The Spender" and no one seems to realize it more than he. In the humorous moments he is best, and "Nedra" contains much "polite" comedy.

Fania Marinoff is more than a good type for her part as Lady Tenny, she is a good actress for the role. Miss Marinoff has an expressive face and her gestures are quite as expressive. Margaret Greene is pretty and graceful as the rather inconsistent and somewhat inconstant Grace Vernon. Crawford Kent is seen as Henry Veath, Hugh's college chum. The photography stands high above that which is deservedly considered good, and therefore warrants special mention.

The story deals chiefly with the romance and affairs of Hugh Ridgway, who, like his fiancee, Grace Vernon, is thoroughly tired of society functions. They decide to avoid boresome dinners and dances in their honor by eloping. Owing to a recent burglar "scare" they are forced to take refuge on a ship. When they come from their hiding place they find that they are out at sea. A terrific storm wrecks the ship and in the confusion Hugh carries Lady Tenny to safety, which is an island inhabited by savages, mistaking her for Grace.

On the island they are hailed as gods and made rulers by the savages. Lady Tenny is in love with Hugh, but he pretends not to care in that way for her, as much out of a sense of duty to Grace as anything else. A year later they are rescued and carried back to New York by a visiting ship. Hugh and Lady Tenny part, but he learns that Grace has married Henry Veath, as she believes Hugh lost. His pride but not his heart is hurt, and he returns to Lady Tenny.

The Island of "Nedra" scenes were taken in the Bahamas, which insures a truthful setting, and it is evident that a thorough search was made before the locations were decided upon. Some idea of the magnitude of this offering may be gained when it is recorded that 2,000 native blacks were used in some of the scenes, and a commendable thing about it is that the director has not endeavored to keep the fact constantly before the spectator by breaking in upon the story to show how much labor and money was spent in staging the picture.

"Colorado"

Universal's Five Reel Feature, Released on Nov. 15
Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

HOBART BOSWORTH is splendidly cast as Thomas Doyle, the leading role in "Colorado," adapted from the play of that name written by Augustus Thomas, and which is the five-reel Broadway Universal feature on Monday, November 15.

As the professor of languages in a small college and later the purchaser of a small tract of farm land in Colorado, Bosworth fairly lives the role assigned him. In this part he is supported by Anna Lehr, as Mary, his wife; Louise Baxter, as Kitty, his sister; together with Carl von Schiller, Albert MacQuarrie, Edward Brown, and Mr. Bradbury.

Norval McGregor is credited with the production of "Colorado," and is surely to be complimented upon the closely knit, excellently photographed story which he offers the public in this release. No details seem to have been overlooked in making the story convincing and it is one that will interest all.

Frank Austin discovers Col. Kinkaid, his superior officer, at a frontier fort abusing a little lame newsboy, knocks the colonel down and upon being court-martialed and sentenced to five years' imprisonment, escapes with the aid of the newsboy and goes to Colorado. Thither a few weeks later comes Thomas Doyle, a professor of languages from an Eastern college, Mary his wife, and Kitty his sister, on account of Mrs. Doyle's health. On the way out they encounter Col. Kinkaid, who urges them to buy a ranch in Colorado and then wires ahead to Staples, a gambler friend of his, to arrange to sell them a worthless tract of land belonging to Kinkaid himself.

As the country has just been deluged by an unprecedented rain, the tract of land offered to Doyle looks most promising, and the ex-professor purchases it, only to discover when the dry season arrives that his land is worthless unless it can be irrigated.

As the months pass Mrs. Doyle regains her health, but Doyle's funds play out and, discouraged, he finds himself growing old and desperate with nothing set by for the future.

Austin, meanwhile, who has taken up a mining claim near Doyle, believes wealth lies ahead of him, while Kinkaid, who has had some of Austin's ore assayed, wants to form a company and exploit the claim in a big way.

Doyle visits the colonel for the purpose of making Staples, who sold him the land, either take it back or return some of the money, since the land has proven a failure; but the latter merely laughs at him and assures him that he will not have a chance of getting his money back.

Kinkaid is much attracted by Mrs. Doyle, and Staples pays no little attention to Kitty, much to the disgust of Austin, who sincerely loves her. After Doyle and Staples have had a bitter quarrel, Doyle, now employed as foreman in Austin's mine, goes down to set off a blast, and Staples, by way of revenge, stops the lift used in hauling the men to the surface, thereby imprisoning Doyle in the underground workings. The blast goes off and a flood of water is released in the mine, since the blast had exposed an underground river. Though the mine is flooded and rendered worthless, the flood of water which pours to the surface and later irrigates Doyle's land, enables the latter to grow enormous crops and become wealthy.

Hobart Bosworth as Professor Thomas Doyle in "Colorado."

Mrs. Doyle, however, who is found in intimate conversation with Kinkaid by her husband, is cast off and finally goes to Denver, pursued by Kinkaid, who desires to marry her.

Doyle suffers deeply over his wife's supposed inconstancy, but finally is persuaded to take her back. Austin forces Kinkaid to clear his name and secure a pardon for the sentence still hanging over his head, and as the picture ends Austin and Kitty, Doyle and his wife, find happiness.

"A Trap for Trapp"

Another of Pathe's "Adventures of Wallingford
Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

WHILE J. Rufus Wallingford's business deal, or rather "con-game," in "A Trap for Trapp" is quite far off color, so far in fact that the postal authorities get after him, and lacks the admirable finesse of his previous schemes to reduce the bank accounts of certain unworthy gentleman, the comedy situations, good acting and nice settings, which mark these pictures as distinctive in serial offerings, are here present and as a consequence "A Trap for Trapp" lives up to its purpose—that of affording good, wholesome entertainment.

In "A Trap for Trapp," which is the sixth episode of this

A scene from "A Trap for Trapp."

Pathe series, Wallinford has an idea which he knows will earn him a neat profit, but he fears to put it into operation, knowing that the postal authorities will investigate, and that would never do. His only hope lies in finding some person well supplied with ready money who will buy him out before the "show-down" comes.

Jimmie Wallingford and "Toad" Jessup are pining to own an automobile offered for sale by Louis Trapp. With Violet Warden's aid they work a scheme which forces J. Rufus to buy the machine for them. In an argument Trapp boasts, and foolishly for himself, that he has $50,000 which is the exact amount Wallingford desires his "goat" to possess. Therefore a trap is laid for Trapp, and he walks into it as though he was rehearsed for the occasion.

Jimmie and "Toad" are quite as important in this episode as either J. Rufus or Blackie, and it is due to the boys more than anything else that Wallingford is not caught by agents of the Federal Government. The boys' auto ride, thanks to some effective trick photography, is about as wild as one could expect. Another comedy touch is where Wallingford reprimands his son for reading a telegram not meant for him, explaining at length how dishonorable that sort of thing is.

"The Print of the Nails"

Selig's Three Reel Production to be Released Nov. 18
Reviewed by John C. Garrett

THE Selig Polyscope Company has scheduled for release on November 18, "The Print of the Nails," a three-reel production with a well balanced cast. In the story is intermingled politics of a big city, the life of the denizens of the underworld and the love of a mayor for a sweet young girl, who aids him in his attempt to reform the citizens. It is an effective theme and startling realism has been injected into the production, which is artistically projected.

The rival candidates meet at Ruth Rising's.

Earl Foxe is cast as Tom Mason, the reform candidate for mayor, who wins out over Humphries, the other candidate, which part is played by Edwin Wallock. Vivian Reed is a charming Margaret Macy, who is an old friend of Mason's, and aids him in "cleaning" up the city. Helen Wolcott is cast as Ruth Rising, a society belle. Walker, the "boss," is played by Al Filson, and William Scott plays the part of Will Macy, Margaret's brother. The "types" selected for this production are unusually genuine.

Tom Mason, reform candidate for mayor, and Humphries, candidate for the other party, are not only rivals for the office of mayor, but rivals for the hands of Ruth Rising, a society belle. The two attend an election party at Ruth Rising's home and when she hears that Mason has been elected mayor she accepts his proposal purely through ambition. Mr. Humphries vows vengeance and plots to assist Walker, "the boss," to "get" the new mayor.

Margaret Macy, a slum worker, is an old friend of Tom Mason's and she is delighted when she hears that he has been elected mayor. Her brother, Will, who is a "hanger-on," is strong for the other party, however, and is bribed by them to place two compromising letters in Tom Mason's pocket. He takes the letters home and falls asleep. Margaret, finding them, changes them both and writes another one pointing to the innocence of the mayor and this is the one which Will places in Mason's pocket.

Margaret is lured to a questionable resort which is raided during her visit. She is arrested and a big newspaper story involves the name of Margaret and the mayor. Macy, hearing what has happened, upbraids Walker, who also has him jailed. The council prepares to remove the mayor, and just as Humphries is telling of the letter which was found in the mayor's pocket Margaret and Will, who have convinced the chief of police that there is a plot against the mayor, arrive at the council chambers. They tell their story and produce evidence showing the conspiracy against the mayor, whose name is cleared and then takes Margaret's hand in his and they see more than friendship in each other's eyes.

"His Conquered Self"

Pathe's Three Reel Production Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

IN addition to being a pleasant relief from the deep-dyed villains who never show the least bit of good in their natures, "His Conquered Self" has much about it that is novel. The author is to be complimented for drawing such a convincing character as Jack Brunslow, a libertine who, like most people, is capable of love and whose better nature is brought forth through its influence. "His Conquered Self" is a three part Balboa production for release through the Pathe Exchange with Jackie Saunders and Lewis J. Cody in the leading roles.

The story is built around a girl who charms with her innocence and it has situations which are both interesting and dramatic. The ending is not what one expects. It is logical and convincing but it is customary when a girl visits the apartment of a designing man and is followed there by friends to have the friends break down the door and save the girl. In this story the girl is protected in her momentary weakness by the man she has made strong by her innocence and the melodramatic rescue is unnecessary.

If the story has shortcomings the greatest is in the way the girl's fiance is disposed of. He is maliciously discredited by Brunslow and drops out of the play too conveniently and without sufficient cause. Even this and the fact that in the beginning the action is not as clear as it might be, can be forgiven the author who has given us a villain who is human.

Jack Brunslow arranges through his mistress to meet Agnes Jackson, to whom he is greatly attracted. When he learns that she is engaged to Carlisle Gates he envolves Gates in a scandal which causes Agnes to break the engagement. Brunslow then wins the girl's confidence and love. After a quarrel he tells her that if she wishes to see him again she must seek him. Later Agnes calls at his apartment. At first Brunslow gloats over his conquest, but then he realizes that he really loves her and asks her to marry him.

Jackie Saunders plays the part of Agnes Jackson with sincerity and feeling. Lewis J. Cody, whose characterization of Herman Stein in "Comrade John" won general praise, is well cast as Brunslow and the supporting cast is adequate.

"The Hearts of Men"

World Film's Five Reel Production, Released Nov. 8 Reviewed by Hugh Hoffman.

NOTHING in the way of film production is more sure to please a larger percentage of the public than a well-directed picture of childhood. Such a feature is "Hearts of Men." It might better have been called "Hearts of Children," inasmuch as it deals mostly with affairs of childhood. The production is in five parts and is interesting every inch of its length.

Arthur Donaldson and Beulah Poynter play the leading adult parts, that of a German father and German housewife. Both of these parts are exceptionally well played. Mr. Donaldson has had such a rare theatrical experience and is such an absolute master of stagecraft that a remarkable rendition was to be expected, and there was no disappointment in that respect. Beulah Poynter, like a dutiful actress, covered up her pretty features with make-up to resemble a German frau. As a typical German couple of the better class, their work was appealing and winsome.

The work of the children was superb, and in mentioning the work of the children, the director, Percy Veckroff, should also come in for credit on the excellence of his results. It is no easy thing to handle a number of children in important parts and keep the action natural. Mr. Veckroff has not only done this with these children, but he handled a whole schoolroom full of them so cleverly that their actions are true to nature in every scene. The three children who carry the main parts are Frank Longacre and Ethelmary Oakland as the child lovers, and Nicholas Long, Jr., as the bad little boy. Their work is astonishingly good—so good, in fact, that everyone who sees this picture is going to do a little raving about their work.

Scene from World's "The Hearts of Men."

The story itself is a pretty thing. Besides that, it is original and has plenty of interest to hold an audience firmly. It was originally conceived from a song by Charles K. Harris entitled "The School Bells." The film version starts out with a chemist who is emigrating, with his family, from Germany to America to begin life all over again. He has had a valuable formula stolen from him by a man he trusted, and he expects to find that man in America. The little son of the inventor goes to school but has a hard time because he cannot speak English. A little girl of German descent volunteers to translate for him, and in this way the two become very much attached. Later the little boy's father discovers that the little girl is the little daughter of the man who stole his formula and became wealthy on that account.

When he discovers this, he orders the little girl away from his gate, and on her way home she is stolen by gypsies. The town bell is rung and the whole village turns out to find the girl. The little boy gets out of bed and goes to a gypsy camp and there finds the little girl. His father presently comes along and takes the little girl home to her father. Out of gratitude, the little girl's father offers the little boy's father half interest in the business he has developed from the chemist's formula, thus the two fathers become reconciled and the picture ends in a satisfactory way.

This is a picture that is going to please any manager who books it. It will not only please the manager, but the audiences, and no doubt will be talked about many days after it has come and gone.

Blackton Film Now in Four Cities

With "The Battle Cry of Peace" running to capacity houses in New York at the Vitagraph theater, where it begins its tenth successful week on Sunday, November 14; in Boston at the Majestic theater; in Chicago at the Olympic theater and soon to open in San Francisco, J. Stuart Blackton's dramatic presentation of what invasion in our present condition of unpreparedness would mean, has begun in earnest its appeal to all Americans to "be up and doing" in defense of their country.

The picture is powerful dramatically, and even without the patriotic motive and appeal which is an inherent part of it, it is to be considered a notable achievement in photodramatic art.

It was originally suggested by members of the American Legion, a society formed for the purpose of providing the country with a third line of defense, consisting of men who are ready and willing to serve the government at any time in the various capacities for which they are fitted by training, military or otherwise. Several members of the legion, convinced that the motion picture is today the greatest medium for the transmission of ideas to the people, undertook to find someone who would tell, in a picture story form, the dramatic truth of our unreadiness. Mr. Blackton, head of the Vitagraph Company, was a ready listener. His interest resulted in the great photoplay which is today going into every nook and cranny of the republic, with the inspiration of a new and finer Americanism, a new and truer responsbility on the part of all to our government, and a realization of the fact that only through power lies the road to peace and national honor.

Fleming With Feature Film

Carroll Fleming, formerly general stage director of the New York Hippodrome, has been engaged by the Feature Film Corporation which releases through the Pathe exchange. Mr. Fleming will produce that portion of the firm's output which is not directed by Edouard José, who is director-in-chief of the Feature Film Corporation.

"Our company has just completed plans," said Mr. José in announcing Mr. Fleming's engagement, "that not only greatly enlarges the scope of our activities, but will give our new director fuller opportunity for the exercise of his proven ability as the producer of pictures than he has hitherto enjoyed."

Edwin Thanhouser Explains

In a letter just received from Edwin Thanhouser, the New Rochelle manufacturer seeks to correct what he believes may be a wrong impression regarding his opinion of the nude in motion pictures. The letter reads as follows:

Dear Sir: There has appeared in several of the trade papers an interview with me, which interview has been wrongly captioned, insomuch as it conveys the impression that I advocate the nude in moving pictures. The original caption of this interview as submitted by our publicity department was "Inspiration; a Study in Thanhouser Ideals," and any change that tends to create the impression that I advocate the nude in moving pictures is wrong and should be corrected.

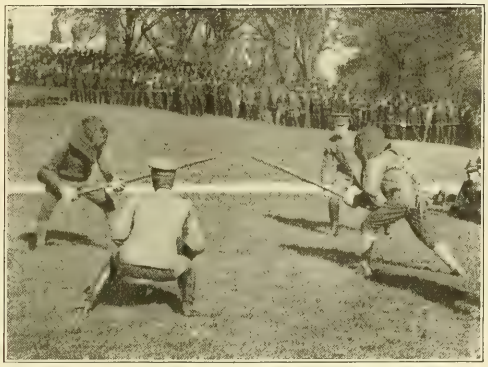
I wish to state that I do not advocate the nude in moving pictures. I am absolutely opposed to the nude in moving pictures, unless it is employed to serve a definite and unquestioned purpose of artistic and educational value; unless it is employed in a picture which can properly be exhibited before any audience with perfect propriety.

The fact that our five-reel Mutual Master-Picture, "Inspiration," was viewed and passed on by the National Board of Censorship without a single alteration will indicate that it is an example of the kind I stand sponsor for, and that must speak for itself.

Edwin Thanhouser.

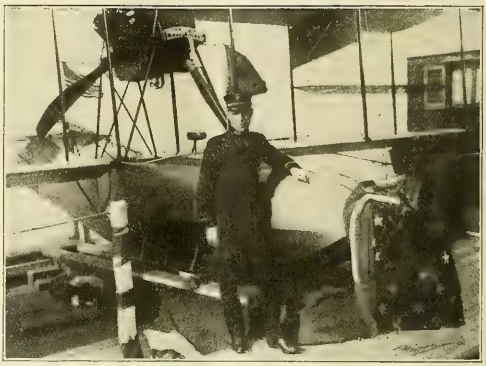
Kleine Opens New Studio

The George Kleine studios have been removed from East Fourteenth street, New York City, to 805-813 East One Hundred and Seventy-fifth street, quarters surpassed by none and equaled by few in spaciousness, arrangement and detail. The plant represents an expenditure of more than $1,500,000 and stands for the final word in motion picture studio construction. General headquarters have been established at the new place for the executive, film producing, auditing, scenario, advertising and publicity departments.



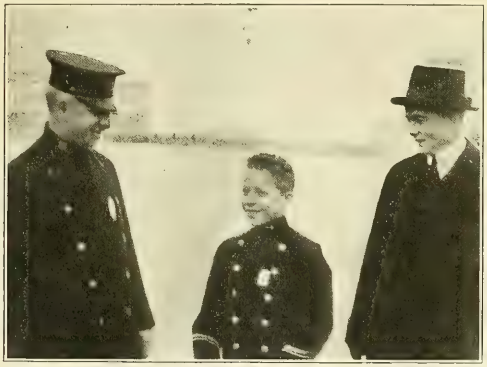
Sunshine Films Organized

Sunshine Films, Incorporated, capitalized at $100,000.00 at Sacramento, Calif., has been formed to make and promote feature pictures telling, in a story sense, the historic events which have gone toward the making of California. Men of practical experience and high standing in the motion picture business are said to have associated themselves with the undertaking, and the best technical experts will oversee all productions.



Band Box Installs Bartola

The New Band Box theater, 125 West Madison street, Chicago, Ill., just completed at a cost of $100,000, has installed a Bartola Orchestra, adding this theater to a long list of others in Chicago and throughout the country who find the Bartola needful for picture playing. The desire of the owners of the Band Box to give their patrons the best has been realized in the featuring of high class films in conjunction with the music.



News of the Week as Shown in Films

War game on famous Common in which "foes" are repelled, Boston, Mass. Copyright, 1915, Universal Animated Weekly.

Ensign Lee H. Harris, U. S. N. instructor of aerial corps. Copyright, 1915, Hearst Selig News Pictorial.

New Junior police force organized in Brooklyn, N. Y. Copyright, 1915, Mutual Weekly.

Winston Churchill, who inaugurated the famous Dardenelles expedition. Copyright, 1915, Pathe News.

U. S. submarine E-1 skimming over the water at high rate of speed. Copyright, 1915, Universal Animated Weekly.

Chicago Newsboys entertained at Lincoln Park Menagerie. Copyright, 1915, Hearst Selig News Pictorial.

Brevities of the Business

MID-WEST NEWS

By William Noble

Oklahoma

"Make the lodge room a social center"—this is the slogan of O. K. Camp No. 4, Woodmen of the World of Oklahoma City, Okla. Accordingly the lodge has purchased a complete moving picture equipment, as part of the entertainment program. Commencing October 28 moving pictures were shown in the lodge room to a large number of delighted members and visitors. Moving pictures will be shown about twice a month, supplemented with vaudeville and a musical program.

Missouri

A third moving picture censorship bill in consonance with the ideas of the Associated Catholic Societies, the Civic League and other organizations will be introduced at a meeting of the Board of Aldermen at St. Louis, Mo., Friday by Park Commissioner Cunliff.

Action on the first two bills, which were previously introduced, have been postponed indefinitely. The third bill provides for a board of censors composed of two paid inspectors and an auxiliary committee drawn from various civic organizations, to be appointed by the park commissioner. It will be a difficult matter to create a censor board for St. Louis, Mo., for the reason that the constitution of Missouri guarantees that no censorship shall be established over speech or publications.

Louis A. Cella and Frank R. Tate, theatrical managers who represent the Triangle Film Company, have leased the King's Theater, King's highway and Delmar boulevard, St. Louis, Mo., from Henry Keplar, to be operated as a companion theater to the American, where Triangle films will be produced. The King's Theater will be under the personal direction of David E. Russell and will open November 14 under the new management.

The new opera house at Marlan, Texas, is nearing completion and will be ready for opening within the next few weeks. When completed, Marlin will have one of the best equipped and handsomest show houses in Texas. Moving pictures and regular theatrical attractions will be shown.

Construction work has commenced at Abiline, Texas, on a modern fireproof up-to-the-minute opera house. The new theater is to occupy a front of fifty feet with a depth of 100 feet, and will be ready for the grand opening about February 1.

Moving pictures of Confederate veterans were taken at Dallas, Texas, October 20. The films are to be used in connection with a scenario to be produced for the benefit of the peace movement fund. Later films of the Grand Army veterans and the Methodist University at Dallas will be taken to be used for the same purpose.

The general pastors of Fort Worth, Texas, have lodged a protest with Judge Ben M. Terrell protesting against the dissolution of the injunction granted last year to prevent moving picture shows from operating on Sunday. The injunction was granted by Judge Marvin when he occupied the Sixty-seventh District Court bench and Judge Ben M. Terrell, who succeeded him, has been asked by the picture people and movie fans to dissolve it.

Spencer G. Sladdin, special representative of the New York office of the Fox Film Corporation, has taken temporary charge of the Dallas, Texas, office of that company. William M. Byrd of Dallas, former manager of the World Film Company's office, has been appointed assistant manager.

S. L. Rothapfel of New York, one of the nation's leading motion picture theater men, was the honor guest at an oriental dinner given by the Mutual Film Corporation October 28.

PACIFIC COAST NEWS

By "Capt. Jack" Poland.

The local announcements in all the daily papers of Los Angeles that W. H. Clune had secured the Triangle program for Clune's Auditorium theater has attracted widespread attention among amusement lovers, motion picture people and "fans." Securing of this program for the largest motion picture house in the west is another notable achievement for the Big 3 organization—Griffith-Ince-Sennett. Mr. Clune has been a steadfast booster for high-class feature pictures and is personally engaged in the manufacture and production of specialties for his house. The additional announcement is made that Clune will show these $2 pictures of the Triangle program at popular prices.

William N. Selig, now luxuriating in the sunny southland of California, dividing his time between the $1,000,000 Selig Jungle Zoo and the $3,000,000 Hotel Alexandria, where he registers and meets his friends, states that he feels highly honored over the confidence imposed in him by Mayor Thompson of Chicago (Mr. Selig's home city) in his nomination to the Board of Education of his native city. Mr. Selig read of his prospective appointment in Motography of this week.

Photoplayers of Los Angeles and the surrounding territory are enthused over the success attending the reorganization of the former club. Several new names have been proposed, and it has been tacitly agreed upon to call the reorganized club the "Padres," the name being symbolical of California—The Golden State. It is further hoped and planned to build up the organization along the lines that have made the Friars of New York notable, maintaining a prestige as regards membership and conduct that will win the hearty approval of everyone. A very largely attended meeting was held in furtherance of the plans of final organization at Hoffman's cafe Thursday evening of this week.

Improvements are in evidence at all the studios this season, new stages, new studios, laboratories and equipment in every department adds to the fame of the motion picture industry in this section of the United States.

President William Parsons of the National Film Corporation reports that this company will begin productions again within the next ten days. In furtherance of this statement he has taken over the Francis Bushman-Quality-Metro studios by purchase from Fred Balshofer, and the National companies are being reorganized and are making ready for a continuance of work. Albert G. Hale has been selected as director and he is engaging players for the company for immediate work.

More or less mystery surrounds the sudden departure of Francis Bushman and Beverly Bayne of the Metro-Quality program for the east. When this organization came here some months ago, under the guiding hand of President Fred

Film Market Quotations and Financial Gossip

Supplied by R. D. Small of A. E. Butler & Co., Chicago.

	Bid	Asked
American Film Co., Inc....	88	96
Biograph Co.	42	57
Colonial M. P. Corp.....	1	4 *
General Film Corp., pref...	42	48
Mutual Film Corp., pref...	49	52½
Mutual Film Corp., com...	47½	50
No. Am. Film Corp., pref..	73	..
No. Am. Film Corp., com..	65	72½
N. Y. M. P. Corp.....	65	69
Thanhouser Film Corp....	1⅞	3½*
Triangle Film Corp.....	6¾	7 *
Universal Film Mfg. Co....200		..
Vogue Films, Inc.....120		..
World Film Corp.....	4⅛	4⅜*

*Par $5.00

New York Motion Picture Corporation.—This stock continued weak with a number of offerings under 70 and no buying strength exhibited except under 65.

Mutual Film Corporation.—A number of new exchanges and branch offices have been opened up. Transactions in the stock have been very limited in amount at around 50 for the common and 52 to 53 for the preferred.

Signal Film Corporation.—Is the latest film company, with a capital stock of $250,000, $100,000 preferred and $150,000 common. It will manufacture a series of dramatic episodes with Helen Holmes as the central figure. It is reported releases will be made through the Mutual and possibly through the North American Film Corporation.

Triangle Film Corporation. — Opened up on its regular schedule the past week, offering to exhibitors in general the films already shown in the Triangle's model theaters.

Reliance Motion Picture Corporation. —The Mutual Film stock holdings of both Reliance and Majestic were bought by J. R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, at the same time that he took over the holdings of H. E. Aitken.

Balshofer of the Quality Pictures Corporation, it was understood that permanent headquarters would be maintained at the Hollywood studios. After making several pictures, Bushman and Miss Bayne and other members of the company have decided without much notice that they prefer residence and occupation in the New York metropolis to the glorious country—California. The studios used and owned by Balshofer have been leased, and the entire organization is now in other sections of the country.

Henry Ford, the multi-millionaire auto manufacturer, peace booster and head of many important works and interests, added more fame to his illustrious name this week, when he, like Daniel, "walked into the lions' den" at Universal City. The difference was, however, Henry had his picture taken while holding the king of beasts by the waving mane, while Danny was there under other circumstances. Anyhow, while the auto magnate had his pictures taken with the lion he showed no evidences of fear, and Universalites join together in pronouncing Ford a brave man, even when facing a terrific jungle lion.

CHICAGO GOSSIP

The Rotary Club of Chicago, which on Thursday of last week was entertained at the Studebaker theater as guests of the Triangle Film Corporation, returned the compliment on Tuesday noon, November 9, at the regular noonday luncheon of the Rotary Club, held at the Crystal Room of the Hotel Sherman. As guests the club entertained C. F. Hately, one of Triangle's Chicago representatives; Dr. Laverne Barber of the Triangle's New York office; M. J. Knill, manager of the Studebaker theater, and D. N. Talbot, press representative of the same theater, and in their honor called Tuesday's luncheon "Motion Picture Day." All of the gentlemen delivered addresses pertaining to the motion picture industry, pointing out to the business men of Chicago who are members of the Rotary Club, the growing importance of this comparatively new industry.

William T. Rock, better known as "Pop" Rock, arived in Chicago on November 7 on a visit to his son John, who is guiding the destinies of the Vitagraph part of the V. L. S. E. program in Chicago. Mr. Rock was accompanied by his wife, and expressed himself, on leaving, as having enjoyed a delightful vacation. "Pop" Rock's idea of a vacation was to go out and sign up Sidney Smith for rebookings.

"Silent Bill" Haddock reading a scenario to the Gaumont stock company twins.

William N. Selig went to New York on Monday to attend a meeting. He is expected back on Thursday, November 11.

Clover Lord, who formerly ran a department in the Chicago Evening Post devoted to the moving picture industry, together with Mr. Eccles, who was a reporter for the department, have gone into partnership with H. L. Harris, formerly vice-president of the United Photoplays Company, and have started the Supreme Feature Film Company in the Peoples Gas building. The new company purchased the Illinois rights on "The Cowpuncher," a five-reel picture put out by the Reelplays Corporation in the Unity building. Harry Gordon is handling the sales end of the Reelplays Corporation and has tentative arrangements made for the sale of a number of copies, the Illinois rights being the first to go.

The General Feature Film Company gave a special showing of the big feature film entitled "How Molly Made Good," a feature production having in its cast a dozen well-known New York theatrical stars, at the Ziegfeld theater, which was well atended, and the exhibitors expressed themselves as being quite pleased with the picture, which was made by the Photo Drama Company of New York.

A delegation of art students from the Chicago Art Institute were invited to witness the exhibitors' showing of the Thanhouser five-reel Master-Picture entitled "Inspiration." The showing was held Tuesday afternoon at the Mutual offices and most of the unmarried exhibitors of Chicago were present.

E. H. Brient has announced that he is opening a new feature film exchange in the city of Des Moines, Ia., which will be known as the Kay Bee Exchange. Best wishes for your success, Harve.

The Triangle Film Company began releasing on the 7th of November in Chicago, and the results for the first week are apparently very good. Quite a number of the large houses are capitalizing the advertising which the Triangle company has had in the newspapers.

Chris Whalan has a funny story which he states is an actual occurrence that happened to him while standing in front of the Mallers building. Chris says that one of Hamberger's house managers came hurrying down the street and he stopped him and asked, "What's your hurry?" to which he received the following reply, "I forgot the eleventh reel." Chris is issuing diagrams of this joke.

Harry Weiss, the very successful manager of the Metro exchange in Chicago, is spending a few days in the east, and in the meanwhile Phil Solomon is holding down two jobs, as well as canvassing exhibitors nights for bookings on Metro subjects. Phil has nothing to do until tomorrow.

A prominent exhibitor has sent in a letter asking what happened to the movement started among the Chicago exhibitors to restrict the number of films which an exhibitor should run. Three-for-a-nickel or four-for-a-dime was the slogan with some of the more progressive men a short time ago, but they say that there is no limit now, and that a number of theaters are showing as many as twelve or fourteen reels for 25 cents. The exhibitors' association will have this subject as one of its chief topics at its next meeting.

There was a secret session of the big theater men's association held last week.

Joseph H. Finn, president of the Vogue Film Company, went to New York on the Century on Tuesday, November 9, on business connected with his company.

Frank Lewis Hough, Jr., is back at the helm in the Kleine Optical Company's office, after a week's visit to New York City for a consultation with his chief.

D. J. Chatkin, manager of the United Film Service, 17 North Wabash avenue, was seriously injured in an automobile accident Tuesday, November 2. His sister, Miss Bertha Chatkin, was killed in the same accident and another passenger in the car was injured. MOTOGRAPHY wishes to extend its sincere sympathy to Mr. Chatkin in his bereavement.

F. O. Nielsen is making a trip through Illinois and Indiana and securing bookings for the splendid features which he controls in this territory.

Melchior and Linnick have opened new offices at room 410 Mallers building to handle a line of features.

Manager Duffy of the feature department of the Mutual Film Corporation has moved his desk closer to the cashier and is now to be found in the Mutual offices in the Mallers building. Room 406, formerly occupied by Mr. Duffy, is now being utilized as a poster and shipping room.

The Consumers Film Company, formerly at 410 Mallers building, moved out last week. This marks the end of the company formerly headed by Norton D. Harris, president; David Rosin, vice-president and manager, and J. LeRoy Carson, secretary and treasurer. Mr. Harris will probably remember the writer as being the first man to call on him when he opened his office in the Willoughby building.

NOTES FROM ALL OVER

Anita Stewart will have a new leading man in Richard Turner, a recently appointed member of the Vitagraph forces. Hereafter Miss Stewart and her company will work in the new studios at Bayshore, Long Island, where Director Ralph W. Ince has installed every convenience for motion picture production.

George DeCarlton, general supervisor of productions of the Ocean Film Corporation, lately organized by Jesse J. Goldburg, recovered a verdict at the hands of the jury last Thursday in the Supreme Court, against Vaughn Glaser, actor-manager, in the sum of $1,287.32. The litigation was of long standing.

Henry A. Barnhart, of Rochester, Ind., member of Congress from the thirteenth Indiana district, visited Universal City with Mrs. Barnhart recently. The Barnharts devoted half a day to a thorough inspection of the plant, and during that time met many of the directors and stars of the company.

Edward Brennan, the well noted dramatic actor appearing in Metro features, recently accompanied Valli Valli to Montreal for the opening of the Metro program there. He made a little speech with Miss Valli, and the management presented him with a heavy silver cigarette case.

Arnold Daly will produce for Pathe's Gold Rooster program George Brackett Seitz's Broadway success, "The King's Game," in which William A. Brady presented James K. Hackett for a couple of seasons. Mr. Daly has secured for his cast Pearl White, George Probert, Sheldon Lewis, Stanley Dark and Martin Sabine.

Local Santa Barbara charities were given substantial assistance last week by the Indians of the "Flying A" studios. A real native dance was given by them in the ballroom of the Arlington hotel. Chief Four Winds, a wonderful type of the Indian of other days, made an impressive address to the assembled guests with the aid of "Sombrero Joe" Knight, who officiated as interpreter.

Barbara Tennant, who made such a striking success for the World Film in "The Dollar Mark," "When Broadway Was a Trail," "The Marked Woman" and "The Butterfly," is the heroine of World Film's forthcoming Crane picture, "The Gray Mask."

E. J. LeSaint has returned from San Francisco and is at work on interior scenes in the production of "A Bargain with Charm," the first episode of the serial story, "The Journal of Lord John," by C. N. and A. M. Williamson. William Garwood is playing in the stellar role of this production.

Donald Mackenzie, having finished his Gold Rooster play, "Mary's Lamb," the Broadway success written by Richard Carle, has been given by Pathe, Gilbert Parker's novel, "The Weavers," as his next picture.

Theodore Roberts is the star of the Paramount production, "Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo," recently completed by the Lasky Feature Play Company under the direction of Mr. Frank Reicher. Mr. Roberts for more than a year has been a valuable member of the Lasky organization, and the new photoplay, which is based on E. Phillips Oppenheim's widely read novel of the same name, gives him a splendid opportunity as a star.

The friends of Clara Kimball Young have formed the Clara Kimball Young Club, with headquarters in suite 615 Longacre building, Broadway and Forty-second street, New York City, in order to help her win the popularity contest of the morning and Sunday Telegraph.

Mack Sennett interrupted in the midst of talking over the first rehearsal of a Keystone-Triangle feature with Willie Collier, who has just started working at the Keystone studio.

Well, he's back at Universal City, bag and baggage, and everyone is smiling him a welcome. Who? Why Carter De Haven. And with him has come the better half (without meaning any insinuation), Flora De Haven, the little, dark-eyed, black-haired girl who played opposite him in the Universal's recent Broadway feature, "The College Orphan."

A big reception was held last week for Anita King, "The Paramount Girl," on her return to the Lasky studio at Hollywood, Cal., after her transcontinental automobile tour. She was the first person, man or woman, who ever crossed the continent by motor alone. She left San Francisco September 1 and reached New York October 16, traveling a distance of 5,231 miles in forty-six days.

William D. Taylor, the latest Bosworth, Inc., director, starts producing his first picture for that company this week. The vehicle is "He Fell in Love with His Wife," by E. P. Roe, and Florence Rockwell is the star. Taylor has an excellent supporting company in Forrest Stanley, Howard Davies, Page Peters and Lydia Yeamans Titus.

Phillips Smalley and Lois Weber have left the Universal City studios for San Francisco, where they are to stage a number of exteriors in the production of a five-reel story by Rufus Steele entitled "Hop." Arrangements have been made with a number of the San Francisco officials for their co-operation to give the picture the necessary touch of realism.

Director Maurice Tourneur has taken a company south with him for the purpose of making the Beban picture. The title and story of this picture will be made public in due course; in the meanwhile it may be interesting to hint that the theme is a French one, something of the pastoral, idyllic, Paris bohemian kind.

Apart from being the head of the Liberty Film Manufacturing Company and taking her own leads, Sadie Lindblom is financially interested in the Banner M. P. Company, which operates from her San Mateo studios. The Liberty confines its attentions to dramas and features, while the Banner, under Bill Stinger, the "fat comedian," is turning out comedies.

William Worthington and his company of Universal players this week returned from a prolonged stay in the mountains surrounding the Big Bear lake, 6,000 feet above the level of the sea. They camped on the edge of the big lake and made exterior scenes for the production of a three-reel drama featuring Herbert Rawlinson.

Sarah Truax of the Fine Arts Films has been joined by her mother and her little girl, "Drusilla." This means a bungalow, of course, and as Miss Truax is both a distinguished actress and a lady, her place in the photoplayers' colony is assured.

Arthur Shirley, the actor from Australia, has been burning the candle at both ends this week. He has been acting in pictures by day and starting early at that. He has been playing in Sudermann's "Margot" o' nights at the Little Theater of Los Angeles.

Tom Terriss, president of the Terriss Film Corporation, has made arrangements with his famous sister, Ellaine Terriss, and her popular husband, Seymour Hicks, to come to this country and appear in the filmatization of one of their best known plays, "Bluebell in Fairyland," a class of work not before attempted in motion pictures.

"The Broken Coin" serial is completed. Of late "The Broken Coin" has been synonymous with broken rest, and Grace Cunard is going to be busy doing nothing for a week or two, while Francis Ford will hie him to his home in Portland, Me., for the same length of time. They both deserve the holiday, too.

H. Gratton Donnelly's play, "The End of the Road," which was successfully produced on the stage, is to be released as a Masterpicture. Harold Lockwood and May Allison will play the leading parts in this play, every inch of which is a thrill. It was first named, when produced as a play, "Carolina," and all the elements of romance and excitement which fill the pages of the early history of that state color the play.

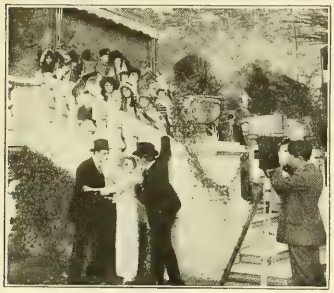
Ben Turpin, Essanay comedian, is said to be the original Happy Hooligan, from whom the famous cartoonist took his character. Mr. Turpin was in musical comedy for years, and later went on the vaudeville stage.

Jack Pickford will make his initial appearance under the Diamond S trademark when he appears in the strong character role of Toney, a pool shark, in the Selig Diamond Special in three reels, "The Making of Crooks," released Thursday, December 16. Mr. Pickford will be supported by an all-star cast.

Jack Sherman is playing a special engagement as the heavy in "La Paloma." It was a difficult part to cast and Mr. Wolbert looked long and wide before he filled it. Work is progressing rapidly on this three-reeler.

As usual, the Universal is anticipating the holidays by filming two Christmas stories. One is produced by Ben Wilson, entitled "A Bachelor's Christmas." It is a three-reel story by William Addison Lathrop. Mr. Wilson is supported by Dorothy Phillips. The other one is also in three reels and was produced at the coast. It is entitled "The Call of the Christmas Born.' It was written and produced by Robert Leonard and stars himself with Ella Hall.

The Lasky company has now acquired title to the remainder of the block on which the studio stands. This gives them a space of 650 by 300 feet. At one time the intention was to move to a different location, but the Lasky company started its meritorious career in the rear of the garage at the corner of Vine and Selma streets two years ago this coming Christmas, and for sentimental reasons it was decided to retain the same site.



A full-sized moving picture studio costing over $5,000 was recently built for use in a Triangle-Keystone comedy which is being directed by Roscoe Arbuckle. The story is worked around the stages, dressing rooms, offices, projecting rooms, etc., of the modern motion picture studio and in it all the stars of the Triangle forces will be introduced.

World Film is making a great melodrama entitled "The Sins of Society," with Robert Warwick in the stellar role, under the direction of Mr. Oscar Eagle. This picture will be released on November 29. It will be a drama of concentrated thrills.

A number of members of the American Film Company were the guests Sunday, October 31, of Henry Otto and his Universal company on the islands of Santa Cruz. Mr. Otto chartered a launch to convey his guests on the three-hour trip to the islands, where he has been busy in the making of exterior scenes for the five-reel Broadway feature, "Undine." Spectacular diving by four of the professional diving girls in the "Undine" production was a feature of the day, and was followed by a barbecue. Toasts and speeches were made, with Mr. Otto as Company to Mr. Otto's welcoming toastmaster. William F. Russell responded in the name of the American Film speech, and later Charlotte Burton, Director James Douglas, Thomas Middleton of the American company and Mr. Granville, Douglas Gerard and Scotty Beale of the Universal company, made respective talks.

This illustration shows the filming of a scene in Pathe's new serial, "Who Is Guilty?" Emmy Whelen, Howard Estabrook and Director Howell Hansel are in the foreground and it is interesting to know that the house in the background is Samuel Untermyer's residence, Gray Stone, in Yonkers, N. Y.

William Garwood, who is starred in "The Journal of Lord John" at the Universal, has bought a new car and they call it the Auto-teria at the studios, because you can walk around in it and get exactly what you want.

In "La Paloma" Mary Anderson plays a Spanish girl for the first time in her experience. Since being in the west she has been called upon to portray a wide range of characters, first a chorus girl, then a society pet, then an alley girl, and finally this Spanish "Bettina."

Destruction by fire of a four-story, specially constructed brick factory building near Fort Schuyler, while preparing films for "Chldren of Eve," an Edison master photodrama, to be released through the Kleine-Edison Feature Service, provided more thirlls than bargained for, and furnished at least one narrowly averted tragedy that for a time threatened to cause a panic among the 500 women and girls engaged in the scene and an equal number of spectators who had motored out to witness the spectacle.

Thomas Santschi, the Selig star, has joined the Elks lodge and has been presented with many valuable Elk emblems by admiring friends.

Henry Otto, the big "U" producer, is at his old stamping ground, Santa Barbara, this week. Otto is directing the big spectacular play, "Undine," with Ida Schnall, the swimmer and high diver, in the title role. Douglas Gerrard and Edna Maison have big acting parts in this.

Frederick Arnold Kummer, the well-known playwright and novelist, whose book, "One Million Francs," was picturized by the Rolfe-Metro forces as a starring vehicle for William Faversham and renamed "One Million Dollars," is now spending his leisure time training a group of Airedale dogs for a scene he has written in an original scenario. Mr. Kummer lives on a small farm in Maryland, where the principal products are dogs and fiction.

Ruth Stonehouse, now working on a multiple-reel version of "The Alster Case," by Rufus Gillmore, started work fresh from an eight-day automobile trip to French Lick, Ind., during which the students of Indiana University at Bloomington, Ind., turned out in force to welcome her and compelled her to make a speech.

Rollin S. Sturgeon left this week for a six weeks' stay at Great Bear lake, filming "God's Country and the Woman," the Curwood best seller that is to be his next Blue Ribbon feature. Mr. Sturgeon's company included William Duncan, Nell Shipman, George Holt, George Kunkel, Helen Clark, William Bainbridge, Edgar Kellar, as the principals, and as many supporting characters of the cast.

Rupert Julian is camped in the San Gabriel canyon with his company of Universal players. He is at work on the production of another of his three-reel dramas, this time a story entitled "Gilded Youth."

Will M. Hough never wrote a better story than "The Coquette's Awakening," a Selig special in two reels, released Monday, December 13. Miss Kathryn Williams takes the leading role and is supported by a carefully selected company of Selig players.

"The Rack" is the name of a forthcoming World Film feature to be directed by Mr. Chautard, and which will be released on December 27 next. This story is based upon the well-known Brady success of the same name. Innumerable admirers throughout the motion picture field will learn that Miss Alice Brady, who was so popular in "As Ye Sow" and "The Boss," and has made such an engaging figure on the screen, has a very prominent part in this picture, which gives her the fullest opportunity of again making her way straight to the hearts of her audience.

In the filming the "The Valley Feud," a two-reel Mustang released November 27, one scene shows a herd of 12,000 sheep. This was taken on Santa Cruz island, where the Caire ranch holds the largest grazing sheep herds in the west today.

Henry Otto and his company of Universalites are at work in the Santa Barbara islands off the coast of California, where they are staging a number of the exterior and water scenes in the production of "Undine," the old German fantasy. In addition to the regular Universal players who are taking part in this, Miss Ida Schnall, one of the best-known swimmers in the United States, has been cast for a leading role in the production and is with the company at their camp.

Pictures don't lie. Press agents may be addicted to the cursed habit of prevaricating, but in this case it isn't necessary. The United States government has designated Universal City as a real, sure enough city, and given its postoffice a cancellation stamp all its own. The accompanying illustration shows that all mail sent out of Universal City, Cal., is so stamped by the government cancellation stamp.

Miss St. Aubour is now George Ovey's leading woman in David Horsley's Cub comedies, taking the place of Goldie Colwell, who was recently transferred to Mr. Horsley's company producing two-reel Centaur features, after appearing in the comedian's support in over twenty releases.

The Vitagraph Company's box party was one of the features of the Ocean Park Life Saver's ball recently. Everyone turned out in full regalia and had a jolly time. Jack Mower, of the Vitagraph stock company, is one of the organizers of the association and has three rescues from drowning to his credit durthe year of 1915 alone.

Digby Bell is more than making himself a place in the hearts of the Universal players at the west coast studios, where he is playing the stellar role in Joseph De Grasse's production of "Father and the Boys," which Ida May Park has adapted for the screen from George Ade's play of the same name.

Neva Gerber acknowledges that she possesses a peculiar name, but it is her very own. She changed it once when acting opposite Edwin August, who did not think it sounded romantic enough, so for a time she was billed as Neva Delorez, but she turned back to "Gerber" when she left August to play with Carlyle Blackwell.

Bryant Washburn distinguished himself as an athlete of no mean ability recently in an athletic contest held by the Essanay players at the Chicago studio. By winning the 100-yard dash in 11 1-5 seconds and the 50 in 6 seconds, and second places in the high and broad jumps, Washburn annexed the largest number of points, and as the winner of the meet received a silver loving cup.

Louise Fazenda, the Keystone comedienne, who is under the direction of Dick Jones, has just returned from a quiet visit to the San Francisco exposition, accompanied by her mother.

D. J. West, a strikingly fine appearing juvenile, who has been signed by the Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc., to appear in "Black Fear," a five-part Rolfe-Metro feature, in which Grace Elliston is starred, is comparatively a newcomer to motion pictures. Until the big slump in immigration, beginning with the outbreak of the European war, Mr. West was one of the best immigration inspectors in the employ of Uncle Sam at Ellis Island.

Myrtle Stedman was asked to officiate as queen of the Hupmobile and Maxwell exhibits at the automobile show in Los Angeles on Friday night, and a mightily attractive queen she was, too.

Marie Empres, the continental comedienne, who has been appearing in Metro feature productions, is a bona fide dog fancier and carried away the first prize at the Toy Dog Club exhibition at the Hotel McAlpin, where the best toy dogs in the country were recently shown.

Lillian Walker visited Bloomfield, N. J., on the occasion of the annual baby parade. Miss Walker was only scheduled to present silver cups to the prize winners, but that dimpled smile of hers worked overtime. Many spectators threw kisses and the Vitagraph player returned measure for measure.

"Who's Who?" the title originally selected for the Cub comedy, featuring George Ovey, released on the Mutual program November 5, has been changed to "Twin Brides." This was done in order not to confuse this release with that of another company, which now has in process of production a feature release under the same name, from the story, "Who's Who?" by a prominent author.

The Vitagraph Company has purchased from Louis Joseph Vance his powerful dramatic story, "Joan Thursday," which will be produced for the screen in five parts.

Children ranging from five to ten years of age, to the number of 300, and coming from Flatbush, Brooklyn and New York City, spent a day at the Vitagraph Company's plant, where they appeared in the forthcoming Blue Ribbon feature, "The Writing on the Wall," being produced under the direction of Tefft Johnson.

A. Dresner, general manager of the Kriterion Film Service of Indianapolis, Ind., has been spending the last two weeks among the New York exchanges and various exhibitors' hang-outs getting a line on the Association Program, and after a thorough investigation he has come to the conclusion that the Associated Service is not a promise, but a business run on a business basis by business men. He therefore contracted for the states of Indiana and Kentucky.

SOME NEW THEATERS

Alabama

Birmingham is to have a new motion picture theater by December 1, according to announcement made by H. M. Newsome, who will conduct the new house. The playhouse will be at 1923 Third avenue, the old location of the Bonita theater, which was closed about two years ago. The new theater has not been named as yet, but Mr. Newsome expects to have a name for it shortly, as he is going to conduct a contest to that end. The house will be modern throughout. The building is 30 by 140 feet, and the lower portion will be given over entirely to the theater, which is being built from plans by W. Leslie Welton. The latest designs in motion picture theater construction have been employed, and Mr. Newsome promises several novel effects. There will be $25,000 expended on the theater.

California

Fresno is to have a new motion picture theater, according to an announcement made by Alfred and Adolph Kutner. Instead of having all store rooms in the proposed building at 1046 I street, as was formerly planned, one division will be a motion picture theater. The theater will be large enough to seat about 400 or 500 persons and will be fireproof and will cost about $6,000.

Idaho

Fred G. Caldwell and associates in the Idaho Loan & Investment Company began the excavation work on the new motion picture theater on South Main street, Pocatello. The building will be 60x120 and will be constructed of stone and fire brick, with a seating capacity of 1,000. Frank H. Paradice, Jr., is the local architect. According to plans, the house will be opened by the first of the year.

Illinois

Owing to several important changes in the plans of remodeling the Spencer square theater, formerly the Family, in Rock Island, the opening date of the new film house is postponed until December 1.

Charles Quiggle of Waukegan has purchased the Majestic theater at Harvard.

The new picture show building being erected in Cambridge by Mr. Jones is rapidly nearing completion.

The new Elite theater in Somonauk has been opened.

A moving picture theater with a seating capacity of 1,000, which is expected to cost about $75,000, is to be erected at the southwest corner of Clark street and North avenue, Chicago, by Frank Schoeninger. It is to be leased to H. L. Gumbiner, who operates several theaters in various parts of the city. The lot fronts 120 feet in Clark street by 120 in North avenue, and in addition to the theater there will be two stores with offices on the second floor on the south 70 feet. The plans for the building have been drawn by Architect Adolph Werner and provide for an exceedingly attractive structure.

Victor C. Dumbeck has sold the Victor theater in East Moline to John Bahnks of Silvis.

Progress is being made on the addition to the Gem theater in Milford. The capacity of the theater will be doubled. During the alterations Manager H. T. Benson has been showing his pictures in the G. M. Samons building.

Indiana

A new theater will be built in North Manchester by W. J. Sirk.

Harry E. Lerner, formerly manager of the La Salle theater at South Bend, recently purchased the stock held by Fred Palmer in the Bucklen theater in Elkhart.

Iowa

George W. Christy has disposed of his Electric theater in Maquoketa to Morrison & Hadley of North English. The house will be closed for a time as the installation of an up-to-date heating plant and a metal front will take place.

The Rex theater in Dubuque has been closed by the owners.

The Virginia theater, Boone, changed hands when P. J. Schmitz disposed of his interests to Lee Birmingham, who will be associated with Mr. Dunton in the future.

Kansas

Topeka is to have a new $9,000 motion picture theater. It will be located at 508-508½ Kansas avenue, and will be owned and managed by C. A. McGuigan, present proprietor of the Gem theater. The building will be built by Abe Jacobson and will be leased by Mr. McGuigan from him. The plans and specifications for the new theater have not been entirely completed. The theater will have a seating capacity of 600 persons and will be two stories high. There will be no balcony. The new building will be equipped with the latest ventilation and heating devices and probably will not open until January 1.

Kentucky

Tom Tracas has secured a permit to construct a moving picture theater on Broadway, near Thirty-eighth street, Louisville. The building will be 34x135 feet, and when completed will have involved an expenditure of $10,000. The facade will be of white and green brick, and the capacity of the house will be 500. It will be called The Shawnee.

Maryland

The new Parkway theater, North avenue, west of Charles street, Baltimore, had its formal opening October 23. The building is said to be a reproduction of the West End theater in London, is of a pleasing architecture both as regards taste and comfort.

Michigan

The Bellany and Star theaters in Boyne City have been improved. The latter is now operating under new management and the Bellany will shortly be opened.

Dr. W. G. Heasley of Zeeland has applied to the city council for a license to operate a moving picture show two nights a week.

The Prudential Film Company has been formed for the purpose of manufacturing motion picture films with the following officers: President and general manager, Willard H. Goodfellow; vice-president, Andrew H. Green; treasurer, Herman Weingarden; secretary, F. H. Allworth. The capitalization of the company is $30,000, all of which is paid up. A resolution was immediately passed to increase the capitalization to $60,000. All of the directors are Detroit men with the exception of Mr. Allworth, who is connected with various enterprises in Windsor.

November 1, Eades & Cronk of Battle Creek took possession of the Bijou theater in Eaton Rapids, having purchased same from Mrs. Minnie Woodruff.

Minnesota

Tony Hoover will open the Grand theater in Baudette.

J. J. Gaffney contemplates erecting a motion picture theater next to the Kohler harness shop in Morris.

Missouri

C. Kalbfell will erect a one-story brick moving picture theater at 2498 Union street, St. Louis, to cost $10,000.

H. Freund will erect a picture theater at 1911-15 S. Broadway, St. Louis, to cost about $10,000.

F. Elmer Scott will erect the Linwood theater at 3034-36 Prospect avenue, Kansas City; brick; stucco front; 60x128 feet; ceiling 20 feet high; seating capacity 1,200.

Miss Katherine Mize, Miss Mary Crump, Miss Carrie McCoy and Miss Claudine Mundy have formed a business firm for the purpose of starting and operating a high class moving picture show in Independence. The new firm has closed a contract for the Paramount pictures, has leased the Battery C armory for two nights a week and hired an expert operator. They are planning to give the best there is in the moving picture line for the money and will personally conduct the business. The theater will be open on Tuesdays and Saturdays starting October 23.

Nebraska

The motion picture theater in Alliance, formerly known as the Gem, has been opened as the New Empress. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sohns, who have bought the theater, will take personal charge of it.

Claud Schmidt of Pender has purchased the Lyric moving picture theater at Hartington from N. B. Mueting.

Manager Hopper of Kearney has repurchased the Crescent theater and will continue to run this in addition to the Isis picture house.

New Jersey

Ground has been broken on the tract at Hermitage and West End avenues, Trenton, for the new motion picture theater which will be opened there under the name of the Strand. Fred R. Parker is the contractor in charge. It is anticipated that the building will be erected and ready for occupancy within a very few months.

New York

The W. H. Kemble Theaters Corporation of Brooklyn has been chartered to do a general theatrical and motion picture business. The capital stock is $10,000 and the directors are H. Clark Mooney of New York City and George C. Wildermuth and Fletcher F. Miller of Brooklyn.

A recent fire in the operating booth of the Grand Opera moving picture theater, 525 Fifth avenue, Brooklyn, caused a slight damage. The theater is owned by Theodore Catrana.

Aurora Film Plays Corporation, motion picture theatricals, $100,000; C. Kimball, W. L. Roubert, C. Mundt, 1475 Broadway.

One of the finest built photo playhouses in downtown Brooklyn is the Duffield at Fulton and Duffield streets. The theater has just been enlarged to a seating capacity of 1,000, and redecorated throughout. A new screen has been installed and the seats made wider and more comfortable. The Duffield can now boast of being absolutely fireproof, and is unusually well ventilated. Sixteen exits make it possible to empty the theater safely and rapidly. Manager Bland will make it a point to show only the best pictures obtainable, accompanied by a five-pice string orchestra.

The Oxford theater, at the intersection of Flatbush avenue and State street, Brooklyn, is now operating under new management. The Unity Amusement Company has taken a twenty-year lease on the house. The Oxford has been made thoroughly modern with many improvements. Under the supervision of Oscar Muller, the policy of the theater will be to show only first-run Broadway features.

Public Service Film Company, Inc., Manhattan, motion picture films and theatrical business; capital, $25,000. Incorporators: J. Leblang, 501 West One Hundred and Tenth street; W. McBride, 1492 Broadway, New York City; R. W. Priest, 1981 Sixty-sixth street, Brooklyn.

Vogel Star Theater Company, Bronx, motion pictures, $5,000; M. F. and E. F. Vogel, 32 Harman street, Brooklyn.

Ohio

Fred L. Adams, who has conducted the Favorite motion picture theater in Piqua, is the lessee of the Strand theater, which is being completed on the public square. This is one of the finest theaters devoted to pictures in any city between Dayton and Toledo.

The Veritas Photoplay Company, Cincinnati; $250,000 to $125,000.

The Princess theater in Springfield has been reopened after being remodeled.

The Windermer Company, Cleveland, $15,000. Operting and dealing in moving picture theaters; Wm. M. Rozenzweig.

The Co-Operative Film Company, Cleveland, $5,000; dealing on motion picture films; A. L. Austin.

The Denver Amusement Company, Cincinnati; I. Libson and others; $10,000.

The A-Muse-U Theater Company of Clinton has taken the management of the Parkside theater in Lyons. The Parkside is one of the finest little theaters in Iowa, and under the A-Muse-U management will be conducted in a first-class manner with up-to-date films.

Oregon.

The moving picture houses in Dallas were recently merged when O. C. and J. D. Smith, proprietors of the Orpheum theater, purchased the Grand and Star theaters from A. C. Ayres. The Star theater will be dismantled at once and a fireproof showhouse erected on the site.

W. A. Ayres, who recently sold the Grand and Star theaters in Dallas to O. C. and J. D. Smith, is moving to Portland, where he has purchased and will operate the Sunnyside theater.

Pennsylvania.

Work on the new motion picture playhouse being erected at Eleventh avenue and Sixteenth street, Altoona, is being rushed and Silverman Brothers, owners, expect to have same open some time in January.

The brick motion picture theater at 1809 to 1819 South Seventh street, the northeast corner of Seventh and McClellan streets, Philadelphia, has been conveyed to Wolf & Lanin by Arthur J. Berlin for a nominal consideration and a mortgage of $20,600.

The Savoy theater, Independence and Rock streets, Shamokin, has installed a new Powers No. 6 machine.

The property at 2844-46-48 Frankford avenue, Philadelphia, known as the Empire Palace theater and Airdome, was purchased from Karp & London by New York interests. Joseph W. M. Simpson, real estate broker, represented the purchasers. A new theater, dance hall and roof garden shortly will be built, including three store fronts on Frankford avenue, also five two-story houses on Emerald street. Plans and bids for same will be given out shortly.

The North Side has a new motion picture theater at Perrysville avenue and Charles street, Pittsburgh. It is the Atlas theater and is one of the first in the city. It has a seating capacity of 500 and was erected at a cost of $25,000.

J. L. Beers, proprietor of the Queen theater, Broad street, Sewickley, is having some extensive improvements made in his theater which will be completed within a short time.

The Regent theater, Ambridge, S. J. Goldstein, manager, will open November 8. It is an up-to-date theater, with a seating capacity of 600.

Health Bureau Inspector Frederick H. Smith has made his monthly report of moving picture theaters in Reading and reports a big advance over the rating last month.

South Dakota.

O. V. Armstrong has purchased the Cecil street theater at Highmore, which is undergoing a thorough renovation and remodeling.

The Unique theater in Sisseton reopened in its own new theater building. It has a seating capacity of 400 and is a very comfortable and cozy theater, being managed by Mr. Miller.

South Carolina.

The Strand theater, the latest of the Columbia motion picture houses, has been opened. It is located in the 1400 block of Main street.

Virginia.

The Wonderland moving picture theater, 151 Granby street, Norfolk, was damaged to the extent of $1,000 when a piece of film ignited in the operating booth.

The Wonderland motion picture theater in Norfolk, managed by E. L. King, which was damaged by fire, will be ready for business in a short time. Six reels of film, two machines and the operating booth were practically destroyed.

Washington.

The American, under the management of John Hamrick, has been opened in Seattle. The theater was formerly known as the Lois.

North Pacific Film Producing Corporation, Tacoma, $100,000; Paul Seligman, C. P. Richards, William Reddish.

Pennsylvania.

Louis Feno has purchased property on Main street near the Farmers and Miners bank building, Bentleyville, and will erect an up-to-date theater. The building will be 43x110 feet and have a seating capacity of 500.

The H. E. Kennedy company has plans completed of a one-story fireproof motion picture theater for D. Chaitzin. It will cover 40x176 feet and will be built on Jarvella street, Northside, Pittsburg.

South Carolina.

Greenville will shortly have a new motion picture theater, the Casino, on Main street.

Complete Record of Current Films

Believing the classification of film pictures by the nature of their subjects to be of greater importance to the exhibitor than classification by maker, MOTOGRAPHY has adopted this style in listing current films. Exhibitors are urged to make use of this convenient tabulation in making up their programs. Films will be listed as long in advance of their release dates as possible. Film manufacturers are requested to send us their bulletins as early as possible. Reasonable care is used, and the publishers cannot be responsible for errors.

General Program

Monday.

D	11- 8	Twice Into the Light	Essanay 3,000
D	11- 8	The Woman of the Sea	Kalem 3,000
D	11- 8	The Orgy	Lubin 1,000
C	11- 8	The Come Back of Percy (No. 3 of the Chronicles of Bloom Center)	Selig 2,000
T	11- 8	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 89, 1915	Selig 1,000
C	11- 8	No Tickee, No Washee	Vitagraph 500
E	11- 8	California Scrap Book	Vitagraph 500

Tuesday.

D	11- 9	Weaver of Clay	Biograph 2,000
D	11- 9	Wine, Women and Song	Essanay 2,000
C	11- 9	The Hoodoo's Busy Day	Kalem 1,000
C	11- 9	Half a Million	Lubin 1,000
C	11- 9	The Chef at Circle G	Selig 1,000
D	11- 9	For the Honor of the Crew	Vitagraph 3,000

Wednesday.

D	11-10	The Laurel of Tears	Biograph 3,000
C	11-10	Cartoons on a Yacht	Edison 1,000
C	11-10	The Fable of "Handsome Jethro Who Was Simply Cut Out to Be a Merchant"	Essanay 1,000
D	11-10	The Dream Seekers	Kalem 2,000
D	11-10	The Secret Room	Lubin 2,000
C	11-10	Hats is Hats	Vitagraph 1,000

Thursday.

D	11-11	Rosa and the Author	Biograph 1,000
C	11-11	Cupid's Bath	Essanay 1,000
D	11-11	The Ghost of the Twisted Oaks	Lubin 3,000
	11-11	Title Not Reported	Mina
T	11-11	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 90, 1915	Selig 1,000
C	11-11	Sis	Vitagraph 1,000

Friday.

D	11-12	The God Within	Biograph 1,000
D	11-12	The Truth About Helen	Edison 4,000
D	11-12	The Indian's Narrow Escape	Essanay 1,000
D	11-12	The Kidnaped Heiress (No. 3 of the Ventures of Marguerite)	Kalem 1,000
D	11-12	A Knight in Old Spain	Lubin 1,000
C	11-12	The Midnight Prowlers	Vim 1,000
C	11-12	Romantic Reggie	Vitagraph 1,000

Saturday.

D	11-13	A Broth of a Boy	Edison 1,000
D	11-13	The Second Son	Essanay 3,000
D	11-13	The Girl and the Special	Kalem 1,000
C	11-13	His Three Brides	Lubin 1,000
D	11-13	The White Light of Publicity	Selig 1,000
D	11-13	The Woman's Share	Vitagraph 2,000
C	10-28	Kidding the Goats	Mina 1,000

Monday.

D	11-15	The Undertow	Essanay 3,000
D	11-15	The Pitfall	Kalem 4,000
D	11-15	The Wall Between	Lubin 1,000
D	11-15	The Vengeance of Rannah	Selig 2,000
T	11-15	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 91, 1915	Selig 1,000
C	11-15	Sunny Jim and the Great American Game	Vitagraph 1,000

Tuesday.

D	11-16	The Chief Inspector	Biograph 2,000
D	11-16	A Bit of Lace	Essanay 3,000
C	11-16	A Bargain in Brides	Kalem 1,000
C	11-16	An Accident Policy	Lubin 1,000
D	11-16	The Tenderfoot's Triumph	Selig 1,000
D	11-16	Gypsy Trail	Vitagraph 2,000

Wednesday.

D	11-17	The Gambler of the West	Biograph 4,000
C	11-17	His Wife's Sweetheart	Edison 1,000
C	11-17	Canimated Nooz Pictorial No. 2	Essanay 1,000
D	11-17	The Night of the Embassy Ball	Kalem 2,000
D	11-17	In Love's Own Way	Lubin 3,000
C	11-17	Count 'Em	Vitagraph 1,000

Thursday.

D	11-18	The Eyes of the Soul	Biograph 1,000
C	11-18	Snakeville's Eugenic Marriage	Essanay 1,000
D	11-18	Margie of the Underworld	Lubin 2,000
D	11-18	The Print of the Nails	Selig 3,000
T	11-18	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 92, 1915	Selig 1,000
C	11-18	A Motorcycle Elopement	Vitagraph 1,000

Friday.

D	11-19	The Lonedale Operator	Biograph 1,000
D	11-19	A Child in Judgment	Edison 3,000
D	11-19	Too Much Turkey	Essanay 1,000
D	11-19	The Veiled Priestess (No. 4 of the Ventures of Marguerite)	Kalem 1,000
D	11-19	The Death Web	Lubin 1,000
C	11-19	A Pair of Birds	Vim 1,000
C	11-19	Diplomatic Henry	Vitagraph 1,000

Saturday.

D	11-20	Black Eagle	Edison 1,000
D	11-20	The River of Romance	Essanay 2,000
D	11-20	The Girl on the Bridge	Kalem 1,000
C	11-20	His Wife's New Lid	Lubin 1,000
D	11-20	Locked In	Selig 1,000
D	11-20	Heredity	Vitagraph 3,000

V. L. S. E. Program

Sept.	20	The Circular Staircase	Selig 5,000
Sept.	27	Tillie's Tomato Surprise	Lubin 6,000
Sept.	27	The Great Ruby	Lubin 5,000
Oct.	4	Dust of Egypt	Vitagraph 5,000
Oct.	11	In the Palace of the King	Essanay 6,000
Oct.	11	The Valley of Lost Hope	Lubin 5,000
Oct.	18	A Black Sheep	Selig 5,000
Oct.	18	The Man Who Couldn't Beat God	Vitagraph 5,000
Oct.	25	The Rights of Man	Lubin 5,000
Nov.	1	The Turn of the Road	Vitagraph 5,000
Nov.	1	The Crimson Wing	Essanay 6,000
Nov.	8	The Raven	Essanay 5,000
Nov.	15	Sweet Alyssum	Selig 5,000
Nov.	15	Heights of Hazard	Vitagraph 5,000
Nov.	22	The Nation's Peril	Lubin 5,000

Mutual Program

Monday.

D	11- 8	Alice of Hudson Bay	American 2,000
C	11- 8	Lulu's Lost Lotharios	Falstaff 1,000
C	11- 8	Something in Her Eye	Novelty 1,000

Tuesday.

D	11- 9	The Little Captain of the Scouts	Thanhouser 2,000
T	11- 9	See America First, No. 9	Gaumont 500
C	11- 9	Keeping Up With the Joneses	Gaumont 500
C	11- 9	Her Adopted Father	Beauty 1,000

Wednesday.

D	11-10	Father and Son	Reliance 3,000
C	11-10	Love and Bitters	Novelty 1,000

Thursday.

D	11-11	Stanley of Starvation Camp	Centaur 2,000
C	11-11	The Film Favorite's Finish	Falstaff 1,000
T	11-11	Mutual Weekly No. 45	Mutual 1,000

Friday.

D	11-12	Man to Man	Mustang 2,000
D	11-12	To Rent Furnished	American 1,000
C	11-12	The Double Cross	Cub 1,000

Saturday.

D	11-13	This is the Life	Mustang 3,000
C	11-13	Almost a Widow	Beauty 1,000

Sunday.

D	11-14	A Romance of the Alps	Reliance 2,000
C	11-14	A Tangle in Hearts	Casino 1,000
D	11-14	In Baby's Garden	Thanhouser 1,000

Monday.

D	11-15	The Substituted Minister	American 2,000
C	11-15	Hannah's Henpecked Husband	Falstaff 1,000
T	11-15	The World's Championship Baseball Series, 1915	Novelty 2,000

Tuesday.

D	11-16	In the Hands of the Enemy	Thanhouser 2,000
S	11-16	See America First, No. 10	Gaumont 500
C	11-16	Keeping Up With the Joneses	Gaumont 500
C	11-16	Johnny the Barber	Beauty 1,000

Wednesday.

D	11-17	The New Adam and Eve	Rialto 3,000

Thursday.

D	11-18	A Polar Romance	Centaur 2,000
C	11-18	A Cunning Canal-Boat Cupid	Falstaff 1,000
T	11-18	Mutual Weekly No. 46	Mutual 1,000

Friday.

D	11-19	The Warning	Mustang 2,000
D	11-19	Drifting	American 1,000
C	11-19	The Fighting Four	Cub 1,000

Saturday.

D	11-20	The Winning Hand	Clipper	3,000
C	11-20	Anita's Butterfly	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	11-21	A Romance of the Alps	Reliance	2,000
C	11-14	Beauty in Distress	Casino	1,000
D	11-21	Beneath the Coat of a Butler	Thanhouser	1,000
C	11-21	The House Party	Casino	1,000

Universal Program

Monday.

D	11- 8	The Frame-Up	Broadway	5,000
C	11- 8	Those Kids and Cupid	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

D	11- 9	On the Level	Gold Seal	2,000
D	11- 9	The Parson of Pine Mountain	Rex	1,000
C	11- 9	Getting His Goat	Imp	1,000

Wednesday.

	11-10	No Release This Week	Victor
C	11-10	Silk Hose and High Pressure	L-Ko	3,020
T	11-10	Animated Weekly No. 1912	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

	11-11	No Release This Week	Laemmle
D	11-11	Hearts That Are Human	Big U	3,000
C	11-11	Actors From the Jungle	Powers	1,000

Friday.

D	11-12	Honor Thy Husband	Powers	2,000
D	11-12	Promissory Notes	Victor	1,000
C	11-12	Father's Lucky Escape	Nestor	1,000

Saturday.

D	11-13	What the River Foretold	Bison	3,000
	11-13	No Release This Week	Powers
	11-13	The Circus	Rex	1,000

Sunday.

D	11-14	Liquid Dynamite	Rex	1,000
D	11-14	The Masked Substitute	Laemle	2,000
	11-14	No Release This Week	L-Ko
D	11-14	The Broken Coin, No. 21	Universal	2,000

Monday.

D	11-15	Colorado	Broadway	5,000
C	11-15	A Looney Love Affair	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

D	11-16	Manna	Gold Seal	2,000
	11-16	No Release This Week	Rex
C	11-16	Bill's Plumber and Plumber's Bill	Imp	1,000

Wednesday.

D	11-17	"Lil Nor' Wester"	Victor	3,000
C	11-17	Disguised, But Discovered	L-Ko	1,000
T	11-17	Animated Weekly No. 193	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

D	11-18	The Ring of Destiny	Rex	2,000
	11-18	No Release This Week	Big U
C	11-18	Muscles and Merriment	Powers	500
E	11-18	The Home Life of the Spider	Powers	500

Friday.

D	11-19	Blood Heritage	Imp	3,000
	11-19	No Release This Week	Victor
C	11-19	Wanted, A Leading Lady	Nestor	1,000

Saturday.

D	11-20	The Heart of a Tigress	Bison	3,000
	11-20	No Release This Week	Powers
C	11-20	Chills and Chicken	Joker	1,000

Sunday.

D	11-21	The Mystery of the Locked Room	Rex	3,000
	11-21	No Release This Week	Laemmle
C	11-21	Ready for Reno	L-Ko	1,000
D	11-21	The Broken Coin No. 22	Universal	2,000

Miscellaneous Features

York State Folks	Gra-ko		5,000
A Mother's Confession	Ivan		5,000
Sarah Bernhardt at Home	Photoplay Releasing		2,000
Romance of Elaine	Pathe		24,000
The Victory of Virtue	United Photo Plays Co.		5,000
The Pearl of the Antilles	Picture Playhouse Film Co.		5,000
The Flame of Passion	Picture Playhouse Film Co.		5,000
The Corsican	Sun Photoplay Co., Inc.		5,000
The Whirl of Life	Cort Film Corp.		6,000
A Woman's Honor	Great Northern		4,000
Russian Battlefields	Indian Film Co.		4,000

Associated Service.

Released week of

Nov.	8	School Day Memories	Banner	1,000
Nov.	8	All Balled Up	Liberty	1,000
Nov.	8	The Jitney Submarine	Atlas	1,000
Nov.	8	The Crimson Circle	Santa Barbara	2,000
Nov.	8	The Bond Between	Santa Barbara	3,000

Fox Film Corporation

Releastd Week of

Sept.	6	The Two Orphans		5,000
Sept.	13	The Song of Hate		5,000
Sept.	20	Regeneration		5,000
Sept.	27	The Wonderful Adventure		5,000
Oct.	4	Sin		5,000
Oct.	11	The Little Gypsy		5,000
Oct.	18	The Soul of Broadway		5,000
Oct.	25	The Family Stain		5,000
Nov.	1	Carmen		6,000
Nov.	8	The Blindness of Devotion		5,000

Kleine-Edison

Released week of

Oct.	6	Vanity Fair	Edison	7,000
Oct.	13	The Magic Skin	Edison	5,000
Oct.	20	The Green Cloak	Kleine	5,000
Nov.	3	The Sentimental Lady	Kleine	5,000
Nov.	10	Children of Eve	Edison	5,000
Nov.	17	The Politicians	Kleine	5,000
Dec.	1	Canavan	Kleine	5,000

Kriterion

Releastd Week of

Nov.	1	Crystal Globe	Paragon	2,000
Nov.	1	Percy Got Married	Santa Barbara	1,000
Nov.	1	Birth of Emotion	Alhambra	1,000
Nov.	1	Boobs Racing Career	Thistle	1,000
Nov.	1	Goaded by Jealousy	Santa Barbara	2,000
Nov.	1	The Tatooed Man	Monty	1,000
Nov.	1	Call of the Sea	Monty	2,000
Nov.	1	Blown Upon	Punch	1,000
Nov.	1	Eliza's Fairy Prince	Trump	2,000
Nov.	1	Zoological	Pyramid	500
Nov.	1	Accidents Will Happen	Pyramid	500
Nov.	1	Joe's Partner Bill	Navajo	2,000
Nov.	1	Beating Father To It	Alhambra	1,000
Nov.	8	Prejudice Conquered	Paragon	2,000
Nov.	8	Billy Studies Music	Santa Barbara	1,000
Nov.	8	The Curse of the Black Pearls	Alhambra	2,000
Nov.	8	Won By a Moustache	Thistle	1,000
Nov.	8	The Arm of the Law	Santa Barbara	1,000
Nov.	8	His Double Did It	C. K.	1,000
Nov.	8	Falsely Accused	Monty	2,000
Nov.	8	A Domestic Revolution	Punch	1,000
Nov.	8	The New Sheriff	Trump	2,000
Nov.	8	One Night and Some	Pyramid	500
Nov.	8	Southern Winter	Pyramid	500
Nov.	8	Nevada	Navajo	1,000

Metro Features.

Released week of

Oct.	4	Song of the Wage Slave	Metro	5,000
Oct.	11	The Stork's Nest	Metro	5,000
Oct.	18	The Final Judgment	Metro	5,000
Oct.	25	My Madonna	Metro	5,000
Nov.	1	Tables Turned	Metro	5,000
Nov.	8	Pennington's Choice	Metro	5,000
Nov.	15	The Woman Pays	Metro	5,000

Mutual Master-Pictures.

Released week of

Sept.	30	The Price of Her Silence	Thanhouser	4,000
Oct.	7	Bred in the Bone	Reliance	4,000
Oct.	14	The Brink	N. Y. M. P.	4,000
Oct.	21	The Miracle of Life	American	5,000
Oct.	28	His Wife	Thanhouser	5,000
Nov.	4	The Seventh Noon	Mutual	7,000
Nov.	11	The End of the Road	American	5,000
Nov.	18	Inspiration	Thanhouser	5,000

Paramount Features.

Released week of

Nov.	1	Carmen	Jesse L. Lasky	5,000
Nov.	4	Still Waters	Famous Players	5,000
Nov.	8	Madame Butterfly	Famous Players	5,000
Nov.	8	Paramount News Pictures	Paramount	1,000
Nov.	11	The Mumy and the Humming Bird	Famous Players	5,000

Pathe.

Released Week of

Nov.	15	New Adventures of Wallingford, No. 7	Pathe	2,000
Nov.	15	Bamboo and Its Uses	Photocolor	500
Nov.	15	Our Feathered Friends at Dinner	Globe	500
Nov.	15	Whiffles' Busted Date	Punch	1,000
Nov.	15	Pathe News No. 92	Pathe	1,000
Nov.	15	Pathe News No. 93	Pathe	1,000
Nov.	15	His Conquered Self	Balboa	3,000
Nov.	15	Tinkering With Trouble	Phunphilms	1,000
Nov.	15	Neal of the Navy, No. 12	Panama	2,000
Nov.	15	At Bay	Gold Rooster	5,000
Nov.	15	All Dolled Up	Starlight	1,000

Triangle Film Corporation.

Released week of

Nov.	21	The Disciple; William S. Hart	Triangle Kay Bee	5,000
Nov.	21	Martyrs of the Alamo; Griffith Players	Fine Arts	5,000
Nov.	21	Her Painted Hero; Hale Hamilton	Triangle Keystone	2,000
Nov.	21	Saved by Wireless; Mack Swain	Triangle Keystone	2,000
Nov.	28	Matrimony; Julia Dean	Triangle Kay Bee	5,000
Nov.	28	The Sable Lorchia; Tully Marshall and Thos. Jefferson	Fine Arts	5,000
Nov.	28	Stolen Magic; Raymond Hitchcock	Triangle Keystone	2,000
Nov.	28	His Father's Footsteps; Ford Sterling	Triangle Keystone	2,000

World Features.

Released week of

Nov.	8	The Little Church Around the Corner	Blaney	5,000
Nov.	15	A Butterfly on the Wheel	Shubert	5,000
Nov.	8	Should a Wife Forgive	Equitable	5,000
Nov.	8	Hearts of Men	Harris	5,000
Nov.	22	The Little Church Around the Corner	Blaney	5,000

Brief Stories of the Week's Film Releases

General Program

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 89—HEARST-SELIG—NOVEMBER 8.—Monument built around the gun of the battleship Maine, unveiled by D. A. R. at White Plains, N. Y.; Chicago newsboys are guests of Cy de Vry, keeper of Lincoln Park zoo; Russian troops enter Artvin after its evacuation by the Turks; Serbians at work in the Kragouvatz Arsenal shortly before the Austro-Germans captured the place; latest fashions; U. S. S. Nevada, largest dreadnaught battleship in the world, starts for speed efficiency; naval militia flying boat is launched and christened at New York; police officers instruct junior police in drill formations and marches.

A Bit of Lace—(THREE REELS)—ESSANAY—NOVEMBER 10.—Featuring Darwin Karr, Edna Mayo and Sydney Ainsworth. A very clever story from the pen of H. Tipton Steck in which a bit of lace protruding from a door is the means of a man's discovering a woman in his apartments and also of the theft of a valuable letter. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 90—HEARST-SELIG — NOVEMBER 11. — The United Societies' demonstration against Chicago mayor's Sunday closing order, Chicago, Ill.; naval officers put U. S. S. Nevada through first official test at Rockland, Me.; guards of the House of Correction organize fire department at Deer Island, Mass.; steamer China leaves for the Orient having as passengers many Chinese; open air bazaar to raise money for sufferers from the European war at Palo Alto, Calif.; long camel trains transport the Russians over the Caucasus Mountains; with the Russian fleet in the Black Sea.

A Night in the Show—(TWO REELS)—ESSANAY—NOVEMBER 15.—Featuring Charles Chaplin, who attends a show in a double role, that of a "swell" in evening clothes in the dress circle and a rowdy in the gallery. His seat in the second row doesn't satisfy him and he moves to the front, where the orchestra leader strikes him with his baton and a free-for-all fight is started. He is hurled into the lobby where he bumps into a fat woman and knocks her into a fountain. Later while sitting in a box he falls asleep and several snakes from the "charmer's" basket nest in his lap. In the gallery Chaplin, the rowdy, bombards a couple of singers with ice cream and tomatoes. Chaplin in the box, with the assistance of a fat boy, besmirches the singers with cakes. When the fire eater makes his appearance, Chaplin, the rowdy, turns the hose on him, while Chaplin the "swell" gets a ducking, as does most of the audience, which breaks up the show.

The Pitfall—(FOUR REELS)—KALEM—NOVEMBER 15.—Featuring Marin Sais and True Boardman. Although in love with Clive, a young lawyer, Margaret Laird weds Deering, who conducts a gambling establishment in his mansion, to save her father from ruin. Clive, now district attorney, arranges a raid on the Deering establishment which comes to naught, but while in the mansion he comes face to face with Margaret. A second raid proves successful and before this takes place Clive dispatches a note to Margaret urging her to leave before his men arrive. The gambler attempts to kill his wife, but his plan is frustrated and he is arrested. He makes his escape and returns to his home and there meets his death in leaping from a balcony.

The Wall Between—LUBIN—NOVEMBER 15.—Featuring Velma Whitman and L. C. Shumway. Jennie Mortimer, a dance hall girl, professes affection for a rich miner, Walsh. She persuades him to take her to his cabin and a few days later Slim, her piano player lover, also comes to Walsh's cabin. He overhears Jennie planning to depart with her lover and take the gold. While Slim is in the tunnel of the mine Walsh confronts the girl with her perfidy. While the girl is trying to prevent Walsh from going to shoot Slim they are startled by hearing an explosion and running to the mine they find the mouth of the tunnel completely sealed by a rock slide and Slim entombed alive. Leaving Jennie with a sack of gold Walsh departs, while the girl tries in vain to rescue her lover, and finally, looking up, she sees a buzzard awaiting its prey and she collapses.

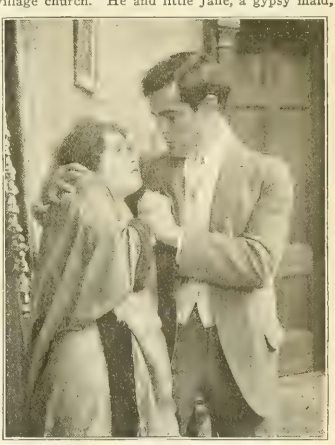
The Vengeance of Rannah—(TWO REELS)—SELIG—NOVEMBER 15.—Featuring a strong cast. Ranson, a soldier, returns home to find his sweetheart engaged to another man, and goes to General Craddock, who tells young Ranson his story of how he was happy with his wife in India and how Captain Alva had stolen her affections. Alva goes to the temple and steals jewles for Craddock's wife, and they start for the waiting ship after he had hidden the jewels in the mouth of the cannon. Craddock had ordered a salute to be fired that night in honor of Hassam Bey, the martyred hero, and he himself fires the honor shot. Out at sea Alva and Mrs. Craddock fell dead as the shot struck them. His story finished Craddock tells Ranson he should be thankful for the discovery of his sweetheart's real character.

Sonny Jim and the Great American Game—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 15. — Featuring Bobby Connelly as a baseball fan, and when Heinie challenges his team to a game the following Saturday they all start practicing. Sonny accidentally lets a fast one go through Miss Squibbs' window and he is ordered to stay in the house every day that week. When Saturday comes around Sonny is sent on an errand by his mother and he sees his team manfully battling with Heinie's team and being defeated. He enters into the game and there daddy finds him and it is his coaching which enables Sonny's team to win the game.



The Chief Inspector—(TWO REELS)—BIOGRAPH—NOVEMBER 16.—Featuring a strong all star cast. Lucille Palmer, daughter of a corrupt Internal Revenue collector, who has had an affair with one Bob Hicks, son of a distiller, meets Arthur Wheeler, an inspector of the Internal Revenue office, and becomes engaged to him. Later Hicks tries to bribe Wheeler and the latter pretends to consent and telephones his superiors at Washington, who find evidence of Palmer's crookedness, and Wheeler goes to his office, where he is threatened with a pistol. During the struggle which follows, the weapon explodes and Palmer falls dead and Wheeler is accused of the murder by Hicks. Later, however, it is discovered that Molly Grant had been in a room across the street and had fired the fatal shot at Hicks, her recreant lover. Wheeler is exonerated and later he marries Lucille.

A Bargain in Brides—KALEM—NOVEMBER 16.—Featuring Ethel Teare, Bud Duncan and Rube Miller. Ethel wants to marry Bud, but her father says she will have to marry Mike. Later when he finds Bud innocently stealing a kiss from Mary, the cook, he offers him $500 upon condition that he marry her, and seeing a way to annex Ethel as well as the cash, Bud agrees. Tempest arranges to have Bud and Marie and Mike and Ethel married at the same time. On the day of the event Bud imprisons Marie in the refrigerator, while Ethel dons the cook's bridal attire. Bud demands his $500 and gets it and immediately the ceremony is performed. Just then Marie is brought into the room and Mike and Tempest stare in amazement, while Ethel raises her veil, blithely kisses Bud and then speeds out of the house with him.

An Accident Policy—LUBIN—NOVEMBER 16.—Featuring D. L. Don. John Barrow tires of being hen-pecked and on Saturday night takes his bank roll and visits the corner thirst emporium and there falls for the chatter of an accident insurance agent and buys a premium on an accident policy. That night Barrow's wife demands that he meet with an accident that the bank roll may be returned and John tries his best and at last sits on a rock which is propelled skyward with a generous charge of dynamite and the insurance is collected.

The Tenderfoot's Triumph—SELIG—NOVEMBER 16.—Featuring Tom Mix. Tommy, an easterner, arrives in a western town, where the cowboys make him dance to the tune of a gun. Beecher, a ranchman, Hazel, his daughter, and Sid, the foreman, rescue Tommy. Later Tommy and Hazel start out for Pete Boak, an outlaw. They chase a negro, mistaking him for Boak, and the Ethiopian jumps from the top of a cliff and falls on Boak in camp below, knocking him unconscious. Tommy and Hazel find the unconscious Boak, make him a prisoner and win a reward of $500.

The Gypsy Trial—(TWO REELS)—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 16.—Featuring Antonio Moreno and Frankie Mann. Willie Buckland, a handsome gypsy, tells his friend why he and his little wife return every year to hear the chimes of the village church. He and little Jane, a gypsy maid, were pals and sweethearts, and later he went to the city and there met the "Painted Woman." He promises to stay with the woman until she dies and one night while in the meadows in the country he comes upon Jane's camp and hears her announce her love for him and he returns to the city, where the "Painted Woman" dies in his arms. A year later he arrives in that very village just as the chimes are ringing and there he finds Jane. His story finished, both men think of how Jane brought back her husband when he has apparently "gone to the dogs."

The Gambler of the West—(FOUR REELS)—BIOGRAPH—NOVEMBER 17.—Featuring a strong all-star cast. During the pioneer days Tom Grey and his family are westward bound. He is killed and his wife and daughter, Mabel, escape, and their little son is carried off by Red Fox, the Indian chief. Later Mrs. Grey marries Richard Kent with one child, Dick, who is disinherited by his father in favor of his step-sister, Mabel. The girl gives him her photograph, telling him to go out West and seek her brother. Out west "Lucky Jack" Gordon, a square gambler, promises Mabel to help find her brother and learns that he is known as "Little Great Bear." Mike and Dick, learning that he is Mabel's brother, decide that with the boy out of the way Mabel will be the only one standing between him and an inheritance. After a spectacular Indian fight and a prairie fire, "The Gambler of the West" wins his highest stakes, Mabel's love and her hand in marriage.

His Wife's Sweetheart — Edison — November 17.—A one-reel comedy with Raymond McKee and Jean Dumar, directed by Will Lewis. Mr. Whine's wife leaves him because he refuses to buy her a dog. She stops at a hotel. He follows and engages the adjoining room. Mrs. Whine repents and returns to her home. A vaudeville couple engage the room and rehearse their act. Believing his wife is entertaining a sweetheart, Mr. Whine breaks into the room and engages the actor in battle. After receiving a good beating he learns his mistake and humbly returns to his home where he finds wife.

Canimated Nooz Pictorial No. 2—Essanay—November 17.—Cartoons by Wallace A. Carlson. Split reel containing five hundred feet of animated cartoons as a burlesque on such topics as Mayor Thompson clamps the Sunday lid on in Chicago, Dan Cupid pots big game at the White House, and Henry Flivver, automobile manufacturer, introduces two Flivver submarines to the Navy Department.

The Night of the Embassy Ball—(Two Reels)—Kalem—November 17.—Featuring Guy Coombs and Anna Nilsson. Prince Rudolph, ruler of Weerhelm, is traveling in America incognito. Sheldon, the English ambassador, is ordered to locate the prince and induce him to sign a treaty of peace, while Sarniff, Brabanian ambassador, is ordered to frustrate all peace moves and has the prince, who is scheduled to attend an embassy ball, abducted and imprisoned in a shack in the country. Nora, a maid, accidentally learns of the kidnapping and tells Larkins, her sweetheart, of this, and the prince is rescued and rushed to the embassy. He signs the document held before him and thus frustrates the designs of the Brabanians.

Count 'Em—Vitagraph—November 17.—Featuring Anita Stewart and Earl Williams. Anita Barnes is sought after by many suitors. Earl, a young American, is her most persistent admirer, and when she hears that a Count wants to marry her she forgets all else. The boys send a telegram to Mr. Barnes purporting to be from the Count, saying that he wishes him and his daughter to call upon him at the Plaza and then the boys disguise themselves as counts. When Anita and her father arrive they become disgusted and leave for home, while the happy outcome is that Anita's heart and love return to her American lover.

In Love's Own Way—(Three Reels)—Lubin—November 17.—Featuring Mary Charleson. John Clark, State Senator of the Rural District, is in love with Mary, a farmer's daughter. Later, upon being elected Governor of the State, he falls in love with and marries Jane Guyton. His wife becomes heavily in debt and accepts a loan from the State Senator, who makes her promise that she will influence her husband to accept the irrigation bill. Mary, learning of the bill and knowing that it will mean ruination to her father's farm land if passed, goes to the Governor to plead for its veto. Jane goes to Worden's apartments to return the borrowed money and there meets Mary. Clark is informed that his wife is at the State Senator's apartments and he goes there to verify his suspicions and Mary comes from hiding to shield Jane, who escapes from the rear of the house. Later happiness comes to the Senator's family and Mary is wooed and won by Bob, the Governor's secretary. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

The Eyes of the Soul—Biograph—November 18.—Featuring Jose Ruben and Claire McDowell. Joe Abbott, a crook, escapes from the detectives and in a distant village enters the first house he sees and proceeds to rob it. He is interrupted by the entrance of a blind girl, who places her money in the desk drawer, and when she asks for an explanation of his presence he tells her he has come to read the gas meter. The girl finds his skeleton key in the door and realizes that he is a thief. He returns and asks her for employment, as he knows she is alone and needs help, and redeemed through honest labor he is happy in his love for her when the detectives discover him and take him away. After serving his sentences he returns and confesses to the girl his true character, who tells him she knew it all the while and lays her head upon his breast.

Snakeville's Eugenic Marriage—Essanay—November 18.—Featuring Margaret Joslin and Victor Potel. Sophie Clutts and Slim go to the office of Dr. Eustwat, for an examination. The doctor takes charge of Slim while the nurse ushers Sophie to an adjoining room. Sophie, alarmed at Slippery's cries of pain, rushes into the room and drags the doctor out by the coat collar and proceeds to give him a good trimming. Sophie and Slim then walk out with the certificate which she had forced the doctor to sign.

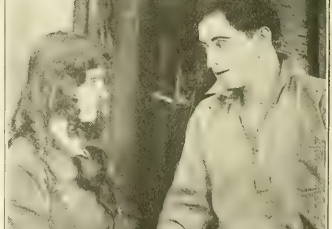
Margie of the Underworld—(Two Reels)—Lubin—November 18.—Featuring Lucille Younge and a strong cast. In a small hotel fire Mrs. Harris, after escaping, gives her baby to a young man, Lawson, to hold for a moment. Later Lawson takes the child home. She is brought up in the home of a family of crooks. Sixteen years later Margie is discovered as a shop lifter. Later she learns that a job is planned to rob the home of one Dr. Forsythe and she warns him. The doctor is called to attend Mrs. Harris, who has an hallucination that Margie will return and insists upon waiting at the gate at sundown. Margie fleeing from the police, passes the gate, and Mrs. Harris immediately claims her as her child. The doctor arriving, recognizes Margie as one of the crooks, but the minister, a friend of the doctor's, tells him of Margie's reformation, and the girl is finally led to play her new part as the daughter of Mrs. Harris, and that she really is her daughter he never knows.

The Prints of the Nails—(Three Reels)—Selig—November 18.—Featuring Earl Foxe, Vivian Reed, Edwin Wallock and Helen Wolcott in a story of the politics of a big city and the love of a mayor for a young girl, who attempts to aid him in reforming the citizens. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

A Motorcycle Elopement—Vitagraph—November 18.—Featuring Jewel Hunt and Arthur Cozine. Jack Dare and Bessie Norwood decide to elope after father forbids Jack to call. Jack tells Bessie, whose father is going to take her to a boarding school in his big car, in a note to extract all but a gallon of gasoline from the car, and that he will follow in his motorcycle and whisk her off to the parson's. Unfortunately the note falls into father's hands, and when he gets to a lonely spot he pretends his gas has given out. Jack comes up and steals her away and a short distance beyond the gasoline in his car gives out. The result is that when her father shows up an hour later she begs him to take her to boarding school or anywhere from that dreadful Jack.

The Lonedale Operator—Biograph Re-issue—November 19.—Featuring Blanche Sweet and a strong cast. The daughter of the station agent is left alone in charge of the station. She receives a shipment of money and two tramps attack the station to steal it. The girl wires for help and her sweetheart, an engineer, is dispatched to her aid and arrives at Lonedale just as the thieves are halted by the glisten of steel in the hand of the girl. When the tramps have been captured the girl shows her lover a little spanner which she has used as a weapon.

The Undertow—(Three Reels)—Essanay—November 15.—Featuring Richard Travers, June Keith and Harry Dunkinson. Molly Austin's father, a crook, and "Weasel" are caught robbing a house and sent to prison, and Molly goes to the country, where she is married. When "Weasel" is released from prison he follows the girl and she gives him her engagement ring as hush money. One day while driving her car the girl accidentally runs "Weasel" down, injuring him fatally, and on her way to the doctor's the girl's brother commits his last robbery by taking his sister's engagement ring from "Weasel's" finger.



The Veiled Priestess—Kalem—November 19.—An episode of the "Ventures of Marguerite." Hal, who loves Marguerite, meets a woman who tells of how Dunbar, a mystic, who seeks to induce Marguerite to become his priestess, robbed her of her fortune after promising to wed her. Hal, unwittingly, places himself in Dunbar's power and he is imprisoned, and then the mystic entices Marguerite to the house, where he tells her that unless she marries him Hal will die. Martha, the woman who has been abducted and taken to the house, enters Marguerite's room and induces her to don her clothes while she puts on the bridal garments and heavy veil laid out for Marguerite. Hal, compelled to witness the ceremony, unloosens his bonds at the moment it is completed, and at this time Martha lifts her veil and confronts Dunbar. Hal dashes into the next room, where he finds Marguerite, and the two make their escape.

The Death Web—Lubin—November 19.—Featuring L. C. Shumway and Lucelle Younge. George Grafton, manager of the Hydrox Power Company, is sent out to buy a farm from one Davis, whose daughter is in love with Dick Sudlow, son of the president of the Hydrox Company. Being unable to buy the farm from Davis, Grafton manages to ruin the old man. Grafton takes the deed to the farm to Sudlow and pockets a good $35,000 through the plot. Dick persuades his father to go to the valley and Grafton hurries to the transmission station, where he has put Summers to work, to induce him to leave the country. When Dick and his father arrive Grafton tries to trip Summers and throw him against the high power cables, but Summers seizes Grafton and drives him back into the high tension wires, where both are killed. Dick and his father go on to the Davis farm to square things and arrive there just as Davis and Phoebe are leaving.

Diplomatic Henry—Vitagraph—November 19.—Featuring Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew. Henry Newlywed prides himself on his ability as a diplomat. He receives word from his wealthy Aunt Becky and some excellent suggestions as to the kind of a wife he should have married. He writes Aunt Becky and tells her that no one can sew like she. His wife gets hold of the letter and adds a postscript saying that she is an expert housekeeper and replaces it in Henry's pocket. Aunty arrives on a surprise visit and then she and Mrs. Newlywed, with a pair of home-made trousers, get Henry into a ridiculous predicament and teach him a lesson in diplomacy.

Black Eagle — Edison — November 20. — A Western drama with Richard Tucker, Margaret Prussing and Augustus Phillips. Dick Rockwell sells his mining interests and prepares to leave for the East. His partner, Parker, fails to return to the cabin that night. Rockwell is surprised in the middle of the night by Barbara Dunbar, a visitor from the East and Dick's friend. She warns him that Black Eagle, a notorious road agent, plans to rob him. Black Eagle and his band ride up to the cabin. The road agent enters alone. Dick shoots and kills him, and when his mask is removed discovers that Black Eagle is none other than Parker.

The River of Romance—(Two Reels)—Essanay—November 20.—Featuring John Lorenz and Elizabeth Tinder. Ramon Randolph, a young engineer, is offered $10,000 if he can find a way through a mountain range without involving a tunnel. In the mountains he meets Dora and is watched closely by Joe Lucas, who is jealous. He is later shot down by Joe, who is captured by the chief engineer and forced to tell Ramon's whereabouts. Through Dora he learns a way through the mountains and gets the $10,000 and shortly after they are married.

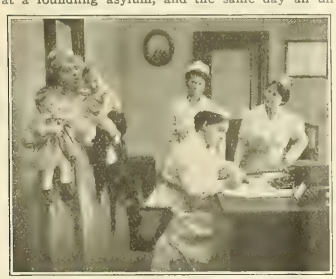
The Girl on the Bridge—KALEM—NOVEMBER 20.—An episode of the "Hazards of Helen" series. Daly manages to inform his pals the day upon which he is to be taken from the jail to the state's prison and the leader of the gang arranges to hold up the train carrying Daly and effect his rescue. On the day the hold-up is to be staged Kling and his pal see a railroad clerk carrying a money bag. They knock him unconscious and steal the money, and Kling sends his men to raise the bridge and thus hold up the train, while he, appropriating the clerk's hand car, carries the loot to their rendezvous. Helen, learning of this, derails Kling's car, seizes the money bag and speeds away before Kling can pursue her. She is traveling at full speed and within thirty feet of the draw bridge when it commences to raise. She throws the money bag aside and leaps for the raised structure just as the car hurtles into the river below. Later the money bag is recovered and Kling and the entire



His Wife's New Lid—LUBIN—NOVEMBER 20.—Featuring Billie Reeves. Jarvey's wife buys a beautiful bonnet and it is sent home C. O. D. The deliverer is one Melville, who smokes a pipe and leaves it on the table. Mrs. Jarvey, hearing her husband approaching, rushes to the bedroom to conceal the hat, and Melville, thinking it is a get-away for the bonnet, sticks close, forgetting his little pipe. Jarvey, discovering the pipe, starts on a hunt, and Melville arrays himself in one of Lady Jarvey's garments and steps forth to welcome the irate husband.

Locked In—SELIG—NOVEMBER 20.—Featuring Earle Foxe, Edwin Wallock. Henry Blaisdell, a telegrapher, becomes a victim to strong drink and loses his position. He then affiliates with Bill Avery, a crook, who persuades him to break into Barker's office to crack the safe. Parker meanwhile has closed the vault and in it is Simpson, the cashier. When Blaisdell and Bill arrive they hear the man inside the vault and Simpson signals the word "Help" by pencil tapping. Blaisdell taps on his side of the vault, "Signal the combination," and he saves the cashier's life just in time. Later Simpson helps Blaisdell start anew in another city.

Heredity—(THREE REELS)—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 20.—Featuring a strong cast. Mrs. de Marigny, a widow, leaves her little daughter, Grace, at a foundling asylum, and the same day an unidentified waif is found and brought to the asylum and the babies are wrongly tagged. Weeks later Mrs. de Marigny is told that her daughter has been adopted by the wealthy Van Dorns. The real Grace, however, had been adopted by a couple named Whitfield, who set her to work in a dressmaking establishment. The Van Dorns have named their adopted child Beatrice, who begins to show signs of inherited criminal tendencies. They are anxious to return her to her mother, but through the absence of a scar on the girl's arm Mrs. de Marigny knows that the girl is not her daughter. Later Mrs. de Marigny, who is now Mrs. Burleson, discovers that Grace is her own daughter, and happiness reigns thereafter.

Mutual Program

Freddie, the Fake Fisherman—FALSTAFF—NOVEMBER 1.—Freddie meets "The Girl" at a summer resort and they are engaged in record time. But father has yet to be consulted. Father is an indefatigable fisherman. Freddie hits upon a happy idea and palms himself off as a member of the Alaskan Salmon Club. When father invites him to go fishing, however, he cannot refuse, and the girl watches them off in fear and trembling. But Freddie makes a decided hit with father, catching many more things than fish. He brings down a cat from a tree, hooks in a burglar who is rowing away with father's silverware, and punches a hole through the tire of an automobile that has run father down. On returning, father expresses his desire that his daughter "may learn to love this remarkable young man."

The Commuted Sentence—(TWO REELS)—THANHOUSER—NOVEMBER 2.—A famous ex-convict freed by the Governor is so closely watched by well meaning police officers, who think they are acting for the safety of the public, that he has difficulty in securing employment. At last, starving and desperate, he enters a handsome dwelling. The master of the house, who chances to be the Governor's father-in-law, sees that the man has been forced into wrongdoing and gives him food and lodging for the night. The next morning the unfortunate man leaves the house with a heart full of gratitude. He is later arrested for the murder of his kindly benefactor, and as some of the old man's jewelry is found on him, the case of circumstantial evidence is strong. But just before the time for the execution a detective informs the Governor that he has trapped the real murderer—the old gentleman's butler. The culprit had cast suspicion on the ex-convict by hiding the jewelry in his coat.

The Fortune Hunter—NOVELTY—NOVEMBER 3.—A chase after a rich widow, involving a confusion of identities. The widow and her beautiful niece decide to exchange names. Edith soon gets all the attentions of the men and her several admirers refuse to let Charlie, whose personal charms exceed their own, go near the supposed widow. Mrs. Moneybag, solitary and neglected, meets Charlie in the wood. It is love at first sight and the pair steal off to be married. Edith, a few hours later, tells her admirers that she is not Mrs. Moneybag. They desert her, dashing after the real Mrs. Moneybag only to find that she has married Charlie, the man that loved her for herself alone.

Lulu's Lost Lotharios—FALSTAFF—NOVEMBER 8. A clever detective parody in which Suburban Homes, the great detective, rounds up the culprit that has been kidnapping the suitors of Lulu Leopold within twenty-four hours of their respective proposals. To tell the story back end to, the town constable is the culprit. He has incarcerated all the suitors in an old abandoned jail guarded by a monster negro with a monster razor. Homes utilizes the negro's love of playing "craps" and effects the escape of the whole tribe. As Homes is the last suitor and she cannot marry the whole lot, Lulu decides to marry him.

Something in Her Eye—NOVELTY—NOVEMBER 8. Trixie Gale gets some dry mortar dust in her eye, which makes her wink spasmodically, but without any feminine designs. The result of this is that soon after Trixie had finished her shopping, the Gale mansion is filled with a motley array of suitors. At last papa, "Dead Line of Texas," a celebrated marksman, arrives, and when he discovers the supposed "burglars" there is a grand shooting up. But when Trixie tells her crack-shot father that the men are only suitors, papa rallies them and tells them to go to—the man who wins the bout wins Trixie. But Trixie has already made up her mind, and escapes with her sweetheart while two of the other suitors are sparring heroically, refereed by papa.

See America First—(SPLIT REEL)—GAUMONT—NOVEMBER 9.—A trip through the Berkshires constitutes the main attraction of this scenic. Lenox, Stockbridge, and Litchfield are the larger towns visited. Excursions are taken off the beaten track, also, disclosing much of the wonderful scenery in the wilder portions of the mountains. On the same reel with:

"Keeping Up with the Joneses," the comic cartoon drawn by Harry Palmer.

The Little Captain of the Scouts—(TWO REELS)—THANHOUSER—NOVEMBER 9.—Leland Benham as the little captain. The little boy aspires to be a soldier, and finally when a big chap that has graduated from West Point comes to town and organizes the Boy Scouts, all is happiness for the little would-be soldier. Gossip has it that the cadet is in love with "Big Sister" and that he has organized the Scouts to please her. Just as things are going along the best, "Big Sister's" lover leaves suddenly. There has been a quarrel between the two and the youngster finds his sister crying. He then starts off on a hike after the "real soldier." At last he is found asleep near the road by a lady in an automobile. Just then the "real soldier" happens along and is delighted to see the "Soldier Boy." "Big Sister," who has also been on the search, comes along just as the cadet is taking the boy away from the lady. The Scouts arrive just in time to hear the soldier introducing the lady to "Big Sister." He says: "This is the other woman I proposed to once, but she wouldn't have me because I was only twelve years old." Then there is general laughter; the soldier kisses the girl and puts her in his automobile.

Love and Bitters—NOVELTY—NOVEMBER 10.—Brown's butler, Joe, formerly subject to indigestion, can now enjoy the finest feast, since he takes regularly "long life bitters." The dyspeptic Brown's meals are set before him by Joe and are also eaten for him by his faithful servant. Brown loves Edith, but when he sees her in the company of Charlie, her brother, whom he has never seen, he decides to end it all. But the faithful butler discovers his intentions, empties the bottle of carbolic acid and substitutes "long life bitters." As soon as Brown drains the bitters he devops an astonishing appetite, and orders a sumptuous dinner. Brown gives Joe one of his calling cards and commissions Joe to win back his girl, and through the butler's diplomacy a reconciliation is effected between the lovers.

Film Favorite's Finish—FALSTAFF—NOVEMBER 11.—The players of the Climax Film Company are known as "The Happy Family." One day a serpent creeps into their Eden. His name is T. Dorincourt Withers, and he is a "motion picture idol." The new star is so unpopular that "The Happy Family" holds an indignation meeting and decide for action. The character man rises to the emergency. As he is passing a beautiful country estate, a society leader departs, leaving the house unguarded. She drops her keys and the character man picks them up. Soon an automobile drives up to the studio, and the card of Mrs. Van der Gordon, New York and Newport, is brought to the star. The latter takes a ride with Mrs. Van der Gordon, alias the character man. She tells him she is going away for a long trip and urges him to take possession of her house. The star moves in immediately. A little later the police call, having been notified that there is a burglar in the house. The arrival of the real owner of the house does not make the star's case any stronger, and he is led off to jail. He does not remain there long, however, as the authorities believe he is simple minded, a plea which the members of "The Happy Family" enthusiastically endorse.

A Romance of the Alps—(Two Reels)—Reliance—November 14.—Featuring Marguerite Marsh. Wally and Andreas are Tyrolean lovers. Captain Vollenberg, an Austrian officer, is staying at the cottage of the girl's father. He becomes so insistent in his lovemaking to the girl, that Andreas is forced to rescue his sweetheart. In the struggle that follows, the captain falls over a cliff. Andreas, however, saves his life. Later, General Vollenberg, father of the captain, orders that yearly military conscription be made in Tyrol. Andreas is sent to headquarters. Receiving a telegraphic message that Wally is in distress he deserts his post and returns to the trysting place. Here he is dragged from his sweetheart's arms and sentenced to dig his own grave. At first when Wally tries to intercede for her lover with the general, he will not listen to her. When the captain enters, however, she tells the general how Andreas has saved his son. The captain is forced to admit that this is so, and the general issues a pardon for gratitude's sake. Wally rides to the scene of execution and is barely in time to arrest the firing.

In Baby's Garden—Thanhouser—November 14. Starring Helen Badgley. The kidlet has a little garden all her own, and likes to try to make everything grow. She inters pieces of broken plate, expecting a new set to spring up. But this experimenting at gardening meets with as much failure as her trying to raise new hair ribbons from silk scraps. Helen's uncle returns from South America and deposits a whole fortune in diamonds in the safe. Unnoticed, the little girl removes the stones from the safe and plants them in her garden, expecting to raise a "tarara" like mother's. Finally the resting place of the jewels is disclosed by the little girl, and the governess is proved guiltless. Because of caring for the governess, Helen's uncle had not caused her arrest. A few days after, Helen learns that the governess has decided to be her aunt.

The Substitute Minister—(Two Reels)—American—November 15.—Alfred Vosburgh makes his debut as an American leading man in this production in which he plays the role of a man on the verge of becoming a thief, who escapes from a police raid disguising himself as a clergyman and for a time enacts that role convincingly. A full review appears on another page of this issue.
N. G. C.

The New Adam and Eve—(Three Reels)—Rialto Star Feature—November 17.—Featuring Grace Valentine as Belle, the adopted daughter of Colonel Sheldon. The colonel dies leaving no will and his married sister inherits his estate. Mrs. Preston objects to the marriage of Belle and her son. In the belief that wealth is necessary to happiness, the young people decide not to marry. In a dream Belle sees herself as the new Eve, and accompanied by Montague as the new Adam she learns that wealth is not essential to happiness. Upon awakening, she resolves to give up her plan to help herself to the fortune the colonel intended she should have and marry Montague. Belle is destined to enjoy both Montague's love and her foster-father's wealth, for Mrs. Preston dies and the estate reverts to her. For a longer review see another page of this issue.
T. C. K.

Johnny the Barber—Beauty—November 16.—An amusing one-reel comedy featuring John Sheenan, Carol Halloway and Rae Berger. John and Doris are college students and lovers, but Doris' father objects to John until he can show himself able to support a wife. John makes good by selling a safety razor, but thereby ruins the business of Doris' father, who is a barber. When Doris returns from the school to which she has gone to learn manicuring and begins work in her father's shop, the loss of patrons discourages John and he is only finally able to win the father's consent when he goes into partnership with the latter in the barber shop, with Doris as the manicurist.

N. G. C.

A Polar Romance—(Two Reels)—Centaur—November 18.—Featuring Irving Cummings. Andrea Jennessen, an explorer, is in love with Nadina Rolph. Bannington Wells also loves the girl and he makes a pact with Mike Kerrigan, a sailor aboard Jennessen's exploration ship, to prevent Jennessen's return alive. The ship reaches the Arctic Circle and Kerrigan stirs the sailors to mutiny and Jennessen is thrown overboard. He manages to reach an iceberg floating in the sea, on which four polar bears make their home. The ice on which Jennessen has taken refuge floats to an island where the explorer builds an igloo of moss and stone, and by catching fish is able to subsist. Kerrigan arrives home and reports the news of Jennessen's death to Wells, who breaks the news to Nadina, and she goes with him on a rescue expedition and tells him that if Jennessen is not found alive she will become his wife. The ship arrives at the barren island upon which Jennessen is living, and Wells and Kerrigan suggest that the captain and Nadina search the island in one direction, while they and the rest of the crew search it in the other. Wells and Kerrigan hurry toward the hut and find Andrea almost exhausted. They pounce upon him, but the bears come to the aid of the explorer just as Nadina and the captain arrive. The bears are beaten off and the two conspirators are made prisoners and the return ship marks a happy reunion.

Drifting—American—November 19. — Winifred Greenwood and Edward Coxen have the leading roles in this love story which is beautifully photographed. Gladys Manners, the daughter of a millionaire, on a camping trip, is rescued from near death by "Bill" Long, the guide. Frank Spaulding, Gladys' fiance, who discovers the girl in the guide's arms, becomes insanely jealous, but later when he and Gladys are attacked by bandits they are rescued, and Long and Spaulding become friends. The girl, who admires the guide for his strength, finds her lover a real man and a reconciliation takes place.

N. G. C.

The Fighting Four—Cub—November 19.—Featuring George Ovey. Jerry lands in jail and writes his sweetheart that he is holding down a government position. He manages to escape with his former cronies by a clever ruse and spies on the wayside an automobile belonging to a motion picture company, and they jump in and set out at full speed. They discover four suits of military costumes intended for use in the picture and don these. They start for Jerry's sweetheart's home, wiring ahead the news of their coming. Jerry and his cronies drive up to his sweetheart's home and they are given a hearty welcome. The motion picture director discovers the loss of his car and meeting the guards who are on the hunt for Jerry, the have little difficulty in tracing the escaped prisoners. Just when the reception is at its height the guards enter and the four escaped prisoners are captured and marched off to prison.

The Warning—(Two Reels)—Mustang—November 19.—Helene Rosson, E. Forest Taylor and Charles Newton are the principals in this typical two-reel western melodrama, the scenes of which are laid in the cattle country of Arizona. John Graham and his daughter Bessie take up a homestead, much to the disgust of the cattle men in the country, who threaten him to leave under penalty of being attacked. Fred Merrill, who lives nearby, assists Bessie and her father in standing off the cattle men in a sensational battle, and later wins the respect of the cow punchers by proving his bravery in rescuing Bessie when she is kidnapped and taken over the border into Mexico. N. G. C.

Anita's Butterfly—BEAUTY—NOVEMBER 20.—Neva Gerber and Frank Borzage are featured in this one-reel picture dealing with the efforts of Jack's Uncle to compel the boy to marry a girl the uncle has picked out for him. Jack, already in love with Anita, insists upon marrying the girl of his own choice, and later, to be near her, seeks employment as her father's gardener. When Anita's father loses his home Jack buys in the house, and later when an attempt is made to buy the house back he refuses to give up the deed until the uncle permits him to marry Anita. When Jack's uncle is called upon to assist in getting the house back, he learns with surprise that Jack is already engaged to the very girl he has picked out for him to marry. N. G. C.

Beauty in Distress—CASINO—NOVEMBER 21.—Freckles are the bane of Mrs. Devere's life. Mr. Devere is called out of town and his wife phones for the beauty doctor. While the doctor is working over Mrs. Devere with odd tools and plenty of sticking plaster, a knock is heard at the door. Devere has missed his train and returned. Armed with a revolver, Devere breaks in, and his wife, terrified, hides the doctor in a trunk, but a sneeze gives him away. Then follows a duel, and the husband and wife chase the beauty doctor until he takes refuge in the grounds of an insane asylum. There he is seized by the guards, for he proves to be an escaped patient. This paves the way for a quick reconciliation between husband and wife.

Universal Program

Universal Animated Weekly No. 192—UNIVERSAL—NOVEMBER 10.—Many injured when flames envelop large factory at Brooklyn, N. Y.; Captain Streeter runs only Sunday saloon in state on land given him by United States in Chicago; whiskey still costs its owners long jail terms, Fort Smith, Ark.; Olive Whitman christens first flying boat for New York State Naval Militia; water carnival at San Francisco, Calif.; Governor Elliott W. Major takes flight in champion balloon, St. Louis, Mo.; Chicago University defeats University of Wisconsin, 14-13, Chicago, Ill.; latest fashions; Joe Callahan, walking across United States with Universal banner, meets Iowa's governor, Des Moines, Ia.; Captain A. C. Thomsen, knighted by two kings on ending 1,600,000 miles as captain, arrives in Hoboken, N. J.; London, England, honors firemen killed fighting blaze set by airship bombs.

A Looney Love Affair—NESTOR—NOVEMBER 15.—Billie is so vehement in refusing to have anything to do with the Duke (her parents' choice), that father takes her to an asylum, thinking she has lost her mind. Ray, on a bet, enters the asylum as a magazine writer and is assigned to a bunk among the "lunies." Ray runs across Billie and they finally learn each other's identity. The next day the Duke calls upon Billie and Ray acts so "luny" that the Duke flees in fear of his life. The couple then decide to escape from the place and get married. This they do with a great deal of difficulty and just as the guards are about to apprehend them, Ray and the girl roll off in the auto of a friend.

Bill's Plumber and Plumber's Bill—IMP—NOVEMBER 15.—Willie Pepper and his wife quarrel over Willie's insistence on taking a bath after breakfast is served. Willie, in a tantrum, breaks the key in the bathroom door, locking himself in, and smashes a water connection. When the water starts to flood the room, Willie finds himself locked in. He forgets his domestic rumpus and appeals to his wife for aid. Slim Hoover, the plumber, and his assistant, Casey, arrive after many delays. As the two are about to rescue Willie from the water, which is now over Willie's head, the noon whistle blows, and Slim and his man quit work. Mrs. Willie and Sallie Sloppus, her slavey, finally fish Willy out through the transom with a pair of ice tongs. Slim presents a bill of real plumber proportions, and then things happen to him and his assistant.

Manna—(TWO REELS)—GOLD SEAL—NOVEMBER 16.—Nell, a sweet young working girl, and her crippled sister live in a tenement house room. Gradually a romance develops between Nell and the young doctor who lives nearby. Dora, originates the idea of writing little verses from the Bible and dropping them from her window during the tedious hours of the day. These little messages reach many people contemplating, or in the act of evil itself, and lead them to forsake wrong doing. Nell is caught in the trap of a band of procurers, but marvelously escapes through the influence that one of her sister's little Scriptural quotations has on a member of the band. The paper has fallen and caught on the hat of this member while she was passing under the tenement window. Ultimately, through the financial help of a rich widow, Dora's deformity is cured, while Nell and the young doctor realize their fondest hopes in love.

Li'l Nor'wester—(THREE REELS)—VICTOR—NOVEMBER 17.—With Mary Fuller, Paul Panzer and

Ralph Belmont. Little Nor'wester is a charming girl that has grown up in the rough and hardy element of a fishing community. There are two brothers among the fishermen, Silent Jim, a big quiet youth, and Jack, who is light-hearted. Both are in love with Little Nor'wester, but Jim is very reserved, and the girl never dreams he loves her, although in her heart she loves the great, silent Jim. As both brothers have kept Beppo, the Greaser, from insulting the girl, he is bent on revenge. Noticing the late hour that Jack emerges from the girl's cabin, he starts a scandal among the fishermen. Jim urges his brother to marry Little Nor'wester at once. Not daring to think of himself, he also urges the girl to marry Jack, and, at last, caring not what happens to her, as Jim has not guessed her secret, she listlessly consents. Some time later, on the beach, Jim sees Nor'wester ascending the rocks to get a flower for a little child. He knows the danger of the climb, and tries to stop her, but, full of defiance and indifference, she presses upward. While trying to cut her off, Jim falls and is badly hurt. During his convalescence it at last dawns upon him that the girl loves him. Jack then admits that he has not been blind and has guessed the truth for a long while. Thus Little Nor'wester ultimately marries Jim.

Disguised, But Discovered—L-KO—NOVEMBER 17.—Papa has told his bride that he is childless, whereas in reality he has a full-grown daughter. Likewise, the bride's family tree is well supplied in Hank, a twenty-five-year-old son. She has also posed as childless. When papa brings his bride home his daughter poses as the maid, and Hank, in order to be near his love, takes up the duties of butler. Hank doesn't know his mother is married, and when he sees a strange old gink kissing her, he naturally makes inquiries. Also, mother catches her husband kissing the maid, and is naturally peeved, not knowing it is his daughter. Things fall from bad to worse, and the climax arrives when Hank hides under the bed with a lady. How they all get out alive is more or less of a conundrum.

The King of Destiny—(TWO REELS)—REX—NOVEMBER 18.—Jack and Dolly, his sister, live together in the West. On Jack's birthday, Dolly presents him with a peculiar ring. Jack is later murdered in a fight with a cattle rustler. The rustler "cleans" out Jack's pockets, and makes his escape in spite of the posse which pursues him. Dolly, very bitter because of her brother's murder, determines to run down the assassin. She sets out, disguised as a cowboy, and finally runs the man to earth in a saloon. The birthday ring identifies the man and in the ensuing struggle, Dolly's hair falls down and her sex is revealed. The fight is stopped, the rustler taken to the sheriff, and Dolly offered the job of bossing the ranch of Big Bill, who has befriended her during her "cowboy" days.

Blood Heritage—(THREE REELS)—IMP—NOVEMBER 19.—Because Ethel prefers Richard to his brother, Bruce, a young blood expert and scientist, there is a jealous quarrel between the two brothers. In the town where Richard is to obtain a position, he is attacked by thugs and his skull fractured. The thugs throw his suitcase into the river. He is taken to the hospital, and for weeks no one knows his identity. When the suitcase is found and an accident card specifies that Bruce is to be notified, the brother gives Richard up for dead, thinking that after the quarrel he ended his life. Ethel and Bruce, having pity in common, soon become engaged. At last Richard regains his reason and leaves the institution. He visits the house of the man who made him the offer of a position, and is admitted by a man who has just committed a murder. In the struggle, Richard is stabbed and the servant points him out to the police as the culprit. For good reasons Richard hides his identity. The district attorney engages Bruce to make tests of

6B 6B

EFFICIENCY

IS born of hard labor and study—and wisdom which profits by experience, it is also the result of ceaseless thought and research by a master mind.
Motion Picture Projecting Machines of Power's manufacture represent the highest degree of efficiency, possess many exclusive features and are recognized as superior by a large majority of the entire trade.

AWARDS

American Museum of Safety, - - Gold Medal, 1913
American Museum of Safety, - - Grand Prize, 1914
Panama-Pacific International Exposition, Grand Prize, 1915

HELD BY

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY
NINETY GOLD STREET, NEW YORK CITY

6B 6B

Tell me how long your throw is, the size of your house and what size picture you want and I'll tell you

The Screen You Ought to Have

We make Rembusch Patented Glass Mirror Screens. Glass transparent screens for rear projection and all kinds of cloth curtains for motion picture projection. Gold fibre screens. Silver fibre screens. Mirror cloth screens. White opaque screens. Seamless, with stretchers or rollers. Mirrors of all kinds and re-silvering. Poster frames.

FRANK J. REMBUSCH, Pres.
MIRROR SCREEN CO., Shelbyville, Ind.

Mr. Exhibitor:

We can convince you that the

Bartola Orchestra

is superior to any other for your Theatre. Give us a chance. Write for catalogue.

Sold on Easy Terms

Bartola Musical Instrument Co.

Chas. C. Pyle, General Sales Agent
710-711 Mallers Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Factory: Oshkosh, Wisconsin

the blood found in the room of the murder. It is through the evidence obtained by the blood test and the establishment of Richard's identity by his brother, that Richard is freed. Bruce then releases Ethel so that she may wed Richard, her childhood sweetheart.

The Heart of a Tigress—(Three Reels)—Bison—November 20.—Mrs. Grace Haverty is a collector of wild animals. While in Africa the widow stays at James Lestrange's ranch and he is soon passionately in love with her. She purchases two tigers from Jack Williams, who has been hunting in India. Grace, Helen Monroe, Jack and Lestrange sail in a private yacht for the widow's estate in California. The theme of the story is based upon Grace's love for Jack, his indifference toward her and love for Helen, her secretary, and Lestrange's disappointed love for Grace. The widow goes to greater lengths than Lestrange in satisfying the demands of an inflated jealousy and nearly succeeds in having Helen torn to shreds by her pet tiger. But ultimately Grace is overcome by one of her own beasts and sinks below the water under her balcony in its clutches. The romance of Jack and Helen ends happily.

Wanted—A Leading Lady—Nestor—November 9.—The director arrives just in time with the new leading lady to save the company from disruption. It is a fight between Eddie and Lee to make a hit with the newcomer. Eddie is "Johnny on the spot" and starts to take the girl to the studio for the first morning's work in his car. But the car is feeling indifferent and when it breaks down, along comes Lee and takes the girl in with him. Eddie, the hero, and Lee, the villain, get into a quarrel during the taking of the picture and break up the set. At last Gus, the smallest actor of the lot, walks off with the girl, and Eddie and Lee pledge their friendship anew.

Chills and Chickens—Joker—November 20.—Mr. Chaser is a chicken chaser in the fullest sense of the word. Noticing that a nearby hospital harbors some pretty nurses. Chaser decides to get into the hospital at all costs. He tries in many ways to hurt himself, but his courage fails. Finally throwing a fit has the desired effect and Chaser is soon in the hospital, watched over by one of the queenly nurses. But the doctor sees beneath the ruse and sends for Chaser's wife, who comes disguised as a homely nurse. Added to this. Chaser is forced to eat crackers and water while the patient next to him eats fried chicken. Chaser is shortly cured of "chickenitis" and returns home to a reckoning with his wife.

Ready for Reno—L-KO—NOVEMBER 21.—Peeved at his wife, husband goes over and gets social with a strange lady on a park bench. This lady has a husband with a hair-trigger temper. He puts a couple of slaps on Hubby's proboscis for good measure. This physical warning is further exemplified when husband's wife and the other wife's husband find themselves in a very embarrassing position and the champion slapper persists in beating up the husband, thinking that he is punishing a chronic flirt. Later the wrong husband and the wrong wife find themselves under the glare of publicity through an unfortunate accident on the telephone wires. In fact, the whole affair is one unfortunate thing after another, and the only person who is not ready for Reno is a policeman. This individual is burned by hot telephone wires while attempting to rescue husband and wife.

The Mystery of the Locked Room—(THREE REELS) — REX — NOVEMBER 21. — Featuring Ben Wilson and Dorothy Phillips. Richard Hardy, the private secretary to Mr. Harmon, a retired banker, is in love with Ruth, his daughter. Francis Gerard, a young broker, arrives with bonds of the Belleville Water Company, for which he obtains a check from Harmon, giving him in return a promissory note, and leaving the bonds as security for the loan. Hardy puts the bonds into the safe, entering the transaction in a memorandum. Hardy and Ruth are engaged in secret. The butler has given his gang the floor plan of the house, and that night the burglars try to get into the library. Harmon is awakened, however, and the thieves make a hasty exit. At a reception Hardy takes Ruth into the library and threatens to kill Gerard if he does not desist from his attentions to her, but Ruth soon reassures him and they embrace just as Harmon enters. Harmon rages and sends his daughter out of the room. Then, seeing that the guests have been aroused by the family row, he slams the door and locks it. Shortly after, shots are heard, and the banker is found dead. Gerard enters with a policeman, and the butler phones for detectives. It is then found that the bonds are missing. The evidence is strong against Hardy, but the clever way he is exonerated, and the real murderer, Gerard, is caught, comprises the rest of the story.

Feature Programs

Mutual Master-Pictures

The End of the Road—(FIVE REELS)—AMERICAN.—A splendid adaptation of a well known novel produced with spectacular realism by Thomas Ricketts. A complete review of this release appears on page 1028 of issue of November 13.

Inspiration—(FIVE REELS)—THANHOUSER—NOVEMBER 18.—Audry Munson, the famous artists' model, plays the leading role in this story of the studios and poses in the nude for an artist's inspiration. The picture, however, is not in any sense suggestive or disgraceful, and in many respects is positively educational. A full review appears on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

North American

The American Earl—(CHAPTER 30 OF "THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY") — (TWO REELS) — AMERICAN.—This ends the serial that has been running for thirty weeks. It closes with the birth of a son and heir to Arthur Stanley and the securing of evidence that this babe is the rightful heir to the Stanley fortune in England, also to the earldom, and consequently entitled to inherit "The Diamond From the Sky." A full review appears on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

Paramount

The Masqueraders—FAMOUS PLAYERS.—Featuring Hazel Dawn in this adaptation of Henry Arthur Jones' celebrated drama. Dulcie Larondie is

"BUILT BY BRAINS"

MINUSA

You Can't Show a Beautiful Film on a Poor Screen.

When you buy a Minusa Screen you don't merely buy it by the square foot. Minusa Screens are "BUILT BY BRAINS" to suit all the particular requirements of YOUR particular theatre.

Write for our literature

Minusa Cine Products Co.

St. Louis, Mo. Houser Building
Calgary, Canada Grand Theatre Bldg.
San Francisco 117-19 Golden Gate Ave.
New York 19 W. 23rd St.
Chicago 154 West Lake St.
Pittsburg 422 First Ave.

THE TALK OF THE MOTION PICTURE FIELD
Goes POSTERS
POST THEM AND PACK YOUR THEATRE
GOES—CHICAGO

WILLIAM FOX PRESENTS

Miss Nance O'Neil

America's Greatest Emotional Actress

IN

A WOMAN'S PAST

5 REELS

Released November 15th

Adapted and directed by

Frank Powell

thrown upon her own resources and earns her living as a barmaid at the Stagg Inn. She becomes infatuated with the wealthy Sir Brice Skene and marries him. Sir Brice proves himself unworthy of her. He is murdered by a man who was his enemy with just cause. Dulcie finds happiness with David Remon, who has proven that his love for her is sincere. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Pathe

Pathe News No. 89—PATHE—NOVEMBER 6.—U. S. Department of Agriculture show at Washington, D. C.; owing to allies' governments declaring cotton contraband of war, thousands of bales awaiting shipment are lying in the streets of Augusta, Ga.; Pathe American fashions; testing big gun at famous American munition plant; super-dreadnaught Nevada beats contract speed by making twenty-one knots an hour on her trials before acceptance by the U. S. Government; Mrs. Tom Thumb celebrates her seventy-fourth year by unveiling tablet to her ancestors, a Mayflower passenger; Horatio Bottomly, who gained fame by his trenchant criticisms of the British Government, now assists it by appealing for recruits, London, England; American troops are rushed to prevent violation of U. S. soil at Douglas, Ariz.; Edward Swann, newly elected district attorney for New York, prepares to take up his new duties.

Nedra—(FIVE REELS)—PATHE—NOVEMBER 12.—Produced by Edward Jose and for release on the Gold Rooster Program, this excellently presented adaption from the novel by George Barr McCutcheon features George Probert in a cast that includes Fania Marinoff, Margaret Greene and Crawford Kent. The wealthy Hugh Ridgway and Grace Vernon determine to elope. Circumstances force them to take refuge on a ship, and when they come from their hiding place they find that they are at sea. A shipwreck serves to part them. Hugh and Lady Tenny are washed ashore on the island of "Nedra," which is inhabited by savages. They are made rulers by the natives. Rescued by a visiting ship they return to New York, where Hugh learns that Grace has married Henry Veath. It is a blow to his pride, but he is in love with Lady Tenny and welcomes the opportunity to marry her. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

A Trap for Trapp — (TWO REELS) — PATHE.—Episode No. 6 in the "New Adventures of Wallingford" series, with Max Figman, Lolita Robertson and Burr McIntosh in the cast. Wallingford has an idea that is worth a neat sum, but he must find a "goat" to buy him out before the postal authorities get after him. Louis Trapp, who is on Violet's list, crosses his path and boasts that he is as rich as Wallingford, for he is worth $50,000, which is the exact sum Wallingford expects to sell his proposition for. The business is started and the advertisements assuring investors that they will receive large dividends from money invested with the Trapp Investment Company, Wallingford having paid Trapp for the use of his name, bring in wads of bills in every mail. Trapp offers to buy the business for $50,000, and shortly after doing so is put under arrest by federal officers. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Neal of the Navy—(TWO REELS)—PATHE-BALBOA.—Chapter 11, entitled "The Dreadful Pit." Annette and Mrs. Hardin set out for the Mission of Santa Maria in the hope of obtaining there the original grant to Lost Island. Hernandez causes their delay and arrives at the mission first. The Abbot refuses to decide on the moment and advises Hernandez and Inez, who claims to be Annette Illington, to return on the morrow. From the coast town Annette journeys alone to the mission. She is attacked by Ponto, who plans a dreadful end for her. The Brute, who shows little intelligence in other matters, saves her, and in the struggle with Ponto kills him. The following day Hernandez is about to be presented with the grant when Annette is carried in by the Brute. The opportune arrival of Neal and a number of sailors saves the chart. Hernandez escapes. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

The Adventures of a Madcap—(FOUR REELS)—PATHE-BALBOA.—A heart interest comedy-drama in natural colors faturing Jackie Saunders as Jean, the orphaned country girl who sells flowers to tourists. She is adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Gordon, society people. Tiring of society life, she leaves the Gordon home and joins a band of gypsies. The chief's son falls in love with Jean and forces his attentions upon her. The climatic scene is a struggle between her and the gypsy. She is rescued by her country lover and reunited with her foster parents.

His Conquered Self—(THREE REELS)—PATHE-BALBOA.—Jackie Saunders featured. The cast also includes Lewis J. Cody. Jack Brunslow, a libertine, is attracted to Agnes Jefferson and he urges his mistress to arrange a meeting. Florence becomes acquainted with the girl and introduces Brunslow. When he learns that she is engaged to Carlisle Gates, he sets about involving the young lawyer in a scandal, which results in a termination of the engagement. Brunslow is an attractive person and Agnes falls in love with him. He has a slight quarrel with her and tells her that if she ever wishes to see him again she must come to him. Florence learns that the girl is going to visit the apartment and informs the Reverend Brown. Together they go to Brunslow's apartment and on arriving there are told by Brunslow that he has asked Agnes to marry him and she has accepted him.

Pathe News No. 88—PATHE—NOVEMBER 3.—Work on new headquarters of American Federation of Labor begun in Washington, D. C.; Edmond von Kaenel climbs along three-quarter inch steel cable 250 feet above ground without any tackle or support, Chicago, Ill.; Americans enlisted in the Canadian Scottish Highlanders have final parade before departing for the front, Montreal, Canada; $5,000 worth of intoxicating liquors are seized from a violator of the anti-saloon law and emptied into the gutter at Nashville, Tenn.; steam freighter Colorado, after burning at sea for five days, is brought into port at Charleston, S. C.; Pacific Northwest Model Aero Club holds waterplane contest at Green Lake, Seattle, Wash.; showing the inside of a large munition factory; children take part in Hallowe'en masked carnival at Arlington Avenue Playground, Newark, N. J.

Universal Special

Colorado — (FIVE REELS) — UNIVERSAL — NOVEMBER 15.—Hobart Bosworth and Anna Lehr are featured in this adaptation of Augustus Thomas' play entitled "Colorado." A full review appears on another page of this issue.

V. L. S. E. Inc.

The Raven—(SIX REELS)—ESSANAY—NOVEMBER 8.—Featuring Henry B. Walthall and Warda Howard. Edgar Allan Poe is ordered from the house of his father and shortly after marries, and in trying to make a living by writing proves a financial failure. His wife dies because he cannot supply her with even the bare necessities of life, and he is plunged into great grief and despair. Later the spirit of his wife appears, and he finally dies himself and is wafted to heights supernal, where he is united to his "Lenore." For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

Sweet Alyssum—(FIVE REELS)—SELIG—NOVEMBER 15.—Featuring Tyrone Power. The story of a father's love for his little girl, whose mother had years before taken the primrose path with another man and, when discovered, killed herself. Later the son of the man who had been the cause of the woman's downfall meets the daughter and falls in love with her, and many interesting incidents follow. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

World

The Cowardly Way—(FIVE REELS)—WORLD.—A production in which mystic elements and modern business life are oddly compounded. It deals with the life of Eunice Fielding, daughter of wealthy parents, who marries Jack Harcourt, a wealthy business man. Later, unable to face poverty, she commits suicide and this drives her husband insane. Eunice's spirit, however, hovers over him continually and is finally the means of his making a success in life. For a longer review see another page of this issue. T. C. K.

Triangle Program

Released the Week of November 7th.

The Lamb—(FIVE REELS)—FINE ARTS.—Douglar Fairbanks and Seena Owens featured. The story deals with Gerald who, because of his mother's love and indulgence, shows a yellow streak. He loves pretty Mary, but she jilts him. He later comes to himself, and after settling a combat with seven Indians, he rescues Mary from them and later they are married. For a longer review see page 785 of the issue of October 16th.

The Iron Strain—(SIX REELS)—TRIANGLE-KAY-BEE.—Featuring Enid Markey and Dustin Farnum. A study in feminine psychology telling the story of a man with all the characteristics of an ancient caveman selecting his mate and the young, overcivilized girl who wages a losing fight against discarding her false ideals of culture and conventionality, and finally stands revealed all woman—primitive, glorious and true. For a longer review see page 785 of the issue of October 16th.

My Valet—(THREE REELS)—KEYSTONE.—Featuring Raymond Hitchcock and Mabel Normand. A bachelor goes west to see his fiancee and before he arrives there he has his faithful valet change clothes, characters and personalities with him and shifts to the poor valet all responsibilities to his western fiancee. Many side-splitting incidents occur, but all is finally cleared up. For a longer review see page 785 of the October 16th issue.

A Game Old Knight—(TWO REELS)—TRIANGLE-KEYSTONE.—Featuring Charles Murray. In this production the old knight leads a wandering life, accompanied by his valet. The two finally meet the daughters of King Mike XII, the ugly princess and the pretty princess. They are tortured until the knight, being a knight and a game one, is nothing if not chivalrous, and so marries the ugly princess. For a longe rreview see page 785 of the October 16th issue.

Released Week of November 14th.

Old Heidelberg—(FIVE REELS)—FINE ARTS.—Featuring Wallace Reid and Dorothy Gish. Differences in position interrupts the love dream of Prince Karl and Kathie. The prince returns to his country and there is urged to enter war, but he refuses, and after going into the streets to ascertain the attitude of his people toward war, finds that their sentiment is in accord with his own and, therefore, he holds out for peace. For a longer review see page 865 of the issue of October 23rd.

The Coward—(FIVE REELS)—TRIANGLE-KAY-BEE. Featuring Frank Keenan in the story of a father of a so-called coward, whose son cannot rid himself of a fear of war. He deserts his army in the night and the father, learning of this, shoulders his gun and takes his place in the ranks. The cowardly son, later realizing the enormity of his conduct, holds up a room full of generals, steals their plans and makes a dash for the Confederate lines. For a longer review see page 865 of the issue of October 23rd.

The Stolen Magic—(TWO REELS)—TRIANGLE-KEYSTONE.—Featuring Raymond Hitchcock as an "ophidologist." He later arrives from India and goes to a fashionable reception as an entertainer, where he more than fills the bill. For a longer review see page 865 of the issue of October 23rd.

A Favorite Fool — (TWO REELS) — TRIANGLE-KEYSTONE.—Featuring Eddie Foy. Foy appears as a son of rest and loses his heart at sight of a captivating widow. He marries her and soon learns he has also married seven ingenious, original, good-natured, rollicking offsprings. What was the fool to do? He deserts his ship and endeavors to return to a life void of responsibilities. For a longer review see page 865 of the issue of October 23rd.

HEADQUARTERS
FOR MOVING PICTURE CAMERAS
TRIPODS
PRINTERS, ETC.
PATHE, MOY & PRESTWICK
GOODS, ALWAYS IN STOCK
MOTION PICTURE APPARATUS CO., INC.
810 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY, N.Y.

MOTOGRAPHY

The MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

ELEANOR WOODRUFF
WITH VITAGRAPH

Photograph by
UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, NOVEMBER 27, 1915 No. 22

LUBIN

VALENTINE GRANT
IN
"THE TAINT"
THREE ACT DRAMA
RELEASED WED, DEC. 1ST

MONDAY, NOV. 29TH
"THE LEGEND OF THE POISONED POOL"
ONE ACT DRAMA

TUESDAY, NOV. 30TH
D.L. DON COMEDY
"WHICH IS WHICH"
ONE ACT

FRIDAY, DEC. 3RD
"WITH STOLEN MONEY"
ONE ACT DRAMA

SATURDAY, DEC. 4TH
BILLIE REEVES COMEDY
"AND THE PARROT SAID--?"
ONE ACT

L.C. SHUMWAY
IN
"THE SILENT MAN"
TWO ACT DRAMA
RELEASED THURSDAY, DEC. 2ND

GENERAL FILM
LUBIN
RELEASES

The Public Will Pay for Triangle Quality

When the Triangle Plan of continuing the greatest producers of motion picture drama with immense resources, and the pick of players was announced, the claim was made that the public had been so long educated to cheap prices that no patronage for better drama could be looked for.

Like many another opinion based on past performances it proved fallacious.

Good pictures and good theatrical offerings are not in separate classes. Motion pictures are not doomed to the ten cent environment—provided they are of the regular theatre quality. The trend of motion picture drama is upward.

A New York theatrical manager is advertising that one scene in his play is of the strength of a great film drama.

The proof—

Richmond, Brooklyn, Norfolk, Louisville, Cleveland, Columbus are offering Triangle Plays at the standard theatric scale. The public patronizes these for the same reason it buys government bonds. They're of a definite proved value.

A film play that costs sixty or a hundred thousand dollars to produce deserves and commands attention. Triangle Plays are of that character—not occasionally, but continually.

TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION
71 WEST 23rd ST. NEW YORK

One of the big scenes in "Jordan is a Hard Road," a Triangle-Fine Arts adaptation of Sir Gilbert Parker's famous story featuring Frank Campeau.

MOTOGRAPHY

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED THE NICKELODEON

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, NOVEMBER 27, 1915 No. 22

Berst Chosen President of General Film

ASSUMES NEW DUTIES IMMEDIATELY

AT A MEETING of the General Film Company held in New York City last week J. J. Kennedy tendered his resignation as president of the organization and at a special meeting called immediately thereafter J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of the Selig Polyscope Company, was elected president of the General Film Company. Mr. Berst, in taking up the duties of both president and general manager of the distributing organization, accepted the resignation of P. L. Waters, general manager during Mr. Kennedy's tenure of office. J. A. Berst left Chicago for New York City this week to enter actively upon his new duties as president of the General Film Company, his new work making it necessary that he resign as vice president and general manager of the Selig Polyscope Company. William N. Selig, president of the Selig Company, has again assumed active control of the company's affairs, with offices in Chicago and Los Angeles.

J. A. Berst.

"It is with regret that I sever my connection with the Selig Company," stated Mr. Berst in an interview before leaving for New York City. "My relations with Mr. Selig have been most congenial and his co-operation has been given me at all times. It was only after I obtained the consent of Mr. Selig that I finally concluded to take up the new duties forced upon me by the members of General Film."

Mr. Selig has issued this statement: "It was with extreme reluctance that I finally gave my consent to Mr. Berst's election as president of the General Film Company. There was a unanimous opinion that Mr. Berst was the man for the office and I felt it my duty to accede to the urgings of my conferees. Since Mr. Berst joined the Selig Company, our business and social relations have been beneficial and congenial, and the Selig Company has prospered under Mr. Berst's able direction. There is no man in the film business today who has a more thorough knowledge of the business and technical affairs of the industry than J. A. Berst. His leaving to become executive head of the General Film Company I consider a distinct acquistion to that company, and Mr. Berst will accomplish beneficial work.

"I think," continued Mr. Selig, "that the forthcoming releases of the Selig Company, both through General Film and V. L. S. E., will cause the picture-play world to sit up and take notice. We have a number of exceptionally strong single and multiple reel comedies and dramas, and our Red Seal Plays of the future will surpass in general excellence those released in the past, if that be possible. We have centered our producing forces for the time being at the Los Angeles studio, but expect to reopen our Chicago studios when plans now under way are completely formulated."

J. L. & S. TO RUN STUDEBAKER

Chicago Home of Triangle Photoplays, Beginning November 29, Returns to Old Management, but Show Continues

The Triangle Film Corporation, which is engaged in producing film-plays by Griffith, Ince and Sennett, three of the greatest geniuses of the motion picture world, and renting these plays to its customers, the motion picture exhibitors and theater managers throughout the country, has demonstrated the practicability of the plan of conducting the Studebaker theater in Chicago as a high-class playhouse devoted to Triangle film-plays exclusively. Such demonstration was its sole object in entering the exhibition field.

Beginning Monday, November 29, the Studebaker theater will again revert to the management of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, who will continue to exhibit Triangle plays, which have achieved such favorable commendation in Chicago, exactly as they have been shown during the management by the Triangle Film Corporation.

The performance, however, will be continuous from eleven in the morning until eleven at night, with all seats for matinees at twenty-five cents, and evenings at twenty-five and fifty cents. A symphony orchestra of twenty-five will furnish music, and the same excellent standard of motion pictures established by Griffith, Ince and Sennett will be maintained. Louis

J. Jones, who has represented Jones, Linick & Schaefer for the past two years at the Studebaker, will take charge of the house.

Motion picture exhibitors and theater managers in Chicago have brought considerable pressure to bear upon the Triangle Film Corporation to have the Studebaker re-leased to one of their number, on the ground that it is commercially unethical for a distributing corporation to engage in competition with its customers. Granting this, arrangements have been made with the Jones, Linick & Schaefer interests whereby, on the payment of a substantial bonus, they will conduct the theater under the successful policy inaugurated by the Triangle Film Corporation; the only change being that the management will be entirely local. A similar arrangement has been made with regard to the Chestnut Street Opera House in Philadelphia, which, on Monday, November 22, reverts to its former management, the B. F. Keith interests.

In spite of the fact that, since the first showing of Triangle plays throughout the country, Messrs. Griffith, Ince and Sennett have endeavored to co-operate in every manner possible with the censors, and to produce plays acceptable in every way, a rumor has reached Mr. Griffith, at his studios in California, that he has said he would make pictures without regard for censorship. This rumor has met with denial in the form of the following telegram to C. F. Hately, who represents the executive board of the Triangle Film Corporation in Chicago:

It has been reported to me that a rumor has been given out that I had said I would make pictures without regard to censorship. I wish to brand this as absolutely false, and I wish you would, knowing my work as you do, set me right with the people of Chicago. Naturally, knowing that there are boards of censors in every state in the Union, and it being my business to make moving pictures for the people of these states, it is hardly likely that I would make such a ridiculous statement.

Trusting that you will use your best efforts to right this wrong which has been done me and my associates, Messrs. Ince and Sennett, I beg to remain,

Yours most sincerely,

D. W. Griffith.

LASKY POLICY OUTLINED

Big Company Will Concentrate on Modern Plays With Tense Dramatic Themes, Believing Public Wants Such Offerings

As the result of months of careful investigation, and a close and expert study of motion picture exhibiting and the photoplay-going public, the Lasky Company, by reason of its findings, will concentrate for the present on photoplays of modern theme and tense dramatic action.

It is stated from the New York office of the big producing company that forthcoming releases through Paramount Pictures Corporation will sustain this announcement. At the Lasky studios in Hollywood, Cal., nearly all the plays at present in course of production under the supervision of Cecil B. DeMille, come within the classification of tense, modern dramas.

Judging from the photoplay features which the Lasky company will release during the latter part of November and December the public demand for screen entertainment is away from the costume and romantic play and towards the modern theme with real live men and women portrayed by the characters. This does not mean that there is any effort to curtail romance—far from it—because there ever will remain romantic elements in modern and present day life sufficient to satisfy the most sentimental audiences.

What present day audiences are said most to enjoy are photoplays in which the spectators themselves may see men and women of their own kind on the screen.

"Armstrong's Wife," in which Miss Edna Goodrich appears as the star on November 18, for her debut on the screen, is said to be an excellent example of the kind of subject material for photodramas which the Lasky Feature Play Company believes is in most demand at the present time. It is modern, its story is the narrative of a woman who chooses unfortunately between two men. Unhappiness becomes her lot; she is befriended by her disappointed suitor, given by him a new opportunity for happiness and eventually becomes his wife, following a series of melodramatic situations replete with the element of suspense and drama.

Following "Armstrong's Wife" the Lasky company will release through Paramount on November 22 a comedy entitled, "Chimmie Fadden Out West," produced by Cecil De Mille, the theme of which also is entirely modern.

Probably nothing could so well illustrate the Lasky policy in photoplay themes as the releases announced for December, of which there are four. This will mark the first month of the second quarter year of the Paramount program. The productions are Theodore Roberts in a picturization of E. Phillips Oppenheim's "Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo"; Fannie Ward in "The Cheat," by Hector Turnbull; Lou-Tellegen in "The Unknown," founded on I. A. E. Wylie's novel, "The Red Mirage," and Valeska Suratt in Marion Fairfax's original play, "The Immigrant."

Selznick Signs Kitty Gordon

Miss Kitty Gordon, one of the most noted of beautiful Englishwomen and a highly accomplished actress, has been engaged by Lewis J. Selznick, vice president and general manager of the World Film Corporation, for the forthcoming production of "As in a Looking Glass." The speaking drama of this name was played in this country and England by Mrs. Langtry and Mrs. Bernard Beere in hot rivalry when both actresses were in their prime.

The story, which first appeared in book form, was written by the well known English novelist, F. C. Phillips, and created a great sensation in Europe and America. Its central character was a fascinating and heartless adventuress who toyed with the affections of many male victims until she finally fell desperately in love with a young gentleman into whose society she was thrown. This new lover at first reciprocated her affection, but when the true career of his beautiful consort became known to him, he spurned her, and she took her own life, brokenhearted.

Miss Gordon has been prominently identified with the American stage for the past five or six years. She has appeared as the star of several very successful musical comedies playing in every part of the country, so that she is exceedingly well known to the general public. She is also one of the most widely photographed beauties of the present time. Her most recent engagements were with Oliver Morosco and the Messrs. Shubert.

In private life Miss Gordon is the wife of Captain Beresford of the English army.

A COUNTRY-WIDE PROPAGANDA

Vitagraph's Famous "Battle Cry of Peace" Film Is Now Presenting Its Message the Country Over—Endorsed by Notables

In response to the urging of prominent men in all parts of the United States, the famous patriotic screen message on preparedness, "The Battle Cry of Peace," has been released under special arrangements by V. L. S. E., Inc., in ten cities.

Prompted by their sympathy with the important subject which this great film play portrays, leading figures in the theatrical world have joined with business captains, government officials and other classes of representative leaders, in bringing the picture message before the public in the most forcible manner.

In New York City, "The Battle Cry of Peace" on November 13, rounded out the one hundred and thirty-fourth performance, at the Vitagraph theater. Runs of a similar length have already been arranged in other large cities, in theaters of tremendous seating capacity. These include the Olympic theater, Chicago; the Majestic, Boston; the Metropolitan Opera House, Philadelphia; the Columbia, San Francisco; the Metropolitan, Cleveland; Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo; the Colonial, Dayton, Ohio, and one of the large houses in Dallas, Texas.

The Vitagraph Company, producer of this picture, is itself exhibiting it in New York and Chicago. In the other centers, the leading showmen of those territories are in charge of its production, and are putting back of it a type of enterprise, initiative and a sense of public duty that is unique in the theatrical world. At the 4000-seat Metropolitan Opera House in Philadelphia, the picture is being produced under the personal direction of Lee Shubert. In Boston, Howard & Gordon, whose standing as theatrical managers in New England needs no comment, are managing the picture, having purchased the state rights for Massachusetts. Eugene Roth of the Portola theater, one of San Francisco's de luxe moving picture houses, was so impressed with the purpose of "The Battle Cry of Peace," that he rented a legitimate theater to produce it—the Columbia, seating 3,000 people. Emanuel Mandelbaum, one of the founders of the World Film Corporation, will show "The Battle Cry of Peace" in one of the finest houses in Cleveland, the Metropolitan.

In Dayton, Jules Hurtig of Hurtig & Seamon, New York, will produce the picture at the Colonial, a legitimate house with a 2,500 seating capacity; and in Buffalo, Michael Shea, the widely known theatrical figure of that section, will produce it at Shea's Hippodrome. The Chamber of Commerce of Dallas, Texas, appreciating, perhaps, more vividly the need of preparedness than the residents of other parts of the country, because of close proximity to the troublesome Mexican line, has undertaken the promotion of the picture in that city, and twelve prominent men have been appointed to secure the most desirable house in the city for its showing, and to insure the widest possible public knowledge of the picture. Rochester, N. Y., has also been decided upon as another exhibition center for "The Battle Cry of Peace," and there remains but the completion of a few details before it will open in that city.

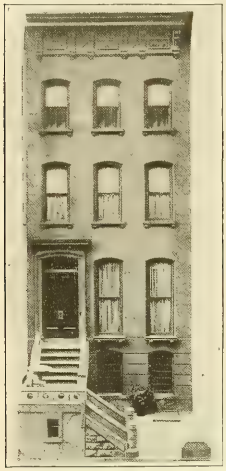
The reception accorded the picture in all of these places has even exceeded that which was given it in New York. In the middle west, where it was felt there was need for such propaganda especially, the production has aroused a tremendous wave of patriotism. In Boston—regarded as being super-critical—it has had the endorsement and the whole-souled support of the leading lights in every phase of the city's activities.

The list of personages who have put their seal of enthusiastic approval upon the picture, either direct or by mail, would read like a roster of America's "Who's Who." The attention which it is receiving undoubtedly will do much to raise the whole tone of the moving picture industry, and to create a higher impression of the scope and possibilities of the screen among a class of public leaders who have never fully appreciated the power of the film before. Patriotic societies throughout the country where this picture is being shown are attending it in bodies.

Edwin Arden with World

Edwin Arden, the actor who has been connected for many years with the very best traditions of the legitimate stage, is one of the recent recruits to the motion pictures. Mr. Arden is at present engaged with the World Film Corporation in the production of Charles Wadsworth Camp's detective story from the Saturday Evening Post. "The Grey Mask." He recently finished "The Beloved Vagabond" and "Simon the Jester," and before that played in the picture production of his own play, "The Eagle's Nest," and in the new "Exploits of Elaine."

Edwin Arden.



Edwin Arden is remembered for some of the most finished pieces of acting that the contemporary stage has ever known. His training began in Shakespearean roles with Edwin Booth and Thomas W. Keane, and he has since played in several all-star revivals of Shakespearean plays. For several years Mr. Arden headed a summer stock company in Washington, D. C. This company was noted for the excellence of its productions and for the calibre of its members. Many of the most widely known players of the stage went to Washington for the purpose of playing under the supervision of Mr. Arden.

Mr. Arden is known as a scholar and a writer, as well as an actor of exceptional ability. He has a wide following all over the United States who watch with great interest for the appearance of his pictures.

Dorothy Gwynne, who has been featured with the Famous Players and the Vitagraph Company in dramatic roles, has been engaged to play the part of "Virginia Dale" in "A Yellow Streak," a five part feature picture, now in production by the Rolfe Photo Plays Inc. for release on the regular Metro program.

Screen Club Ball This Week

The Screen Club ball last Thanksgiving evening at the Hotel Astor is supposed to have been the most classy theatrical event that has ever been given. It completely eclipsed any previous reception of any theatrical organization and was considered a master stroke on the part of those who planned it. In a financial way it also eclipsed any of the previous Screen Club dances, even though the price was advanced from $2.00 to $5.00.

The Screen Club

It is nearly time now for the next Screen Club ball, which will be the fourth annual occurrence of the event. Saturday, November 20, is the date and the Gold Ballroom, Hotel Astor, will once more be the scene of the most brilliant assemblage of motion picture actors and actresses of the year. If the tremendous success of last year's event is anything to go by, it can be said without question that a splendid evening is in store for those who attend this year's assemblage.

The general arrangements for the big affair are in the hands of a general committee of which King Baggott, the first president and founder of the Screen Club, is chairman. Jacob Gerhardt of the Dramatic Mirror is the treasurer, and Jules Burnstein is chairman of the seating arrangments. Nearly all the boxes have been subscribed for by prominent personages in the photoplay profession. The list of box-holders who have subscribed up to the present time is as follows:

New York Motion Picture Company, Ed Carewe, Frank Powell, Nicholas Power, James Kirkwood, William Farnum, Tom Terriss, William Quirk, Pathe Freres (2), Famous Players, S. G. Poppa, King Baggot, Ben Wilson, Solax, Harry R. Raver, World Film Corporation, Clara Kimball Young, Lewis J. Selznick, the Equitable, Metro (2), Peerless, Vitagraph, Marshall Farnum, Edward Roskam, J. C. Graham, William Fox, Edison Company, Gaumont Company, Thanhouser Company, Harry Myers, Louis Hall, Hugh Hoffman, A. P. Kelly, George Terwilliger, Thomas G. Wiley, Benjamin Goetz, Moving Picture World. Only three or four boxes remain unsold.

The floor committee will consist of the club's president, William Quirk, as chairman, and the newly elected officers of the club, Harry Myers, John Race, Harry Ennis, Robert E. Welsh, Hopp Hadley, Carl A. Willat, George De Carleton, Frank Powell, Robert Edeson, and Adam Kessel, Jr. There will be a number of additions to this committee, who will be appointed later.

Some unusual decorative schemes for the big hall are being worked out by Charles Greene and "Doc" Willat. They have let it be known that everyone will be surprised with the result that they expect to accomplish. Will C. Smith, assistant manager of the Nicholas Power Company, will, as usual, be in charge of the spot lights, illuminations, and the electrical end in general. William J. McKenna will select and arrange the musical numbers with the leader of the Hotel Astor orchestra. The music in the Hotel Astor main ballroom is always greatly helped by the fine organ that is installed in the orchestra balcony. The grand march will be led by Miss Clara Kimball Young and the club's new president, William Quirk.

Powell Goes to Equitable

Arthur H. Spiegel of the Equitable Motion Picture Corporation chanced to drop into the Hotel Sherman in Chicago one day last week and there discovered Director Frank Powell of the Fox organization, who was busy with his production of "The Fourth Estate," which is being entirely made in Chicago, with the co-operation of the Chicago Herald, whose city room and press rooms are to serve as the backgrounds for several of the big scenes in the play. Knowing Powell's fame as a producer, Spiegel immediately got busy, with the result that after a lengthy interview Mr. Powell's signature was attached to an Equitable contract, under the terms of which the genial Frank binds himself to become an Equitable director about December 1.

Mr. Powell, whose production of "A Fool There Was" proved to be the most sensational picture of its season, was responsible also for each of the film plays in which Nance O'Neill has appeared. Powell began his activities in theatricals as a stock director and actor. Five years ago he heard the call of the lens and took up motion picture acting. His powers of visualization so impressed his various employers that he soon became a director and now occupies a very prominent niche in that profession.

For the Equitable Corporation, Mr. Powell will devote his time to the production of original works from the pens of the various authors on the Equitable scenario staff.

"The Chain Invisible," which will be Powell's first vehicle and which, according to Richard Le Gallienne's foreword, should make a most startling and vivid subject, will be produced at the Fifty-second street studio in New York City.

With Mr. Powell at work, Equitable will have eight companies working and will fulfill, by February 15, its anticipation of having fifteen productions on the shelf and thus be enabled to diversify its program, as General Manager Felix F. Feist has long hoped to do.

Collier "Doubling in Brass"

William Collier, the distinguished comedian now in Los Angeles for the Triangle, is so in love with the films that he has consented to "double in brass." It will be remembered Collier went west to appear at the Keystone studios. A short time ago Thomas H. Ince talked with him and with Mack Sennett's approval prevailed upon Collier to divide his time between Keystone and Inceville. In the mornings Collier plays a characteristic slapstick Keystone comedy. Then about noon he hustles into an automobile, and the 20-mile trip to Mr. Ince's domain is made. While riding in the machine he changes the Keystone costume for the Inceville makeup. Arrived at the latter place, he enters the realm of "society play" humor, and continues at that job all afternoon.

SPOOR PROVIDING GYMNASIUM

Essanay's President, Believing Players Need to Keep in Physical Condition, Will Include "Gym" in New Studio Building.

One of the features of Essanay's new studio building, which now is rapidly going up, will be a completely equipped gymnasium. There will be a running track, and indoor tennis court, handball and squash courts and all the ordinary apparatus used in gymnasiums. George K. Spoor, president of Essanay, ordered this addition to the studio because he believes that the way to get the best work out of his players is to have them in the finest of physical condition. Every actor and actress will be encouraged to take regular physical exercise, though it will not be compulsory.

There will be a man and a woman instructor, certain hours being set off for the men and others for the women to use the gymnasium. Several large shower baths will be constructed on each side of the gymnasium, which will be open at all hours. There also will be a library and reading rooms as a general lounging place for players when not at work, so that they will not be confined to the necessarily limited space of a dressing room.

The main offices and directors' rooms will be on the second floor of the studio, most of the first floor being given to a gigantic studio, where several directors can work at the same time. Its proportions will be large enough for the staging of Essanay's great feature plays, many of which call for scenes of such magnitude as to cramp a 100 by 100 foot studio.

The floor space of the new studio will be 350 by 175 feet or 61,250 square feet. The building will be fireproof, being constructed of brick and steel, the only possible inflammable part being the furniture. A stand pipe will connect with every room, however, with a short hose, so that it will be ready for immediate use in any corner of the building. It is expected that the new quarters will be ready for occupancy by the first of the year.

Edison Has Separate Stock Companies

Among the several changes which Manager Leonard W. McChesney has instituted since he took hold of the Edison studio is the dividing up of the stock companies into practically an organization of several stock companies, each with its own director. Mr. McChesney believes, although it has been customary for years with Edison, that by assigning certain players with certain directors, each will get to know better the other's capabilities and work out pictures of more artistic unity and fuller dramatic expression.

Under this new arrangement, Mabel Trunnelle will be permanently associated with Director Richard Ridgley with whom she has worked much, even under the old system. Like many of the other coupling of players who have not been usually playing together, Robert Conness will play with her. Director John H. Collins, who has had Viola Dana a great deal, will have her permanently, but Edward Earle, who has played little with Miss Dana, goes opposite her.

Marc MacDermott and Miriam Nesbitt, who for years have been associated in the public memory almost as much as Irving and Terry, will play together again after quite a time apart—much in answer to popular demand — under Director George Ridgwell. Pat O'Malley, who played with Miss Dana, will now be seen with Leonie Flugrath, the featured child player of the stage, under Director Burton George. Under Director E. C. Taylor will be Bessie Learn and Bob Walker; Director Langdon West, Margaret Prussing and Carlton King; Director Frank McGlynn, Grace Williams and Richard Tucker; while comedy director Will Louis will have Jean Dumar and Ray McKee, as before.

Other members of the stock companies will be subject to assignment to the different directors' companies because of the characters they play, as in the cases of Sally Crute and Bigelow Cooper, being much in demand by practically all the directors.

Keystone Film May Aid Recruiting

A picture of decided news interest is "A Submarine Pirate," which the Triangle-Keystone offers at the New York, Chicago and Philadelphia model theaters week of November 14, with releases to the country four weeks later. This novel four reeler has been officially passed by Secretary Daniels and the Bureau of Navigation. The chief of the Bureau was in New York last week to arrange with Kessel and Bauman for showing the play in all the naval recruiting stations.

"A Submarine Pirate" gives actual views of submarine and battleship operations as carried on by

View of the Government submarine that was used in staging the Triangle-Keystone picture "A Submarine Pirate."

Uncle Sam's undersea and battleship fleet. Mack Sennett was highly complimented by the very unusual privilege accorded him of staging the principal scenes on and within a government submarine that was working in Los Angeles bay. Secretary Daniels believes that the play will encourage young men to become Jackies, so vividly does it present the romance and the mechanical marvels of the new navigation. Four reels packed with good material were required to tell the story of a pirate undersea craft invented to play havoc with the country's great battleships. For another reason, also, the picture will prove unusually interesting in motion picture circles. Syd Chaplin is in the happy role of an ambitious waiter who seeks to foil the plans of the rascally inventors. He gets to the submarine ahead of them, takes command as "Admiral," and there's uproarious fun when he undertakes to navigate it and the queer craft indulges in the most hair-raising stunts. A climax shows Syd running back and forth on the narrow deck and finally clinging to the top of the periscope tower when an order is wrongly given to submerge the boat and it sinks into the sea. From Syd Chaplin's really extraordinary work in this film, it is predicted that he will prove easily the most popular player in the realm of eccentric film comedy.

Robert T. Haines with Gaumont

The Gaumont policy of having a new star in every production has borne its latest fruit in the signing of Robert T. Haines to appear in a multiple-reel Rialto Star feature. Mr. Haines is now at the Gaumont winter quarters, Jacksonville, Fla., where he is working under the direction of William F. Haddock. To provide him with a suitable vehicle Gaumont has received a remarkably strong scenario from the well known novelist, Arthur Stringer. It is called "The Secret Agent." This will be released on the Mutual's new $8,000,000 program December 15.

Robert T. Haines.

Robert T. Haines is ideal in a part requiring both diplomatic finesse and courageous activity. He has been before the public for twenty-five years, the greater part of that time as a star. He made his professional debut in 1891 with Robert Downing in Washington. For the three years following he was with Thomas W. Keane, receiving a thorough training in the classics from this eminent tragedian. Then came the first American production of "Madame Sans Gene." After this Mr. Haines had an important part in "The Cherry Pickers." From 1898 to 1900 the star of this important Gaumont production was at the head of stock companies in Syracuse and Baltimore.

The following season he was leading man with Viola Allen in "The Palace of the King." Then he played the leads with Miss Minnie Maddern Fiske for two seasons, including the memorable run at the Manhattan theater, New York. All the time David Belasco had been watching the young actor and his judgment was verified by the success Mr. Haines attained as co-star with Miss Blanche Bates in the Belasco productions of "The Darling of the Gods." In this Japanese pictorial tragedy Mr. Haines played for four years. Since then he has been continuously before the public as a star and as a headliner in the vaudeville houses.

Raver Sells English Rights

The first long time contract signed by the Raver Film Corporation for the forthcoming Raver-Thomas output has been awarded the International Cinematograph Corporation Ltd. of London. Walter C. Betts came to this country a short while ago and, upon learning that Mr. Raver had started producing, immediately availed himself of an interview which has resulted in the aforesaid contract. The president of the manufacturing organization gave Mr. Betts full privilege of investigating the Raver Film Corporation, and the Briton thoroughly satisfied himself as to the substantiality and responsibility of the new company, as well as of its facilities for producing, for securing talent and its business policy. Three weeks were consumed in this process.

In commenting upon the franchise, Mr. Betts expressed himself as highly pleased with the fact that he will be able to market Augustus Thomas's productions throughout the United Kingdom, where the dramatist enjoys quite as large a reputation as he does on his native soil. Mr. Betts further expressed assurance that the Raver productions will be shown only in the better class motion pictures theaters and converted legitimate houses in his territory, in perfect conformity with the manner of presentation of the same subjects in the United States.

Incidentally, nearly fifty applications from different sections of this country are now on file for various territories. The distribution will be accorded exacting care, representative men being given first consideration.

Lubin's "The Nation's Peril"

It will probably never be recorded on the pages of history of these United States that, on the evening of August 15, 1915, there entered the harbor of Newport, R. I., a hostile ship from which there disembarked some three thousand marines and soldiers with artillery pieces and machine guns, and began a night attack on the "village of society" and a small suburban settlement called "Lubin Villa." It is not probable, therefore, that August 15 will be marked in red letters, but the happenings in this same locality on the night August 15 and the day of August 16 will live long in motion picture annals, if the comment and praise accorded thus far to the big Lubin war picture, "The Nation's Peril," dealing with the subject of

The marines in a scene from "The Nation's Peril"

United States preparedness and the hyphenated Americans, can be taken as a criterion.

Already the picture, complete and ready for its review by critics, has been shown to a number of naval officers, the departments at Washington, etc., and the stamp of approval and compliment to Director Terwilliger and the Lubin Company has been indelibly placed upon "The Nation's Peril," both for the fine lines drawn in the story, the excellence of direction, the correctness of portrayal of the characters and the magniture of the scenes.

"The Nation's Peril" is released November 22 by the Lubin Company, through the offices of V. L. S. E., Inc.

A recent addition to the Vitagraph forces is Florence Vidor, a charming young woman who possesses rare photographic quality. Miss Vidor will first be seen in support of Mary Anderson in "Flower o' the Desert." Miss Vidor is a Texan, and a friend of Corinne Griffith, the young woman whose work in Rollin Sturgeon's "Bittersweet" was remarkable.

Work Begins in New Ince Studios

BUILDING CONSTRUCTION CONTINUES

WITH Director-General Thomas H. Ince in charge and a company of 700 appearing in the scenes, actual production of pictures was begun this week at the mammoth new Culver City studios which are being erected in the interest of Ince-Triangle features. Though the plant is by no means completed, one immense set has been finished on one of the eight stages and it was within this that the initial work was done.

The subject for which the scenes were taken is that in which H. B. Warner, the notable star of the legitimate stage, will be presented. It is a virile story of the New York stock exchange from the pen of C. Gardner Sullivan, Ince's gifted writer and contains numerous scenes within the stock exchange building. For this purpose, a massive set representing accurately the famous metropolitan structure of finance was built.

No ceremonies marked the commencement of activities. Producer Ince preferred to apply every minute of time to the feature, instead of devoting part of the day to dedicatory exercises. He, himself, was among the first to arrive on the grounds. He declared he had no qualms about opening the plant on a Friday, because he regards it as his lucky day. It was on a Friday that Ince was engaged by Messrs. Kessel and Baumann five years ago. It was on a Friday that Ince left New York as director-general of the old Edendale plant. And it was on a Friday that he took possession of the 16,000-acre rancho in the Santa Monica mountains which is now known as Inceville.

The noted producer lost no time in getting to work. He seemed omnipresent, giving orders here, making a suggestion to his men and demanding a change there. Light that was perfect for photography permitted the first camera to begin clicking a few minutes after nine o'clock. In this fact, Ince found much consolation, for early work at Inceville, during this season of the year, is made impossible by virtue of the prevalence of heavy fogs. So rapid and systematic was the work that thirty-three scenes were made during the first day. These were directed by Producer Ince.

The fact that 700 people were engaged in acting did not deter the contractors from continuing their work of constructing the various buildings. More than 200 men are daily employed in all parts of the twelve-acre tract and under the supervising eye of Ince's stage manager, Tom Brierly, the buildings are rapidly rising into view. It is expected that the entire plant will be ready for occupancy shortly after the first of next year. Originally it was believed that the total cost of construction would not exceed $75,000, but a recent enlargement of the plans has resulted in the announcement, by Business Manager E. H. Allen, that the plant, when completed, will have entailed an expenditure of nearly a quarter million dollars.

The opening of the studio, this week, marks an epoch in the history of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, which was organized by Kessel and Baumann in 1908. Less than five years ago, Ince took charge of the producing end of the business and founded Inceville. From a comparatively insignificant organization, struggling for recognition, the company has advanced to one of the foremost producing concerns in the world. Now, as one of the three great companies that recently combined to form the Triangle Film Corporation, a $5,000,000 distributing medium, which startled the country by the introduction of the $2 motion picture play, it stands secure in the amusement world and is a powerful testimonial to the genius of Director-General Ince.

Willis Leaves General Film

J. E. Willis, who has for sometime been special representative of the General Film Company with headquarters in Chicago, resigned that position on Saturday last. The exhibitors in Chicago are very high in their praise of Mr. Willis' administration and are talking of making a more lasting expression of their friendship and admiration in the shape of a silver cup.

It is not for Motography to disarrange those plans, but the idea suggests itself that the name of each exhibitor who participates in making the present might be permanently engrossed on a parchment, which should accompany the gift, as it would be exceedingly difficult to engrave each name on the cup, and we feel that Mr. Willis will want to remember each one of the donors personally in connection with this splendid testimonial to his ability.

Emmy Wehlen Under Contract to Metro

In order to correct an error regarding the status of Miss Emmy Wehlen as a Metro star, the Metro Pictures Corporation announces that Miss Wehlen is under a long-time contract to appear in Metro pictures produced by Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc. She has been granted permission to appear in a serial now being made by the Arrow Film Corporation for Pathe, and at the conclusion of her work in this serial she will appear in Metro pictures until the completion of her contract.

ROTHAPFEL IN SEATTLE

After Being Initiated Into Famous Club the Mutual Tourist Addressed Large Banquet Gathering and Was Enthusiastically Received

Seattle's most prominent citizens joined with the exhibitors of that territory in making the Rothapfel-Mutual tour visit to Seattle, on November 8, the biggest event in the motion picture business of the northwest. The Seattle boosters went to it and "whooped it up" for "Roxy" as they call Samuel L. Rothapfel, who is covering the United States under the auspices of the Mutual Film Corporation.

They met Mr. Rothapfel's party with a glad hand at the depot and kept him busy every hour of the stop there. In the afternoon, before the banquet, Mr. Rothapfel was made an honorary member of the famous Tiluken Elttaes Club. Only nationally known persons of special celebrity are so honored. Among the members of the club are President Wilson, William H. Taft, William Jennings Bryan and many others. The banquet held at the Hotel Lincoln was attended by exhibitors from every town in the Seattle region and by all the leading exhibitors of the city.

J. Von Herberg, president of a syndicate owning and operating the biggest chain of theaters in the state of Washington, followed Mr. Rothapfel's address with a speech of appreciation of "America's foremost exhibitor" and the spirit of President John R. Freuler in sending him out on this tour as a contribution to the welfare of the motion picture theater.

Mr. Rothapfel found much of interest to him as a student of theater administration among the houses of Seattle. "Too much cannot be said for the progressiveness of Seattle's exhibitors," he said. "The theaters are typical of the spirit of the city as a whole. The exhibitors also have wonderful newspaper co-operation—a co-operation which has made possible a record of over five thousand inches of motion picture theater display advertising in one paper alone."

Throughout his speech Mr. Rothapfel was interrupted by storms of applause. He made a particularly strong plea for raising the business of showing pictures to an art plane. His advocacy of increasing admissions to a price commensurate with the quality of the picture offerings met with particular approval. After the formalities of the function were over an animated and interesting general discussion was held.

Warm appreciation of the efforts of the Mutual Film Corporation and the service given by the local branch office was expressed. Among those in attendance were: Edward J. Fisher, Aubrey Levy, Eugene M. Fisher, Joseph A. St. Peter, Sydney Strong, F. S. Fountain, C. S. Jensen, William Southern, Paul E. Judkins, A. C. Anderson, Hart Beatleson, George H. Storck, Ray Crombacher, C. J. Kerr, Ben Ketcham, L. J. Schlaifer, R. C. Montgomery, J. Brown, Tom North, Arthur Vastherm, F. V. Fisher, C. F. Fullerton, John H. Remrick, Joseph Rantsch, E. Bishop, H. T. Moore, H. P. Davidson, W. W. Kastner, E. N. Smith, H. G. Rosenbaum, E. L. Manche, W. A. Mead, J. V. Lynn, C. E. McKee, E. C. Williamson, E. R. Redlich, W. W. Ladd, A. Singlebaum, V. S. Gifford, J. E. Ferguson, H. S. Waterman, George H. Bellman, L. O. Lukan, Charles Eugene Banks, George M. Tell, George Donnellan, Joseph Gottstein, Eugene E. Levy, James Q. Clemmer, J. L. Gottstein, Duncan G. Inverarity, C. C. Cook, H. S. Hoke, George W. Ring, Edward Watson. Salt Lake City is the next call on the Rothapfel-Mutual schedule. From Salt Lake Mr. Rothapfel starts eastward for Denver, Kansas City and Chicago, where he is to speak at a banquet at the Hotel Sherman on November 18.

Exhibitors from all the surrounding territory attended the Rothapfel-Mutual banquet held in Salt Lake City, Utah, on November 10 at the Newhouse hotel. Several of the exhibitors in attendance traveled more than five hundred miles to attend the biggest motion picture event of the year in that region.

H. A. Simms of the American theater introduced the guest of honor, Samuel L. Rothapfel. Mr. Rothapfel's words fell on receptive ears and there is a promise of a new high standard of motion picture presentation in the theaters of the territory as a result. At the conclusion of his address a vote of thanks was given by the exhibitors in appreciation of the efforts of Mr. Rothapfel and the enterprise of the Mutual Film Corporation in sending him out to carry his "message of success" to the exhibitors of the nation.

"I am particularly impressed with the broad scope of Mr. Rothapfel's experience and the fact that what he has told us is just as applicable to the business of the small house as it is to the successes he has made in the great houses on Broadway," was the comment of J. R. Baxter, an exhibitor who traveled from distant Spring City, Utah, to be present.

Among those who were present at the banquet were: A. L. Stallings, Clifton Pierce, Manny Feldstein, E. H. Goldstein, Mark Ross, L. D. Perry, Ernest Ryan, J. E. Ryan, S. P. Arnold, Mrs. Louise Marcus, J. C. Lindsay, George C. Cowing, James A. Stanley, Mrs. M. B. Lagram, W. P. Moran, Ed Shearer, Mrs. George E. Carpenter, A. J. Onway, D. E. Schwinger, R. W. Bartleson, W. J. Moran, J. Martin Watson, J. R. Kenneard, Harry Quinn, Beatrice D. King, Louis Marcus, George E. Carpenter, M. H. Hanauer, W. B. Moyle, E. C. Schmidt, Inez Todd King, Mrs. Monroe Hauser, J. Rothneul, V. M. Foot, C. H. Paulson, C. E. Beardsley, C. H. Archibald, Robert Saunders, Henry C. Epperson and E. D. Lagrau.

Meaney Returns to California

Don Meaney, who has been with the Universal's west coast studios at Universal City, California, for over a year in the capacity of assistant to four general managers, and more recently manager of productions for the Quality Pictures Corporation, releasing on the Metro program, passed through Chicago last Wednesday on his way to Los Angeles, where he will again become affiliated in an executive capacity with one of the large film manufacturers.

The illness of his wife, due to the climate of the East, has necessitated this move. Don's host of friends will join with MOTOGRAPHY in wishing him success in his new position.

New Canada Office for Kleine-Edison

Productions of the Kleine-Edison Feature Service will have another outlet in Canada beside the office now located at Toronto, when a new branch is opened at Montreal next week. Canada has taken extremely well to the Kleine-Edison output, as practically all of the better class theaters throughout the Dominion are now using the K-E service.

LUBIN STAR A GRIDIRON HERO

Richard Buhler Plays Half-Back on University of Pennsylvania Football Team Like a Veteran —Joe Farnham Referees.

Twenty-two husky young collegians gathered around "The Hero" and with long and lusty cheers proclaimed him the best outsider who ever donned the moleskins—the husky young athletes were the varsity and second teams of the University of Pennsylvania football squad and "The Hero" was Richard Buhler of the Lubin Company who plays the lead in "A Man's Making."

Director Jack Pratt needed a football team in his picture and he needed a real one and also needed to show Buhler in the position of halfback. Accordingly, "Ever Ready" Teefe, Pratt's assistant, was put on the job and soon returned with the sanction of the University of Pennsylvania teams to appear on Franklin Field, and for Buhler to take the prescribed place at halfback in the lineup. It was necessary that the scenes be taken during the practice scrimmages before the game and accordingly Buhler was placed in the varsity lineup against the second team.

Apparently the boys decided that "The Hero" as they termed Buhler, needed a taste of real football and went after him. They received a genuine surprise however when Buhler, handed the ball for the first scrimmage, went through center for a gain of more than twenty yards, and this without the camera working and with the instructions from Pratt to stop the play.

Richard Buhler, Lubin Star, in center on the shoulders of the University of Pennsylvania Football Team.

For his entire college career, "Dick" Buhler was prominent in the lineup of his varsity football team, for three years played left half and in his senior moved over to full back and captained his team. That is not many years ago and since his graduation he has been an ardent devotee of the game and has kept well posted on the ever changing rules.

Lest it be overlooked it might be mentioned that Joe Farnham, of the Lubin publicity desk, packed up his papers and followed "The Hero" to Franklin Field and played the referee—and being an old varsity player himself, the referee performance, if only casual, is decidedly effective.

"A Man's Making," with the taking of the football scenes is completed and is scheduled for release through the V. L. S. E., Inc., offices December 6.

Horsley Interests Los Angeles

The 500,000 people of Los Angeles were given a very comprehensive as well as entertaining exhibition of motion picture production as carried on at the David Horsley studios, during the great "Los Angeles Home Products Exposition," held in the Chamber of Commerce building during the week of November 1 to 6. The plant's industry introduced itself to the public on the ground floor and main entrance to the exhibition building, where was stationed Tweedle Dee, one of the trained elephants, in charge of his trainer, Court Tietze. Tweedle Dee's business was to hand out to everyone entering the exhibition a card saying: "I am Tweedle Dee of the Bostock Jungle and Film Company. I invite you to visit the exhibit of my employer, David Horsley, on the third floor of this building. Come on Sundays and see me at the Bostock Arena and Jungle and have a ride on my back." Tweedle Dee was costumed with a turban bearing his name, and a cloak on which was painted "Los Angeles is my home; I help make the products of the Bostock Jungle and Film Company." He proved a big drawing card for the entire show, for everyone was anxious to read what he was handing out with his trunk, and then accepted the invitation.

The Horsley exhibit was on the third floor. It consisted of numerous enlarged photographic views of every part of the great plant at Main and Washington streets, about which descriptions were given by Mme. D'Orcy, Mlle. Ottawa, Ora Cecil, Vera Robson, Bonavita, Herr Batty, Charles Gay and Leo, all in costume, and they distributed to the multitude thousands of books containing twelve lithographed postcards and descriptive matter about the David Horsley enterprise.

An Open Letter

The following is an open letter to Max Stearns, ex-president of the Ohio Branch, No. 1, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League:

My Dear Max: Last February, at Columbus, we elected you state president of the Ohio Branch, No. 1, in the interest of harmony. For harmony's sake twenty-one Clevelanders sacrificed everything previously at issue and joined with about thirty of your Columbus, Cincinnati and southern tier delegates and put you at the head of our affairs with our best wishes and pledges to co-operate with you in reorganizing Ohio and fighting drastic legislation. You had your own legislative committee; men who do business almost within the shadow of the Capitol building.

Your speech of acceptance indicated very strongly that you were going to show us great things. Now, Max, what have you done for the honor conferred? Let us see. So far as the strongest local in Ohio, Cleveland, is concerned, not a member or officer has received even a postcard from you since your election until your somewhat scurrilous attack upon President Herrington was received, dated October 13, inviting us to Columbus—again, again.

Thirty days previously we had agreed to act as hosts for whosoever President Herrington saw fit to invite to the proposed exhibitors' convention at Cleveland, and you and your friends, of course, were invited and would have been welcomed.

Why did you not accept and come?

You were well aware that our committee of arrangements had completed their work ere your letter was received and yet you pursued the usual course, "Do as we say or we'll wreck the organization."

Why did you not get Ohio exhibitors together at the close of the Ohio legislature and give an account of your stewardship?

What legislation "inimical to the exhibitors of Ohio" did you and your hand-picked legislative committee prevent or try to prevent?

Please name one single instance of your activities since your election.

Your committee not only did nothing, but worse than that; they and their friends foisted upon us the Betaw amendment to shackle us tighter on the censorship question, and then because the Betaw Law prevented you showing "The Hypocrites" and "The Birth of a Nation" you rushed letters and telegrams out to Ohio exhibitors to come and help you fight the awfully unreasonable censor board, and you thus tried to make President Herrington the "goat" for your official shortcomings and expected us to call all convention contracts and arrangements one week before our Hollenden convention.

If not, what is the answer?

Clevelanders have always attended every state meeting in greater numbers than any other city ever sent. For five years they have spent their time and money freely, traveling to various conventions in attempts to rally Ohio exhibitors for organization purposes. Outside of your little "old guard" of about thirty, very few others could ever be induced to attend and a change of location for a gathering was certainly worthy of your considerations as state president.

Why did you fear to invite those men whose array of names you publish as being with you on October 19 at Columbus?

Dear Max, you missed the opportunity of your life. The reprint from the "Bull-Board" received from you recently is pure "bull" from a "regular theatrical paper" that is not interester in the least in seeing motion picture men organized.

The rcal trade journal representatives attend all our Cleveland meetings. The "Bull-Board" has never accepted our invitation. Why not? Well may you say, "There is only one paper." That is the one from "Cincinnatty," Max. (Moicy!)

In conclusion let me offer a solution I offered two years ago.

Get the national executive board to consider a proposition to amend the constitution providing for a Northern and a Southern branch in Ohio. Keep that array of men together as a body and organize the southern half. We will then vie with you in banding together the biggest joint state organization in America.

Northern Ohio is going ahead, to fight in the next legislature with Cleveland as headquarters. What's the use of "scrapping?" Let us organize to fight the common enemy. Sincerely yours, Sam Bullock, 4801 Denison Avenue, Cleveland.

GAUGING PUBLIC'S TASTE

Dramas More Popular than Comedies Is Opinion of Paramount Pictures Corporation After Mature Consideration of Public Demands

That photo dramas are more popular throughout the country than comedies is evidently shown in the announcement of releases of the Paramount Pictures Corporation. Through the unique system which it originated of issuing criticism blanks on each of its productions, Paramount is able to gauge the public taste, and in the twelve months of the year seven dramas and two comedies will be presented at Paramount theaters.

The first of Mark Twain's stories to be filmed is "The Prince and the Pauper," in which Marguerite Clark will be presented by the Famous Players Film Company. The Lasky Feature Play Company has obtained the rights of all Mark Twain's other works, and will soon begin producing them for the Paramount program.

The first release for December will be the Lasky production, "Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo," made from the novel by E. Phillips Openheim, which ran as a serial in the Saturday Evening Post and which has since been published in book form. It will be followed by "Jane," the Morosco comedy with Charlotte Greenwood and Sydney Grant, the story of which deals with the desperate attempts of a young gentleman to increase his parental benevolence. In the end he not only gets the money but a wife to boot. Lou-Telegen, the young romantic actor, who became famous as Sarah Bernhardt's leading man and was seen at Paramount theaters in "The Explorer," will appear again in "The Unknown." It furnishes him with a part which is ideally suited to his talents.

Fanny Ward, who is enthusiastically acclaimed on her appearance in "The Marriage of Kitty," will be seen in the Lasky production "The Cheat." The second release of Pallas Pictures will be "The Reform Candidate," with Maclyn Arbuckle. The film is made from the successful vaudeville sketch which Mr. Arbuckle presented to enthusiastic audiences throughout the country for several years. "The Foundling," in which Mary Pickford will appear, is an original story, in which Mary again returns to the "Tess of the Storm Country" type of role, in which she is so delightful. John Barrymore, famous son of a famous family, will make his sixth appearance at Paramount theaters in Channing Pollack and Rennold Wolfe's amusing comedy, "The Red Widow."

A big surprise is in store for those who see Valeska Suratt in "The Immigrant," an original play by Marion Fairfax, in which Miss Suratt is cast in the title role. The Famous Players Film Company will contribute Denman Thompson's "The Old Homestead," one of the most famous of old time plays which, according to Frank Thompson, son of the author, has played on the legitimate stage every night for thirty years.

Equitable Makes Changes

Several changes have been made in the Equitable program of forthcoming releases.

"A Daughter of the Sea," in which Muriel Ostriche is making her Equitable debut, was originally named "The Fisher Girl," but upon completion the former title was found to be too mild for the strength of the tale, and the change was adopted.

"The Silence of Dean Maitland," in which William Courtenay is appearing, is to be screened under the name of "Sealed Lips," which is entirely appropriate and better fits the subject than the title of the original work. "Justice," with Cyril Scott in the principal role, will be known as "Not Guilty."

"Creeping Tides," now being completed by Director Marshall Farnum, with Alexander Carlisle in the leading part, will not be released December 6, as originally outlined. The fact that many scenes had to be made in Cuba and that a number of the sets were rather difficult to make, delayed the picture ten days, and the Triumph Film Corporation's production of Julius Steger's great morality drama, "The Warning," with Henry Kolker, will be released on that date, with "Creeping Tides" coming as the regular unit on the Equitable program, December 20.

Margarita Fischer will be seen in "The Dragon" on January 5, while Gail Kane, in "The Labyrinth," comes on the program February 1.

World Film, on December 6, will release "Camille" with Clara Kimball Young in the title role. This picture is expected to exceed in beauty and dramatic interest "Trilby" in which Miss Young is registering such a great success all over the country.

Comedy Aplenty on Mutual Program

NINE RELEASES WEEKLY

WITH the introduction of "Vogue" Films to the Mutual's $8,000,000 program in December, there will be six distinct brands of straight comedy and nine comedy releases weekly which will go to the public through the Mutual Film Corporation.

"Vogue" Films are being produced by the newly organized Vogue Films, Inc., in Los Angeles, under the direction of Charles H. France. In the cast will be charming Priscilla Dean, Russ Powell and Lillian Brown Leighton. They will be supported by William Scott, Wilton Welch, Arthur B. Lamb and M. Morante, all comedians of exceptional experience. Their introduction will mean the appearance of a new type of comedies in the already varied comedy schedule of the Mutual.

"Vogue" comedies are to be "slap stick with a reason," and will be handled in the masterly way which has characterized all the work of Charles France.

There are four directors of comedies busily at work in the Thanhouser studios at New Rochelle, since two funny pictures are released by that company under the brand name of "Falstaff" every week in the Mutual's program, Monday and Thursday are the days on which they appear.

William A. Howells, who is an actor as well as a director, and appeared in the Falstaff release of November 11, "Hannah's Henpecked Husbands," is already engaged in producing a comedy every two weeks. Arthur Ellery, William Parke and Howard Mitchell are the other directors among the Thanhouser forces, who turn out at least one funny picture every two weeks. In the company of actors are some of the best known comedians of the motion picture and comedy stage. Louis, Emerald Bates, the beautiful star of many Winter Garden shows and of other Broadway productions, is the newest acquisition to the fold. Among the best of the comedies in which she has appeared is "The Film Favorite's Finish," released on November 11.

Frances Keyes, Carey L. Hastings, Barbara Gilroy, Janet Henry, Winifred Lane, Riley Chamberlain, Frank McNish, Colin Campbell, John Lehnberg, Lindsay Morrison, Burnett Barker, Charlie Emerson, Boyd Marshall, Claude Cooper and Arthur Cunningham are other members of the Falstaff companies whose names are familiar to the followers of the Mutual program.

Among the best Falstaff comedies soon to appear are "A Cunning Canal Boat Cupid," in which Winifred Lane and Claude Cooper are featured; "Lulu's Lost Lotharios," featuring Barbara Gilroy and Claude Cooper; "The Postmaster of Pineapple Plains," starring Janet Henry and Charlie Emerson; and "Hannah's Henpecked Husbands," in which Carey L. Hastings and Boyd Marshall plays the leads. These will all appear during November.

Then, there are the famous "Cub" comedies, in which George Ovey is the head liner, and which are a regular part of the Friday's output in the Mutual Program. The "Cub" pictures are directed by Milton Fahrney, who was one of the first of Mr. Horsley's staff when he first commenced to produce pictures several years ago. George Ovey is supported by George George, the popular comedian who joined the Horsley contingent about six weeks ago, after motion picture experience with Pathe and Biograph, and a stage experience which includes numerous seasons in some of the most successful comedies which have ever appeared on the stage. Also in the company are Louis Fitz Roy, Gordon MacGregor, and Janet Sully. Goldie Colwell, who has played comedy leads with Mr. Ovey for some time, has been transferred, and at present a permanent successor to her place has not been appointed. Mary St. Aubour has appeared in several "Cub" releases since Miss Colwell's departure from the comedy ranks.

Cissy Fitzgerald, the English comedienne, who appeared recently in two Casino Star comedies in the Mutual Program, "A Corner in Cats," and "Zablitsky's Waterloo," has been re-engaged for four additional comedies with the Gaumont Company, which are being especially written for her. Miss Fitzgerald will commence work next week. Casino Star comedies are produced at the Gaumont studios at Flushing under the direction of Edwin Middleton, an old comedian and comedy director of years' standing. Budd Ross is the only regularly engaged actor who appears in all the pictures. The star is chosen from among Broadway players, and supporting casts are picked anew for each production. "Beauty in Distress" and "The House Party" in which Harry Vokes is supported by Dorothy Rogers, and then by Eleanor Fairbanks, will be released November 14 and 21. Cissy Fitzgerald, in "Nearly Famous" will appear November 28.

The "Novelty" comedies, which are released regularly Mondays and Wednesdays, are produced by different companies. Some of them including the three burlesques, "Rip Van Winkle Badly Ripped," "Miss Trilly's Big Feet" and "The Corsican Brothers Up-to-Date," are the output of the Crystal Film Corporation, directed by W. A. Hutchinson. Edith Thornton plays the leads in these, usually supported by W. E. Browning. The "Novelty" release of November 24 is entitled "Taming a Grouch," and was written and produced by Edward McWade, the well known writer and actor. In the leading role is William Sloan, whose appearance in such productions as "The Governor's Son," "1492," "Little Christopher," "The Girl from Paris," and the "French Maid," has established him as an actor of more than usual ability. He is supported by Margaret McWade, who is also well known on the legitimate stage.

In addition to these, there are the American "Beauty" releases on Tuesdays and Saturdays. In the American companies are many names which are closely connected with the traditions of motion pictures. Neva Gerber, Carol Holloway, Beatrice Van, Frank Borzage, John Sheehan, Estelle Allen, and Jack Dillon are among the most popular whose faces are seen regularly in the funny picture releases of the American Film Corporation. "Her Adopted Father," "The Drummer's Trunk," and "Cupid Beats Father" are soon to be shown on the Mutual Program.

Of a different type of comedy is the "Buck Parvin in the Movies" series, produced from the stories by Charles E. Van Loan which were published in the Saturday Evening Post. Under the title of "Mustang" brand, these pictures appear every fourth week. In them, Arthur Acord, the famous cowboy actor, plays the lead.

Another comedy, of still a different character, is the weekly Gaumont animated cartoon, "Keeping Up With the Joneses," drawn by Harry Palmer, which occupies one-half of the Gaumont scenic, "See America First."

CASTLE PROVES HE CAN ACT

Celebrated Dancer Clearly Establishes Himself as a Comedian as Well as a Dancer in "The Whirl of Life"

A critical study of the new feature offered by the Cort Film Company starring the Castles brought forth several surprises.

Because of their supremacy in the field of the modern dance, Mr. and Mrs. Castle have been known for that alone. Their reputation has become practically a household legend. The stories of their fabulous salaries as dance instructors has never been denied. That a dollar a minute was actually paid by the society leaders for instructions by these dance masters has been proven in many instances.

But that Vernon Castle could act—that has never been suspected. His talents are in his feet—he could dance, he could gracefully fill the stage or a ballroom. But "The Whirl of Life" demonstrates that he can act, and that he can act mighty well and that his equals for versatility are few and far between on the screen. All of which recalls that long before Vernon Castle ever imagined he could dance, he was a comedian and one of the funniest, most rollicking types on the musical comedy stage.

At the time he met the now Mrs. Castle and then the wealthy young Miss Foote, he was a member of Lew Field's company. An examination back into the old files of the newspapers and magazines of the day brings forth the amazing fact that Vernon Castle received many gratifying criticisms for his artistic handling of difficult characterizations. In "The Whirl of Life" the comedy is exquisite. The tragic moments are tense. The excitement is handled with fine control. Mrs. Castle, herself, has demonstrated a remarkable talent in addition to her terpsichorean art.

"The Whirl of Life" all through its six vital reels carries the audience through the dramatic and dancing career of these two world figures. It brings them in close intimacy with the society life that has surrounded the dancers ever since their reputation was made.

Thrills in Centaur Features

An instance of the thrills provided in the Centaur Features, which are animal subjects in an advanced form, is shown by the accompanying reproduction of a scene from "Stanley Among the Voodoo Worshippers," the sixth episode of the "Stanley in Africa" series, which is founded on the Stanley expedition sent into Africa by the New York Herald to recover Livingston, the lost missionary, and which is to be released December 2 on the Mutual program.

The story, in brief, concerns the efforts of the Stanley party to rescue Ada, the sweetheart of Wilson, the reporter, who is a member of the expedition, from the slave traders into whose hands she has fallen. A guide attempts to effect Ada's escape but is caught by the king of the traders who condemns him to die. A particularly savage elephant is brought forward and, encircling the man's body with his trunk, throws him into a tree. Stunned and weakened the man falls to the ground and as he lies prostrate the elephant walks over his form as if to crush him.

Scene from Centaur's "Stanley Among the Voodoo Worshippers."

Later in the story Jack causes Ada's release. With Ada and her companions he makes into the jungle, which offers a degree of safety against discovery. Jack goes in search of food and during his absence a lion appears over a rocky ledge immediately back of Ada. Before she has a chance to heed the warning cry of her companions the lion springs upon her, bearing her heavily to the ground.

While the scenes are staged, the effect is made realistic through the excellent training of the Bostock animals, which assist in playing these scenes under the direction of Captain Jack Bonavita.

Metro Signs Mabel Taliaferro

Mabel Taliaferro, the beautiful and talented star of the speaking drama, who played the stellar role in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "Polly of the Circus," and other notable productions of the legitimate stage, has been signed by the Metro Pictures Corporation to appear in a series of big Metro feature pictures produced by Rolfe Photoplays, Inc. She will be surrounded by an exceptionally strong supporting cast, including many gifted artists of both the stage and screen.

Miss Taliaferro is counted one of the most fascinating and charming actresses of the stage, and has delighted thousands of theater goers in her marvelous delineation of entrancing roles. Although comparatively a young woman she has had a long and successful career on the stage, where she made her debut as a child. The arrangement with Miss Taliaferro was made by Max Karger, general manager of the Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc., for her appearance in productions of that company, which will be released exclusively under the Metro banner. Especial care has been exercised in the selection of suitable vehicles for Miss Taliaferro, and the roles she will essay on the screen will be the same as those that won her the enviable position she occupies among stage celebrities.

CHICAGO STUDIO IS CLOSED

Selig Polyscope Company Sends Its Chicago Producing Force to the Los Angeles Studios Where Work Will Continue

Miss Grace Darmond, T. N. Heffron and family, and James Bradbury left Chicago recently for the Pacific Coast where they will join the Selig stock companies at the Selig Zoo, Los Angeles.

Miss Darmond, a Chicago girl, not yet 18 years of age, has achieved an enviable record as an actress, having supported as leading lady such stars as Tyrone Power, Harry Mestayer, and Otis Harlan. She has never worked elsewhere but in the Selig Chicago studios.

James Bradbury, the veteran comedian, who scored such a hit as the manager of the burlesque troupe in the Selig Red Seal Play, "A Black Sheep," has become a regular Selig player. He is among the well known comedians of the American stage and in the past has supported such stars as Booth, Barret, Lester Wallock and others.

T. N. Heffron has been directing productions at the Selig Chicago studios. He has been responsible for the filming of the meritorious Red Seal Plays, "The House of a Thousand Candles," "A Black Sheep," etc. He will continue to direct Selig productions at Los Angeles.

It has been decided by the Selig Polyscope Company to make Los Angeles the center for the production of Selig picture plays, and consequently the Selig studio at Chicago has been closed. Several offers have already been made the Selig Company by concerns wishing to lease the Chicago studio but the Selig Company has as yet taken no action along these lines. The Selig laboratories, among the most complete in this country, will continue to be operated in Chicago.

Los Angeles Censorship Scandal

J. A. Quinn, owner of the Superba theater of Los Angeles, is in the midst of a great fight for fair and honest censorship or the abolishment of the local censor board altogether. He has strong support from certain members of the Los Angeles City Council. The fight became a public affair of notable interest this week when, after a session of public indignation meetings, charges were hurled at Judge A. P. Tugwell, president of the local board, and E. T. Jorgensen, secretary, by Mr. Quinn and other exhibitors.

As a result Jorgensen resigned under fire and acting Mayor Betkouski asked for the resignation of President Tugwell. He refused to resign and was dismissed. Mayor Sebastian, on his return to the city, backed up his acting head and the council has approved the entire proceedings. The censorship board is in a state of disquietude and much bitter feeling has been the result, all of which, however, will prove important for exhibitors and perhaps straighten out the tangle that now confronts exhibitors and manufacturers of motion pictures.

Regarding the incidents which have occurred, J. A. Quinn makes the following statement:

In view of the widespread publicity which has been given the remarks of A. P. Tugwell and others regarding my having "sworn to false statements" and my actions in conducting the campaign against local censorship of moving pictures, I believe it incumbent upon me to make a public statement, and feel sure that you will give it prominence in your valuable columns.

The controversy which has recently arisen over the Los Angeles Board of Moving Picture Censors is not the result of their action regarding the film play "Damaged Goods," although it was precipitated by that action. It is the result of more than a year's thought and investigation by myself and my associates.

I have always been of the opinion that local censorship of moving pictures was unnecessary. My experience during the several years in which I have been an exhibitor in Los Angeles has not only confirmed that opinion, but has forced upon me the conclusion that local censorship is a detriment and a menace to one of the greatest assets of Los Angeles and the Southwest—the moving picture industry.

There is a National Board of Censors which has been found wholly adequate. They give both time and thought to their decisions and they are aided by an advisory board consisting of some of the foremost minds in the nation. The suggestions of this board are invariably followed by film producers and eliminations recommended by them are made.

I believe that the people in themselves supply the strongest board of censorship available—the court of last resort. No exhibitor can succeed by showing pictures which the people do not wish to see. Any citizen has the right to apply for police interference with any picture which is deemed unfit for public exhibition.

There is ample evidence that local boards of censorship have allowed, and do allow, personalities and questions of personal profit to enter into their deliberations.

In entering into this fight against local censorship, I have done so without the thought of dealing in personalities. I believe that it is not only to my interest, but to the interest of every legitimate exhibitor, film producer and the public at large, that this city, which proudly boasts leadership in the great West, and which is acknowledged to be the foremost city in the world in moving picture industry, should be free from the blight of petty and thoughtless interference with the right of its citizens to see the great works of masters.

If, in the course of this movement to eliminate local censorship, it has transpired that conditions have existed which prove certain members of the local board to have been unfit to hold office, it is, of course, unfortunate; but I have made no statements which I cannot both verify and justify.

The affidavits involving Judge Tugwell are to the effect that he received special rates and special favors from the film distributing exchanges; that he received these special favors from film exchanges in the way of special rates for films exhibited at his moving picture house on Central avenue; and that he collected about $2 per week from each of the film exchanges for the delivery of the films to be viewed by the Board of Censors.

An ordinance prohibiting any person from serving on the Moving Picture Censor Board who is directly or indirectly interested in the moving picture business in Los Angeles was recommended by the public welfare committee of the city council.

It is proposed that the ordinance shall become effective January 1. It is understood the law will affect not only Judge Tugwell, but also Commissioner J. W. Brooks, who is said to have but recently acquired an interest in a moving picture theater in Los Angeles.

The investigation which came to a crux last week has been in progress for some time, and Mayor Sebastian has been fully conversant with its progress. It is said that the reorganization of the censor board will be undertaken.

Secretary Jorgensen was charged with accepting money from exhibitors for handling publicity campaigns for special pictures.

Judge Tugwell denies all charges and is vigorously fighting the case.

The outcome will be, perhaps, a sane and sensible board of local censors who will have no interest whatsoever in the motion picture industry. Any change will be welcomed by local exhibitors.

Burton George, Edison Director

Edison has added a new director to its forces in the person of Burton George, a man well grounded in theatrical experience and long in the motion picture business in varied activities—actor, scenario writer and director. For his first Edison film he is working on a 3-reel feature in which Pat O'Malley and Leonie Flugrath, the little girl star of the stage, will be featured.

Burton George.

Mr. George was born in Lake Charles, La., and spent fourteen active years in that field which has proved so fruitful for successful screen actors because of its wide character changes—theatrical stock companies in New Orleans and, later, five years in stock in San Antonio and Denver, usually doing heavies. Then he went to New York City where, after playing in a well-known stock company, he experienced motion pictures for the first time in the old Owl Picture Company.

His first directing opportunity came when he joined the Universal where, after a brief time as an actor, he became a director, writing and putting on an unusually large number of his own scenarios. The next three years were spent with Lubin, first as an actor and later as director. His appointment to the Edison directorship followed this.

Teddy Sampson Joins Equitable

Teddy Sampson, in real life Mrs. Ford Sterling, and for the past two years associated with D. W. Griffith at his Hollywood studio, became a member of the Equitable Motion Picture Corporation's roster of stellarites, this week, when she entered into a long term contract to appear exclusively for that company. Miss Sampson arrived in New York last Sunday after a trip across the continent, during which trip she stopped at seventeen cities and appeared personally in theaters at which films, in which she was featured, were playing.

In securing Miss Sampson Equitable is following out the policy of blending its productions by using a portion of the cast selected from well known legitimate players, with the balance of the important roles entrusted to screen players of proven merit and attractiveness. Miss Sampson will, in all likelihood, be seen in the production of "A Man and the Desert," in which it is now the intention of the Equitable to offer the virile actor, Emmett Corrigan, or the noted dramatic player, Frank Sheridan.

Miss Sampson will begin work at the Equitable studio within the week, and will probably appear in one of the S. E. V. Taylor productions before beginning her feature under Frank Powell or John Ince. Ford Sterling, who is the other half of Miss Sampson's immediate family, has written a sterling five reel story, which he is forwarding on to Russell Edgar Smith, of the Equitable scenario department, and he has expressed a wish that it be used as Miss Sampson's first vehicle with her new company.

Hudson Assisant to W. W. Hodkinson

Alfred J. Hudson, for the last two years president's secretary of the Thompson-Starrett Company, No. 51 Wall street, New York, has joined the Paramount Pictures Corporation in the capacity of assistant to W. W. Hodkinson.

Mr. Hudson was born in New York City, studied law at the New York Law School and practised for seven years. At one time he was with De Lancey Nicoll. Mr. Hudson brings to his new position a great deal of business experience. While he knows nothing of motion pictures, except that he likes to see them, it is expected that his advice in the many problems which confront the heads of such an organization as the Paramount will be valuable.

"The Thompson-Starrett Company," said Mr. Hudson, "is one of the biggest factors in building construction in this country. I thought that the field was becoming overcrowded, and when the chance offered to join the Paramount Pictures Corporation I decided to do so. My chief would only let me go when he had convinced himself of the responsibility of the Paramount organization and even then he said, 'If ever you want to come back, remember the job is here waiting for you.' It was very kind of him, and I appreciate it, but I feel fairly confident that I won't have to take advantage of his offer."

Ethel Clayton Remains with Lubin

Some over zealous press agent or lax editor has permitted it to be printed that Ethel Clayton has severed her connection with the Lubin Company and was to begin work immediately with a western production company. The Lubin Company hasten to deny such unfounded rumors and to assure exhibitors and the many friends of Miss Clayton that not only will she remain with the Lubin Company but that she has begun work on a new five reel feature V. L. S. E. Lubin release "Dollars and Cents" from the story by Albert Payson Terhune, in which she will be starred. The play will be produced under the direction of Joseph Kaufman.

Triangle's Still Studio

A complete and fully equipped portrait studio is being installed in one of the new Keystone buildings for the purpose of photographing art poses and action photographs of scenes in Triangle-Keystone comedies. This is another link in the chain which the Publicity Department of the Triangle Film Corporation in New York is forging to give its exhibitors and the public unexcelled service in the furnishing of artistic posters and "stills" for lobby display and interesting cuts for newspapers and magazines.

The exhibitors of Philadelphia will hold their fourth annual ball on Wednesday, December 8. They are anticipating a large attendance of stars, and hope they may get a Chicago delegation.

Detective Series for Centaur Features

CRANE WILBUR FEATURED

DAVID HORSLEY has had prepared and has just begun the production of a detective series to be known under the general heading of "The Adventures of Allan Dare," which he will release as Centaur Star features on the Mutual program. The first picture is sub-titled "The Phantom of the Road" and will be released December 22.

The fact that "The Adventures of Allan Dare" is a series does not mean that it will be a succession of disjointed episodes. In this case each release will be in itself a complete story, built upon a new adventure of Dare, and carried through to its final solution. One adventure will have no bearing upon the preceding subsequent one in the matter of the story, the only connection of one release with the other being in the use of the same characters throughout.

In this manner the trouble usually coming from a serial and series—that of theater patrons missing an episode and then losing interest because the thread of the story is broken—will be entirely obviated. Rather interest will be increased, a point which has been proved by the biggest magazines of the country applying the same principles of production. A few cases in point are the Reeve "Craig Kennedy" stories, the Booth Tarkington "Penrod" adventures and others of a like nature. These stories have built up a big cumulative following for the magazines that could not have been obtained had they been published serially. Mr. Horsley in following this idea feels sure that the series will be a big success, aside from the fact that he has selected stories of a type that are always popular in motion pictures.

The series is written by Crane Wilbur, who has shown exceptional ability as a photoplaywright by his stories "The Blood of Our Brothers" and "Could a Man Do More?" which were recently picturized by Mr. Horsley and released as Centaur features.

In the first picture, "The Phantom of the Road," Mr. Wilbur portrays a mysterious gentleman of leisure who appears on the road in a big black motor car and wearing black cloak, cap and mask. A murder mystery occurs and the guilt is fastened upon an innocent girl. The mysterious gentleman solves the problem and places the responsibility upon the proper party. Hardly has the girl time to thank him before he enters his car and is off in the night.

Besides the suspense coming from the element of mystery attached to the principal character, the picture has some remarkably thrilling scenes, one of them showing an auto carrying a group of people rushing over a high cliff and into the lake below.

Being set in modern times the scenario offers many chances for scenic beauty in the picture, of which full advantage has been taken. In the cast are Crane Wilbur, who plays Allan Dare; Carl Von Schiller, Edward Collins, Gordon Mullen, Celia Santon, Mrs. Williams and a host of others. The length of time the series will run has not been decided.

THE SELIG-TRIBUNE COMING

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial Supplanted by Topical Film to Be Made in Conjunction with "Chicago Tribune"

The Selig-Tribune, to be known as "the world's greatest news film," will soon makes it appearance in motion pictureland. The Selig Polyscope Company and the Chicago Tribune, known as "The World's Greatest Newspaper," have joined forces and are prepared to release an animated newspaper which for originality and enterprise will have few rivals.

The Selig-Tribune will supplant the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial and will be released twice weekly, every Monday and Thursday. The active co-operation of one of the greatest of film producing concerns and one of the greatest of American newspapers is certain to result in the filming of a most interesting and timely news pictorial.

The Chicago Tribune possesses one of the greatest news and pictorial staffs in the world. Correspondents and camera men represent the Tribune in all parts of the world. The Tribune has exclusive correspondents with all the European armies, in Mexico, in every capital in the world, and these wide-awake men and women will be working continually for the advancement of the Selig-Tribune.

A versatile staff of film editors has been organized and the Selig-Tribune will be released under their supervision. Many innovations are being planned, outside the beaten paths, and these new ideas are certain to be greatly appreciated by the pictureplay public.

It is being freely predicted that the Selig-Tribune will supply a long-felt want, and the first releases of this new film are being anticipated with great interest by exhibitors and the public.

Film Successes Depends on Action

Helen Holmes, the star of the new screen novel, "The Girl and the Game," sincerely believes that action is the life of pictures, and in an interview recently granted elaborates upon her belief as follows:

"The motto of today is action. To one in the vortex of a thrill-filled motion picture career this fact comes with compelling force. Mediocre plots and aimless stories have given way to virile stories carrying heart-stirring 'punches.' These latter require great skill on the part of the producer, somewhat of mental mechanics on the part of the author and limitless energy and daring on the part of the actor.

"There is a certain witchery about doing daring things that becomes part of one's being and urges one onward to new endeavors, new stunts and new risks in the exciting race for thrills. However, thrills must not be put into pictures merely because they are thrills. Rather there should be a definite and logical reason, the actual dare-devil stunts being woven together with a tense dramatic story.

"In 'The Girl and the Game' there is the most gripping succession of thrills I have ever seen in motion pictures and that is saying much, for many daring things have been accomplished.

"This new picturized novel—a real screen novel in chapters—is to my mind 'the thrill continuous.' And, too, the dramatic situations are threaded with an unusual tenseness, revealed in the story's unfolding in a manner both orderly and logical, and it is because there is a reason for them that they mean so much and stir one's heart to the full.

"For instance, in the first chapter of 'The Girl and the Game,' I am compelled to jump my horse 'Rocket' into a river from a bridge that has just been opened. I do not know that any other leading woman has ever attempted such a feat.

"It is something in which the element of personal risk is very great, but this is one of the demands upon a leading woman in pictures that must be met and met without her losing sympathy or that air of femininity of which we are all so proud.

"But by that I do not mean the frail side of woman. I mean the heroic side, deeds of valor based upon the highest ideals. Frank Hamilton Spearman, author of 'The Girl and the Game' certainly is the possessor of a wondrously inventive imagination, proved not only by the present story, but by his previous writings.

"In the past I have found it inconvenient to have an author's imagination tempered by the fear of possible personal injury to me. And in making this statement I do not believe I am any braver than some other women on the screen, only I realize keenly how insistent the public is for thrills and especially thrills in which a woman is the pivotal figure.

"It is because of this realization that in framing the scenario from Mr. Spearman's story I have made the thrills cascade throughout the chapters with a disregard to personal risk that is predicated neither on bravado nor a great courage, but to meet the public demand that the heroine 'live' the part and be all that the scenario makes her."

Cameraman's Unique Record

Taking over 50,000 feet of film in his last five productions for Pallas Pictures and not a single retake is the latest record hung up by Cameraman Fred Dobson. Not that such work is unusual among the clever operators in the profession but it calls attention anew to the veteran record Fred Dobson has made for himself.

Starting eighteen years ago with Lumiere's Pictures in Canada, Fred Dobson joined the Biograph in 1898 and in the ensuing nine years was electrician and operator, carpenter, scenic artist and photographer. It was the period when Biograph productions were dominant, and through his association with Griffith and the other graduates of this remarkable training school which has contributed so much to the present development of the business, Dobson now enjoys a unique prestige.

Dobson is a man of many attainments. One half of him is electrician and practical machinist, and what must be another half of him is banjoist, saxophonist, trombonist and executant on what makes a total of over fifteen musical instruments. For years he was a saxophone soloist with military bands, and later was a headline attraction in vaudeville. He inherits his musical skill from The Dobsons, an act comprised of members of his own family who were the first professional performers upon the banjo in the history of the stage. It is accordingly this rather startling admixture of the practical mechanical genius and the artist of advanced taste which gives Fred Dobson's camera work the reinforced excellence of being not only flawless but fine. Pallas Pictures apparently have a treasure in this cameraman.

Virginia Pearson Appears in Person

Virginia Pearson, the beautiful Vitagraph star who makes her initial appearance under this banner in "The Turn of the Road," received the hearty congratulations of her friends who came to the New York theater on Wednesday evening to witness the metropolitan debut of this production. On conclusion of the final scene of "The Turn of the Road," the New York theater audience, which packed the house to the doors, enthusiastically applauded the film. On presenting Miss Pearson to the audience, the popularity of this charming lady was effectively demonstrated by the prolonged reception accorded her. Miss Pearson, who had just arrived at the theater in time to hear the applause which the film had received, thanked the patrons of the New York for their kind appreciation of her efforts and related several interesting incidents in connection with the production of her first performance for the Vitagraph Company.

Virginia Pearson

Miss Pearson has had remarkable success on the speaking stage, one of her most noted characterizations being the Vampire Woman in Robert Hilliard's production of "A Fool There Was," in which play she appeared for two years. Despite the fact that the pretty stage star is but a recent acquisition to the film field, she is rapidly becoming a favorite with patrons of the motion picture theaters throughout the country.

Film Shown in Church

For the first time, as far as known, a motion picture feature was shown in a church in New York City in place of the regular service. This picture was "Destiny, or The Soul of a Woman," the sensational five-part Metro feature, which was exhibited Sunday, November 7, in the Roman Catholic Church of the Most Holy Redeemer, at 224 East Fourth street. Rev. Father Henry Sippel, the pastor, preached a sermon on the story of the feature picture the following Sunday at the last mass. The production, which was made by the Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc., was shown under the personal direction of the pastor and under the auspices of the St. Vincent De Paul Society.

Although "Destiny, or The Soul of a Woman" is essentially worldly in theme, Father Sippel deemed it so powerful and impressive in sending home a strong moral that he arranged to have his flock see it.

UNIT SYSTEM FOR PAPER

Vitagraph to Begin Innovation That Will Permit Exhibitors to Use Any Unit of Twenty-Four Sheets They Desire

The latest innovation in the general movement for better posters is the division of twenty-four sheets into units, so that any part or the whole of the sheet may be used by the exhibitor as he chooses.

This new idea was conceived by Albert E. Smith, treasurer and general manager of the Vitagraph Company, for the Blue Ribbon Features released through the V. L. S. E., Inc., and was executed by John W. Grey, assistant to Mr. Smith.

Commencing with "The Cave Man," which is scheduled for release on November 29, this company will put out a twenty-four sheet, made up of three separate eight-sheets, and lithographed in such a way that the exhibitor can utilize any one of the three by simply pasting a strip across the top or the bottom. The number of units of the twenty-four sheets may vary, but they will all be devised in a form permitting different sizes of the paper to be used at the discretion of the exhibitor.

For instance, on "A Price for Folly," which will be released December 13, the twenty-four sheet is arranged in such a way that there are two three's and a six-sheet available for separate use. This gives the exhibitor three threes, two sixs, a one, half and twenty-four sheet on the same release.

The scheme permits a variety in paper which cannot be secured by any other means, as the expense of getting three or four different subjects on the different sizes of paper would be too great. Furthermore, the exhibitor can use these units on separate eight sheet borders—or any other size he may desire—instead of twenty-four sheet stands, and thereby reduce the cost of his billboard charges. In other words, he gets three posters for the price of one.

Two More Experts for Horsley

In line with his policy to continually strive for the betterment of his productions David Horsley had added to his staff at the studio in Los Angeles two experts whose services are sure to be favorably reflected in future Horsley releases. The two additions are in the persons of Ulysses Davis, director, and Frank Crompton, technical director, both prominent in their respective vocations.

Mr. Davis was with Mr. Horsley before. Six years ago, in the early days of the Centaur Film Company, of which Mr. Horsley is the head, Davis was a member of the staff, first as a player and later as a director. He remained with Mr. Horsley for twelve months and then became associated with another organization.

Mr. Davis is now at work on his first picture. It is to be a two-reel Centaur feature entitled "The Hindoo's Way," and was written by Miss Theodosia Harris, co-author of "The Martyrs of the Alamo" and other successes, who is now a member of Mr. Horsley's scenario staff. The picture, which will be played by a large cast of principals and the Bostock animals, will be released in December.

Frank Crompton, Mr. Horsley's other acquisition, has for the past eight years been accepted as one of the best authorities on technical construction in the motion picture business. He will supervise the technical direction of all the Horsley productions made in Los Angeles.

Mr. Crompton's first effort with Mr. Horsley is in the construction of sets used in "Could a Man Do More?" a three-reel Centaur feature with Crane Wilbur, which is to be released November 24 on the Mutual program.

The factory fire scene in "Children of Eve," the Edison photodrama released through Kleine-Edison feature service. In the photoplay the flames completely level this building in a most spectacular fire scene.

Syndicating Mary's Life Story

So much has been said of late in reference to the popularity of Mary Pickford, the Famous Players-Paramount star, that the opinion of Clinton T. Brainard, who is the president of the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, expressed at a recent dinner in Washington, is of particular interest at this time.

After telling the guests that he had just completed arrangements with Miss Pickford whereby he would syndicate a story of her life, Mr. Brainard said: "The terms of the contract provide that we pay Miss Pickford $15,000 for this story. I know of no other artist in the world whom I would be willing to pay for an article of this kind. In most cases, actresses, musicians, etc., pay handsomely for such publicity, but in the case of Mary Pickford it is different.

"The Pickford story at the present time promises to be a far better seller for the syndicate that those of Roosevelt, Taft, Bryan or President Wilson.

"That these articles will stimulate a still greater demand for Miss Pickford's photoplays is certain, as they will be read by millions of persons all over the world."

When asked by a friend at the dinner if the newspapers would be willing to pay for an article of this kind Mr. Brainard replied that the day that he first announced the story he received sixty-one telegrams asking for an option on it.

Marguerite Snow Again in East

Marguerite Snow, the Metro star, has arrived in New York from Hollywood, Cal., accompanied by the Quality Pictures Corporation company of players, which she will head in future Metro features. Hereafter, Miss Snow will work in the east. "Rosemary," a five-part picturization of the play of the same name, has just been finished at the Quality-Metro studio in Hollywood, and Miss Snow appears in the stellar role.

Peter Lang of Lubin

Pete Lang of the Lubin Company lays claim justly to coming pretty close to being the Grandpop of Lubinville. As Pete explains it, "I just seem to have stuck along, growing to love and become one of the landmarks of the place, never creating a furore of excitement over my work and yet being more or less in demand every minute of the day—one minute hearing a call that I can cast as the boss of the opposition political party, then a candidate of another party, first a comedian then a tear provoker—sometimes a star and other times just a filler—one day a kid, the next a grandpop—in fact anything and everything except that as yet I have done no female impersonating, chiefly because my chest has slipped down to where my waist line once was." "Modest and Versatile Pete," as his colleagues of the Lubin studio call him, is loved by all of Lubinville and is praised by every man jack of the directors and he has grown as an essential about "the yard"—the most used man of the staff. From 7:30 in the morning until the last man had crawled away in his flivver, you'll find Pete on the job, on the bench by the gate, keeping 'em in convulsions with a "parlor story" or two and then probably the next minute trotting in to play the part which it is sure fire betting the critics are going to say "was played by Pete Lang as it should be played and as only Pete Lang can play it."

Peter Lang

Film May Show Advance Fashions

Exquisite gowns worn by Mary Boland are no small part of the attraction of "The Edge of the Abyss," the Ince-Triangle feature, in which she is starred with Frank Mills and Willard Mack. As the wife of a wealthy lawyer, she is discovered in a part that offers a wide field of opportunity for a display of her wardrobe. And her gowns are of the latest mode. In fact it is said they are just a whisper ahead of the present style showings.

Miss Boland makes her debut on the screen in the Thomas H. Ince production. For this reason her work undoubtedly will be watched with great interest by admirers, who for years have followed her career on the speaking stage. That she loses nothing of her personal charm and still further demonstrates her ability as an actress of merit is the declaration of those who have witnessed early showings of the play.

Although Miss Boland has been on the stage since she was 16 years of age, she has never played a season without appearing in New York City, and for several seasons the Metropolis claimed all of her time. Because of her charming personality and a certain poise, she has been the favorite of the "smart set." Her ability to catch fashion's trend and set the pace for the best dressed women of New York is claimed to be partly responsible for her success.

Triangle Houses Prospering

Enormous business and unanimously favorable comments from the country-wide press have characterized the entry of the Triangle Film Corporation into the service field, beginning the week of November 7. The list of theaters using the service now reaches 300 and it is growing every week. The Eighty-first Street in Manhattan, the Spooner in the Bronx and the Triangle in Brooklyn are all playing to gratifying receipts, in fact capacity is the rule most matinees and nights. The B. S. Moss chain of theaters in New York took up the service beginning November 15. Particular interest attaches to the experiment at the Regent, Harlem's leading theater, at One Hundred and Sixteenth street and Seventh avenue, which is one of New York's principal uptown playhouses. Other Moss houses where the service will be shown include the Jefferson theater, Fourteenth street and Third avenue; Eighty-sixth Street theater, Eighty-sixth street and Third avenue, and the Hamilton theater, One Hundred and Forty-sixth street and Broadway. Most of these houses will split the bill, offering "The Lamb" and "A Game Old Knight" the first half week and "My Valet" and "The Iron Strain" the second half week. Clippings from newspapers in Cleveland, Chicago, Baltimore, Nashville, Houston, Denver, Minneapolis and other cities show that enthusiastic crowds and big applause for the plays and stars have marked the general inauguration of the exhibitor's releases.

Rosenthal with All Feature

After seven years of activity in the motion picture affairs of Chicago, Al Rosenthal has yielded to the call of Broadway and joined the forces of the All Feature Booking Agency at 71 West Twenty-third street, New York. Starting with the Virginia Amusement Company of Chicago in 1908, Mr. Rosenthal was connected with the successful establishment of the Jefferson, Arch and Virginia theaters, later managing the Apollo theater for the Louise Amusement Company. When Warner's Features came into being, he joined forces with the Chicago branch of that organization, being one of the first feature road men to cover the territory of the middle west. From the Warner exchange he moved to the World Film, later becoming identified with Metro. He is now receiving a royal welcome from his many friends in New York and meeting for the first time scores of business associates with whom he has had a phone, wire or mail acquaintance for many years.

Robert Warwick in Demand

It is said that the famous theatrical manager, Wm. A. Brady, wants Robert Warwick to appear in a new play, as well as to continue his daily work in World Film features. Last spring, Mr. Warwick did double duty in this respect, appearing by night and at matinees in "A Celebrated Case," and acquitting himself as both silent and speaking actor with the greatest credit.

Equitable Completes Equipment of Studio

MANY DIRECTORS BUSY

GENERAL MANAGER FELIX F. FEIST, of the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, this week announced the completion of all equipment at the Equitable's Fifty-second street studio, New York City, and the commencement of work there by three Equitable directors.

When Frank Powell, Charles Seay and John Ince begin on their productions, Equitable hopes and anticipates optimistically that by February 1 it will have, at least, fifteen finished productions on the shelf, and thereby be enabled to diversify its releases as it has planned to do.

In addition to Powell, Ince, S. E. V. Taylor, Seay and E. Mason Hopper, Webster Cullison, Edmund Lawrence, Joseph Golden and Harry Pollard are busily engaged on productions at Flushing, Long Island, Fifty-second street, or at the Triumph studio in the Bronx.

Three permanent stars, Muriel Ostriche, Gail Kane and Margarita Fischer, are either at work or awaiting their next vehicle. Miss Kane has finished "The Labyrinth," Margarita Fischer is on the final scenes of "The Dragon," and Muriel Ostriche has just completed her first Equitable release, "A Daughter of the Sea." Now Brandon Tynan, Frank Sheridan, Molly McIntyre, Emmett Corrigan, Henry Kolker and Gail Kane are to begin work at once at one of the three Equitable producing headquarters.

Another tremendous leap to the front is promised by Equitable, through an arrangement now being made whereby twelve of the most noted writers of the day are to devote their time to producing material for the Equitable screen.

Eugene Walters, author of "Paid in Full," "The Wolf," "The Easiest Way," "The Wife," and "Homeward Bound," is about to conclude arrangements with the Equitable to furnish six original and virile stories a year; Rachel Crothers, whose numerous plays and novels have established her as a factor in fictiondom; Harriet Ford, author of "The Argyle Case," "The Dummy," and other plays; Edwin Milton Royle, author of a large number of big stories and plays, including "The Squaw Man," and eight other noted writers, are under arrangement with Equitable to produce a certain number of stories and plots, and it is thought that work will begin on this material within a few weeks.

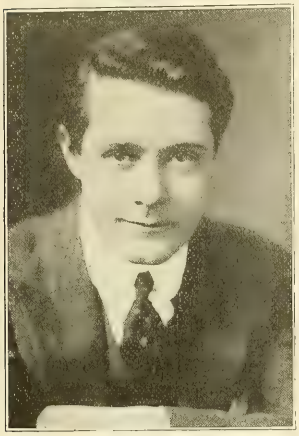
William Stoermer, until recently studio manager for Thomas Ince with Triangle, has assumed a similar position at Equitable's Fifty-second street studio and, under the general direction of Isidore Bernstein, will handle the material side of all productions at that place.

The fact that William Courtenay's picture, "Sealed Lips," based on "The Silence of Dean Maitland," in which Mr. Courtenay was supported by Mary Charleson, formerly of Lubin, and Arthur Ashley, formerly of Metro and Thanhouser, two purely screen actors, turned out so generally excellent, leads Equitable to adhere to the policy of blending stage and screen stars in each of the forthcoming plays.

For Frank Sheridan's production of "The Man Higher Up," a mixed cast of players has been assembled. The cast is the result of Equitable's new policy of endowing each of its productions with the very best talent obtainable, without consideration of primary cost.

In addition to Mr. Sheridan, the cast of "The Man Higher Up" will include Clara Whipple and Mary Charleson, two regular screen players who are members of the Equitable's regular stock cast. Charles Gleason, Frank Beamish, Harry Spingler, George Arbine, and William H. Tooker, all of whom have appeared in principal parts in feature productions, and have proven their worth, will have important roles in Sheridan's picture. Marie Booth, Myrtis Coney and Mary Weston will handle the lesser feminine parts.

Teddy Sampson.



Marguerita Fischer.

Muriel Ostriche.

George Le Guere of Metro

George Le Guere, the popular juvenile actor, who is featured in "The Turmoil," a five-part picturization of Booth Tarkington's novel, and produced for the Metro program by the Columbia Pictures Corporation, has been signed by Oliver Morosco for the leading male role in the play, "The Songbird." However, this will not interfere with Mr. Le Guere's arrangement to appear in at least six big Metro features a year, as his stage contract only calls for a New York engagement. Mr. Le Guere had the same role in "The Songbird" in a brief engagement last season in Chicago and Los Angeles. Jane Cowl was starred in the production.

George Le Guere.

"Destiny, or The Soul of a Woman," in which Mr. Le Guere is featured and Emily Stevens is starred, has proved to be a sensation on the Metro program. Everywhere it is shown there are demands for a return engagement. In this production Mr. Le Guere has the role of a young man reared in a monastery, where he had been left as a child. Mr. Le Guere proved invaluable to Director Edwin Carewe when the picture was made.

Thin Folks Attention!

Russ Powell, the 300 pound infant of Vogue Films, Inc., has what he calls a "taxicab shape." Russ, like all fat men, is of a happy disposition and loves to see others enjoy themselves, even if it is at his own expense. Recently Russ was invited to discourse for a certain publication on the art of being "fit and fat." He did, laying down certain rules to keep one's weight up to the point where it is best described in tonnage figures.

"To remain as fat as an elephant and of about the same general and graceful outlines," said Russ, "always get up from the table hungry, abstain from all starchy foods, take long walks after each meal, and accept the advice of all your friends on how to be lithe and sylphlike.

"I am not naturally fat. My parents were medium sized people and had I not begun to try all sorts of reducing methods, gone off on a rampage of diets and tackled the intracies of standing on my neck to reduce my girth, and on my girth to reduce my neck, I would probably now be a mere walking skeleton. As it happened, all the 'sure thinning' schemes added to my avoirdupois, until my friends were very much alarmed when I recently fell off to a mere 289 pounds. All of which goes to show that the way to be fat is to try and get thin, for every little diet has a meaning all its own—with the accent on the 'mean.'"

In Vogue comedies Powell surprises by his wonderful agility in spite of his great bulk.

This happy aggregation are the funmakers of the Vim Company upon their arrival at Jacksonville, Florida, where they will appear in Vim comedies in the Lubin Studio. From left to right the crowd consists of: Bottom row—"Bobbie" Burns, Louis Burstein and "Walt" Stull. Second row—"Babe" Hardy, Ione Lyle, Helen Gilmore, Ethel Burton, Edna Reynolds, Mildred Burstein, Anna Mingus and Harry Naughton. Top row—Fred T. O'Neil, Frank Hanson and Robin Williams.

William Courtenay Praises Mary Charleson

William Courtenay, now playing in his first screen production, "Greater Love," for the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, and having his first experience as (to quote him) "an outside actor," pays a warm tribute to women of the screen. Mr. Courtenay is being supported by Mary Charleson, who is now permanently with Equitable and who boasts seven years as a camera actress.

"I found this little woman ready at all times to jump right into action. Never have I seen so many and so varied accomplishments in one woman. Swimming, riding, tennis, golf, motor-cycling, auto-driving, diving, athletic stunts and acting. How actresses of the screen, called upon to play a different role each day, must study to accomplish so much and to learn to do the things she does well.

"Miss Charleson in 'Greater Love' enacts an emotional role as well as the average talented stage actress. She turns from a highly emotional part to some strenuous effort called for by the scenario and then, with equal vim and surprising talent turns back to another emotional scene. The power of the motion picture actress to keep up the enthusiasm and temperament when they play disjointed stories, stamps her as a real actress. It is far harder to act with any real merit when the story you are acting is so broken that rarely, if ever, do two scenes come in consecution."

The latest captures of the Feature Film Corporation from the ranks of the stage stars who are being wooed into the film world are Robert Edeson and Jose Collins, who will appear under the direction of Director-in-Chief Edouard José, as co-stars in a picturization of Kipling's world famous story "The Light That Failed."

Mr. José has, in supervising the scenario, had in mind not only the personalities of these two well known players, but has elaborated the original story in such a way that each artist will have far greater scope for a proven talent than they have ever had heretofore.

Director Cox Stages Unique Film

MILLIONAIRES AS PLAYERS

A GOOD illustration of just what can be done by a man who is earnest, who makes his environment and does not allow his environment to make him, appears to be fittingly true regarding George L. Cox, the well known producer, according to complimentary reviews by every prominent newspaper in the city of St. Louis, Mo., whither Mr. Cox recently journeyed with a numerous company to film certain important scenes which his scenario demanded should be taken in a regular banking institution instead of the usual prop studio stuff.

Through the courtesy of Breckenridge Jones, president of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, Mr. Cox was enabled to install his lighting equipment, rehearse his people and, for good measure, work in nearly eight hundred depositors for atmospheric purposes. Not content with this arrangement the wily director suavely and diplomatically managed to borrow a set of perfectly good bank directors who unwittingly walked into the cleverly baited trap by being assured that if the scenes in which they figured did not meet with their unqualified approval, they would be deleted by the censor.

Reading from left to right—George Cox, producing director; Ernest Ingalls, leading man; G. Prather Knapp of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, and Adrienne Kroell, playing female lead.

The Sunday magazine section of the Post-Dispatch recalls the novel situation in this manner: "There they sat in a golden setting worthy the honor thus bestowed by the film czar. In the aggregate the officials owned in their own persons many millions of dollars. In the vaults of bank beneath them reposed nearly $5,000,000 in hard cash, and securities of nearly $25,000,000; as directors of the institution they had absolute executive control of its assets of more than $29,000,000. Probably the camera had never before uttered is unabashed clicks in more sumptuous surroundings. Then the directors each permitted a bank clerk to place in their hands bits of paper stamped with the United States government's guarantee that it was worth $5, this being the regular fee of a director for attending a meeting of the board, but as the event was too exciting to permit of much bank business being done, it really represented their pay as film actors. It was probably the largest fee for the time spent before the camera ever paid to cinema thespians. It is true that each of the capitalists collected only $5 for gracing the film with their physiognomies, but they posed for only two minutes, so this was at the rate of $2.50 a minute, $150 an hour, $1,200 a day for a day of eight hours, and $7,200 for a week of six days.

"It must be admitted that these magnates had celebrity as film characters thrust upon them, but it must also be confessed that they made no violent exertions to dodge the mantle of fame. There was not only no objection, there was positive delight at the prospect of preserving their features in the films for the edification of posterity as well as of the contemporaneous world."

At the conclusion of the novel picture stunt Mr. Cox and his associates were tendered a banquet at the Hotel Planters, only to be followed by another affair at the City Club, one of the oldest and most exclusive social and business organizations in town. During a few brief remarks uttered on this occasion Mr. Cox is quoted in part as follows: "Primarily I am distinctly opposed to public speaking, unless one has something to say, and as a matter of fact we rarely ever have. The things you are most naturally interested in at the moment concern pictures and their production, manufacture, etc., but experience has taught me that such subjects are best tabooed in social or semi-social gatherings of this nature, because it is quite impossible to render a full and intelligent account of the industry, which at best I should not care to venture into even though it were possible in the limited time at my disposal.

"We are constantly reminded of the undisputed fact that no man is a law entirely sufficient unto himself, and nowhere this side of the great divide is this truer than in picture production and distribution. The wise ones appreciate that at best they are only tiny spokes subservient to the giant wheel which is made possible through public co-operation and support. That our efforts merit your patronage is best attested by the proof of our being able to compete with every known condition, which under ordinary circumstances would destroy a less powerful and determined institution.

"Our slogan is, 'Love Your Work or Quit;' we have little patience with the idler, though on the other hand the dreamer has created noteworthy masterpieces which would have been hopelessly impossible without the delicacy, poetic sense of feeling and keen insight so necessary to the true artist. It is not always the big blustering fellow with sleeves rolled up, shirt bared at the throat and swashbuckler gait, working at white heat, who gets the best results out of a threadbare plot. More often than not he overestimates his own importance and is snowed under by the quiet little fellow who finds time for birds and flowers and books, calm and manly under criticism or praise, chuckling now and then because the other fellow, who does not and cannot understand, dubs him a 'nut.'

"I am often asked by picture aspirants the swiftest goal to success. Frankly, there is none. Work alone counts, in this game as in any other. Eminence attained without it is rarely ever permanent, because sinecures have a fatal way of deserting one at the crucial moment.

Directors of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company. From left to right—John I. Beggs, R. H. Stockton, H. W. Peters, James E. Brock, H. S. Ames, R. J. O'Reilley and S. E. Hoffman. Standing is Mr. McIntyre, manager of real estate department, not a director of the bank.

"Personally speaking, I believe the field of motion pictures to be one of the most attractive, lucrative and far reaching sciences ever offered to those with energy, brains, perseverance, stick-to-it-iveness, and ability.

"While all pictures are not by any means perfect, they are as nearly perfect as care, intelligence and money can command at the present time. The future will be marked with epoch making achievements, eclipsing even those of the past, because we are in the very van of progress, always on the lookout for the new and progressive, otherwise we would quickly become back numbers. The new and the up to date everywhere is crowding out the old, and this is the prime moving spirit, the backbone, blood, heart and sinew of picturedom in general. Never idle, never content to rest on their laurels, ever keen and alert to harness new tricks of the trade and above all things at all times, to please the vast multitudes to whom we cater."

Percentage Bookings Work Well

Mike Donlin in "Right Off the Bat," which is now being sold to the state rights' buyers by the All Feature Booking Agency, was launched in New York and New England by only booking certain theaters and playing them on a percentage basis. An advance man was sent out with the picture, and the advertising carefully planned. The advantage of this method was two-fold. Every section of the country was covered and the amount of money earned by the feature greatly exceeded first run rentals. Many requests for straight bookings were received, but were refused until the three prints available for the territory had played their circuits. These prints are now ready for regular rental and are booking with a rapidity that speaks well for the manner in which they were introduced.

The All Feature Booking Agency is prepared to launch five new features in the same way. Pawnee Bill in "The White Chief," Pawnee Bill in "The Frontier Detective," Pawnee Bill in "The Buffalo Hunters," May Lillie in "Queen of the Buffalo Ranch," and "The Fire King." Each of these productions is in five reels and will eventually be sold to state rights' buyers and booked to theaters on a straight rental basis. But first they will be sent upon the road in the eastern territory, which the All Feature company books direct, and after they have proven their box office value and been advertised to the best advantage, they will be open for regular bookings.

Edna Mayo's Dog "Frisky"

The only actor known to have successfully run the blockade of submarines in European waters is "Frisky," Essanay's latest acquisition to its force of players. Frisky boasts of the bluest kind of blue blood in his veins and hails from Pomerania on the Baltic sea. He has a pedigree nearly as long as that of the Hohenzollerns, and clearly shows his pride in it in his superior air and intelligent face. The dog was sent to Miss Edna Mayo, leading woman with Essanay, by a friend in London. He was smuggled over from Prussia, first going to Denmark however, on a neutral ship.

Edna Mayo.

From New York "Frisky" came to Chicago in a drawing room, which it occupied all by itself, with the exception of an attendant who was hired in Gotham to wait on its needs until it was placed in the hands of its mistress. Frisky was quite glad to cuddle up in Miss Mayo's arms after its long journey. It now has quite recovered from travel weariness and is quite at home in Miss Mayo's dressing room or on the studio floor where it waits while Miss Mayo goes through her parts.

The dog has already been introduced to the art of acting and has appeared in several scenes with Miss Mayo. Frisky is intelligent from his sharp little nose to the end of his silky tail. It is one of the smallest Pomeranians, weighing but little more than four pounds. It promises, with Miss Mayo's training, to become as clever an actor as its mistress.

Thanksgiving Slides

Theater managers all over the country are accustomed at Thanksgiving time to throw slides on their screens conveying to the patrons the season's greetings. With this thought in mind the Novelty Slide Company, 67 West Twenty-third street, New York City, has prepared a number of tasty slides that would be appropriate and a pamphlet descriptive of the line will be mailed for the asking. An excellent line of Thanksgiving advertising slides for merchants is also available.

Pathe Gets All of A. H. Wood's Plays

FILM ADAPTATIONS START IMMEDIATELY

AN ANNOUNCEMENT of extraordinary interest in both theatrical and motion picture circles is made by Pathe and A. H. Woods. Arrangements have just been perfected whereby Pathe receives the motion picture rights to all the plays that have been and will be produced by Mr. Woods. Thus the largest theatrical producer of the day becomes allied with the oldest of the motion picture concerns, and one of the largest of the independent manufacturers. The list of plays which thus becomes available for motion picture purposes is a most remarkable one, embracing as it does many of the greatest theatrical successes of recent years.

A. H. Woods.

These plays have been the prize for which many motion picture concerns have been angling for many a day. At the time the papers were signed there were three large immediate cash offers lying upon Mr. Woods' desk. With the acquistion of the plays, Pathe becomes the possessor of one of the best stocks of picture material held by any company. That they will add prestige to the Gold Rooster program, on which they will be placed, goes without question.

George Fitzmaurice, who, because of his great ability, has been entrusted by Pathe with the production of adaptations from famous dramatic successes, will produce many of these A. H. Woods plays. In his casts will be used so far as possible the actors who appeared in the original productions, among whom are many of the leading players of the day, such as Florence Reed and Robert Edeson. The pictures will be made in the very best manner, regardless of expense. George Brackett Seitz, the Pathe scenario editor, and Ouida Bergere, both well known playwrights, will make the adaptations. The first play to be filmed will be "New York," with Miss Florence Reed. Work on this picture will be started at once by Mr. Fitzmaurice.

General Manager Louis J. Gasnier of Pathe put through the deal with Mr. Woods, assisted by George F. Miller and G. Van Werveke, of the Pathe forces. Mr. Woods was represented by Martin Herman, his general manager, and Ralph I. Kohn, his private secretary.

The rise of A. H. Woods from the domain of ten-cent melodrama to a position in the front rank of theatrical producers is one of the most spectacular in the history of the American theater. In a comparatively few years he established himself as the most successful, the most original and the most daring of managers. Looking over the list of "hits" in the past five years, we find the name of A. H. Woods associated with the majority of the most emphatic ones. For instance, it was Mr. Woods who gave us that international musical success, "Madame Sherry," to be followed later in the operatic field by the melodious "Gypsy Love," which enchanted two continents. It was A. H. Woods who staged the well remembered laughable farce, "The Girl in the Taxi," which was also subsequently played abroad. It remained for the same manager to make a star of Julian Eltinge, the famous impersonator, whose popularity is ever on the increase. When it came time to dedicate the new Eltinge theater in New York it was A. H. Woods who picked "Within the Law" for the initial attraction. The phenomenal success of this drama of the shop girl is too widely known to need added comment. And who has not heard of or laughed at the greatest tribute to Woods' ability to give the public what it wants, namely, the famous "Potash & Perlmutter"?

L. J. Gasnier.

Even more recently Mr. Woods has given the public such pronounced successes as "The Song of Songs," "Kick In," "Innocent," "The High Cost of Loving," "The Yellow Ticket," "Common Clay," and "Abe and Mawruss," the last two the most notable successes of the current season.

A Woods' cast has come to have a special significance to American playgoers. Mr. Woods has assembled under his banner such prominent players as John Mason, Jane Cowl, Dorothy Donnelly, Florence Reed, Richard Bennett, Julian Eltinge, Barney Bernard, Madame Cottrelly, Irene Fenwick, Cyril Keightley, Thomas A. Wise, Forrest Winant, Pauline Frederick, Lew Fields, Douglas Fairbanks, John Barrymore, Josephine Victor, Jane Grey, Emmett Corrigan, Macy Harlan, Marguerite Sylva, Dustin Farnum, William Farnum, Bernard Granville, Adele Ritchie, Sam Bernard, Louise Dresser, and a host of other celebrated ones.

Mr. Woods is owner of the Eltinge theater, and lessee and manager of the Republic theater in New York. He personally selected Pathe to be the medium by which his plays are to be presented to the public in picture form, because he felt that the prestige and excellent organization of that house would insure the widest possible distribution.

Frances Thompson of Raver

Frances Thompson, the comely brunette who appears in the first Raver Film Corporation production, "The Other Girl," as Myrtle Morrison, the "Dancing Venus," had a very significant compliment paid to her uncommon beauty last week. The noted artist, Carl Van Buskirk, has selected her as model for some front cover girl faces that he is at the present time specializing in.

Frances Thompson.

The story of the affair is this: Mr. Van Buskirk and Percy Winter have known each other for the last ten years. One evening last week, the artist paid the director a visit at the latter's hotel and was extended an invitation to witness the filming of some scenes of the production at the Staten Island studio. On Friday last, the noted portrait painter availed himself of Mr. Winter's offer and while observing the action discovered the wealth of beauty in face and form possessed by Miss Thompson. The pulchritudinous brunette recognized her opportunity and consented to pose for him in his Manhattan studio after the completion of her part of the Raver production.

The little Raver star's experience is unique in the respect that it is the contrary mode of procedure for most pretty models who usually pose for the artist first and then break into pictures. Mr. Van Buskirk is to be complimented for his selection of Frances Thompson as a type for his talented brush.

Press Sees "Who's Guilty?"

Accompanied by officials of the Arrow Film Company and the Pathe Exchange, Inc., a party of trade press representatives visited the Yonkers studio of Arrow, where the Pathe "Who's Guilty?" series is in course of production, and witnessed the filming of a cabaret scene. Emmy Wehlen and Howard Estabrook, co-stars in the series, were in the scene, in which Director Howell Hansel used fifty-six "extras."

Bernice Sibeck, a well known cabaret danseuse, played the part of the dancing girl in this scene, which occurs in the second episode, entitled "Grist of the Mill." The beautiful set, with its excellent table service, which was furnished by a fashionable New York caterer, and Mr. Hansel's style of direction and strict attention to the most minute details, made interesting watching.

The party paid a personal visit to Miss Wehlen, who received the newspaper men in her dressing room and proved even a prettier girl and more interesting conversationalist in reality than on the screen. In speaking of the scarcity of good photoplay stories, Miss Wehlen expressed the belief that the "Who's Guilty?" series would meet with the public's approval, as the stories have dramatic value and consistency, in addition to furnishing herself and Mr. Estabrook with opportunities for the little bits of work which excite human interest and bring the plays closer to the people.

New Prints of "Heart of Maryland"

New prints and a new campaign are ready for the new season of Mrs. Leslie Carter in "The Heart of Maryland," the big six-reel Belasco play produced by Herbert Brennon for the Tiffany Films Corporation. The new bookings are now being taken and it is pointed out that while these bookings can be arranged at the Metro exchanges, the picture is not and never has been on the regular Metro program.

"The Heart of Maryland," played to 139,000 persons in nine days at the New York Hippodrome, and it has been booked continuously ever since. It was because of the drawing power of the feature that new prints were ordered and the new advertising campaign entered into.

Joseph W. Engel, of the Tiffany Company, said this week in speaking of this feature: "We aim to show 'The Heart of Maryland' to 50,000 persons before our goal is reached and although this figure may seem sizable I believe confidently that we will reach it."

The new bookings are being arranged now for time that extends beyond the holidays, and it is believed that "The Heart of Maryland" will record itself as a screen classic before another six months.

World Film in Canada

The Canadian rights of all the World Film, Equitable and Paragon features will in the future be handled by the World Features, Ltd., capitalized at $5,000,000, with chief offices at Toronto. Of World Features, Ltd., H. B. Wright is secretary and treasurer as well as general manager of the corporation. Mr. Wright is an experienced exhibitor with a thorough knowledge of the exhibitors' requirements. He successfully conducted a chain of Canadian motion picture houses called Regent Theaters, Ltd.

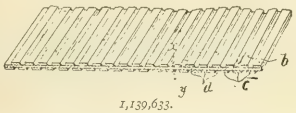
He intends instituting a dominion wide advertising campaign on behalf of motion picture exhibitors using World Film features in Canada.

His first release under the new management will be "A Butterfly on the Wheel," with Holbrook Blinn in the lead. Mr. Wright considers this one of the finest motion pictures ever made, and predicts that it will be enormously popular in Canada.

A Newsy House Organ

The Olympic-Majestic Amusement Company of Bellaire, Ohio, on November 8 began the publishing of a little four page newspaper, The Motion Picture News, which will appear on Monday, Wednesday and Friday of each week, and will be distributed, it is claimed, in every home in the city of Bellaire.

The Motion Picture News is a splendidly printed, well edited little sheet and extremely newsy, giving the theater patrons an excellent idea of the coming attractions at the Olympic and Majestic theaters, which are operated by the Olympic-Majestic Amusement Company and carrying, as well, the advertisements of a great many local concerns.



Recent Patents in Motography

REVIEWED BY DAVID S. HULISFH

1,139,633. Film for Color Photography and Method of Making the Same. Issued to R. G. Bradshaw and J. C. Lyell, London, England.

A paragraph from the patent claims will explain the method clearly:

The method of manufacturing films for color photography and cinematography, which consists in applying color to one side of a colored film and a different color to the other side, and then scraping away portions of the said color in such manner that the parts from which the color has been removed on each side expose the color on the other side.

1,139,633.

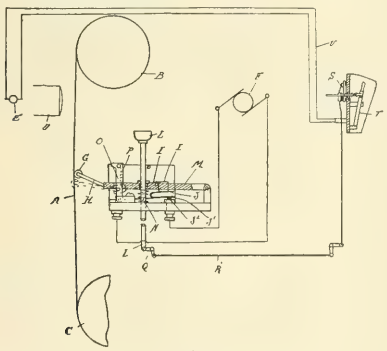
A necessary precaution for film for motion pictures would be that the films for the same colors would have different locations for successive pictures, or that succeeding patches be full picture image size.

1,139,731. Film Feeding Mechanism. Issued to Andrew Schustek, Chicago, Ill.



In a film feeding mechanism, a sprocket, a film support or film guide, the surface of which is adjacent to the teeth of the sprocket, and means for adjusting the film support to and from the axis of the sprocket to increase or decrease the radial distances at which the teeth of the sprocket will engage the sprocket holes of the film to make the distance between sprocket teeth properly match the film holes.

1,139,731.

1,138,744. Safety Device for Projectors. Issued to Benjamin Garros, Detroit, Mich., assignor to C. E.

1,138,744.

Allinger, C. A. Strelinger, C. T. Bush, and M. E. Jones, Detroit, Mich.

The film is driven by an electric motor, an idler pulley is mounted upon a rocking arm and presses against the tight film, and an electric contact which may be closed by the rocking arm is arranged to stop the motor in case the film should break and permit the roller to move to such a position that the arm can close the contact.

BUSINESS GOOD IN ENGLAND

English Buyer Here to Secure New Films Declares Theaters Are Doing Big Business Despite the War

The war in England, instead of affecting the American photoplay market adversely, as was originally feared, has really aided greatly to increase its popularity according to the statement of a representative of the English house of C. H. Hauff, Ltd., of 62 Great Russell street, London, England, who is here to complete arrangements for the marketing of a large number of prints of the new Kriterion production.

In discussing the matter he said: "Business is better than ever in spite of the war. This is due to the fact that there is more than enough work for everybody at salaries greater than ordinary, and as a result more work people frequent the motion picture theaters. It is also due to the fact that many women are receiving the pay of their soldier husbands and have more money to spend and more freedom to spend it.

"The arrangement of the renters and importers has also helped to make the situation better all around. The announcement of the new tariff that went into effect on September 29 of one pence (two cents) a foot on positives and half pence (one cent) per foot on raw stock, caused considerable disturbance in selling conditions which was finally settled by the agreement of the various film interests to charge five pence instead of four pence as formerly.

"Both features and small stuff sell well, although two reelers are hard to sell. Educational and comics in one reel are the best sellers. It is very difficult to sell films over 4,000 feet. The five and six reeler are not popular unless they are very exceptional.

"American pictures go very well at present. We like the clear photography and clever direction. Of course the situation is aided too by the fact that we are not getting Continental pictures. Italian pictures are not liked so well because of their different school of acting and their over-emotionalism. The theater owners are doing exceptionally well. One large firm that control a big chain of theaters that have not paid dividends for a period of years is now paying dividends."

Cincinnati Sees Triangle Films

That Cincinnatians like high class attractions in the way of photoplays was demonstrated Thursday afternoon at the Orpheum theater on Walnut Hills, when the first showing, a premier exhibition of the Griffith-Ince-Sennett Triangle program was given. C. C. Hite, manager of the Triangle Film Corporation's Cincinnati office, arranged a program consisting of "The Coward" —in six acts, produced by Thomas H. Ince and starring frank Keenan and Charles Ray; "My Valet"—in three acts, featuring Raymond Hitchcock, Mabel Normand and Mack Sennett, and "A Favorite Fool," with Eddie Foy and the seven little Foys.

An orchestra of eighteen symphony musicians, under the leadership of Theodore Hahn and Charles Esberger, furnished the musical part of the program and demonstrated the attractiveness of good music, played from a score especially prepared for these features.

The premier exhibition last Thursday afternoon at the Orpheum theater was certainly a treat for Cincinnatians and the great audience showed its appreciation by rounds of applause at intervals during the showing of the pictures.

Sadie Lindblom of Liberty

Sadie Lindblom is somewhat unique. Here is an actress with a purpose in view. She was always very ambitious and is now in a fair way to realize her ambitions and to see her dreams materialize. Born in Sweden, she aspired to stage honors as a child and before she left that country she made her mark on the stage and appeared before the king—the culmination of the desires of a European artist. Miss Lindblom has a fortune in her own right and before embarking on the motion picture sea she watched the development of the photodrama and decided to cast her lot with the pictures.

Sadie Lindblom.

She now owns her own company, "The Liberty Feature Film Manufacturing Company," with splendidly equipped studios at San Mateo, California, and a release on the Associated programme. She not only owns the concern, but keeps a close watch on its management, engages her own support and plays her own leads.

School Has No Connection with Producer

The officers of the Famous Players Film Company desire it known by the trade and public that the Famous Film Players Studio, an organization recently formed in Detroit for the purpose of maintaining a training school for amateur actors, has no connection whatsoever with the Famous Players Film Company or with any of its officers, stars, directors, or employees. The similarity in the name of this new training school to that of the feature producing concern has confused a great many amateur actors who are familiar with the product of the Famous Players Film Company, and who, as a result, believe that the Famous Players Film Company engages the graduates of the school.

Not only is there no connection between the school and the film company, but the two organizations have never transacted any business, nor is it probable that they ever will.

New York to See Ocean's First

On Sunday next at the Candler theater in New York City, a private invitation showing of Ocean Film Corporation's first release, "Life Without Soul" will be given for state rights buyers, exchange men, the reviewers of the motion picture journals and the trade in general.

Much interest attaches to the showing of this first Ocean production, for the production is said to be most unique, the story dealing as it does with the experiment which leads to the birth of a monster called the Creation, which grows so huge and terrible as to awe and terrify its makers. Percy Standing has the principal role in the offering and is said to have some unusual opportunities for a display of his emotional talents. The story was adapted for the screen by Jesse J. Goldberg, the vice-president and general manager of the company, and besides Mr. Standing, will include in its portrayel such well known stars as William A. Cohill, Jack Hopkins, Lucy Cotton, Josephine Marshall and Sue Balfore.

D. B. Lederman of Universal

D. B. Lederman entered the moving picture business fourteen years ago at Topeka, Kan., opening the first house west of the Missouri River. After managing a big string of houses he entered into the film business with the General Film Company just as it was organizing. He remained in its service in the Omaha territory until he accepted a position with the Mutual of Omaha, which company he was with until he entered the service as manager of the Laemmle Service of Des Moines. He was recently transferred to the Laemmle Film Service of Minneapolis on account of the territory being larger.

D. B. Lederman.

The Des Moines branch of the Laemmle Film Service has been enlarged from one room located at 421 Walnut street to the present location, one-half floor in the Hubbel building. This exchange will move into its own quarters in two weeks, which consists of a whole quarter of a block.

In mentioning in a recent issue the renewal by Pearl White of her contract with Pathe Exchange, Inc., it was stated that Miss White would be under the personal management of M. Ramirez-Torres, whereas the statement should have been that the serial in which Miss White appears will be under the management of Ramirez-Torres, who is assistant managing director of Pathe.

Two Reel Features for Metro Program

SERIES OF BUSHMAN SUBJECTS

THE Metro Pictures Corporation announces a startling departure and an enlargement of its program by the addition of two-reel subjects and one-reel comedy subjects for early release, together with a continued and connected series of two-reel pictures in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne will be starred. The latter series will be made by the Quality Pictures Corporation and released through the Metro exchanges throughout the United States, Eastern and Western Canada and Europe. There will be a run of ten consecutive weeks for this Bushman and Bayne series, and it will be concluded with a five-reel feature in which will be solved the mystery which predominates in the series of two-reelers. These stories will be distinct and complete in themselves so that the patron of a theater can see the tenth story, understand and enjoy it without having seen any other story of the series. At the same time there is a master mystery which runs through them all and which is not disclosed until the five-reel finish.

The name of the series has been chosen but this will not be made public until shortly before the date of the first release. A special and widespread advertising campaign will be inaugurated and the plans for this have been completed within the last ten days. It is pointed out that these pictures will constitute a series as against a serial, and that it will be different in handling and treatment from all pictures of the same general character that have gone before. Mr. Bushman will appear in a role new to him, but admirably suited to his talents, and his great popularity coupled with the tense character of the stories that constitute the series are expected to give the new offering a widespread and immediate popularity. Miss Bayne will be a central figure in a distinguished cast and her role is only less important than Mr. Bushman's.

The new two-reel Metro pictures will be a departure from precedent also, in that they will be star features. These will be released one each week in addition to the present larger Metro features and will have in leading roles other stars following the Bushman two-reelers. Work has been going forward on these two-reel star features and more than forty subjects have been chosen for production. Those already completed with Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne are of exceptional merit and they will be released at an early date.

The importance of this new departure to Metro exhibitors lies in their being able to present a double bill of star attractions and greatly increase the drawing power of an already strong program.

The one-reel comedies have been given especial attention, and no subject will be released, it is claimed, that is not of extraordinary merit. More than eighty subjects have been selected out of more than two thousand that have been examined, and a later and more detailed announcement is promised.

President Rowland, when seen at the Metro's executive offices in the Heidelberg building, said: "The two-reel star features were arranged for early in August, but we preferred to complete our plans fully before announcing this new departure. Personally I believe they will be received with enthusiasm by the exhibitors and the public. The Bushman series is the strongest and the most appealing that I have ever encountered in all my experience in motion pictures, and we all believe that it will set a new high mark for Metro quality. The comedies have been a definite need, but until recently we had not been able to secure material that fully satisfied us. I shall have more to say about our new plans at a later date."

HORSLEY TO BUILD ADDITION

Plans Prepared for Erection of Big Indoor Studio and Construction Department—Experts Engaged to Build Furniture

Plans have been filed with the building department of the city of Los Angeles for the construction of a new indoor studio furniture and property room building, in connection with David Horsley's studio. This new structure will give the plant 20,000 feet of floor space.

In addition, the present outdoor stage is being prepared for the coming rainy season, which will soon be on, by the equipment of a canvas roof over the steel structure so that work can be carried on every day regardless of weather conditions.

The planing mill and carpenter shops are being enlarged to three times their present size in order to take care of the requirements of the organization, and new equipment is being added.

Fred Stammer, an experienced furniture designer and builder, has been placed in charge of the furniture construction department and has begun the building of "period" furniture for use in the pictures. For this work a great quantity of mahogany has been ordered and in a short time the plant will be manufacturing its own furniture of every description.

Metro Secures Wilcox Works

Metro has added another big achievement to its already long list in the contract just completed with Ella Wheeler Wilcox for her entire works of both poems and prose, which will be utilized in the picturization of Metro feature productions. The feature pictures will be made at the rate of six a year, and Miss Wilcox is so enthusiastic over the arrangement made with Metro that she has agreed to supervise personally and assist in the direction and the making of each picture.

The Ella Wheeler Wilcox series of pictures will be produced by the Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc., for release on the regular Metro program. Max Karger, general manager of the Rolfe forces, arranged the contract with Miss Wilcox, and it was considered of such moment that a moving picture was made in the Rolfe studio of Miss Wilcox signing the contract. Afterward, when the film was shown in the projecting room at the studio, Miss Wilcox manifested the keenest sort of delight.

In the Wilcox collection there are more than five hundred poems and several books of prose. Most of them are familiar throughout the civilized world, and not a few grace the walls in many homes.

The most powerful and suitable poems will be

Ella Wheeler Wilcox, whose poems will be picturized by Metro.

chosen for picturization, as Metro has so ably accomplished in adapting poems by Robert W. Serviss, the "Kipling of the North." The first Wilcox picture will be put in production immediately and Mr. Karger has announced that no money or effort will be spared to obtain the foremost stars and artists of the stage and screen for these features.

PREMIER PROGRAM IN NEW HOME

Entire Second Floor of the Leavitt Building Leased by Premier Program Corporation as Its New York Office

The Premier Program Corporation, announcement of which was made last week, has moved into its permanent quarters and now occupies the entire second floor of the Leavitt building, 126 to 134 West Forty-sixth street, New York City.

This location is in the heart of the uptown film district, being centrally located near the railroad terminals, subways, elevated and surface systems of transportation. This location was selected after careful consideration of all available buildings. The large amount of floor space necessary making the choice rather restricted in any desirable location.

A scene from Metro's "The Woman Pays."

Before moving in, the Premier program entirely renovated and re-equipped these offices. Some alterations were also necessary but these are now completed and the locations of the various departments are convenient and accessible. Expert services were called into play in preparing the floor plan and general layout so that modern business ideas and true efficiency might be served to the utmost.

The equipment throughout is mahogany and although simple and dignified is rich and serviceable. The main entrance is through an outer office, space in which is reserved for the use of stenographers and clerks. Opening directly from this room are the offices of the sales department, advertising and publicity, and such other departments as come into direct contact with the largest number of daily visitors. Also opening into this office is an enclosed reception-room for the use of visitors not actually engaged in one of the other offices.

A corridor leading from the main entrance room communicates with the offices of the corporation. These offices occupy the front of the building, having, therefore, ample light and air. Along this same corridor, also, separate offices are provided for each of the five producing companies, whose features will be releases on the Premier program. Beyond the offices of the producing companies, far removed from the noise and bustle inseparable from a busy reception room, are the offices of the accounting department and beyond these in turn are the rooms occupied by the scenario department.

The projection room has every modern convenience, being furnished with comfortable wicker chairs in which you may loll at ease while viewing the pictures being screened. A small writing table, equipped with desk-light, enables the viewer of a picture to make such notes or memoranda as he may desire.

The equipment in the booth includes two projection machines and all other appurtenances requisite for high grade projection. Immediately adjoining the operator's booth is a fire-proof vault of ample capacity.

"We are pleased with our equipment," said Mr. G. Blake Garrison, secretary of the Premier Program Corporation, "and feel that no one in the city has better facilities for the transaction of a large volume of business than we have right here. This is only the start, however, and while it is good, the essential object of the Premier program is the making of pictures."

Reynolds to Direct Myrtle Gonzales

Lynn Reynolds, who for the past three months has been directing the Sydney Ayres Company at Universal City in the production of one and two reel subjects, was this week given a new company to be worked in one, two and three reel releases.

Arthur Shirley, former juvenile lead with the Joseph DeGrasse company; Myrtle Gonzales, who has been playing leads in Richard Stanton's recent productions, since her departure from the Vitagraph for Universal City, and Val Paul, who has been playing heavy characters with Sydney Ayres ever since the latter joined the Universal company, are to play the leading roles in Reynolds' new company.

Editors: ED J. MOCK and PAUL H. WOODRUFF
Associate Editors
Neil G. Coward Thomas C. Kennedy
John C. Garrett Charles R. Condon
Advertising Manager: ALLEN L. HAASE

NEW YORK OFFICE, 1022 LONGACRE BUILDING
Forty-second Street and Broadway
Telephone Bryant 7030
CHARLES R. CONDON, Eastern Representative

This publication is free and independent of all business or house connections or control. No manufacturer or supply dealer, or their stockholders or representatives, have any financial interest in Motography or any voice in its management or policy.

Entered at Chicago Post Office as Second Class Mail Matter

MOTOGRAPHY

THE MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY
ELECTRICITY MAGAZINE CORPORATION
MONADNOCK BUILDING
CHICAGO, ILL.
Telephone: Harrison 3014—All Departments

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS

Changes of advertising copy should reach the office of publication not less than fifteen days in advance of date of issue. Regular date of issue, every Saturday. New advertisements will be accepted up to within ten days of date of issue, but proof of such advertisements can not be shown in advance of publication.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE
Per year $3.00
Canada - - - Per year $4.00
Foreign - - - Per year 5.00
Single copy - - - - - .15
FOR SALE AT ALL NEWS STANDS

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS

REMITTANCES—Remittances should be made by check, New York draft or money order, in favor of MOTOGRAPHY. Foreign subscriptions may be remitted direct by International Postal Money Order.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS—The old address should be given as well as the new, and notice should be received two weeks in advance of the desired change.

If Your News Dealer Will Not Supply You—Please Notify Us

Volume XIV CHICAGO, NOVEMBER 27, 1915 Number 22

Possible Effects of a Percentage System

IMAGINE a certain group of film exchanges having contractual arrangements with a certain circle of manufacturers, whereby the exchanges agree to buy a certain number of prints of each release of each manufacturer. That is not much of a strain on the imagination, because it is virtually present practice. But for purposes of comparison, imagine next a new arrangement whereby the same releases, instead of being bought by the exchanges, were placed in their hands on a percentage basis; seventy-five per cent, let us say, of the gross rentals to go to the manufacturers and twenty-five per cent to the exchanges. What effect would such an arrangement have on the trade?

Plainly, the first effect would be to tie up a good deal more of the manufacturers' money, and less of the exchanges' money, than does the present arrangement. The manufacturers' income, starting with seventy-five per cent of a single week's rentals as a minimum, would not reach its normal maximum until the end of the term of life of those first releases. However, we can assume that this capital obligation is not an obstacle.

The present arrangement is not very flexible, and its weak spots are supported by the stiffness of the whole fabric. In plainer words, the weaker manufacturers (and in any group some must be stronger and some weaker) still find the arrangement profitable because they sell their films at the same price that the stronger manufacturers get for theirs. The exchanges feel that they must have all the releases to make up diversified programs and satisfy all their exhibiting customers. They can get them only by buying them. Keeping costs on the stock would show that some of these purchases lost them money. But the exchanges cannot figure business that way; they are forced to carry a large stock and figure their profits in the gross. So the comparatively poor film gets by, and its maker gets his price for it.

On a percentage basis the exchanges would naturally continue to take prints of all releases —the more so since no investment on their part was involved. It is also reasonable to suppose they would make less effort to rent the poorer subjects, not being spurred on by the consciousness of a dead, or at least slow, investment. It is quite possible, therefore, that the exhibitor would benefit by a greater freedom of choice and less attempt on the part of the exchange to dictate his program.

So the percentage system would put it up to the exhibitor to make or break the manufacturer; establish real manufacturing competition; and award its prizes on a basis of pure merit. That would seem to be the ideal condition, but it would work something of a revolution before it settled down.

It costs money to make films. The amount, plus a profit, must come back to the manufacturer from the exhibitors, via the exchanges. Some of the manufacturers simply would not get it back. Most of them would, no doubt; some of them in greater proportion than at present. But out of, say, eight or ten manufacturers all supplying the same exchanges on a percentage scheme, one or two would lose money, while possibly a third would be hanging on by a very narrow margin. It might not, of course, be the same two or three all the time who suffered (the nice thing about open competition is that the loser today may win tomorrow if he mends his weaknesses) but it probably would be just the same. They would find the handicap of the stronger producers hard to overcome; and in time—long or short as the money held out—a manufacturer or two would have to quit. Maybe there would be a few consolidations, the stronger absorbing the weaker. That is what happens in other lines of business under similar circumstances.

We think the exhibitor would gain by a percentage arrangement between the manufacturer and the exchange. Undoubtedly the exchange would gain, because of the decrease of investment in unprofitable films. Obviously the manufacturer of good films would gain also. And the burden of all this gain would be borne by the manufacturer of inferior films. We believe that is where the load belongs. The sentiment may seem heartless, but it is good business—and good natural law, if the survival of the fittest means anything. Eliminating the weaker members, pruning the trade tree of its dead wood, makes for a better and cleaner growth and higher efficiency all around.

The Sane Spot in England

THE sane spot in England is the picture show. Cecil Hepworth, the British film producer, bought sixteen pages of advertising in the London Bioscope to prove it. And he gets away with the argument in as pretty a series of pages as you often see in a trade paper.

No doubt England needs a sane spot just now—as do all the nations embroiled in this world war. Even in Servia, facing annihilation, spirit-starved by four years of war's devastation, an American has said: "If some philanthropist would send a moving picture outfit over here with a lot of good, sensible, plain, sanitary stuff mixed up with some foolishness and fun, he could do more good in one month than a corps of physicians could do in a year."

And Mr. Hepworth says:

Here in Great Britain the sane spot, since war began, has held steadily to its task, keeping up the all-important common spirit. Each day, with its hard work, brings strain and worry. Night comes. Then, when tired minds might fall easy victims to epidemic doubt and nervousness, comes the cheerfully worded promise of the picture show. Once inside the cinema the nation is again in the big bright world of strong men and beautiful women, where the right always wins, and the suppressed standards of before-the-war still holds sway. The weight of the day is hurled aside and brought to naught by the picture play.

That is the spirit of the motion picture—the influence of human temper that has built it to a world power greater than the press. "It is in the vividness of its method that the picture play overshadows the press and the pulpit; for they must use awkward words instead of living reality."

Our own country, God willing, will hold to its sanity and its competent control of peace and security. But while war is the great common trouble of a people, peace has its own individual woes. There are business troubles and disappointed ambitions and broken romances and the faithlessness of friends—these things are always with us. So we, too, need the great sane spot in our lives; and the need is what has brought the picture play within the zone of life of every individual. It has come to be the stimulant of the weary, the companion of the lonely, the drowner of sorrows and the soother of the agitated.

Just a Moment Please

We hasten to acknowledge from Ed Kaufman a full explanation of that "Jeffe Politico" thing that had us bothered a week or two ago.

—

Thanks, Ed, it saved a lot of work in our Mex. dictionary and we solemnly assure you that your epistle will never reach the eyes of our steno, so, for the present at least, you're safe. But don't tell that story to Mabel.

—

MARY, PLEASE WRITE

From N. R. Gholstin, of New York City, we receive the following postal:

As a reader of your publication would you kindly oblige me by informing as to what salary Mary Pickford receives for her services? Thanking you in advance for same.

—

Gosh, we're sure we couldn't interview Mary for more'n a minute if we had to pay for her time at the usual rates.

—

Smiling Ralph Kettering, looking plumper than ever b'jing, just back from Detroit, Mich., says "Damaged Goods" in the city over the lake is playing to capacity business and damaging the bank rolls of the natives to a startling degree. Inasmuch as Ralph's esteemed boss, with the same picture, is extracting the sheckles of the enraptured Chicagoans on Madison St., Ralph probably has cause to smile.

—

EVEN BEN BEADELL LAUGHED AT THIS ONE

Dignified and blasé Ben Beadell, president of the Nat'l Waterproof Film Co., was slightly staggered one morning this week upon glancing over his mail to find a postcard all the way from C. Williams in Sydney, Australia, reading as follows:

Kindly let us know if you make the material for photos that causes the face to change to a laugh or a wink. I have seen several photos on State street, Chicago, and will you send us your usual catalogue and greatly oblige?

Ben says his chief inventor is now at work on the problem.

—

If you get stuck, Ben, perhaps Charley Chaplin or Mack Sennett could do something to help out.

—

Another rumor is to the effect that Ben is going to dramatize the request and with the assistance of Adolph Eisner play it as a vaudeville act over the Big Time.

—

SHALL WE EXPEL HIM?

Ben Schulberg, one of the oldest graduates of the Caward Art Scollege, incurred the wrath of the faculty the past week by responding to a perfectly legitimate request for some "dope" on the color of the hair and eyes of John Barrymore, whose photo he had submitted for a cover subject, as follows:

We are pleased to impart the information that John Barrymore's eyes are a pale red heliotrope and that his hair is dark green.

It would serve you right, Ben, if we took you at your word.

—

OUR BURG.

Harry Aitken of Noo Yawk and points East was to Our Village this wk. on biz. He departed for the coast after a brief visit.

J. A. Berst one of Our Burg's w. k. and pop. cits. has packed his trunks and moved to Noo Yawk where he is going to ascend the Gen'l Film Co's throne. Good luck J. A. Drop back occasionally.

Geo. Spoor is to Calif. for a outing.

J. E. Willis, formerly Dist. Mgr. of the Gen'l Fillim Co. will celebrate his 25th wedding anniversary on Nov. 19. Best wishes for another 25 Jack.

Us and the Missus will celebrate a similar anniversary on the 20th, though it comes a long way from being our 25th.

Frank Powell is staying to the Sherman House and cluttering up the place with a lot of motshun pitchure junk. Glad to have you with us though Frank.

Don Meaney flitted through Our Burg this wk. bound for Los A.

Chas. Ver Halen invaded Ye Ed's sanctum one day this wk. Come again Chas.

—

The opening of the well known opera season in these parts had nothing on the opening of the Reel Fellows Club's new quarters, which occurred on Wednesday evening of this week.

—

The occupants of the opera's "diamond horseshoe" could get many a pointer from the Beau Brummels of the Reel Fellows.

N. G. C.

Some Current Releases Reviewed

"Heights of Hazard"

A Vitagraph V. L. S. E. Drama Released November 15 Reviewed by George W. Graves

CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY is the author of this unusual and absorbing bit of romance, wherein the girl, wishing to be wooed and won after the compulsive style of the fifteenth century, has her romantic longings fulfilled in the most unexpected manner. Charles Richman, of "Battle Cry of Peace" fame, portrays the unknown gentleman who abducts the girl by force and compels her admiration and love by his very daring. His forcible and finished acting is predominant throughout the picture. Eleanor Woodruff makes a telling role of Olivia, whose parents arbitrarily determined upon her marriage with the Duke of Tottenham.

The first part of the picture is very unique in the introducing of a number of thrilling rescues—the visualization of the stories of the male guests at a brilliant dinner party, depicting the romantic and dramatic experiences by which they won their several wives. These little detached episodes furnish a keener appreciation for what follows.

The story begins with the actions of the present, induces plenty of mystery and suspense in regard to them, and then turns back to the past to logically and attractively explain matters. Under the direction of Harry Lambert, the right part of the story has been narrated at the right time for the securing of interest and dramatic effect. The entertaining qualities of the whole production are of the highest order.

Olive's father and the duke receive a shock.

Betrothed to the Duke of Tottenham against her will, Olivia Martindale is miserable in the extreme. At a dinner party she paints a vivid picture of how the knights of old won their ladies by scaling the "heights of hazard" and fighting to their utmost strength, concluding by deploring the insipidity of present custom and lack of chivalry. While wandering around the grounds later, she is forcibly abducted by a masked gentleman and taken to his richly appointed apartments. The removal of the auto duster and mask reveals a handsome man in evening clothes. The man then hands Olivia a revolver and police whistle, telling her to use them if she thinks best, but begging her to wait until he has explained himself. After she decides to hear his tale, he phones her father and gives her the receiver with the following admonition: "Tell him he can come to the Bermuda apartments, room No. 67, for you in forty-five minutes, without the police. I depend upon your honor to say nothing more." His masterly but kindly ways thoroughly captivate the girl, although she takes good care not to reveal the fact.

The stranger now launches forth into his narrative of the past, telling how he met her in Colorado and resolved to follow her party at all costs. He lost all track of the party at Denver, but later, falling heir to a rich mine, used the proceeds to come east and continue his search. He had tried to meet her at the opera and every other conceivable place, but Fate seemed ever in his path. At last, learning of her engagement to the duke, he resorted to the extreme measures that resulted in the present situation.

When Olivia's father arrives the two are in each other's arms, for the girl has been wooed after the manner of her dreams. To check the storm of protest that is about to be precipitated by her father and his friends, Olivia says, "It is the first time in my life that I have come in touch with a real man and a real romance, and I cannot let either of them go."

"One Million Dollars"

A Metro Drama Released November 22, Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE entire five reels of "One Million Dollars" are unusually interesting, and the acting of William Faversham and a capable supporting cast is excellent. "One Million Dollars," a Rolfe production released November 22 by Metro, is a sumptuously staged adaptation of the novel of mystery, mysticism and romance, "One Million Francs," by Arnold Fredericks. It stands out for its smooth moving story, rarely artistic production and fine enactment. The direction is by John W. Noble.

But while the picture is brimful of interesting action and has a delightful atmosphere, "One Million Dollars" is not impressively dramatic. The strongest situation is that in which Duvall so arranges matters as to make it possible to obtain the one million dollars wrongfully claimed by the count. The acting here is splendid and every move is eagerly watched, but at the end of the situation the greatest surprise is that there has been no surprise. The mystery element has been disregarded as the author has taken the spectators into full confidence. If the intention was to avoid the sensational the person responsible has succeeded.

Mr. Faversham's acting throughout is in his most finished style, and he who under all conditions has remained a true artist can be appreciated in "One Million Dollars." Besides being featured he is in fact a feature of the picture, and the scores who will be attracted to "One Million Dollars" by the presence of William Faversham will not be disappointed in him. He plays Richard Duvall, a criminologist, who, while visiting in India, wins the friendship of a Buddhist priest and is rewarded with a magic crystal globe.

Upon returning to New York he is urged by a friend to investigate the affairs of Count D'Este, whose American wife died suddenly and the conditions of her will add suspicion to the incident. He is aided by the power of the crystal globe which enables him while in a cataleptic state to unravel the mystery, as his astral body is released and free to visit those places his will commands. The entire mystery is not solved in this way as the Duvall of the flesh is an able criminologist. Interwoven with this is the romance of Duvall and the murdered woman's niece.

To say that the settings and locations are beautiful,

The Buddhist priest shows Duvaull the wonders of the Crystal Ball.

somehow, seems conventional, and the settings and locations of "One Million Dollars" rise above that which is conventional. It were better to say that the details of production have never been artistically outdone, and the photography, which is by Herbert O. Carlton, does them full justice. Henry Bergman, Carlotta De Felice and George Le Guere are effective in important parts. The supporting cast is completed by Arthur Morrison, Mayme Kelso, Charles Graham and Camilla Dalberg.

"The Woman Pays"

Metro Five-Reel Drama Released November 15 Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

VALLI VALLI'S characterization of the frequently characterized extravagant wife who drives her husband to the edge of ruination, which, in turn, results in marital felicity, is an outstanding feature of Metro's "The Woman Pays." This five-part modern society drama was produced by the Columbia Pictures Corporation under the direction of

After the nuptial ceremony.

Edgar Jones. Valli Valli makes effective use of her dramatic opportunities and she is presented with several. She makes important but light moments in the play strong where they might easily be weak. A notable instance is in her scene with the woman who desires to part Beth and John by creating within her a desire for society and wealth.

The story, by Florence Gerald, suffers because in general it has been done so often in pictures and on the stage, and many times it has been poorly done, which is not the case with "The Woman Pays." In this play the wife is not a butterfly and until the seed of discontent with only the comforts of life has been sown by Connie, she is happy with the man whose love for her is deep. It is a difficult matter to handle a subject like this so as to raise it above what is ordinary.

Valli Valli plays the part of Beth Coventry, a young woman reared in luxury by a wealthy aunt. Of her three suitors, Marquis De Tourville; Phillip Murdock, a wealthy broker, and John Langton, she accepts the latter. Murdock and Connie Beverly, who is in love with John, join forces to separate John and Beth. Connie succeeds in making Beth discontented with her modest home. John notices the difference in her, and in the hope of increasing his income enters a business deal with Murdock.

Murdock makes it a point to keep John continually busy. Feeling that he is neglecting her, Beth attends all the affairs to which she is invited, and soon, though living in the same house, Beth and her husband seldom see each other. Murdock decides that it is time to act and diplomatically demands that John invest more money in the venture. In order to do this he appropriates some bonds entrusted to him by Beth's aunt. After the aunt's death Beth learns that her husband even stole that she might have more. Seeking John to beg his forgiveness, she finds him in time to prevent him from committing suicide.

In the supporting cast are some efficient players. John E. Bowers does good work as the husband, and Edward Brennan succeeds in making real a not too real character. Mr. Brennan is not, by any means, the conventional heavy man as Murdock. Marie Empress has a thankless part which she plays artificially, and Paul Lawrence is a good-looking Marquis De Tourville. The settings are pleasing and the photography good.

"Backed by the U. S. A."

Twelfth Episode of Pathe's "Neal of the Navy" Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

IN chapter eleven of "Neal of the Navy" Ponto met a horrible death, and now in the twelfth another assistant of the venomous Hernandes meets his death. Joe Welcher, Mrs. Hardin's adopted son, who rather unwillingly, but too weak to refuse, has been of much aid to the smuggler, is killed. Joe, however, reformed before he died. In fact, his desire to put aside his weak ways and become the man nature intended him to be brought about the circumstances which caused his death.

At first one might be tempted to remark "thus is virtue rewarded," but the event really has a moral. The title of the twelfth episode is "Backed by the U. S. A.," which refers to Annette's voyage to Lost Island. The United States government, as a reward for her gracious consent to permit the government to build a coaling station on the island, sends her and her party on a transport under Neal's command to the island she inherits from her father.

The climactic scene in this episode is reached when the ship, drawn out of its course by a "fixed" compass, is wrecked near a rocky shore. Hernandez, still intent upon gaining possession of the rich island, is responsible for this. He places a piece of steel under the ship's compass, and as a result the course of the ship is unconsciously altered. The end shows Hernandez and the Brute-Man on an island inhabited by savages. The fate of the others is not disclosed.

The fight between Hernandez and Joe is realistically done, and the demolition of the room, caused by an explosion, is an effective bit of scenic effect. Lillian Lorraine's acting before the camera bears the marks of the experience gained in the former episodes and she does better than well in her scenes in "Backed by the U. S. A."

"The Valley Feud"

Two Reel Mustang Drama to Be Released November 26, Reviewed by John C. Garrett

FRANK COOLEY, director of the Mustang company, who is responsible for "The Valley Feud," the two-reel Mustang production to be released November 26, has secured most satisfactory results and beautiful photography, realistic western scenes and good acting by the stars chosen to portray the leading roles. Especially noteworthy in this production, showing the results of the deadly feud which exists between the Rogers, who are sheep herders, and their neighbors, the Bolings, who raise cattle, is the vast number of sheep and cattle used. They add much to the beauty and realism of the production.

There is lots of action in this picture and a strong cast has been selected to portray the leading roles. Anna Little, the popular actress who does exceedingly good work in western dramas, is cast as Glory Rogers; E. Forrest Taylor is a convincing Joe Boling, and Jack Richardson is cast as the foreman of the Rogers' sheep ranch. These stars are supported by a capable cast.

Glory and Joe Boling.

Rogers' sheep encroach on the range where Boling's cattle are feeding, and Boling orders them off and as a last resort fences the range. The sheepmen cut the fence and they are discovered by the cattlemen and ordered off, and in the skirmish which follows Cal Rogers, Glory's father, is seriously injured. During all this feud Joe Boling has fallen in love with Glory Rogers, but because of the bad feelings between the families she is restrained from responding.

Later Rogers' men find the Boling crowd at the Cactus Bar and Joe proposes that Bill, Rogers' foreman, settle the feud with him man to man. Joe wins, but Bill attempts to shoot him and this starts a fight which Joe stops by shooting out the lights. Later the Rogers dam the creek, which cuts off Boling's water supply, and they fortify the dam and prepare to defend their position. In the fight which follows Joe's father is fatally injured and, fearing the growing intimacy between Glory Rogers and his son, makes Joe promise not to marry old Rogers' daughter.

In order to save his cattle from dying of thirst, Joe rides alone to the dam and dynamites it, and just after the explosion Rogers' men ride after him and he takes refuge in the Rogers' cabin, where he holds off the attacking party until Glory brings help. Joe is wounded and Glory cannot hide her love, and then comes the revelation that she is "Old Man" Rogers' niece and not his daughter. As the picture closes it is plainly seen that no feud exists between the representatives of the Rogers and Boling families, for the cattle and sheep interests are soon to be united by marriage.

"The Ring of the Borgias"

A Four Reel Edison Drama Released November 26, Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

WILLIAM ADDISON LATHROP'S "The Ring of the Borgias," a four-part Edison drama, is materially aided by the acting of a strong Edison cast and the colorful production given it by Director Langdon West. The story concerns an adventuress who murders her lover's wife by injecting into her hand a poison with an ingenious ring such as was made famous by Lucrezia Borgia; a husband neglected by his card-loving wife, and an heiress.

In "The Ring of the Borgias" the author has written a story containing dramatic qualities and one which, once the story itself is reached, sustains well the interest. But the play deals with so many characters of importance to its movement that considerable time is spent in giving them their proper place, and the interest is divided among many. The story is not confusing, the action being clear enough, but one finds the change of scene from one group to another burdensome at times. It is well that the characters are so well drawn and the material of such good quality.

Lola and the adventurer with whom she consorts find themselves in financial straits. They visit a cafe, neither knowing how their check is to be paid. They meet there John Rivers, a man whose elderly wife is seldom home and who seeks diversion. He pays the check. Lola and Martinez, upon returning home, make inquiries about Rivers and find that he is rated a wealthy man. She then determines to cultivate him. Rivers is a willing victim, but in a short time Lola realizes that she really loves him and is jealous of his wife.

A scene from "The Ring of Borgias."

She secures a ring with a tiny needle in it, and at a masquerade causes Mrs. Rivers' death by injecting a poison with the ring. Rivers, when he learns this, scorns her and turns his attention to Mary Harrison, who has inherited a fortune from her father. Mary is engaged to Donald Richards, Mrs. Rivers' son by a former husband. Donald succeeds in his determination to trace the murderer of his mother. The play ends with the death of Lola at the hands of her former lover. Donald and Mary are then happily united.

Cora Linton is pretty and graceful, but does not act the part of Lola impressively. Augustus Phillips has opportunities as John Rivers, and Carlton King, in a small but important part, does a fine bit of character acting. Margaret Prussing is a pleasing Mary Harrison. Richard Tucker gives a convincing performance as Donald, and the same may be said of Helen Strickland, who is cast as Mrs. Rivers. The settings in this picture rank with the best which have come from the Edison studio and the photography is better than usual.

"Mary's Lamb"

Five Reel Pathe Gold Rooster Play, Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

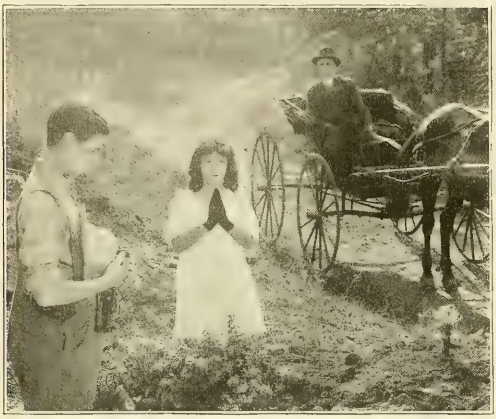
DONALD MACKENZIE'S second production for the Pathe Gold Rooster program is a five-part picturization of Richard Carle's well-known success, "Mary's Lamb," with Carle making his film debut as Leander Lamb, whose love for the ladies keeps him in hot water all the time, for his wife, Mary, is jealous of her Lamb, and orders him hither and thither with unmistakable precision. "Mary's Lamb" was written by Richard Carle, and whoever is responsible for the screen adaptation has shown good judgment.

The comedian does not make the common mistake with musical comedy stars in their first appearance before the camera, of being too quick in their actions. Carle's antics and ludicrous facial expressions gain enough in their comic effect to make up to a certain extent for the absence of funny lines. At no time does he seem to be at a disadvantage in this respect.

But Richard Carle has not been left entirely alone in this offering. There are several excellent comedy situations. Leander walked in his sleep once and Mary took advantage of the fact that he walked into her boudoir and "roped" him into marrying her. Toward the end of the picture he feigns sleep-walking to get himself out of a complication. This situation should bring many laughs. Another aid to Carle is Jessie Rolph, who loses no opportunities and in fact invents a number of her own.

Miss Rolph is Mary, who is of a most romantic nature. Mary becomes attracted to Professor Leander Lamb, and Mary is persistent, so she wins him in one of the many ways peculiar to unmarried women who are bent upon so doing. As with the "courtship," Mary dominates the home, and her Lamb woefully obeys her. After tasting the bitterness of the henpecked's cup for many moons, Leander summons up courage, however, and assumes the reins of government in the Lamb home.

"Mary's Lamb" contains a quantity of laugh-provoking situations which are finely presented. The story has been adequately treated by Director Mackenzie. Deep, beautiful sets and well-chosen locations are of no little importance to its success. Marie Wayne is the charming niece of Lamb's Mary, and Lillian Thatcher is cast as the widow next door, who is the one consolation in Leander's life. The photography and lighting effects deserve mention.



"Still Waters"

A Famous Players Comedy Released November 8, Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

PICTURESQUE and delightfully free from pretense, "Still Waters" is well supplied with quaint humor and moments which appeal to the heart. To Marguerite Clark belongs the greater credit, for without her we fear "Still Waters" would become stagnant. With her it is far, very far from that. There is no need to comment upon her beauty or her charm in depicting the simpler emotions, nor is it necessary to say that her interests are the spectator's interests.

There is a story, there are some nicely portrayed characters and the play has a setting that in its fine artistry is typical of the Famous Players Company, but all these are accessories to the work of Miss Clark, who carries the interest through five reels of incidents mostly. "Still Waters,"

Dr. Ramsey oversees a strange funeral rite.

by the way, is an excellent title. The picture in its every phase is mild and beautiful, and appealing only to the most noble instincts. The impression left by it is not any one thing in particular, but a certain awakened sense to the "worth while" things which life has to offer.

Edith Bernard Delano is the author who has surrounded Marguerite Clark with people and things which she can use to stimulate humor or pathos. The author has also given "Still Waters" some likable characters. The rough but considerate and loving grandfather of Nesta, Dr. Ramsay and Jed Perkins are real people. As Nesta loves her, so, too, does the spectator love Sally Ann, worn out and stupid-looking mule that she is.

Robert Broderick has in the past been given parts affording him more opportunities than that of Joe Martin, Nesta's grand-dad, but he has never done more artistic work. Phillip Tonge as Jed and Robert Vaughan as the doctor, who finally wins Martin's consent to marry Nesta, render good performances. Arthur Evers, Ottola Nesmith, Robert Conville and Harry La Pearl are also in the cast.

The story is of a young girl who lives with her grandfather on a canal boat. Her mother had made a marriage which displeased Martin, and though he knows that Drasa believes Nesta dead, he never notified her that the child is in his charge. Nesta and Dr. Ramsay form an attachment. Martin, however, separates them when he learns this. A member of a traveling circus, Drasa comes to a town where the "Mary Jane" is lying. An injury to Nesta brings Martin to promise Nesta as a reward to the doctor if he cures her and paves the way for a reconciliation between Martin and Drasa.

"The Mummy and the Humming-Bird"

Famous Players Society Drama Released November 14 Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE absorbed Lord Lumley, the Mummy of "The Mummy and the Humming-Bird," who unconsciously neglects his wife for scientific work, is an unusually interesting and finely drawn character. Charles Cherry, who has been identified with numerous legitimate stage successes, realizes its full possibilities in this five-reel adaptation of Isaac Henderson's story, produced by the Famous Players under James Durkin's direction.

Mr. Cherry is ever the calm Englishman. He plays the part with natural abandon and never for a moment suggests anything but the quick-witted Lord Lumley, who retains his dignity and poise under the most trying circumstances. It is as easy a matter to overact a character of this type as any other, but it is a fault that cannot be found with his performance. Mr. Cherry, who appears for the first time in pictures in this production, was engaged by the Famous Players Company through the Charles Frohman Company.

"The Mummy and the Humming-Bird" is a modern society drama laid in England, and its situations are connected by a continuous thread of interest. It is a finely constructed story. Lord Lumley is an aristocrat in fact as well as in name, and the nobility of his character is more impressive by contrast with his direct opposite, Signor D'Orelli. D'Orelli is a villain in every sense, but he is not one of those impossible dramatic conveniences who do everything, even down to grinning a brow-knitted satanic grin, but what a real person would do.

Lord Lumley, a famous expert on explosives and known to his friends as the Mummy, meets a young Italian traveling alone in England and befriends him. Giuseppe explains that the reason for his presence in England is to revenge himself upon the man who dishonored his home. When Lumley learns that this man is the well-known writer, Signor D'Orelli, he makes it a point to detain Giuseppe by employing him as a valet. In this way he saves both the offender and the offended from themselves.

D'Orelli is a frequent visitor at the Lumley home and he plays upon Lady Lumley's offended feelings at her husband's neglect. Lord Lumley is guilty of nothing more than thoughtlessness, but D'Orelli is guilty of malice, and they become more intimate. How Lumley brings the affair to a close without the slightest bit of notoriety or unpleasantness makes up most interesting portion of the play. Giuseppe finally enjoys his longed-for revenge, for he stabs and kills D'Orelli with the knife on which he swore vengeance.

Supporting Charles Cherry are Lillian Tucker as Lady Lumley, Arthur Hoops as D'Orelli and William Sorelle as Guiseppe in the prominent parts. These three parts are capably played. Claire Zobelle, who is an unreal Emma, Charles Coleman and Nina Lindsey complete the cast. The settings are remarkably appropriate and lend atmosphere to the play, and the photography is effective.

"A Thing or Two in Movies"

Another of Selig's Bloom Center Chronicles, Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

AS the Selig offering of Monday, November 22, another of the now popular "Chronicles of Bloom Center," will be released to exhibitors of the country under the title "A Thing or Two in Movies," and a most interesting and laughable chronicle it will prove.

The interest in this partciular number of the series should be doubled for motion picture patrons through the fact that films themselves are the theme of the story, though it is to be hoped that the impression will not spread that all film men and film companies are like the one managed by Bill Hardup in this tale.

Bloom Center is much excited, as the story begins, over the advertisement of a school of motion picture acting which offers to teach all those who reply to the advertisement how to become second Mary Pickfords or Henry Walthalls. Selina Tubbs and Chubby Green are the first to succumb to the allurement of the ad, and soon are in receipt of a book of instructions on the art of acting for the pictures.

By filming a scene at the bar free drinks are secured for the entire crowd.

Selina and Chubby rehearse diligently and so are confident of themselves when an opportunity to act for a real motion picture company suddenly develops, following the arrival in Bloom Center of Bill Hardup and his company of thespians. Bill is down to his last cent and his company are little better off, when they conceive the idea of taking advantage of Bloom Center's interest in the silent drama by staging a photoplay in that very town and charging the townsfolk for the opportunity to act in it.

As the photoplay progresses Hardup takes advantage of the opportunilty to secure some free drinks at the local bar, by staging an important scene in that liquor emporium. Much gratified by his success in thus securing something for nothing, Hardup invades the sacred precincts of the Bloom Center bank and explains that his scenario calls for the cashing of a large check in the institution. The willing banker offers to play the role assigned him and passes Hardup a huge roll of bills while the camera is busily clicking away. Stating that a "still picture" will next be taken, Hardup sets up a fake camera in the bank, asks the banker to look at the ceiling "until the flashlight goes off," and then hastily decamps with his cameraman, assistants and the roll of money that had just been passed him.

The last scene of the thrilling photoplay is staged at the depot, and while all the natives stare in open mouthed wonder at the "acting," Hardup and his associates climb aboard the train and are wafted away to parts unknown. A note is left behind, however, which informs the inhabitants of Bloom Center that their kindness and co-operation has been deeply appreciated and that a print of the finished film will be shipped to Bloom Center as soon as it has been passed by the board of censorship.

Weeks later the promised can of film arrives and Melodian Hall is crowded to its rearmost seat as the villagers gather to see themselves on the screen. That "show" is weird and wonderful, for the film has been carelessly spliced and some of the scenes are upside down while others are in still other positions. The climax comes when Mrs. Constable Plum discovers by the screen that her husband had enjoyed a most intense love scene with the leading woman of the picture troupe. The discomfited constable flees in terror from the hall, pursued by the villagers, thereby breaking up the evening's entertainment.

"The Key to the Past"

Two Reel American Production Released November 22 Reviewed by John C. Garrett

RESPLENDENT with unusual scenic effects, excellent photography and especially good work by a strong cast is "The Key to the Past," the two-reel American production to be released on November 22. The theme dealt with in this production is one of rather a delicate nature and must be handled carefully. Charles Bartlett, the man responsible for the production of the picture, handled it in a most satisfactory manner. There is but one point in the production which is not exactly satisfying, and that it that although the story reverts back to sixteen years ago, the clothing worn is that which is fashionable nowadays; but this slight mistake, which occurs in many productions, is easily overlooked.

Bess tells her story.

Winnifred Greenwood as Bess Stockton appears in a new role—that of an old woman whose mind has been impaired in a shipwreck. Ed Coxen plays opposite Miss Greenwood as Norman Stockton, her husband, and Nan Christy as Laurine, Bess' daughter; Walter Spencer as Harvey Wakefield, in love with Laurine, and George Field as George Belden, one of Stockton's fellow-employes, who commits a crime and lays the blame at Stockton's door, complete the cast.

As the picture opens, we see the home of Norman Stockton, a prospector in the far north. Bess, his wife, whose memory is a blank, and Laurine, her daughter, with Harvey Wakefield, are sitting before the fire. A wild storm has blown in from the ocean and the rain is beating upon the window-pane and flashes of lightning are seen through the window. Wakefield is in love with Laurine, but decides he will not marry her until he has found out who her father is, and this night he asks Stockton to tell him the story of how Bess and Laurine had come to the cabin years before, and as Norman begins the following story unfolds itself on the screen:

Years before Stockton was a young bank cashier who had been falsely accused of misapplication of funds, and to avoid disgrace he had gone into the far north and written his wife a note telling her that he would return to her as soon as his name had been cleared. Meanwhile, George Belden, one of his fellow-employes who had designs upon Stockton's wife, makes his attentions to her obnoxious and at length the young wife decides to follow her husband and goes north in search of him. Her ship is struck by lightning and just before it goes down she writes a note which is not finished and pins it to the dress of her baby. The next morning Stockton discovers the bodies of his wife and baby on the beach and takes them home. The note pinned to the child seems to implicate Belden as the father of the child and because Bess' mind is now a blank her story has never been told.

His story finished, Stockton glances to the window and sees Bess standing before it. Just then a terrific flash of lightning strikes the home and Bess falls unconscious to the floor. After regaining consciousness her mind is cleared and she tells her story and assures their future happiness by saying that she had not finished the note she had pinned to the baby's dress and that Norman Stockton is Laurine's father.

"The Band Sun Engine"

Seventh Chapter Pathe "Wallingford," November 15, Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

CURIOSITY is looked upon generally as a strictly feminine attribute, but the keen observer will note that honors in this direction are about evenly distributed between male and female. Quite like everything else which forces its victim to moderation, curiosity exacts a reckoning. If Dana T. Morley had not allowed curiosity to get the better of his money grubbing-mind J. Rufus Wallingford and Blackie Daw would not have had such an easy task in "separating" him from a goodly share of his beloved bank account.

Dana T. Morley, being the seventh on the "black list" of Violet Warden, he is the "mark" in the seventh episode of the Pathe "New Adventures of Wallingford" series. The biggest scene in "The Band Sun Engine" is between Blackie and Morley, when the latter attempts to make Blackie "talk" about the mysterious operations of Wallingford by supplying him with enough liquor for two men. Intoxication scenes are delicate subjects, as that which is done to produce laughs often causes disgust. But in this scene laughs prevail, for the spectator is in full knowledge that both the characters are merely pretending, neither having taken a full sized drink, and their antics, such as playing leap frog about the room, are genuinely funny.

Morley was one of the clique which brought about the ruination of Violet Warden's father, so, true to their promise to Violet, Wallingford and Daw set out to make him pay for his mean deed. Morley for the life of him cannot understand why Wallingford has offered him double value for some of his property. Accepting the information he receives from the "jingled" Blackie, he buys the options which Violet has purchased from land holders about the town, believing that J. Rufus will pay and pay handsomely for them. Morley pays $70,000 for the options and when he offers them to Wallingford that gentleman says he will pay just five cents for them.

The popular George Randolph Chester characters, Wallingford and Daw, continue to receive excellent interpretations by Burr McIntosh and Max Figman respectively. Readers of these stories picture Violet as an exceedingly pretty young woman, and in the Violet of Lolita Robertson they may see Violet Warden, whose beauty and charm come up to their expectations.

Florence Turner in Impersonations

A MinA Comedy Released November 25, Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE title of the single reel Mina comedy, released November 25, "Florence Turner Impersonates Film Favorites" is an adequate description of the offering. Patrons of the screen are familiar with Miss Turner. They have seen her in all sorts of roles, but even so, many will be surprised when they see her in this picture. It may be truthfully said that she really impersonates the film celebrities she has selected. But while her likeness in appearance and actions to the people she impersonates is little short of wonderful, the most enjoyable part of her performance is when she accentuates their characteristics. Her burlesque is quite the cleverest burlesque which has found its way to the screen.

A picture which carries an especial attraction to those who have been and are the most ardent patrons of photoplays is indeed a novelty. Such is this Mina comedy. In the beginning Miss Turner is seen as a kitchen slavey who longs for the day when she will be the great film actress she believes she is capable of being. In the first place she looks and acts like the "slaviest" kitchen slavey ever. In a dream she introduces herself at a studio and is given a chance to show her ability.

Then she impersonates a Pathe heroine, and acts with true Latin fervor. Broncho Billy with a typical Broncho Billy ending is funny and her imitation of Ford Sterling is excellent. Mabel Normand she does and even attempts the Divine Sarah in the closing scene of "Queen Elizabeth." Then there is a "get off" on the old Biograph style. Every member of the so-called "old" Biograph company should see this for they are sure to enjoy it as much as will the fans.

"My Old Dutch"

Universal Five Reel Broadway Feature, Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

THIS reviewer is frank to confess that he wiped away a tear or two while Universal's latest Broadway Star Feature, "My Old Dutch," was on the screen, and he's proud of it, for there must be something seriously the matter of the man or woman who cannot be moved by the wonderful acting of Florence Turner and Albert Chevalier in this production.

The story is nothing to brag about. It's just a homely, simple little tale of a typical happy-go-lucky pair of youngsters in Old England who meet, find they love one another, marry, give birth to a son, and then sit back to watch this son grow into a position in the world which they know they themselves will never be able to attain. The young man for a time is anything but what they had hoped he might be, but eventually he proves his mettle and rescues his unhappy old dad and devoted mother from the workhouse whither they had been forced to seek lodging when they were too poor and too old to support themselves.

That's all there is to the story, but whole volumes could be written on the skill with which it is portrayed. Take Florence Turner and Albert Chevalier out of the cast and it wouldn't make even a decent split reel; but with these two artistes portraying the roles they do it's a $2 show if there ever was one, even though Universal isn't going to ask such prices for it.

The whole picture was photographed in England under the direction of Larry Trimble, and the backgrounds, stage settings, props and costuming are perfect. The thread of a story was adapted from Chevalier's famous song of the same title, "My Old Dutch" being his pet name for his faithful old wife, who clings to him through sunshine and shadow, through good times and bad, and who unites with him in sacrificing everything for the sake of their son.

The little tale begins with a holiday scene at what in the United States would correspond to a summer amusement park. Joe Spudd, a Coster, played by Chevalier, meets and wins the admiration of Sal, the role interpreted by Miss Turner. After their marriage they celebrate by going to the theater and from far up in the gallery they view the performance. Not once is one given a view of the stage, but so clever is the work of the two stars that you instantly know the plot of the play and see it through their eyes, as it were.

Time passes and the little son who comes to gladden their home and of whom they are inestimably proud, dies. Though the loss proves a great shock to Joe and Sal, they take up the daily routine of their lives and in due time another baby arrives. The proud parents resolve to make the second youngster "a gentleman," and when Sal inherits a small fortune every cent of it is spent in giving the boy an education and starting him on a career.

Unfortunately the lad, after his graduation, mingles with a fast set and soon runs through his fortune. Joe tells the boy frankly what he thinks of him, and the lad proves his mettle by turning over a new leaf, cutting out his fast companions and going away to seek his fortune. Fate proves unkind to Joe and Sal, however, for one misfortune follows another until they find themselves in the workhouse. And then, just when things seem the darkest, their boy comes back, rich, and installs them in a beautiful little cottage of their own, where they find a fitting reward for the hardships they have endured. And Joe, in his declining years, still is certain that there never was a faithful, loyal, loving wife in all the world to compare with his "Old Dutch."

"As the Twig is Bent"

Lubin Three-Reel Drama to Be Released November 25 Reviewed by John C. Garrett

THAT surroundings and companions are great factors in the shaping of the destinies and characteristics of a man is clearly shown in the three reel Lubin production "As the Twig Is Bent," to be released on November 25. In this photodrama twin brothers are separated when but little lads, one being given into the custody of his father and the other his mother. The one whose parent abuses him, gives him liquor and is under the influence of drink, grows up a like image of his father, while the boy who grows up under the sweet and tender influence of his mother turns out to be a man respected and loved by everyone.

L. C. Shumway does exceedingly good work in the dual role given to him, portraying splendidly the dissolute Herbert Booth and his twin brother, who is like him only in looks, George. He is supported by an able cast including Jack Holt as Colonel Francis Vail, Helen Eddy as Grace Thomas and Velma Whitman as Tatuka.

After being separated for a number of years the twin brothers of Mr. and Mrs. Booth grow up to be men alike only in appearance, George who had lived with his mother returns from West Point a full fledged officer, while Herbert enlists in the army for duty in the Philippines. George loves Grace Thomas, a wealthy girl and his commanding officer, Colonel Vail, also loves the girl and when George and Vail are ordered to the Philippines, the former gives Grace a locket which he asks her to wear in remembrance of him. Vail manages to intercept the mail between George and Grace and later receives a letter from Grace saying she is coming to the Philippines with her father as she fears something is wrong.

A scene from "As the Twig is Bent."

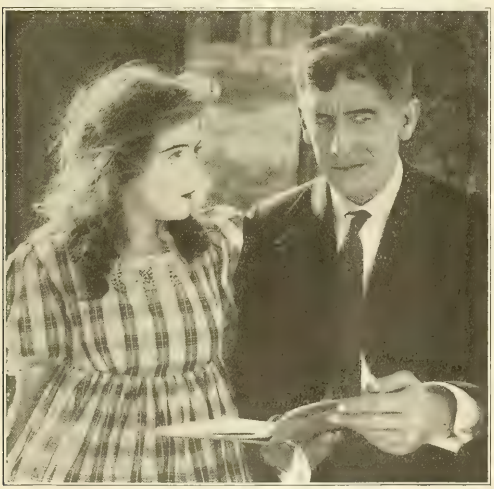
Herbert, the living image of George, has taken up with a pretty Filippino girl, Tatuka, and she keeps him constantly under the influence of liquor as this is the only way he will remain with her. Vail seeing Herbert thinks of a plan. He gives the Filippino girl money to keep Herbert under the influence of liquor for a long time and dispatches George on a secret mission to keep him away from the camp.

When Grace arrives in the Philippines Vail leads her to Tatuka's hut where she sees Herbert who she thinks is George, intoxicated. She casts the locket at the drunken man's feet and is led away and later Vail secures her promise of marriage and they leave for America.



Herbert manages to secure money and also returns to America and when George returns to camp he happens to see the Filippino girl wearing the locket he had given to Grace and she tells him the story how it had been cast at her feet. He loses no time in getting a leave of absence and takes the next boat bound for the States. He arrives there on the wedding night of Grace and Vail and he is instrumental in overpowering a burglar who is in Grace's home, and the burglar is discovered to be his brother, Herbert. In this manner the happenings of the past are cleared up and Grace and George are reconciled to the life of happiness forever.

The Current Triangle Bill

This Week's Offerings from Ince and Griffith Studios Reviewed by Neil G. Caward.

BEYOND all question first honors belong this week to the Griffith studios, whose offering in the current Triangle bill is "Jordan Is a Hard Road," produced in five reels from Sir Gilbert Parker's novel of the same title by Allen Dwan. The Ince studios offer "The Winged Idol" in five reels, from the pen of C. Gardner Sullivan, with Katherine Kaelred and House Peters featured, and the Keystone-Triangle picture is a four-reeler called "A Submarine Pirate," which serves to introduce Syd Chaplin to Triangle patrons.

The opening number is the Ince offering, which, from the standpoint of photography and stage settings, is elaborate in the extreme, but somehow the story hasn't the appeal that some of the former Ince productions have had. Katherine Kaelred as Countess Iva Ivanoff, a Russian crystal gazer, much patronized by society folk, has a lavish array of gowns, and plays her role most convincingly, while she is splendidly supported by House Peters as Jack Leonard, a millionaire derelict. Clara Williams as Mildred Leonard, Jack's wife, and Harry Keenan has a few moments as Mr. Stone, a banker who is devoted to the countess, and both are well cast. Jacob Silbert also must be given credit for an excellent "bit" as the servant and personal bodyguard of the countess, for he makes the part stand out distinctly.

Frank Campeau and Dorothy Gish in "Jordan is a Hard Road."

The story concerns the neglect of Mrs. Leonard by her husband, who is a spendthrift and rounder. Leonard, after a night's debauch, calls on Countess Ivanoff and later falls under her spell. She frankly tells him that to become her mate he will have to love her better than life itself, better than God, man or devil, and that if he ever fails her he need expect scant sympathy at her hands. Leonard, some days later, comes to the apartments of the countess in a drunken condition and after being tied to a bedpost and lashed with a knout is left half senseless to recover from his ordeal. He awakes a better man, and resolves to turn over a new leaf. With a clear head and thoroughly repentent for his past neglect, he visits his wife and begs to be shown the baby. Visiting the seeress, the wife is told she can win back her husband's love, but, later, when the countess learns the identity of her visitor she seeks to change her advice. When Leonard once more calls upon the countess he is told that he has failed to live up to the ideals prescribed for her mate and returns once more to his wife and child, as the picture fades out.

Katherine Kaelred and House Peters in "The Winged Idol."

The Triangle-Keystone offering presents a wonderful lot of antics with the aid of a submarine and gives Syd Chaplin unlimited opportunities for his peculiar style of comedy. A funnier scene than the one in which Syd goes beneath the waves, clinging to the periscope of a real submarine would be hard to find, though it is followed with even funnier ones in the same picture. Glen Cavander, Wesley Ruggles and Phyllis Allen are seen in the support of Mr. Chaplin in this story of "dirty work" aboard a pirate submarine craft.

After the intermission, Frank Campeau and Dorothy Gish make their Triangle debut in the production staged under the direction of Allen Dwan and a most successful one it proves, for many were overheard declaring as they left the theater that it was the best single offering yet seen on the Triangle program. The director has chosen some truly wonderful locations for his picture and these, combined with the unique and excellent allegories used in the telling of the story, make "Jordon Is a Hard Road" a picture decidedly out of the ordinary.

Frank Campeau really lives the part of Bill Minden on the screen and a more powerful character portrayal is seldom offered by a player. Ere the picture ends everyone feels an affection for the ex-outlaw, and views his death with regret. Miss Gish is just Dorothy Gish in the role of Cora Findley, but that is what the part requires and accordingly no possible improvement could be suggested.

Sarah Truax is splendid as Mrs. Findley and Owen Moore quickly wins the sympathies of his audience as Mark Sheldon. Others in the cast are Ralph Lewis, Mabel Wiles, Fred Burns, Lester Perry, Jim Kid, Walter Long and Joseph Singleton.

Bill Minden, an outlaw and stage robber, upon being captured by the Canadian Northwest Royal Mounted Police, turns Cora, his baby daughter, over to Mrs. Findley, a neighbor, with instructions to raise the child without ever letting her learn the name of her father. Eighteen years later Minden returns, and after being reformed at an evangelical meeting, provides a home for Mrs. Findley and Cora. Bill is sorely tempted to reveal himself to his daughter, but manages to win her love and respect as "a friend of her father's." Later he sees an opportunity of winning a fortune for Mark

Syd Chaplin as the admiral in Triangle-Keystone's "A Submarine Pirate."

Sheldon, a young Englishman with whom Cora falls in love, and goes to the bank to draw the money needed to buy Sheldon's mining claim. He arrives just in time to discover that the bank has been robbed by the McMahon gang, and goes forth to recover the loot.

In a battle with the sheriff's posse Minden is mortally wounded but manages to reach his home with the money, stow it in the safe, and then pretends to have wounded himself while cleaning his rifle. Dying, he asks Cora to kiss him and as she does so, he crosses over to Jordan, having at length reached the end of his "hard road."

"Madame Butterfly"

A Famous Players Five-Reel Drama, Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE throngs that witnessed the performances of the Famous Players picturization of John Luther Long's "Mme. Butterfly" at the Strand Theater, New York, last week, should serve as ample proof that "Mme. Butterfly" with Mary Pickford will be a wonderful "drawing card" wherever exhibited. Quite as significant as this, is the fact that the offering is equally successful from a standpoint of motion picture art; a combination worthy of note since it is of rather uncommon occurrence.

Mary Pickford in a scene from "Madame Butterfly."

The production is supremely colorful. If a director can produce a picture in the west and so vividly suggest the atmosphere of the east as Sidney Olcott has done with this, then why send a company to the east? There are tiny lakes and street scenes which, basing one's idea on knowledge gleaned from travel or scenic pictures, are distinctly Japanese, but while the production contains much reproduction of scenery the Oriental atmosphere is also suggested to a large extent, and as true art suggests rather than reproduces nature the filming of "Mme. Butterfly" in America has probably turned out to the advantage of both Mr. Olcott and the picture. A wealth of appropriate scenery sometimes spells disaster to the play. There are several examples of this.

It goes without saying that the role of Cho Cho San differs greatly from any which have ever been entrusted to Mary Pickford. With the alluring personality which has endeared her to countless people hidden under a kimono, Mary Pickford is thrown upon her histrionic resources, and for this very reason the praise she will receive for her characterization will be a higher tribute to her histrionic ability than anything she has previously done. Favorable comment upon her performance as Cho Cho San is recognition of Mary Pickford's art and not remarks whose adjectives are inspired by her personality. The difference between genius and personal magnetism is notable. Of course the possession of both works out to the advantage of all. Supporting Miss Pickford, who brings out the pathos of the part, and with equal skill its light moments, are Marshall Neilan as Lieutenant Pinkerton; Olive West as Suzuki; N. T. Carleton as the American Consul, and Caesere Gravin as the Soothsayer. Jane Hall; David Burton; Lawrence Wood and Frank Bekum are also in the cast. But the cast is not complete without the Japanese baby, who knowing no restraint and deference for the leading characters, appropriates one scene and shares largely in another. Mr. Neilan's is a highly satisfactory performance and Olive West is good as San's maid.

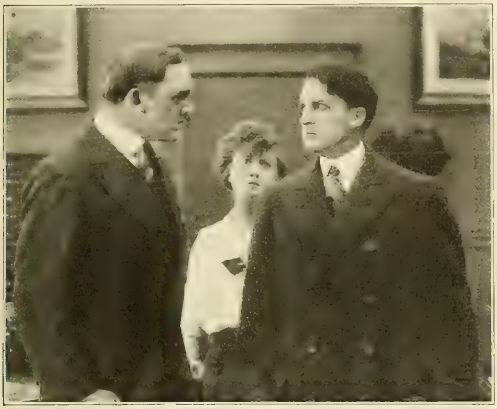
"Mme. Butterfly" will not thrill people, the story is simple and its appeal is not through tense dramatic action, but it is more rich in pathos than any story which has been given to the screen.

"The Edge of Things"

Essanay Three-Reel Feature Released November 27, Reviewed by Neil G. Caward.

AS it's feature offering for Saturday, November 27, the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company will release on that day a three-reel photodrama entitled "The Edge of Things," which features Bryant Washburn, Edna Mayo and Edward Arnold.

Mr. Washburn does some splendid character work in the role of Malcolm Jarvis, a wealthy clubman, and really the success of the picture depends largely upon the skill with which Mr. Washburn interprets this rather difficult role, for Jarvis is not all hero, and comes dangerously near to losing the sympathy of his audience when he attempts to kiss the heroine one night, while he is intoxicated. That he proves himself man enough, later on, to admit that he got only what was coming to him when the girl knocked him senseless, helps to restore him to his rightful place as the hero of the story.



Miss Mayo as Betty Marsh, the friendless girl whom Jarvis finds at the door of his apartment, is both winsome and convincing. She rises to dramatic heights in the more powerful scenes of the drama and proves that she is fully entitled to the strong place she holds in the cast. Edward Arnold, the third of the featured players, appears as Richard Marsh, a brother of Betty, and the detective, who, on being put onto the Jarvis case, finds his sister.

Photographically the production is up to the Essanay standard and will prove a most welcome offering on the bill of any house.

The story, in brief, tells how Malcolm Jarvis, a wealthy clubman, befriends Betty Marsh, a girl whom he finds lying exhausted at the door of his apartment one night. She tells him the story of her life and how her brother Dick had disappeared after the death of their parents. Jarvis and Betty become fast friends, until one night, while intoxicated, the young millionaire attempts to embrace and kiss her.

Thoroughly terrified, the girl grabs a poker, strikes down Jarvis and flees, believing that she has killed him. Half an hour later the unconscious form of the millionaire is found by his butler and the police notified. A young detective who is put on the case proves later to be Betty's missing brother, Dick, and after Jarvis recovers, realizes that he only got what was coming to him and asks Betty's forgiveness for his insult to her. A joyful reunion occurs between brother and sister.

Bryant Washburn, Edna Mayo and Edward Arnold in scene from Essanay's "The Edge of Things."

"A Daughter of the Sea"

A Five-Part World-Equitable Drama Released November 22, Reviewed by George W. Graves

IN "A Daughter of the Sea," the fascinating romance of a young fisher girl, Muriel Ostriche makes her Equitable debut. The story is treated with wonderful effect by Charles Seay through all the technicalities that comprise good directing, including excellent choice of locations. For this purpose the director had at his disposal the whole of Block Island, R. I. To anyone who loves the ocean beach some of these sets will fairly convey the salt air itself.

Muriel Ostriche is all that can be wished for as a bewitching "Daughter of the Sea," which, by the way, is an unusually appropriate title. The part calls for a portrayal of the extremely girlish Margot, tattered and dishevelled, but happy, notwithstanding. Into the part Miss Ostriche instils many subtle mannerisms and sincere acting. Mr. W. H. Tooker makes a typical characterization of the fisherman, Margot's father, while Clifford Gray is a very satisfactory juvenile lead. There is an indefinable charm and finish to the whole production which makes for thorough enjoyment.

Scene from "A Daughter of the Sea" featuring Muriel Ostriche.

Margot, the care-free and rollicking daughter of an old fisherman, has grown up without a mother's care. During the long hours of the day she loves to read about and imitate the doings of the society folk. One day she gets hold of a magazine, reads about Mrs. Rutland's family, living across the cove, and falls in love with the picture of Jack Rutland. Some time after, Mrs. Rutland, subsequent to the burning of her launch, is rescued by Margot and her father. During the convalescence of the wealthy lady at the fisherman's home, Margot meets and falls in love with Jack. The latter is also captivated by the charms of the unsophisticated fisher girl.

The grateful mother takes Margot to her home to educate her. Margot proves such an apt pupil in the ways of society that she arouses the jealousy of Adele, Jack's sister. The sister is in love with a married man, but Margot's efforts to warn her only result in further inflaming Adele's jealousy. When Mrs. Rutland tells Margot that her son cannot marry below his social standing, the girl, downcast, decides to return to her father. But Mrs. Rutland retracts somewhat when she is told by the fisherman that Margot's mother was one of her old school friends, and has blood every bit as good as the Rutland family.

Adele learns of her lover's deceit and their quarrel leads to an accidental shooting. Margot shoulders the blame in order to shield Jack's sister, but at last, in the courtroom, Adele confesses. The court's decision is that the man was killed by accident. Margot is about to return with her father when the son appears, declares his love, and the two fall into each other's arms.

WAR FILM PROVES AWESOME

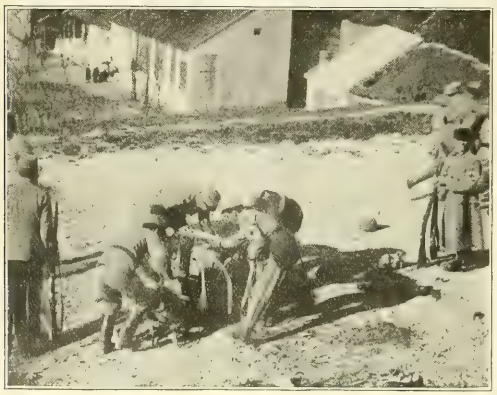
"The Battles of a Nation," Which Faithfully Reproduces the Horrors of the Present European War, Will Be Shown This Week

To attempt to fittingly describe the American Correspondent Film Company's "The Battles of a Nation" is an arduous task, worthy of the mightiest minds and subtlest pens. This picture is to open in the Park theater, Columbus Circle, New York, Monday next.

Homeric in its width, and vividly but too truly portraying the ravages of the grimmest and most terrific catastrophe that has shaken this planet of ours since the days of the flood, there are nevertheless in it scenes in which, to give just a few instances, the sweet pathos of the children's war offerings makes us forget for some brief moments their bloody destination, in which the capers and antics of the merry soldiers' pastimes remind us that those heroes are but youths after all.

The scenario is by Tom Bret. That just means without another word being added that the most exquisite taste has presided over the selection of scenes, that some of the landscapes are worthy of Corot's brush and that the impressions hurriedly collected by the camera men sometimes at the risk of considerable danger, have been assembled in the most artistic manner and made to convey a valuable and unforgetable historical lesson.

The film begins by giving us an exquisite visualization of the war-ridden fields of stricken Poland, alive again under the redeeming plough and thus providing the subsistence of the destitute inhabitants. Then a powerful contrast, wealthy Hamburg appears full to the brim not only of the necessaries of life but even of what could well, in more stirring times, be considered luxuries. Lubeck with its monster slaughterhouses and butcher shops and its immense iron works;



Dusseldorf and Bremen teeming with vigorous and intelligent endeavor must surely instil in the impartial mind full realization of what the Allies are contending against. The young folks' task of collecting copper from every household was caught by the A. C. F. man's camera and we see crowds of little ones gladly depositing their precious burdens for the Fatherland's sake.

The Krupp works at Essen, the flowing metal from which will in time form part of the devastating 42 cc., shines in molten streams before our dazzled eyes and immediately after, in one of those well planned contrasts for which Tom Bret is noted, we behold Zabora castle, the eagle's nest, and Krazocyn the Galician gem, on one of the loveliest spots of the entire earth.

The pomp and circumstances of the review held at re-conquered Przemysl by the Archduke Frederick, commander in chief of the Austro-Hungarian hosts, is seen on the screen as it is seldom given to the average man to watch such military functions. The camera is situated only a few yards from the veteran leader, in front of whom the splendid German infantry swings past in magnificent fashion. Lancers and artillery follow; the horses of the latter in splendid condition. The reception of the nobles and dignitaries takes place. The old archduke listens benevolently to the tale of woe of the two sieges narrated by the venerable archbishop and receives the homage of flowers from two sweet children who are a little awed even by his affectionate caresses. We see spruce Franz-Joseph, the Austrian crown prince, talking to the officers of the German staff, and so near was the camera that his mannerisms, his pronounced swagger, his pose, become as familiar to us as if we knew the man.

Suddenly the scene shifts and stern faced war appears. The movements of troops, bridges destroyed by the retreating Russians, aviators risking their lives to track the fleeing foe, camp scenes in which fun and frolic on the eve of the battle alternate with the duties of the soldier, form the transition which carries us with irreproachable veracity to the line of fire, where swift bullets whizz and often land with a dull sickening thud.

One of the production's most distinctive and conclusive features is the detailed inspection which it affords of one of the monster Skeda mortars, the pride of the Austro-Hungarian army. We also see one of the caterpillar tractors at work, and the actual mounting of the huge gun on its concrete foundation is of absorbing interest and furnishes an incontestable proof as to the reality and authenticity of the film. Immediately afterwards the bombardment of Warsaw begins. It is a sight for the Gods or rather for the avenging Angel! Blocks of stone of immense size are displaced, shattered and hurled through the air as if they were so many pebbles.

A scene from Lubin's "The Nation's Peril."

Miriam Nesbitt of Edison

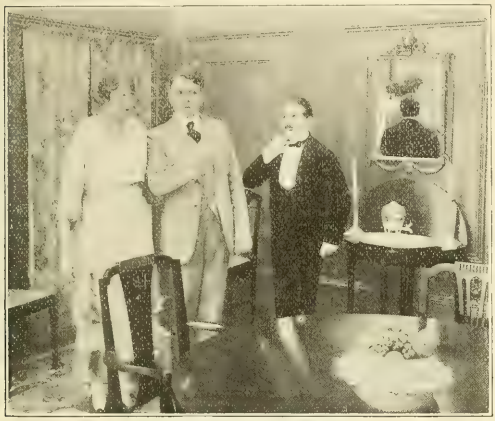
Miriam Nesbitt, Edison leading woman, has returned to the studio after about a two months' trip and rest during which she took a cross-country tour, leisurely, to the Pacific coast and the San Francisco fair. In a number of cities in which she appeared she received unplanned-upon but enthusiastic receptions. Her first re-appearance will be in a three-reel feature, "Life's Pitfalls," directed by a new Edison director, George Ridgwell.

Miriam Nesbitt.

After that Miss Nesbitt will be assigned a special director and will again appear with Marc MacDermott. These two favorite and accomplished stars are linked together in the public's affections and memory probably more than any other screen pair. This return to the older order is in response to a pronounced demand upon the part of exhibitors and patrons that these two appear together again.

The director in charge will be George Wright, newly appointed from the acting ranks of the Edison company. Mr. Wright first came to the Edison company with the intention of becoming a director, he having been a widely experienced stage director. While standing about getting onto the difference in motion picture direction, he was asked to play a part. The splendid way he did it marked him, unanimously, as too good an actor to lose from the screen.

Mr. Wright has appeared in such notable and successful stage productions as "My Friend from India," with Walter E. Perkins; the title role in "Chimmie Fadden;" in the all-star cast of "Shenandoah" with Otis Skinner; as player and director with the Charles Klein productions, in "Bobby Burnit," "The Country Boy;" the London presentation of "The Third Degree;" "Bought and Paid For;" and "Within the Law."



One of the most important engagements as yet in filmdom is the Fine Arts-Triangle studio announcement of securing the services of Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree.

"JANE" NEXT MOROSCO RELEASE

Charles Frohman Comedy Starring Charlotte Greenwood and Sydney Grant for Paramount Program Early in December

As its next release on the Paramount program, the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company announces a screen adaptation of Charles Frohman's greatest comedy success, "Jane," in which Charlotte Greenwood and Sydney Grant share the stellar honors.

The original play by W. H. Lestocque was produced in the early nineties at the Tremont theater, Boston, and was then taken to New York where it had a record breaking run at the Madison Square. Charlotte Greenwood portrays in the film the ludicrous character of "Jane," originally created by Miss Johnstone Bennett, the first of the hundreds of "Janes"

Scene from Morosco's "Jane."

that played the country for five seasons. The play was first produced in London at the Comedy theater, December 18, 1890, with Charles Hawtrey as the original "Shackelton," Lottie Venne as "Jane" and Charles Brookfield as "William."

Replete with comical situations and a mass of laughable complications, "Jane" is most effectively turned into a model film comedy at which advocates of the non-slapstick photoplay may point with pride. In the title part of the maid, Miss Greenwood displays her side-splitting antics with remarkable result and is ably supported by her partner, who presents an excellent foil for her comedy. A splendid supporting cast includes Forrest Stanley, Myrtle Stedman, Howard Davies, Herbert Standing, Syd de Grey and Lydia Yeamans Titus. The play has been staged under the direction of Frank Lloyd, who has gone to particular pains and expense to give this subject the desired atmosphere.

Another Nifty House Organ

In Movieland, issued by the Movieland Publishing Company of Dallas, Texas, on behalf of the Hulsey theaters, which include the Old Mill and the Queen theaters in Dallas, the Queen theater in Houston, the Queen theater in Galveston, and the Hippodrome theater in Waco, one of the brightest, breeziest little house organs it has ever been our pleasure to see, is found.

Movieland is a thirty-two page booklet, published fortnightly, and explains that its mission is to furnish patrons of the Hulsey theaters with the kind of information that will make the photoplays they later see of more interest to them. It contains excellently illustrated, well written synopses of coming attractions, biographies of popular players, and a question and answer department for the convenience and information of patrons. Unquestionably it will be appreciated by all to whom it is handed. It is presented without cost to regular patrons of the Husley houses and sold on the newstands of the cities in which there are Hulsey theaters at 5 cents per copy.

Watch for this Fight Scene

If the fight between the secret service agent and the moonshiner which takes place in the forthcoming Thanhouser three-reel production, "In the Name of the Law," by Clinton H. Stagg, is not the best of its kind that has ever reached the screen, a number of witnesses to its filming, among them trade press representatives, will be greatly surprised, and Director Eugene Nowland, and the players who worked so enthusiastically will have just cause for keen disappointment.

Those who saw the scene being taken can testify that it was a real fight, but there is further proof. When Nowland decided to "cut" it was learned that Gladys Hulette, who in the picture attempts to separate the men, had been struck by a stray fist; that Morris Foster had a deep gash in his knee; and that Jack Lehnberg, casually mentioned something about a sprained wrist. Upon returning to his home that night Lehnberg fainted. A physician found that two of his ribs were broken.

Mr. Nowland felt certain that his cast was determined to give the best that was in them, that the public might have realism, but he did not stop there. Inspiration and excitement were furnished by a continual gun-fire from several rifles and revolvers. One had only to be present to appreciate the remarkable emotional effect of Nowland's novel plan. The scene was taken on the outdoor stage of the Thanhouser New Rochelle studio on Saturday, November 13. L. J. Rubenstein, Thanhouser publicity manager, is an exceptional host. The invited trade press representatives will testify to this.

Film Will Introduce New Star

"The Unwritten Law," now being produced by the California Motion Picture Corporation as an adaptation from Edwin Milton Royle's celebrated play, is to introduce a brand new star to the motion picture world. Her name is Miss Felice Rix, her eyes are large and brown and she has two deep seated dimples that are always at play. Her age is four and a half years with a possible allowance of a few days either way.

Although she has had no previous experience, either on the screen or in the "legit," she is an actress of real versatility and temperament. Her part of Sue, daughter of Kate Wilson (Miss Michelena) and John Wilson (William Pike), is a very considerable one in the present picture. She quite frankly admits that she is the star of the cast.

Outside of her acting, her chief pride is in her "picture mama," as she calls Miss Michelena, and one noting the affection between the two might believe their relationship real, instead of make believe just for the pictures.

Sue (Baby Rix) and her mother Kate Wilson (Beatriz Michilena) in California's "The Unwritten Law."

Miss Rix has mastered the rudiments of motion picture acting with a ready grasp. Her chief source of worry now lies in the doll which supports her throughout the major part of her role. Recently she slid excitedly from her couch and stopped the cameraman in the middle of an important scene because she discovered "dollie" quite contrary to motion picture ethics, looking straight into the camera.

"The Swanson Circuit News"

William H. Swanson, president of the Swanson Theater Circuit of Salt Lake City, Utah, and accredited with being one of the most progressive motion picture men in the country, has added a new wrinkle to his numerous activities. He now breaks into the white light of publicity as a publisher, and in The Swanson Circuit News, a four page weekly newspaper, provides patrons of the Swanson theaters with news of the film world while it is still news. The first issue contains a leading article explaining the reason for a raise in prices in such of the Swanson theaters as are going to exhibit Triangle films, and a half dozen brief stories of coming film attractions, together with illustrations of their stars, and publicity matter of general interest to motion picture patrons. Mr. Swanson is to be congratulated upon the splendid little house organ he is issuing, and Motography has no doubt it will result in increased patronage for his houses.

Howell Hansell directing a scene in Pathe's "Who is Guilty?" series.

Keystone Stars to Tour

Miss Mabel Normand, featured Keystone star who recently recovered from the effects of an almost fatal accident and who has been enjoying a vacation at the San Francisco Exposition during her convalescence, will leave for New York shortly, accompanied by Roscoe Arbuckle, who will direct a series of pictures that will be taken at points of interest along the route. Salt Lake, Denver, Colorado Springs, The Garden of the Gods, Niagara Falls, Chicago—in fact all locations that may be made use of will be visited. In the party will be Ferris Hartman, Al. St. John and others, together with a cameraman, assistant director and a full corps of assistants. The return trip will be made by way of the Panama Canal where many interesting scenes will be made. No definite time duration has been set but it is certain that several months will be occupied —and it is still more certain that the results will help make bright spots in the Keystone portion of the Triangle program.

Eastern Star Invades Studedaker

On Monday last, through the courtesy of S. G. Hamblen, attorney for C. N. Hately, the Triangle representative in Chicago, the Studebaker Theater was turned over to the order of the Eastern Star of Austin, which was honoring its worthy matron, Mrs. Lucile Hetzel, who has recently been appointed a delegate or representative of the order for the state of Alabama.

Over 600 ladies were present on Monday night and in fact for the entire week the Studebaker has been taking care of those who were unable to attend the first evening.

Mrs. Hetzel, who has just been appointed to the position of chief officer of the White Shrine, is to be the host of the officers of all of the Eastern Star chapters in Cook County on Friday afternoon at the Studebaker theater.

Raver Engages Ottala Nesmith

Harry R. Raver, president of the Raver Film Corporation, announces the engagement of Ottala Nesmith to supplement the cast of "The Other Girl." This talented celebrity will interpret an important role of the story. She comes from the Famous Players Film Company. Last season she was leading woman for David Belasco in his production of "The Vanishing Bride" and starred in "Just Outside the Door." In the Raver-Thomas production she will support James J. Corbett and Paul Gilmore.

TWAIN ADAPTED TO SCREEN

Marguerite Clark Starred by Famous Players in Humorist's Beloved "Prince and Pauper," Which Should Prove Wonderful Picture

For the first time in its history the motion picture screen is to reflect the humor and pathos of the incomparable Mark Twain, when the Famous Players Film Company stars Marguerite Clark in an adaptation of "The Prince and the Pauper," through the Paramount Pictures Corporation, on November 29.

Ever since the feature branch of the industry was inaugurated, various producers have sought to obtain the rights of this master-work of America's foremost humorist, but these efforts proved futile, as it was feared by those who controlled the author's copyrights that the humor and spontaneous charm of the story would be lost on the screen. It was only through the unquestioned reputation of the Famous Players Film Company for unsurpassed artistic merit that these objections were finally removed and the rights to this exquisite story relinquished to the producers, in the assurance that the distinguished name of the author would suffer no disparagement.

Marguerite Clark in scene from Famous Players "The Prince and the Pauper."

Though "The Prince and the Pauper" has frequently been seen on the stage and in this form of public presentation has been extremely successful, the limitations of the theater made it always necessary to so construct the story that only each of the characters—either the prince or the pauper—should appear on the scene at one time, as both roles were invariably played by the same person, due to the necessity for the resemblance between the two characters, so vital to the story.

In the film version this difficulty is entirely obviated by the use of the double exposure, Miss Clark appearing on the screen in both characters simultaneously. Realizing that the double exposure, merely for its own sake, has long since ceased to interest the public, Edwin S. Porter and Hugh Ford, who collaborated in the screen production, have introduced the trick camera work only where Mark Twain's story makes it absolutely essential. In these instances, however, it has been used with rare effect and has given Miss Clark one of the best opportunities she has ever had of displaying her remarkable versatility under the most exacting conditions.

In support of Miss Clark there appear Robert Broderick, William Sorelle, William Barrows, William Frederick, and other well known players.

Betty Gray of Universal

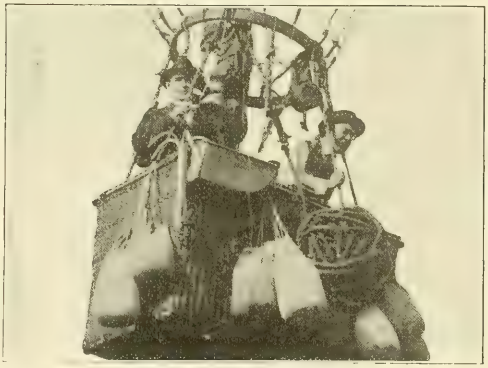
Miss Beata Gray, popularly and Universally known in the motion picture profession as Betty Gray, was born on February 27, 1896. A natural phenomenal beauty cannot hide her light behind the shade, so Miss Gray was sought after when very young by the well-known Harrison Fisher, who was so pleased at the very image of youth, health, life and vigor which was so evident in Miss Gray's countenance that he created from her posing his famous series of "Western Girl" pictures, which were done in oil and attained such a tremendous popularity.

Betty Gray.

After this pronounced introduction to the public, Miss Gray was sought by Charles Dana Gibson, for whom she became a special model and posed for what was to become one of Mr. Gibson's most gifted creations, the "debutante" series. After a few years of special posing Miss Gray went on an extensive vaudeville tour at a time when there were more performers than today and when managers were more particular about the ability of the performers. From vaudeville she went to her first appearance before the camera, being engaged by Pathe Freres, for whom she shortly became leading lady. She later went to the Vitagraph and Biograph companies and has recently joined the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, being cast as leading lady in Brinsley Shaw's company, co-incidentally playing with Paul Panzer as she did in her first photoplay engagement with the Pathe Freres.

Uuiversal Lands Romaine Fielding

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company announces that beginning in the near future the Universal program will present western dramas in which Romaine Fielding, the famous Lubin actor-director will appear. It is understood Mr. Fielding's decision to release his productions through the Universal Company, rather than as usual under the Lubin trade mark, was caused by his desire to remain in the west. The Lubin Company, it is rumored, suggested that Mr. Fielding return to the eastern studios and continue his work there, but he was so in love with the west that he preferred to remain in his present location at Phoenix, Arizona, even though, in order to do so, he had to make other arrangements for the release of his future productions.



News of the Week as Shown in Films

Testing guns at a famous American munition plant. Copyright, 1915, Mutual Weekly.

Great Crowds gather in Chicago to Witness "wet" parade. Copyright, 1915, Hearst-Selig News Pictorial.

Governor Elliott N. Major of Missouri takes flight in balloon. Copyright, 1915, Universal Animated Weekly.

Dario Resta and his mechanician win Harkness Trophy. Copyright, 1915, Mutual Weekly.

Governor Whitman of New York attends christening of the Naval U. S. flying boat. Copyright, 1915, Mutual Weekly.

Mrs. Tom Thumb celebrates her 74th birthday. Copyright, 1915, Pathe News.

Brevities of the Business

PACIFIC COAST NEWS

By "Capt. Jack" Poland.

A notable event in film life was the welcome greeting accorded Billie Burke, the former Inceville star of pictures, on her arrival in Los Angeles Friday, November 12, enroute from San Francisco to New York, where she is to return to the legitimate stage. Miss Burke recently starred in a famous Ince-Triangle program, for which she was paid $40,000 and all expenses. After the picture she visited the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in San Francisco as a vacation after strenuous work in Ince features. The return visit to Los Angeles was brief, but very westernesque, exciting and interesting to the motion picture star. Colonel Thos. H. Ince, master of Inceville, accompanied by about 700 of his favorite stars, players, heads of departments, Indians, cowboys, cowgirls and employes in costume to suit the occasion, met the California Limited of the Santa Fe on the depot at its arrival. Miss Burke's car was surrounded by cowboys and Indians who with a fusilade of pistol shots welcomed the famous star again on Los Angeles soil. Colonel Ince in person headed his delegation of thoroughbreds and paid his respects to Billie Burke, who greeted the director general and players spontaneously, cameras clicked and flower girls threw garlands of flowers and choice buds in the path of the newly made motion picture maid. A brass band played sweet music and for the time being the railroad depot presented a huge spectacle of motion picture life, all in honor of Billie Burke, who it is said, has an open offer from Colonel Ince to appear in a specially written feature picture at her pleasure. The contract only awaits the Burke signature and the price is high.

J. H. Buffum, a well known cameraman of Los Angeles, braved the bullets of fighting factions at Agua Prieta, Mexico, just across the border, during the recent battle between Villaists and Carranza forces, and secured some excellent pictures of actual fighting, which were shown at the Orpheum theater in Los Angeles two days later. Some speed for this energetic cameraman, and this feat simply demonstrates that the real sporting man with the camera is ever ready to do his duty.

A band of sixty-five Cheyenne Indians arrived at Inceville studios Wednesday of this week to appear in Triangle features. They were under the personal escort of William A. Brooks, formerly of Bliss, Okla. Thirty-five more will arrive after the close of the Panama exposition in San Francisco, and this will give the New York Motion Picture studios the largest and most representative band of Indians of any picture organization.

A big party of Biograph players numbering more than 100 people arrived in Los Angeles this week some two months ahead of their usual time of western pilgrimage. They are already established in the Biograph studios and making ready to produce winter pictures before the rainy seasons set in.

Miller's theater owners have again branched out by taking over the beautiful Alhambra theater on Hill street, where they will feature Fox pictures after their first runs at the original Miller theater. Herman H. Bosley, formerly of Clune's theaters, will manage the new Miller house.

The Motion Picture Directors' Association of Los Angeles are planning a grand ball and Thanksgiving bouffe at Hotel Alexandria as a holiday advent for the organization, November 25. Al Christie, secretary of the association, heads the arrangement committee, with Joseph DeGrasse, William Robert Daly, Frank Beal and M. J. McQuarrie as his aides de camp. A great time is anticipated.

The first trade paper to reach the coast every week continues to be MOTOGRAPHY, in spite of the changed date of issue of the other two papers. In fact, MOTOGRAPHY is to be seen everywhere around here a full day before its next competitor shows up.

S. S. Norton, treasurer of the Static Club of America, the well known organization of cameramen, and an honored member of the Universal photographic staff whose specialty is making features, returned to the Pacific Coast studios this week after an extended tour of the East and is now with Jay Hunt, director of Carter DeHaven and wife, on a big feature picture for the Universal program.

The most notable event of the motion picture season in Los Angeles was the opening at Clune's famed Auditorium theater of the new Triangle program, which began last Monday night before a crowded house. And as this theater has the largest seating capacity, some 3,500, of any house in the west it was a signal victory for the new organization. D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett, with special parties, occupied the boxes and the opening was turned into a semi-motion picture society event, many of the leading players on the screen occupying boxes and seats of prominence. W. H. Clune, owner of the house, and Lloyd Brown, the manager, were entertaining hosts, introducing stars, celebrities, directors, players and patrons of the house in the lobby, and making everyone feel at home.

The bill was a big three-feature program, introducing "My Valet," a Mack Sennett comedy, with Raymond Hitchcock as the star, supported by Mabel Normand, Mack Sennett, Fred Mace and other members of the Keystone cast. The second picture was the big Douglas Fairbanks feature presented by D. W. Griffith, "The Lamb," showing this notable star with an able support. The third picture was a Thomas H. Ince specialty introducing Dustin Farnum in "The Iron Strain," one of the big pictures of the season. A strong supporting cast played with each star and the pictures have been drawing crowded houses all this week.

MID-WEST NEWS

Illinois

Safe blowers at 3:30 o'clock a. m. November 8 cracked the safe of the Majestic theater at Springfield, Ill., and made a haul of $940, the receipts from one of the best days that the Majestic theater has had this season. Two men are under arrest at Springfield pending an investigation.

Arkansas

The Pulaski chancery court was held in a moving picture theater in Little Rock, Ark., November 6, when the injunction proceedings directed against a civil war film was called for hearing. R. F. Herbert, one of a volunteer cast of actors in the play who, while supposed to be dead, ran at the explosion of a paper bomb near him, sought to enjoin the producers on the ground that it would humiliate him. The court sustained a demurrer alleging there was not sufficient ground for action.

Oklahoma

A. Bert Estes succeeds F. G. Doggett as manager of the Busby theater at McAlester, Okla. The Busby will exhibit

Film Market Quotations and Financial Gossip

Supplied by R. D. Small of A. E. Butler & Co., Chicago.

	Bid	Asked
American Film Co., Inc....	90	97
Biograph Co.	42	55
Colonial M. P. Corp.....	1	4 *
General Film Corp., pref...	40	47
Mutual Film Corp., pref...	49	51½
Mutual Film Corp., com...	47	50
No. Am. Film Corp., pref..	73	..
No. Am. Film Corp., com..	67	73
New York M. P. Corp.....	59	66
Thanhouser Film Corp....	1⅞	3½*
Triangle Film Corp.....	6	6⅛*
Universal Film Mfg. Co....190		..
Vogue Films, Inc.....120		..
World Film Corp.....	4¼	4½*

*Par $5.00

World Film Corporation.—A circular issued by bankers identified with the World Film Corporation states that $500,000 of stock remaining in the treasury has been underwritten, thus furnishing money for further expansion of the business. This brings the total outstanding capital to $3,000,000, consisting of 600,000 shares of a par value of $5 each.

New York Motion Picture Corporation.—Declined sharply; sales were made as low as 59 and 60. The decline in this stock is probably due to a report current in New York that the next dividend will be passed.

Vogue Films, Inc.—Continues to be in demand, with no stock available.

Triangle Film Corporation.—It is announced that the Triangle Film Corporation will discontinue a number of its larger theaters, such as the Chestnut Street in Philadelphia and Studebaker in Chicago, during the present month. Jones, Linick & Schaefer, it is stated, will resume the management of the Studebaker on November 29. This, however, will probably have little effect on the company, as the exhibitors' contracts which it expected to secure are now practically all in hand. The company has established sixteen distributing agencies to date and others will follow as needed. Stock, however, was weaker during the last several days and sold as low as 5⅞.

moving pictures (Mutual films) and vaudeville on dates not filled by theatrical companies.

The Star (Veno Pistocco, manager) was reopened November 1 and will exhibit Pathe film pictures daily except Sunday.

Texas

Miss Margaret McLean took the oath of office before Mayor Tyra at Fort Worth, Tex., November 6, as a member of the motion picture censor board of that city. She was appointed to the board several months ago, but only recently returned to Fort Worth after an extended visit to other cities.

A second attack has been made on Houston, Texas, board of censors and the ordinance which created and empowered the board. The attack was made by Anthony Xydian, proprietor of a local motion picture theater. The first attack on the effort to censor films resulted in a mixed victory for each side. The court held the city was vested with authority to censor theaters and films, but that the secretary of the board did not have authority to refuse to issue permits.

Friction has developed between some of the motion picture houses and the board of theatrical censors of Houston, as evidenced when District Judge Dannebaum declined to grant a permanent injunction against the censors in favor of a theater which for three days has been trying to exhibit a film in which a noted actress played the stellar role.

Negotiations looking to the erection of a large factory in Dallas, Texas, for the production of motion pictures, thoroughly equipped with the latest and most modern facilities, costing approximately $3,000,000, are being negotiated with the chamber of commerce and the manufacturers' association of that city. In addition to the factory, it is purposed to establish a college of instruction for motion picture operators, actors and scenario writers.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES

By P. J. Cropper, Secretary Exhibitors' League of Philadelphia.

Charles Segall, president of the local exhibitors' league, has leased the Apollo theater, Fifty-second and Thompson streets. The house, which has 1,400 seats, has been redecorated and will be devoted to showing the highest class of photoplays. An organ is to be installed. Mr. Segall also operates the Hippodrome and Hamilton theaters.

The newly erected Orient, on Sixty-first and Woodland, is making a keen fight for patronage in a district already well supplied. J. W. Camac, the owner-manager, however, is hopeful of success.

The Exhibitors' League is holding its fourth annual ball on Wednesday, December 8. A large delegation of stars is expected to take part in the grand march, which will be led by Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne.

Triangle plays are being shown at the Belmont and Great Northern theaters, with the Somerset (Kensington) to follow. Prices of admission range from 15 cents to 35 cents. The showing down town in the Chestnut Opera House has not been so well patronized as was expected, partly owing to the locality of the house.

Fierce competition marks the bookings of the rival "Carmens." At present the Geraldine Farrar version seems to lead. But the Fox film with Theda Bara has its champions.

Stanley V. Mastbaum, who well deserves his title of Imperator, is dining Clara Kimball Young on Monday, November 15, after her visit to the Arcadia, where she is to review "Trilby."

Philadelphia business is not yet up to standard. Doubtless the showing of "Birth of a Nation" has drawn many to the Forrest, but apart from this there seems a general desire on the part of the public to patronize houses with high class music. There have been at least twenty organs installed this year; and where this has not been done orchestras are being used. The Stanley has both. The orchestra is under the direction of Harry W. Meyer and is reckoned among the finest in the country.

The leading exchanges are taking a firm stand to raise the prices of admission for their productions. The Famous Players led the way and are being followed by the Fox, Paramount and World's management.

Lewis M. Schwab and William Sachsenmaier of the Interstate are making a trip to Hot Springs, Ark.

The reported sale of the Iris theater, Kensington avenue, for $75.000 has not yet been consummated, M. J. Walsh being still in possession.

CHICAGO GOSSIP

The November Collier's, in an editorial captioned "The New Touchstone," says: "It's come at last. A serious drama advertises, 'In sheer dramatic intensity the third act surpasses any scene in ———.'" And thereupon proceeds to mention a popular moving picture film. The burden of proof has been reversed. The motion picture used to be thought presumptious in its claim to an interest as keen as that of the legitimate; now the spoken play pleads humbly that it is as enthralling as the moving picture.

J. A. Kent of the Great Northern Films Company passed through Chicago last week on his way to Minneapolis, where he closed with the Elliott-Sherman Film Company for his product in their territory.

"Jack" Cunningham of the Mirror Film Company left Chicago for the east November 11.

J. A. Berst left Chicago on Monday, November 15, to again take up his residence in New York, where he will assume the duties attendant to the position of president and general manager of the General Film Company, vice J. J. Kennedy and P. L. Waters, resigned.

H. E. Aitkin, president of the Triangle Film Company, was a Chicago visitor on Thursday, leaving here at night bound west.

C. W. Hately, personal representative of the executives of the Triangle Film Company in Chicago, was host at the Studebaker theater on Monday night to over 600 representatives of the order of the Eastern Star of Austin.

The American Theatrical Hospital Association will give a grand charity ball Saturday evening, November 20, at the First Regiment Armory, Sixteenth street and Michigan avenue. It is expected that Beverly Bayne and Francis X. Bushman will come on from New York Saturday to lead the grand march at this ball. Many new and novel cabaret features have been provided. The ball is being given to secure sufficient funds to begin building the new hospital, ground for which has been purchased on Irving Park boulevard near Sheridan road. The organization is a charitable one, incorporated not for profit, its primary object being to give medical and surgical treatment to all those engaged in the amusement profession who are unable to pay for same. It is the first and only theatrical hospital in the world, and MOTOGRAPHY, bespeaks in its interest, your attendance.

J. E. Willis, one of the oldest exchange men in the United States, will celebrate his silver wedding on November 19.

George K. Spoor is looking after his many interests in California, having left for Los Angeles last week.

Frank Powell and a bevy of actors and actresses from the Fox Film Company are sojourning at the Sherman House in Chicago and are using that hotel, as well as the press and editorial rooms of the Chicago Herald, in filming the tremendous stage success, "The Fourth Estate," which will be released on the Fox company's program shortly.

Capt. Harry Lambert left Chicago for the east on Tuesday, November 16, where he expects to begin production for the Mirror Film Company at its new studios.

D. W. Horsley, New York bound, was a visitor at the Sherman House November 17.

Fred Aiken, formerly district manager for the General Film Company, with headquarters in Chicago, and later district manager in the Pacific division for the same company, has been reappointed to the position of district manager of the Chicago territory, with headquarters at 17 South Wabash avenue.

H. Tipton Steck, the owner of the Parkway theater, boarded the Century on Wednesday, November 17, bound for Boston, where he expects to see the Harvard warriors battle with Yale on the gridiron. Mr. Steck's house played to over 2,000 people on Sunday, November 14, while he states that he expects to break this record with Charlie Chaplin in "A Night at the Show."

Donald Anthony Meaney was a visitor to MOTOGRAPHY's office on Tuesday, November 16, to renew his subscription. (MacQuade please note.) Mr. Meaney expects to leave very shortly for Los Angeles, where he will take up a position with one of the large producing companies, about which an announcement appears in another part of this magazine.

NOTES FROM ALL OVER

C. M. Payne, the New York World cartoonist, whose series of "Smatter Pop" cartoons are appearing in seventy daily papers, paid a visit to the Fine Arts studio in California in search of inspiration for his cartoon series.

Little Mary Miles Minter, the youngest of stars on either the stage or screen, who is appearing in Metro feature pictures, has begun work on another big production in five parts called "The Rose of the Alley." It is being produced by Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., for release on the Metro program. Charles Horan is directing the new Minter picture.

The Smalleys have not yet returned from San Francisco, where they went early this week to stage a number of scenes in their production of Rufus Steele's five-reel story, "Hop." Phillips Smalley, Lois Weber, Marie Walcamp and Juan de la Cruz appear in the leading roles.

Edwina Robbins, one of the best known character women of the Vitagraph Company and formerly known as "The Auto Girl" in vaudeville, has returned from a delayed vacation.

Alvah W. Layne has joined the Vitagraph aggregation as purchasing agent, and has already installed his careful system that has proven so efficient in the past.

Anna Little, the American leading woman, is looking forward to the co-starring with Tom Chatterton. She is one of the most earnest girls appearing on the screen, and is forever seeking opportunities to do greater work, and she loves her art largely for art's sake.

Lillian Walker and Leah Baird are two of the most popular photoplayers in Great Britain, according to the result of the World's Greatest Film Artists' Contest, which was conducted by the Pictures and Picturegoer, London. It would be hard to put popularity to a greater test, for the Americans had to compete with French, Italian and Danish players.

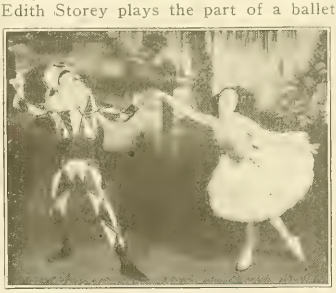
The Associated has signed up Sammy Goldberg, formerly of one of the theatrical weeklies, to play general utility on their office team. Sammy, who is very ambitious to become a journalist, is a cub reporter evenings on The Globe and is working under the personal supervision of Irving J. Barsky, the director of publicity for the Associated, who has received his journalistic education in the college of hard knocks.

Just prior to her departure for her home in Milwaukee, Wis., Leonore Ulrich, the charming little star of the stage and screen, confirmed the rumor that she had signed a contract with Oliver Morosco, which calls for her exclusive film services for a period of two years.

"Daphne," the second Lillian Gish-Triangle play to follow "The Lily and the Rose," has been put into active production at the Fine Arts Flm studio. As already announced, Elliott Dexter, the Broadway leading man, will play opposite Miss Gish in her new play.

Henry McRae Webster, who has recently taken over the direction of King Baggot, is busy at the Imp studio on a five-reel drama entitled "The Law of Life," adapted by Margaret B. Havey.

Since her completion of the role of little "Amy Fisher" in World's Charles K. Harris feature, "Hearts of Men" (formerly entitled "School Bells" (Ethelmary Oakland, the seven-year-old child has had several unusual engagements. She played in "Stolen Orders" until it closed, and is at present engaged with the Boston Opera Company in "Madame Butterfly." She plays the role of a Japanese child, supposed to be three years of age, and Miss Tamaki Miura, the only Japanese prima donna, who sings the title role in the opera, is delighted with the child, and says that she is the most adaptable stage child she has ever seen.



Director Frank Beal and his company, including Harry Mestayer, have been transferred from Edendale to the Seelig Zoo.

No motion picture comedy company seems quite complete without a fat man. In Vim Comedies, "Babe" Hardy, a 350-pound laugh-provoker, fills this role. One of the few fat comedians who is not burdensome to himself, Hardy can turn handsprings, roll-overs and flipflaps with the agility of the most finished acrobat.

King Baggot is off on a week's vacation to his home in St. Louis. King is very much attached to his home city, for there is where he went to school and where he began his career as an actor, playing small extra parts in the old Koerner's Garden Stock Company.

Dorothy Gish will remain at the New York Fine Arts Film studio after completing her present picture, "Betty of Greystone," and may then start rehearsing in an original comedy-drama, "Katy Brauer."

In "A Price for Folly," a powerful five-part dramatic screen story, announced as the first Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature release for December, Edith Storey plays the part of a ballet dancer. As is usual when this Vitagraph star is to appear in an unusual and novel dress, she designs the costume to be worn, and in this instance exercised more than usual care in drawing designs for the creation of the ballet costume and in selecting material for the making.

Edith Storey and Arthur Cozine in a scene from Vitagraph's "A Price for Folly."

Weber and Fields, the famous German comedians, accompanied by Sam Bernard, were recent visitors to the Selig Zoo. All three expressed admiration for the magnificent collection of animals and birds exhibited in this wonder spot.

With the last chapter of "The Broken Coin" serial finished, Francis Ford and Grace Cunard this week left the Universal studios not to return for three weeks. Ford has left for the home of his father in Portland, Me., and Miss Cunard is on her way to the central west, where her people reside. Mr. Ford stopped in New York on the way home to see Mr. Laemmle.

Bessie Barriscale is enjoying a brief rest this week, while William Desmond, her leading man, and the remainder of the company supporting her in the current Ince-Triangle feature in which she will be starred are working, under the direction of Scott Sidney in some thrilling scenes in the mountains.

J. P. McGowan, producer, and Helen Holmes, the star of the New Signal Company with a release on the Mutual program, are hard at work on the big, new serial story. The studio, which backs on the railroad, is one of the busiest places in Los Angeles and the whole place looks like a small railroad community.

To secure the rain-soaked effect of the country road running through the Whitecaps settlement in "The Gentleman From Indiana," the new Pallas picture starring Dustin Farnum, Director Frank Lloyd had to use over 14,000 gallons of water. And every gallon had to be hauled by auto trucks from a well three miles away.

Iva Shepard, who was recently engaged by E. K. Lincoln to play the female lead in one of his forthcoming features, to be produced in the Berkshire Hills, has cancelled in favor of a long-term engagement with a large film manufacturing company which will be announced when papers are signed.

E. H. Calvert, Essanay director, stirred up a neighborhood in the Chicago Ghetto to get some exterior sets for "A Daughter of the City," a five-reel production, and procured the services of most of the neighborhood as actors.

Director Edgar Lewis of the Lubin Company with his camera men, assistants and principal characters of his "The Great Divide" company have left for Georgia, where pictures of a giant landslide will be taken for the completion of his picture.

Louise Glaum has been chosen to play with W. H. Thompson in the forthcoming feature at Inceville. The part will furnish this clever actress with another opportunity to show everyone what a splendid artist she really is. She woke her admirers up in "The Toast of Death," and it is safe to say she will never let them go to sleep again.

World Film's forthcoming drama, "The Sins of Society," shows a ship blown up with hundreds of people consigned to the horrors of the raging main. World Film used a real old-time "queen of the ocean" for the transport. She was called "The Fairy Belle" and was a big and picturesque ship.

Edgar Jones, the Metro director, who is putting on the big feature picture, "The Turmoil," a picturization of Booth Tarkington's famous novel, will take his company of players either to Pittsburg or Steubensville, Ohio, to make the factory scenes.

Lucius Henderson is completing the final scenes in his first Broadway Universal Feature, "The Strength of the Weak," adapted by W. A. Lathrop from the well known play. It will be in six reels, and Mary Fuller will be starred.

Sam de Grasse, who characterized the role of "Silent Smith" in "The Martyrs of the Alamo" and recently completed his part in the Helen Ware-Triangle play "Cross Currents," has been selected to play a responsible part in the support of Orrin Johnson, who is starring in "The Price of Power."

Henry Otto is in his element. He is producing "Undine" for the Universal, and his artistic tendencies have the fullest sway. This means that the big "U" will have a very beautiful feature to present in the near future. Otto has just returned from the Santa Cruz Islands.

Director George Terwilliger with Octavia Handworth in the leading role is at work on a four-part dramatic subject from the pen of Anthony P. Kelly, "The City of Failing Light." Leslie Austin, a newcomer to the Lubin stock company, makes his first appearance as a Lubin player in support of Miss Handworth.

A mammoth peace meeting, attended by more than 2,000 women of Southern California, and at which resolutions beseeching the European powers to lay down their arms were adopted, was held this week at Inceville, the 18,000 film city of the New York Motion Picture Corporation. Never in the history of the big corporation has such a multitude gathered at one time within the big domain as that which visited the plant for the function. The guests arrived at the Long Wharf in Santa Monica aboard special Pacific Electric cars and were then conveyed to the studios in a hundred sightseeing automobile busses.

Ben Wilson is producing a three-reel drama by W. A. Lathrop entitled "Caught in His On Trap" at the Universal Eastern studios. He is supported by Dorothy Phillips, Joe Girard and a strong cast.

William D. Taylor is producing "He Fell in Love With His Wife," with Florence Rockwell as the star, for the Pallas people, which means the Bosworth, Inc. Taylor is delighted with his surroundings and the facilities at his command, and we may look for some splendid pictures from this fine director.

Tom Chatterton, who has been playing opposite Cleo Madison at the Universal, leaves for Santa Barbara, where he will direct Anna Little and himself in a series of western photoplays. This will not be the first time these two young people have played together, for they did some of their most popular work together with the Kay-Bee-Broncho people at Inceville in days gone by.

Rollin Sturgeon's feature company that is at Bear Valley filming "God's Country and the Woman" has met with splendid weather conditions and work is progressing rapidly. Nell Shipman, creting the part of "The Woman" of the title, is right at home in the northern atmosphere, as a part of her life has been spent in Alaska.

An epidemic of chapped lips which assumed proportions sufficient to halt the operations of an entire moving picture company was the unusual experience which befell the Pallas Pictures company on their recent expedition to the San Bernadino Mountains to do "The Call of the Cumberlands," which stars Dustin Farnum.

Lieutenant-Commander Frank Taylor Evans of the Newport (R. I.) Naval Training Station was the guest of Director George Terwilliger last week at a private showing of Terwilliger's latest feature, "The Nation's Peril."

Hobart Bosworth has a new director. Under Lloyd Carleton, who has just joined the Universal, Hobart Bosworth plays the leading role in "Two Men of Sandy Bar," a film version of Bret Harte's play.

When work on "The Cave Man," the latest Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature, in five parts, to be released through the V. L. S. E. was completed Director Theodore Marston found he had taken 328 scenes that involved situations in everything from a hovel to a Fifth avenue club. Also that Robert Edeson, who appars as Haulick Smagg, had spanned the lapse of time between the cave man period and the twentieth century, successfully portraying the reincarnation of a remarkable character.

Robert Edeson in the forthcoming Vitagraph feature "The Cave Man."

W. O. Edmunds, formerly manager of George Kleine's Los Angeles office, has been sent to Kansas City, where he will assume management of the Kleine branch in that city. Mr. Edmunds is one of the oldest and best known film salesmen in the business. He has been associated with Mr. Kleine more or less since 1908, at which time he was manager of the Kleine office at Winnipeg, Canada.

One of the unusual scenes in the Selig Red Seal play, "I'm Glad My Boy Grew Up To Be a Soldier," released through V. L. S. E., Inc., on December 13, is the explosion of shrapnel which causes the death of one of the principal characters in the play. There are also many rapid-fire guns utilized in the battle scenes as well as armored automobiles.

The most recent addition to the Fine Arts Films scenario department is Roy Somerville, well known for his literary ability. Mr. Somerville is the author of the "Kid Ryan" series now being published in the New Story Magazine and a series of western stories appearing in the Blue Book Magazine.

Herbert Sherman Houston, publisher of The World's Work, Country Life in America and vice-president of Doubleday-Page Company of New York, visited Universal City recently with William Woodhead, publisher of the Sunset Magazine. With the two publishers were Mrs. Houston and Mrs. Woodhead.

Announcement is made by the Mutual Film Corporation of two important screen productions scheduled for release the first two weks in December. Each of them will be comprised of five reels and will be released as Mutual Masterpictures. First of the two masterpicture releases, "The Forbidden City," will go to the public December 2. Louise Glaum, frequently referred to by critics as the "Bernhardt of the Screen," will be presented in the leading role, supported by a cast of exceptional merit. Second of the Mutual Masterpictures, for release early in December, is "The Buzzard's Shadow," in five parts, featuring Harold Lockwood and May Allison. This masterpicture will go to the public December 9. The piece deals with army life at one of the frontier posts during the early days of the westward march of civilization. Aside from the exceptionally novel theme of the piece, "The Buzzard's Shadow" is important for the reason that it presents Mr. Lockwood in the role of a western character, that of any army scout.

Joseph Carl Breil, the recognized musical composer, now engaged in composing music to accompany Fine Arts plays, has added to his staff J. A. Raynes, who has earned quite a reputation for his work. Mr. Raynes re-wrote the music for "Peggy From Paris," which Henry Savage produced with William Hodge in the star part.

Sydney Ayres will hereafter produce his own pictures at Universal City. He has started production on a three-reel story of the Canadian woods written by F. McGrew Willis under the title "John o' the Mountains." Besides directing the production, Ayres appears in the title role. Doris Pawn plays opposite him.

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company has been asked to do something which it did not seem possible would ever be one of the sidelines of the motion picture business. For the first time in the history of motion pictures a mother asks the Universal Film Manufacturing Company to assist her in the search for her lost boy. She is Mrs. Charles L. Glass of Jersey City, N. J., and she says that her four-year-old son was last seen in Greeley, Pike County, Pa., in May, 1915. The newspapers all over the country have been unable to find trace of his whereabouts and now Mrs. Glass appeals to the Universal Film Manufacturing Company for assistance.

Recently in conjunction with the Chicago Tribune the Selig Polyscope Company conducted a prize contest under the title "The Funniest Thing That Ever Happened to Me in My Life." The first prize of $175 was won by Peter Sherlock Gurwit of Chicago, Ill. In a recent letter to the Selig Company Mr. Gurwit writes: "Allow me to express my thanks for your check of $175, the first prize awarded in 'The Funniest Thing That Ever Happened in My Life' contest, and to further express my extreme pleasure at having won the capital prize."

A Los Angeles exhibitor did Thomas H. Ince the honor this week of holding an "Inceville Night" at his theater. This event was induced by the enthusiasm which it is claimed greeted the exhibition of "The Man From Oregon," an Ince-supervised production featuring Clara Williams, Howard Hickman and Herschel Mayall.

That William Desmond will be acclaimed among the country's greatest screen actors when he is seen in support of Billie Burke in "Peggy" upon release of that Ince-Triangle feature is the opinion expressed to date by more than a dozen Inceville critics who have witnessed the play in the projecting room.

Two legal luminaries were among the visitors at Universal City recently. They were Professor F. C. Woodward, head of the legal department of the Leland Stanford, Jr., University of California, and Alfred Wright, one of the leading attorneys of Los Angeles.

In a number of new pictures recently filmed, but not yet released, by the Thanhouser Film Corporation, picture followers will make the acquaintance of a unique little figure in the film world. This is little Madeline Levey, who is said to have the distinction of possessing the largest eyes yet shown on the screen. Miss Levey is a little lady of but fifteen years. She is of markedly oriental type, with luxuriant dark hair of unusual length. Being bright, willing and clever, she readily absorbed an extensive knowledge of studio tactics which, combined with her original mannerisms and pleasing personality, earned for her distinctive characterization in Thanhouser productions after a single day's engagement as an extra.

Members of the Sturgeon company at Bear Valley have sent word to their better halves to be ready to make the trip to the mountains at Thanksgiving. Preparations are already on foot among the ladies who are going, to take some surprise baskets to their lords. All are planning a great reunion, and Mr. Sturgeon has it figured that the actual work up there will not take more than three or four days after the holiday, and so most of the families will stay there until the entire troupe returns.

Stella Razeto and her husband, Ed J. Le Saint, the Universal producer, have moved. Not from the Universal, where they both have long contracts, but from their pretty bungalow to a more pretentious and far more beautiful home which they have been building for some time. It is situated close by the home built by Kathlyn Williams, and in one of the most select residential quarters of Los Angeles.

Charles Miller, nephew of the noted actor, Henry Miller, and himself an actor and producer of repute, has been added to the force of directors under the supervision of Thos. H. Ince. He has already begun the direction of a strong drama from the pen of C. Gardner Sullivan, in which Frank Mills will be starred.

Vivian Rich of the American Company has missed a release for the first time in two years. She was attacked by fair fever, and the management gave her a week off and a check to get rid of her. Vivian thereupon hied herself to San Francisco and had a good time, and promises not to be missing from another "Flying A" release for another two years.

The news is out! Carlyle Blackwell is off to New York, and some time in December he will fill a special engagement at a nice fat figure with the World Film Corporation. Mr. Blackwell selected the World Film offer in preference to several others. The vehicle is not yet named.

Charles Ray, who did such notable work in "The Coward" for the big Triangle program, went off quietly for a holiday a few days ago. An automobile, a delightful little lady of the name of Grant and a cute little gold ring were all a part of the holiday idea. It was all very quietly done and the popular Charlie gave his many friends a big surprise. They plan to give him one on his return.

J. P. McGowan, who is producing the big railroad serial for the Signal Company, and his wife, Helen Holmes, who is starring in it, have moved to a big bungalow which is a part of the studio. In this way they find they can get in more work with less effort. They are working in some very sensational scenes into this serial, which will be released on the Mutual program.

Robert A. Dillon, admitttedly one of the most ingenious writers of comedy scenarios in the country, has been signed by Producer Charles France of Vogue Films, Inc., the forthcoming comedy releases on Mutual program.

SOME NEW THEATERS

Alabama.

The Savoy theater, operated by Cliff Austin and Harry Bateman in Talladega, was almost totally destroyed by fire November 1.

Delaware.

Culture Film Corporation, New York, $3,500,000; take photographs and scenes and settings for photo films, to conduct a general amusement business, employ actors, etc.; William J. Robinson, Robert C. Mayer, Thomas C. Meadows, all of New York City.

The Graves Film Corporation, New York. Capital, $500,000. To manufacture, sell and deal in and with motion picture films, lantern slides, etc. Incorporators, James T. McLain, W. M. Thatcher, Annie Segal, all of New York.

Authorizations: Mirror Film Company, Wilmington; motion pictures, $2,500,000. Representative, James J. Wilson, 16 East street, Manhattan.

Colorado.

A decisive majority defeated Sunday closing of motion picture theaters in Grand Junction.

Georgia.

Plans for the motion picture building of Peter Mion, which Hugh Richardson will erect on his large lot at Forsyth and Luckie streets, Atlanta, have been filed in the building inspector's office. Application for the permit will be made as soon as Ed R. Hayes, the building inspector, has completed his examination of the plans. The cost was not specified, but it will be somewhere between $30,000 and $50,000.

Illinois.

The lease of the Cort theater in Monmouth has been taken over by Charles Hehr and John Mason, who within the near future will open up a cigar store and billiard parlor. The Cort was operated by Dobbins & Clark formerly.

The Majestic theater in Rock Island, managed by Joe Quinn, has installed a new Seeburger pipe organ-orchestra.

C. L. Bishop of Le Roy will open a picture show in the Rhodes building, Monticello.

Indiana.

The Victoria moving picture theater, at Market and Vincennes streets, New Albany, was damaged by fire resulting from a flash in the machine room. The loss was $1,000. The property is owned by Charles Hampson.

The Kriterion Co-operative Service Company has filed a petition in the Marion circuit court, Indianapolis, asking to change its name to the Great Star Film Company. The petition says it is an independent company, but is confused with the Kriterion Film Corporation of New York, which recently failed.

Mishawaka is to have another picture house, O. J. Lambrotte of Crawfordsville having taken a five years' lease on the old postoffice, corner of Main and Lincoln highway, northeast corner. The old postoffice building will undergo a thorough renovation and made as modern and artistic as money and brains can make it. A new front will be built which will enhance the appearance of the building considerably. The tentative plans call for a seating capacity of 500 or more and it will be modeled after the LaSalle theater of South Bend or the Orpheum of Elkhart. A balcony is included in the plans which will have a seating capacity of 200. The present floor in the building will be lowered so that the balcony will not interfere with the upstairs arrangements. The main entrance will be on Lincoln highway, but there will also be an entrance on Main street. Work on the building will be commenced without delay.

George L. Russell has taken a lease on the picture show house on East Market street, New Albany, formerly occupied by the Royal theater and will open a new picture show. The playhouse has been redecorated and named the New Strand. The new theater was formally opened November 6.

Iowa.

The Rex moving picture theater in East Dubuque has been sold by its owner, Albert Carney, to Jay Long, Jr. and Robert Sutter, who assumed the management November 3.

John Bonannon has purchased the Princess theater in Algona.

Kentucky.

The Walnut theater in Louisville has been closed for some days undergoing improvements. It will be opened November 14.

Fire in the Victoria motion picture theater, near the Daisy depot, New Albany, caused a loss of $1,000. Eight reels of film were destroyed.

Maryland.

Cortes Amusement Company let contract to R. B. Mason, 308 Madison street, Baltimore, to erect motion picture theater at Monument street and Patterson Park avenue; 35x150 feet, slag roof, steam heat; cost $8,500. W. R. Russell, architect.

Jas. W. Bowers let contract to Turner Brothers, 706 Union Trust building, Baltimore, to erect addition and remodel motion picture theater at 930 West Baltimore street; addition 30x50 feet, ordinary construction, slag roof, cement floor, steam heat, electric light; cost $4,000; Otto G. Simondson, architect, Maryland Casualty Tower building.

Massachusetts.

The Big T Film Company, Boston; John B. Fitzpatrick, Louis Rosenthal, Julius M. Rosenthal, Edward Karp, Adelaide E. Good; $25,000.

The Moving Picture Machine Company, Boston. Capital $25,000.

Michigan.

The Colonial theater in Paw Paw has been sold by Mr. Pierce to Mr. and Mrs. Craig.

The completion of improvements at the People's theater in Calumet will be the occasion of a week of feature offerings, beginning November 22. The addition will provide a seating capacity of 650, and the auditorium will be one of the largest in the peninsula. The addition will be suitably decorated, while a new heating and ventilating system will be installed throughout the house.

A new picture theater two stories high will be erected by Charles Montague on Almer street, Caro. The new auditorium will seat from 700 to 750 persons. The building will be modern in every particular and architects are now engaged working out the details.

The Lyric theater in Mt. Clemens has been purchased by August Kleist of Pontiac. It was formerly owned by Dr. Geo. M. Smith.

Mrs. Mary Robbins has decided to build a moving picture theater on Main and Bank streets, Ishpeming.

The Gem theater in Hillsdale has been sold by E. L. Butterworth to Frank Cotsonis and H. E. Correll. The theater will be renovated and enlarged.

Splendid progress is being made by Contractor James Thielman on the new 40-foot frame addition at the rear of the People's theater, Laurium, and it is announced by Manager Lyman Fisher that the formal opening of the remodeled playhouse will take place Monday evening, November 22. The addition will give the playhouse ground dimensions of 110 feet by 33 feet and will increase the seating capacity from 350 to 550, besides allowing the rearrangement of the seats, which will contribute greatly to the comfort of patrons.

Minnesota.

A new motion picture theater has been opened in Blooming Prairie. It is the Rex.

The Orpheum Strand theater, which opened September 20, will be closed, according to an announcement made by Manager T. J. Robson. The theater will not attempt regular performances this winter, but will be opened only during such weeks as its promoters, the F. & H. Theatrical Company of Chicago, book moving pictures for Duluth. Edward Furni, treasurer of the house, will become its manager, Mr. Robson planning to leave the city for Chicago.

Mississippi.

Sid Berry of Mobile has taken over the Lyric theater in Meridian and will operate it as a motion picture and vaudeville house.

Missouri.

M. G. Thompson, who for two weeks past has leased and managed the New Grand theater on High street, Jefferson City, sold his lease November 1 to P. A. Harbinson and E. H. McReynolds.

The new Electric theater has been opened in Liberty under the management of Mr. Higbee.

Movie Ad Service Company, St. Louis. Stella N. Nichols, 34 shares; Rudy Copeland, 14 shares; H. F. Nelson and C. Clinton Nichols, 1 share each. General advertising business. Capital stock, 50 per cent paid up, $5,000.

J. B. Price has purchased the Majestic theater in Hannibal from F. K. McDonald.

Montana.

Excavating for the new moving picture playhouse of the Harrison Avenue Theater Company will be started immediately. The theater will be built of brick, hollow tile and reinforced concrete. The theater will represent an investment of $40,000. It will seat 449 persons and will be modern in every respect. A large balcony will remain unfinished. If business justifies a larger theater this balcony will be put into use later and thus almost double the capacity of the theater.

Nebraska.

November 1, Hal Kelley assumed the management of the Gilbert theater in Beatrice.

The Crystal theater in Mitchell is being made larger by its manager, Mr. Jones.

In a short time Oshkosh will have a motion picture show operated by Mrs. A. B. Wynes.

The new Denzell theater in Sedan is being erected by Dennis & Hartzell.

New York.

The Nostrand theater in Brooklyn has been completely renovated. The interior of the house has been put in fine condition, artistic decorations and many small improvements giving it a fresh appearance. The management announces its intention to serve the public with the latest productions in the motion picture field.

The Cumberland theater, Green avenue and Cumberland street, Brooklyn, has reopened.

Articles of incorporation have been filed with the secretary of state by the Regorson Corporation of Rochester to do a theatrical and moving picture business. The capital is $5,000 and the incorporators are George A. and George E. Simpson and Jacob Gordon, all of Rochester.

The Star theater, Elmira, has reopened under the management of George H. Van Denmark.

The Harvard Films are soon to have one of the largest motion picture studios in the East at 231-33 Tenth avenue, Brooklyn, where they now have their printing and developing plant.

The affiliation of the Regent and the Gordon theaters, in Rochester, became effective November 1. The incorporators and directors of the new company for the first year are George E. Simpson, George A. Simpson, Joseph Gordon of Rochester, and Nathan Gordon of Boston.

The enlargement of the Midwood theater, on Avenue J at East Thirteenth street, Brooklyn, is almost completed.

Van-Weston Feature Film Company, motion pictures, realty, $30,000; Abraham Blemian, Charles H. Weston, Hyman Vandrink, 1362 Broadway.

The Tip Top Film Company is the lessee of the old Golden Horn Casino at Ninety-sixth street and Third avenue, Brooklyn, which has been converted into a motion picture studio.

Theodore L. Moncsko, in the moving picture business at Schenectady, owes $1,349, and has assets of $618, according to a petition in bankruptcy filed November 3 by him in the Federal Court at Utica. Among the twenty-five creditors are: The General Film Company, $81; Mutual Film Company, $36; Serial Film Corporation, $31, and Comedy Film Company, $3, all of Albany.

North Dakota.

The new Grand theater which C. V. Donelson is erecting at Wilton is being rushed.

Ohio.

Carl Schultz opened a motion picture theater on Park avenue, Lorain, November 1.

The Morgan Grand Amusement Company, Youngstown, $10,000 capital, has been incorporated by H. F. Shaughnessy, David Robins, Harry Robbins, B. O. Shulman and S. J. Yarmy. The Morgan Grand is a theater in Sharon, Pa., which the local men and their associates plan to operate in the future.

Harry Glick has sold the Wonderland moving picture theater in Springfield to James I. Funderburg of Tippecanoe City and Piqua. The new owner is now in charge.

Ownership of the Lyric theater has passed from the Lima Amusement Company, of which W. G. Georgiou was manager and part proprietor, to C. E. Blood, Detroit. The new proprietor announced that the theater would continue as a motion picture house.

The remodeling and redecorating of the Columbia theater in Marion is nearing completion. Manager W. D. Clark has seen to it that the theater will be attractive and cozy in every detail.

The work of making improvements to the Theatorium picture show, on Jefferson avenue, Moundsville, which was recently purchased by Mr. Francis, is progressing.

Pennsylvania.

The Pensylvania Theaters Company, a million-dollar corporation recently chartered under the laws of Delaware, soon will enter the motion picture field in Philadelphia. Present plans of the company contemplate the operation of a circuit of motion picture theaters, first in Philadelphia, and later the company's activities will be extended throughout the state. J. E. McCanna, general manager of the company, has opened an office in the Bellevue Court building. It will be the aim of the new concern to raise the standards of the motion picture business. Only theaters that are on a paying basis will be purchased.

Complete Record of Current Films

Believing the classification of film pictures by the nature of their subjects to be of greater importance to the exhibitor than classification by maker, MOTOGRAPHY has adopted this style in listing current films. Exhibitors are urged to make use of this convenient tabulation in making up their programs. Films will be listed as long in advance of their release dates as possible. Film manufacturers are requested to send us their bulletins as early as possible. Reasonable care is used, and the publishers cannot be responsible for errors.

General Program

Monday.

D	11-15	The Undertow	Essanay 3,000
D	11-15	The Pitfall	Kalem 4,000
D	11-15	The Wall Between	Lubin 1,000
D	11-15	The Vengeance of Rannah	Selig 2,000
T	11-15	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 91, 1915	Selig 1,000
C	11-15	Sunny Jim and the Great American Game	Vitagraph 1,000

Tuesday.

D	11-16	The Chief Inspector	Biograph 2,000
D	11-16	A Bit of Lace	Essanay 3,000
C	11-16	A Bargain in Brides	Kalem 1,000
C	11-16	An Accident Policy	Lubin 1,000
D	11-16	The Tendertoot's Triumph	Selig 1,000
D	11-16	Gypsy Trail	Vitagraph 2,000

Wednesday.

D	11-17	The Gambler of the West	Biograph 4,000
C	11-17	His Wife's Sweetheart	Edison 1,000
C	11-17	Canimated Nooz Pictorial No. 2	Essanay 1,000
D	11-17	The Night of the Embassy Ball	Kalem 2,000
D	11-17	In Love's Own Way	Lubin 3,000
C	11-17	Count 'Em	Vitagraph 1,000

Thursday.

D	11-18	The Eyes of the Soul	Biograph 1,000
C	11-18	Snakeville's Eugenic Marriage	Essanay 1,000
D	11-18	Margie of the Underworld	Lubin 2,000
D	11-18	The Print of the Nails	Selig 3,000
T	11-18	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 92, 1915	Selig 1,000
C	11-18	A Motorcycle Elopement	Vitagraph 1,000

Friday.

D	11-19	The Lonedale Operator	Biograph 1,000
D	11-19	A Child in Judgment	Edison 3,000
D	11-19	Too Much Turkey	Essanay 1,000
D	11-19	The Veiled Priestess (No. 4 of the Ventures of Marguerite)	Kalem 1,000
D	11-19	The Death Web	Lubin 1,000
C	11-19	A Pair of Birds	Vim 1,000
C	11-19	Diplomatic Henry	Vitagraph 1,000

Saturday.

D	11-20	Black Eagle	Edison 1,000
D	11-20	The River of Romance	Essanay 2,000
D	11-20	The Girl on the Bridge	Kalem 1,000
C	11-20	His Wife's New Lid	Lubin 1,000
D	11-20	Locked In	Selig 1,000
D	11-20	Heredity	Vitagraph 3,000

Monday.

D	11-22	The Law's Decree	Essanay 3,000
D	11-22	A Woman's Wiles	Kalem 3,000
D	11-22	An Ambassador From the Dead	Lubin 1,000
C	11-22	A Thing Or Two In Movies (No. 4 of the Chronicles of Bloom Center)	Selig 2,000
T	11-22	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 93, 1915	Selig 1,000
C	11-22	Love and Law	Vitagraph 1,000

Tuesday.

D	11-23	Love's Enduring Flame	Biograph 2,000
D	11-23	The Papered Door	Essanay 3,000
C	11-23	Limberger's Victory	Lubin 1,000
D	11-23	The Impersonation of Tom	Selig 1,000
D	11-23	Saints and Sinners	Vitagraph 3,000

Wednesday.

D	11-24	The Reproach of Annesley	Biograph 3,000
C	11-24	Cartoons In a Sanitarium	Edison 1,000
C	11-24	Vernon How Bailey's Sketch Book	Essanay 1,000
D	11-24	An Enemy of Mankind (No. 1 of the Stingaree Series)	Kalem 3,000
D	11-24	The Meddlesome Darling	Lubin 2,000
C	11-24	Sunny Jim and the Family Story	Vitagraph 1,000

Thursday.

D	11-25	The Man From Town	Biograph 1,000
C	11-25	It Happened in Snakeville	Essanay 1,000
D	11-25	As the Twig Is Bent	Lubin 3,000
T	11-25	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 94, 1915	Selig 1,000
C	11-25	Ghosts and Flypaper	Vitagraph 1,000

Friday.

D	11-26	Two Daughters of Eve	Biograph 1,000
D	11-26	The Ring of the Borgias	Edison 4,000
D	11-26	Broncho Billy's Love Affair	Essanay 1,000
D	11-26	A Society Schemer (No. 5 of the Ventures of Marguerite)	Kalem 1,000
D	11-26	Meg o' the Cliffs	Lubin 1,000
C	11-26	Pressing Business	Vim 1,000
C	11-26	All for the Love of a Girl	Vitagraph 1,000

Saturday.

D	11-27	Roses of Memory	Edison 1,000
D	11-27	The Edge of Things	Essanay 3,000
D	11-27	The Dynamite Train	Kalem 1,000
C	11-27	Blaming the Duck or Ducking the Blame	Lubin 1,000
D	11-27	Young Love	Selig 1,000
C	11-27	A "Model" Wife	Vitagraph 2,000

V. L. S. E. Program

Sept.	20	The Circular Staircase	Selig 5,000
Sept.	27	Tillie's Tomato Surprise	Lubin 6,000
Sept.	27	The Great Ruby	Lubin 5,000
Oct.	4	Dust of Egypt	Vitagraph 5,000
Oct.	11	In the Palace of the King	Essanay 6,000
Oct.	11	The Valley of Lost Hope	Lubin 5,000
Oct.	18	A Black Sheep	Selig 5,000
Oct.	18	The Man Who Couldn't Beat God	Vitagraph 5,000
Oct.	25	The Rights of Man	Lubin 5,000
Nov.	1	The Turn of the Road	Vitagraph 5,000
Nov.	1	The Crimson Wing	Essanay 6,000
Nov.	8	The Raven	Essanay 5,000
Nov.	15	Sweet Alyssum	Selig 5,000
Nov.	15	Heights of Hazard	Vitagraph 5,000
Nov.	22	The Nation's Peril	Lubin 5,000
Nov.	29	The Caveman	Vitagraph 5,000

Mutual Program

Monday.

D	11-15	The Substituted Minister	American 2,000
C	11-15	Hannah's Henpecked Husband	Falstaff 1,000
T	11-15	The World's Championship Baseball Series, 1915	Novelty 2,000

Tuesday.

D	11-16	In the Hands of the Enemy	Thanhouser 2,000
S	11-16	See America First, No. 10	Gaumont 500
C	11-16	Keeping Up With the Joneses	Gaumont 500
C	11-16	Johnny the Barber	Beauty 1,000

Wednesday.

D	11-17	The New Adam and Eve	Rialto 3,000

Thursday.

D	11-18	A Polar Romance	Centaur 2,000
C	11-18	A Cunning Canal-Boat Cupid	Falstaff 1,000
T	11-18	Mutual Weekly No. 46	Mutual 1,000

Friday.

D	11-19	The Warning	Mustang 2,000
D	11-19	Drifting	American 1,000
C	11-19	The Fighting Four	Cub 1,000

Saturday.

D	11-20	The Winning Hand	Clipper 3,000
C	11-20	Anita's Butterfly	Beauty 1,000

Sunday.

D	11-21	A Romance of the Alps	Reliance 2,000
C	11-21	Beauty in Distress	Casino 1,000
D	11-21	Beneath the Coat of a Butler	Thanhouser 1,000
C	11-21	The House Party	Casino 1,000

Monday.

D	11-22	The Key to the Past	American 2,000
C	11-22	The Postmaster of Pineapple Plains	Falstaff 1,000
C	11-22	Spring Onions	Novelty 1,000

Tuesday.

C	11-23	The Baby and the Boss	Thanhouser 2,000
S	11-23	See America First, No. 11	Gaumont 500
C	11-23	Keeping Up With the Joneses	Gaumont 500
C	11-23	The Drummer's Trunk	Beauty 1,000

Wednesday.

D	11-24	Could a Man Do More?	Centaur 3,000
C	11-24	Tamin a Grouch	Novelty 1,000

Thursday.

D	11-25	Stanley and the Slave Traders	Centaur 2,000
C	11-25	Clarence Cheats at Croquet	Falstaff 1,000
T	11-25	Mutual Weekly No. 47	Mutual 1,000

Friday.

D	11-26	The Valley Feud	Mustang 2,000
D	11-26	The Bluffers	American 1,000
C	11-26	A Deal in Indians	Cub 1,000

Saturday.

D	11-27	The Valkyrie	Than-o-Play	3,000
C	11-27	Cupid Beats Father	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	11-28	The Friends of the Sea	Reliance	2,000
C	11-28	Nearly Famous	Casino	1,000
C	11-28	All Aboard	Thanhouser	1,000

Universal Program

Monday.

D	11-15	Colorado	Broadway	5,000
C	11-15	A Looney Love Affair	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

D	11-16	Manna	Gold Seal	2,000
	11-16	No Release This Week	Rex
C	11-16	Bill's Plumber and Plumber's Bill	Imp	1,000

Wednesday.

D	11-17	"Lil Nor' Wester"	Victor	3,000
C	11-17	Disguised, But Discovered	L-Ko	1,000
T	11-17	Animated Weekly No. 193	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

D	11-18	The Ring of Destiny	Rex	2,000
	11-18	No Release This Week	Big U
C	11-18	Muscles and Merriment	Powers	500
E	11-18	The Home Life of the Spider	Powers	500

Friday.

D	11-19	Blood Heritage	Imp	3,000
	11-19	No Release This Week	Victor
C	11-19	Wanted, A Leading Lady	Nestor	1,000

Saturday.

D	11-20	The Heart of a Tigress	Bison	3,000
	11-20	No Release This Week	Powers
C	11-20	Chills and Chicken	Joker	1,000

Sunday.

D	11-21	The Mystery of the Locked Room	Rex	3,000
	11-21	No Release This Week	Laemmle
C	11-21	Ready for Reno	L-Ko	1,000
D	11-21	The Broken Coin No. 22	Universal	2,000

Monday.

D	11-22	My Old Dutch	Broadway	5,000
C	11-22	When Father Was the Goat	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

D	11-23	In Search of a Wife	Gold Seal	2,000
	11-23	No Release This Week	Rex
C	11-23	When Willie Went Wild	Imp	1,000

Wednesday.

D	11-24	The Trap That Failed	Big U	1,000
C	11-24	Stolen Hearts and Nickels	L-Ko	2,000
T	11-24	Animated Weekly No. 194	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

D	11-25	The Mayor's Decision	Laemmle	3,000
	11-25	No Release This Week	Big U
C	11-25	Lady Baffles and Detective Duck in "Kidnaping the King's Kids"	Powers	1,000

Friday.

D	11-26	Man or Money	Imp	3,000
	11-26	No Release This Week	Victor
C	11-26	Saved by a Skirt	Nestor	1,000

Saturday.

D	11-27	A Desperate Leap	Bison	2,000
D	11-27	The Mirror of Justice	Powers	1,000
C	11-27	Dad's Awful Deed	Joker	1,000

Sunday.

D	11-27	The Kingdom of Nosey Land	Rex	3,000
D	11-27	Inside Facts	Laemmle	1,000
	11-27	No Release This Week	L-Ko
D	11-27	The Palace of Dust (No. 1 of the New Adventures of Terrence O'Rourke)	Universal	2,000

Miscellaneous Features

The Pearl of the Antilles	Picture Playhouse Film Co.	5,000
The Flame of Passion	Picture Playhouse Film Co.	5,000
The Corsican	Sun Photoplay Co., Inc.	5,000
The Whirl of Life	Cort Film Corp.	6,000
A Woman's Honor	Great Northern	4,000
Russian Battlefields	Indian Film Co.	4,000
Concealed Truth	Ivan Film Productions	5,000
Life Without Soul	Ocean Film Corporation	5,000

Associated Service.

Released week of

Nov.	15	The Bond Between	Santa Barbara	3,000
Nov.	15	The Sacrifice	Ramona	2,000
Nov.	15	Drifting	Alhambra	2,000
Nov.	15	Where the Roads Meet	Empire	2,000
Nov.	15	The Jitney Submarine	Atlas	1,000
Nov.	15	Ike, the War Correspondent	Federal	1,000
Nov.	15	Won by a Nose	Banner	1,000

Fox Film Corporation

Releastd Week of

Sept.	6	The Two Orphans		5,000
Sept.	13	The Song of Hate		5,000
Sept.	20	Regeneration		5,000
Sept.	27	The Wonderful Adventure		5,000
Oct.	4	Sin		5,000
Oct.	11	The Little Gypsy		5,000
Oct.	18	The Soul of Broadway		5,000
Oct.	25	The Family Stain		5,000
Nov.	1	Carmen		6,000
Nov.	8	The Blindness of Devotion		5,000
Nov.	11	A Woman's Past		5,000

Kleine-Edison

Released week of

Oct.	6	Vanity Fair	Edison	7,000
Oct.	13	The Magic Skin	Edison	5,000
Oct.	20	The Green Cloak	Kleine	5,000
Nov.	3	The Sentimental Lady	Kleine	5,000
Nov.	10	Children of Eve	Edison	5,000
Nov.	17	The Politicians	Kleine	5,000
Dec.	1	Canavan	Kleine	5,000

Kriterion

Releastd Week of

Nov.	15	$500 Reward	Paragon	2,000
Nov.	15	And Percy Made Good	Santa Barbara	1,000
Nov.	15	An Intercepted Gift	Alhambra	2,000
Nov.	15	The Boob's Elopement	Thistle	1,000
Nov.	15	Tainted	Santa Barbara	2,000
Nov.	15	Capturing Stella	C. K.	1,000
Nov.	15	The Adopted Baby	Monty	2,000
Nov.	15	Frank's Nightmare	Alhambra	1,000
Nov.	15	The Foster Brother	Trump	2,000
Nov.	15	A Wonderful Lamp	Pyramid	500
Nov.	15	Cotton Industry	Pyramid	500
Nov.	15	Thoughts of a Night	Navajo	2,000
Nov.	15	A Man for A' That	Punch	1,000

Metro Features.

Released week of

Oct.	4	Song of the Wage Slave	Metro	5,000
Oct.	11	The Stork's Nest	Metro	5,000
Oct.	18	The Final Judgment	Metro	5,000
Oct.	25	My Madonna	Metro	5,000
Nov.	1	Tables Turned	Metro	5,000
Nov.	8	Pennington's Choice	Metro	5,000
Nov.	15	The Woman Pays	Metro	5,000
Nov.	22	One Million Dollars	Metro	5,000

Mutual Master-Pictures.

Released week of

Sept.	30	The Price of Her Silence	Thanhouser	4,000
Oct.	7	Bred in the Bone	Reliance	4,000
Oct.	14	The Brink	N. Y. M. P.	4,000
Oct.	21	The Miracle of Life	American	5,000
Oct.	28	His Wife	Thanhouser	5,000
Nov.	4	The Seventh Noon	Mutual	7,000
Nov.	11	The End of the Road	American	5,000
Nov.	18	Inspiration	Thanhouser	5,000
Nov.	25	The Strife Eternal	Mutual	5,000

Paramount Features.

Released week of

Nov.	11	The Mumy and the Humming Bird	Famous Players	5,000
Nov.	15	Paramount News Pictures	Paramount	1,000
Nov.	15	Bella Donna	Famous Players	5,000
Nov.	18	Armstrong's Wife	Jesse L. Lasky	5,000
Nov.	25	The Gentleman From Indiana	Pallas	5,000

Pathe.

Released Week of

Nov.	22	New Adventures of Wallingford No. 8	Pathe	2,000
Nov.	22	The Sultan's Paradise	Pathe	500
Nov.	22	An Intimate Study of Birds, No. 11	Pathe	500
Nov.	22	Pathe News No. 94	Pathe	1,000
Nov.	22	Pathe News No. 95	Pathe	1,000
Nov.	22	A Gentleman's Agreement	Balboa	3,000
Nov.	22	Great While It Lasted	Phunphilms	1,000
Nov.	22	Neal of the Navy No. 13	Panama	2,000
Nov.	22	At Bay	Gold Rooster	5,000
Nov.	22	A Squabble for a Squash	Starlight	1,000

Triangle Film Corporation.

Released week of

Dec.	5	The Golden Claw; Bessie Barriscale	Triangle-Kay-Bee	5,000
Dec.	5	Double Trouble; Douglas Fairbanks	Fine Arts	5,000
Dec.	5	The Best of Enemies; Weber and Fields	Triangle-Keystone	2,000
Dec.	5	A Janitor's Wife's Temptation; Fred Mace	Triangle-Keystone	2,000
Dec.	12	The Lily and the Rose; Lillian Gish, Rozsika Dolly	Fine Arts	5,000
Dec.	12	Aloha Oe; Willard Mack	Triangle-Kay-Bee	5,000
Dec.	12	The Village Scandal; Raymond Hitchcock, Roscoe Arbuckle	Triangle-Keystone	2,000
Dec.	12	The Great Vacuum Robbery; Charles H. Murray	Triangle-Keystone	2,000

World Features.

Released week of

Nov.	8	Should a Wife Forgive	Equitable	5,000
Nov.	8	Hearts of Men	Harris	5,000
Nov.	15	A Butterfly on the Wheel	Shubert	5,000
Nov.	15	The Cowardly Way	Equitable	5,000
Nov.	22	The Little Church Around the Corner	Blaney	5,000
Nov.	22	A Daughter of the Sea	Equitable	5,000

Brief Stories of the Week's Film Releases

Mutual Program

Clarissa's Charming Calf—FALSTAFF—NOVEMBER 4.—Most of the local swains love Clarissa, who excels in all branches of farming and cookery. Clarissa is possessed of a charming calf, a prize won through the political influence of Josh Jiggers, the popular fire chief, at the annual fireman's ball. How this intelligent animal saves Clarissa from being abducted by a New York variety manager and carried off to the stage, how Josh helps in the rescue, and how Clarissa's own brilliancy aids in the baffling of the manager, is fully explained in the ensuing scenes.

The Crest of Von Endheim—(TWO REELS)—RELIANCE—NOVEMBER 14.—Count Von Endheim, a general under the defeated Mexican emperor, Maximilian, escapes from his hacienda, taking his child, Carlos, a boy of five. His estate is left in charge of Blowitz, an old servitor. Carlos is forced to leave his child with an Indian woman, giving her a metal crest as a means of identification. Von Endheim is killed by Captain Morales, who takes possession of the dead man's estate. The imposter adopts the general's title and uniform, and Carlos grows up, an ignorant shepherd. The supposed son of the Indian woman falls in love with Glorianna, daughter of Senor Gonzales. The latter, opposed to this attachment, arranges a marriage between their daughter and the impostor, General Von Endheim. The general is at last exposed, however, by the crest and identification of Carlos by Blowitz, the servitor. Glorianna's family is reconciled to her lover and she and Carlos are married.

Hannah's Henpecked Husband—FALSTAFF—NOVEMBER 15.—Hannah, when not on dress parade, is a domestic tyrant. A musical genius falls in love with her, getting a wrong impression of both her and her husband. Being refused by his love, the musician decides it will be romantic to hang himself with her clothesline. Entering a vacant house he throws the line over a rafter. He then perceives the husband, who is also arranging a rope. The musician's excuse is, "I want to die because I cannot marry your wife." And this from the henpecked husband, "I want to die because I did marry my wife." Then the husband relates his sad story and the other man soon realizes that it will not be necessary to die. He then pleads with the husband to continue his blighted existence. The disappearance of the stranger soon afterwards, wounds the vanity of the wife, and she proceeds to be more gentle with her husband.

In the Hands of the Enemy—(TWO REELS)—THANHOUSER—NOVEMBER 16.—A drama of war and patriotism playing in an imaginary country. The cast includes Morris Foster and Linda Palmer. The little country had fought for years to preserve its independence and now it is threatened with defeat by a powerful neighbor. The former ally of the gallant little country refuses to come to its aid because its principles are being misrepresented by the treacherous ambassador. A young officer and his mother agree to cross the enemy's lines and reach the former ally to appeal for help. Returning with a code message assuring their government the aid of the ally, they are captured by the enemy. The message is discovered and promising to give the key of the cypher. According to the code given by the mother, the message states that the ally refuses to give aid. The enemy feeling secure are unprepared and completely crushed by the ally.

A Cunning Canalboat Cupid—FALSTAFF—NOVEMBER 18.—Old Arthur, a cook on a canalboat, likes his job, his employer and the employer's daughter. One day the girl and her suitor are very much upset. Arthur learns that a distant relation has died, leaving a curious will; everything goes to the girl and a second cousin providing they marry, but if one of them fails to carry out the contract the entire estate will go to the other. When the miserly old cousin calls at the canalboat to see his fiancee, the cook impersonates the girl, and shows the second cousin such a terrible time that the miser, when consulted by the executor of the estate, refuses to marry his cousin, despite his love of money. So, as the girl has not declined, she receives the money, and marries her lover. Arthur retires from the canalboat, richly repaid for his activities.

Beneath the Coat of a Butler—THANHOUSER—NOVEMBER 21.—A young college student has been brought up under the guardianship of an old lawyer, with just enough money for his education, and in complete ignorance as to his parentage. A letter from his guardian finally discloses the secret of his family—his father is employed as a butler in a nearby town. The young man is crushed, for he will be ostracised from the set in which he has been moving. But his sweetheart proves true, and the boy stands by his father, promising to care for him in old age. To the great surprise of all, the father drops the cloak of butler and reveals himself as a millionaire lumber owner. This was his plan to save his son from the perils that befall many rich men's sons. Thoroughly proud of his son, and also of his future daughter-in-law, the picture ends happily.

The Key to the Past—(TWO REELS)—AMERICAN—NOVEMBER 22.—Featuring Winnifred Greenwood and Ed. Coxen in a story of a woman whose mind has been dimmed in a shipwreck. She is coming to her husband in Alaska and a letter which she has written points that the father of the child is the man who has caused the husband to leave for Alaska. Later the woman's memory is restored and she tells her story. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

The Drummer's Trunk—BEAUTY—NOVEMBER 23. Featuring John Steppling and Carol Halloway. A drummer makes love to Sadie, the girl of all work about the hotel. Johnnie, the hotel clerk, is also in love with the girl. When the drummer is leaving the girl secrets herself in his trunk and is delivered to his home in the city. Johnnie follows in her footsteps and arrives just as the drummer's wife discovers that the girl is in the trunk. Johnnie takes Sadie back home with him, but before she goes she tells that she had hidden in the trunk unknown to the drummer. The drummer has a difficult task making amends with his spouse, but after hours of expostulation he "puts it over."

Could a Man Do More—(THREE REELS)—CENTAUR—NOV. 24. —Featuring Crane Wilbur and Celia Santon. Upon her death Mrs. Sherwood entrusts her son Richard to the care of the boy's elder boy's elder brother, Darrell, who promises to shield him against all harm. Later Darrell becomes a village preacher and Richard a lawyer. Richard has been meeting pretty Molly Foster and one night she whispers her dread secret to him. The following Sunday Richard greets Faith Richardson the belle of the town, who shows an interest in Darrell. At the Foster home a little stranger has arrived and Molly's father demands to know the name of the father of the child, but the girl refuses to answer and at last goes to live in a cottage on the edge of the town provided by Darrell through Faith. Molly is taken ill and realizing her end is near goes to the home of Darrell and Richard and begs Richard to give her child a name, but he throws her off as Darrell enters and she tells him her secret. Darrell insists that Richad marry Molly at once and the ceremony is begun, but it is too late as Molly has passed away. Darrell kneels at her side and Richard goes to the Richardson home and leads Faith back to the window where she sees Darrell carrying Molly in his arms to the sofa. Darrell adopts the baby and several days later Richard presses his suit and is accepted by Faith and later they are married. Time passes and Richard, who has held up his father-in-law, comes to Darrell and asks him to save him. Remembering his oath to his mother Darrell takes the mask and pistol from his brother and stands ready to meet the vigilants. In time, however, Richard clears his brother's name and then commits suicide and in silent sympathy the Colonel grasps Darrell's hand and starts to lead him home.

Stanley and the Slave Traders—(TWO REELS)—CENTAUR—NOVEMBER 25.—Featuring the Bostock Animals. The developments in the sixth episode of the Stanley series show the conquest of the White King by the Slave Traders and their king; the treachery served Ada by both kings; Ada's rescue by Jack, her lover, taking the entire party and the White King with him; and the capturing of the king of the Slave Traders and his followers by Stanley's party. Ada is miraculously rescued from a lion's attack by Jack. Stanley's party, not having found Jack, continues its search in the jungles.

The Bluffers—AMERICAN—NOVEMBER 26.—Featuring Vivian Rich and Alfred Vosburg. Tom Murdock and Patty are in love, but her father will not let them get married so they elope and start housekeeping in an expensive flat. Their neighbors leave town and leave the key to their apartment with Patty, who receives word that her father is coming to see them. Immediately the newlyweds furnish their apartment with their neighbors' furniture. Father arrives and is greatly pleased with their flat. Later he starts for home and Tom and Patty immediately start to take back the furniture belonging to their neighbor. Father's machine breaks down and he decides to return and as he approaches the house he sees the bluffers scurrying to return the furniture. Later they receive a letter from father in which a check for $10,000 is enclosed and an invitation for them to come and live with him.

The Valley Feud—(TWO REELS)—MUSTANG—NOVEMBER 26.—Featuring Anna Little and E. Forrest Taylor. Because of the fact that Rogers' sheep encroach on the range where Boling's cattle are feeding a feud results. In the midst of this interchange of hostilities Joe Boling falls in love with Glory Rogers. Many fights occur and the elder Boling just before dying makes Joe promise not to marry old Rogers' daughter. Later it is discovered that Gloria is not the old man's daughter, but his niece. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

The Valkyrie—(THREE REELS)—THAN-O-PLAY—NOVEMBER 27.—Featuring Baroness Von Dewitz. Danish legend has it that Valkyries are earth-banished goddesses of war who have excited the anger of Thor, so that he has shot them down to earth on bolts of lightning, thereafter to cast evil spells over all with whom they come in contact, in spite of the fact that they are beautiful to look upon. A little Danish girl living in the woods next to nature with her aunt, comes under this superstition. The reports spread that she is a Valkyrie, and her life is thenceforth made miserable. An old nobleman covets the girl, and a young American also loves her. In a fight with the nobleman, the American, thinking that he has killed the man, is persuaded by his friends to return home for his family's sake. The girl does not understand his departure. Later, a famous dancer, she comes to America and meets her former lover, although he does not recognize her. The girl defeats the nobleman, who has dogged her; saves the fortunes of her lover, and fate brings the two together again.

Cupid Beats Father—BEAUTY NOVEMBER 27.—Featuring Neva Gerber and Frank Borzage. Frank and Neva are in love with each other, but Neva's parents tell Frank they are too young and they plan to elope. Their plans are overheard by two children who promptly imitate

Frank and Neva, and they in turn are overheard by Neva's mother and father. That night when Neva and Frank start away father holds them up with a gun. He marches them into the house and gives them a lecture. He then pulls aside the curtains and they are surprised to see a minister and a hundred guests waiting for them.

All Aboard — THANHOUSER — NOVEMBER 28.— With Florence LaBadie. The girl has plenty of money and her avaricious guardian decides it shall be kept in the family. He therefore encourages his son to woo the ward. The guardian remembers that when a young woman and young man are passengers on the same vessel they always fall in love. On her way to college in the north the girl is sent by boat in care of her maid. Unknown to her the unwelcome suitor is a passenger on the same boat, the guardian's own sea story idea. But there happens to be other young men on the boat, with one of which the girl does fall in love. While the son is spending his time in a stateroom sick unto death, the love affair progresses. The son, after the voyage, returns to his angry father thoroughly convinced that he does not want to have a wife who stays well while he is seasick.

General Program

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, No. 91—HEARST-SELIG—NOVEMBER 15. Society men's new military organization holds uniform drill on Sandy Hills, San Francisco; five-story building, candy factory, is death trap to many workers in New York; police officials with the officers in demonstration of rescue work, Washington; Chicago Equestrian Association members mount for annual ride into the country; freight cars loaded with cement break away and crash into another freight at Los Angeles, Calif.; General Carranza recognized by U. S. Government, greets U. S. representatives at Piedras, Negras, Mexico; 2,000 Mexicans driven from Agua Prieta; Harvard eleven defeats New Jersey athletes 10 to 6; Italian soldiers halt in captured town of Cormons, Austria.

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 92—HEARST-SELIG—NOVEMBER 18—Hunting season opens in Newark, N. J.; inter-scholastic race for Kirby trophy held in New York; firemen lose lives in battling with fire that wrecks Auditorium, San Francisco; famous ball players take part in contest at Gun Club, Richmond, Va.; bureau of identification at Chicago detective headquarters install motion picture apparatus and demonstrate way in which new "rogues gallery" will be photographed; Roebling Mills, where barbed wire was manufactured for Allies, is damaged by mysterious fire, Trenton, N. J.; German soldiers mounted on bicycles are sent over the dunes to meet an attack along the coast; scene near Cormons, Austria.

Too Much Turkey ESSANAY—NOVEMBER 19.—Featuring G. M. Anderson as Frank Potter, who conceives the idea of pawning his dress suit to buy a turkey for Thanksgiving and his wife pawns her ring and each returns home with a turkey. Then the husband feeling selfish with two turkeys secretly gives one to charity, while his wife gives the one she has gotten to a poverty-stricken family. Upon discovering they have given both of the turkeys away they start to quarrel. Just then the express man arrives with a turkey from Frank's mother-in-law.

The Law's Decree (THREE REELS)—ESSANAY—NOVEMBER 22.—Featuring Nell Craig and a strong cast. Castaigne, the accomplice of Count De Varney, induces Lucile Morel's father to invest his fortune in a false mining scheme. Morel is left penniless and the count, whose name has not been implicated in the deal, agrees to clear him of financial trouble if Lucile will marry him. This the girl does and three years later she and her baby are deserted by the husband, who is showering attentions on Castaigne's sweetheart, Irene. The former returns and when he discovers the relations between his sweetheart and the count he kills De Varney.

An Ambassador From the Dead—LUBIN—NOVEMBER 23.—Featuring L. C. Shumway. Amos Carter, while sitting in his home, recalls his own boyhood love affair of fifty years ago, when he fought a duel for his sweetheart and caused her a degree of mental agony which resulted in her death. A day or two later he takes the wage question, which he has been thinking of, into his hands and orders posted a notice of general reduction. The general manager, his grandnephew and only living relative, Amos Carter Rand, resigns and the old man decides to disinherit the boy. Just then a stranger in funereal garb comes to the front door, rings the doorbell and after being shown into the library presents to Carter the identical locket the old man had given to his sweetheart fifty years before. He then goes for a walk with his sweetheart and promises the stranger to return in an hour. Young Rand decides that his resignation was hasty and upon reaching the house finds his grand-uncle seated at his library desk, dead.

A Woman's Wiles—(THREE REELS)—KALEM—NOVEMBER 22.—Featuring Paul Gilmore and an all star cast. Jack Addison, an American sculptor, is in love with Lucile Bergere, a model. Jack and his room mate, Arthur, attend a masque ball, both dressing as Dromios. Arthur is given a message which causes the latter to return home, and later mistaking Jack for his client the attorney informs a friend that the latter has inherited an immense fortune. This is overheard by Lucile, who at once sets her cap for Jack. Jack turns his attentions to a bust which he intends to place on exhibition. His model is Yvonne, a girl who secretly loves him. The bust is hailed as a masterpiece by the critics, and Lucile, discovering that it is Arthur and not Jack who has inherited the fortune, steals into Jack's studio one night and destroys the bust. Later half-crazed Jack endeavors to kill the siren, who confesses her guilt, while faithful Yvonne finally finds happiness in the arms of the man she loves.

Love and Law—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 22.—Featuring William Duncan and Ann Drew. Jimmy and the deacon are rivals for the rich widow's hand. Jimmy buys a little racing car and the deacon to get even passes an ordinance making it unlawful for anyone to go over ten miles an hour. Jimmy is one of the first victims and is set to work on the country road a la chain gang. Later a boy tells the deacon his house is on fire and in his flivver he breaks all records getting home and draws down ninety days in jail. Jimmy and the widow on their honeymoon leave the deacon massaging the road with his shovel.

Love's Enduring Flame—(TWO REELS)—BIOGRAPH—NOVEMBER 23.—Featuring Charles Perley and Claire McDowell with an all star cast. Harvey Beck woos Elice Carter, wife of Philip Carter. Mortified, she decides to throw her lot with Beck and takes her child with her, but Beck wants her unencumbered and while they are discussing the matter Carter comes upon the scene, takes the child from Elice and bids her to. At the station while waiting for the train Elice gives her coat to an outcast, who is shivering in the cold. The train is wrecked and Beck is killed and the outcast wearing the coat is identified as Mrs. Carter. Philip moves to New York and establishes quarters there and Elice also secures employment in a fashionable modiste's shop. Her son Robert is engaged to Edith Hollis and together they visit the modiste where Elice beholds her son. Later Elice prevents her husband from committing suicide, and when the boy learns that Elice is his mother happiness is seen ahead for them.

The Papered Door (TWO REELS)—ESSANAY—NOVEMBER 23.—Featuring Ruth Stonehouse and Edmund Cobb. Molly Carter is neglected by her husband for another woman. He kills a man and then sneaks back to his wife for protection and she conceals him in a closet and papers over the door to ward off suspicion. The sheriff who is stationed to watch the house comes in one night and falls asleep and Molly lets her husband out and he spends the remainder of the night in the barn. Early the next morning in trying to board a freight train he is killed.

Oh, Doctor!—KALEM—NOVEMBER 23.—Bud and Spike are summoned to stop a leak in a water pipe. Dr. Brown leaves the house and during his absence Pansy and her mother call. The girl, deceived by Spike's professional air, allows herself to be conducted into the consultation room, and Bud seeing her decides he too has always shown a bent for doctoring. He runs up to the bath room, which is just above the consultation room, and armed with a six-foot bit and brace bores a hole in the floor and the water floods the room below. Later the poor plumbers are hauled away to justice.

Limberger's Victory—LUBIN—NOVEMBER 23.—Featuring D. L. Don as General Limberger, an enemy of General Bonehead. Limberger's daughter loves Bonehead's lieutenant and so Bonehead, seeing them together, captures the daughter and sends a note to Limberger saying that she will die at sunset. She is rescued, however, by a young lieutenant and Bonehead becomes enraged and sends a mssage to Limberger tied to a cannon ball. Later General Limberger's daughter and the lieutenant are married and returning see the Limbergers and Boneheads clash. Mrs. Lieutenant tears a white petticoat off and waves it on high. Limberger sees the flag and immediately accepts the truce.

The Impersonation of Tom—SELIG—NOVEMBER 23.—Featuring Tom Mix. Martin, a ranch owner, wants his daughter to marry the son of Graves, a stock broker. Tom is already in love with Hazel, while Daisy is in love with Ned. Tom visits Martin and meets Ned and they become friends and at last agree to a plan. Ned agrees to impersonate Tom and marry Daisy, while Tom is to send for Hazel. Tom and Hazel beat Tom's father to the ranch, where they arrive just after Ned and Daisy are married, and when Graves arrives he finds the boys have put one over on him.

Saints and Sinners—(THREE REELS)—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 23.—Featuring Maurice Costello and Leah Baird. Ashley, who grows away from his wife Margaret, and his daughter Eileen, is brought to realize this by their friendship for Jack Arden, a widower with one child. Margaret's sister Dora and her husband comes to visit them and Dora starts a flirtation with Jack Arden. Margaret tries to help her sister, and her husband misunderstands the situation and when he sees Arden embrace Margaret by mistake he shoots and kills him. He then denounces his wife and turns her out of the house without waiting for an explanation. Fifteen years later Ashley is still unrelenting and his wife is in a convent. Eileen, now a young lady, falls in love with young Robert Arden and Ashley separates the young couple without a word of explanation. He later dies and Robert finds letters which give him some light on the subject. Later Dora Ross, who had gone to India, returns and tells the whole story. Eileen's mother is found and complete explanations follow.

The Reproach of Annesley—(THREE REELS)—BIOGRAPH NOVEMBER 24.—Featuring Franklin Ritchie and Louise Vale. Edward Annesley while visiting his cousin, Paul Annesley, falls in love with Alice Lingard, a wealthy orphan. Paul asks Edward to go away and let him win Alice, so Annesley agrees to do so for three months. Miss Rickman's health fails and she is taken to France, where Paul follows her, and Annesley is also touring in the mountains. Paul finds that Alice loves his cousin, and later coming upon Annesley a quarrel ensues during which Paul staggers over a cliff and into the lake below. Rickman, who witnessed the accident, tells Alice that her lover has murdered Paul, and poisons her mind against Annesley. Edward drawn by morbid thoughts to the scene of the quarrel meets a monk in whom he recognizes Paul, who has been rescued by the monks, and thinking himself guilty of Edward's death had sought expiation in good works. Alice is later furnished with proof of Rickman's baseness and she marries Annesley.

Animated Cartoons of Greater New York—ESSANAY—NOVEMBER 24.—Cartoons by Vernon Howe Bailey. Five hundred feet showing points of interest and marvelous growth of New York City. The sites on which some of the largest buildings now stand are shown as they appeared sixty years ago and then are transformed into modern structures, which now stand on the ground. This reel also contains five hundred feet of scenes taken in the Canadian Rockies.

An Enemy to Mankind—(TWO REELS)—KALEM—NOVEMBER 24.—The first episode of the "Stingaree" series featuring True Boardman and Marin Sais. Irving Randolph appears in a restaurant just in time to prevent Richard his brother from the angry Kelton, whose wife is dining with Richard, but he diverts the husband's anger to himself and soon finds himself ostracised and even his sweetheart, Ethel Porter, turns from him. His only friend is Kent, and together with the latter and Richard the young man tries his skill at rifle shooting. Fate directs Kelton's footsteps to the park and the man is slain by Irving, and Richard denounces his brother as a deliberate murderer. Despite the promptings of his own conscience Irving heeds Kent's advice and flees.

The Meddlesome Darling—(TWO REELS)—LUBIN—NOVEMBER 24.—Featuring a strong cast. Amelia Lowell, an old lady who conducts a newspaper stand, is imprisoned for a robbery which her son committed. Her daughter, Helen, marries Henry Corliss, a young author, and keeps her mother's imprisonment a secret from him. Later Henry, now a successful novelist, develops a fondness for his secretary, Rose, who encourages his affection, and his wife accepts favors from Kane, a detective whom she has met on her trips to aid the poor, not knowing that he was responsible for landing her mother in jail. Amelia's term is up and believes that it will interfere in the happiness of Helen and the future of the little girl, Doris to reveal her identity. She continues to conduct her newsstand and even Helen does not hear from her. One day she saves little Doris from death and Henry, happening by in an auto, has the girl and the old lady taken to his home. She is urged to stay there as nurse to the little girl, but doesn't reveal her identity to Henry. Later Helen tells her husband of her mother's past and they are brought together and "The Meddlesome Darling" urges Henry to employ a male secretary instead of Rose.

Sonny Jim and His Family Party—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 24.—Featuring Bobby Connelly. Daddy Jim and his family arrive at Aunt Susan's to find a Ford waiting for them. At last they arrive and are welcomed warmly by Aunty, but Sonny is the object of teasing by his five cousins, "The Imps." Sonny unfortunately knocks over a cherished plant of Aunty's and is sent to his room dinnerless. He climbs out of the window and goes to a roadhouse where he makes friends with Tubby, the owner's son. The family go to the roadhouse where they find the young rascal enjoying a royal dinner and a happy reunion follows.

The Man from Town—BIOGRAPH—NOVEMBER 25.—Featuring Alan Hale and Isabel Rea. When real estate sharks offer to buy the girl's farm she signs the deed but before the bargain is concluded the city boarder intervenes. The girl goes to the city carrying what she thinks is the deed to the property, but the boarder has substituted blank paper for it. Arrived there the girl is drugged by the real estate sharks and placed in a taxi. The boarder, who has learned the railroad will pay any price for the farm, goes to the office where he is met by officers who have been summoned after hearing a cry over the telephone from the swooning girl. Later he proves to the girl that he was looking after her interests and vows he will always watch over her in the future.

As It Happened in Snakeville—ESSANAY—NOVEMBER 25.—Featuring Margaret Joslin, Harry Todd and Ben Turpin. Mustang Pete and Bloggie are rivals for the hand of Sophie Clutts. One day after she has witnessed a fight between the two, Sophie sits down to read the newspaper. She sees an ad for a movie actress, and decides to go to the big city to apply for the position. Several months later finds her a stunning leading lady and living in great luxury. She is longing for the company of Mustang and Bloggy when they both appear. She has an arm around each of them when she awakes to find herself caressing her two dogs.

As the Twig Is Bent—(THREE REELS)—LUBIN—NOVEMBER 25.—Featuring L. C. Shumway in the story of the twin sons of Mrs. Booth, one who joins the army and then deserts it to take up with a pretty Filipino girl, and the other, who falls in love with a wealthy society girl. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

Florence Turner Impersonates Film Favorites—MINA—NOVEMBER 25.—A highly amusing comedy in which Miss Turner impersonates Broncho Billy, Ford Sterling, a Pathe heroine and others. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Ghosts and Flypaper—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 25.—Anne Schaefer and Alfred Vosburgh featured. The Widow Brown does not approve of her daughter Grace's love affair with Billy Hill. Bill's father and his cousin, Jasper Green, are rivals for the widow's hand and property. The widow owns a house which is haunted and suggests that Silas and Jasper secure a permanent tenant for the haunted house, promising to marry the one who succeeds. Billy tells Silas and Jasper he has a tenant for the house and with the help of flypaper, rope and some rough and tumble mixing in the dead of the night Billy captures the ghosts and brings them before the widow. When Billy and Grace say they are permanent tenants the widow gives her consent to their marriage.

Two Daughters of Eve—BIOGRAPH RELEASE—NOVEMBER 26.—Featuring Claire McDowell, Henry Walthall and Lillian Gish. The husband becomes infatuated with an actress whom his wife had looked down upon, and when the wife learns of this she leaves her husband, taking her child with her. Her search for work is unsuccessful and later she is driven to seek a position in the chorus, where she meets the actress whom formerly she disdained, and the siren has her hour for revenge, but her better nature triumphs and she seeks the wife and begs her forgiveness. Later the wife and her husband are reconciled through the actress.

The Ring of the Borgias—(FOUR REELS)—EDISON—NOVEMBER 26. The story tells of an adventuress who uses an ingenious ring to poison the wife of a man she has come to love. Rivers, upon learning this, spurns her. The cast includes Margaret Prussing, Cora Linton, Augustus Phillips and Richard Tucker. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Broncho Billy's Love Affair—ESSANAY—NOVEMBER 26.—Featuring G. M. Anderson. The girl Broncho Billy is engaged to moves to the city, where she is surrounded in luxury, but she longs to be back in her western home. Her mother wishes her to marry an English nobleman, but finally the girl and her father, who also loves the rough western life, returns to the West, where she and Broncho are united.

The Society Schemer—KALEM—NOVEMBER 26. An episode of the "Ventures of Marguerite," featuring Marguerite Courtot. Carlow, a fortune hunter, enlists the aid of Morton, a pickpocket. While walking with Carlow, Marguerite admires a necklace on display which her suitor orders sent to the hotel, and he intimates that he intends to present the jewel to Marguerite that evening when he will ask her to be his wife. Morton steals the necklace from the messenger who is carrying it to the hotel and then turns it over to Carlow. Hal Worth, who loves Marguerite, is seated in a cafe and swaps the two with a pocket watch camera just as the package is passed. That night Carlow presents the necklace to Marguerite, asking her not to wear it, and she slips it on. At the ball Carlow signals Morton to steal the necklace again, and this done Marguerite gives the alarm and her escort accuses Hal of the crime. However, he turns the table upon the crooks by displaying the snapshot and the men are brought to justice.

Meg of the Cliffs—LUBIN NOVEMBER 26. Featuring L. C. Shumway and Violet MacMillan. Meg, a girl of the coast, is loved by Jacques, a fisherman. Hugh Gaynor, of the U. S. Secret Service, receives word that smugglers are working along the coast. His sister, Adelaide, falls in love with Vinton Randolph, who is really directing the smuggling, his library being connected by a secret passage with one of the smugglers' home. Tony and his confederates are caught in the act of smuggling and he hides the goods in Jacques' boat and as a result Jacques is arrested. Randolph, who is preparing to elope with Adelaide, goes to the secret hiding room of the smugglers for some valuables and there is locked in by Meg, who has taken refuge from a sand storm in Tony's home. Tony is struck by a limb of a tree, which is blown down by the storm, and dying he confesses that he was guilty of Jacques' crime and implicates Randolph. Meg reveals Randolph's prison and Adelaide scorns him while Meg finds happiness in the arms of Jacques.

Pressing Business—VIM—NOVEMBER 26.—Jabbs upon arriving at the hotel in Punkinville, finds an invitation awaiting him, asking him to attend an afternoon tea. He sends his only suit to the tailors to get pressed and the tailor shop burns down while the suit is there. When Loos Pokes enters the rear window of the hotel into Jabbs' room he relieves him of his dress suit and dashes off for the afternoon tea, leaving Pokes in his room rather negligee. Pokes manages to get out of the hotel with a crowd at his heels and the police also join in the chase. He arrives at the tea and gets back his suit while Jabbs is compelled to take refuge in a water trough.

All for the Love of a Girl—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 26.—Featuring Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew. Mayor Hawkins falls in love with Elizabeth Ann, the chairman of the Publicity Committee of Woman Suffrage and is even coerced into promising to speak on woman's suffrage. He collapses during his speech and is carried to a hospital where he dreams he is attired in the feminine fashion of the year 1950 and being walloped around by a man like woman. He is then turned out into the world with three children and in his delirium he yells so hard for children the hospital doctors and Elizabeth Ann borrow three children from the orphanage near by to soothe and humor the patient. The crisis soon passes and under Elizabeth Ann's tender nursing is soon well once more, and we last see Hawkins welcoming three new babies to his home.

Roses of Memory—EDISON—NOVEMBER 27.—Edward Earle is featured as Robert Townsend, who loses the use of his lower limbs as a result of an automobile accident. Jack Carlton, posing as his friend, tells him that in fairness to his wife, Townsend should release her. Over-sensitive concerning his condition, Townsend orders his lawyer to arrange matters so his wife can divorce him. Carlton then calls on Mrs. Townsend and hints at many things. She repulses him and returns to her husband, who, in the meantime, has gained control of his limbs.

The Dynamite Train—KALEM—NOVEMBER 27.—An episode of the "Hazards of Helen" series. A gang of crooks make their getaway by climbing to the top of a dynamite car and loosening the brakes. The crooks discover the contents of the car and they leap to the ground, while Helen, who has seen the theft, takes up the pursuit in an electric speeder. As the speeder approaches the girl leaps from it to the runaway, while half a mile ahead the freight train is coming to a halt. One of the trainmen sees Helen atop the dynamite and gets her signal to sidetrack the runaway. She leaps from the train just in time to escape death when it is derailed and blown up. Later she climbs down the river bed from the top of the bridge and goes to the assistance of the detectives who have come across the yeggmen, who are subdued and placed under arrest.

Blaming the Duck or Ducking the Blame—LUBIN—NOVEMBER 27.—Featuring Billie Reeves. Jack goes hunting with Barton, a friend, and leaves his wife, Lucile, behind. Her father calls on her and she goes riding with him and they have a breakdown which causes delay. Jack returns with a good bag of birds and discovering the table cloth which he has them in stained with blood conceals it. Later he gives an old woman a lot of clothes and tells her he has no use for the articles as his wife is dead to him. Milly, their cook, meets the old lady with the clothes and recognizing them, and fearing murder has been committed, demands the clothes of the old woman. Just then, however, Lucile and her father return to find Jack arrested for murder. All is explained and happiness results.

Young Love—SELIG—NOVEMBER 27.—Featuring a strong cast. Professor Hunt tells Jasper that he is too young to marry his daughter Mary, and also that Mary believes her mother dead, but that she had eloped with another man. Three years later, however, Hunt consents to Mary's marriage to Leigh and on the day of the ceremony the girl's dress is delivered by a seamstress, who is really her mother. Her heart is breaking because she cannot fill her true place as a mother beside her daughter, and as she starts to leave she sees the professor, her husband, whose love overcomes all and he gathers her in his arms.

The Edge of Things—(THREE REELS)—ESSANAY NOVEMBER 27.—Bryant Washburn, Edna Mayo and Edward Arnold are featured in this story that concerns the lives of a millionaire clubman, Betty Marsh, a friendless girl who is seeking her missing brother, and the brother himself who proves to be a city detective. A full review appears on another page of this issue.

A "Model" Wife—(TWO REELS)—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 27.—Featuring Lillian Walker and Antonio Moreno. Robert Blake is in love with Kitty, who works in her aunt's millinery shop. His father wants him to marry Violet Kennedy, daughter of one of his biggest customers. Violet's mother invites him to accompany them to the Vitagraph theater, but he tells them he has a previous engagement, and they discover that it is to take Kitty to the same theater. They tell John Blake of his son's infatuation and he goes to the shop where Kitty poses on a pedestal without winking an eyelash and he thinks she is nothing but a wonderful model. Robert persuades his father to buy it. During her enforced imprisonment in the show room Kitty catches a burglar. Robert learning this, explains all to his astonished father, who consents to their marriage.

Universal Program

Actors From the Jungle—POWERS—NOVEMBER 11.—An animal picture comprising a visit to the Universal City zoo and a personal introduction to all of the animals, wild and tame. Among these are Chimpanzee Charlie, the most accomplished Simian actor in the world; Princess, the tigress; Ethel, the trained lioness and her new litter of cubs; the dog kennels, the hyenas, snakes, bears, trained pigs and giraffes. The alleviation of the appetites of these beasts is one of the most interesting scenes.

The Circus—REX—NOVEMBER 13.—Featuring Baby Early, who, being refused the pleasure of attending the circus, forms one of her own, with the help of the neighbors' kids and all the material they can lay hands on for circus purposes. No pains are spared by the little tots to make their exhibition rival the real one. But Willie becomes peeved at Ted's attentions to Baby Early and brings calamity on the whole outfit. He tells Mr. Murphy that his goat is being used as a circus prop. Highly indignant, that gentleman brings the cop and furnishes a grand finale to the proceedings.

Universal Animated Weekly No. 193—UNIVERSAL—NOVEMBER 17. Glider with "air propeller" built for U. S. of Colombia makes trial trip at Nyack, N. Y.; Thomas A. Edison lays corner stone at Universal City, Calif.; Philadelphia, noted ship, undergoes repairs at Brooklyn, N. Y.; mammoth "Wet" parade held in Chicago, Ill.; French liner Lafayette docks after maiden trip; England honors navy dead at Nelson Monument on Trafalgar Day, London, England; honors firemen killed fighting blaze set by airship's bomb, London, England; aero races hydroplane at San Francisco; Yale is beaten by Columbia in water race for first time in forty years; Yale defeats Princeton 13 to 7 in gridiron battle; cartoons by Hy Mayer.

When Father Was the Goat—NESTOR—NOVEMBER 22.—Ray and the girl have been engaged for some time, but it seems that Ray cannot get enough money to finance the honeymoon trip. Father is a gambler, and Ray proves to be a "speed maniac." The same detective gets on the trail of both and a happy thought enters the boy's mind to trick his father out of $500, which money father has doggedly refused to lend Ray for honeymoon purposes. He tells father that the detective wishes to see him, and father, seeing the dreaded Detective Snitch, almost has a fit. When Ray asks for $500 to straighten out, the old man nearly falls over himself to get the money. Ray is fined $25 for speeding and leaves court with the rest of the money. Ray and the girl are in the exuberance of joy, while father congratulates himself on his ability to "fix" the cops.

In Search of a Wife—(TWO REELS)—GOLD SEAL—NOVEMBER 23.—John Randall lives with his parents and has not yet engaged in any business for himself. Mary Trevor, Randall's ward, is secretly in love with John, but he longs for girls with more class and style. Before leaving for the city, John's father gives him a list of the kinds of girls to avoid. In the city John meets a flirt and pays attentions to her, but his little romance finally falls flat. Then John returns home for the Thanksgiving dinner. While sitting before the fire he remembers the note his father had given him, concerning the various kinds of girls. As he holds the slip in his hand, he falls asleep and dreams of meeting each one of them.

He is awakened by Mary. After a merry meal, a love scene occurs. Later the son goes to his father and tells him that he has after all decided to accept a position in his office, for Mary has promised to marry him.

When Willie Went Wild—IMP—NOVEMBER 23.—The Hon. Willie Pepper, son of the Duke of Worcestershire, is sent west by his titled father for the purpose of curing him of snobbishness. Arriving at Coyote Center, he is given the "tenderfoot treatment" by the town denizens. But he finds temporary joy in the smiles of Senorita Maria Enchilada. The arrival of Don Ferocia, Maria's luny lover, who attempts to puncture the Hon. Willie with a stiletto, brings to a near tragic end the transient romance. In escaping from the Don, Willie falls over the balcony and alights on the Don's horse. The horse, failing to understand Willie's intentions, throws him through the saloon window. Coming to the conclusion that a six-shooter commands more respect in Coyote Center than a title, the Hon. Willie cleans out the saloon and wins the respect of the town people.

The Trap That Failed—BIG U—NOVEMBER 24.—John Osborne, a student of human nature, in a discussion with a newly-made friend at the club, holds that environment is the power that guides the destinies of men and women. To prove his theory he tells Dupree that he will pick up the first down-and-outer they encounter, install him as secretary in his home, and watch results.

This done, they brew a scheme to test whether "once a thief, always a thief," holds true in this case. Mr. and Mrs. Osborne leave for the theater. Dupree and the secretary are left alone in the house. As the safe has been intentionally left open, Dupree steals from it a valuable necklace, and is caught by the secretary. The plan is to offer the secretary half the swag to keep silent, thus testing his honesty. The secretary will not allow Dupree to escape, however, and summons Osborne home by telephone. The secretary turns out to be a secret service operator, and Dupree an international crook. After the jewels have been safely restored and Dupree taken to jail, the officer warns Osborne to be more careful thereafter in his acquaintances and theories.

Stolen Hearts and Nickels—(TWO REELS)—L-KO—NOVEMBER 24.—Bill is a street car conductor. After the day's work he strolls off to look over the ladies in the park, but, meeting Sarah Green and her escort, Reggie, he experiences some unpleasant adventures. Sarah also has a sister and Reggie, Bill and the two sisters get into some very unpleasant situations. Both girls want the same bracelet, and Bill and Reg try to get it. How this turns out is left unexplained for good reasons. Also a robbery perpetrated on a jeweler redounds to Bill's credit and almost puts him in disgrace with the girls. The whole trouble ends at night and with a balloon in which Bill tries to get away. It is understood that Bill is fired from his paying run, and someone else is now knocking down jitneys there.

The Mayor's Decision—(THREE REELS)—LAEMMLE—NOVEMBER 25.—John Stanhope, a young mayor, receives a letter from Bishop Melford, begging him to destroy Dragon Alley. The Bishop writes: "In the name of our little ones, I call upon you to save our people from a living hell." John finds that these houses are owned by Wallace Elton, one of his own and his wife's best friends. As he has ordered the houses of Dragon Alley to be raided and torn down that evening, and learns that an attack is to be made on the police, the matter demands instant attention. He therefore has to leave his wife alone for another evening. Lucette Revere and Jim Ogden, years ago, had been caught stealing in Wallace's house. The latter had Jim sent to prison, while he saved Lucette from a like fate and established her as his mistress. Wallace goes to the Stanhope home, finds Ruth in a receptive mood for his advances, and prevails upon her to elope with him. Jim follows Wallace to the Stanhopes', intent on revenge. Lucette hears of his whereabouts and also leaves for the same destination. In the fight between Jim and Wallace, the latter is killed, while the former is seriously wounded. It turns out that both Ruth and her husband believe each other guilty of the murder and mutually try to shoulder the blame when Lucette and the political boss enter. But the police pick up the wounded Jim, who confesses his guilt. Thus the ends of the boss are defeated, and he departs, leaving Ruth and John together.

Kidnaping the King's Kids—POWERS—NOVEMBER 25—(LADY BAFFLES AND DETECTIVE DUCK SERIES).—The King of Wineberg is very much wrapped up in his two royal kids. Black Rudolph, a crook and pretender to the throne, realizes that the greatest obstacle in his way is the presence of the two youngsters. The king employs Detective Duck, and Rudolph enlists the services of Lady Baffles, who disguises and poses as the governess to the children. The governess proposes a game of blind man's buff, and Duck is "it." While he stumbles around the room, the kids are dropped into a closet and Lady Baffles and Rudolph start home through an underground passageway. Duck seats himself upon the King's throne and draws the imperial robe about his shoulders. The King is about to have him shot, but when the robe falls apart, it discloses the King's kids, safe and sound. All unite in heaping honors upon the famous Detective Duck.

Man or Money?—(THREE REELS)—IMP—NOVEMBER 26.—King Baggott as Donald Britt. Donald Britt and Paul Ferris are college classmates. Donald and Aime, Paul's sister, fall in love with each other. Donald leaves for the west as a civil engineer to take care of construction work, and the girl promises to wait for him to establish himself. Russell Hopkins, a man of some wealth and social position, but a notorious schemer, ingratiates himself so heavily to the Ferris family that Aime, like a dutiful daughter, marries him to please her father. Directly after the ceremony Hopkins is compelled to leave the country to escape the victims of his last scheme. The man and wife then take up life in the far northwest and finally settle in the location where Donald is prospecting for virgin pine. Donald forgives Hopkins for winning the girl he loved. The two men form a partnership, but Hopkins is still the crook, and Donald is tempted to kill him for his treachery. Aime is devoted to her husband, but Donald still attracts her. Deciding the only honorable thing to do is to get out, Donald turns over the entire business to Hopkins and leaves. The husband, now sure that Aime really loves Donald, sacrifices himself and tries by force to bring him back. Failing, Hopkins plunges off a high cliff into the river below. Donald saves him, and the husband and wife are reunited through his self-effacement.

Saved by a Skirt—NESTOR—NOVEMBER 26.—The girl to whom Ray is engaged leaves for school. Ray receives a letter telling him that unless he marries the next day, his father's fortune will revert to another heir. As something must be done at once, Ray persuades Billie's brother, Neal, to disguise as a girl and act as his bride. The justice being near-sighted, performs the ceremony and the reporters make Ray give them an interview regarding the wedding. At school, the principal sends the mystified Billie home. Arrived in town, she is told of the wedding and that she must come at once and sign the lawyer's papers. She arrives just as the lawyer's patience is about exhausted. Meanwhile Neal tries to get to Ray's apartments and once more pose as his wife, but he is taken in as a suspicious character. His release is secured and all three leave for home to prepare for the real wedding.

A Desperate Leap—(TWO REELS)—BISON—NOVEMBER 27. -Featuring Helen Holmes. Helen Holmes, day operator at Hynes, is engaged to the agent, Tom Walker. Two knights of the road, Mike and Leary, see a mail sack hanging to a mail crane and conceive the idea of stealing it. As the freight on which they are riding passes the crane, they sweep the sack from its hook and seize the first opportunity to rifle the bag. Tom is placed under arrest because he has in his possession a torn twenty-dollar bill which the postmaster recognizes as being in the bag. He had changed the bill for Mike, but this story is treated with much amusement by the sheriff. Helen is warned to look out for the bag the next day. The two crooks, knowing that they will make a valuable find in the sack, tie Helen up securely. Then they rifle the sack and jump the next freight. Helen breaks her bonds and daringly jumps from the roof of the station onto the moving train. Through her strategy and daring the thieves are caught and Tom, her lover, is exonerated.

Dad's Awful Crime—JOKER—NOVEMBER 27.—Tom and Flo are very much in love with each other, but, before accepting the engagement ring from her lover, Flo tells him he must obtain father's consent. Dad is in no favorable mood for agreeing to any proposition of this sort, however, as he has just promised a certain Binks his daughter's hand to cancel a long standing debt. Flo will not submit to anything like this and makes good her escape from the house, followed by father, Binks and the minister. She dashes up the fire escape of an apartment house and happens to take refuge in a room where Tom is pouring out his misery on his friend the doctor. When father's contingent arrives, the lovers take refuge in the next room. Flo then shoots through the door. Tom smears red ink all over his breast and through threats to haunt the old gentleman for the rest of his life, secures the latter's permission for immediate marriage. After the ceremony all are surprised by the activity of the "dying man" and father realizes how he has been outwitted. He decides, however, that Tom will make a very bright son-in-law.

The Mirror of Justice—POWERS—NOVEMBER 27.—Bob Clark is a salesman of mining stock, in the office of James Matthews. Bob is not aware of the fact that the stock is bogus and sells five hundred dollars' worth to Mother Allen, his landlady. Lang, the star boarder, advises her against the purchase, but without avail. Officers raid the office but Matthews escapes. Bob rushes west and secures work in the oil fields. He falls in love with Irma Grant. When he at last saves $500 he sacrifices his love to convince Mother Allen of his honesty. Bob returns east and just after he has returned the money to Mother Allen, Lang and a policeman enter to cause his arrest. Instead of this, however, Lang offers him a position in his office. When vacation time comes, Bob returns to the oil fields and is engaged to Irma.

Inside Facts—LAEMMLE—NOVEMBER 28.—Madge Van Zant is a wealthy girl and her father is the owner of a large factory which employs a number of women and girls. The owner, ignorant of true conditions, allows his superintendent to make a cut in wages. Tom Jordan, a factory employee, with ideas for the betterment of his fellow workers, intercedes with him to restore the wages, and enlists the sympathy of Madge. The girl, desirous of learning conditions first hand, enters the factory as a poor working girl. Here she learns the real truth. She is rescued from insult at the hands of the superintendent by Jordan, who, of course, does not recognize her. The next day both are dismissed from the factory by the superintendent. A little surprise party awaits the superintendent at Mr. Van Zant's home. His dismissal follows shortly and the management of the factory is entrusted to Tom Jordan.

Feature Programs

Fox

The Blindness of Devotion (FIVE REELS)—Fox.—Featuring Robert B. Mantell and Genevieve Hamper. In the prologue we are introduced to Count Cornay and Pierre. Years later the Count meets Renee Delavoix and falls in love with her and they are married. Pierre, his adopted son, returns and Renee falls madly in love with him, and although engaged to the Count's niece he becomes infatuated with her. Later the count finding his wife pleading with Pierre not to return to the army, tells Pierre that he must marry his niece the next morning, and although Bella realizes the truth of the situation, she consents to the ceremony rather than disclose the true state of affairs to her uncle. Renee puts poison in a cup of coffee that her husband is about to drink, but he has been watching her in a mirror and changes the cups and she is killed by her own poison and Pierre overcome with remorse shoots himself.

Metro

One Million Dollars—(FIVE REELS)—METRO.—William Faversham featured as Duvall, the criminologist, in this Rolfe production, directed by John W. Noble. Aided by the crystal globe given him by a Buddist priest, Duvall proves that the Count has murdered his rich American wife, and brings him to justice. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

The Woman Pays—(FIVE REELS)—METRO—NOVEMBER 15.—Valli Valli is featured as the pleasure-loving wife who realizes her mistakes in time to save her husband from ruin. The picture was produced by the Columbia Pictures Corporation under the direction of Edgar Jones. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Paramount

Mme. Butterfly—FAMOUS PLAYERS.—A picturization of John Luther Long's celebrated novel with Mary Pickford as Cho Cho San. Marshal Neilan plays Lieutenant Pinkerton, the American who considers his marriage to Cho Cho San a matter of convenience and who, upon returning to America, marries Adelaide. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Still Waters—FAMOUS PLAYERS.—Marguerite Clark is cast in a well suited role, and the story by Edith Bernard Delano gives her opportunities for the display of her particular talents. The photography and settings are excellent. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

The Mummy and the Humming-Bird—(FIVE REELS)—FAMOUS PLAYERS.—Charles Cherry featured as Lord Lumley in this picturization of Isaac Henderson's story of the same name. It is a well constructed and interesting modern society drama laid in England. James Durkin directed the production. Longer review on another page.

Pathe

The Band Sun Engine—(TWO REELS)—PATHE.—Seventh in the "New Adventures of Wallingford" series. Violet and Fanny Warden locate Dana T. Morley, next on the list of men whom Wallingford and Daw have promised to make pay for the injustice they have done Violet's father. Morley owns a great deal of property in the country town. Violet learns that he intends dispossessing Edward Band for non-payment of rent. Band is a would-be inventor and is working on a sun engine. Wallingford and Daw enter upon the scene and a plan immediately suggests itself. They instruct Violet to buy up all the options on property about the town. Wallingford offers to buy some of Morley's property at double its value. This makes him suspicious, and, anxious to learn the reason for Wallingford's operations, seeks information from Blackie. He receives the information and what is more believes it. The result is that he purchases Violet's options for $70,000 and offers to sell them to Wallingford, but it seems that J. Rufus does not care for them. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Pathe News No. 90—PATHE—NOVEMBER 10.—Trials of the National Capital Club, Washington, D. C.; factory fire in Brooklyn, N. Y., in which 2,000 employees were trapped; "Wet" demonstration, Chicago, Ill.; women are employed as window cleaners in Nottingham, England; refugees from Agua Prieta, fearing outcome of Villa's attack, pour across the border line into Douglas, Ariz.; 7,000 bales of cotton burn at the Riverside Compress at Augusta, Ga.; sixteen-inch gun destined for Panama defenses leaves for the Sandy Hook testing grounds; the first corn palace built in Illinois brings crowds to Bloomington; thousands of young folks entertained under the auspices of the Brooklyn Eagle in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Pathe News No. 91—PATHE—NOVEMBER 13.—The Roebling Cable Works destroyed by fire, Trenton, N. J.; how fashions are designed; big guns in the making at an American armament plant; General Villa with 13,000 troops closes in for final assault on the Carranza garrison, Agua Prieta, Mexico; stock yards of Kansas City, Mo., are congested with stock of all kinds to feed the fighting armies of Europe; Italian liner Ancona, which was sunk by an Austrian submarine, photographed when leaving New York on her last voyage; new $12,000,000 Lackawanna viaduct ready for traffic; a new sea-sled built for Colombian Government makes trial trip at Nyack, N. Y.; Land Products Show held in Portland, Ore.; seven thousand bales of cotton burn furiously at Augusta, Ga.; E. J. Smith and C. A. Miller arrive at Kansas City on their walk from New York to San Francisco; Missouri Normal and Kansas Normal play tie game, 16 to 16, in struggle for state football supremacy.

A Bolt From the Sky—(THREE REELS)—PATHE—PRODUCED BY BALBOA.—Jackie Saunders is featured as Fay Blake, the daughter of a wealthy broker. A band of crooks plot to gain some of her father's wealth. Their tool, Anthony Craig, succeeds in being introduced and he continues to call on her. She accepts his proposal of marriage. Just at this time Blake makes great financial losses. When Craig learns this he determines to secure a divorce from Fay. Events lead up to an accident in which he is killed. In the end Fay marries her former lover, Alfred Dale.

A Gentleman's Agreement (THREE REELS)—PATHE—PRODUCED BY BALBOA.—Edith Reeves plays Ruth Nolan, the support of her aged mother, who loses her position as stenographer because she repulses her employer. Her search for work is vain until she meets the director of a motion picture company. He offers her a position. Ruth soon becomes a star and though she does not love Fulsome agrees to become his wife out of gratitude to him. The jealous leading lady places her in a compromising position with an actor whom Ruth really loves. At first Fulsome is in a rage, but the actor calls to his attention an agreement to grant any wish in return for a great favor done him. Fulsome keeps his agreement and leaves Ruth to marry the man she loves.

T. C. K.

Backed by the U. S. A.—(TWO REELS) PATHE-BALBOA.—Twelfth episode of "Neal of the Navy." Joe Welcher resents the smuggler's ill treatment of Annette, whom he has captured. Joe and Hernandez fight and the gas escaping from a broken fixture causes an explosion. Welcher is killed. Annette's party is escorted to the Lost Island by a government transport under Neal's command, in recognition of her favor in allowing the government to establish a coaling station there. Hernandez, who secrets himself on the ship, "fixes" the compass. The ship is drawn out of its course and wrecked. Hernandez and the Brute are washed ashore on an island peopled by savages. The fate of the rest of the party is not disclosed in this chapter. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Mary's Lamb—(FIVE REELS)—PATHE.—A Gold Rooster play featuring Richard Carle in his Broadway success. Donald Mackenzie produced the picture. Included in the cast are Jessie Rolph, Marie Wayne and Lillian Thatcher. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Giving Them Fits—PATHE—A "Luke" comedy which is slap-stick from beginning to end. Luke is the head salesman in a shoe store and uses his right to select his customers, to the dismay of the under salesmen. Luke likes to wait on the pretty girl buyers and leaves the hard jobs for the others. This leads to many kicks, falls and much throwing of shoe boxes or any other article within reach. In the last scene the store is a wreck.

Human Movements Analyzed—(SPLIT REEL)—PATHE.—These singularly interesting and instructive photographs were taken with an ultra-rapid camera and when the film is run at regular speed in the projector the movements are perfectly timed and slow. In this way the every movement of a runner, for instance, can be observed. The pictures are of athletes who run, walk, jump and put the shot. On the same reel with:

Children of the Netherlands—PATHE.—A study in natural colors of the children of Zeeland wearing their native Dutch costumes.

World

A Daughter of the Sea—(FIVE REELS)—EQUITABLE.—Featuring Muriel Ostriche. Margot, a fisherman's daughter, loves Jack Rutland. Mrs. Rutland, a wealthy woman, takes Margot to her home for the purpose of educating her, but objects to the affair between the girl and her son and sends for Margot's father to take the girl away. Adele, Jack's sister, becomes involved in an affair with a lover who is already married and he accidentally shoots himself while struggling with Adele, who escapes, and Margot coming upon the scene picks up the revolver and is held under suspicion for having committed a murder. At the coroner's inquest Adele appears and tells the true story of the accident and the old fisherman when he calls to take his daughter home informs Mrs. Rutland that Margot is the daughter of an old school chum of hers, and in this way the lovers are united.

The Little Church Around the Corner—(FIVE REELS)—WORLD.—Featuring Emelie Polini as a girl who marries a man who is a morphiomaniac. Her rejected lover ruins her husband and endeavors to obtain possession of the child, who is heiress to a large sum of money. The husband and wife are shut up in an asylum, but escape. The husband is cured of the morphine habit and the husband and wife are reunited and they render their thanks at the "Little Church Around the Corner," where they were married. The villain is defeated and the child and her money are saved.

Associated Service

The Parson Slips a Cog—ASSOCIATED.—The Rev. I. O. You and two female pillars of his church are returning home on a boat from a convention. On the same boat is a female vaudeville company who are accompanied by a few college chaps, and the parson becomes interested in the youngsters and sneaks away to the upper deck and there gets up in the festivities. Later the boat stops at Ocean Grove and everybody goes ashore for recreation. The parson again gets into the merry company. When the boat reaches its destination the parson goes home and there tries to recuperate with liniment and bandages and swearing "Never Again."

Triangle Program

Released the Week of November 21.

The Disciple—(FIVE REELS)—TRIANGLE-KAY-BEE.—Featuring William S. Hart in a story of Jim Houston, who comes to Barren Gulch to reform the morals of the frontier community. His wife falls a prey to the seduction of "Doc" Hardy and she elopes with him. Later, his child being sick, "Doc" Hardy is sent for as the only physician in the district. He ministers to the child and confronts Houston, who intends to kill him. Mary is asked to make her choice between Houston and Hardy and she points towards the child and goes to its bedside. For a longer review see page 914 of the issue of October 30th.

Her Painted Hero—(TWO REELS)—TRIANGLE-KEYSTONE.—Featuring Hale Hamilton and Polly Moran. A story of a property man and billposter who love a stage-struck maiden, who in turn adores a matinee idol. She finally suggests to Hale that she will back him in a new production if he will assign her to the leading woman's part, which he does. Later Polly and her property man are reunited for the usual happy ending. For a longer review see page 914 of the issue of October 30th.

Saved by Wireless—(TWO REELS)—TRIANGLE-KEYSTONE.—Mack Swain, Chester Conklin and Andrew Anderson are the featured players in this story of diplomatic intrigue which concerns the stealing of an important code book by a villain and the throwing of suspicion upon the innocent hero, who is eloping with the beautiful heroine. A bomb placed aboard the hero's motor boat all but causes the death of the eloping couple, until the cruel villain, stricken with remorse, rushes to the wireless station and sends out a warning which results in the hero being saved by wireless. A full review appears on page 1030 of the issue of November 13.

The Martyrs of the Alamo—(FIVE REELS)—TRIANGLE-FINE ARTS.—W. C. Cabanne directed this production, which deals with the stirring events of the history of Texas, and introduces such characters as Santa Anna, Sam Houston, David Crockett and James Bowie. The story deals with the defeat of the Americans in the Alamo under the leadership of Colonel Travis, and the final defeat and capture of Santa Anna after a pitched battle with the forces of Sam Houston. No particular star is featured, but prominent in the production are Sam De Grasse, Walter Long, Tom Wilson, A. D. Sears, Alfred Paget, Augusta Carney, John Dillon, Fred Burns, Ora Carew and Juanita Hanson. A full review appears on page 914 of the issue of October 30.

Miscellaneous

A Continental Girl—(FIVE PARTS)—CONTINENTAL.—Featuring May Ward as the daughter of the Revolution who is loved by an American and an Englishman. The Englishman uses his authority to settle private grudges, and Granger, the American, is arrested twice as a rebel, but escapes both times. The girl with Granger away at the war and her father under arrest decides to take active part in the fighting and organizes a company of four girls. They are captured by the British but General Burgoyne sets them free and places the Englishman under arrest for abuse of his power. The Englishman tears down the British flag and attacks Flossie, but Deerfoot comes to her rescue and in order to escape from the Indian the Englishman dives off a high cliff into the lake below. Granger makes his way to the heights and plans to give courage to the American soldiers by raising the flag in place of the English emblem. He is shot while climbing the pole, but the girl takes his place and raises the colors and the battle is won by the Colonial forces. Several years later Allen and Flossie are reunited.

SOME NEW THEATERS

South Dakota.

Toohey Brothers have been given permit to build a brick addition to their picture show theater in Sioux Falls, costing $1,200.

Howell's moving picture show in Montrose will be shown in the opera house, as the weather will not permit its showing in the tent.

Tennessee.

South Chattanooga is to have a motion picture theater, the Strand. A. J. Alper and A. Solomon are interested in the new project.

November 5 the Strand theater opened in Chattanooga on Main street. The new theater has a large seating capacity and is handsomely decorated.

West Virginia.

The Wheeling branch, Mutual Film Corporation, will move its present office, in the Masonic building, to the third floor at Fourteenth and Market streets, over the Bijou theater.

Wisconsin.

Beloit is now the owner of one of the finest picture theaters in the state. It is the new Majestic, costing $40,000. It is very beautifully decorated and provided with many exits. It is owned by Patrick McGavock and J. V. Hogan.

MOTOGRAPHY

The MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
NOV 28 1915
PERIODICAL DIVISION

BILLIE BURKE
WITH KAY-BEE-TRIANGLE

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, DECEMBER 4, 1915 No. 23

LUBIN

Monday Dec. 6th

THE OTHER SISTER

One Act Drama

Tuesday Dec. 7th

D. L. Don Comedy

PLAYING THE SAME GAME

One Act

Wednesday Dec. 8th

Two Act Drama

THE WEB OF HATE

THE OGRE AND THE GIRL

Three Act Drama

RELEASED Thursday Dec. 9th

Friday Dec. 10th

THE STOOL PIGEON

One Act Drama

Saturday Dec. 11th

Billie Reeves Comedy

BASHFUL BILLIE

One Act

GENERAL FILM

LUBIN

RELEASES

STRAND AMUSEMENT CO.
918-922 STATE STREET
ERIE, PENN'A

Erie
This from More later

Erie, Pa.
November Seventeenth
1 9 1 5

Triangle Film Corporation,
71 West 23" Street,
New York City, New York.

Gentlemen:

We wonder now the other fellow found time to telegraph on the opening night assuring you of their success. This is our first breathing spell.

"The Strand" opened to the public Friday evening at 6:30, the performance beginning promptly at 7:00 P. M. opening overture by the Strand Symphony Orchestra--11 pieces, leader, Prof. Franz Koehler who, incidentally, has a Symphony Orchestra in the city, of 57 pieces.

We opened with "The Lamb" and "My Valet." The house was crowded both performances and it is estimated that we turned away over 2,000 people (seating capacity of the house 1500). The Triangle Photoplays, the Orchestra, and the Theatre itself was a revelation to the people of Erie.

We are proud of the Triangle service we are giving which is so far ahead of anything here-to-fore shown that it is a revelation to the people, and we believe if we are given an opportunity to entertain any of the representatives of the Triangle people, even of the good city of New York, they will be equally proud of the Theatre in which their Photoplays are being presented.

Yours very truly,

STRAND AMUSEMENT COMPANY,

MANAGER.

WJH/ANB

TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION
71 WEST 23rd ST. NEW YORK

Rothapfel-Mutual banquet held at the Hotel Sherman in Chicago on Thursday evening, November 18.

MOTOGRAPHY

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED THE NICKELODEON

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, DECEMBER 4, 1915 No. 23

Samuel L. Rothapfel, Exhibitor

BY ED MOCK

> If I wanted to render the motion picture business the one biggest, most magnanimous tribute possible, I would hire this man and travel him, so that he might show others how the thing is done.—Motography, March, 1912, page 112.

At the Rothapfel-Mutual Tour Banquet given at Hotel Sherman the evening of November 18, Mr. Rothapfel of New York, "America's most famous motion picture exhibitor," declared that I had been his inspiration in the earlier days of his struggle to elevate the pictures. It was one of those little tributes that come to us now and then and which make for better understanding of life's lessons. Mr. Rothapfel's compliment found a hearty and gracious welcome.

It was during the winter of four years ago when I heard there was an exhibitor at Minneapolis who was doing some extraordinary things with motion pictures, and while it was somewhat unusual to go so far to a picture show, I concluded that it would be worth while to travel from Chicago to Minneapolis and see what might be seen.

I told the story in these pages at that time. I declared then that I had visited the best motion picture theater in the world; that I had met the wizard who presided over it; that his work was wrought with the ordinary devices available to every other exhibitor. The man was Sam Rothapfel.

When John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, engaged Mr. Rothapfel to make a tour of this country to preach the doctrine of picture efficiency and success, he might have been guided by the text of the first paragraph on this page. I have no way of knowing. At any rate, he made no mistake in his selection, which has been proven by the record of the past few weeks and reaffirmed by the Chicago meeting, Thursday, November 18. A truly representative body of film men listened with great attention and interest for nearly two hours to the magnetic, fascinating life-story Mr. Rothapfel had to offer. He has a wonderfully fetching power as a speaker—one of his more recent attainments. For it must be remembered that the tremendous development of Sam Rothapfel has been during the past seven years; easily within the memory of the present average exhibitor.

The motive that prompts my present effort to write more about "Roxy" is to attempt a correction of an erroneous impression that he is over-rated. He isn't. Sam Rothapfel is a regular fellow. That he stands in the spotlight is because of achievement. He does things—big things in a big way. It wasn't so very long ago that he did little things in a little way, but always the Rothapfel way. No man in the film industry works harder, or longer, or more unselfishly. Few have accomplished so much. The thing I want exhibitors to understand is that Sam Rothapfel is an exhibitor—one of the boys—a friend of every other exhibitor. When he tells you to drop into his house and look it over, he means it. And when he says he is never too busy to give you of his time, he means it. "Roxy" has a special brand of handshake for his exhibitor brother. He has never felt above the most humble. Nor will he ever go so far as to forget his lowly start.

Samuel L. Rothapfel.

Exhibitors who must rely upon the reading of the Rothapfel address, as it is presented on the Mutual tour, are apt to miss its full importance. The earnestness of the speaker; the joy of his eyes; the pleasing mannerisms and forceful emphasis; the sincerity of expression and gesture lend much that cold type fails to convey. There is a blackboard demonstration of stage settings; a piece of chalk held aloft; a "Roxy" atmosphere that carries his audience along far beyond the text of a printed page. The address is built up of human interest stories of his everyday life. In a business beset by a thousand confusing angles, this straightforward narrative is subject to very little cross-fire. It holds consistently to the one thought—improve your show by every clever trick you can command. "Roxy" doesn't attempt to set himself up as the greatest of the great in his chosen work. He tells the simple tale of how he does it. There is no secret about it. Every card is on the table. What he has done, he makes very clear that you can do. In that wholly beneficent plan he wants you to share. He is brutally frank with his references to his own shortcomings.

The exhibitor who will overlook those numerous, helpful, cost-free suggestions that are offered by Mr. Rothapfel does himself and his business a gross injustice. The exhibitor who cannot thank John R. Freuler for sending such a representative into the principal cities of this country falls short of the kind of material that should constitute the exhibitor body. Mr. Freuler has "wanted to render the motion picture business the one biggest, most magnanimous tribute possible." He hired Sam L. Rothapfel and traveled him, "so that he might show others how the thing is done."

Among those who attended the Rothapfel banquet in the Italian room of the Hotel Sherman, in Chicago, on Thursday, November 18, were the following:

Newton B. Levi, Mutual Film Corporation, New York City; Joseph H. Finn, Vogue Films, Inc., Chicago, Ill.; R. R. Nehls, American Film Company, Inc., Chicago, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. B. N. Judell, Mutual Film Corporation, Chicago, Ill.; Louis M. Noto, J. E. O'Toole, A. J. Normal, F. J. Flaherty, Aaron Saperstein, George F. O'Malley, Mutual Film Corporation, Chicago, Ill.; Jay Cairns, North American Film Corporation, Chicago, Ill.; W. E. Gerry, George H. Sheldon, F. J. Woods, R. N. Cushing, Nichols-Finn Advertising Company, Chicago, Ill.; Aaron J. Jones, Peter J. Schaefer, Adolph Linick, Norman E. Field, Samuel I. Levin, Louis J. Jones, Fred W. Schaefer, Frank G. Schaefer, Ralph I. Kettering, Sig. Faller, John G. Burch, Charles J. Schaefer, Harry Earl, George H. Moore, Dorothy Schaefer, Jones, Linick & Schaefer, Chicago, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hamburger, Samuel Mitchell Frankland, Alfred Hamburger Theatrical Enterprises; Mr. and Mrs. I. Leon Klasky, World Film Corporation, Chicago, Ill.; F. M. Brockell, Paramount Feature Company, Chicago, Ill.; H. W. Willard, Triangle Film Corporation, Chicago, Ill.; George A. Magie, B. W. Fox, Universal Film Company, Chicago, Ill.; Charles L. Filkins, Edward Cohen, I. Van Ronkel, E. Van Ronkel, I. Natkin, V. L. S. E., Inc., Chicago, Ill.; Miss H. Rosenblum, DeLuxe theater, Chicago, Ill.; Fred Loeb, Little theater, Chicago, Ill.; Edward Barrett, Pastime theater, Chicago, Ill.; George Paul, States theater, Chicago, Ill.; H. E. McDorman, Francis theater, Chicago, Ill.; Paul Sittner, Sittner's theater, Chicago, Ill.; L. F. Allardt, Allardt Circuit, Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Bert S. Feltes, Park theater, Chicago, Ill.; Julius Lamm, Logan Square theater, Chicago, Ill.; M. A. Howell, theater builder, Chicago, Ill.; A. J. Bidstrup, Gaiety theater, Chicago, Ill.; Fred W. Hartmann, Aristo theater, Chicago, Ill.; Robert R. Levy, Revelry theater, Chicago, Ill.; William E. Heaney, Virginia theater, Chicago, Ill.; Thomas R. Porter, Bonita theater, Chicago, Ill.; W. J. Sweeney, 57 East Van Buren street, Chicago, Ill.; H. C. Miller, Alcazar theater, Chicago, Ill.; Jack Bellot, Board theater, Chicago, Ill.; Max Schwartz, Harper theater, Chicago, Ill.; F. W. May, Beach theater, Chicago, Ill.; M. G. Watkins, American Standard Moving Picture Corporation, Chicago, Ill.; Abe J. Balaban, Circle theater, Chicago, Ill.; A. Schoenstadt, Boulevard theater, Chicago, Ill.; A. L. Schiff, Ashland theater, Chicago, Ill.; J. H. Morrison, Grand theater, Chicago, Ill.; Harry W. Rosenblum, Temple theater, Chicago, Ill.; Samuel Spitzer, Paulina theater, Chicago, Ill.; Edward B. Smith, Bell theater, Chicago, Ill.; B. Cohn, Home theater, Chicago, Ill.; Julius A. Alcock, Mutual Film Corporation, Chicago, Ill.; F. W. Wild, Jr., Mrs. F. W. Wild, C. S. Wertsner & Son Co., Chicago, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Roderick Ross, Ross & Co., printers, Chicago, Ill.; E. Q. Cordner, Strand theater, Chicago, Ill.; Abe Auerbach, New Strand theater, Chicago, Ill.; R. C. MacMullen, Colonial theater, Joliet, Ill.; H. B. Knapp, Superba theater, Freeport, Ill.; W. D. Burford, Palace theater, Aurora, Ill.; John F. Mackinze, Strand theater, Indianapolis, Ind.; J. J. Rubens, Fox theater, Aurora, Il.; Charles Boomershine, Citizens theater, Millersburg, Ind.; Herman Meyer, Niles Center theater, Niles Center, Ill.; H. L. Gumbiner, De Luxe theater, Hammond, Ind.; J. K. O'Neil, Opera House, Henry, Ill.; Frank E. Lee, Lee's Picture House, Three Oaks, Mich.; M. L. Sparr, Village theater, Wilmette, Ill.; M. S. Ludick, Melrose Park theater, Melrose Park, Ill.; H. T. Benson, Five-Cent theater, Milford, Ill.; Lester L. Deutsch, Soldiers' Home theater, Danville, Ill.; Ed J. Mock, A. L. Haase, Neil G. Caward, Motography, Chicago, Ill.; W. S. Broun, D. G. Heinly, Walt Bloeser, H. B. Sherwood, M. A. Goldberg, Tribune, Chicago, Ill.; E. W. McQuigg, J. C. Reynolds, Evening American, Chicago, Ill.; E. H. Wood, Mildred Joclyn, Frank A. McInerny, Evening Post, Chicago, Ill.; William C. Esty, Jr., Motion Picture News, Chicago, Ill.; J. S. McQuade, P. C. Hinz, Moving Picture World, Chicago, Ill.; Martin J. Quigley, Exhibitors' Herald, Chicago, Ill.

Before reaching Chicago Mr. Rothapfel was banquetted at Denver, Colorado, and Minneapolis, Minnesota. The Denver banquet was held at the Hotel Savoy on the evening of November 12. H. T. Nolan introduced the speaker of the evening to the assemblage and among others who talked were H. A. Ellison, the pioneer of 15-cent admission prices in Denver; H. A. Goodrich, a suburban exhibitor; and Margaret D. Conway, inspector of amusements for the city of Denver.

Among those present at the banquet were:

C. O. Withrow, C. H. Simpson, Muriel Lee Elsasser, E. T. Behn, W. E. Scott, W. R. Sample, W. G. Hilliard, Fred Solomon, E. F. Haslam, H. A. Goodrich, John Thompson, M. M. Kravetz, J. B. Mellon, John S. Broughton, Homer A. Ellison, W. A. Calkins, J. H. Ashby, Jesse E. Jones, O. A. Carlson, M. J. Barton, M. B. Friedman, Ernest B. Fine, Margaret B. Conway, L. D. Purdy, S. E. Fair, Frank W. Frewn, H. B. Gish, C. W. Harris, G. P. Hayward, W. S. Rand, Harry Lustig, Mutual branch manager; M. F. Cohn, H. T. Nolan, H. E. Ellison, R. H. McCluskey, Lewis Erb, E. M. Erwin, D. L. Lehrburger, E. H. Binford, William T. Binford, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Huffman, A. S. Bailey, Frank Harris, F. P. Hill, Jack Scott, Morris Cohn, and A. Wertheim.

The Minneapolis meeting was held at the Elks Club and James Gilosky of the Alhambra theater, St. Paul, presided as toastmaster.

Among those present from outside the Twin Cities were:

Anton Gilles, Grand theater, Breckenridge; John H. Bunte, the Wurlitzer Company, Chicago; A. C. Thompson, Star theater, Dubuque; F. E. Nemec, Nemec theater, St. Cloud; Mr. and Mrs. Jay E. Gould, Crystal theater, Glencoe; Frank Gardner, Palace theater, Owatonna; Alfred Lantz, Palace theater, Owatonna; M. T. Jones, proprietor of Palace theater, Owatonna; M. Joffe, Kenyon; V. M. Smrcina, Metropolitan theater, Prairie du Chien; John Brummond, Princess theater, Thief River Falls; John R. Lakin, Caille Brothers Company, Detroit, Mich.; G. G. Merrick, Winnipeg, Canada; P. C. Johnson, Star theater, Montevideo; L. G. Roesner, Colonial theater, Winona; J. A. Tyrir, Albert Lea; J. A. Van Wie, Albert Lea.

Those present from St. Paul included:

J. B. Reisman and S. Reisman, Dale theater; George W. Granstrom, Strand theater; Joseph Friedman, Park theater; J. R. Simpson, Ideal theater; M. L. Finkelstein, Princess Majestic, etc.; Mr. and Mrs. James Gilosky, Alhambra theater; Mr. and Mrs. Bert Goldman, Princess and Majestic; Mr. and Mrs. William Sobelman.

Among those present from Minneapolis were:

Theodore L. Hays, H. E. Young, Portola theater; William Koenig, Gayety theater; J. L. Maitland, Jitney theater; Jacob Barnett, Crystal theater; Fred S. Meyer and Ben Friedman, Western Kriterion; E. A. Wescott, Fox Film Corporation; J. A. Salter, World Film Corporation; Grant Pierce, Tribune; William C. Preller; I. H. Rubin, Palace, Grand and Garrick theaters; F. H. Harmer, F. E. Williams, Triangle Film Corporation; E. A. Davies and J. C. Stanley, Northwest Weekly; M. L. Cohen, Lagoon theater; J. M. Langley, Alhambra theater; E. H. Weinhold; Charles J. Rostad, Tribune; Harry B. Wakefield, Tribune; George E. Ackerson, Tribune; J. George Feinberg, Moving Picture World; W. C. Lestico, Kleine-Edison; L. E. Davis; W. H. Stafford, manager Mutual Film Corporation; Lillian Nelson; J. A. Bachman, Mutual Film Corporation; Mr. and Mrs. William H. Koch, New Grand theater; Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Billings, New Palace theater; Samuel Salomonsky, Universal-Laemmle; Mr. and Mrs. James V. Bryson, N. W. M. P. Equipment Company; C. E. Van Duzee, Princess theater; G. Mantzke, Mutual Film Corporation; Casper F. Schwie, Calhoun theater; George H. Capper; J. M. Kuhn; George M. Fosdick, Mutual Film Corporation; Henry J. Hoy, New Lyndale theater; Ben E. Drum, V. L. S. E.; C. W. Sawin, V. L. S. E.; William E. Mick, Lyric theater; L. V. Calvert, New Garrick theater; George Carish, Third Ward theater; E. R. Mencel, Regent theater; J. M. Yaeger, Moon theater; A. A. Hixon, Metro Pictures Service; Jack Elliott, "Birth of a Nation"; Smith B. Hall, Railway and Hotel News; Carlton W. Miles, Journal; John R. Baker, Journal; M. J. Weisfeldt, assistant manager Mutual; Newton E. Levi, Mutual Film Corporation; Thomas J. Hamlin, editor of Amusements.

REEL FELLOWS HOUSEWARMING

Chicago Club At Last Moves Into Its Clubrooms and Gigantic Turnout Initiates New Quarters—Membership on the Increase

Wednesday, November 17, will long be a red letter day in the motion picture history of Chicago, for at 6:30 on that evening the doors to the new club rooms of the Reel Fellows Club of Chicago, located on the second floor of the Movie Inn, at 17 North Wabash avenue, were thrown open and from then until a wee small hour on Thursday morning good fellowship prevailed.

A more representative attendance has seldom graced a motion picture function of any kind in Chicago, for all factions and branches of the great industry were represented on the floor and took an active part in the housewarming. The new club rooms proved a delightful surprise in the way of furnishings and decorations, and ere the meeting adjourned many members were discussing ways and means of acquiring still larger space and making the clubrooms even more attractive.

The walls of the new clubrooms are hung with artistic portraits of noted stars and on the platform stood a huge photograph of President Nehls, the club's first executive. Comfortable chairs and richly upholstered lounges are scattered about the quarters, and big reading tables and other tasty furnishings make the rooms homelike.

When the time came for the club's regular monthly dinner the seating capacity of the balcony of the Movie Inn was taxed to the utmost, for though a large attendance was expected the crowd which assembled exceeded the guesses of even the most optimistic of the club members, and seats were at a premium. After the late comers had been served, the whole gathering adjourned to the clubrooms, President Nehls ascended the rostrum and the meeting was formally called to order.

Joseph Finn was the first speaker introduced and after getting into a hole by identifying a huge portrait of Henry Walthall as a likeness of Charley Chaplin, he got skilfully out again and went on record as believing that the gathering then present would soon be increased to a membership of nearer a thousand than a hundred.

Frank Powell of the Screen Club told of the organization of that body and predicted a stupendous growth for the Reel Fellows Club. Richard Travers expressed his delight at finding the club at last in a home of its own, and Henry Walthall, after declaring that he was so embarrassed that he found words lacking in which to express himself, proved his worth by reciting a humorous little recitation in a manner that simply brought the house down.

"Cap" Boening, as the club treasurer, proved that money can talk and Rapley Holmes, who had delayed his departure for New York City on purpose to be present, made one of his original little speeches. William J. Sweeney, on being called on, "passed the buck" to "Bob" Levy, and the latter uncorked some of his well known oratory Mr. Brockell of the Famous Players exchange, Benjamin Judell of the Mutual exchange, and Frank Flaherty all briefly occupied the stage, and Director Haydon of the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, demonstrated that he can talk as well as he can produce. Several professional entertainers were next introduced and with the assistance of Abe Balaban proceeded to enliven the evening with songs and stories.

Among those present from other branches of the industry were Aaron Jones of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, Alfred Hamburger, George Cox, Nate Asher, and C. L. Worthington of the Fox offices. It was long past the midnight hour when the last stragglers departed from the clubrooms and the new quarters are now open daily and being largely used by the enthusiastic members.

Charity Ball a Huge Success

The charity ball given by the American Theatrical Hospital Association in the First Regiment Armory of Chicago on Saturday, November 20, was a huge success from every viewpoint. There was a galaxy of stars from screendom and the legitimate stage present, and every theatrical man in Chicago that could come was there. Beverly Bayne and Francis X. Bushman, the ever-popular Metro stars, led the grand march and this fact in a great measure was one of the greatest assets in making the affair a success. These stars were given a great ovation upon their appearance at the Armory and the box in which they were entertained by Alfred Hamburger was stormed by guests of the evening.

The Equitable and World Film Corporations were especially well represented at the ball. They were, in fact, the only film manufacturing companies that had a box of their own. At 12:30 they issued a very newsy little paper, The Equitable World, in which news of the evening was published and also important news concerning the Equitable and World Corporations.

There was a beautiful silver loving cup two feet in height given away by the Equitable company to the best dancers, and the lucky winners of this cup were Barber King and Miss Mildred Brown. At the auction, A. N. Spiegel, one of the directors of the Equitable, bid $130 for a beautifully dressed doll which was donated to the association by Mlle. La Estrellita, the famous Spanish dancer.

Virtus R. Scott, who has been a successful director with the Biograph, Famous Players, New York Motion Picture Company, Equitable, and other companies, has signed a contract to work under the Metro banner as assistant director to Lionel Belmore, who will direct future Quality-Metro features in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are starred.

Making Films Steady

Thomas A. Edison is credited with having said: "Give me a motion picture machine and I'll teach more history in fifteen minutes than instructors and text books can drill into the minds of pupils in a month."

Nicholas Power.

But this was not in the early days of motion pictures—for the machines used fifteen years ago, when moving pictures were being introduced, were inspired with the jumps, flickers and dances to a degree that made it an optical hardship to look at a film. When films were in the experimental stage the picture machine was equally undeveloped. Edison seemed to have other things to think of besides films and picture projection two decades ago. The inventive mind of the "wizard" had not then taken up the subject of motion pictures to any great extent, and it was many years after the picture business grew out of its swaddling clothes before anybody gave much study to the important detail of projection.

Finally one inventive genius—Nicholas Power by name—noted the defects in the early film displays, and traced the troubles to their source—the projection machine. Power was one of the first men to seriously apply himself to the perfection of "throwing pictures" upon the screen. He studied out the mechanical intricacies of the subject, and, having first foreseen the future of the film, devoted long hours and many months to experimenting with cranks, cogs, shutters and wheels.

Mr. Power knew that moving pictures would never succeed as an amusement unless they could be thrown clearly and steadily upon the screen: he sensed troubles with the eyes of millions unless the earlier projecting apparatus could be replaced with steady running, even "throwing," and flickerless machines.

Unlike most inventors, he was wise enough to keep the reward of his genius in his own control, and instead of selling his patents for trivial sums he proceeded slowly and always within his means New models were produced every few months, every machine he turned out was an improvement upon its predecessor, and finally he arrived at a point so closely approaching perfection that the Power's projectors are now established among the standards of all "picture throwing" apparatus.

The millions who find entertainment at the picture shows owe much to Nicholas Power, for it was Mr. Power who devoted years of his life to taking the "flicker" out of the film and conserving the eyesight of his own generation and for generations to come.

Kleine Signs Stars

George Kleine, of film production fame, is certainly drawing heavily these days upon the ranks of speaking drama celebrities. His latest acquisition in this direction is Millicent Evans, remembered as Douglas Fairbanks' leading woman in "Officer 666," and as leading woman in "The Blue Mouse" and many other successes under the Klaw & Erlanger management. Miss Evans is busy at the big Kleine studios in New York, rehearsing her role in a comedy written especially for George Bickel of Bickel & Watson.

Another whom Mr. Kleine has just placed under contract is John Jarrott, who has a long list of successes to his credit, among which are the star parts in "Folies Bergere," and his own production, "Come On," which enjoyed a long and remarkably prosperous run recently at the Empire theater, New York City.

Lasky Film Has Big Sets

Five hundred otherwise perfectly law-abiding citizens are pictured as enthusiastic roulette players in the big Lasky Feature Play Company's production of "Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo," from E. Phillips Oppenheim's novel of the same name, in which Theodore Roberts is the star. The photoplay is a Paramount picture and will be shown publicly for the first time on December 2.

Some of the scenes of "Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo" are laid within the great gaming casinos of the famous resort. Probably the biggest interior setting ever erected in a studio is used in one of these casino scenes. Four great halls are revealed in panorama and nearly 1,000 persons are seen playing at the various roulette and card tables.

It is related that when the call went out for persons to appear in the gambling scenes of "Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo" many local celebrities of Hollywood applied. It is the custom at the Lasky studios to serve luncheon for everyone inside the plant at noon and on the day when the casino scenes were made more than 1,200 persons sat down to lunch. Persons who had won and lost fictitious millions a moment before were of one mind when the dinner bell sounded.

Theodore Roberts, who is the star of this Lasky production, has been prominent before the photoplay going public for many months. Others who appear in leading roles are Carlyle Blackwell and Dorothy Davenport, a niece of the late Fanny Davenport.

Horsley's Axetitler Used

For the first time since his productions have been distributed through the branches of the Mutual Film Corporation, David Horsley has made use of his own invention, the axetitler, a device by which the words of the character, or characters, in the scene being shown are printed directly on the film.

The introduction of this novelty is made in the Centaur Star Feature, "Could a Man Do More?" a three-reel drama featuring Crane Wilbur, and released November 24 on the Mutual program.

The picture opens with Crane Wilbur entering a library and seating himself comfortably in a big arm chair. Assuming a story-telling attitude, he faces the camera, carrying out the business of telling a story when the axetitler records his words: "Let me tell you a story," on the lower left hand portion of the film. Wilbur remains in the scene throughout. The picture then dissolves into the theme of the story and when it is concluded dissolves back to Wilbur, still seated in the big arm chair, but now going through the business of ending the story while the axetitler records: "And thus my story ends."

The Actor-Director's Viewpoint

BY HENRY KING*

WIDEST in the world is the difference between the work of the actor-director in pictures and that of the man who merely directs. I have played under many directors and I have directed pictures in which I did not take part. But of late, all my screen activities have been in productions where I played the lead, as well as exercised the guiding force. As a result of this experience, the opening statement. The responsibilities of the actor-director are numerous, as anyone with studio experience will know. On him rests the principal burden; yet, I do not feel that because of that fact he is entitled to the lion's share of the credit when a good picture is turned out, although his will be largely the blame for any failure that may be recorded.

Henry King.

It has always been my motto to distribute the credit where it belongs. The author, the producer and the actor should be entitled to an equal share, while important contributions are made by the generally unknown departments that enter into the making of a picture play. My point is that no one person can claim to be the "big thing" in screen production, because so many different elements enter into it. Without my cameraman, Joe Rizard, at my elbow to consult, I would not attempt to make a picture.

Notwithstanding, the central or controlling force is that exercised by the director. In putting on a piece before the camera, I always try to bring out the gist of my early training on the legitimate stage. That is to round out a finished product. To be able to do this, I believe actual stage experience to be the invaluable, yes, even essential, equipment. In attempting to do anything, the extreme results that may be obtained are the crude and the finished products. We see very few of either. The most are only half finished.

I believe I am safe in saying that not one in ten directors producing for the screen today gets the maximum results, because they have not the requisite training as a result of which they can differentiate between the good and the bad in mimetics. For instance: any child can take a pencil and make a crude representation of the human figure. But to perfect the art of drawing and coloring requires years of study and practice, even for a genius.

Just so with the stage. And I hold that the studio is but another, a newer form of the stage. In acting before the camera, the technique of the stage must be carried out much more in detail than before the footlights. You wouldn't expect to hear a finished pianist in one who had never studied the technique of that instrument. In the same way, to be able to act one must know the rudiments of acting.

Above all, the one who superintends a production must have a stage education. Some men from the outside who are becoming studio directors may have wonderful ability and do exceptional work; but for the rank and file, I feel that actual stage experience is the safest preparation. I believe I am safe in making the statement that the ten foremost picture directors today were all active in the realm of the theater in former days.

What is most needed in picture production today, I believe to be more time in the rehearsal of scenes. They should be so worked out in detail before being photographed that it is unnecessary for the director to say a word to the players after the "grinding" begins. When intent upon achieving an effect, it is disconcerting to the actor if the director talks or shouts for him to cross. You can't trifle with the feelings. Prompting is rarely necessary on the stage because of careful rehearsing. The same applies to the studio. We, too, are coming to it rapidly; for with the accession of better equipped players and more competent directors, a vast improvement has been noted in the way picture plays move now, as compared with a year ago.

A production must not merely carry the story along. It must do more than that. To achieve the end, it is necessary for the direction to visualize that which a reader reads "between the lines," so to speak. The difference between directors is largely the degree in which they are able to develop the finesse of the tale, to make an audience forget it is merely looking on at a re-presentation. You see a runaway in the crowded downtown streets and thrill, because you know it is not "staged." The director's problem is to duplicate the effect; but in doing so to cover up the pre-arrangement.

Henry King, Balboa director, going over a new script with his new leading woman—Helen Marie Osborn.

In directing a picture I try to get over the effect on me of my own ideas. This may sound trite; but from the looks of many screen plays, I cannot help feeling that the director-in-charge has been working like the man digging a trench—without any particular interest in his task. Cinematography should be joy. Expressing ideas is not like felling trees. In all artistic endeavor, it is not so much the thing itself which is done, as the suggestion conveyed by what is done. It is the illusive something which lives that I am trying in my modest way to fasten on the screen. Rarely am I satisfied, however, with my work when I see it "run off." Were it feasible, I'd prefer to make over every picture.

*Actor-Director of Balboa Company.

According to my contract with Balboa, I am supposed to star in my own productions. But strange to say, when they are finished, the work of my associates stands out prominently more often than my own. In developing the story and causing the others to appear to the best advantage, I usually forget myself; whereas if I didn't, it would be a simple matter to "fatten" the part I am doing. As a case in point: right now, a three-year-old child is playing the female lead with me. As written, the scenario makes my part the dominating one; but the little child is so fascinating that I am letting her "hog" the picture as the stage-slang goes. But I don't mind, for I am convinced that all will work out satisfactorily in the long run.

The actor-director as a gold miner in scene from one of his productions.

The standing I have achieved in pictures as an actor and a director I owe almost entirely to the Horkheimer brothers and the opportunities they have given. Before coming to Balboa, I had one other studio engagement. I stuck to my present employers through the dark days, when I had various offers to go elsewhere. At the time H. M. Horkheimer said that I would never be sorry and I am not. He has made good every promise and done even more. Today Balboa is among the largest independent producing concerns in the world and I am proud to be identified with it and to have played a modest part in its growth.

For a man to get results, he must be satisfied, happy in his affiliations. The conditions existing at the Long Beach studio I believe to be unique in the film world. It is more like one big family than anything else. Directors, actors and all other employees work harmoniously to the common end of producing good pictures for their employers. Unprejudiced observers tell us there is a steady improvement in our output. The increasing demand is further evidence.

In conclusion, as an actor-director I might say I am primarily interested in achieving as nearly a perfect picture as possible. Whenever I feel that I can interpret the part best, I play it; otherwise, some one else is cast for it. At times, I write my own stories and do them. I know what I want to get over and I am glad to say that I have the hearty co-operation of my assistants. They help me as much as I help them. The mind in front, so to speak, simply pulls the strings. The others respond according to their individuality and understanding.

HORSLEY'S NEW DIRECTOR

William J. Bowman, Former Bushman Director, Will Stage Centaur Features with the Bostock Animals—Now Working on First One

William J. Bowman has just been added to David Horsley's staff of directors at the Horsley studios in Los Angeles to put on Centaur feature animal pictures with the Bostock animals. He is now at work on his first Centaur picture.

Mr. Bowman is one of the best known and at the same time one of the most capable directors in the business. For a long time he was associated with the New York Motion Picture Company putting on productions at Inceville. His most recent engagement was with the Quality Films, for whom he produced the Francis X. Bushman features. Among these were "The Second in Command," the first Bushman picture for the Metro, and "The Silent Voice," which followed.

The fact that the Bushman releases are to be made in the East was the reason that Mr. Horsley was enabled to secure Mr. Bowman. When it was decided to remove the Quality players to New York Mr. Bowman was invited to accompany them in his old capacity but declined the offer, explaining that he preferred to remain in California. Mr. Horsley then immediately approached him with a proposition which was so tempting that he accepted.

In view of Mr. Bowman's past performances a great deal may be expected of his efforts for Mr. Horsley.

A Five Reel Midget Feature

The Headline Amusement Company, having launched the "Pee-wee Picture Players" in "The Lilliputians' Courtship" with gigantic success, are now anticipating the production of a five reel feature picture written around the famous stories of "Gulliver's Travels." This picture will require the services of nearly one hundred midgets and Little Will Archie is being kept busy signing up the little men and women, who are coming from all parts of the globe.

One day last week the Pittsburgh branch of the World Film Corporation was burned out. Not a shred of the offices and their contents remained, but in almost less time than it takes to write this paragraph, new offices were taken; the forces got to work; films, paper, and the general supplies of the offices were drawn from stock and put to work. World Film treated the incident as such, and allowed no interruption whatever to its business to take place.

"Atmosphere a Vital Element" Says Zukor

APPROVES EASTERN STUDIOS

"THE importance of obtaining the proper atmosphere for every production has never failed to impress me since the days when a sombrero and chaps were considered sufficient to transfer a grocery clerk into a perfect cowboy," declared Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players Film Company, apropos of the departure of Marguerite Clark and J. Searle Dawley for Savannah, Georgia, where the film adaptation of the celebrated play, "Mice and Men," will be staged. "At that time the Jersey woods served for every setting in the category, from darkest Africa to 'India's sunny climes'—not to mention the Arctic regions.

"That was in the days when the mere fact that shadowy figures could be made to move across a screen—or a sheet—was all that the public needed to know about moving pictures. 'They moved!' as the barker might say—and that was sufficient. And with a few notable exceptions, the manufacturers of these moving pictures, knowing that the novelty of the idea would assure them a good market, turned out their product as rapidly and as cheaply as possible. That was what might be termed the Stone Age of motion pictures, and I have no doubt that many discriminating persons who had the misfortune to attend those early shows may have never entered a photoplay house again. If they should, however, they would find that vastly different conditions obtain today.

"The development of the longer films, and then the formation of film producing companies for the express purpose of adapting successful plays to the screen, marked the introduction of new methods of production; of a beginning of the minute attention to detail which is absolutely essential to the success of a photoplay today, and which has resulted in its present high status in the amusement world, which finds its ultimate expression in the great photoplays which one now sees in the leading theaters all over the country.

"Firmly convinced that the proper atmosphere was positively essential to the success of the adaptation of well known plays to the screen, I have always insisted that the directors go to any means within their power and ingenuity to obtain the right setting. In the case of 'Mice and Men,' Madeline Lucette Ryley placed the story in the south. It is practically impossible to find really southern atmosphere in the north. One may discover a single house with the familiar Georgian pillars, but the illusion ends right there. That is why Miss Clark and the company have just gone to Savannah. For there one cannot take a picture which is not brim full of the spirit and tradition of the south as we know it of old.

"'Atmosphere' is frequently an expensive luxury, if one reckons first cost, but in the long run it is a most profitable investment. For instance in producing 'The Eternal City,' we sent Pauline Frederick and her company to England and Italy for several weeks. The expense bills might have been considered high—but the realism which resulted from that journey made the picture a masterpiece and added greatly to the popular interest in the production.

"More recently we have faced the problem of obtaining proper settings for widely different pictures, each of which depended to a great extent upon the accuracy of detail in the presentation. When the war prevented the carrying out of our original intention of sending Miss Frederick to Egypt to photograph our adaptation of Ribert Hichens' 'Bella Donna,' we spent many weeks in search of a proper substitute. Finally we decided upon Florida as the only available place. The singularly strong tributes which were paid to the atmosphere of the production by the reviewers show that our efforts and expense were amply repaid.

"Again, in the case of 'Still Waters,' it would have been simple to have gotten an old canal boat in the Hudson river, and by using very restricted space for the scenes, to have given a fair semblance of reality to the canal life portion of the play. But, with the Delaware river flowing through the Pocono hills in the neighborhood of Easton, Pa., and with a real canal paralleling the river through that exquisite valley it seemed almost criminally negligent not to send the players to that point. So the picture was given the setting which called forth so much approbation from those who saw it.

"In 'Madame Butterfly' and 'The White Pearl' we had to obtain Japanese atmosphere, but distinctly different, for the latter was a sea story. Hence Marie Doro and her company went to one of the rockiest portions of the coast of Maine and Miss Pickford was dispatched to 'somewhere in Jersey,' where there are the most beautiful Japanese gardens in this country. I am not at liberty to disclose the name of the place because it is a private residence and the owner does not wish his name to be used.

"At the present time there is one of our companies at the old Thompson home in Swanzey, N. H., where we are producing the rural portions of our adaptation of Denman Thompson's delightful play, 'The Old Homestead.' This is indeed the acme of realism, as the author-actor used his old farm as the setting of his original play, and the characters depicted in it were actually his neighbors. Through the courtesy of Frank Thompson, son and heir of Denman, we are accorded the privilege of presenting to the public the actual scenes which even the great genius of Thompson himself could only represent in painted canvas upon the stage. The same holds true of Grace church, which formed the familiar background of Act III. Thompson was again forced to resort to canvas and paint, while Frank Losee, his successor in the role of Josh Whitcomb, actually plays the scenes before the old church itself.

"These are the touches which differentiate the mediocre feature film from the really worthwhile photoplay—an opinion in which I am glad to say that my associates on the Paramount program heartily concur. It was the conviction that such is the case which determined the Famous Players to make New York its center of production. With all due respect to those whose enterprise led them to boom California as the mecca of motion picture men, we believe that New York is the logical place for the location of the main plant of the photoplay producer.

"In the first place, it has unequalled facilities for communication with every portion of the globe. It is the center of American commerce and therefore the center of transportation. Form it one can reach any given variety of scenes and locations in the shortest possible time. That is the vital point—the variety of settings. And though nobody appreciates more than I the beauties of California and the wide range of climate and scenery which it enjoys, it does not compare in accessibility and in variety with the opportunities afforded by New York.

"New York is still the theatrical center of America, too, and here one still finds the actors whom one needs for his productions, despite the great colony of motion picture players which has congregated in the west. For Broadway still lures the ambitious actor and it is from the ranks of the successful players that the producer of adaptations of theatrical successes musters his leading characters."

MAY HAVE BIGGEST THEATER

Rochester, N. Y., Capitalists Already Have Approved Plans for Motion Picture Theater With Six and a Half Thousand Seating Capacity.

George E. Simpson, manager of the Regent theater, Rochester, N. Y., is authority for the statement that the recent affiliation of the Regent and Gordon theaters is the basis of a project to erect in Rochester the largest motion picture theater in the entire United States. Preliminary plans have already been drawn for a structure that will have a seating capacity of about 6,500.

According to present plans, the lower floor space will provide seats for some 2,850 people, while the balcony will easily seat 2,250, and a second balcony will accommodate the remainder.

It is anticipated that the proposition will involve the expenditure of about one million dollars, all Rochester capital, though the active co-operation of the Gordon-Olympia Company, a seven-million-dollar corporation of Boston, controlling more than thirty theaters in the east, is expected. The house is to be built with the sole intention of using it as a motion picture theater, and vaudeville, it is definitely asserted, will form no part of its policy.

In discussing the proposed house and its policy, Mr. Simpson spoke in part as follows:

"The enormous seating capacity of the proposed house will enable us to obtain only the choicest releases of practically all of the big feature-film companies. We can buy ten or eleven features and select from them films that will be acceptable to our class of patrons. I venture to predict that, before very many years, this sort of theater will be the rule, rather than the exception. The motion-picture industry is going forward all the time. The public will probably continue to patronize the legitimate stage, but this business will never stop.

"Our main reason for the move, however, is to insure ourselves against the necessity of running motion pictures that hurt business, because we cannot afford to allow them to remain idle."

The Lubin company producing "The Wonderful Water," George V. Hobart's Ford Flivver comedy with Raymond Hitchcock in the leading role and with Marion Sunshine and others supporting him, has returned from Lakewood, N. J., where for the past two weeks it has been working toward the completion of the picture.

Mary Maurice of Vitagraph

With a world-wide reputation as an actress, Mary Birch Maurice, Vitagraph player, and one of the best loved film stars, also enjoys the distinction of being known as "the mother of motion pictures." She was born on November 15, 1844, in Morristown, Ohio, when that little town was celebrated as a stopping place for the stage-coaches that traveled the National Pike, the highway that made Henry Clay famous.

Mary Maurice.

Nearly fifty years ago, Mary Maurice joined the Pittsburgh (Pa.) stock company and made her first professional appearance in the farce, "My Neighbor's Wife." This was followed by engagements with F. S. Champau in "The Arkansaw Traveler"; John T. Raymond in "There's Millions in It"; a repertoire of Shakesperian characters with John McCullough, Edwin Booth and Lawrence Barrett, and with Joseph Jefferson, appearing as Mene in "Rip Van Winkle," and Tillie Slowboy in "The Cricket on the Hearth."

During the latter part of the summer of 1910, the Vitagraph Company especially engaged Mrs. Maurice to appear in an important picture production entitled, "The Legacy," in which Charles Eldridge was to play opposite. Her varied experience as an actress and her strikingly featural characteristics that reproduced effectively on the film, induced the Vitagraph Company to engage her as a regular stock member. Her second picture was entitled, "His Mother," and it was due principally to the lovable character she portrayed and her wonderful interpretation that earned for her the title "the mother of the movies." Since becoming a regular member of the famous Vitagraph stock company, Mrs. Maurice has been identified with mother parts almost exclusively and has appeared in a host of picture dramas.

Serial Cast in "Clipper" Feature

Lottie Pickford, William Russell and others who contributed their talents in making a success of "The Diamond from the Sky," are now appearing in a series of three-reel productions, released by the American Film Company, Inc., under the brand name "Clipper." The first of the "Clipper" features in which the "Diamond" folk appear is "Curly," a thoroughly enjoyable production dealing with the slums and a pair of social pirates. Immediately after the completion of "The Diamond from the Sky," Miss Pickford, Russell, Eugenie Forde, Charlotte Burton, George Periolat and others of the "Diamond" Company, began work on "Curly" under the direction of Donald MacDonald. The picture is to be released on the Mutual program December 11.

PLAY SELECTED FOR ANNA HELD

Famous Star Arrives at Morosco Studio and Her Initial Screen Subject, Adapted from French Farce, Will Be "Madame La Presidente"

Closely following the arrival of Anna Held in Los Angeles to appear before the motion picture camera at the Oliver Morosco studios, the eastern offices of this Paramount organization announced its acquisition of the screen rights on the international stage success, "Madame La Presidente," in which production the famous star will make her film debut.

On arriving in Los Angeles where she was given a royal reception by representatives of the daily papers, trade journals, and the Morosco Company, the French comedienne appeared a bit upset, due to an accident which befell her private car a half-hour's ride out of Los Angeles, when a huge hook of a freight derrick caught the back of Miss Held's car and damaged it slightly.

Anna Held on her arrival in Los Angeles to enter on engagement with the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company. Anna Held on Bottom step carrying her pet Pekinese, Ting des Tourelles. Back of her, Mme. Liane Carrera. Bottom, at right, Charles Eyton, manager of the Morosco studio; at extreme left, Frank Lloyd, Morosco director under whose supervision Miss Held will do her first picture work. Charles Pike, passenger agent of Salt Lake railroad, assisting Miss Held from the train.

In securing "Madame La Presidente" for Anna Held, Oliver Morosco has obtained a vehicle in which the noted star should prove a big success, as the title character is particularly adapted to her talents. The play, by Maurico Hennequin and Pierre Veber, has proved itself a big international success, having toured the principal Continental cities of Europe including Paris, Berlin, Vienna, and Milan. In this company it was first produced on Broadway at the Garrick theater, where it played to record business for over a year, with Fannie Ward in the title role.

Triangle's Next Hart Picture

William S. Hart, the notable portrayer of western characters will next be seen on the Triangle program in a virile story of the battle fought by two physical and mental giants for the love of a girl, entitled "Between Men." The production has just been completed under the supervision of Producer Thomas H. Ince and will be offered as a Triangle-Kay Bee feature early in December.

"Between Men" is another of the C. Gardner Sullivan scenarios that have figured so prominently since the inception of the Triangle Film Corporation. It is essentially a drama, with here and there a touch of gentle comedy to relieve the tension. It is the tale of a designing broker's machinations to win the hand of a wealthy girl; of his efforts to ruin her father in furtherance of his ends and of his crushing defeat at the hands of a bigger and better man from the west. Elaborate settings combined with the strength of the story and the excellence of the cast are expected to merit the highest praise for the production.

In the cast with Mr. Hart is Enid Markey, the popular screen star who scored such a distinct success with Dustin Farnum in "The Iron Strain," the first Ince release on the Triangle program. Miss Markey, it is said, has even surpassed her performance in the Farnum story by her ingratiating characterization with Hart. House Peters is another screen favorite who has an important role. He plays the other man and is declared to have rendered an admirable performance. J. Barney Sherry, veteran of the Ince forces, is prominently cast as the girl's father, while Bert Wesner and Robert McKim complete the cast.

Play Selected for Nance O'Neil

The management of the Lubin Company announces that the first of the series of photo-plays in which the eminent American emotional actress Nance O'Neil is to appear under the Lubin banner will be an original five-act photo-play, "Souls in Bondage," which is from the pen of Daniel Carson Goodman, author of "Hagar Revelly" and other literary masterpieces, and who is now writing exclusively for the Lubin Company.

Nance O'Neil.

"Souls in Bondage" has been written especially for Miss O'Neil by Mr. Goodman and has been pronounced by her after her reading of the synopsis and script, as the most tensely dramatic subject she has ever attempted, and one from which she is enthusiastically desirous that there be made a dramatic version that she may use it for a vehicle on the speaking stage.

Director Edgar Lewis, who has completed the taking of "The Great Divide," will immediately begin the production of "Souls in Bondage" at the Lubin Philadelphia studios. The cast of the production will be announced later. "Souls in Bondage" will be released during January or February through the V. L. S. E., Inc. offices.

Daniel Carson Goodman's original five-act play "Fate," a tense and powerful story of railroad life, is the vehicle selected by the Lubin management for the next appearance of their star Richard Buhler.

Edith Luckett Signed With Raver

Harry R. Raver, president of the Raver Film Corporation, announces a most important engagement in the person of Edith Luckett who will portray the character of Estelle, the girl of mystery, in the story of "The Other Girl," by Augustus Thomas. And here is a lass who has achieved a most enviable reputation and what is still more she possesses a face that is singularly adaptable to the motion picture camera. New York and other metropolitan centers throughout the United States applauded the clever work of this star when she played the leading role in support of George M. Cohan in his 1912 vehicle, "Broadway Jones." Again the public knows her for her work in support of Chauncey Olcott when she played as his leading lady two successive seasons, first when he presented "Mother Machree" and second when he toured in "The Heart of Paddy Whack."

Edith Luckett.

Edith Luckett has been theatrically bent from youth. In the Capitol when but five years old she frequented the Columbia Theater near which her family resided until she became personally acquainted with every mmber of the house staff. One week, during the course of a benefit performance, she implored the opportunity of doing one of the simple dances her mother had taught her.

Director of Raver productions, Percy Winter, is most enthusiastic over Miss Luckett's future and joins many critics throughout the country in agreeing that a great reputation is in store for her.

Constructing Essanay's new studio, 350x175 feet, said to be the largest indoor artificially lighted studio in the world.

Billie Burke a Film Fan

Miss Billie Burke is devoting a considerable part of her time to studying the obverse side of the picture game to the one she saw while making "Peggy" at the Triangle-Ince studio. She is often to be seen at the Knickerbocker theater, in New York, looking at the excellent films supervised by Ince, Griffith or Sennett and noting the modes of appreciation and the relative popularity of the respective stars and plays. In fact Miss Burke is rapidly getting the film eye and will soon be an unequalled authority on the public as well as the theatrical side of photographic appreciation.

The extraordinary success of the star in her last two seasons of generic plays, dealing with provincial character types and locales, have lent extraordinary interest to Miss Burke's vehicle in filmland entitled "Peggy." Advance reports from the coast say it is as striking a depiction of Scottish character and temperament as was "Peg O' My Heart" for the Irish and middle class English types; "Hobson's Choice" for Lancashire and "Quinneys" for the Yorkshireman. Miss Burke, as is well known, is part Scottish by ancestry. She said the other day at the Knickerbocker that filming

Billie Burke in scene from her forthcoming Triangle release "Peggy."

"Peggy" was a sheer delight, so beautifully were the scenes adjusted to the Scottish Highlands and so faithfully had the characteristic Highland atmosphere been preserved. Another factor of great importance was the appearance of the sterling character actor William H. Thompson, in one of the important roles in her support. Lastly, Mr. Ince's production of everything, regardless of expense, was extremely pleasing and should result in giving the highest artistic form of entertainment in the way of domestic drama that the motion pictures have thus far been able to offer.

New Kleine Manager at Kansas City

W. O. Edmunds, formerly manager of George Kleine's Los Angeles office, has been sent to Kansas City where he will assume management of the Kleine branch in that city. Mr. Edmunds is one of the oldest known film salesmen in the business. He has been associated with Mr. Kleine more or less since 1908, at which time he was manager of the Kleine office at Winnipeg, Canada.

Freuler's "Service Beyond the Films"

MUTUAL PRESIDENT'S BIG PLAN

THE Mutual Film Corporation, in execution of President Freuler's policy of "service beyond the films," has launched a $300,000 advertising campaign to help the exhibitors.

The media of this campaign are the trade papers of the industry, the newspapers and the billboards.

This step is a part of the new Mutual policy which found its first expression in Mr. Freuler's announcement of the $8,000,000 program. The story of this program, with its big array of Broadway stars and box office features, in the regular program at no extra rental charge to the exhibitor, has been told to the exhibitor. Now an effort is being made to tell it to the whole public.

From rim to rim of the continent the billboards are proclaiming the merits of the Mutual program. Every week's trade papers are filled with the news of the Mutual's announcements and releases. The daily newspapers of the great cities across the country are carrying big quarter-page ads in series, telling about the program and its stars.

From far-away Seattle to the much-touted bright lights of Broadway the faces of Crane Wilbur, Harold Lockwood, Arthur Acord, Gladys Hulette, Florence La-Badie, Mae Allison, Anna Little, Francine Larrimore, Tempest and Sunshine, W. C. Fields, George Sidney, George Ovey, Grace Valentine, Audrey Munsen, Richard Bennett, Adrienne Morrison, Frederick Warde, and all the great army of Mutual stars of screen and stageland, smile down at the passing throngs. You see them on the boards in New Orleans and they face you at every turn in Chicago. They are everywhere. Mutual's message of all-star, all-feature quality is being told to the whole nation.

Back of this program of advertising is President Freuler's basic idea of "service" to the exhibitors, a "service beyond the films," as he has styled it. It means the establishment of a certain merchandising idea in the motion picture business, and it offers a particular opportunity to the exhibitor.

"The product has been made particularly worth advertising, worth telling the people about. The Mutual Film Corporation has set out to tell them. But the people must see the pictures in the exhibitor's theater," said President Freuler.

"It remains for the exhibitor to tie up his house with this great campaign, by his own individual advertising letting the people know that his house has Mutual pictures and that they may be seen there regularly.

"The principle is as simple as the selling of standard brand clothes, or one of the well known 57 varieties of pickles. Probably everybody in the United States has heard of Heinz pickles, and it is not of record that any grocer who advertised them lost money on them.

"It will be recalled that my earliest announcement was the $8,000,000 Mutual program—a vast expenditure represented by the year's contracts for films on the Mutual program.

"Then along came the Mutual's announcement of extensions of its service to exhibitors requiring an increase in the number of branch offices, with a total today of 68 in the United States and Canada. Along with this development of the 'service beyond the films' came effective reorganization of the Mutual's advertising and publicity departments, readjustments calculated to give the public and the exhibitor more direct attention, more of the news of the Mutual's wares and its business. Out of this conception of 'service beyond the films' has grown a system of advertising helps for exhibitors, special press sheets and bulletins carrying suggestions for the exploitation by the exhibitor of every reel on the program and every Master-Picture. Along with this has come the rehabilitation of Reel Life, the Mutual's magazine, a service publication to the exhibitors, a publication concerned only with the messages of the Mutual Film Corporation and the welfare of Mutual exhibitors.

"The whole advertising policy has been shaped about the big words 'Mutual Program.' Those words catch the eye across the top of every poster, every announcement, every ad, every scrap or bit of Mutual publicity. The Mutual poster department has had a re-birth, with vast improvements in the quality and power of the paper, from one sheets to twenty-fours—all to hammer in that sense of quality conveyed by the words 'Mutual Program.'

"The development of a new period in exhibitor advertising is at hand, and the Mutual's new advertising campaign is pointing the way. It used to be sufficient for the exhibitor to get his film, a few one sheets and price sign. He put up the posters in his lobby, hung up the price sign and turned on the pictures. Anybody who came by might find out what was going to the screen by looking over the lobby, or more surely by going inside.

"Now the aggressive, successful exhibitors are reaching out to carry their message beyond the confines of the theater and its lobby. If a lobby display is worth while, why not have a whole flock of lobbies, by means of the billboards? If a house program is worth while, why not let everybody read it, just as well as the patrons into whose hands it is casually dropped? The advertising columns of the newspapers circulated in the exhibitor's territory make it easy.

"The Mutual Film Corporation is putting in the exhibitor's hands all that is necessary to do this with, except the initiative, which he must supply for himself. The posters are waiting for him at his exchange, ready to be taken away and put on the boards about his house. The ad and press sheets for the program and Master-Pictures are his for the asking, filled with tips for the preparation of his advertising copy for the papers and with press matter for his publicity purposes. All the exhibitor has to do is to take what is offered to him and to use his own intelligence to gain all the value of this 'service beyond the films.'

"There are heralds, and posters, and lobby photos, and window cards galore. They are going out in million lots, but there ought to be demands for millions more. When the exhibitors really wake up to the big advertising value offered and the aids that are being given for the advertising of his house and his show, he will find it reflected in his receipts.

"When the exhibitor rents Mutual films he is getting something more than films. He is getting a share of the good name, a share of the trade-mark value of the Mutual product. If he is a wise exhibitor he will not be content with knowing this himself. He will tell all his patrons about it. He will see that it gets into his newspapers, on the billboards about his house, that it in his lobby display. He can have just reason to be proud to connect the name of his house with the words 'Mutual Program.'

"Everybody but the blind are reached by the Mutual's message of good pictures, and we expect that even they will hear about them."

Belle Bennett Signed with Horsley

Miss Belle Bennett, known for her beauty and her accomplishments as an actress, has been engaged by David Horsley to play important roles in the support of George Ovey in the Cub Comedies which he is releasing on the Mutual program. Miss Bennett is the daughter of Billy Bennett, known throughout the country through having traveled at the head of his own theatrical organization for many years. She has been on the stage since childhood, her first public appearance having been made at the age of three in a play put on by her father. Except for school days Miss Bennett has been on the stage ever since.

Belle Bennett.

Her debut in motion pictures was made with the Lubin company in "The Handicap" which, besides being her first appearance, came nearly being her last. In a scene taken at the Juarez, Mexico, race track, Miss Bennett was mounted upon a prancing thoroughbred over which she lost control and was heavily thrown. The following month was spent in a hospital.

In 1912 she went with the Universal, remaining there for a year, after which she joined her father's company before going to the Majestic Film Company, with whom she was engaged until recently.

Increased Capital and Studio

The Barker-Swan Film Service, of Chicago, has increased its capital stock to $250,000. Edwin L. Barker is president; P. W. Swan, treasurer; A. H. Shields, secretary. A new studio is in course of construction at Peoria, Illinois, after plans prepared by Architect W. T. Braun, and after January first the general offices will be located there, although the Chicago office will be continued.

The Barker-Swan Film Service is associated with many of the most influential people and institutions in the country. It is producing a distinct class of pictures —entertaining, inspirational, educational—in many respects different from any pictures yet seen. This company will not begin releasing its pictures until late next spring.

SCREEN INVENTOR HONORED

E. R. Anderson, Manufacturer of Radium Gold Fibre Screen, Banqueted on Ninth Anniversary of His Success

The ninth anniversary of the first Gold Fibre screen was celebrated on the evening of November 11, by a banquet tendered to E. R. Anderson, the inventor, by George B. Logan, president of the Minusa Cine Products Company, at his country home in St. Louis county. The guests at the banquet were the officers, directors, and stockholders of the Minusa Cine Products Company.

It had been just nine years to the day and almost to the hour of sitting down to the table since the first Gold Fibre projection screen was made by Mr. Anderson in San Francisco, Calif. The evening also very happily celebrated the ninth month of the existence of the Minusa Cine Products Company, it having been February 11, 1915, that this company began operations.

W. S. Serven, one of the speakers of the evening, described this nine month period as "A period of gestation of wonderful productiveness," since the company has made unprecedented success in this brief time. The lion's share of the credit for this achievement was easily awarded to Mr. Anderson by all the speakers. Anderson has been exclusively in the screen business since the inventing of the first Gold Fibre, having been in recent years, with the American Theater Curtain & Supply Co., later with Atsco, Inc., and after the failure of that company, organized the Minusa Cine Products Company.

A loving cup, the gift of F. W. Drosten, the famous jeweler of St. Louis and director of the Minusa Cine Products Company, was presented to Mr. Anderson in a clever speech by Nat I. Brown, sales-manager of the company. The only engraving on the cup was the words, "Built by Brains." An interesting feature of the banquet was that instead of using the ordinary white table cloth, the banquet board was covered by an old Gold Fibre screen, such as Anderson originally made in California.

When the first course was removed, this screen was also removed and underneath was disclosed a Gold Fibre such as was made while Anderson was with Atsco, Inc. This was easily seen to be a better screen, but when the final course had been served, this latter screen was taken off and the guests shown one of Anderson's latest improved Minusa Gold Fibre screens, with the words "Built by Brains" emblazoned across the center. This demonstration brought home, even to the officers of the company, more forcibly than they had ever realized before the vast improvement that has been made by Anderson in his Gold Fibre screen. Mr. Anderson responded to his honors of the evening in an interesting talk in which he described to the stockholders the laboratory tests he was conducting for the improvement of the screen and predicted great progress for the company in the next nine months' growing period.

Mae Marsh, who recently returned to the Fine Arts California studio after a brief absence, has resumed rehearsing her part in a Triangle drama. Miss Marsh, while rehearsing this same part about six weeks ago, was taken suddenly ill and she was then compelled to stop work and seek a change of climate.

Ince Already Needs More Room

NEGOTIATING FOR BIG TRACT

THAT he is negotiating for the acquisition of thirty-one additional acres, immediately adjoining the twelve-acre tract at Culver City, on which he is building a new quarter-million dollar studio, was the announcement made this week by Director-General Thomas H. Ince of the New York Motion Picture Corporation. The step has been necessitated, according to Ince, by the fact that the twelve-acre site will be inadequate for the erection of the plant he claims to require for the production of forthcoming Triangle-Kay Bee features. If the deal is consummated, Ince will appropriate the thirty-one acres to the construction of more stages, dressing rooms, property quarters and offices, yet will leave sufficient space unoccupied to permit of the building of any great street settings or exteriors of large structures.

Work on the construction of the buildings at the Culver City plant has progressed so rapidly to date that it was announced this week the new workshop will be in full operation before the middle of December. Not even do the building activities cease with nightfall. A corps of men is constantly at work, during the dark hours, under the glare of several hundred immense arc lights. The heavy iron framework of most of the buildings has virtually been completed, so that now all that remains to be done is the erection of the walls.

An interesting fact in connection with the structural work is that a half-ton of white lead is being used in each of the stages. This is being placed in all apertures between timbers, in order that warping may be made impossible.

Plans for the dedicatory exercises to mark the formal opening of the new plant were discussed for the first time this week by Producer Ince with the members of the Culver City Chamber of Commerce. It is likely, if the tentative plans do not go awry, that the ceremonies will be in the nature of a grand ball, either on one of the outdoor stages or within the proposed glass-inclosed studio. This if held, will take place either on New Year's eve or New Year's night and the entire west colony, together with representative citizens of Los Angeles and outlying towns, will be invited to attend. In the brilliance of a myriad lights, the guests will alternate between dancing and inspecting the brand new buildings of the plant.

Producer Thomas H. Ince staging the big stock exchange scene which was one of the first taken at the new Culver City studios.

WORSE THAN CENSORSHIP

City Council of Georgia Village Arbitrarily Fixes Admission Prices of Local Theaters at Ten Cent Maximum

Perhaps one of the most unique incidents of municipal regulation of moving picture interests, is that which has been brought to light by W. C. Brandon, Atlanta branch manager of V. L. S. E., Inc., at West Point, Ga. The city government of that community has fixed by ordinance the maximum admission which an exhibitor of motion pictures may charge.

This maximum is ten cents, and in the event that the exhibitor insists that he cannot show a picture for that price, and he can prove to the city authorities that it has such exceptional merit as to warrant him charging more, he is required to pay the city a sum of $50 for the privilege.

It is said that this ordinance was introduced because, up until a short time ago, there had never been any competition in the city and the sole exhibitor in the place abused his position by charging the public twenty-five cents for inferior productions.

This caused such a storm of criticism, and so vitally affected the pleasure of the community's inhabitants, that the city council passed an ordinance forbidding such admissions except under the circumstances noted.

Ouida Bergere to Adapt Woods Plays

Closely following the announcement that Pathe had secured the picture rights to the A. H. Woods productions, comes the announcement that Ouida Bergere has been selected from among the scenario writers of the United States for the important work of adapting them for the screen and also to select the casts for them.

There is probably no other author better fitted for this task than Miss Bergere, for she is one of the few scenario writers who has made a study of her craft from every angle. Realizing, a few years ago, the wonderful opportunities in the field, and also realizing the necessity of a thorough training, she left the legitimate stage, where she had made an enviable reputation with some of our greatest stars, and, at a great sacrifice, entered the scenario department of Pathe. In two years she had been in every department, scenario editor, leading woman, film editor and even in the property department.

With this training, she entered the field as a free-lance writer and her success was immediate. Such firms as Famous Players, Vitagraph and Pathe, gave her orders for scenarios. Later the idea occurred to her that many directors would be glad to have someone who was competent select their casts for them. This idea also was an instantaneous success and up to date Miss Bergere is said to have been responsible for the screen debut of more Broadway stars than any one in the business. Among the more prominent ones for whom it is understood Miss Bergere secured engagements may be mentioned: Edith Wynne Mathison, Robert Edeson, Florence Reed, Clifton Crawford, Rita Jolivet, Emmy Wehlen, Howard Estabrook, Gail Kane, Olive Wyndham, Margaret Greene, Fania Marinoff, Charles Waldron, C. De Witt Jennings, Frank Sheridan, Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, Grace Valentine, Calvin Thomas, George Leguere, Ann Sutherland, Beth Franklyn, Susan Willa, Lillian Tucker, Madeline Waver and Julia Rolf.

STELLA HAMMERSTEIN TO STAR

Talented Actress, Daughter of the Noted Oscar, Goes South to Play Leading Role in "The Ace of Death"

Again the Gaumont policy of having a new star in each of its Rialto star feature releases scores in the booking of Miss Stella Hammerstein by that company to play the leading role in "The Ace of Death." This will be released on the Mutual's new $8,000,000 program. The story is from the pen of O. A. Nelson, and is being produced at the Jacksonville studio by William F. Haddock. Miss Hammerstein comes honestly by her talent, being the daughter of Oscar Hammerstein, the impresario, who has at least seven distinct sides to his versatile nature. He has done everything from inventing cigar-making machinery to building opera houses in New York and London. His daughter confines her versatility to the stage and screen, where her range seems apparently unlimited, since she has appeared with equal success in light opera and such modern classics as Hauptmann's "Lonely Lives." Miss Hammerstein was in London when she began her theatrical career. From America she received a cable message from her father telling her to sail for home. With Hammerstein determination, she cabled, "I won't." Notwithstanding he was a doting parent, Papa Oscar stopped the young lady's allowance to bring her to time. Instead, it brought her to the stage. Having no funds, and not wishing to return to America, she applied to Frank Curzon for a position in the chorus of one of his musical productions. She secured it, and in musical comedy she remained until her father relented.

Stella Hammerstein.

In America Miss Hammerstein has appeared in "Everywoman" as "Vice," in "Lonely Lives" as "Anna Mahr," and in the leading role of the remarkable vaudeville production of "The Tyranny of Fate." In "The Ace of Death" Miss Hammerstein has the role of a mother whose child has been stolen from her by a woman who loves her husband. The husband disappears. In time the bereft wife and mother opens two gambling houses in Central America. The thrilling scenes are those in which the daughter comes to the house to win or lose on the turn of a card.

Clara Kimball Young as "Camille"

"In the motion picture field," said Lewis J. Selznick, vice-president and general manager of the World Film Corporation, "surprises come so thick and fast that after a time they cease to surprise. But I am free to say I have been very much astonished by the responses from all parts of the country to the announcement that we were at work upon a modern version of "Camille," with Clara Kimball Young as the immortal heroine created by Alexandre Dumas.

"Reports from our exchanges all over the country indicate by far the greatest advance demand we have ever encountered, foretelling a genuinely sensational success for this play. This is the more gratifying for the reason that when 'Camille' first began to be talked of for a subject it met with considerable opposition on the ground that it was not a new story.

"We now find that in the screen drama the same as upon the speaking stage acting is a comparative art. Our correspondence shows that a great section of the public is filled with the desire to see Miss Young's impersonation with the idea of observing where and how it differs from those of Bernhardt, Modjeska and the other great stars of the 'regular' theater who have been famous in this role.

"Of course, the eagerness with which 'Camille' is awaited will not have the effect of lessening our efforts to supply a constant succession of new and effective material. This quest goes on with ceaseless activity. It is only once in a great while that we can find a stage classic which provides so interesting a vehicle as this play of the younger Dumas—and by the same token, where should one look for another Clara Kimball Young to act as the heartbroken heroine?"

Maclyn Arbuckle's Next One

Closely following its initial release on the Paramount program, "The Gentleman From Indiana," by Booth Tarkington, starring Dustin Farnum, Pallas Pictures announces as its second release, "The Reform Candidate," written by Maclyn Arbuckle and Edgar A. Guest, and starring the former.

"The Reform Candidate" is a screen version of Mr. Arbuckle's former stage success of the same name and presents a sparkling comedy of human interest such as the popular Maclyn has made famous on both the stage and screen.

Supporting the star in this play are such popular film and stage players as Myrtle Stedman, Forrest Stanley, Charles Ruggles, Howard Davies and others of equal ability. Under the direction of Frank Lloyd, the play has been given effective backgrounds and, judging from this producer's work in "The Gentleman From Indiana," a realistically staged film may be expected. The camera work has been entrusted to the expert care of Fred Dobson.

"The Red Circle" Pathe's Next Serial

WILL FEATURE RUTH ROLAND

ANNOUNCEMENT comes from the Pathe offices to the effect that "Who's Guilty?", the series originally scheduled for release on December 11, has been temporarily withdrawn and "The Red Circle," a strong romantic serial produced by Balboa in fourteen two part episodes, put on the program in its place for release by Pathe some time during January and is now practically completed.

Ruth Roland.

The idea of "The Red Circle" is original with H. M. Horkheimer and Will M. Ritchey, who wrote the scenarios. It represents the cumulative effort of some nine months and is based upon the idea that the instincts of heredity, however strong, can be overcome by environment and proper education. The working out of the theory has been done scientifically with each step authenticated by the best authorities. In the story Ruth Roland, one of the most popular of the photoplay stars, plays the part of a young girl who inherits criminal tendencies, which, however, are modified by the superior character of the environment in which she is brought up. "The Red Circle" is a peculiar birth mark which is a characteristic of her family, and which comes and goes according as her thoughts are normal or abnormal. Frank Mayo plays the part of the lover who is trying to discover the identity of the mysterious criminal. With such a story the opportunities afforded the director are many, and Sherwood McDonald, who is producing the picture, has very evidently recognized them, as his work shows.

Ruth Roland has been on the stage for thirteen years, and yet is only twenty-two. Few of the screen favorites of the day can point to a record like that. She made her debut at the age of four as "Baby Ruth" on the Pacific Coast, and was regarded as a phenomenon. When she was playing "Little Lord Fauntleroy" at the age of six, in San Francisco, she attracted the attention of David Belasco, who did not hesitate to say that she was the best child actress he had ever seen. She continued on the stage until she was eleven, when she was sent to a private school, remaining there until she was sixteen. Her success as an ingenue was even greater than as a child. Her versatility was such that she played comedy or drama with equal ease. Four years ago she was "discovered" by a Kalem director, who engaged her to appear in Western and Indian plays. Later she was put into comedies and was highly successful.

Last December she received the offer of a year's contract with Balboa at a flattering salary, to star in the "Who Pays?" series, about to be made for Pathe, and accepted. In this series she found a fitting vehicle for her art, and her work received universal praise. Gifted with a particularly expressive and mobile face, it is very easy for her to convey her thought by her facial expression.

H. M. Horkheimer.

Frank Mayo, who supports Miss Roland, though not so well known as she, comes of a famous theatrical family, his grandfather being Frank Mayo, the celebrated English actor. His work has been uniformly good in Balboa productions, and is constantly getting better. This serial represents his first big chance and he has made the most of it.

Messrs. Horkheimer and Ritchey, the authors of "The Red Circle," collaborated on the Pathe series, "Who Pays?" which will be remembered as one of the big successes of the current year.

Albert Payson Terhune, who has written the stories for the many newspapers who have arranged for the publication rights, is one of the best known newspaper men in the country, having been connected with the New York World for a number of years. He was born in Newark, N. J., December 21, 1872, and is the son of Marion Harland, one of the most celebrated women authors in the country. He graduated from Columbia in 1893, and then spent a number of years in travel in Europe, Asia and Africa. He is author of the novels, "The Fighter," "Caleb Conover," and the book of travel, "Syria From the Saddle." He also collaborated with his mother on "Dr. Dale," the first instance in which a son has collaborated with his mother. He also novelized the play, "The Return of Peter Grim." Mr. Terhune is a giant in stature, and as an amateur boxer has fought with Corbett, Fitzsimmons and Jeffries, and incidentally won their unstinted praise through his prowess. He is a member of the board of the governors of the Adventurers' Club, and is also a member of both the Explorers' and Authors' Clubs.

Will Book Premier Program

Eugene Marcus and Lewis Newman of the Eastern Booking Office, Philadelphia, Pa., while in New York this week were seen at the offices of the Premier Program. The Eastern Booking Offices, Inc., will handle the Premier Program in its territory, and expressed entire satisfaction with the deal just closed.

Eugene Marcus said, "There is an excellent field for the activities of the Premier Program. We exchangemen, who come into direct contact with the exhibitor, fully appreciate his crying need for more moderate feature rentals, provided always that the reduction in price does not mean a let down in the merit of the picture.

"Today the motion picture business is sharply competitive, and many towns that even last year had only one theater today have two or more. Allowing for the normal increase in theater attendance, which cannot exceed fifty per cent in the course of one year, the fact still remains that with an even distribution of patronage each theater can only legitimately expect seventy-five per cent of the attendance of the previous year when it had the entire field to itself.

"In making the above assertion, I am only dealing in generalities. Some theaters are more ably conducted than others, and the picture itself is, of course, of prime importance. We believe, of course, in Premier pictures, and are backing this belief with actual cash, and in the business world I have been unable to find anything more convincing.

"Many people make the assertion that motion pictures have reached the climax of their ability to interest the public and, therefore, to produce profits; but I know that such is not the case. The profits may be smaller than heretofore, but a more careful proportioning of income to expense, and a more just expenditure of the actual cash necessary for the conduct of the business can only mean increased prosperity for the exhibitor and through him the entire industry."

WINTER WORK FLOURISHING

General Manager Bradford Returns From Gaumont's Jacksonville, Florida, Studios with Interesting Account of the Rialto Feature Productions

Interesting accounts of the work done by the Rialto star feature companies at Jacksonville, Fla., where the Gaumont winter studios are located, have been brought back to New York by F. G. Bradford, general manager of the Gaumont Company. Mr. Bradford spent ten days at Jacksonville. In addition to watching the work of the companies which are making photodramas for release on the Mutual program, he planned and contracted for a number of improvements which indicate that the Gaumont Company will be located, during the winter, at Jacksonville for at least several years to come.

"Conditions at Jacksonville are ideal for the work we have undertaken to do on the Mutual's new $8,000,000 program," said Mr. Bradford in speaking of his southern trip. "Although I arrived only a few days after our players had started to work, I found that the pictures were well under way. The work of preparation had been so thorough that all the directors had to do when they reached their studios was to start, with no more effort in getting their pictures under way than they experienced at our Flushing studios.

"Particularly interesting were the pictures being filmed under the direction of Richard Garrick and William F. Haddock. They offer such a contrast that together they serve as an excellent example of the variety one finds in Rialto star features. Mr. Garrick was directing 'Lessons in Love,' a multiple-reel light comedy well adapted to display the talent of its star, Hal Forde. Mr. Haddock's company, with Robert T. Haines as star, was busy at the same time with 'The Secret Agent,' a photodrama of stirring continuity by the well known author, Arthur Stringer.

"The policy of the Gaumont company in having a new star in each production of its Rialto star features has met with the most cordial reception on the part of the exhibitors. While at Jacksonville—to show you how we are living up to our policy—I found at our studios, in addition to Mr. Forde and Mr. Haines, Miss Stella Hammerstein, daughter of Oscar Hammerstein, and Malcolm Williams. Here are a quartet of artists of stellar calibre that unmistakably put the Broadway stamp upon the productions in which they are to be featured.

Richard Garrick, director of Rialto Star Features, and his assistant, Allan Robinson.

"Jacksonville has been most hospitable in its reception of the Gaumont players, and you may be sure that our companies are extremely happy to find themselves amid such congenial surroundings. They are planning trips later in the season to Palm Beach, Miami and Fort Myers. Already one company has been to St. Augustine. The social life of this wonderful winter land will be adequately reflected in forthcoming releases."

Davis Stages His First Centaur Picture

Ulysses Davis, the director signed recently by David Horsley, has finished staging his first Centaur feature. It is to be called "The Arab's Vengeance" and is scheduled for release on the Mutual program December 16. The story, written by Miss Theodosia Harris, of Mr. Horsley's scenario staff, is laid in Arabia and has to do with an Arab's thirst for revenge for fancied wrongs inflicted. It is an absorbing drama with the added effect of some vivid scenes of the desert country.

Margaret Gibson heads the cast, assisted by Roy Watson, John Oaker, Thomas Morrissey, David Allan, B. Singh and others. A contingent of the Bostock animals also appear in scenes that are spectacular and novel.

Arthur A. Housman, formerly of the Edison company, has joined the staff of Lubin Players and will make his first appearance under the Lubin banner with Director Jack Pratt in a prominent role in Daniel Carson Goodman's big railroad story "Fate."

Pathe's Scenario Editor

A young-looking man leaned on the counter in a pawnshop while the pawnbroker appraisingly looked over the garments. "I'll give you seventy-five cents on the suit," said the pawnbroker. George Brackett Seitz took it and hurried home to his apartments in romantic and literary Washington Square, where he lived with three or four other artistic gentlemen who ate once in a while. On the seventy-five cents he gave a sumptuous dinner. That was five years ago. Now Seitz is cleaning up between thirty and forty thousand dollars a year as scenario director at the Pathe Exchange. He is twenty-seven years old, has one wife and one child and lives with both of them. The experience which equipped him for this responsible position was varied and sometimes painful. His was the way of all beginners—now you pay the rent and now you don't. He was just as familiar with rejection slips as the various street car conductors, longshoremen and boiler makers, who spend their evenings in writing pictureplays. However, he kept at it. They grew better and better and sold with more frequency—and finally Madame Prosperity took him as her own.

George Brackett Seitz.

He has been with Pathe for four years. His successes are many. "The Exploits of Elaine," which he wrote, netted one million dollars profit to the company. Its predecessor "The Perils of Pauline," was equally remunerative. Some of his original stories are now appearing on the Gold Rooster Five Reel Program. They include "The Spender," "The Last Volunteer," and "The Nihilist." Mr. Seitz also adapted "Nedra," "The Closing Net," "The Beloved Vagabond," "The Galloper," and is now engaged on Kipling's "The Light That Failed." He is also responsible for "The New Adventures of J. Rufus Wallingford," now abroad in the land.

Mr. Seitz has an intimate knowledge of the theater from his experience as an actor—in Boston with the John Craig stock company and as stage manager and actor in "The Awakening of Helena Ritchie," on the road. He has written numerous vaudeville acts and stage plays, among which was "The King's Game," in which James K. Hackett starred for two years. Previous to his stage and literary career, Seitz studied painting for three years and worked for one year as an illustrator.

The Pathe style of scenario is one of the most severe and exacting in the business. It is Pathe principle and custom to write scenarios that give full and technical instructions to directors and camera-man. When a scenario is handed to a director, the understanding is that he is to put it on as per scenario. To do this is his contract. He is not permitted to change it. This necessarily implies that scenarios must be very carefully done. Action, suspense, continuity, logic and heart interest are the big ingredients in Seitz's pot. Out of these, he stews stories that are stories—photoplays that first and last are entertainment.

V. L. S. E. OUTPUT INCREASED

Beginning With the First of the Year Eight Productions Per Month Will Be Offered by "Big Four" Manufacturers

Beginning with the first of the year, the V. L. S. E.'s program will include at least eight strong productions a month. Vitagraph will supply four of these; Essanay two, and Lubin and Selig one more each.

The program of this organization up to the first of the year was anounced a few weeks ago, and showed that the "Big Four" was "hitting its stride" in great shape. Those who have seen some of the releases scheduled for after the first of the year, say that they excel in their drawing qualities, even the high standard set by the V. L. S. E.'s present releases.

They include a production which will equal or surpass the attention that has been given "The Battle Cry of Peace," a picturization of one of Rex Beach's strongest novels; a beautiful story featuring the alluring Fritzi Brunette and dealing with the transformation of a stenographer into a woman of the world, who, lured by the love of gold, ruins two men's lives; a strong drama with Nance O'Neil under the direction of Edgar Lewis, and the film version of what has for years, without question, been the premier international dramatic success, with the original star, whose name is being withheld for the present, by reason of her social prominence.

Each of the individual companies of the V. L. S. E. has adopted a standard which, when it reaches the plane set for it, will undoubtedly give to this organization a high general average of merit.

Gaumont Asks for Feature Scripts

That the field of possible sales of feature motion picture scenarios is widening every day, especially for trained writers, is evidenced by the most recent announcement from the Gaumont Company of Flushing, N. Y., of which George D. Proctor is the scenario editor.

From now on the Gaumont Company will want scenarios for five-reel feature dramas. Scenarios are especially desired from trained writers. The first requisite is that the scenarios constitute a drama with several dramatic situations. Bigness of theme is also an essential. Spectacular elements are not to be avoided, although it is to be remembered that an automobile accident does not constitute a story.

Novelty of theme and treatment will often prove a deciding factor in the acceptance or rejection of a story. For that reason full scenarios are requested from experitnced writers. However, synopses will be considered from those inexpert in motion picture technique. As the Gaumont Company produces only high class features, scenario writers are requested by that concern to submit only scripts of which the writers themselves feel proud.

Scene at the conclusion of the Grand March at the Screen Club Ball held on Saturday night, November 20, at the Hotel Astor, New York City.

Fourth Screen Club Ball Huge Success

HOTEL ASTOR THE SCENE

THE fourth annual ball of the Screen Club proved one of the most brilliant affairs in the history of the Hotel Astor, and by far the most successful and pleasurable event yet given by that aggregation of film folks. It was held on Saturday night, November 20 (and Sunday morning), in the Astor Gold Room. Dancing, of course, was the chief pastime, but many of the people seated around the floor and in the balcony found the occasion more than pleasing, just as a good old "get-together,"

On either side of the curtained entrance to the ballroom proper a girl and boy of the Colonial period handed out programs and rolls of serious-looking parchment; the latter being a dignified admonition to cast by the wayside care and its funereal fellows, and to catch the gay spirit of the evening and make merry with the screeners and their friends.

The signatures of the officers, Billy Quirk, Harry Myers, Adam Kessel, Robert Edeson, John N. Rice, Robert E. Welsh and Harry Ennis, backed up in their command by those of the members of the board of governors, King Baggot, J. H. Gerhardt, Frank Powell, Jule Bernstein, C. A. Willat, George DeCarlton, Hopp Hadley and Arthur Leslie sternly testified to the fact that the aforementioned plan of gaiety was to be the order of the evening and formidably intimated that shoptalk and grouch were abstract qualities which were to become instantly negative. And their wishes were obeyed to the letter. Merriment and more of it encored every dance and was found in the conversations of the groups looking on.

Girls emerged from the elevators triumphantly sporting little glass doo-dads (real mission one of life's mysteries), but guessed by their escorts to be meant for anything from salt shakers to silver-capped torpedoes of unknown origin, and chemists' tubes. Even some of the proud sporters christened them at random, but the majority of the girls said that they were for smelling salts, so that's what they were for. All agreed that they were the cunningest things and that the "S. C." inscription looked so cute—and as a result every man at the ball carried in his pocket a smelling salts vial, of which he was promptly divested later.

Clara Kimball Young and Billy Quirk, president of the Screen Club, led the grand march and a majority of a possible attendance of two thousand followed in their wake until a human and entwined "S. C." were formed, when a flashlight was taken. When daylight threatened to break, those who were left at the ball joined those who had gone before at breakfast at the Screen Club.

Box number one was the stronghold of the club officers. The holder of box number two was the New York Motion Picture Company; three, Thomas Wiley and Ben Goetz; four, Ed Carewe; five, George Terwilliger; six, Frank Powell; seven, Hugh Hoffman and Anthony Kelly; eight, Nicholas Power; nine Harry Myers and Louis Hall; ten, James Kirkwood; eleven, Gaumont and Thanhouser; twelve, William Farnum; fourteen, Tom Terriss; fifteen, Edison; sixteen, Billy Quirk; seventeen, William Fox; eighteen, Pathe; nineteen, J. C. Graham; twenty, Pathe; twenty-one, Marshall Farnum and Edward Roskam; twenty-two, Famous Players; twenty-three, Vitagraph; twenty-four, S. G. Poppa; twenty-five, Peerless; twenty-six, King Baggot and Ben Wilson; twenty-seven, Metro; twenty-eight, Solax; twenty-nine, Metro; thirty, H. A. Raver; thirty-one, Press; thirty-two, Lubin; thirtythree, P. A. Powers; thirty-four, World Film; thirty-five, Equitable; thirty-six, Clara Kimball Young; thirty-seven, Lewis J. Selznick.

Amongst the many present were: King Baggot, J. Frank Glendon, Arthur Donaldson, Iva Shepard, Dan Mason, Jack Ridgway, Devore Parmer, Joe Baker, Bert Angeles, Charles H. Greene, Ferdinand Singhi, Mr. and Mrs. Ferd Singhi, Franklin Hanna, J. H. Gerhardt, Paul McAllister, Mr. and Mrs. McGill, Mr. and Mrs. Roberto Crippa, Miss Rogers, Percey Winter, Paul Panzer, Mr. and Mrs. Cameron Smith, Ralph Kavarro, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Paul H. Cromelin, Paul Gilmore, C. J. Giegerich and wife, Royal Byron, Pauline Saxon, Creighton Hale, Roland G. Reed, Marie Conroy, Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Gaeling, Miss Genieva Tracy, Mr. and Mrs. William McKenna, Harris Gordon, Augustus Phillips, H. S. Levine, Harris Gordon Harry Beaumont, E. H. Lauman, Miss Rene Hubert, Miss Pauline Curley, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lang, Mr. and Mrs. Ashley Miller, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Mulligan, Oscar Weir, H. Walters, Mr. and Mrs. Tracy, Miss Tracy, Mrs. De Long, Howard Crampton, Hugh Hoffman, Will S. Davis, Arthur Vaughan, Tom Hoier, Helen Vincent, Betty Holton, H. C. Stewart, Miss Adelaide Thurston, Miss Nan Stevens, Mrs. Martin, J. Albert Hall, Mrs. Hurley, Maude Feeley, Mr. and Mrs. Billy Quirk, James Durkin, Howard Crampton, Dallas Fitzgerald, George Blaisdell, William F. Aldrach, Mrs. Shaw, J. A. Tapee, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Phillips, Martin Keene, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hoffman, George DeCarlton, and Marie Pavin, Robert Conness, Dorothy Bernard, Mrs. Lubin, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Marcus, H. F. Barroto, E. M. Goldie, Mrs. D. Lowry, Edna M. Ellaby, Joshua Lowe, E. J. Rosenthal, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Reichenbach, Mrs. Harry Allen, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Aronson, Harry Spingler, Mrs. F. B. Wilson, Miss Vida Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Schlosser, Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Cook, Will H. Tooker, Webster Cullinson, Lucy Villa, John E. Ince, Ethel Browning, Ashley Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Gaston Bell, Mrs. Giula Johnson, Hugh D'Arcy, Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Burger, B. F. Lyon, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Levering, Julian M. Soloman, Jr., "Pop" Rock, Wally Van, "Doc" Willat, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Carewe, Gaston Bell, W. H. Oviatt and wife, Inex McCauley, E. J. Rosenthal, Edwin Hollywood, Jacob Wilk, Marshall Farnum, Bert Dorris, Joe Daily, Arthur A. Schmidt and wife, Miss Geneva Murphy, J. A. Shuchert, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse J. Goldburg, George DeCarlton, Louis Morrill, Alex Francis, E. W. Kramer, S. J. Berman, S. B. Kramer, A. H. Schitzer, Edith Storey, Dick Storey, Sam F. Kingston, Louis Leon Hall, J. I. Johnson, Jesse Lewis, Hy Mayer, Louis Bates, George Larkin, Lillian Greenburger, Ethel Grandon, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Lindsay, Miss Eva Musell, Mrs. Edna Rielly, Miss Barbara Tennant, Miss Gladies Leslie, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Clapp, Ralph Graham, Miss Mildred Richardson, Miss Margaret Adair, Frank J. Carroll, Gladys Hullette, Howard Mitchell, Julian Eltinge, Austin Webb, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Rock, J. G. Terwilliger, Miss Lilian Taylor, Charles Harding, Daniel Frohman, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Roskam, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Blumenthal, Miss Louis Hoff, Jennette Elmenberg, Alice Lake, Mr. and Mrs. Charles N. Harding, Ledia Mead, Fred Sullivan, G. Moore, Henry F. Jatho, Mabelle Heikes Justice, Miss Josephine Earl, Kate France, Betty Young, Helen Young, Miss Adelaide Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lawrence, Herbert Prior, Frank Joyner, Marie Edith Wells, Anita Stewart, Maud Douglass, Sigmund Lubin, Billy Reeves, Earl Metcalfe, William Potter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Harris, Lottie Briscoe, Daisy Evans, Ormi Hawley, George S. Spencer, Mr. White, Miss Milly Openheimer, Edmund Lawrence, Mrs. Ryan, H. Hogan, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Bauman, Ada M. Bauman, Florence B. Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Bracey, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Graham, Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Ritchey, Judge Gustave Hartman, Lewis J. Selznick, Mr. and Mrs. William Farnum, Paul Scardon, Mrs.

B. Billings, Mrs. P. Blake, Adrian Gil-Spear, Harry Spingler, Robert Cummings, Walter Hitchcock, Tom Moore, Pearl White, Mary Pickford, Robert Warwick, Carl Laemmle, P. A. Powers, Joseph W. Engel, Harry Myers, Rosemary Theby, Ethel Grandin, Gertrude Robinson, Ben Wilson, William N. Bailey, Ruby Hoffman, Alice Lake, Mildred Holland, Frank Holland, James Kirkwood, Margarita Fischer, Gladden James, Edgar L. Davenport, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lang, Joseph Smiley, and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Evans, and C. R. Gondon, representing the executive staffs of the various companies and trade publications. Bill Barry, of the Nicholas Power Company, always prominent at Screen Club functions, was absent, due to a slight illness. Joe Brandt was also among the missed.

BALBOA SERIAL FINISHED

Players, Directors and Cameraman Celebrate When Final Scene Is "Shot," and Big Patriotic Film Reaches its End

In a blaze of glory, Balboa finished the filming of "Neal of the Navy," the smashing patriotic serial photoplay in fourteen episodes of two reels each, which has been so successfully released by Pathe, on Saturday, November 13, just five months to the day from the time of beginning.

W. A. S. Douglas, who is Charles Pathe's right hand man, came to Long Beach, Cal., from headquarters to see the finishing touches put on "Neal of the Navy" and everything went off to his entire satisfaction. Half a dozen scenes were filmed during the forenoon of the last day. These were put through the laboratory at once. The concluding episode had its trial run in Balboa's projecting room six hours later.

Then the film was packed and turned over to Mr. Douglas, who immediately started east. All arrangements were made by wire for Louis Gasnier, Pathe's general manager, to meet Mr. Douglas when he alighted from the train in New York the following Thursday, so that there would be no delay in speeding the distribution of the final installment.

When Harry Harvey, director, threw his hat in the air on the completion of scene 1,639, and Cameraman Joe Brotherton folded up his tripod, the "Neal" cast behaved like a bunch of school children dismissed for summer vacation. Assistant Director Macpherson grabbed a drum and the other players fell in behind him for an impromptu procession. Then the sailor "extra" boys shot up the studio and a "good time was had."

The members of the cast presented Director Harvey with a handsome token of appreciation; while Lillian Lorraine, the featured player, was deluged with flowers. She has left for San Francisco for a month's vacation. William Courtleigh, Jr., who was "Neal," took the first train north with his wife (Ethel Fleming, also of the Balboa studio) for a delayed honeymoon at the Frisco exposition. And so was "thirty" written for one of the most successful photoplay serials ever filmed; for Pathe's figures indicate that "Neal of the Navy," has broken all booking records to date.

Two of Big Eastern Triangle Houses

Exhibitors throughout the country who are running the Triangle service will be interested in seeing how the Knickerbocker theater, New York, and the Triangle theater, Brooklyn, look. Here are the pictures of these two notable houses now presenting the Triangle plays. The parent house, the Knickerbocker, is part of a large theatrical office building at Broadway and Thirty-eighth street, so general display on the walls of the building is impracticable, but there are large electric signs at the corner and at the main entrance, giving the names of the attractions and the stars currently playing. These signs are of the type that are visible by day as well as when lighted at night. A color scheme of red, green and white imparts great brilliancy. The names of the directors, Griffith, Ince and Sennett, are permanent parts of the sign, while the advertising below is changed from week to week. Portraits of twenty-four of the leading stars are on fixed frames on either side of the main entrance.

The Knickerbocker, which is the Triangle home in New York City.

W. H. Kemble, in introducing the service to Brooklyn, had the advantage of extensive side walls of the Crescent, now the Triangle theater. He has converted the exterior of the house into by far the most attractive looking place on the plaza at the junction of Fulton street and Flatbush avenue. It will be noted that Mr. Kemble has put the name of his theater even upon the water tank. The characteristic Triangle trade-marks, names of directors, plays and stars are everywhere, and the eye cannot fail to be strongly impressed by the display, nor can curiosity fail to be aroused.

The Triangle Theater in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mme. Petrova in New Metro Picture

Mme. Petrova, the Metro star, who has been on tour in the successful play, "The Revolt," is taking advantage of her New York engagement by beginning work on another big Metro picture, "What Will People Say," at the Popular Plays and Players studio, in Fort Lee, N. J. This production will be mounted on an elaborate scale, and Mme. Petrova will be surrounded by an exceptionally strong cast including Fritz de Lint, Fraunie Fraunholz, Jean Thomas, John Dudley, William Morse, Geraldine Piers, William Enslee, and other stage and screen artists. Miss Thomas is a member of Mme. Petrova's supporting cast in "The Revolt" and Miss Piers has an important role with Ethel Barrymore in the play, "Our Mrs. McChesney," at the Lyceum theater. In order to fill her speaking stage engagement in New York, and answer the call on her services at the Fort Lee studio, Mme. Petrova is having a rather lively time of it. She is obliged to give herself over entirely to her work, and forswear all thoughts of comfort and home life. Life for her, under these circumstinces, is one continued race from the studio to the theater, from the theater home, and from home to the studio. The single task of appearing at the studio, or in the stellar role of a theatrical engagement, is usually considered enough work for one person. But Mme. Petrova delights in being busy, and despite her arduous task of double duty, is usually the last person around the studio to tire. "What Will People Say" is in five parts, and will be produced for the Metro program under the direction of Mme. Blache.

Mme. Petrova.

MOROSCO'S LATEST CAPTURE

Hattie Williams to Make Screen Debut on Paramount Program in "Detective Sparkes," Which Offers Her Big Possibilities

Oliver Morosco has scored again in obtaining the signature of Hattie Williams, the well known star of the stage, to appear in motion pictures under the Morosco-Paramount banner. In securing Miss Williams for the screen, Mr. Morosco adds another star of wide repute to his list of important captures for motion pictures, closely following the announcement of his acquisition of Anna Held and Constance Collier.

Hattie Williams has long been a favorite among theatergoers throughout the country and has worked her way to stardom through sheer merit, from the ranks of the chorus. Her first appearance on the stage took place in Boston when she appeared in the chorus of "1492." She was soon singled out by the manager as a girl of more than ordinary talent and when the production played New York she was given an opportunity by playing the part of "Infanta Catalina." Her success in the part was instantaneous and resulted in a rapid rise to the front, some of her triumphs including the characterization of starring roles in such plays as "The Girl from Maxim's," "The Girl from Kay's," "The Rollicking Girl," "Detective Sparkes," "The Girl from Montmartre," and other metropolitan hits of equal prominence.

As her initial screen subject the producers have secured the rights on Miss Williams' former stage success, "Detective Sparkes," in which she starred at the Garrick theater, New York City a few years ago. This production allows the star particular opportunity to display her talent and on account of its many surprising situations, continuous action and big possibilities in the way of effective backgrounds, should prove of more than usual merit as a photoplay.

"WHO'S GUILTY?" POSTPONED

To Perfect New Film Serial Pathe Announces More Time Is Necessary and Therefore Series Will Be Delayed

After conferences between representatives of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., and the Arrow Film Corporation, it has been decided to postpone the release of "Who's Guilty?" for several weeks, so that the episode already completed may be reconstructed by the Arrow Film Corporation and new scenarios supplied for the balance of the series.

"Who's Guilty?" is a series of fourteen two-reel episodes concerning the great economic, social and domestic problems of the day. Each episode is complete in itself and deals with a particular phase of the complex existence of modern times. The series is to be in the nature of the big problem plays that have caused the birth of what may be termed the "personal drama" of today.

The contract between the Arrow Film Corporation and Pathe called for the motion picture production of certain scenarios to be supplied to the Arrow organization. These episodes were to be delivered in the following order: The first three by December 1 and one every ten days thereafter.

Upon screen examination of the first episode it was decided that the stories which were the basis of these two-reelers and their interpretation were not in accord with the quality desired by Pathe and Arrow. It became evident that different scenarios would have to be provided in order to make this new series the effective drama that is the standard of Pathe and Arrow output.

In accordance with this desire Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, one of the foremost of American writers, has been commissioned to write the "Who's Guilty?" series and their production by Arrow will commence immediately upon receipt of new scenarios.

Both Emmy Wehlen and Howard Estabrook will be seen as co-stars in the rewritten stories as was arranged for in the original program. These popular stage and screen players will be supported by a cast of unusual excellence in every episode. Neither time nor money will be spared by the Arrow Film Corporation to make the new "Who's Guilty?" series the finest motion picture portrayal of big ideas.

STATISTICS TO BE FILMED

Roger Ward Babson Has Affiliated Himself With the Paramount Pictures Corporation, and Will Screen Interesting Figures

Roger W. Babson, the noted statistician, has allied himself with the Paramount Pictures Corporation in the capacity of associate editor of the Paramount Newspictures and his works are now being filmed for presentation at Paramount theaters.

It may seem at first glance that statistics do not provide a very fertile field for the camerman but this, it developed in a talk with Mr. Babson, is not the case. "Probably there is nothing so uninteresting to the average man as dry statistics," Mr. Babson said. "He cannot get very excited when he reads on the printed page that five hundred and sixty-six million cans of beans are sold in the United States and Canada; or that in New Jersey there are 50.4 per cent more mosquitoes to the square mile than in any other state in the Union, but by the free use of illustrations I have been able to circulate my books quite largely, and I am informed by public libraries that they are in considerable demand.

"I first became deeply interested in the motion picture, when, on a visit to South America, I encountered at several points the cameramen of the Paramount expedition and it was then that I conceived the idea of adapting statistics to the screen. Investigation proved to me the advisability of allowing Paramount to handle these pictures and when Paramount Newspictures were issued a place was found in them for me. To my mind W. W. Hodkinson's reasoning is so fundamentally sound along all lines that I can see nothing but the greatest success for those who have profited by his experiences and in many instances allied themselves with him."

Roger Ward Babson was born at Gloucester, Mass., July 6, 1875. His father was Nathaniel Babson and his mother Ellen Sterns. He received his A. B. from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1898, and on March 29, 1900, he was married to Grace Margaret Knight of St. Paul, Minn. He is president of the Babson Statistical Organization with branch offices in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and London. He is lecturer on statistics at his old college, special writer for the Curtis publication, Saturday Evening Post, New York Times, and other periodicals, and he is a member of the American Economics Association. Some of his most famous and widely read books are "Business Barometer," "The Future of the Working Classes," "Elements of Successful Investing," "Prosperity, How It Must Come," "The Future of the Railroad" and "The Future of Us Boys."

Beware This Swindler

The Pathe Exchange, Inc., has issued a warning to the trade concerning a certain swindler traveling about the country representing himself as a Pathe district manager or inspector. He has succeeded on several occasions in obtaining money from hotels and managers of theaters by means of worthless checks; and is described as being about forty years of age, slender in build, with fair complexion and sandy hair.

It should be easy to identify him as he is a cripple, his right limb being cut off at the knee; and uses crutches, explaining that his artificial limb is being repaired. During the latter part of October, he was operating in the vicinity of Hamilton and Newark, Ohio; also near Huntingburg, Indiana; and has used the following aliases: "H. E. Glenn," "C. H. Sherman," "H. C. Sherman," "Mr. Shermheimer."

The Pathe Exchange, Inc., requests anyone meeting this man to instantly notify Ralph Navarro, chief inspector, Pathe Exchange, Inc., 25 West Forty-fifth street, New York City; or any local office of the Pinkerton National Detective Agency.

Raver Signs "Charlie" Ver Halen

C. J. Ver Halen has been added to the business staff of the Raver Film Corporation, following negotiations by mail and telegram for some weeks. "Charlie," as Ver Halen is familiarly known among his man friends, has been sojourning in Chicago editing the Tribune News-weekly, and when the Raver organization was launched hastened to send congratulations and best wishes to Harry R. Raver. It will be remembered that "Charlie" was in charge of the Chicago office of a national amusement weekly when Mr. Raver was writing "copy" incidental to his management of the American-Eclair studios, and the latter has not forgotten the courtesies shown him by Ver Halen. A man was needed for an important post on the business staff and Mr. Raver made overtures which were accepted. Ver Halen was not engaged as press agent or publicity "expert." He is to be a sort of narrator-extraordinary, or intelligencer. His duties will consist of carrying out Mr. Raver's ideas in reporting facts concerning the progress of his company, and this means both mental and physical effort, for the task of confining one's writings to cold, hard facts is not an easy one from the standpoint of the average press agent.

C. J. Ver Halen.

Mirror Gets Lawrence Marston

One of the best known directors of motion pictures in America, in the person of Lawrence Marston, has been engaged by the Mirror Films, Inc., to direct pictures and will start work for that organization about the first of the New Year.

Lawrence Marston has made some of the most successful features that have been put on the screen and has had under his wing several of the most famous of screen personages. He produced "The Star of Bethlehem," "Robin Hood," "The Road to Yesterday," "The Fatal Wedding," "Dora Thorne," "The Primrose Path," "The Millionaire Baby" and other photoplays which called for more than passing comment.

Before essaying pictures, Mr. Marston had a considerable reputation as a man of big ideas in staging dramatic works. He put "Ben Hur," "The Prince of India," "The Round Up," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" and "Baby Mine" on the stage and they were all successes.

Editors: ED J. MOCK and PAUL H. WOODRUFF
Associate Editors
Neil G. Caward Thomas C. Kennedy
John C. Garrett Charles R. Condon
Advertising Manager: ALLEN L. HAASE

NEW YORK OFFICE, 1022 LONGACRE BUILDING
Forty-second Street and Broadway
Telephone Bryant 7630
CHARLES R. CONDON, Eastern Representative

This publication is free and independent of all business or house connections or control. No manufacturer or supply dealer, or their stockholders or representatives, have any financial interest in Motography or any voice in its management or policy.

Entered at Chicago Post Office as Second Class Mail Matter

MOTOGRAPHY

THE MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY
ELECTRICITY MAGAZINE CORPORATION
MONADNOCK BUILDING
CHICAGO, ILL.

Telephone: Harrison 3014—All Departments

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS

Changes of advertising copy should reach the office of publication not less than fifteen days in advance of date of issue. Regular date of issue, every Saturday. New advertisements will be accepted up to within ten days of date of issue, but proof of such advertisements can not be shown in advance of publication.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE
Per year $3.00
Canada - - - Per year $4.00
Foreign - - - Per year 5.00
Single copy - - - - .15
FOR SALE AT ALL NEWS STANDS

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS

REMITTANCES—Remittances should be made by check, New York draft or money order, in favor of MOTOGRAPHY. Foreign subscriptions may be remitted direct by International Postal Money Order.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS—The old address should be given as well as the new, and notice should be received two weeks in advance of the desired change.

If Your News Dealer Will Not Supply You—Please Notify Us

Volume XIV CHICAGO, DECEMBER 4, 1915 Number 23

Opportunities for Better Exhibiting

"I haven't got the money. I guess I'll have to pass it up." How many exhibitors, recognizing the opportunity for bigger business, have waved it aside with that remark? How many—or how few—have been able to thrust themselves beyond that discouraging barrier?

There are few exhibitors in business today who still refuse to hear the cry of the picture theater for growth and culture. The proprietor of even the smallest and humblest five-cent house begins to feel an uneasy conviction that the pace is getting faster. He hears of the formation of million-dollar corporations whose complex organizations are intended to operate but two or three theaters, or perhaps only one. And he sees that these enormous enterprises are for pictures only, and ignore even future provision for those objects of his old awe and respect, the legitimate and "high-class" vaudeville.

These new ventures, the "average" exhibitor begins to acknowledge, are not mere exotic growths on a delirious industry; contrarily, they represent, in a big way, the coming thing. Already he has cast his eye over the prospects in his home town or his particular territory in the city. Probably he has listened to the practical tale of a master-exhibitor who has been circuit-riding for his inspiration. And he has admitted that the things he is advised to do, and that have been done by another, can be done by him—or could be.

But the banquet ends. The master-exhibitor departs hurriedly to catch a train. The commonplace routine of getting in enough nickels or dimes to cover the rentals displaces the dream of power. The opportunity is still there. It looms bigger than ever now that its outlines have been projected on the "average" exhibitor's mental screen. But the old, apparently insuperable obstacle throws the new light out of focus and kills the picture. "I haven't got the money. I guess I'll have to pass it up."

That master-exhibitor, whose achievements are so commonly known by now that he may remain nameless here, has proved, if logic and example prove anything, that it can be done—that the exhibition of big, splendid, costly subjects, common now, can be done in a big, splendid, costly way at big profits. But he hasn't proved to the "average" exhibitor that he can do it himself. There are a host of objections to the scheme; a multitude of arguments against its practicability. And they all revolve around the single stubborn, high-resistance fact: "We haven't got enough money!"

It takes money. Everything worth doing takes money. But why the exhibitor who has salted down ten or fifteen thousand dollars out of his little house, since he started a few years ago, should let that sum limit his horizon, is beyond the understanding of business practice.

Mighty few men in any line of business have built a really big success on their own money. The business of running picture theaters is not different. Look at the record of any hundred-thousand-dollar picture house. There are not so very many of them—yet. Where is the exhibitor among them who can say he "shoe-stringed" up to that investment from an original nest-egg of a thousand or two?

One exhibitor can't do it. Several exhibitors together can. One exhibitor and a couple of bankers and a few capitalists can, best of all—or one exhibitor and a hundred stockholders.

Not all good business men are good financiers. Some are bound to fall down when they try to expand beyond the limitations of their own capital. But the principle of success is still there after they fail, waiting for the next one to tackle it.

For the exhibitor who honestly wants to sit in the big game, who honestly feels competent to handle the cards after he is in, lack of money is a poor excuse. Let somebody else in on this good thing that you can see so plainly—and thereby increase your own power, usefulness and wealth.

Literary Progress

THERE are only a few fiction writers at the top of the ladder. These few have no objection to writing motion picture scenarios at a good price. Their literary reputation is already made, and scenario work will not hurt it, if it does not help it any.

The writers on whom the monthly and weekly flood of magazines depend are the fellows half-way up the ladder. They are selling their stuff at fair prices, getting their names before the public and familiar to the editors, making literary progress.

Making literary progress means more to them than the checks they get for their stories. They may need the checks; but they realize that the amounts will not grow until their names are established. Every story that lands with the author's name attached means another step forward.

The fiction magazine has a double appeal to the writer—the check and the step forward. The motion picture scenario has only one appeal—the check. It holds out no promise of literary progress. So the writer would rather sell a story manuscript than a scenario. Inspired with a plot that would do well for either, he favors the magazine editor.

Very few writers copyright their stories. They mail them out to magazine editors in perfect trust and confidence, with absolutely no protection against plagiarism or plot-theft. Their confidence in editorial integrity, be it said, is never misplaced. No fiction writer ever loses anything he can claim as his own in an editor's office.

That the writer can expect the same kind of relations with companies buying motion pictures he has not yet learned. The business has not established itself in his mind as friendly to his efforts. Perhaps he is suspicious of it merely as a game new to him. Perhaps some early unfortunate experience with a greedy and unscrupulous scenario editor, or the alleged experience of some friend, has aroused his doubts. At any rate, the doubt is there. He knows he will get honest treatment from the magazines; he is not sure about the pictures.

It is plain to see that as a market for stories, the magazines have a psychological advantage over the pictures. If the producers of pictures would equalize that advantage, and tempt the writers to their market, they must establish a similar standard of editorial ethics.

If this course has profited the magazines, it will profit the buyers of scenarios. They will have to convince the writers that their wares and their rights are as safe in their hands as in a safety deposit box. They will have to develop some path of progress for writers, looking to the establishment of reputation and its advantages.

These conditions may obtain now; but the average writer does not know it. When he does, there will be more original stuff available for pictures.

Just a Moment Please

Membership in the Board of Trade seems to have its disadvantages as well as its fine points. For instance, Julian Solomon, whom we have harpooned on several occasions, now sends us two perfectly scrumptuous pieces of his new stationery (the stuff with the fancy heading), and calls our attention to the emblem of the B. of T. in the lower left hand corner.

—

All right, Jule, we get your high sign and as a loyal member of the B. of T. will lay off you, in the future.

—

WHO SAYS THE ENGLISH HAVE NO SENSE OF HUMOR?

In a recent issue of the Bioscope we lamp the following:

AN ATTRACTIVE POSTER

—

And, at that, it ain't much worse than some of our own American poster stuff, though as a rule the trade journals of the U. S. duck referring to it as "attractive."

—

Our thanks go out to our good friend Tom Hamlin of Amusements, in Minneapolis, for Tom handed us the best laugh of the week when his last issue reached our desk and we discovered he had referred to the w. k. "Roxie" as "The Napolian (Note to Compositor: Don't spell it right and spoil our fun!) of m. p. exhibitors." You must be writing with the Danish accent now, Tom.

—

SPEAKING OF MOTION PICTURE MAGGOTS

While pondering on the hard times and the lack of nickels in the box office you might improve your mind by reading what the Pawnee City Chief, of Pawnee City, Neb., says of its esteemed fellow townsman, Mr. D. B. Turley, the local jitney king:

Mr. E. S. Nesbitt is now owner and manager of the Elite theater in Pawnee City, having traded his forty-acre farm just east of town to D. B. Turley for the show and the building which it occupies, Mr. Turley's fine residence property, the Pawnee Bottling Works and an Overland touring car. The deal was closed the latter part of last week and the gentlemen exchanged properties Tuesday of this week.

—

Just as we had begun to think Kitty Kelley had reformed and that marriage was a wonderful thing for jaded nerves and temperamental dispositions, the lady burst into print with another of her w. k. and far from popular tirades.

—

OUR BURG

Ye Ed. has been indulging in one wild round of gaiety the past wk. On Wed. last it was the Reel Fellers that gave the blowout what kept us up long past our usual bedtime. And we can say much for Dick Travers as a host. Then on Thurs. we dined at the Sherman House in honor of this hear Rothapfel man—being incidentily the guest of Jay Cairns, the Beau Brummel of the evening. If we had waited to hear our esteemed boss speak or Walt Bloeser to get the final paragraphs of his carefully prepared oration off his chest, we'd a been there yet. Sat. eve. the Missus and us celebrated as per the adv. of last wk., and on Tues. eve. this wk. we was banquitted by the pop. Clarence Caine and his charming mother. For the rest of the Winter we expect to hibernate.

The w. k. and immensely pop. Vic Hodupp has went away to the brite lights of Noo Yawk, but another nice feller named Howard Hola (sounds like a college yell, don't it?) is already on the job.

It is rumored that a certain w. k. adv. man of our Village is hard hit by a fair scribbler on one of the local dailies. Look out, J.

—

Now for the final assault on Turkey. N. G. C.

Some Current Releases Reviewed

"The Nation's Peril"

A Lubin V. L. S. E. Drama Released November 22 Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

WITH the subject of the day, adequate land and naval military equipment, as its basis, "The Nation's Peril," a Lubin V. L. S. E. five-reel production, presents an intelligent argument, but it holds interest mostly by virtue of the magnitude of its production. "The Nation's Peril" makes a plea for an increase of the army and navy of the United States and the maintenance of military forces great enough to protect the country's citizens and commercial interests.

To those who fear that a larger fighting force would lead the government into war it explains, and convincingly explains, that the desired preparation is not for war, but against it. If peace is worth having, it is worth fighting for, and the United States must be prepared to fight. These are the arguments of "The Nation's Peril," as they are the arguments of all who advocate "peace through preparedness."

If it lies within the power of the motion picture to sway public opinion in a matter of this kind, then "The Nation's Peril" will do so, and in that event it will accomplish immeasurable good. As has been said before, the picture is strongest in its spectacular scenes, which add force to certain statements of fact. Without showing any horrible consequences, the story convincingly depicts the dangers of unpreparedness, and the romance with its elements of intrigue and misguided faith in the "peace at any price" policy, is in this way justified.

Scene from Lubin's "The Nation's Peril."

The story was written by Harry Chandlee and George Terwilliger. Mr. Terwilliger directed this massive production. It is evident that he was given a free rein and that there was no limit put upon time or money in producing the picture. But what is more important is that the result justifies the expenditure, enormous as it was. A picture which impresses one only because it represents a great outlay in time and money can never be a credit to its producers. The producers of "The Nation's Peril" can point to it with just pride.

The battle scenes are most impressive. The scores of people used in the battles do their work with precision. The attacking forces appear as a well-drilled army and the men who represent the United States do the bidding of their officers in meeting the attack in a business-like manner. The solid rows of houses lining either side of the street in the coast town are utterly destroyed. The battle scenes are all in natural colors, which makes them more effective. The attack lasts for some time and affords many a thrill.

Some of the celebrities who appear in "The Nation's Peril" are: Josephus Daniels; Admiral Winslow of the U. S. Pacific fleet; Admiral Fletcher of the U. S. Atlantic fleet; Capt. W. S. Sims and staff, commandant of the torpedo boat flotilla, and Capt. Willoughby of the naval aerial squadron. The officers of the naval training station at Newport and the captains and staffs of several battleships.

Ormi Hawley is seen as Ruth Lyons, the girl whose inherent dread of war leads her to accept as honest the deceitful plans of a foreign agent to organize a society to protest against the proposed increase in the military forces of the United States. Earl Metcalf is Lieutenant Sawyer, who is in love with Ruth, and Arthur Matthews is Oswald Dudley, the foreign agent who attempts to secure the plans and model of Sawyer's invention, the aerial torpedo. William H. Turner, Herbert Fortior and Eleanor Barry complete the cast.

"A Transaction in Summer Boarders"

The Eighth Episode in Pathe's "Wallingford" Series Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

IN THE eighth episode of the "New Adventure of Wallingford," J. Rufus tells a number of girls that he will some day buy New York for them. That, from anyone else, would give rise to doubts concerning the speaker's proper mental balance, but not so when it is said by J. Rufus. The majority of those who have followed the affairs of Wallingford and Daw in the previous episodes of this Pathe series will take it as a matter of course, for they have seen them accomplish seemingly impossible things with apparent ease.

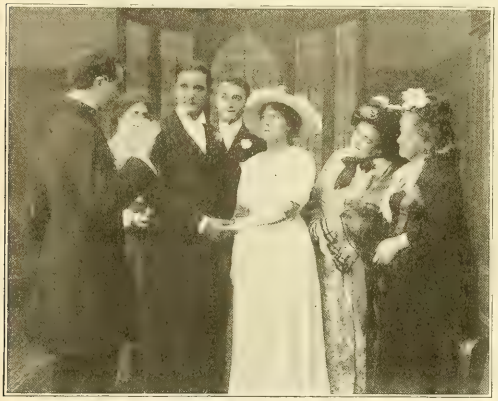
Everything is summery in "A Transaction in Summer Boarders." Even Wallingford sheds his high hat and frock coat and roams about in a linen crash suit and Panama hat. The Wallingford party journeys to the country in search of one Charles Algernon Swivel. Swivel is unaware of the fact that he is scheduled to pay the expenses of the trip, but he does pay. He is a firm believer in his own ability to attract the ladies, and when he attempts to work his charms on Violet, Blackie is willing to let everything go and satisfy his desire to "wallop" Swivel just once.

Wallingford restrains the wrathy Blackie with the words, "Let me hit him in the pocketbook; it will hurt longer," which is a speech remarkable for its truth. All the things peculiar to summer boarding houses are brought into play and their humorous possibilities are effectively used. As with the other stories in the series, "A Transaction in Summer Boarders" is more than a succession of amusing incidents, it is a complete story with its amusing situations well connected.

The Whartons are doing splendid work in producing these stories, for while they have excellent material with which to work, there is no opportunity to add value to the entertaining qualities of the action which is not taken advantage of. "A Transaction in Summer Boarders" has that about it which is real, and as a result the good impersonations of Burr McIntosh as Wallingford and Max Figman as Blackie Daw at no time impress one as being mere acting, but instead they seem characters out of real life.

"Not Guilty"

A Five-Reel Equitable Production, Released Nov. 29 Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy



CYRIL SCOTT, the star of many legitimate stage successes, makes his screen debut under the most favorable conditions, for the Equitable Pictures Corporation's five-reel melodramatic offering, "Not Guilty," is indeed a meritorious play. It is a singularly interesting and convincing story. There is no one phase of the story which demands that the spectator concede a point that strikes one as being possible but not probable; in other words, it deals with truth.

"Not Guilty" is the story of a man who is convicted of a murder which he did not commit and who spends the best years of his life behind prison walls. After twenty years in prison, he is pardoned—pardoned to go out into the world, where he is shunned by society and his only happiness in his declining years is in that his daughter, who has also suffered for "certain facts in her father's life," finds happiness with a young man of true worth.

That a man whose only fault was that he "acted queerly" in a moment of stress should suffer as Ed Andrews suffered is little short of tragedy. The characters are human and their actions are those of people in every-day life. The heart-appeal of the story is strong and it also draws a strong moral. It is one of the few pictures to which one can take their head as well as their heart, feeling sure that both will be appealed to.

The picture is based on "Justice," by Edgar James, which served as a successful stage vehicle for Julius Steger. "Not

Scene from Equitable's "Not Guilty."

Guilty" is stronger than the play from which it was adapted, and the person responsible for the screen version deserves praise. The ending is happy, that is, it ends with Andrews about to build up what happiness he can out of the wreckage, but as far as society knows, he is still a murderer, the guilty party is never heard from, and consequently there is no death-bed confession which clears the wrongly accused. Unless they are exceptionally well done, death-bed confessions are for the most part tiresome affairs.

Cyril Scott gives a remarkably convincing performance. His acting is finished and he holds the sympathy and interest consistently throughout. Ada Boshell, as the loyal, self-sacrificing mother of Andrews; Catherine Proctor, as Dora Birch, the wife who dies as a result of her husband's conviction, and Charles Hutchinson, as the despicable Tom Matthews, do splendidly in the other important parts. Mark Ellison is good as George Gardner, and the actress who is cast as Andrews' daughter does very well.

Joseph A. Golden directed "Not Guilty," which was produced by Triumph Film Corporation. Since he has been directing productions for this company he has never done better work. The prison scenes, laid in Sing Sing, were taken there, and the settings and other details as a whole are tasteful.

"The Love of Loti San"

Selig Three-Reel Drama to Be Released December 2. Reviewed by John C. Garrett

A HEART-STIRRING drama of old Japan is scheduled for release December 2 by the Selig Polyscope Company. This production, "The Love of Loti San," was directed by Lloyd B. Carlton, who obtained splendid results in settings and photography. Although the pictures were taken in America, the production fairly breathes forth Oriental atmosphere.

The story of this photodrama is one of which audiences never tire. A young engineer after a misunderstanding with his sweetheart leaves for Japan, where he meets and marries Loti San, a Japanese girl. Later his sweetheart comes to the Orient and there the man is torn between his love for his wife and that for the American girl. Bessie Eyton is a most charming Loti San; Edward J. Piel is happily cast as Harry Graham, a young engineer; Virginia Kirtley makes a sweet Norine, and A. W. Filson as James Marsden, Richard Morris as Walter Arnold, Cecil Holland as Okito, and an unnamed Japanese baby, whose presence adds much to the success of the picture, complete the cast.

Harry Graham, a young engineer, and Walter Arnold are rival suitors for the hand of Norine. On the day of Norine's debut both men send flowers to Norine, each enclosing a note asking the girl to carry the floral tribute to signify that she loves them. The notes become mixed and the girl by mistake wears Arnold's flowers and Graham, noticing this, is downcast and resolves to go to Japan.

Here he meets Loti San, a beautiful young Japanese girl, who falls desperately in love with him. One day he comes to the realization of her love for him and, believing it his duty to marry her, he does so. After a short, happy married life Graham begins to tire of his Oriental wife, and even the event of a baby at the home fails to dispel thoughts of Norine from his mind.

Norine is advised to travel for her health and finally arrives in Japan, where she meets Graham, and he tells her that he is married. He makes desperate love to Norine, however, and this is discovered by little Loti San, who goes to the home of her father. Later Graham contracts the terrible Oriental plague and Norine and Loti San with her baby both reach Graham's home together. Loti San gives her baby to Norine to take away with her and enters the sick room, there to sacrifice her own life in caring for her beloved husband.

"Film Tempo"

Mustang's Three-Reel Comedy Released December 4. Reviewed by Neil G. Caward.

THE latest of the Buck Parvin Mustang comedies, which is entitled "Film Tempo" and will be released on the Mutual program on Saturday, December 4, is one of the best that has yet been issued, and gives Art Acord, the delineator of Buck Parvin, a chance for several emotional scenes that prove he can act as well as ride and rope.

The story, as usual, concerns the employes of the Titan Moving Picture Company, and in addition to showing a number of scenes that depict pictures in the making, carries a thoroughly interesting story concerning Norman Dean, a new supernumerary who joins the film colony for a brief experience before the camera. Norman takes advantage of his supposed ability as a "lens louse" to seek to win the affection of Charlotte Biggs, a simple and unsophisticated country maiden, who is simply enthralled with Dean's swagger manner and fancy clothes.

As the story opens Dean is discovered as an impersonator for a cheap vaudeville show and upon his failing to make good with the audience is discharged by the manager. He comes back at that important personage with the remark that he can make far more money as a moving picture actor and consequently the stage is bound to lose a star.

Dean secures work with the Titan Company, as an extra, believing that he should earn at least $100 a week as a "type," but quickly discovered that $5 per day is all the remuneration he may expect. His finances are so low, however, that he is eager to accept even that salary in order to secure work. The Titan Company moves out to a western location for the purpose of staging a thrilling melodrama with Buck Parvin in the leading role, and there Dean encounters Charlotte

Dean shows Charlotte how pictures are made.

Biggs, who is much dazzled by his swagger manners and Dean promptly proceeds to win the admiration and later the love of Miss Biggs, who thinks him undoubtedly a leading man with the film concern and the real thing in the actor line.

For a time Dean seems likely to have a rival in Buck Parvin, but the impersonator "queers" Parvin with the girl by telling her he is only a cowboy and not the sort of a man she ought to know, as he is no "Film Tempo."

As the days pass Dean continues his courtship of Charlotte and at frequent intervals "touches" members of the Titan Company for loans ranging all the way from a single dollar to a twenty-dollar bill, though his borrowing habit becomes common knowledge when, during a poker game, practically every player displays a handful of Dean's "I. O. U.'s."

On the day the Titan Company finishes the production and is about to depart from that locality, Dean succeeds in borrowing ten from nearly everyone whom he has previously "touched" and arranges to meet Charlotte at the depot and journey to Los Angeles, where they are to be married.

Buck Parvin, who has discovered the impending elopement, lies in wait at the depot and when Dean and Charlotte appear he boldly faces them and inquires of Dean what his wife will say when he learns of his running away with another woman. Dean, highly indignant, declares to Charlotte that Buck is perpetrating a practical joke, since he is not married, but Buck is so convincing with his bluff that Charlotte decides it best for her to remain at home and asks Mr. Parvin to escort her thither, while Dean, much disgruntled, steps aboard the train.

While escorting Charlotte home Buck learns that Dean has accused him of a lack of "Film Tempo" and the closing scenes show Buck at his hotel, diligently searching a huge dictionary for the meaning of the mystic insult to his talent.

"The Alster Case"

Essanay's Five-Act Mystery Feature Released Dec. 6 Reviewed by Neil G. Caward.

NEARLY everyone has read thrilling detective stories whose ending was so shrouded in mystery that it was utterly impossible to guess the identity of the criminal until the author himself revealed the culprit in the last chapter. Seldom, however, has the screen been able to present a mystery story with the solution so carefully concealed that the audience was unaware of the identity of the criminal up to the very last. Such a picture Essanay has ready for release on December 6, when "The Alster Case" will be available at the exchanges.

Beyond a doubt "The Alster Case" is one of the cleverest tales of crime that has ever been screened. It is rather slow in getting started, but this preliminary work was absolutely needful in order to register clearly in the minds of the spectators the identities of the various characters and their relations to the other principals in the story. And when the mystery finally develops, it proves even more fascinating than the best detective story you ever read, for it is not a creation of the imagination alone, but, being actually enacted before your eyes, makes you feel that you have almost an equal chance with the detective to solve the riddle.

Cornelia Alster and her wards, Beatrice and Linda.

The press agent of the Essanay Company is authority for the statement that durnig the production of the story the players themselves were left in doubt as to which one of them was the criminal, and, really, one can almost believe that for once a press agent told no more than the truth, for not by the slightest expression do the players betray their knowledge of who killed Cornelia Alster.

The story is from the pen of Rufus Gilmore and was produced under the direction of J. Charles Haydon. Photographically and from the standpoint of stage settings it is all that can be desired. It mustn't be assumed, because it is a detective story, that it's a blood and thunder kind of play, for it isn't. The plot moves logically along in a quiet manner and the detective proves to be just a likable sort of an individual, without any scientific or mechanical apparatus to assist him in the solution of the mystery, but a lot of good common sense and a keen analytical mind, which he uses to advantage.

Bryant Washburn, Ruth Stonehouse and Betty Scott are three of the featured personages, Mr. Washburn as a young lawyer's clerk and later the executor of the Alster estate, and Misses Stonehouse and Scott as wards of the Miss Alster who gives the story its title. All of them are convincing and well cast. John H. Cossar as Trask, the detective, is immense. The writer can think of no actor better fitted to play the part Mr. Cossar interprets, and that is saying a lot. Louise Crolius as Miss Alster does splendid character work in several scenes.

The story, in brief, tells how Miss Cornelia Alster, who has secretly made George Swan, a young lawyer's clerk, executor of her estate, returns from the theater with him one night to find Beatrice and Linda her two wards, entertaining some male friends. She is convinced the two girls are compromised by their actions, and sits down in front of a mirror, prepared to watch until the two men leave the house, when she hopes to see their reflections in the mirror and learn their identity. The following morning she is found murdered, and Trask, a noted detective, sets out to seek the criminal. Suspicion points first to one and then to another member of the Alster household, but the average person will never, never guess the identity of the real murderer, until, in the final fifty feet of film, Trask asks a question which reveals the whole mystery. To name the guilty man in this brief review of the film would spoil a perfectly enjoyable view of the film for others, so it is needless to say more of the production, other than that it is one of the biggest treats which an exhibitor can offer his patrons, and a picture that people will talk about for weeks after its release and urge their friends to see.

"The Supreme Test"

Universal Broadway Feature, Released November 29. Reviewed by John C. Garrett.

HENRIETTA CROSSMAN, the well-known actress of the legitimate stage, lends her dramatic abilities to the screen version of L. V. Jefferson's story, "The Supreme Test." This five-reel Universal production featuring the well-known actress is a fitting vehicle for her, as it gives her a chance to display some splendid acting. The story is rather unstable, but for a' that is interesting, containing both humor and pathos, and photographically is excellent.

Miss Crossman as Violet Logan, a widow, interested in the bettering of conditions of the poor, is very convincing. She is supported by a cast which includes Stella Razeto as Molly Phelan, a girl of the slums; Wyndham Standing as James Semple, a society man; Adele Farrington as Madge Semple, his sister; Jack Wilson as Maurice, in love with Molly, and Sylvia Ashton as Bridget O'Malley.

One scene in this production may be mentioned with special emphasis. It is one of the most grippingly realistic scenes of its nature ever screened. A buggy containing a man, a woman and a child approaches a railroad track just as an express comes at a great speed around the corner. It hurtles the buggy, with its occupants, into the air, leaving but a mass of debris. The audience are assured of a thrill when this scene appears upon the screen.

Mrs. Violet Logan, a wealthy widow, tries to get her friends interested in improving the conditions of the poor, but Madge, the sister of James Semple, a woman hater, is the only one who evidences sympathy for her work. It is while on a visit to the slums that Mrs. Logan meets Molly Phelan and her sweetheart, Maurice, and shortly after this Violet, in her determination to bring the slums to society, gives a reception to which she invites, among others, Bridget and her children and Molly and Maurice.

Holmes, who is Violet's trustee, carries on wild-cat speculations and misappropriates her money, and the woman finds herself penniless, and a short while after this she goes to live with Molly, who grows very fond of her. She learns that Molly is not Phelan's child, and later, remembering how Semple's sister had told her how years before Semple's wife had eloped, taking their child with her, only to be killed a short time later in a railroad accident, and the child had never been found. She later discovers that James Semple is Molly's father.

She also discovers that Semple was the one who had brought ruin upon her, and Molly and Maurice, learning of this, determine to make Semple give up the money he got from Violet. Maurice goes to the house and, at the point of a revolver, tells him he wants the money he had gotten from Violet, but Semple manages to overpower him and telephones for the police. Violet, who has learned of Maurice's plan, arrives just in time to interrupt the proceedings.

Violet tells Semple that Molly is his daughter and wonders if he will send the future husband of his daughter to prison, and Semple then shows Violet papers showing that he has put money in trust for her. Violet is about to leave, taking Molly with her, when Semple, summoning all his nerve, proposes to the widow and is accepted.

"The Silver Lining"

An American Two-Reel Drama Released November 29. Reviewed by Neil G. Caward.

VIVIAN RICH, Alfred Vosburgh and Roy Stewart are featured in "The Silver Lining," a two-reel Flying "A" drama scheduled for release on November 29.

From a photographic standpoint the picture is fully up to the standard already set by the American, and the story, while rather trite, is so splendidly produced that it gets over in a satisfactory fashion and seems almost new.

Miss Rich as Nell Allen, a stenographer, is both winsome and convincing, while Alfred Vosburgh again demonstrates his talent in the role of Richard Grant, foreman of the Murdock ranch and, later, Nell's husband.

Nell is compelled to seek employment as a stenographer when her aged father, who is dying of tuberculosis, finds himself unable longer to support himself and Nell, but the girl is unfortunate enough to enter the employ of a man who suggests that life can be made rather easy for her if she will only be "sensible." Nell resents the insult and is about to resign her position when she recalls the urgent need of money for the support of her father and reluctantly comes to the conclusion that she must make the supreme sacrifice. When in an accidental manner her father discovers the girl's problem, he forges a check with which he secures funds enough to convince Nell that it is unnecessary for her longer to work.

Nell cares for her father.

The discovery of the forgery quickly follows and Nell's father is sentenced to prison, while the girl obtains employment as companion to the mother of Richard Grant, foreman of the Murdock ranch.

As the days pass Nell and Richard become close friends and the young foreman is on the point of proposing when he learns that a strange man has been seen about the ranch in conversation with Nell and he reluctantly comes to the conclusion that he has a secret rival for her affections. The man whom rumor had credited with being Grant's rival was in reality her father, who had escaped from the penitentiary and had made straight for his daughter's new home at the Murdock ranch. Nell succeeds with difficulty in concealing the presence of her father on the ranch, for she knows that his escape from the prison must have been discovered and that a search will be instituted for him. A cow-puncher, who had sought in vain to win Nell's affections, notes the figure of a man entering the window of Nell's room at a late hour and it was he who instilled the poison in Grant's ears by relating the incident and proclaiming his belief that Nell was receiving callers unknown to Grant and his mother.

Though Dick thrashes the cowboy, he is really afraid that the story is founded upon a true incident, but is man enough to face Nell and ask her for an explanation. She tells him the sad story of her father's misfortune and wins his cooperation.

The cowboy whom Grant had knocked down accidentally learns who the visitor to Nell's room is, and, out of revenge, summons the sheriff and his deputies to arrest Allen. They arrive at the Murdock ranch and force their way past Grant, who tries to bar them from the house, break into Nell's room and find her kneeling beside her father's bed. There they discover they have arrived too late, since Mr. Allen is dead.

After the sheriff departs Grant, knowing that Nell is now without a protector, offers his heart and hand to the grief-stricken girl and his proposal is accepted.

"The Taint"

The Three-Reel Lubin Drama to Be Released Dec. 1. Reviewed by John C. Garrett

VALENTINE GRANT, the Lubin actress who has won success by her commendable work in former Lubin productions, is cast in the leading role of the Lubin three-reel photodrama "The Taint," to be released December 1. This production was directed by Sidney Olcott and the photography throughout is splendid. Valentine Grant is cast as Mabel Stuart, a girl whose mother has been enveloped in mystery and who has often pleaded with her father to tell her who her mother was, but he refuses. She is loved by Frank Boward, which role is taken by Ray Sheldon, who does good work in the role of a profligate. James Vincent takes the part of Arthur Easton, the man who wins Mabel, and a college chum of her brother Bert, which part is played by P. H. O'Malley.

Frank Boward, a profligate, forces his attentions on Mabel Stuart, who detests him. Bert, Mabel's brother, returns home after a visit to his college chums and brings with him Arthur Easton, and Mabel and Arthur are attracted to one another. Mystery envelops Mabel's mother and she pleads with her father to tell her who her mother was, but he refuses. Frank becomes jealous of Arthur. The Stuarts give a house party at which Frank and Arthur are guests. Frank, having knowledge of Mr. Stuart's secret, plots to secure Mabel for his wife. When everyone has retired, Frank tells her to step to his room and he will tell her who her mother was. She does and Frank discloses the fact that her mother was a negress. Arthur, passing Frank's door, hears him moving about and stops. When the occupants of the room hear the knock Mabel rushes into the next room, but her shawl is caught in the door. Arthur enters and is just about to go when he recognizes Mabel's shawl. She is brought out, but refuses to explain. In the morning Arthur leaves the house, heartbroken.

Frank again forces his attentions on Mabel and tells her if she doesn't marry him he will tell the whole world her secret. Mabel is overcome, but agrees to marry Frank. Bert tries to persuade Mabel to give Frank up, but she refuses, so Bert refuses to attend the wedding.

On the night of the wedding the Stuart mill catches fire.

Bert telephones to his father. The marriage is interrupted. The father tells Bert to secure the package with the photo in his desk at all costs. Bert risks his life and secures the package. The package contains Mabel's birth certificate, and her mother's photo is disclosed and she learns that her mother was a white woman. They learn of Frank's perfidy and he is driven out of the house. Frank tries to drown his troubles in drink and is shanghaied on board an ocean steamer. Out at sea they run short of water, Frank is sent ashore in a boat to get the fresh water and is attacked and killed by cannibals.

Frank Boward is made to take back his statement regarding Mabel's Mother.

A mysterious lady calls at the Stuart home and Mabel recognizes her as her mother. The family are reunited and Arthur comes back to claim Mabel.

"Bella Donna"

Famous Players Drama, Featuring Pauline Frederick Reviewed by Charles R. Condon

IN A ROLE peculiarly suited to her and in a dramatic vehicle which has won fame both as a novel and a play, Pauline Frederick adds another triumph to an already enviable list of histrionic achievements by her interpretation of the alluring Bella Donna in the photoplay of that name recently released by Famous Players.

Through Miss Frederick's impersonation, this wilful beauty becomes a dangerously charming creature; a siren apparently devoid of true love, whose irresistible attractions lead an ardent admirer into her deceptive net, where he is tolerated while his money lasts, then pitilessly discarded or, what is worse, deliberately poisoned by degrees. She finally meets her superior, however; a man whose magnetism and indifferent affection fairly overpower her. For the first time in her life Bella Donna, always a queen and a tyrant, experiences the sensation of being a mere presence. It is in this phase of the siren's career that Pauline Frederick is called upon for deeply emotional work, and she meets the occasion in a wholly satisfying and convincing manner.

Bella Donna prepares the poisoned coffee.

Thomas Holding, who will be remembered as the male lead in "The Eternal City" and other Famous Players pictures, gives a splendid performance as Nigel Armine, the young man who is so infatuated with Bella Donna, who later becomes his wife, that he overlooks many things which should have made him suspicious of her fidelity, and is disarmed by her expressions of love when he does question her conduct.

As Baroudi, Julian L'Estrange lives the character of the Egyptian who wins the only real admiration and affection that ever stirred in Bella Donna's heart. She does not realize the depth of her love until, finding Baroudi with another woman, she fears losing him. But her entreaties are of no avail.

An outcast, she returns to her husband's home, but fails to gain entrance. Dr. Isaacson, Nigel's friend, turns her away at the door. The final scene shows Bella Donna, tired of life, wandering in the desert. Only a lean, gloating, carnivorous animal witnesses her end.

Eugene Ormonde is well chosen for the part of Dr. Isaacson, who, previous to Nigel's marriage, warns him against Bella Donna, and later diagnoses his friend's lingering sickness as being due to slow poisoning and informs him that it is his wife who is trying to bring about his death. In the balance of the cast, George Majeroni as Ibraham, Edmund Shalet as Hamza, and Helen Sinnott as the maid figure prominently and render able support.

The play is staged with the keen appreciation of true environment and the comprehensive knowledge of the subject and its situations which is typical of Porter and Ford directed productions. The tropical vegetation of Florida and the sandy wastes of somewheres, which is not self-identifying, provide a picturesque background for the action laid in the Far East.

Whether or not the theme verges too closely upon the risque is a matter for individual tastes to decide. In the screen visualization the play is powerful and gripping without too much emphasis being laid upon the suggestive points. Sensationalism is tempered with refinement in every scene which might be considered broad. At the Strand theater, where the picture was first shown, "Bella Donna" drew capacity crowds, commanded their admiration, and received much enthusiastic comment.

"Life's Pitfalls"

Three-Reel Edison Drama, Released December 3 Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

AFTER a vacation of some two months, Miriam Nesbitt returns to the screen as May Orme in the three-part Edison drama, "Life's Pitfalls." May Orme, the character around whom the story revolves, is a young woman who takes the unusual attitude of suspecting as mercenary the attention she receives from men, as she is very wealthy. Even though there are many cases in life of which this is true, few are the women or men who will admit this brutal truth to themselves. Upon this eccentricity of the young woman the author, Edward E. Kidder, has built an interesting play. There are a number of good dramatic situations which the director, George Ridgwell, has presented effectively.

With Miss Nesbitt in the role it is difficult to understand at first how the young woman ever was given sufficient cause to come to the conclusion that she is sought after merely because of her wealth, for with such beauty and charm of manner, money would become no consideration whatever with hosts of men, but with May the thought is something founded on nothing, and later events prove that, with a certain type at least, her supposition was not far from wrong.

The part calls for some emotional work, and in this Miss Nesbitt is forceful. Furthermore, she gives the character a certain strangeness that belongs to a person who dwells upon a single idea until it becomes an obsession. May so fears that she is made so much of solely because she is wealthy that she refuses to attend her friend's affairs. Her physician advises her to take a rest at a summer resort. In order to avoid the insincere attention which she feels every rich person receives, May goes to the country as her young friend's companion.

At Oakhurst she meets Doctor Courtney and they form a strong friendship. Later Courtney proposes marriage to May and she accepts him, but she learns from Mr. Penton that the doctor knows who she is because he, while intoxicated, told Courtney. She then marries Hartley Graeme. A few months later she discovers that Graeme, and not Courtney, overheard Penton's drink-inspired confidence. She returns to Oakhurst and is followed by Graeme, who meets his death there. May finally finds happiness with Courtney.

Harold Meltzer is Doctor Courtney and Herbert Prior does commendably as Graeme. Sally Crute's performance as the adventuress who, in seeking to kill May, poisons her lover, Graeme, is splendid. Jean Dumar, Robert Brower and Billy Casey play the other important parts capably.

"A Woman's Past"

A Five-Reel Fox Feature, Released November 11. Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

FOR his effective work as adapter and director of the five-part Fox Film Corporation production, "A Woman's Past," which features Nance O'Neil, Frank Powell is deserving of credit. Mr. Powell uses few close-up views of his players, and with deep sets enhanced by excellent lighting effects he secures dramatic expression that is remarkable in scenes that are pictorial as well.

The story moves steadily but not with especial speed, to a courtroom scene in which the mother, whose misdeed has brought her to the depths, is defended by her son, who is ignorant of this fact. The details of the proceedings in a criminal court receive strict attention and the spectator is duly impressed with the morbidity of it all. However, the effect is not lastingly depressive and the tense climax proves that these details are important in obtaining the full dramatic effect.

Nance O'Neil uses good judgment in all her scenes. She conveys her emotions without over-acting. Miss O'Neil's artistic repression is most noticeable in the courtroom scene and the things she does not do in this portion of the story are the very things which often detract from good performances by many emotional actresses. The support rendered her is commendable.

Alfred Hinckman plays two characters in the play. He is repelling as the degraded, and degrading, newspaper editor, who is the direct cause of the woman's fatal misstep. He also plays the part of the son. Clifford Bruce gives an effective performance. This also applies to the work of Carlton Macy. The settings and photography are good.

The story is of a young woman who pays "the price" for a position on the staff of a city newspaper. Her employer refuses to marry her, but urges her to "catch" his friend, an army officer. The husband is sent to the service in the Philippines. While he is there, his father learns the woman's secret and orders her from the house. Years later the husband returns, and upon learning that the editor is the father of the child and that he alone is responsible for her present unfortunate condition, he kills the wretch. The woman is accused of the murder, but dramatic circumstances bring about her acquittal.

"Life Without Soul"

Ocean Film Corporation's Initial Release Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

UNDER the title of "Life Without Soul" the Ocean Film Corporation offers as its production a five-part screen version of Mrs. Shelley's imaginative romance, "Frankenstein." It is good screen material, this story of a man who comes into the world under unnatural conditions and who proves the undoing of the scientist who created him, and in the Ocean Film Corporation's production its interesting phases are put to good use.

"Life Without Soul" presents many unusual developments and melodramatic situations. The action, which carries the spectator from the dissecting room through mountainous country, desert lands and on the high seas, does so with unflagging interest. The superman, a creature of superb physique who, without conscience, makes no attempt to restrain the cravings of his healthy body, is an exceptionally suspenseful figure for the photoplay. Neither all man nor all beast, his actions can be fashioned to suit the requirements of a dramatic situation and still be in keeping with that which the spectator expects of a creature so strange.

The story tells of a young physician who discovers a life-giving fluid. He is engaged to a cultured southern girl and both she and his father warn him that he will be responsible to all minkind for the actions of his creation, but the temptation is strong. Before retiring that night he commences to read "Frankenstein." The story becomes real to him and he sees himself as Frankenstein and those who are near to him as the other characters. From the moment the body he constructs becomes a living thing he is haunted by it. The creature is shunned by both man and beast, and insists that his maker must give him a mate.

Scene from "Life Without Soul."

The creature murders the physician's little sister and brings suffering to the family of a man on whom suspicion for the act falls. He then kills Victor's friend. On the night of Victor's marriage to Elizabeth, the superman cruelly kills her. Determined to destroy the monster he is responsible for, Victor follows him until he dies of sheer exhaustion in the attempt. Upon finishing the book, young Frawley destroys the fluid he has invented.

The story has a beautiful and realistic setting. The locations and general details are a credit to the director, Joseph Smiley, and the photography is good. In places the action is confusing, but it is not a fault to the scenario or the director, and the addition of a few properly placed subtitles probably would overcome this. The story is splendidly acted.

Percy Darrell Standing as the superman is excellent. He acts with consistency and his performance is one that is certain to meet with general approval. William W. Cohill as Victor Frawley; George DeCarlton as the father, and Lucy Cotton as Elizabeth render convincing performances.

"At Bay"

Five-Reel Pathe Gold Rooster Play Released Nov. 26 Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

GEORGE SCARBOROUGH'S modern political melodrama, "At Bay," won success as a stage offering when it was produced some time ago, but it is doubtful if the "At Bay" of the stage was as forcible as it is in the five-part adaptation produced by George Fitzmaurice and for release on Pathe's Gold Rooster program. Stories centering about a district attorney and his daughter and the political ring that strives to destroy the former by in some way implicating the latter have held favor with the producers for a long time, but while there have been several of merit, "At Bay" is by long odds the best of its kind.

All playwrights have access to the same material, so it is only a matter or treatment that makes for originality. "At Bay" is original in many respects. The story is, above all, convincing. There is use, but not abuse, of coincidence, and its powerful situations are not forced. The adaptation, by Ouida Bergere, is splendid. The action and the movement of the plot are continuous and sustain the interest from beginning to end. In its interest-compelling story, fine acting and extensive production, "At Bay" is all that a screen melodrama should be.

This picture is another striking example of the superiority of the screen over the other mediums of dramatic expression in procuring melodramatic effect, and those who compare it with the stage production will realize this fully. It is unusual for a five-reel picture to be free from "padding," for in the best of photoplays of this length there is action, entertaining to be sure, and therefore permissible, which has no distinct bearing upon the story, but in "At Bay" one never feels that the outcome is being halted or delayed by unnecessary action.

The story tells of a district attorney who incurs the enmity of the owner of a gambling resort. Flagg, through his influential "clients," arranges to have his employee, Joe Hunter, meet Graham's daughter. Hunter persuades Aline to marry him, and the politicians see that the service is a sham. Later Hunter has a quarrel with Flagg and he deems it necessary to leave the city. He takes Aline's jewels and before departing tells her that the marriage was a fake.

After his hurried departure she writes a note and addresses it to him in care of Flagg. The latter attempts to use this to force her to make her father withdraw as candidate for governor. In a scene with him, Aline, to protect herself, stabs him with a paper cutter. Her friend, Captain Holbrook, cleverly destroys evidence which would implicate her, and he is arrested. The coroner's jury decides that Flagg's death was not caused by the stab wound and Holbrook is released. Hunter's death then leaves her free to marry Captain Holbrook.

Florence Reed as Aline and Frank Sheridan as Graham deserve high praise for their performances. Charles Waldron's portrayal of Captain Holbrook is most pleasing and will be long remembered. Lyster Chambers and DeWitt C. James are included in the cast. George Fitzmaurice can well be proud of this production, which might also be said in connection with the cast and the Pathe Gold Rooster program.

"The Strife Eternal"

This Week's Five-Reel Mutual Master-Picture Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

SUPERB settings and elaborate costumes abound in all the scenes of "The Strife Eternal," which is this week's five-reel Master-Picture offering of the Mutual program. In fact more actors and supernumeraries appear on the screen in this production than have probably ever before been seen in a Mutual offering, for it is declared that no less than 5,748 players appear in one scene alone, and there are others that to the spectator appear as elaborate.

The picture is said to have been produced on this historic ground in which the scenes are laid, and features Miss Blanche Forsythe as Jane Shore, the unfortunate heroine of the tragic romance between a king and the daughter of an humble artisan. Roy Travers impersonates King Edward IV and most strikingly interprets the role assigned him. Richard, Duke of Gloucester, afterwards Richard III, is convincingly played by Rolfe Leslie, who has succeeded in putting into the part all the ugliness and diabolical cunning of that famous tyrant.

As the story runs Jane Shore was the daughter of Master and Dame Winstead, respectable London citizens of the merchant class. She was endowed by nature with extraordinary beauty and charm of mind and probably received more education than fell to the lot of a girl in her station. At an early age she married Matthew Shore, a young goldsmith of good position.

When King Edward IV first set eyes upon Jane, he fell under the enchantment of her loveliness. Forgetting his duty to his lawful wife, he besought the mercer's daughter to become his mistress. But Jane repelled his advances—not even the dazzling attentions of a king being able to blind her eyes to her love for Matthew, her husband. However, by a skillful ruse, Edward caused Matthew to be imprisoned on conviction of treason, and Jane was offered her choice between condemning Shore to death by her refusal to yield to the king, and purchasing her husband's life at the price of her own honor. She sacrificed herself for the man she loved.

Later, hearing that her husband had been killed in battle, she entered with a better heart into her position at court as the favorite of the king. Sir Thomas More said of her: "She never abused her privilege to any man's hurt, but used it to many a man's comfort and relief." Her life was one of great splendor; but being a woman of gentle disposition and unparalleled generosity, she distinguished herself by acts of charity and mercy, and seems to have been exceedingly popular with all classes at that time.

When the king died, his brutal successor, Richard III, singled out this unhappy woman as a butt for his vengeance and spite. She was stripped of power, position, wealth; sentenced to walk barefoot and thinly clad through the crowded streets of London; and then condemned to beggary, the king making it a criminal offence throughout the realm for anybody to offer her food, clothing or shelter. From queen to starveling represents a violent contrast. Not all tragic fiction has to offer us a life-story so remarkable as that of Jane Shore, "in beauty, in generosity, and in misfortune alike unrivalled."

One of the elaborate scenes in "The Strife Eternal."

"The Losing Game"

Three-Reel Essanay Drama, Released November 30. Reviewed by John C. Garrett.

THE Essanay Company has secured in Anzonetta Moore a girl of unusual type and one who registers well on the screen. She is cast in the leading role of "The Losing Game," the three-reel Essanay production to be released Thursday, Novemer 30. There is one very commendable bit of directing in this picture which is well worth mentioning. To convey the idea that Colonel Philips is dead, the director has conceived the idea of showing the home the day after the funeral. All the furniture is covered, and the lawyer is seen paying the servants. No subtitles are used, but the fact that Philips is dead is brought out clearly.

Anzonetta Moore is cast as Helen Brighton; Darwin Karr does splendid work as Henry Philips, and Hugh E. Thompson is the villainous Norman Philips, Henry's half-brother. Peggy Sweeney, Thomas Cummerford and Frank Weber support these stars.

Norman looks with disfavor on Henry.

Henry Philips is the youngest and idolized son of Colonel Philips, while his half-brother Norman, who cares not for his home ties, is not favored by his father. Both of the boys are in love with Helen Brighton, the daughter of Colonel Philips' best friend. One day when Henry goes to call on the girl he takes with him a new camera for her, which she is delighted to receive, and that afternoon he secures her acceptance to his proposal of marriage.

When Norman finds out that his brother has won the girl, he vows to be revenged on him, and at a suggestion from Annabel, the woman he spends most of his time with, steals a necklace from his father's safe and secretes it in Henry's pocket, and the result of this is that Henry is sent from the house and his father makes a new will in favor of Norman.

Henry gets work on board a sailing vessel and leaves the city, while Norman, with his half-brother out of the way, continues his attentions to Helen and at last she consents to marry him. One day while she is sitting in her room thinking of Henry, her brother, who has borrowed her camera, runs in with a picture which he had finished, and it shows Norman standing in the living room of his home with the stolen necklace in his hand. Fate had caused a book to fall, pressing the bulb of the camera and this took the picture of Norman in the act of stealing the necklace. When Norman's underhanded work is discovered, his father makes a new will making Henry the heir, and shortly after he dies.

The boat on which Henry was working is wrecked and after some days on a desert island he is rescued and returns to the city and arrives home just in time to see Norman in the act of stealing the last will. A fight ensues, in which Norman is overpowered, and Henry's name now cleared, he sees happiness ahead for him and Helen.

"White Gods"

Chapter Thirteen of Pathe's "Neal of the Navy" Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

IN the opening scene of Chapter Thirteen of the Pathe-Balboa serial, "Neal of the Navy," it is found that Annette and her party have arrived safely on the cannibal island. At the end of the twelfth chapter the spectator was not informed of their progress after leaving the wrecked ship in a lifeboat, consequently it comes in the nature of a surprise to find that they are on the same island with Hernandez and the Brute. "White Gods" is the title of this episode which shows the seekers of Lost Island and their enemy on an island where there is much pretty tropical scenery.

The excitement in this release is furnished by a tribe of cannibals who in their efforts to please Hernandez, whom they believe to be a god, capture Annette and fight fiercely to hold her, but the intervention of Neal, and some sailors prevent this. William Courtleigh, Jr., as Neal, gives a good account of himself in the fight as well as in the several other scenes in which he appears in "White Gods." If in the episodes gone before it seemed that fate was with Hernandez, "White Gods" will convince one that besides fate the smuggler has another great asset—the Brute.

The queer creature who was buffeted about by Hernandez and his friends since his first appearance in the story, comes into his own in this episode. He is treated with the deference shown a king by the cannibals, who think him a god risen from the seas. The Brute has been one of the most interesting characters in the story. He has been treated as something mysterious, and in actions and appearance, as well as the fact that he has shown a strange attachment to Annette, he has been a mystery. The end of the second reel finds him seriously injured, and the ship's doctor tells Annette there is a chance of his recovery, but it is only a chance.

The next chapter, which will be the last of "Neal of the Navy," promises to be replete with interesting developments. Annette has been searching for the island of riches, which is her inheritance for some time, and in this episode she learns that Lost Island is but a short distance from her present location on the cannibal island. Lillian Lorraine is not called upon to do much acting in "White Gods," for while she is in most of the scenes her greatest task is that of being roughly handled by the cannibals. Edwin Brady as Hernandez has put to good use the many opportunities his part has given him and William Conklin's work has been entirely satisfactory throughout the story.

The death of Jane Shore in the Mutual Master-Picture "The Strife Eternal."

DANIELS AND STAFF SEE FILM

Selected Audience in Washington Given Advance Showing of Lubin's Big Play of Preparedness, "The Nation's Peril."

Secretary Josephus Daniels, with his chiefs of departments and a selected audience of more than fifty, were interested viewers on Thursday afternoon, November 18, at the Army and Navy Department Building in Washington, of the big Lubin photoplay of preparedness and the hyphenated American, "The Nation's Peril."

The audience was particularly enthusiastic over the marvelous photographic record of the actual firing at night of the big guns of the warships of the Atlantic fleet and the bombardment under the cover of darkness of the "Lubin Villa" and Newport.

There was no scant measure of applause at the conclusion of the projection of the picture and the sentiment voiced by the audience was one of hearty compliment of the Lubin company for the competent way in which the subject has been pictured and presented.

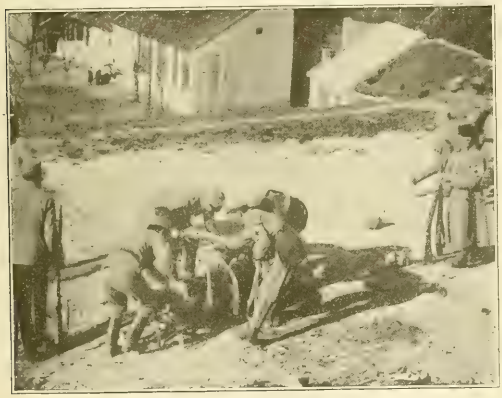
"The Nation's Peril" will be taken to the naval training station at Newport during the coming week, when it will be presented before that body and the men of the training school who acted for Director George Terwilliger during the making of the picture.

Vitagraph's Clip Sheet

One of the latest clip sheets to be issued is that which comes from the office of the Vitagraph Company and which is captioned the Vitagraph News Service.

The little sheet is distinctive, carefully gotten up, contains bright and newsy items pertaining to coming Vitagraph productions and is so paragraphed that an editor can easily choose an item of any length or style that he wishes for use in his columns. It will be issued twice a week in the interests of newspapers and magazines, devoting a portion of their space to motion picture news.

Capt. W. J. Hannon, president of the Nola Film Company, New Orleans, La., is in New York, and makes an announcement that he has just closed a contract with the Associated Film Sales Corporation whereby he is to make one five reel feature every month, to be released exclusively on the Associated program in addition to the regular service.



"The Battles of a Nation"

American Correspondent Film Company's War Picture Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE American Correspondent Film Company's new war picture, "The Battles of a Nation," was shown to the press on Thursday, November 18, at the Park theater, New York, where the film is now playing. The six reels of "The Battle of a Nation" are made up of views photographed by the A. C. F.'s special correspondent, A. K. Dawson. The various views have been judiciously assembled. The picture tells almost a complete history of the Teutonic activities in the east since the commencement of the war. The film was assembled by Tom Bret and its arrangement is most satisfactory. First there is seen the agricultural work being done in Poland, then the cities where no signs of war can be found; later there are views taken during the march on Warsaw.

The photographer traveled with the forces that captured Warsaw. In addition to the interest which these pictures hold for the general public, they probably contain much that will interest military men, as each war seems to develop a new system of warfare. This is a war of big guns, and the guns used by the Teuton armies in "the eastern theater of war" are seen in action and at close range. It takes two full days to assemble and put in working condition one of the heavy guns. The work of assembling the guns is shown at various stages during the process of mounting them.

The pictures taken during the bombardment of Warsaw required daring on the part of the photographer, who placed his camera at a vantage point, regardless of the dangers to which he exposed himself. One of the guns which were responsible for the capture of Warsaw is shown while it is performing its destructive work. The huge shell can be seen as it is hurled from the gun, and its explosion in the distance is indicated by a vale of smoke. There are one or two views of shells striking the ground. Earth and rocks are scattered to the four winds.

A scene from "Battles of a Nation."

"The Battles of a Nation" does not put war in the light of that which is glorious. Its grimmest phases are shown in a scene where some victims are carried from the field, some dead, others suffering tortures from their wounds. Then after the battle some of the innocent victims, and perhaps the greatest sufferers of all, women and children, carrying their few worldly possessions, are wandering from the utterly ruined villages to parts they themselves seem to know not. Later still, one sees the Russian prisoners burying their dead comrades. These are sights that show what war really means, and they are sights not soon forgotten.

The views have been reproduced from original negatives received by the American Correspondent Film Company from A. K. Dawson. There is no doubt concerning their authenticity. To see them is all one needs to convince one of this fact, and knowing that they are photographs of things which actually happened, and are even now happening, makes more thrilling the bombardment, more gruesome the prone victims and more pitiable the bewildered women and children.

Those who advocate preparedness for war will find much to interest them in "The Battles of a Nation," for the wonderful organization which Germany has built up and which has been and still is the admiration of nearly all the world, is graphically described. The system or organization amounts to more than well-drilled men whose bodies are in fine condition and it amounts to more than an adequate supply of arms and ammunition. There is also the organization of the agricultural and industrial resources of the country. The soil is made to produce food, and this food is economically distributed. None of the soil's power to produce is wasted, nor is the produce wasted. Both agriculture and industry are efficiently handled by the government.

Provisions and munitions for first line of defense near Warsaw.

"Duke" Aldis Joins Pallas Pictures

"Duke" Aldis, otherwise known to the Los Angeles smart set as "F. F.," has been engaged as assistant to William D. Taylor, director of Pallas Pictures, the new Paramount organization. Aldis, who is quite a society lion, has been quietly devoted to the motion picture game for the past year or two, starting in pluckily at the bottom with the determination to climb to a director's honors, and this is the first success he has deemed significant enough to justify mentioning to his society coterie. Naturally, of course, there was much astonishment and surprise that the cotillion hero was now a film man.

Aldis was educated at St. Elphin's College in Kent, England, and then was sent to the continent where he studied at Osnabruck College in Germany and at the College du Cateau in La Cateau, France, a town near Lille and at present held by the Germans. Before he was 19 Aldis was on the firing line in the Boer War in South Africa as a member of the South African Constabulary, the crack cavalry regiment of the Cape country. He figured in countless night attacks and battles, but his health broke down toward the end of the campaign and he was invalided home shortly after Diamond Hill, the decisive engagement preceding the fall of Pretoria. He was presented with the war medals and bars awarded by Queen Victoria and King Edward VII.

Regarding the story published in a theatrical magazine stating that Pathe had formed a $50,000,000 combination with several other motion picture concerns, General Manager Louis J. Gasnier at once sent out an emphatic denial that such an alliance had been made or even considered. Advertisements addressed to the public were placed in the New York papers to this effect as soon as the story was brought to Mr. Gasnier's attention. In a statement issued at his office he stamped the story as a senseless fabrication.

News of the Week as Shown in Films

Results of terrible cyclone in the south as seen in Mississippi. Copyright, 1915, Pathe News.

Aerial motion picture camera added to equipment of Chicago Police Bureau. Copyright, 1915, Hearst-Selig News Pictorial.

Pathe news Commissioner from France on board ship. Copyright, 1915, Universal Animated Weekly.

New Lackawanna viaduct at Nicholson, Pa. Copyright, 1915, Mutual Weekly.

Crippled Children of Chicago are guests at the Annual Flower Show Copyright, 1915, Pathe News.

Blowing away the roof of the plant in Trenton, N. J. Copyright, 1915, Hearst-Selig News Pictorial.

Brevities of the Business

PACIFIC COAST NEWS

By "Capt. Jack" Poland.

Exhibitors of Los Angeles report splendid business. Theaters on the principal streets have been enjoying capacity houses during the present month and the outlook for the holiday patronage was never before so good as it is at this time.

"Damaged Goods," the picture shown at Quinn's Superba, has been playing to crowded houses all the week. In front of the house people have been lined up for half a block down the thoroughfare waiting their turn to purchase tickets. This is the picture that practically caused the disruption of the Los Angeles Board of Censors, resulted in the retirement under protest of President A. P. Tugwell, and the resignation of Secretary Jorgensen. This precipitated a panic among the censorship board and Mayor Charles Sebastian is selecting an entire new board, which will probably be appointed this week. The city council adopted a resolution Wednesday that no person financially interested directly or indirectly in the moving picture business shall be allowed to serve upon the board of censors. In the meantime, however, exhibitor Quinn is reaping the benefit of the most prolific quality of publicity and filling the coffers of the box office with big money.

Mabel Normand, the Keystone star, while attempting a daring feat in an aeroplane Wednesday afternoon with comedian Chester Conklin, had a narrow escape from instant death. The big military monoplane got beyond control of Conklin and before he could stop it Miss Normand was dragged nearly a hundred yards with terrific force, sustaining injuries which will incapacitate her for film work for some time. Conklin was in the driver's seat and before he could be extricated was severely burned on the legs and arms. Mabel Normand has only recently recovered from an almost fatal accident sustained in a comedy scene wherein she was hit on the head and miraculously escaped concussion of the brain, being confined to the hospital at the point of death for several days.

Seth D. Perkins, manager of the Garrick theater, has been appointed director general for a great film and showmen celebration at Shrine Auditorium, December 31. The idea is to raise funds for legislative purposes in the interests of motion picture exhibitors. The following theater owners are on the committee of arrangements: Judge A. P. Tugwell, former president of the censor board and now president of the Exhibitors' League; S. MacIntyre, J. S. Lustig, M. Gore, W. H. Cornfeldt and Jack Root.

The Motion Picture Directors' Association Grand Ball and Buffet at Hotel Alexandria Thanksgiving night promises to be the society de luxe event of motion-picturedom of Southern California. The directors have made it a semi-charitable event. The funds derived are to be used to endow two beds in prominent local hospitals to be used in emergencies for worthy players who are unable to "make good" in case of sickness or accidents. Allen Curtis is chairman of the executive committee of arrangements, and he says "There'll be something doing in the way of terpsichorean productions that will prove the originality of directors who are members of the new association."

Warren Kerrigan is now completing the last five reels of "Terence O'Rourke," under the direction of Otis Turner for the Universal program.

Paul Bourgoeis is now a Universal animal educator. This week he is making his first picture with his own supporting company, entitled "The Trail of the Tigress," with Betty Schade playing leads.

Norval MacGregor is now directing Big U comedies. His first presentation will be "Her Wayward Parents," starring "Mother" Benson and "Daddy" Manley, with "Babe" Otto in the cast.

William C. Dowlan is producing a feature picture for the Universal in which Gloria Fonda, the elected queen of the Big U beauty contest, appears in the leading role. It is entitled "Troubled Waters" and Mr. Dowling is playing leads with a strong supporting cast of players.

Carter DeHaven is in the midst of his new picture, "The Wrong Door," a five-reel Broadway Universal special. Mr. DeHaven is directing and playing leads with Flora Parker DeHaven supporting. Stephen S. Norton is photographing the play.

Francis Ford is expected back to the California studios after a vacation with the home folks in New York. It is said that he has been taking advantage of his vacation by writing a special serial that will startle scenario writers.

MID-WEST NEWS

By William Noble

Texas

Hearing of the application for the dissolution of the injunction prohibiting picture shows from operating in Fort Worth, Tex., will take place in the sixty-seventh district court November 16. The case was originally set for last Monday, but was postponed on account of the pressure of other business.

Missouri

At Columbia, Mo., November 6, workmen struck a three-foot vein of coal while digging the foundation for basement for the new $40,000 theater now being constructed at that place.

CHICAGO GOSSIP

There were about 50 exhibitors at the Monday morning showing of the Vitagraph features at the Olympic theater, who roundly applauded the five-reel feature picture entitled "The Cave Man," featuring Robert Edeson. Exhibitors now have an opportunity of seeing all the Vitagraph pictures under the conditions in which they will themselves show these pictures, and we believe that the adoption of this method for showing advance releases is one that will assist the Vitagraph Company greatly.

There was quite a gathering of the clans at the Sherman House Thursday evening, November 18, to listen to Samuel L. Rothapfel—an exhibitor. Joseph A. Finn was toastmaster. The rank and file of exhibitors heard a great many things during Rothapfel's talk which they can use in their business, if they will. "Roxy" left on the 10:30 train for St. Louis, so the meeting broke up early. After the session MacQuade was treated to a glass of the Standard Oil Company's new paraffin drink, "Sanalax." For reports regarding results ask MacQuade. J. E. O'Toole was the man at the door and as is usual in the film business he

Film Market Quotations and Financial Gossip

Supplied by R. D. Small of A. E. Butler & Co., Chicago.

	Bid	Asked
American Film Co., Inc.	92	98
Biograph Co.	40	54
Colonial Motion Picture Corp.	1	4*
General Film Corp, pref.	40	45½
Mutual Film Corp., pref.	49	52
Mutual Film Corp., com.	48	51
North Amer. Film Corp., pref.	72	..
North Amer. Film Corp., com.	68	72
New York Motion Picture Corp.	..	60
Thanhouser Film Corp.	2	3¾*
Triangle Film Corp.	6	6½*
Universal Film Manfg. Co.	190	..
Vogue Films, Inc.	122	..
World Film Corp.	4	4¼*

*Par $5.00

American Film Co., Inc.—Books close on December 1 and the quarterly dividend of 2½% will be paid on or about December 10. The company is in a very flourishing financial condition with an output showing a fairly constant ratio of increase.

General Film Corporation.—Several vital changes have taken place in this company. J. J. Kennedy has resigned as president and is to be succeeded by J. A. Berst, who was formerly with the Selig Company in Chicago. It has also been announced that the production of the various constituent manufacturing companies will be reduced to 42 releases and they will be selected on merit. In place of paying a regular price per foot, manufacturers are now permitted to share in the receipts of their own productions, which means a "survival of the fittest" with a vengeance; in other words—film productions of no merit will not be supported by the distributing company.

Thanhouser Film Corporation.—Is in demand at $2.00 per share. It is understood this company at the first of the month had a very substantial cash balance in the bank, and that its financial condition is very considerably improved since the first of the year.

New York Motion Picture Corporation.—Is offered at 60 without any buying power.

collected in advance. Mr. O'Toole is now with the Mutual Film Corporation and is making good with a vengeance.

Howard Hola is the new manager of the Pathe Chicago exchange, succeeding V. H. Hodupp, who resigned, to manage the New York Twenty-third street branch for the General Film Company.

W. N. Selig took the Century to New York on Sunday to attend a deferred meeting of the General Film Company.

George K. Spoor returned from California on November 20 full of big ideas. Mr. Spoor's idea of a private office is a Pullman compartment where he knows no one will come running in at an inopportune moment.

Lockwood and McGeary have moved to room 410 the Mallers building, occupying quarters with Linick and Melchoir, the new feature film concern which has just opened up.

"Walt" Bloeser, the advertising manager of the amusement department of the Chicago Tribune, who has just returned from a protracted eastern trip, prepared a lengthy speech which he proposed to deliver at the recent Rothapfel-Mutual banquet at the Sherman House. The early breaking up of the meeting prevented Mr. Bloeser from making the speech, therefore, copies will be delivered to any one desiring same if they address this office.

W. E. Geary says that as a banquet it was a very fine picture. Diagrams of this joke will be furnished at the office of the Nichols-Finn Company by the famous film publicity reformer whose initials are adapted from those of the greatest reformer of all times.

The following letter was received this week. The writer calls attention to some common errors:

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 17, 1915.

Motography, Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen: In your columns will you please inform the directors that even Florida "crackers" know that palmettoes and cabbage palms do not grow in the streets of Paris, also that women of culture do not walk the streets of Paris and sit in the sidewalk cafes with uncovered heads, that the Bell and Automatic telephones of the U. S. type have not been installed in that city. Please tell them that houseboats on the Nile do not draw 12 feet of water; that the tying of a turban requires some skill and the way it is arranged has some significance.

Tell them, also, that the women of India do not wear the garb of ancient Rome. I'll stop here for there is considerable that you might tell them.

Yours sincerely,

(Signed) C. Gardner.

Dorothy Graham, popular young actress, who has been playing ingenue parts with the Palace Players.

Benjamin Judell, manager of the Chicago office of the Mutual Film Corporation, left on Friday last for a visit to the Mutual offices in Minneapolis, Fargo, Sioux Falls, Des Moines and Omaha.

The weather was so raw and chill on Tuesday of this week that Chris Whelan, finding the steam pipes were not working as they should, closed his famous office on the curb in front of the Mallers building, on Wabash avenue, and adjourned with his callers to the lobby of the nearby structure. This seems to be the first casualty due to the recent cold snap.

W. R. Rothacker is authority for the statement that the Industrial Moving Picture Company at the termination of its fiscal year just finished, declared a special 40% cash dividend. This in addition to the 1% dividend it has declared regularly every month.

At the American Theatrical Hospital Association Ball, held Saturday evening, November 20, at the First Regiment Armory, Francis X. Bushman and George L. Cox were the only two gentlemen observed wearing brand new Baby Seal lined overcoats, thereby upholding the social traditions of both New York and Chicago.

NOTES FROM ALL OVER

The first Triangle Robert Harron-Norma Talmadge starring vehicle, "The Missing Links," has been completed at the Fine Arts California studio, and from present signs it will be a very successful comedy-melodrama.

Old Colonel Draper has heard for the last time the studio call of "Lights!" The most famous "Type" actor of the motion pictures, after a brief illness, departed to the great beyond on November 8, and his many friends of the screen were shocked by the sudden news.

Miss Fannie Ward, the famous American comedienne, is completing her second Lasky production, an original photoplay entitled, "The Cheat," by Hector Turnbull. Cecil B. DeMille is directing the picture.

Mary Alden, who was cast to play with Marie Doro in the Triangle play, "The Wood Nymph," was prevented from playing the part by a sudden attack of illness. Miss Alden is under the care of a physician at her home. It seems a slight neglected cold developed into a serious case of the "grippe." However, at this writing, from doctor's reports, she is improving rapidly in health. As a substitute, Cora Drew, a member of the Fine Arts stock forces, was selected to play the part.

In the very near future Balboa will release a new serial photoplay in which Ruth Roland and Frank Mayo will be seen as the featured players. It is the joint work of Will M. Ritchey and H. M. Horkheimer. The former is Balboa's chief scenario editor, while the latter is the company's president and general manager. Director Sherwood Macdonald is in charge of the production and William Beckway is holding the camera on it.

"Black Fear," the sensational five-part Metro feature, now in process of production at the Rolfe Photo Plays Inc. studio, has been delayed for two weeks, because General Manager Max Karger, of the Rolfe forces, and Director John W. Noble could not find a suitable boy to play one of the most important roles in the production. The problem has not only been solved, but they were fortunate enough to obtain the services of John Tansey, the fourteen-year-old prodigy, who has just finished a course in a private school, and who is counted the best boy actor in America.

Ashley Miller took his company for the fourth episode in his Ashton Kirk series for the Pathe Gold Roosters, including Arnold Daly, Sheldon Lewis, Pearl White and George Probert, down to Lakewood, where a number of scenes will be taken inside and outside of the sumptuous home there of Mr. George J. Gould, who will entertain the company on his estate.

Fania Marinoff is to play opposite Holbrook Blinn in "McTeague," now in course of production at the World Film studio at Fort Lee.

William E. Wing, well known for his ability as a scenario writer, has had two of his feature stories accepted for production by the Fine Arts Film studio.

Frank Hitchcock, nationally eminent as the ex-postmaster of the United States, was a visitor at Inceville, this week. He was escorted about the big Santa Monica plant by Producer Thomas H. Ince and appeared to enjoy the experience thoroughly as the various phases of the industry were explained to him. Only twice in his life, Mr. Hitchcock declared, has he ever been inside a motion picture theater, but as he left Inceville vowing that he would return at an early date, he stated the visit had converted him into an enthusiastic "fan."

Virginia Richdale Kerrigan is the name of the first baby girl born at Universal City. The little lady, who is the daughter of Wallace Kerrigan, superintendent of the Universal ranch, made her appearance on this mundane sphere on the morning of November 4. Her uncle is J. Warren Kerrigan, famous star of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, and "Handsome Jack" is almost as proud of the little one as is his brother Wallace.

"Neal of the Navy," the patriotic photoplay serial which Balboa has been filming for Pathe, was finished this week. Four months were devoted to the making of the fourteen episodes. They might have been crowded through in less time, but the Horkheimer Brothers do not try for speed records in their productions. Their aim is quality, not quantity.

Bob E. Tris, the traveling special representative of the Lubin Company, has returned to Phialdelphia after a trip extending over the past three months, during which time he has visited every General Film exchange in the country and Canada and has addressed many gatherings of exhibitors.

To insure detail accuracy in its productions, the Fine Arts Film Company has engaged R. Ellis Wales and has inaugurated a library and research department. Mr. Wales has had considerable experience in library work and will surround himself with a competent staff.

Master Frank Longacre, aged nine years, appeared in person at the Loew New York theater Friday evening, November 12, when the picture, "Hearts of Men," in which he appears, was released. The picture was made by the Charles K. Harris Company and is released through the World Film Corporation.

Although visiting stars report that they thoroughly enjoy themselves while being filmed at the Jacksonville, Fla., studio of the Gaumont Company, Malcolm Williams, the popular Broadway star, decided to take no chances. Hence, he slipped away to Philadelphia a day before he was to start south to do a big picture for Gaumont, and was married to Miss Florence Reed. Their romance developed while they were in pictures together, and it is therefore entirely fitting that they should register happiness and honeymoon contentment in a motion picture atmosphere.

Florence La Badie, the Thanhouser (Mutual) star, has been so anxious to appear in a comedy that Mr. Thanhouser recently consented to let her play in one. Consequently the attractive Mutual star is scheduled to appear in "All Aboard," a one-reel comedy in which she is supported by Samuel Niblack, Ethyle Cook, Lawrence Swinbourne, in the Mutual Program November 29.

Eugene Nowland, Thanhouser director working out details of a scene in a future production.

The Smalleys are again on the screen. At Universal City they are producing and appearing in Rufus Steele's five-reel story, "Hop." The company a few days ago returned from San Francisco, where they staged many of the exterior scenes. Supporting the Smalleys are Marie Walcamp, C. Normand Hammond and Juan de la Cruz.

One of the most interesting persons connected with Balboa is May Brotherton. The picture goers do not know her directly, for she is never visible in any of the Balboa feature films; yet her work is always in evidence. Miss Brotherton has charge of the assembly department. That is where the various parts of the film are pasted together after having been properly cut. Miss Brotherton is an expert in this line, having started years ago when picture making was in its infancy.

The five-reel feature "The Danger Signal," taken from Rupert Hughes' story "Canavan" will be released on December 1. Billy Sherwood, who played the heavy juvenile in Kalem's "A Night of Terror" opposite Marguerite Courtot in the "Ventures of Marguerite" series, plays the young lover in this strong political play.

Joseph A. Richmond, director of the Dra-Ko Film Company, had the misfortune to break both the bones in his right forearm. It is an apt commentary on the chances of life that Mr. Richmond, who has never hesitated to take his own share of the risks necessary for the production of Dra-Ko pictures, should have injured himself while cranking his automobile.

Another wonderful ovation and public demonstration honoring Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, the popular Metro stars, was given for these two artists in Chicago, Saturday, November 20. After making a flying trip from New York on Friday, where they are at work on Quality-Metro features, Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne were met at the railroad station by a long line of automobiles, and they rode at the head of the procession with one continued ovation until they reached the Blackstone Hotel. On Saturday night they were the guests of honor at the big ball given in the First Regiment Armory under the auspices of the allied theatrical and screen clubs of Chicago, for the Theatrical Hospital benefit. Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne led the grand march at the ball, which is the biggest annual event of its kind in the country.

C. Gardner Sullivan, the prolific and versatile writer of the forces of Thomas H. Ince, returned from his first vacation in five years. He spent it, he declares, fishing for tuna off the coast of the Santa Catalina Island, but there are those among his fellows at Inceville, who are more inclined to believe that he went scouting for "Ideas" in the neighborhood of the San Francisco exposition. None, however, will doubt that he was entitled to rusticate wherever it pleased him most. He has been turning out most of Ince's big forceful stories for nearly two years.

Tom Terriss has given his London home in Bedford Park to the British Government to use as a hospital for returned wounded British soldiers. This was the home of Terriss' famous father, Will Terriss, than whom no English actor was more popular. As it is filled with mementoes and testimonials from all sorts of people, from royalty down, it should prove an interesting place in which a fighting Briton may recuperate and convalesce.

Billie Reeves of Lubin and his director Earl Metcalfe.

"Camille," the master work of Albert Capellani and the greatest role of Clara Kimball Young, is expected to be released on December 20. Extra care and extra time are being devoted to the finishing of the picture in order that the fullest possible justice can be done to all concerned, and that Miss Young can be presented to her legions of admirers with every completeness and adequateness.

Hamilton Revelle, the Metro star, who is playing a stage engagement with "Fair and Warmer" at the Eltinge Theater, has begun work on another Rolfe-Metro feature production, which is unnamed as yet. He has signed a long contract with the Rolfe Photo Plays Inc., and will appear in at least five big productions.

The Triangle opening in Los Angeles, at the Clune Auditorium Theater on Monday, November 8, was a great success. The program consisted of Douglas Fairbanks in "The Lamb," produced by W. Christy Cabanne; "My Valet," Sennett-Keystone production; and "The Iron Strain," Ince play featuring Dustin Farnum.

Under the direction of Lloyd Carleton, who has just joined the ranks of Universal producers, Hobart Bosworth is this week at work on the production of a five-reel filmization of Bret Harte's play, "Two Men of Sandy Bar."

Charles Richman, who plays the leading role in J. Stuart Blackton's masterpiece, "The Battle Cry of Peace," was called upon for a speech recently at the Vitagraph Theater. He acquitted himself admirably by telling two or three funny stories.

William H. Haddock, director of Multiple Reel Rialto Star Features for the Gaumont Company, is the only man who has been elected president of the Actors' Society for three consecutive terms.

Oscar Eagle, who has just completed the five-reel feature, "The Sins of Society," in which Robert Warwick has the stellar role, has taken a company south for the purpose of filming his next subject, "The Ambition of Mark Truitt."

The fashion section of the Mutual Weekly is a feature which continues to interest women wherever shown. As an evidence of his interest in this department, Editor Pell Mitchell has secured hand-painted films direct from Paris which show the latest creations of the fashion center of the world. This will be shown in an early edition of the Mutual Weekly.

James Montgomery Flagg visited the Vitagraph studio recently to watch his new comedy, "Is Christmas a Bore?" being produced by Sidney Drew. Mrs. Drew and Mary Maurice are in the cast.

Madeleine Traverse is to play opposite Robert Warwick in World Film's picturization of "The Ambition of Mark Truitt" now being directed by Oscar Eagle.

Miss Stella Hammerstein, daughter of Oscar Hammerstein, the grand opera impresario, has gone to Jacksonville, Fla., to appear in a Gaumont production, "The Ace of Death." This photodrama is a multiple-reel Rialto Star Feature on the Mutual Program, and will be released on Mutual Program late in December.

De Wolf Hopper, a potent figure in the theatrical world, who is now playing in a series of Triangle-Fine Arts plays, entertained at his California bungalow, recently, William S. Hart, the forceful western actor appearing in Ince-Triangle plays, and Digby Bell, famous as a comic opera star and for his recent work in "The Education of Mr. Pipp" and "Shore Acres."

Sydney Ayres, the Universal star who is once more directing himself, is at work on the production of a three-reel story of the Canadian northwest by F. McGrew Willis entitled "John o' the Mountains." A number of the exterior scenes will be taken in the mountain country back of San Bernardino. Doris Pawn plays opposite Ayres in this production.

The publicity department of the Gaumont Company has just issued the first of its series of clip sheets to supplement the work being done on the Mutual Program. This will be sent weekly to newspapers and periodicals and to all exhibitors requesting it. "Gaumont Gossip," as it is called, will deal with customary data about Gaumont photoplays and actors which will appear of interest to the motion picture "fan."

A. K. Greenland, who was assigned to the publicity department of the Raver Film Corporation, while engaged in special work on several other propositions, leaves Mr. Raver's staff to devote his energies to the latter duties exclusively, as soon as his successor has been appointed. Feeling that insufficient time could be given to Mr. Raver's company while doing other work, Mr. Greenland decided to give up his present post. He leaves with the best wishes of the company. Greenland will devote his major attentions to the Expert Service Corporation, a lower Manhattan advertising agency, the growth of which demands most of his time nowadays.

SOME NEW THEATERS

Minnesota.

M. L. Cohen is building a $60,000 motion picture theater at 2900-06 Hennepin avenue, Minneapolis. It will be of brick, steel, terra cotta and reinforced concrete construction, and will be modern and fireproof in every way, and will be ready for occupancy in the spring.

A hearing will take place November 23 on the application of the American Theater company for a license for a moving picture theater at 929-931 West Seventh street, St. Paul. This is a new location.

The addition to the Princess theater in Wabasha is nearly completed.

The foundation for a new moving picture theater to cost approximately $25,000 is about to be laid at 1023 East Franklin, Minneapolis. The theater will be owned and managed by C. E. Marr.

Missouri.

Plans are being made for a new moving picture theater at Tarkio. Messrs. Taylor and Hackett have secured options on the lots on Main street, where the airdome is now located, and have given orders for an architect to draw plans for the new building.

Al and Pegtoa Campbell, of Chicago, have leased the Kinney opera house, Memphis, and took possession November 1.

True Taylor has opened a motion picture theater in the McDowell building, Graham, and will operate same on Tuesdays, Fridays and Saturdays.

Boys and girls of fifteen and under are being denied admission to the motion picture theaters in Belleville on account of an epidemic of typhoid fever at the request of the Board of Health.

Nebraska.

Otto Wolf has purchased the Crystal theater in Madison.

Hugh McCaffrey is building a moving picture theater at 3307 Leavenworth street, Omaha; cost $10,000.

R. D. Shirley will have a splendid picture theater with seating capacity for 700 on the main floor and 200 in the balcony, at Twenty-fourth and Farnam streets, Omaha. Phelan & Shirley are the builders and John McDonald is architest. The theater equipped will cost $30,000, and will be strictly a photoplay theater.

L. D. Smith has sold his motion picture show business in Pierce to John F. Bruhn of Norfolk.

New York.

Announcement is made that Louis Mann and Harry Hellman will build a moving picture theater on the plot at the southeast corner of Western avenue and Quail street, Albany.

Motion picture theater owned by Thomas O'Brien at 1820 Genesee street, Buffalo, damaged $200 by fire. An overheated furnace caused the blaze.

Cosmofotofilm Co., Inc., Manhattan.—General photographic, motion picture and theatrical business; capital, $100,000. Incorporators: L. Cohen, 225 West 105th street; A. A. Deutsch, 108 Broadway, New York city; J. Deutsch, 23 Stuyvesant avenue, Brooklyn.

Ocean Film Corporation, Manhattan.—General motion picture film business; capital, $200,000. Incorporators: J. L. Dudley, 126 West 46th street; W. J. Ennison, E. M. Huth, 35 Wall street, New York city.

Albany is to have another large moving picture theater. This one is to be located at North Swan and Second streets, Arbor Hill. The promoters include James F. Dolan and William F. Reilly.

A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the Seventy-seventh Street Theater company, Inc., moving picture theater, at the corner of Seventy-seventh street and Broadway, New York. Liabilities are $3,000 and assets $2,000.

The Louis Hanson moving picture theater on lower Main street, Whitesboro, was gutted by fire of unknown origin November 8.

Equa Film company, motion pictures, photoplays, apparatus, $10,000; A. D. Holmes, M. M. Eisenberg, E. M. James, 97 Hamilton.

Al R. Sherry will manage the Colonial theater in Elmira and considerable improvements will be made.

The Ivan Film Productions, New York $1,000 to $60,000.

Columbia Pictures corporation, New York, $50,000 to $100,000.

North Dakota.

The re-opening of the remodeled Arcade theater in Minot will take place shortly.

Ohio.

The Forest theater on Forest avenue near Reading road, Avondale, has been leased for a period of eleven years by T. W. McMahon and Charles Schoengold. In addition to the Forest theater which has a seating capacity of 800, the deal includes an airdome adjoining the theater proper with a seating capacity of 1,000. A number of improvements are planned by the new management and feature pictures exclusively will be shown.

N. E. Cheney has sold the Orpheum picture theater in Hillsboro to S. C. Vale of Dennison.

Several hundred Cincinnati stockholders of the Highland Film corporation will be interested in the announcement that James T. Ford will resign as president and become second vice-president. H. M. Ricketts will leave the treasurership, it is understood. A Cincinnati capitalist will be made president, it is said.

J. W. Criser will shortly open a motion picture theater on High street, Oxford.

Pennsylvania.

The Star theater in Milo has been sold by Starr Brothers to George G. Van Zant of Omaha.

T. C. Mishler has disposed of the Mishler theater in Altoona to the Triangle Theater company who will take charge November 15.

W. J. Haines will manage the new Strand theater on State street, between Ninth and Tenth streets, Erie, which is expected to open shortly.

Complete Record of Current Films

Believing the classification of film pictures by the nature of their subjects to be of greater importance to the exhibitor than classification by maker, MOTOGRAPHY has adopted this style in listing current films. Exhibitors are urged to make use of this convenient tabulation in making up their programs. Films will be listed as long in advance of their release dates as possible. Film manufacturers are requested to send us their bulletins as early as possible. Reasonable care is used, and the publishers cannot be responsible for errors.

General Program

Monday.

D	11-22	The Law's Decree	Essanay	3,000
D	11-22	A Woman's Wiles	Kalem	3,000
D	11-22	An Ambassador From the Dead	Lubin	1,000
C	11-22	A Thing Or Two In Movies (No. 4 of the Chronicles of Bloom Center)	Selig	2,000
T	11-22	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 93, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	11-22	Love and Law	Vitagraph	1,000

Tuesday.

D	11-23	Love's Enduring Flame	Biograph	2,000
D	11-23	The Papered Door	Essanay	3,000
C	11-23	Limberger's Victory	Lubin	1,000
D	11-23	The Impersonation of Tom	Selig	1,000
D	11-23	Saints and Sinners	Vitagraph	3,000

Wednesday.

D	11-24	The Reproach of Annesley	Biograph	3,000
C	11-24	Cartoons In a Sanitarium	Edison	1,000
C	11-24	Vernon How Bailey's Sketch Book	Essanay	1,000
D	11-24	An Enemy of Mankind (No. 1 of the Stingaree Series)	Kalem	3,000
D	11-24	The Meddlesome Darling	Lubin	2,000
C	11-24	Sunny Jim and the Family Story	Vitagraph	1,000

Thursday.

D	11-25	The Man From Town	Biograph	1,000
C	11-25	It Happened in Snakeville	Essanay	1,000
D	11-25	As the Twig Is Bent	Lubin	3,000
T	11-25	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 94, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	11-25	Ghosts and Flypaper	Vitagraph	1,000

Friday.

D	11-26	Two Daughters of Eve	Biograph	1,000
D	11-26	The Ring of the Borgias	Edison	4,000
D	11-26	Broncho Billy's Love Affair	Essanay	1,000
D	11-26	A Society Schemer (No. 5 of the Ventures of Marguerite)	Kalem	1,000
D	11-26	Meg o' the Cliffs	Lubin	1,000
C	11-26	Pressing Business	Vim	1,000
C	11-26	All for the Love of a Girl	Vitagraph	1,000

Saturday.

D	11-27	Roses of Memory	Edison	1,000
D	11-27	The Edge of Things	Essanay	3,000
D	11-27	The Dynamite Train	Kalem	1,000
C	11-27	Blaming the Duck or Ducking the Blame	Lubin	1,000
D	11-27	Young Love	Selig	1,000
C	11-27	A "Model" Wife	Vitagraph	2,000

Monday.

D	11-29	The Night of Souls	Essanay	3,000
D	11-29	The Luring Lights	Kalem	4,000
D	11-29	The Legend of the Poisoned Pool	Lubin	1,000
D	11-29	Just as I Am	Selig	2,000
T	11-29	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 95, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	11-29	One Plus One Equals One	Vitagraph	1,000

Tuesday.

D	11-30	Count Twenty	Biograph	2,000
D	11-30	The Losing Game	Essanay	3,000
C	11-30	Only a Country Girl	Kalem	1,000
C	11-30	Which Is Which	Lubin	1,000
D	11-30	Bad Man Boobs	Selig	1,000
D	11-30	The Mystery of the Empty Room	Vitagraph	2,000

Wednesday.

D	12-1	The Hungarian Nabob	Biograph	4,000
E	12-1	Microscopic Pond Life	Edison	1,000
C	12-1	The Fable of "The Low Down Expert on the Subject of Babies"	Essanay	1,000
D	12-1	A Voice in the Wilderness (No. 2 of the Stingaree Series)	Kalem	2,000
D	12-1	The Taint	Lubin	3,000
C	12-1	A Scandal in Hickville	Vitagraph	1,000

Thursday.

C	12-2	His Emergency Wife	Biograph	1,000
C	12-2	Jack Spratt and the Scales of Love	Essanay	1,000
D	12-2	The Silent Man	Lubin	2,000
D	12-2	The Love of Loti San	Selig	3,000
T	12-2	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 96, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	12-2	The Conquest of Constania	Vitagraph	1,000

Friday.

D	12-3	My Hero	Biograph	1,000
D	12-3	Blade o' Grass	Edison	3,000
C	12-3	The Burglar's Godfather	Essanay	1,000
D	12-3	The Key to a Fortune (No. 6 of the Ventures of Marguerite)	Kalem	1,000
D	12-3	With Stolen Money	Lubin	1,000
C	12-3	Love, Pepper and Sweets	Vim	1,000
C	12-3	The Home Cure	Vitagraph	1,000

Saturday.

D	12-4	The Magistrate's Story	Edison	1,000
D	12-4	On the Private Wire	Essanay	1,000
D	12-4	The Tramp Telegrapher	Kalem	1,000
C	12-4	And the Parrot Said	Lubin	1,000
D	12-4	A Jungle Revenge	Selig	1,000
D	12-4	Cal Marvin's Wife	Vitagraph	3,000

V. L. S. E. Program

Sept.	20	The Circular Staircase	Selig	5,000
Sept.	27	Tillie's Tomato Surprise	Lubin	6,000
Sept.	27	The Great Ruby	Lubin	5,000
Oct.	4	Dust of Egypt	Vitagraph	5,000
Oct.	11	In the Palace of the King	Essanay	6,000
Oct.	11	The Valley of Lost Hope	Lubin	5,000
Oct.	18	A Black Sheep	Selig	5,000
Oct.	18	The Man Who Couldn't Beat God	Vitagraph	5,000
Oct.	25	The Rights of Man	Lubin	5,000
Nov.	1	The Turn of the Road	Vitagraph	5,000
Nov.	1	The Crimson Wing	Essanay	6,000
Nov.	8	The Raven	Essanay	5,000
Nov.	15	Sweet Alyssum	Selig	5,000
Nov.	15	Heights of Hazard	Vitagraph	5,000
Nov.	22	The Nation's Peril	Lubin	5,000
Nov.	29	The Caveman	Vitagraph	5,000
Dec.	6	The Alster Case	Essanay	5,000
Dec.	6	The Man's Making	Lubin	5,000

Mutual Program

Monday.

D	11-22	The Key to the Past	American	2,000
C	11-22	The Postmaster of Pineapple Plains	Falstaff	1,000
C	11-22	Spring Onions	Novelty	1,000

Tuesday.

C	11-23	The Baby and the Boss	Thanhouser	2,000
S	11-23	See America First, No. 11	Gaumont	500
C	11-23	Keeping Up With the Joneses	Gaumont	500
C	11-23	The Drummer's Trunk	Beauty	1,000

Wednesday.

D	11-24	Could a Man Do More?	Centaur	3,000
C	11-24	Tamin a Grouch	Novelty	1,000

Thursday.

D	11-25	Stanley and the Slave Traders	Centaur	2,000
C	11-25	Clarence Cheats at Croquet	Falstaff	1,000
T	11-25	Mutual Weekly No. 47	Mutual	1,000

Friday.

D	11-26	The Valley Feud	Mustang	2,000
D	11-26	The Bluffers	American	1,000
C	11-26	A Deal in Indians	Cub	1,000

Saturday.

D	11-27	The Valkyrie	Than-o-Play	3,000
C	11-27	Cupid Beats Father	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	11-28	The Friends of the Sea	Reliance	2,000
C	11-28	Nearly Famous	Casino	1,000
C	11-28	All Aboard	Thanhouser	1,000

Monday.

D	11-29	The Silver Lining	American	2,000
C	11-29	Foiling Father's Foes	Falstaff	1,000
C	11-29	Charlie's Twin Sister	Novelty	1,000

Tuesday.

D	11-30	The Crimson Sabre	Thanhouser	2,000
S	11-30	See America First, No. 12	Gaumont	500
C	11-30	Keeping Up with the Joneses	Gaumont	500
C	11-30	Billy Van Deusen and the Merry Widow	Beauty	1,000

Wednesday.

C	12-1	Lessons in Love	Rialto	3,000
C	12-1	Betty Burton, M. D.	Novelty	1,000

Thursday.

D	12-2	Stanley Among the Voo Doo Worshipers	Centaur	2,000
C	12-2	Checking Charlie's Child	Falstaff	1,000
T	12-2	Mutual Weekly No. 48	Mutual	1,000

Friday.

C	12-3	Broadcloth and Buckskin	Mustang	2,000
C	12-3	Spider Barlow Cuts In	American	1,000
C	12-3	A Shot Gun Romance	Cub	1,000

Universal Program

Saturday.

C	12-4	Film Tempo	Mustang	3,000
C	12-4	Making Over Father	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	12-5	The Stab	Reliance	2,000
C	12-5	A Tangle in Hearts	Casion	1,000
D	12-5	The House Party at Carson Manor	Thanhouser	1,000

Monday.

D	11-22	My Old Dutch	Broadway	5,000
C	11-22	When Father Was the Goat	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

D	11-23	In Search of a Wife	Gold Seal	2,000
	11-23	No Release This Week	Rex
C	11-23	When Willie Went Wild	Imp	1,000

Wednesday.

D	11-24	The Trap That Failed	Big U	1,000
C	11-24	Stolen Hearts and Nickels	L-Ko	2,000
T	11-24	Animated Weekly No. 194	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

D	11-25	The Mayor's Decision	Laemmle	3,000
	11-25	No Release This Week	Big U
C	11-25	Lady Baffles and Detective Duck in "Kidnaping the King's Kids"	Powers	1,000

Friday.

D	11-26	Man or Money	Imp	3,000
	11-26	No Release This Week	Victor
C	11-26	Saved by a Skirt	Nestor	1,000

Saturday.

D	11-27	A Desperate Leap	Bison	2,000
D	11-27	The Mirror of Justice	Powers	1,000
C	11-27	Dad's Awful Deed	Joker	1,000

Sunday.

D	11-27	The Kingdom of Nosey Land	Rex	3,000
D	11-27	Inside Facts	Laemmle	1,000
	11-27	No Release This Week	L-Ko
D	11-27	The Palace of Dust (No. 1 of the New Adventures of Terrence O'Rourke)	Universal	2,000

Monday.

D	11-29	The Supreme Test	Broadway	5,000
C	11-29	Operating on Cupid	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

D	11-30	The Phantom Fortune	Gold Seal	3,000
	11-30	No release this week	Rex
C	11-30	Safety First and Last	Imp	1,000

Wednesday.

C	12-1	He Was Only a Bathing Suit Salesman	Victor	3,000
C	12-1	Lizzie's Watery Grave	L Ko	1,000
T	12-1	Animated Weekly No. 195	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

D	12-2	Gilded Youth	Laemmle	3,000
	12-2	No release this week	Big U
C	12-2	The Three Jeannettes	Powers	500
E	12-2	The Life of the Salamander	Powers	500

Friday.

D	12-3	His Good Name	Powers	2,000
D	12-3	The Devil and Idle Hands	Laemmle	1,000

Saturday.

D	12-4	The Connecting Link	Bison	2,000
	12-4	No release this week	Powers
C	12-4	Mrs. Prune's Boarding House	Joker	1,000

Sunday.

D	12-5	Under a Shadow	Rex	2,000
D	12-5	Does It End Right?	Laemmle	1,000
C	12-5	A Saphead's Revenge	L Ko	1,000
D	12-5	When a Queen Loved O'Rourke (No. 2 of the New Adventures of Terence O'Rourke)	Universal	2,000

Miscellaneous Features

The Whirl of Life	Cort Film Corp.	6,000
A Woman's Honor	Great Northern	4,000
Russian Battlefields	Indian Film Co.	4,000
Concealed Truth	Ivan Film Productions	5,000
Life Without Soul	Ocean Film Corporation	5,000
Thou Shalt Not Kill	Circle Film Corp.	5,000
For Her Son	Great Northern	4,000

Associated Service.

Released week of

Nov.	22	The Fighting Minister	Santa Barbara	2,000
Nov.	22	The Bitter Cup	Ramona	2,000
Nov.	22	A Friend in Need	Alhambra	2,000
Nov.	22	The Goat	Empire	2,000
Nov.	22	The Parson Slips a Cog	Atla	1,000
Nov.	22	Ike Goes to the Front	Federal	1,000
Nov.	22	Sammy, the Cub Reporter	Banner	1,000
Nov.	22	The Courting of Miss Fortune	Deer	1,000

Fox Film Corporation

Released Week of

Sept.	6	The Two Orphans		5,000
Sept.	13	The Song of Hate		5,000
Sept.	20	Regeneration		5,000
Sept.	27	The Wonderful Adventure		5,000
Oct.	4	Sin		5,000
Oct.	11	The Little Gypsy		5,000
Oct.	18	The Soul of Broadway		5,000
Oct.	25	The Family Stain		5,000
Nov.	1	Carmen		6,000
Nov.	8	The Blindness of Devotion		5,000
Nov.	11	A Woman's Past		5,000
Nov.	15	A Woman's Past		5,000

Kleine-Edison

Released week of

Oct.	6	Vanity Fair	Edison	7,000
Oct.	13	The Magic Skin	Edison	5,000
Oct.	20	The Green Cloak	Kleine	5,000
Nov.	3	The Sentimental Lady	Kleine	5,000
Nov.	10	Children of Eve	Edison	5,000
Nov.	17	The Politicians	Kleine	5,000
Dec.	1	Canavan	Kleine	5,000
Dec.	1	The Danger Signal	Kleine	5,000

Kriterion

Released Week of

Nov.	22	The Adventurer	Paragon	2,000
Nov.	22	Billy Now a Medico	Santa Barbara	1,000
Nov.	22	Environment	Alhambra	2,000
Nov.	22	A Disappointed Suitor	Thistle	1,000
Nov.	22	The Bigot	Santa Barbara	2,000
Nov.	22	Oh! Those Kids	C. K.	1,000
Nov.	22	Struck Oil	Monty	1,000
Nov.	22	Poor Little Rich Man	Punch	1,000
Nov.	22	None So Blind	Trump	2,000
Nov.	22	Krit Komic Kartoon	Pyramid	500
Nov.	22	Making a Great Newspaper	Pyramid	500
Nov.	22	His Partner's Sacrifice	Navajo	2,000
Nov.	22	The Painted Anarchist	Alhambra	1,000

Metro Features.

Released week of

Oct.	4	Song of the Wage Slave	Metro	5,000
Oct.	11	The Stork's Nest	Metro	5,000
Oct.	18	The Final Judgment	Metro	5,000
Oct.	25	My Madonna	Metro	5,000
Nov.	1	Tables Turned	Metro	5,000
Nov.	8	Pennington's Choice	Metro	5,000
Nov.	15	The Woman Pays	Metro	5,000
Nov.	22	One Million Dollars	Metro	5,000
Nov.	29	Barbara Frietchie	Metro	5,000

Mutual Master-Pictures.

Released week of

Nov.	4	The Seventh Noon	Mutual	7,000
Nov.	11	The End of the Road	American	5,000
Nov.	18	Inspiration	Thanhouser	5,000
Nov.	25	The Strife Eternal	Mutual	5,000
Dec.	2	The Forbidden Adventure	Mutual	5,000

Paramount Features.

Released week of

Nov.	11	The Mumy and the Humming Bird	Famous Players	5,000
Nov.	15	Paramount News Pictures	Paramount	1,000
N v.	15	Bella Donna	Famous Players	5,000
Nov.	18	Armstrong's Wife	Jesse L. Lasky	5,000
Nov.	25	The Gentleman From Indiana	Pallas	5,000
Nov.	22	Chimmie Fadden Out West	Jesse L. Lasky	4,000
Nov.	22	Paramount News Pictures	Paramount	1,000

Pathe.

Released Week of

Nov.	29	The Prince and the Pauper	Famous Players	5,000
Nov.	29	Paramount News Pictures	Paramount	1,000
Nov.	29	New Adventures of Wallingford No. 9	Pathe	2,000
Nov.	29	Pathe News No. 96	Pathe	1,000
Nov.	29	Pathe News No. 97	Pathe	1,000
Nov.	29	The Gold Cobra	Victory	3,000
Nov.	29	Ragtime Snap Shots	Phunphilms	1,000
Nov.	29	Neal of the Navy No. 14	Panama	2,000
Nov.	29	The House of Fear	Gold Rooster	5,000
Nov.	29	Hot Heads and Cold Feet	Starlight	1,000

Triangle Film Corporation.

Released week of

Dec.	5	The Golden Claw; Bessie Barriscale	Triangle-Kay-Bee	5,000
Dec.	5	Double Trouble; Douglas Fairbanks	Fine Arts	5,000
Dec.	5	The Best of Enemies; Weber and Fields	Triangle-Keystone	2,000
Dec.	5	A Janitor's Wife's Temptation; Fred Mace	Triangle-Keystone	2,000
Dec.	12	The Lily and the Rose; Lillian Gish, Rozsika Dolly	Fine Arts	5,000
Dec.	12	Aloha Oe; Willard Mack	Triangle-Kay-Bee	5,000
Dec.	12	The Village Scandal; Raymond Hitchcock, Roscoe Arbuckle	Triangle-Keystone	2,000
Dec.	12	The Great Vacuum Robbery; Charles H. Murray	Triangle-Keystone	2,000

World Features.

Released week of

Nov.	22	The Little Church Around the Corner	Blaney	5,000
Nov.	22	A Daughter of the Sea	Equitable	5,000
Nov.	22	Body and Soul	Frohman	5,000
Nov.	29	Not Guilty	Triumph	5,000
Nov.	29	The Sins of Society	Brady	5,000

Brief Stories of the Week's Film Releases

General Program

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 93—HEARST-SELIG—NOVEMBER 22.—Famous Liberty Bell starts from Panama Fair for Philadelphia; Streeterville in "District of Lake Michigan" in Chicago is scene of Sunday closing battle; quantities of drug confiscated in Chinese section of San Francisco and burned in front of City Hall; scenes along the Russian lines in the Caucasus Mountains; Yale downs Princeton in gridiron contest in New Haven, Conn.; power of the biggest reflector in United States to be used in army searchlight demonstrated in Los Angeles; four-story building wrecked by fire in Cambridge, Mass.; diver hangs by his teeth from a harness at the end of a coal derrick and dives from a height of ninety feet into the Merrimac river; terrific storm tears away buildings and leaves wreckage at Great Bend, Kansas.

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 194—HEARST-SELIG—NOVEMBER 25.—Reginald Vanderbilt and other horse show judges leave Hotel Biltmore on forty-eight-mile coach ride; Secretary of Navy Daniels talks over new war appliance, wireless telephone, with Rear Admiral Usher; golden jubilee is held on the fiftieth anniversary of Archbishop Prendergast's ordination as priest and dedication of Cathedral SS. Peter and Paul at Philadelphia, Pa.; unusual demand for bivalves during season has increased activity at oyster bed, Norfolk, Va.; officers and apprentice seamen from government training station at Yerba Buena Island perform evolutions at Panama Fair; Dolores Rosseau, six years old, stands sponser for Ayesha, Stanley, Niger and Sheba, lion cubs at Central Park Zoo; old fashioned howitzers hauled up mountain passes by Italian army in Austria; F-Type undersea craft returns from Honolulu under own power.

The Night of Souls—(THREE REELS)—ESSANAY—NOVEMBER 29.—Featuring Richard Travers and Warda Howard. Dr. Allison, while in the midst of operating on a little girl, receives word that his own daughter had been injured and only an operation by himself can save her. He feels it is his duty to remain with the little girl whom he is operating upon, and later when he arrives home his daughter is dead. His wife leaves him because he refused to come in time to save his child. Later when he saves the life of one of the factory women, who is injured, he discovers it to be his wife, and performs an operation which saves her life.

The Luring Lights—(FOUR REELS)—KALEM—NOVEMBER 29.—Featuring Stella Hoban as Anna Malleen, who joins a traveling repertoire company and becomes interested in the villain of the company. In New York after the company has disbanded, Anna meets Rita, who gets her to go autoing with herself and a fast set. The auto hurtles over an embankment and Anna alone escapes death. Later she obtains a position in the company in which Darnton plays the villain, and the manager, fearing lest sentiment affect their work, sends Darnton to head the Chicago company, but the separation depresses Anna so greatly that the manager sends for Darnton to come back unknown to her and the ensuing scene thrills the audience, which never suspects that after the curtain has descended Anna will walk into Darnton's arms and their lips will meet.

Just as I Am—(TWO REELS)—SELIG—NOVEMBER 29.—Featuring Wheeler Oakman and Edith Johnson. Wilson, who in his youth sat on his mother's knee and sang, "Just as I Am," is a desperate criminal and affiliated with two other crooks, Hungerford and Randall. He is imprisoned for a crime he did not commit and later Randall, another of the gang, is also sent there. Later Wilson escapes from prison, and passing a church he hears the people singing "Just as I Am." He goes toward the home of the man who had committed the crime for which he had been imprisoned and he is about to kill the man when his little girl runs in front of a runaway team and Wilson saves the girl and in doing so is fatally injured. He is rescued by his own mother and again by her knee he breathes his last.

The Legend of the Poisoned Pool—LUBIN—NOVEMBER 29.—Featuring William Spencer and Adelaide Bronti. Lo-an, a slovenly Indian, relates to a number of travelers the legend of the poisoned pool. He tells of how a Christian convert and her palefaced son had come to the Indian home and there the son had won the favor of the girl, Winitan, who is converted. Then comes the famine and Undi, the chief's son, sees Paul praying to his Christian God and tells the Medicine Man. Paul is made a prisoner and condemned to die. Tiwaka releases Paul and he escapes with Winitan. Paul is disconsolate over the loss of his cross and Winitan promises to have another for him. Undi places a huge rattlesnake over the cross and when Paul reaches for it he receives the fatal venom. Tiwaka bathes his wound in the pool, but Paul dies in her arms. Undi next morning drinks from the pool and dies in agony, while Tiwaka, triumphant, causes the Indians to fall back in awe. The visitors, glad to have escaped an untimely end, liberally tip the Indian. After they have gone he laughs heartily, and pocketing the money quaffs liberally of the water and is happy because his own invented legend has worked so well.

One Plus One Equals One—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 29.—Featuring Bobby Connelly. Uncle Billy goes to school with Sonny Jim, telling him he is going to trim the bullies. He meets the pretty teacher and it is a case of love at first sight. Every day thereafter Uncle Billy accompanies Sonny to school. One day Lady Teacher coming to see Jim, who is sick, offers to cook a big dinner for them, because Sonny's mother is away. During the meal Billy announces that he is going to marry the teacher, and when Sonny sees Billy taking the teacher in his arms and when asked the addition of "One and One" he answers promptly "One."

Count Twenty—BIOGRAPH—NOVEMBER 30—Featuring Mary Malatesta and Joseph McDermott and a strong cast. The orphan daughter of the old laborer is given a job in the contractor's office and in her new home she is told to count twenty before speaking. The contractor's foreman tries to make love to her and is rebuffed and she writes on a slip of paper, "When angry county twenty before you speak." Later the contractor's son interferes with the foreman and the foreman, overhearing the son tell the girl the combination to the safe, copies the figures on a piece of paper which he finds in his pocket, and it is the message the girl had written to him. The paper is left on the floor and the contractor's son is suspected of the theft. Later the girl and her lover go for the sheriff and the foreman and his conspirators are rounded up.

Only a Country Girl—KALEM—NOVEMBER 30.—Featuring Rube Miller, Bud Duncan and Ethel Teare. Rube persuades Ethel to elope with him, but their horse runs away and the elopement ends disastrously. Farmer Brown, seeing the attraction his daughter has for Rube and Bud, puts the two to work beating carpets, but the two discover Ethel and are again renewing their suits when they are driven away by her father. Later, while Farmer Brown is imprisoning Bud, Rube and Ethel elope. They are pursued and Farmer Brown succeeds in getting back his daughter, while Bud escapes and joins Rube.

Bad Man Bobbs—SELIG—NOVEMBER 30.—Bobbs spends a miserable life with his militant wife, Henrietta. He leaves her and arrives in a small western town. Later his wife receives a telegram stating that her uncle has bequeathed his ranch to her and she starts forth to take possession. Bobbs, now known as a bad man, tells the boys that he can lick any woman. Later, when confronted by his wife, who takes his artillery from him, he is made foreman of the ranch.

The Losing Game—(THREE REELS)—ESSANAY—NOVEMBER 30.—Featuring Darwin Karr, Anzonetta Moore and a strong cast. Henry Phillips becomes engaged to Helen Brighton. His half-brother, Norman steals from his father and throws suspicion on Henry, who is ordered from the house, and his father makes a second will favoring Norman. Some time later the father dies, but before doing so has made another will making Henry his heir, and he returns to find Norman in the act of stealing the will. His name now cleared, he marries Helen. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

Which Is Which—LUBIN—NOVEMBER 30.—Featuring D. L. Don. Klotz is a photographic leech at picnics and fairs, while Schmaltz, his double, is the czar of a delicatessen business. A big picnic is given in honor of Schmaltz, and Klotz sets up his tent for business. Later Schmaltz imbibes a bit too freely and strolls away and Lady Schmaltz sets out in search of him and Klotz is captured by mistake. He has a good time on Schmaltz's expense and many laughable situations occur before the error is discovered.

The Mystery of the Empty Room—(TWO REELS)—VITAGRAPH—NOVEMBER 30.—Featuring William Dangman and Ethel Corcoran. Ruth Harris and her father stop at Scroogles' Inn. That night Scroogles creeps into her father's room, robs him and thinking him dead throws the body over a cliff. The next morning when Ruth asks for her father they tell her she is crazy and that she came alone to the inn. The girl thinks of Richard Foster, a young artist, and with his help they find a cap belonging to her father. Later they find him wandering about the mountains and the memory of the "empty room" in the old inn is impressed upon Ruth's memory and she gives thanks for the narrow escape they all had.

The Hungarian Nabob—(FOUR REELS)—BIOGRAPH—DECEMBER 1—Featuring Franklin Ritchie, Louise Vale and a strong cast. Count John Karpathy of Hungary, known as the Nabob, because of his lavish entertainment, is stricken, and word is sent to his nephew, County Bela Karpathy, who starts for his uncle's estate. Later the Nabob, recovering, gives a lavish entertainment in an inn, and when Bela arrives and, not recognizing his uncle, says that he is glad he is dead as he will show them how to spend money, his uncle denounces him and sends him away.

Suffering Baby—(SPLIT REEL)—EDISON—DECEMBER 1.—A suffragette comedy directed by Will Louis. The cast includes Bob Walker, William Wadsworth, Jessie Stevens and Mabel Dwight.

Your Personal Subscription

for

Motography

America's Leading Film Magazine

$3.00

a year

would prove both a convenience and a means of real profit. Each issue is of vital interest and practical value to every man in the motion picture business. If you miss one copy, you may miss an article or an idea that would have a vital effect on your work.

As a regular subscriber, you would be able to read Motography carefully and systematically at your leisure, and to preserve a file of copies for reference and for binding.

Bound volumes of Motography form the best foundation for a reference library.

We suggest that you have the magazine sent to your residence.

Address

Motography

Monadnock Bldg., Chicago

Mrs. Suffering leaves her husband in charge of the baby while she attends the county fair. Husband follows and at the grounds dodges the wife with success. He places baby in what he deems a safe place, under the seat of an aeroplane, and sets out to enjoy himself. The excitement comes when the bird-man enters his machine and performs for the gathered crowds. On the same reel with:

The Fable of the Low-Down Expert on the Subject of Babies—ESSANAY—DECEMBER 1.—Featuring Ernest Maupain and Camille D'Arcy. Once there was a Mean Man who became weary of the feverish Chatter of young parents bragging about their offsprings. He delved into all well-known works on the subject of Brats, and when he finished was all Loaded and Primed for any Cocky Young Parent. By his table of statistics he know at what age the first tooth should be through the gum, and when Izzy-Wizzy should be able to stand. He soon was in Dutch with all the parents, and one afternoon was read out of Decent Society when the mothers got together. From that time on the Mean Man never received an invitation to dinner.

Moral: Let on to be Interested and Pleased.

A Voice in the Wilderness—(TWO REELS)—KALEM—DECEMBER 1.—An episode in the "Stingaree" series featuring True Boardman and Marin Sais. Stingaree meets Ethel, his former sweetheart, forced to come to Australia to become a companion to Mrs. Clarkson. One night Stingaree and his partner, Howie, burst into Mrs. Clarkson's when there is a concert and Stingaree compels Ethel to mount the platform and sing. Ethel's voice makes a tremendous impression and this arouses Mrs. Clarkson's ire and she discharges the girl, while Sir Julian Crum, a famous musician, engages her to accompany him on his tour.

The Taint—(THREE REELS)—LUBIN—DECEMBER 1.—Featuring Valentine Grant and a strong cast. The story of Mabel Stuart, whose mother's identity is not known. She is told by Frank that her mother was a negress and agrees to marry him as he says he will tell the world her secret if she does not. Later, however, matters are cleared up and the man Mabel loves comes back to claim her. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

His Emergency Wife—BIOGRAPH—DECEMBER 2.—Featuring Alan Hale and Viola Smith. George Haynes receives word from his Uncle John that he is coming to pay him a visit, and as the old man has been led to believe George is married the latter gets one of his friends to play the part. Uncle arrives and is accompanied by his ward, who becomes very friendly with Mrs. Haynes. The owners of the house come upon Mrs. George smoking a cigar while the others are out and in the midst of the excitement George confesses, and he tries to square things by saying he will marry the girl, but she says she prefers "friend wife."

The Silent Man—(TWO REELS)—LUBIN—DECEMBER 2.—Featuring L. C. Shumway and Velma Whitman and a strong cast. Olga Kosloff, a celebrated Russian actress, in visiting an insane asylum on the coast of England comes face to face with "The Silent Man," a Russian like herself, in whom she recognizes Prince Mikail of the Russian Court, whom years before she had promised to discredit in order to save her sister Anna. She had fallen in love with Prince Mikail, but one Prince Sergius steals some government plans from the Grand Duke's desk and orders Olga to secrete the papers on Mikail. She was forced to consent to save her sister. Mikail was ordered led to the torture cell to be branded before he was cast adrift and he bitterly denounces Olga for betraying him. Later she saw Mikail adrift and the next day, when she visits Volinine and begged for the release of her sister, she saw her in chains being led away to Siberia and now she is face to face with Mikail, a pitiful wreck of a man, and determines to make what reparation she can. She manages to save the crazed man, who recognizes her and they go into a small boat, and after they are well out at sea Mikail casts away the oars and as he gazes savagely at Olga there is a calm look of resignation on her face and the last scene shows the two wrecked souls drifting onward with hundreds of sea gulls hovering over them.

Jack Spratt and the Scales of Love—ESSANAY—DECEMBER 2.—Victor Potel, Margaret Joslin and Harry Todd. Slippery Slim and Sophie, who are just married, go to the drug store, where Slim purchases a bottle of Fato and Sophie a bottle of Thino. Mustang Pete succeeds in switching the bottles. Later Slim takes the exercises to become thin while Sophie indulges in all varieties of nutritious foods to become fat. When Sophie tips the scales at 290 and Slim at 85 they decide something is wrong.

Love of Loti San—(THREE REELS)—SELIG—DECEMBER 2.—Featuring Bessie Eyton and a strong cast in a tale of the Orient, wherein a little Japanese girl marries a young American civil engineer. Later his sweetheart comes to the Orient and his old love for her asserts itself and the Japanese wife makes a great sacrifice for them. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

My Hero—BIOGRAPH RE-ISSUE—DECEMBER 3.—Featuring Robert Harron, Henry Walthall and Dorothy Gish. An Indian brave is driven from his tribe, and in the white man's settlement he is befriended by a frontiersman's son, who is in love with a settler's daughter, but whose father does not favor the match. Later they elope and are captured by Indians and about to be killed when Indian Charlie recognizes his benefactor and they are set free. Later a searching party finds the runaway pair, but the elopement is overlooked when the girl tells what a brave hero her lover has proven himself in rescuing her from the Indians.

Life's Pitfalls—(THREE REELS)—EDISON—DECEMBER 3.—Miriam Nesbitt is featured as May Orme, a wealthy woman whom experience has taught to distrust men, feeling that she is sought after on account of her wealth more than anything else. She visits a country place and to avoid this insincere attention she pretends to be the companion of her young friend, Laura Penton. She is attracted to Doctor Courtney and promises to marry him, but refuses when Mr. Penton tells her that the doctor learned from him that she was wealthy. Instead, she marries Hartley Graeme. Later she learns that her husband overheard Penton's drunken speech and not Courtney. Graeme's weaknes, drink, leads to his death and in the end May marries the doctor. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

The Key to a Fortune—KALEM—DECEMBER 3.—An episode of the "Ventures of Marguerite," featuring Marguerite Courtot. Rudolph, Marguerite's chauffeur, abducts her and imprisons her in a shack on the outskirts of the city. His sweetheart, Carrie, resembles Marguerite, and the chauffeur arranges a plan whereby she takes the heiress' place in the household. Bob Winters discovers the deception, but the chauffeur compels him to get into an auto outside; then he heads toward the shack. Marguerite manages to lock the woman who is watching over her into an adjoining room and then she hears Rudolph and Bob approaching. The moment the chauffeur enters the door the girl crashes the lamp down upon his head and later the police are summoned and the conspirators are led away to justice.

With Stolen Money—LUBIN—DECEMBER 3.—Featuring a strong cast. Tom Turner, teller in the village bank, is engaged to Ruth Dale, but after meeting Mrs. Will O'Wisp, a widow, he forsakes Ruth. He steals from the bank and follows the widow to the city. Here Ruth, who is visiting relatives, has attracted the attention of the widow's admirer, Phil, and the widow, jealous, lures Tom on in order to hurt Ruth. Later Tom, when arrested by detectives, sneaks away, and just then Ruth, who is broken hearted, throws herself from a pier and Tom dashes toward her and dives after her. They are both drowned and washed up on the shore, where they are found by the widow and her gallant Phil.

Love, Pepper and Sweets—VIM—DECEMBER 3.—Featuring Pokes and Jabbs. Jabbs is the star boarder and he and Pokes go out into the park where they meet Ethel and Jabbs takes her away and later she invites him to her house. Pokes, with Runt, decides to bombard the house, but they are treated to a bath of milk. Jabbs decides to play a joke on them and has Ethel invite them to the house. They arrive and Jabbs sprinkles the candy and flowers which they bring with pepper, and then disguised as her father follows them with a pistol and their affections are cooled by a refreshing ducking in the lake.

The Magistrate's Story—EDISON—DECEMBER 4.—A poorly dressed old man is brought before Magistrate Welden, charged with stealing a loaf of bread. In the old man's wallet the magistrate finds a familiar trinket and asks the prisoner if his name is Sterrett. He replies that it is, and then the magistrate tells the story of how he and Sterrett were boys together. When war broke out he took sides with the north and Sterrett with the south. Welden, accused of an offense punishable with death, is granted a pardon by the President. The message is intercepted by Sterrett and carried to the northern camp. As a remembrance Welden gave Sterrett the shield worn on his cap. The plaintiff, touched by the story, refuses to press the charge.

On the Private Wire—(TWO REELS)—ESSANAY—DECEMBER 4.—Featuring Joseph Byron Totten and Betty Brown. Ralph Mills goes to the country home of John Lyons, a wealthy speculator, to get a story and here he encounters "English" Eddie, a crook posing as Lyons' guest. Lyons has arranged to call his broker on his private wire at midnight and impart a message which will be of value to a rival speculator, and Mills suspects Eddie to be there to overhear the massage. Eddie recognizes the reporter and attempts to gain his end by holding Mills and Lyons at the point of a gun, but he is surprised by Theda, Lyons' daughter, who turns the tables and makes him a prisoner.

The Tramp Telegrapher—KALEM—DECEMBER 4.—An episode of the "Hazards of Helen" series. Helen lets Trent, a tramp whom she believes to be one of the band of crooks, sleep in the baggage room and later turns the kye in the lock. The real crooks enter the station, overpower Helen and then rifle the safe. Trent is awakened and breaks out of the baggage room, releases Helen and the two hasten after the desperadoes. They manage to land on the rods of the last car, which the men have boarded, and Trent braces his legs against the rods so that his body projects at right angle. Helen then climbs out upon his form and slowly raises herself to the window above and gives the alarm. Later the crooks are subdued and captured.

And the Parrot Said ——?—LUBIN—DECEMBER 4.—Featuring Billie Reeves. Wilkens discovers his wealthy uncle has died and that his will will be read the next day, but in the meantime he must take care of his parrot. His sweetheart and her puritan mother call and are horrified by the conversation of the parrot and the engagement is broken. He gets rid of the parrot and later is informed that by the terms of the will he gets $5,000 a year as long as he keeps the parrot. He receives a note from the lawyer that he is coming to call on him to give him a check and to see the parrot and he substitutes another parrot in its place. Meanwhile the woman upstairs over Wilkens is horrified at the conversation of a parrot she has bought and puts it out on the fire escape. The parrot yells "Police!" and Wilkens hearing this, recognizes the bird and steals it. Wilkens gets his check and eventually he gets his girl back.

A Jungle Revenge—SELIG—DECEMBER 4.—Albert Carey is loved by Dais, a native servant, but he loves Mabel Thorpe, daughter of a coffee planter. Thorpe and his daughter accept an invitation to spend a week end with Albert in his jungle home. Dais is consumed with jealousy and vows to get rid of the girl. She asks Mabel to accompany her on a visit to a sick friend and there releases her pet jaguar, who follows Mabel to an isolated shack. As Mabel fires through the window at the animal the bullet strikes Dais, who is killed, and Albert arrives just in time to save Mabel.

Mutual Program

See America First—(SPLIT REEL)—GAUMONT—NOVEMBER 16.—Views of Portland, Me., introduce and compose most of this scenic. Then follow glimpses of beautiful spots in the White Mountains.

The second half of this picture is an animated cartoon by Harry Palmer—"Keeping Up with the Joneses."

The House Party—CASINO—NOVEMBER 21.—John Carstairs shows his daughter, Diana, and his son, Jack, a newspaper account of a "society burglar" who has been robbing the rich homes in their neighborhood. Diana proposes that they give a house party, the great feature of which shall be a burglar hunt. Two of the guests are Larry Hunter and Cyril Cadawalader, rivals for Diana's hand. Jack, on mischief bent, sends notes to each, purporting to be from Diana, and accusing each gentleman to the other of being the thief in question. Larry and Cyril find another note on the floor, reading, "I am going to rob this house tonight." John Carstairs locks up all the guests' jewelry in the safe. Jack loots the safe and hides the jewels in Larry's and Cyril's clothes. The robbery is discovered and the two men try to fasten the crime on one another. The jewelry is found in their own pockets. To add to their mortification, they disover that a third suitor has won Diana's promise. Jack has plenty of fun—but his reckoning comes later.

The Postmaster of Pineapple Plains—FALSTAFF—NOVEMBER 22.—Zeke, the postmaster, is in love with Nell, the village belle. She, however, cannot endure the old gossip. So she writes a postal to Mark Mitchell, her city suitor, to be under the window at midnight. As the lovers anticipated, Zeke's greed proves too much for him. He schemes to impersonate the lover. Meanwhile, Nell's uncle has received a "Black Hand" letter ordering him to lower $10,000 from his window that evening when he shall hear "two long whistles." Uncle takes Nell into his confidence. That night, after Zeke makes his getaway to a safe distance, he opens the chest and discovers a young, frisky and very hungry bulldog, which proceeds to make a lasting impression upon the postmaster. The city chap marries the girl. A postal, written by Nell, on her honeymoon, comes into the office. Zeke is shocked to read thereon: "Dear Uncle: We saw our congressman today and he has promised to make you postmaster. He says Zeke is a public nuisance, as he reads everybody's mail."

The Baby and the Boss—(TWO REELS)—THANHOUSER—NOVEMBER 23.—With Helen Badgley.—A patrolman on the mounted squad stops a runaway, and so saves the lives of "The Baby" and her sister, Irene. He falls in love with Irene, but does not want her to marry a common patrolman. "The Baby" learns that the man cannot be promoted without influence. She also overhears her father say that Dave Hinkey has the influence in the town; so she loses no time in finding the office of "The Harsh Boss" to ask him for the one thing needful to promote the young policeman and make her sister happy. Although in the midst of a private conference, "The Baby" gets in somehow, and in a minute or two she has made him an abject slave. He takes her to the mayor, and a few days later Irene's lover is made a sergeant. The marriage takes place and in time the officer becomes the best captain on the force.

Taming a Grouch—NOVELTY—NOVEMBER 24.—Gordon Gloom is a terrible grouch. He doesn't appreciate Emeline Black, his housekeeper, whom he discharges in a fit of anger. Emeline, knowing better what is good for old Gloom than he does himself, enlists the aid of Grimes, the employment agent. First, in response to Gordon's hurry call for a new cook, Emeline, disguised in an eccentric make-up, reports to her ex-employer. She succeeds in wrecking the establishment and getting fired. Then Gordon demands a colored cook. Emeline persuades a huge negro gentleman to masquerade in this part, and when the new servant, to the indignation of Gloom, has filled the house with "her" own cronies that evening, a battle ensues in which the master barely escapes with his life. Emeline comes to his rescue. Gloom falls on his knees, declares himself a tamed grouch, and implores her to marry him.

Clarence Cheats at Croquet—FALSTAFF—NOVEMBER 25.—The president of the croquet club, a beautiful girl, is engaged to the pitcher of one of the National League baseball clubs. Her hero was expelled from the league simply because he mauled an umpire, and returned to his native town. To please his love he tries to take an interest in croquet, and thereby arouses the animosity of Clarence. Clarence yields to temptation, and in a game with his enemy cheats. He has to reckon with the wicked wicket keeper, and pays him to keep quiet. The president of the club calls to see the keeper's grandmother and thereby learns the secret. The girl is locked in the house by the two conspirators, and the grandmother, rising to the emergency, dives out of the window and finds the culprit. Clarence gets his, the wicked keeper is discharged, the girl marries her hero, and they care for the grandmother, who gets younger every day.

The Villainous Vegetable Vender—FALSTAFF—NOVEMBER 25.—The vender is in love with a girl who is so poor that her only dress is made out of newspapers. Misfortune comes one day to the "paper doll of the slums," as she is called, when a goat tries to devour her costume. A raggedly garbed man with a bright red nose chases the goat away, and the girl agrees to marry her preserver. The villainous vegetable vender is indignant when he hears of the wedding and calls his rival a tramp. The latter then reveals that he is in reality a millionaire. Some years later, the son of the former "paper doll" disappears. After the exercise of some ingenuity the boy is found by his father and the villainous vender overcome in a vigorous battle with vegetables.

A Deal in Indians—CUB—NOVEMBER 26.—Featuring George Ovey. Tired of his irksome jail sentence, Jerry contrives to escape. Two Indians capture him and lead him before Chief Rain-in-the-Face, who decrees that he shall die. But the Chief's daughter, Moonlight Princess, falls in love with Jerry at first sight, and manages to have his life spared. She is told to have him painted and dressed like an Indian and she may marry him. Thus arrayed and bound, Jerry is about to give up all hope when a professor of natural history, after getting an Indian to accompany him on a lecture tour, arrives and negotiates the purchase of Jerry. Jerry, in the professor's home that night, proceeds to enjoy himself, when the Princess bursts in upon him. There is a merry chase around the house, after which the police arrive, recognize Jerry and again take him into custody.

The Widow Wins—CASINO—NOVEMBER 28.—Featuring Cissy Fitzgerald. Cissy Fitzgerald, star actress, is sadly in need of publicity, and "Stuffy" Hicks, the press agent, is put on the job. He concocts a plan whereby Cissy is to feign loss of memory and leave a note addressed to Mr. Shephard, the town's leading banker. When Cissy is discovered in her room at the hotel, she is given all sorts of drugs to restore her mind. Finally, overwrought nature rebels and Cissy's refusal to take any more medicine gives the scheme away. Shepherd, distressed at his name being involved, calls on Cissy. The hotel employees force "Stuffy" to take the medicine, and he loses his job. Cissy accepts the banker's proposal, and thereby wins a husband.

The Friends of the Sea—(TWO REELS)—RELIANCE—NOVEMBER 28.—Two friends, August and Manuel, both are in love with Jeanne Cavoure, daughter of the most prosperous fisherman in Sea Cove. August learns that Manuel is going to marry Jeanne. On the day set for the wedding August disappears, leaving word that he has gone to Brenton's reef, and shall not return until he hears that his friend is happily settled with his bride. Manuel realizes that August has gone away to heal a broken heart. He postpones the wedding until his friend, months later, ventures back to port. August again meets Jeanne and finds that she is still unmarried. By this time the girl has discovered that it is August, not Manuel, whom she really loves. Manuel makes the supreme sacrifice and leaves the lovers happy.

The Business Obligation

At the lowest estimate for weekly program rentals the subscribers to MOTOGRAPHY spend every week the astounding sum of

$417,860.00

If they use one feature each week in addition to their service, at a fair price for features, this sum is increased weekly to

$893,260.00

If these theaters spend a few dollars each week for supplies, posters, oil, rewinds, heralds, etc., the sum total of the average weekly expenditures of MOTOGRAPHY'S subscribers is

OVER

$1,000,000.00

exclusive of salaries, rent, light, etc.

To talk to this Million Dollar Crowd every week

Plant Your Advertisement in Motography

The Silver Lining—(TWO REELS)—AMERICAN—NOVEMBER 29.—Vivian Rich, Alfred Vosburgh and Roy Stewart are featured in this two reel melodrama that concerns a stenographer with a tubercular father, who forges a check in order that his daughter may not have to make a supreme sacrifice at the office where she works. Later, the father, after being sentenced to prison, makes his escape and visits Nell, though in so doing he is mistaken for another suitor by Nell's sweetheart, and many complications develop. For a longer review see another page of this issue. N. G. C.

Foiling Father's Foes—FALSTAFF—NOVEMBER 29.—Lucinda returns home from college with political ambition. Her father, a country editor, is impelled to write cutting things about a couple of grafters, one the nominee for sheriff, the other a candidate for city treasurer. Both of these men call on the editor and give him a horsewhipping. Lucinda takes matters in hand, forcibly defeats both the "gangsters" and wins the two above-mentioned offices.

Billy Van Deusen and the Merry Widow—BEAUTY—NOVEMBER 30.—John Steppling and Carol Holloway are the featured players in this one-reel comedy that is truly funny. The ever popular Billy is much fascinated with a girl bather he meets during a visit to the beach and later, seeing her in black, assumes that she is a widow, makes her acquaintance and then proceeds to pay her attention. Much to his embarrassment Billy later discovers that the supposed widow is a married woman, in mourning for the death of her father and that consequently his suit is hopeless. N. G. C.

The Crimson Sabre—(TWO REELS)—THANHOUSER—NOVEMBER 30.—Featuring Isolde Illian. The rival of the young chap who has won the girl invites him to his apartment, and through a dastardly scheme which gives him the ascendancy over his young rival, demands that he break the engagement. The successful suitor is holding his head in his hands in despair when he hears a loud cry. Starting up quickly, he notices the arrival of the detective that his rival had threatened, and then, looking toward the divan, sees his rival's dead body. Beside him is lying a sabre which had been hanging on the wall. The astonished rival is arrested at once, as he is the only occupant of the room. Later, however, another detective proves the innocence of the young lover by exposing the guilt of the valet. The latter had sufficient reasons for his act. He had cleverly arranged the sabre so that it could be projected some distance from the wall and then allowed to fall upon its victim.

Lessons in Love—(THREE REELS)—GAUMONT—DECEMBER 1.—At her uncle's ranch, May Hale, daughter of an Eastern professor, meets a unique person in Bash Huggins. Bash is fear-stricken in the presence of the fair sex. Frank Morgan and his sister, Grace, eastern tourists, stop over night in Bash's cabin. Grace, a flirt, asks him to visit her in the East. A lucky strike enables Bash to go East, but he is slighted by Grace, who does not know of his wealth. Bash makes a deplorable social failure. May prepares for her father (who has lost his job) a sign reading, "Languages Taught." As no one applies, May changes the sign to "Anything Taught." Bash then sees his chance to take a few lessons in social instructions. But the professor misunderstands and says, "Young man, I don't give lessons in lovemaking." May overhears, and, made desperate by poverty, takes the money and says, "I'll teach you how to make love." Then she and Bash recognize each other. Finally it is May whom he marries, Grace unwittingly betraying her secret that only money could make her marry a man with a name like Bash Huggins.

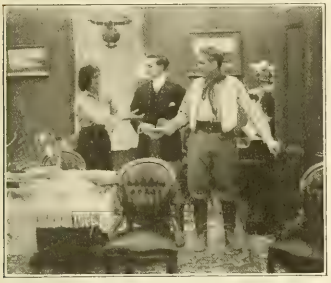
Stanley Among the Voo Doo Worshippers—(TWO REELS)—SIXTH EPISODE OF THE STANLEY SERIES—CENTAUR—DECEMBER 2.—Jack, Ada, and their party, including Andrea (the White King), fall into the hands of the Voo Doo worshippers, who decree that Ada shall be sacrificed to their horrible idol. In the meantime, Stanley, Batty and their party hurry through the jungles. They meet the Voo Doo worshippers, but, being outnumbered, lose the fight, and wait for a more favorable time for action. In the skirmish, Batty is taken. Andrea escapes, disguises himself as the witch doctor and orders Batty and Jack put to death. Andrea then silently releases Ada and takes her with him into the jungles. At the last moment, Stanley's party arrives and scatters the natives. Stanley's people are now augmented by Jack and his band, but Ada is still in the clutches of the White King, who drags her through the forest.

Checking Charlie's Child—FALSTAFF—DECEMBER 2.—As Charlie has to care for the baby at the office while his wife plays whist, and the baby is so noisy, the scheme evolves that he check the infant at a department store. The office boy is sent for the baby at the end of the day, but, losing the check, he returns with the wrong baby, which mistake Charlie does not notice, and starts home with the child. He is brought to his senses, however, when he is arrested for kidnaping. How the office boy makes good his slip, and the mother is fooled, follows. Charlie's wife recognizes in the mother of the strange baby a friend; thus Charlie's release is secured.



Spider Barlow Cuts In—AMERICAN—DECEMBER 3.—Winnifred Greenwood, Ed Coxen and George Field are featured in this single reel comedy-drama in which "Spider" Barlow, a burglar, while seeking to rob the home of Rita Morley, finds himself hampered by the presence of Will Rand, Rita's sweetheart. After waiting for hours for the young man to go home, "Spider" impersonates Rita's angry father and sends Will away. Later the burglar, while concealed behind a curtain, steals a kiss from Rita and at the same time helps himself to her recently acquired diamond solitaire, the girl believing him to be Will, who has returned unexpectedly. The picture was produced by Charles Bartlett. N. G. C.

Broadcloth and Buckskin—(TWO REELS)—MUSTANG—DECEMBER 3.—E. Forrest Taylor, Jack Richardson and Anna Little are the principal players in this Western story, produced under the direction of Frank Cooley. Walt Baird, foreman of the Lazy E ranch, in love with Ruth Cameron, the feminine owner of the ranch, is much put out when the girl receives the attentions of James Gordon, an oil scout of a big company, who believes that an oil field lies beneath the Lazy E ranch and visits the locality for the purpose of inspecting the soil. Gordon becomes so enamored with Ruth that he decides it unfair for his company to buy the land while she is ignorant of its true value, and accordingly writes anonymous notes which prevent her selling the ranch for a song. The identity of the writer of the notes is finally discovered and Ruth, out of gratitude, consents to become his wife, much to the disgust of Walt, who had loved her. N. G. C.

Making Over Father—(BEAUTY)—DECEMBER 4.—Fank Borzage, Neva Gerber and William Carroll are featured in this one-reel Beauty comedy, directed by Arthur McMackin. Hubert Haines, in love with Gloria Pembroke, is opposed by Gloria's father, who has picked out another man as his daughter's husband. Hubert promptly proceeds to kidnap the father and takes him up into the mountains, where the old gentleman, who had imagined himself suffering from numerous ailments, finds that the clear mountain air and out-door living completely restores his health. When the detectives who are seeking the missing man follow Hubert's car they discover the kidnaped father, but the latter is so delighted by the recovery of his health that he forgives Hubert. N. G. C.

Film Tempo—(THREE REELS)—MUSTANG—DECEMBER 4.—One of the most interesting of the Buck Parvin series and a story showing how the leading man of the Titan Film Company prevents the elopement of a simple country girl with Norman Dean, an "extra" of the company, who has infatuated her. A full review appears in another page of this issue. N. G. C.

The House Party at Carson Manor—(THANHOUSER—DECEMBER 5.—The will of the father of a young millionaire reads that if the latter dies without issue the entire fortune will go to his cousin. The cousin nearly succeeds in killing the young man by the use of a Hindu poison, but is caught by a detective who has come to the house to investigate a previous murder. The cousin, realizing she has lost, presses one of her rings to her mouth and then sinks back lifeless.

Universal Program

Home Life of the Spider—(SPLIT REEL)—POWERS—NOVEMBER 18.—In the first half of this film, several varieties of spiders are shown, their habits, manner of hatching, etc., making interesting material for the eye of the camera.

The other part of this reel comprises a vaudeville act, "Muscles and Merriment," featuring five members of a Hungarian family, well known in Europe and America, in some balancing and like feats. The act requires extreme strength and dexterity.

Universal Animated Weekly No. 194—(UNIVERSAL—NOVEMBER 24.—Noted physicians throughout country approve Dr. Haiselden's refusal to operate on defective child, Chicago, Ill.; Liberty Bell starts home from San Francisco; terrific gale upsets wagons and autos in New York City; a hermit refuses to move after thirty years in hut by sea, Far Rockaway, L. I.; aquaplaning in zero weather in Monessen, Pa.; Isolation hospital is burned in Columbus, Ohio; descendant of General P. G. T. Beauregard unveils hero's statue in Louisiana; twelve-inch monsters hurling huge projectiles at moving targets, Fort Warren, Mass.; annual sack fight held at Champaign, Ill.; 8,000 of "Overseas Battalion" march in spectacular pageant, Winnipeg, Canada; London Scottish and famous Grenadier Guards march to encourage enlistments, London, England; Czar's troops camp near firing line; cameraman visits battle front to get actual fighting scenes near Quennevieres; cartoons by Hy Mayer.

Under a Shadow—(TWO REELS)—REX—NOVEMBER 24.—Thera Dufre, a former member of a secret service bureau, receives a mysterious letter ordering her to deliver a certain sealed packet which she has in her possession to DeSerris, a member of the service whom she has never seen. Realizing that there is no chance of escape from the ones who have trailed her, she decides to comply rather than risk flight.

DeSerris, who is to identify Thera by a photograph, mistakes a Mrs. Irving for Thera. The latter, who arrives in time to see the mistake, decides to catch the next train and escape. How fate prevents Thera's escape and puts her in a position to save Mrs. Irving from being shot by DeSerris for refusing to give up the supposed packet, is then shown. At last, realizing that Mrs. Irving will be convicted unless she, Thera, tells the truth, she decides to accept the penalty, and calmly awaits the arrival of the police.

Operating on Cupid—(NESTOR—NOVEMBER 29.—Dr. Cuttem's particular delight is in cutting 'em up, and this he frequently does in spite of the patients' loud protests. A new nurse arrives at the hospital, with whom the doctor speedily falls in love. But the nurse already has a sweetheart. The doctor's jealousy leads to many troubles, culminating when the nurse's sweetheart finds himself strapped upon an operating table. Then guns come into play and the lovers succeed in escaping their tormentor.

When a Queen Loved O'Rourke—(Second Adventure of The New Adventures of Terence O'Rourke)—NOVEMBER 29.—J. Warren Kerrigan as O'Rourke. In this episode, O'Rourke, in India, comes to the aid of his friend, Hanrahan, who is in distress. The King of Sondia is a firm friend of the Hanrahans and the next in line of succession is his brother, Prince Rhamin Lal. For reasons of jealousy, the queen determines to rid the kingdom of both Hanrahan and his sister. When O'Rourke arrives his friend is in prison and Molly tells him of the danger which threatens her brother. O'Rourke, by outwitting the natives, manages to telegraph to the authorities. As the queen has fallen in love with the handsome adventurer, the latter has no trouble in causing the release of his friends, for Molly, too, has been imprisoned. The prince has been instrumental in the abduction of Molly, and seeing his prize slip from his grasp, he attacks the queen and O'Rourke with

"BUILT BY BRAINS" MINUSA

You Can't Show a Beautiful Film on a Poor Screen.

When you buy a Minusa Screen you don't merely buy it by the square foot. Minusa Screens are "BUILT BY BRAINS" to suit all the particular requirements of YOUR particular theatre.

Write for our literature

Minusa Cine Products Co.

St. Louis, Mo. Houser Building
Calgary, Canada Grand Theatre Bldg.
San Francisco 117-19 Golden Gate Ave.
New York 19 W. 23rd St.
Chicago 154 West Lake St.
Pittsburg 422 First Ave.

Tell me how long your throw is, the size of your house and what size picture you want and I'll tell you

The Screen You Ought to Have

We make Rembusch Patented Glass Mirror Screens. Glass transparent screens for rear projection and all kinds of cloth curtains for motion picture projection. Gold fibre screens. Silver fibre screens. Mirror cloth screens. White opaque screens. Seamless, with stretchers or rollers. Mirrors of all kinds and re-silvering. Poster frames.

FRANK J. REMBUSCH, Pres.
MIRROR SCREEN CO., Shelbyville, Ind.

Mr. Exhibitor:

We can convince you that the

Bartola Orchestra

is superior to any other for your Theatre. Give us a chance. Write for catalogue.

Sold on Easy Terms

Bartola Musical Instrument Co.

Chas. C. Pyle, General Sales Agent
710-711 Mallers Bldg., Chicago, Ill.
Factory: Oshkosh, Wisconsin

THE TALK OF THE MOTION PICTURE FIELD
Goes POSTERS
POST THEM AND PACK YOUR THEATRE
GOES—CHICAGO

The manufacturer who brands his films and advertises them in Motography is so sure of their quality that he is willing to stand the full force of possible complaints.

He is making something for which he is proud to be responsible. His trade mark secures for him the increased sales that result from satisfaction and identification. At the same time it secures to the great mass of exhibitors the certainty of quality which the known manufacturer must maintain if he is to continue to be successful.

When you book films, book films that are trademarked and advertised in Motography. The manufacturers of such films stand behind them. Your satisfaction is vital to the continued success of the trade-marked advertised films.

Trade marks and advertising in Motography are the two greatest servants in the film business today. Their whole tendency is to raise qualities and standardize them while reducing prices and stabilizing them.

a band of his followers. A rescue party from the English garrison saves the day, the prince is killed, and the adventurer bids his friends adieu.

The Phantom Fortune—(Three Parts)—Gold Seal—November 30.—Stuart Duncan is the son of supposedly wealthy parents, and in order to keep up the prestige of the name, has been accustomed to move in a very fast set. The money, however, is not as plentiful as is thought, and Stuart's parents arrange to marry him to an heiress. But his parents are disappointed and angry when they learn that Stuart has married a motion picture actress, and practically disown him. Dixie, the actress, thought she was going to be comfortably cared for, but when Stuart is unable to find work, she decides to return to her former employment. Finally Stuart's mother meets the girl and really comes to like her, so it is through the mother and daughter-in-law that family reconciliation is brought about.

Safety First and Last—Imp—November 30.—Slim Hoover enlists in the Coyote Center Home Guards when the army of General T. Malo Ferocio threatens that border metropolis. General Ferocio sends an ultimatum to Colonel Snicker of the Coyote Center Guards demanding 10,000 pesos and threatening death to the residents on refusal. Slim and Rastus, a dusky recruit, are forced to carry a message of defiance to the Mexican general. While the Mexicans are preparing to execute the two, they make their escape. In the chase Slim leads the enemy into an ingenious trap; ropes the entire army and returns home a real hero.

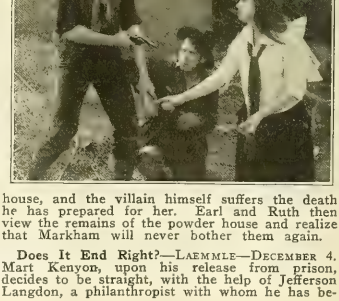
Lizzie's Watery Grave—L-Ko—December 1.—Little Jimmy and Billie both love Olive, but Jimmie has the better of the suit. Billy, in order to make a hit with Olive, appropriates his little sister's doll, and presents Olive with it. This makes him solid with her. Jimmy tries to drown the doll in a nearby lake, but his rival, hearing Olive's cries for help, rushes into the icy lake and rescues Lizzie amidst the snapping and snarling of some vicious fish.



He Was Only a Bathing Suit Salesman—(Three Reels)—Victor—December 1.—Harry C. Myers and Rosemary Theby as husband and wife. The young bathing-suit salesman makes the acquantaince of a pretty girl in Washington and they agree to meet afterwards in Philadelphia and be married. While in Baltimore he spies a pretty lady on the street and follows her. Later on he takes her out to dine. After his marriage to the Washington girl, the pair take up housekeeping in New York. His wife's mother, who is the pretty lady with whom her husband had flirted and had out to dine, writes of an intended visit. She has had a caricature portrait made of herself to disgust the husband. The latter dashes out of the house at the sight of the portrait. During the day, the mother looks up the salesman and again is royally dined. Ultimately the girl's mother comes to the house, confronts hubby, and discloses her identity. Realizing what he has done, hubby dives through the window, leaving the two women in hysterics.

Gilded Youth—(Three Reels)—Laemmle—December 2.—Featuring Rupert Julian. In the Latin quarter of Paris three artists, who have raised themselves to prosperity, adopt a son. He is named Victor Cochrane-MacTavish, after two of his guardians. Cochrane is as devoted to the boy as a father. Victor meets Olive, Cochrane's niece, and the older people hope that they will some time marry. How the boy gets into the hands of a social pirate while on his vacation and is completely fascinated by her, follows next. Finally Cochrane disposes of the object of the boy's blind fascination by paying her a round sum, and the story ends with the engagement of Victor to Olive.

The Devil and Idle Hands—Laemmle—December 3.—Mr. Saunders gives to his son, Jack, an envelope containing $10,000 which he is sending to a Mr. Thomas Wright of San Francisco. On the train, Jack's personal funds run low, for he finds it necessary to entertain an attractive girl who is on the same car. In order to pay for the dinner, he opens his father's envelope and tries to change a $1,000 bill. George Lathrop, seeing the large amount of money, becomes interested and makes the boy a loan. That night, in San Francisco, George plays poker with Jack, wins the $10,000 and leaves. Finding that he has been cheated, Jack follows the thief, who happens to enter Mr. Wright's house. Lathrop tries to outwit Jack, but Mr. Wright and his niece (the girl whom Jack met on the train) enter and straighten things out. Lathrop escapes, but without his coat, in which is found the money.

His Good Name—(Two Reels)—Powers—December 3.—Blair, a young lawyer, is friendly with Audrey Williams, a girl with artistic talent. Monk Patterson, the toughest character in town, is feared by most of the townspeople. Mary, his wife, deciding she has had enough of him, sees a lawyer in regard to a divorce, but the lawyer, fearing Monk, refuses help. The young lawyer, however, agrees to help the woman. Monk sees his wife leaving Blair's office. In a struggle between Patterson and Blair, the former is accidentally killed; Blair is tried and convicted, but escapes and sets up in New York under a new name. Audrey, who has made good in New York as an artist, marries a Ward Larkin, soon finding out what a brute he is. Malone, a silent lover of the girl, saves her from Larkin and the latter is killed in the fight. Blair takes the case and frees Malone, using as a precedent his own charge and conviction. At the end Blair's love for Audrey materializes.

The Connecting Link—(Two Reels)—Bison—December 4.—John Redmond, a widower, and Phillip Markham are joint owners of the Ten Strike mine. The latter is an unscrupulous crook, finally causing the death of his partner. Earl Hampton, a friend and lover of Ruth, Redmond's daughter, is suspicious of Markham. In order to benefit by his dead partner's will, Markham realizes that he must marry Ruth. This failing, he decides to do away with her. Ruth is miraculously saved from being killed in a powder house, and the villain himself suffers the death he has prepared for her. Earl and Ruth then view the remains of the powder house and realize that Markham will never bother them again.

Does It End Right?—Laemmle—December 4. Mart Kenyon, upon his release from prison, decides to be straight, with the help of Jefferson Langdon, a philanthropist with whom he has become acquainted. Mart calls upon Vilma Vaudri, his sweetheart and former "framer" in their blackmailing schemes, telling her of his resolution to forsake the old life, and asking her to marry him and also start anew. At first she laughs at him, but, hearing that Langdon is wealthy, she formulates a scheme which is unsuspected by Mart. Before becoming his wife, she asks that he give her time to try out the "straight and narrow stuff" and introduce her to all as his sister. Mart goes West to take charge of Langdon's mining interests. During his absence Vilma marries Langdon, keeping the secret from Mart. At last, however, Mart learns the truth and returns hurriedly to warn his benefactor. About to escape with a large haul, Vilma realizes she really loves Langdon. Thus Mart finds her tenderly ministering to her husband when he arrives, and after learning that she is really sincere and intends to be straight, lets matters stand as they are.

A Saphead's Revenge—L-KO—DECEMBER 4.—Mr. Slidewell is in love with Miss Gaby, a dancing devotee, but is worried by the success of his huge rival. The latter takes Miss Gaby to the dance, after "putting one over" on Slidewell. Slidewell, however, steals a can of soft soap and spills it on the floor, where his hated rival will have to dance. The rival falls and Slidewell is asked to dance with Miss Gaby. He falls into his own trap and a free-for-all fight ensues, in which he is bested, while his rival walks off with Miss Gaby.

Feature Programs

Mutual Master-Pictures

Strife Eternal—(FIVE REELS)—MUTUAL.—A stirring drama beautifully staged and photographed. For a longer review see another page of this issue. N. G. C.

Paramount

A Gentleman from Indiana—(FIVE REELS)—PALLAS.—Featuring Dustin Farnum and Winnifred Kingston. John Harkless, a football hero, leaves college to enter Indiana politics by purchasing the Plattville Herald. A circus visits the town and Harkless drives from the community a brace of crooked shell game workers and that night when returning home from a call on Helen Sherwood, he is mysteriously assaulted and later found in an emergency hospital miles away. Harkless returns to find that his paper has been run during his absence by Helen, who has contrived a plan which elects him to Congress.

Bella Donna—(FIVE REELS)—FAMOUS PLAYERS. Featuring Pauline Frederick in a story of a woman whose affection is won by an Egyptian and who does not realize the depth of her love until she finds another woman has won his affections and then she fears losing him. The final scene shows her tired of life wandering in the desert. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Pathe

Pathe News No. 93—PATHE—NOVEMBER 20.—Largest railroad engine in the world goes into service on the Erie railroad, marking the hundredth anniversary of the locomotive in America; monster chrysanthemums are shown in the annual exhibit at the Horticultural Hall, Philadelphia, Pa.; King Alphonso XIII, of Spain, one of the few European monarchs not at war, encourages preparedness among coming generation; to trace thefts by the animals at the Bronx Zoo finger-prints of the monkey tribe are being recorded; largest ocean going raft ever seen on the Pacific Coast reaches port, San Diego, Calif.; bumper crop of 150 tons of walnuts gathered from largest walnut grove in the world, El Monte, Calif.; one of biggest hop crops in years is gathered in North Yakima, Washington; shortage of ships causes serious congestion in the dock-sidings and piers at New York City; Nebraska University cheers their team to a 33-0 victory in the annual game with Kansas University; celebration of the double anniversary of the Cathedral and of Archbishop Prendergast takes place in Philadelphia, Pa.; seventy-five mile an hour gale rocks the skyscrapers of New York City.

At Bay—(FIVE REELS)—PATHE—NOVEMBER 26. Gold Rooster play, produced by George Fitzmaurice. It is an adaptation from the George Scarborough's play of the same name by Ouida Begere. The cast includes Florence Reed; Frank Sheridan; Charles Waldron and Lyster Chambers. "At Bay" is a powerful play of modern politics. Determnied to kill the lawyer who stands for clean practice and the suppression of vice, politically the gambler seeks this end through compromising the daughter.

A Transaction in Summer Boarders—(TWO REELS)—PATHE.—Eighth episode in the "Wallingford" series. Wallingford and Blackie accompanied by Violet and Fanny Warden visit Pine Lake in search of Charles Swivel. Swivel believes himself irresistible to the ladies, and when Wallingford is unable to interest him in a boarding house proposition, he invites a number of pretty girls to be guests of the establishment. Swivel asks one of the girls to marry him and she then tells him that Wallingford is out to do him. Swivel is an engineer and he discovers oil on the place, then he is willing to buy. He pays $70,000 for the farm and explains that he has a bargain because there is oil on the place. Blackie is tempted to laugh at J. Rufus, but the latter announces that the oil was "planted." For a longer review see another page of this issue.

The Sultan's Paradise—PATHE.—An especially good scenic. The picturesque Turkish shores are well photographed.

Great While It Lasted—PATHE-ROLIN.—Lonesome Luke comedy, in which Luke inherits a fortune from a relation he never heard of. Luke breaks into society. While at a lawn party a jealous acquaintance causes Luke no end of embarrassment. He is not wealthy very long, for it is discovered that he is not the rightful heir.

Intimate Study of Birds, Number 11—(SPLIT REEL)—PATHE.—Interesting nature study of domestic birds as they actually live. On the same reel with:

Annie Laurie—PATHE.—An animated cartoon from the Bray Studios.

Pathe News, No. 92—PATHE—NOVEMBER 17.—Annual cross country championship held at Newark, N. J.; Harry Illionsky, famous long distance swimmer, braves the currents of Hell Gate, New York City; crippled children of Chicago motor to Flower Show as guests of Sunbeam league, Chicago, Ill.; cheering on the University of Syracuse, New York, to victory over Colgate; great tornado sweeps over Missouri valley; Pathe American fashions; many soldiers return from the front, blind for life, to Paris, France, and are married; new accuracy record made with ten-inch disappearing guns, Boston, Mass.; Yale defeats Princeton in exciting football battle; motion picture of prisoners are taken in Chicago; Michigan and Pennsylvania battle to a deadlock in scoreless football game; Horatio Bottomley, who gained fame by his trenchant criticisms of the British government, now assists it by appealing for recruits; Public Service Commissioner Edward E. McCall charged with misconduct in office; big mass of rock blasted at Bear Creek to make grade for mountain boulevards; Arlington and Lexington high school girls clash in annual hockey game at Boston, Mass.

Triangle Program

Released the Week of November 28

Matrimony—(FIVE REELS)—FINE ARTS.—Featuring Julia Dean as the wife, who, when utterly ignored at a dinner party for a young thing in flashy attire, herself becomes the most desirable woman in the world. Her husband attempts to win her back, but his wife seems content to let him go his way while she goes hers. When she realizes he has learned his lesson she slips back into her simple role again. For a longer review see page 972 of the issue of November 6.

His Father's Footssteps—(TWO REELS)—TRIANGLE-KEYSTONE.—Featuring Ford Sterling as the father of a youth. He is a stern parent, and goes to see his son's girl and upbraid her, but instead of that he is induced to go with her to a cafe, and mother finds out about the affair. After much trouble he is dragged out of a water barrel, drenched and disheveled. The girl and youth achieve happiness and the parents are reconciled. For a longer review see page 972 of the issue of November 6.

The Sable Lorcha—(FIVE REELS)—TRIANGLE-KAY BEE.—Featuring Thomas Jefferson as Donald McNish, who has blown up a Chinese yacht or lorcha, destroying a hundred yellow men, from whom he had gained passage money for America. Two of McNish's partners escape from the wreck and attempt to gain revenge by killing McNish. Later Robert Cameron, McNish's brother, is mistaken for McNish, or Donald Cameron, and is kidnaped and taken to Chinatown. He is finally rescued from a basement by Clyde, his daughter's sweetheart. For a longer review see page 972 of the issue of November 6.

The Stolen Magic—(TWO REELS)—TRIANGLE-KEYSTONE.—Featuring Raymond Hitchcock as an "ophidologist." He later arrives from India and goes to a fashionable reception as an entertainer, where he more than fills the bill. For a longer review see page 865 of the issue of October 23rd.

Universal Special

The Supreme Test—(FIVE REELS)—UNIVERSAL—NOVEMBER 20.—Featuring Henrietta Crosman as Violet Logan, a widow, interested in the bettering of the conditions of the poor. While on her visits through the slums she meets a poor girl and later discovers that she is the daughter of a society man, who is known as a woman hater. However, as the picture closes said woman hater summons his nerve and proposes to the widow and is accepted. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

V. L. S. E. Inc.

The Nation's Peril—(FIVE REELS)—V. L. S. E.—NOVEMBER 22.—Produced by Lubin under the direction of George Terwilliger this spectacular picture makes a plea for national preparedness. Ormi Hawley is cast as the girl who is beguiled by a foreign agent, posing as an American, into aiding him in securing plans for the aerial torpedo. Upon learning his true intentions, the invasion of the United States by his king, she turns from her attitude that an adequate army and navy will lead to war. Earl Metcalfe plays Lieutenant Austin, inventor of the aerial torpedo.

HEADQUARTERS
FOR MOVING PICTURE CAMERAS
TRIPODS
PRINTERS, ETC.
PATHE, MOY & PRESTWICK GOODS, ALWAYS IN STOCK
MOTION PICTURE APPARATUS CO., INC.
810 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY, N.Y.

UNIVERSAL FILMS FOR SALE
A large number of excellent one and two reel subjects, all in splendid condition, with posters.
R. R. RUFFNER
Liberty Theatre Spokane, Washington

Josephus Daniels and men prominent in the United States service appear in the picture. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

The Alster Case—(Five Reels)—Essanay.—Cornelia Alster is found murdered, and Trask, the detective assigned to the case, suspects first each of two wards of the aged Miss Alster, and later is inclined to look with care into the actions of the two young men who are paying attention to the wards. All of his suspicions are proven wrong and then by a trick of fate he obtains a clue that leads to the discovery of the real murderer. It is one of the most masterful mystery tales ever screened, was produced under the direction of J. Charles Haydon, and features Bryant Washburn, John Cossas, Ruth Stonehouse, Louise Crolius, and Betty Scott. A longer review appears on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

World

Not Guilty—(Five Reels)—Equitable.—Cyril Scott is featured in this adaptation from Edgar James' "Justice," which was played on the speaking stage by Julius Steger. It is the story of a man wrongly accused of murder who is imprisoned for twenty years. His wife dies from shock. After spending the best years of his life in prison he is released, but he is unable to obtain employment and his daughter is forced to suffer as though she were the child of a murderer. The girl marries a young man of noble instincts and her happiness is his only comfort in his declining years. Joseph A. Golden directed the picture. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

SOME NEW THEATERS

Arkansas.

The Electric theater in Arkansas City was destroyed by fire November 6. The loss is estimated at $3,000 with no insurance.

California.

The Kenyon theater in Stockton operated by Tom Kenyon closed its door November 6.

The new Tulare theater in Tulare will shortly be ready for its formal opening.

Colorado.

The new Pike theater, a motion picture house at 112 East Pikes Peak avenue, Colorado Springs, opened November 10 under the management of John McMahon. The interior has been tastefully decorated and fitted up with the most modern furnishings. The heating and ventilating systems are modern and thoroughly adequate. The house has a capacity of about 425 persons.

Work on the new moving picture theater in the old Elite laundry building on North Commercial street, Trinidad, is progressing rapidly and this new theater under the management of the well known E. G. Hower, will open shortly. The house will have the largest seating capacity of any strictly moving picture house in Trinidad and the most attractive front.

Connecticut.

Adolph Jewel will manage the attractive motion picture theater which is located on Winchester avenue near Starr street, New Haven. The cost of the new theater will be in the neighborhood of $25,000 and will shortly have its formal opening.

Delaware.

State Film Corporation, Chicago, Illinois. Capital $350,000. To produce motion pictures, conduct places of amusement, etc. Incorporators, J. P. Grier, Chicago; W. I. N. Lofland, Charles B. Todd, all of Dover.

The new Elcora theater, with a seating capacity of 450 was opened in Delmar, November 3. Seth J. Ellis is owner.

The Vanoscope Manufacturing Company, with a capital stock of $3,500,000, was incorporated at Dover November 9. The concern will engage in the manufacture and sale of mechanical devices to be used in connection with motion pictures. The incorporators are William J. Robinson, Robert C. Mayer and others.

The Graves Film Corporation. Manufacture and sale of motion picture films, lantern slides, etc.; capital, $500,000.

Ham-Ex Film Company (Hamilton's Excellent Pictures), Wilmington, Del. Capital, $100,000. To manufacture cameras, photograph supplies of all kinds. Incorporators, H. M. Brown, M. E. Shakespeare, L. S. Dorsey, all of Wilmington.

Georgia.

The Savoy, one of Atlanta's oldest moving picture theaters, has been sold by the Howard Amusement Company of which William Oldknow held the controlling interest. The purchasers are Sig and Adolph Samuels, who assumed charge November 6. About the first of the year the house will be closed for remodeling. Architects are now busy with plans which call for an enlargement permitting greater seating capacity and a balcony with artistically arranged lobby. The Savoy is located at Peachtree street near Auburn avenue. It was managed by William Sharp, under Mr. Oldknow's direction, until the sale to the Samuels.

Illinois.

Work on the building in North Main street, Canton, to be occupied by Joe Ross' new theater, is progressing satisfactorily.

The work on the new Spencer square moving picture theater in Rock Island is expected to be opened Thanksgiving.

The Park theater, Broadway and Railroad streets, Coal City, was destroyed by fire November 11. The theater was owned by Jiacomo and Donna who estimate their loss at $5,000.

Indiana.

Announcement has been made that details for the erection of a moving picture theater to seat 3,000 persons, on the site of the Horace Wood livery stable on Monument Place, Indianapolis, have been completed. Papers of incorporation have been filed with the secretary of state for the Monument Realty Company, which will erect the building. The company is incorporated for $210,000, but it is now expected that $225,000 will be expended on the structure. The directors of the company are Abram L. Block and Arthur Strauss of the L. Strauss company, Robert Lieber of the H. Lieber company, M. Efroymson of Efroymson & Wolf, Ralph Norwood, Isadore Feibleman and Morris Cohn. Mr. Block, Mr. Lieber, Mr. Norwood and Mr. Efroymson are the officers of the company.

The Gem motion picture theater, in Liberty, which has been closed for some time, has been remodeled and will be opened by Harry Shriner. Mr. Shriner has added a new machine, new chairs and other accessories and will make the little play house as cozy as possible.

Iowa.

M. Osmun has sold the Olympic theater in Knoxville to H. N. Spencer, of Ames, who is now in possession.

Fred Wonder and Frank Hatt have opened a motion picture show at the opera house in Onaiva.

The Casino theater, Davenport, managed by S. E. Greenebaum, has been entirely redecorated.

Kansas.

W. L. Baldridge of Dexter bought the Gem moving picture theater in Arkansas City of Roy Burford. He will make some improvements in the place and continue to give as good show as his predecessor has been furnishing to the public.

Kentucky.

The Jefferson, a motion picture house in Jeffersonville, has been opened under the management of Pilot Harry Pfeifer.

Savoy theater, Nicholasville; capital, $1,000. Incorporators: R. M. Sparks, Matt H. Nave, Miranda D. Nave and Anna H. Sparks.

Louisiana.

The Saenger Amusement company of Shreveport have just completed and opened at Alexandria what is perhaps the finest moving picture playhouse in the state. The new house, which is known as the Saenger, represents an outlay of over $60,000, and in its construction absolutely nothing has been spared to make it a model of its kind and to embody every feature which has been found desirable in theater construction. It is decorated in the style of the Elizabethian period.

Philip Foto, proprietor of the handsome new picture show in Algiers, Foto's Folly theater, in Ophelousas avenue, will have its formal opening November 15.

Maryland.

Harrison L. Stiles filed plans for the construction of a one-story moving-picture theater, 50x122 feet, to be erected at North avenue and Rosedale street, Baltimore. The cost of this structure is placed at $18,000. J. E. Laferty is the architect.

The transition of the Auditorium theater, Baltimore, from a playhouse to a film theater was effected November 8.

Massachusetts.

Mrs. Charles J. Corman, brick moving picture house, 705 to 711 South street, West Roxbury.

Michigan.

A. T. Campbell of Cincinnati, Ohio, has taken over the management of the new Grand theater, on Main street, Menominee.

Adrian is to have a new motion picture house in the near future, Elwyn M. Simons being back of the project. An option already has been secured for the site and it is expected that a company will be organized soon and work begun within the next ninety days. The site selected comprises the three buildings on East Maumee street belonging to the A. B. Park estate and occupied by the Western Union Telegraph company, the former Walker bicycle store and the W. C. T. U. lunch rooms. It is planned to make the theater thoroughly modern and complete, seating almost 1,000.

Montana.

C. B. Smith, of Reno, Nevada, has purchased the Princess theater in Helena from E. J. Milch.

MOTOGRAPHY

The MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

MYRTLE STEDMAN
WITH MOROSCO-PARAMOUNT

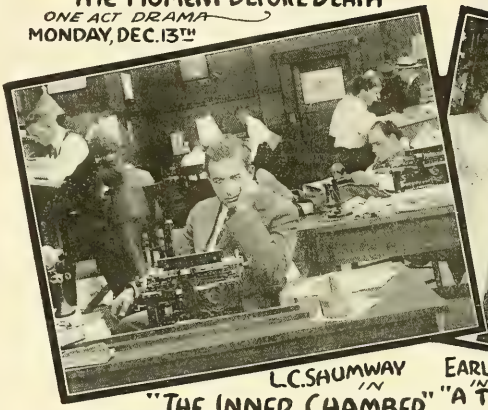
Vol. XIV CHICAGO, DECEMBER 11, 1915 No. 24



LUBIN

"THE MOMENT BEFORE DEATH"
ONE ACT DRAMA
MONDAY, DEC. 13TH

D. L. DON COMEDY – ONE ACT – "THE GREAT DETECTIVE"
TUESDAY, DEC. 14TH

L. C. SHUMWAY IN "THE INNER CHAMBER"
THREE ACT DRAMA WEDNESDAY, DEC. 15TH

EARL METCALFE IN "A THIEF IN THE NIGHT"
TWO ACT DRAMA by ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE
THURSDAY DEC. 16TH

OCTAVIA HANDWORTH IN "SWEETER THAN REVENGE"
ONE ACT DRAMA
FRIDAY, DEC. 17TH

BILLIE REEVES IN "AN UNWILLING BURGLAR"
ONE ACT COMEDY
SATURDAY, DEC. 18TH

GENERAL FILM RELEASES
LUBIN

Additional Testimonials Arrive With Every Mail

The following is an interesting letter written by the Columbia Theatre of Dayton, Ohio, the day they opened the Triangle Pictures:

> "The first showing at the Columbia Theatre today of the Triangle Plays was a big success and was pronounced by all the leading newspaper critics the most wonderful photo plays ever shown here. I am very much elated over to-day's business, especially so in view of a cold, rainy day.
>
> Charles Gross, Manager."

Expressions of opinion of this nature are the best evidence of the quality and popularity of Triangle Plays both from the standpoint of the Exhibitor and the patron. Enthusiasm on the part of both can only be obtained by the highest quality of production.

TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION
71 WEST 23rd ST NEW YORK

One of the big, gay scenes in Pathe's multiple reel feature "The Greater Will."

MOTOGRAPHY

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED THE NICKELODEON

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, DECEMBER 11, 1915 No. 24

Mistakes Feature Manufacturers are Making

BY JOSEPH W. ENGEL*

WHEN all the world is talking about the feature motion picture it seems futile to add a word to the din. The feature has already suffered so much from glittering generalities and verbose claptrap about its future, its possibilities, its strength, its weakness, its power over the public from an educational as well as a box office viewpoint, that more along this line would be worse than superfluous.

Yet there is so much to be said that ought to be said about the feature just at this time, that I am loath to remain silent, even at the risk of repeating some of the trite commonplaces, which we daily hear around us.

First of all, then, what is to be the future of the feature motion picture?

Joseph W. Engel.

I preface my remarks with this question—which we hear discussed in a hundred ways every day of our lives—because it will bring home the points I want to make later and also, in a measure, make clear the opportunities many manufacturers today are overlooking. Nor in saying this do I wish to make any objectionable comparisons. In some degree the mistakes of one manufacturer are the errors of all, the only difference being that some profit by their blunders while others do not.

We all know the history of the feature picture, its wonderful development and the rapid strides with which it has improved, until the present. That improvement, however, save in a few isolated instances, has not continued and is not continuing. Today, while there are many good features being put on the market, their proportion to the inferior ones is not greater, in fact it is rather less, than it was a few months ago. As a matter of fact, some producers, who six months or less ago were manufacturing high class multiple reel subjects, today are offering very inferior productions.

All this cannot but have its ultimate effect on the industry. It has been said many times that the public has been educated to demand better and still better films. This is one of those beautiful thoughts which originate in the brain of every man when he first acquires a few facts about the motion picture business, much as he will blandly and authoritatively assert that the industry is still "in its infancy." But it is none the less true.

Yet while each manufacturer undoubtedly realizes this fact, the wonder of it is that he doesn't rise to meet it. The day is at hand, if it hasn't already arrived, when the feature picture must be up to a certain standard if it is to receive the public's approval. We have all heard this before, too, but I do not mean to mention this point merely with this trite generality.

What I want to bring home is that any manufacturer may find out just what this standard is, without too great difficulty. Speaking for my own company, I do not hesitate to say that Metro has determined definitely what is demanded and is shaping its policy and the policies of its producing companies, Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., Popular Plays and Players, Quality and Columbia Pictures Corporations, and the rest accordingly. And if Metro has been able to do this, why not every other manufacturer?

In saying this, I do not claim that we have the exclusive control of this information at the present time. Quite the contrary. But it is remarkable how very few there are among the feature manufacturing concerns, both large and small, who have grasped the main facts, which ultimately will mean success or downfall for their productions. Of course, it may be that they have done so, but are unable to adapt their organization to the requirements of the standard demanded, yet if this is so, it speaks poorly for the concern's future activities.

As I do not wish to make direct comparisons in this article, for obvious reasons, I intend to touch upon the various points which Metro officials believe constitute the essentials of every good feature and which ultimately, in our opinion, will be the attributes of every successful one. The companies who consistently produce such features will be the only ones, eventually, who will be in the feature field. The others will either be eliminated from the business or turn their talents to other branches of the industry.

What constitutes a good feature motion picture? The answer is both hard and easy, just as practice is less simple than preachment. First of all, of course, "the play's the thing." That goes without saying. But every day it gets harder to find desirable material for high class pictures. The number of novels, plays and stories available for motion picture adaptation grows constantly smaller. Before long it will have reached the vanishing point. The classics have already been practically exhausted, doubtless to be reborn on the screen again under the direction of future film producers, but for present purposes at least unavailable. Soon the feature producer will have to rely almost solely upon original scripts for his subjects. But whether the feature photoplay is based upon a stage production, a novel or an original plot, its value must be measured, in the last analysis, by the story it tells. If the sequence of events is not made clear or if parts of the story have little or no connection with what has gone before, then the picture, even if it has what we term a "punch" in every scene does not deserve to rank as a feature.

*Treasurer, Metro Pictures Corporation.

Right here let me say that this is one of the most serious mistakes which directors, or shall I say producers, of feature pictures are making every day. They are constantly sacrificing essentials in the development of an artistic plot for the sake of a sensational scene—to get the requisite "punch."

A greater mistake never was made. The public wants thrilling effects, of course, but not at the sacrifice of continuity, and it is making this plainer every day. Not long ago I saw a picture by one of the big companies, which was filled with really thrilling and, I might add, quite expensive situations, designed to cause those who viewed it to lean forward in their chairs in excitement. Yet the whole thing failed utterly to convince or satisfy those who had paid to see it. It was as if you had come to see Hamlet and instead of the grave-digging scene and the soliloquy the management had interpolated some hair raising vaudeville stunts.

The trouble is that the average director regards the "punches" he puts in a film as more important than the story. Sometimes he has to put them in because the story, not having originally been written for the screen, lacks the necessary situations. Also, it may be that he is trying to make a five or six reel feature out of material only worth one or two. This is a phase of the entire situation, however, which I have not space to touch on here. "Padding" is so obvious and common a fault, also, that it is hardly necessary to refer to it.

Ultimately, in my opinion, there will be one and two reel features, just as there are longer ones, but this will only come when scenario writing has reached a point in the art which it has not reached today save in most limited degree. Then there will be gems of the screen of every length, just as there are masterpieces in one-act plays and short stories, as well as those of more elaborate character. As yet, however, the screen has not developed a Moliere or a De Maupassant.

Another blunder which many producers are making nowadays is in finding a suitable vehicle for the stars for whom they are paying fabulous prices. They seem to think that just because they have a good star, and have engaged a fairly competent director, the result is assured, especially if the play or novel to be picturized is of proved value. What often happens is that a star's drawing power is nullified and a good story spoiled in spite of all an able director can do, and all because neither one was suited to the other.

Such a situation would never arise in the spoken drama. It is too ludicrous almost to conceive as happening, if for no other reason than that such a play would be foredoomed to failure. Yet it is done every day in motion pictures. In the stage production, the star is carefully selected to fit the piece or the play especially written or adapted to fit the star. For the screen the rules should be the same, and though without doubt they often are applied, in scores of instances they are disregarded utterly.

The fact that in some cases features like this have paid a profit should be no encouragement that they will always do so. The instances where a famous star's name or a great play or novel will win considerable for a feature picture at the box office, without other merit, will soon be as scarce as fleas on a hard boiled egg.

The public wants clean drama. Problem and sex plays are surfeiting and disgusting it. Six months or a year from now companies who have gained a name for producing this type of feature will find that the public will not pay for seeing them. By this, of course, I do not mean that the legitimate sex appeal in a play, the romantic or well balanced heart interest, will have lost its power. Quite the contrary. But the morbid and abnormal will have to go.

Awhile back I mentioned the importance of continuity as contrasted with "punch," while maintaining that the latter was also highly important if occurring naturally. The element of suspense is also absolutely essential. Without it, even if a picture has every other attribute in the highest degree, it is bound to be a failure as far as being a real feature is concerned. It goes without saying, also, that photography of unusual quality and novel conceptions should lend its aid to the motion picture if it is to be entitled to a niche in the hall of the feature film.

The public likes new and different photographic effects as well as a worthy and well told story for its screen delectation. Metro directors and camera-men are urged to keep this in mind. As a recent instance of this in "A Yellow Streak," a five-part picture just finished by the Columbia Pictures Corporation starring Lionel Barrymore and Irene Howley, there is a scene in which a score of galloping horses, bearing the sheriff's posses, dashes right at the audience without turning off to one side, as is usually the case, and then rearing up until the screen is filled with a mass of struggling bodies and kicking hoofs. How the camera-man took it I haven't yet heard, but it looks as if the horses were directly over the camera's lens.

I mention it merely as an illustration of the point I wished to make, which was that legitimately sensational scenes like this will always be highly popular with the photoplay public and hence should be striven for by the future director.

In touching on a few of the mistakes that others are making, I do not hesitate to say that Metro has made a few of them, too. But take any recent Metro play you please and you will find that it comes close to fulfilling the following requirements: A good, clean story, a real star, both well adapted to each other; continuity in the development of the plot; a "punch" wherever a natural opportunity occurs for one; the highly important element of suspense; beautiful photography and novel photographic effects.

I maintain that any motion picture meeting these requirements is worthy of being ranked as a feature and as such will always find a ready welcome among photoplay lovers, now and henceforth. I contend also, that any picture not measuring up to this standard, in just that degree is not really a feature at all, but merely a long film, and that later developments in the motion picture field will prove it.

A PERSONALLY PICKED PROGRAM

Albert E. Smith, Vitagraph Official, Announces Plan by Which Exhibitors Can Secure Choice Productions of Merit

From Albert E. Smith, treasurer of the Vitagraph, president of V. L. S. E., Inc., and treasurer of the Central Film Company, comes an announcement of interest to exhibitors all over the country. It is a new system of booking by which the exhibitor sees every picture that he books. The statement reads:

"Today the wise exhibitor buys in the open market. He picks his program according to merit only—he gives his patrons what they want. In the past you have accepted what the exchanges offered simply because you did not have the opportunity to choose your subjects.

"But the Vitagraph has established a precedent. After great forethought, after analyzing conditions, after considering the wants of the exhibitor, we have decided to let the exhibitor see every picture that he books. We do not ask exhibitors to buy our product in the dark. We ask for fair and open competition. We intend to make the best pictures—pictures that you want—pictures that your patrons want, and we are in a position to do it.

"You can now get all the Vitagraph releases that you desire. You can run a solid Vitagraph program if it suits your purpose. You can see every Vitagraph release that you book—before you book it. We do not ask you to buy a pig in a poke. We ask you to see every Vitagraph release at the nearest General Film Company exchange.

"We are now releasing the following subjects on the following days: Every Monday a single-reel comedy; every Friday a Sidney Drew comedy; every Saturday a Broadway Star Feature, three reels. These subjects are picked for a purpose. They are acted by eminent Vitagraph stars. They are the kind of releases that your patrons want—clean, wholesome drama and comedy.

"Broadway Star Features need no introduction. They are the best three-reelers in the world. The Sidney Drew releases are a class of comedy that your patrons look forward to—the kind of comedies shown at the best theaters—the high-class comedy that is in a class by itself. The Monday single-reel comedies are real and of the kind that only Vitagraph can produce. All of these releases are under the supervision of our most capable directors—they are photographically perfect and every story contains the necessary rudiments of a perfect photoplay.

"Probably the greatest change in our releasing system—the greatest innovation ever established—is our personally picked program—a program composed of a four-reel dramatic subject and a single-reel comedy. This personally picked program is produced under the personal supervision of Mr. Blackton and myself. This innovation will give the exhibitor a well balanced evening's entertainment complete in every detail.

"The features are especially selected and are strong in heart-interest, while the comedies are the variety of comedy that can be shown in high-class theaters—that contain comic situations without vulgarity. We know this personally picked program will make money for exhibitors. Our knowledge of the industry leads us to believe that the public wants this kind of entertainment—it is a complete show and will satisfy the most critical audience. Heretofore you have had to take other productions in conjunction with Vitagraph releases. Heretofore it has been necessary to accept other makes of films in order to get Vitagraph subjects. Heretofore you had no opportunity of picking the subjects you desired.

"Now you can give the public what it demands. You can give them all Vitagraph if its suits your purpose. You can combine and lay out your program so that it will be well balanced—and you can also give a complete evening's entertainment with the knowledge that you are using the best that the land affords by using the Vitagraph personally picked program."

Edison Secures New Talent

Almost coincident with the enlargement of the Edison scenario department by the addition of two more writers is the election of Arthur Leeds, editor of that company, to the presidency of the Ed-Au Club. Mr. Leeds had been vice-president and, during the summer, was acting president during the absence of George L. Sargent who had gone to the coast to produce a big feature picture.

The club is now representative of the best of the productive brains in the motion picture industry. While originally more of a club for writers, it now embraces writers, editors, and directors. Its roster shows a large number of men who have been responsible for some of the most successful features, both in the financial and artistic sense. Originally, too, it required, in a writer, that he had had ten releases to his credit, but now one picture of merit makes him eligible.

Editor Leeds, who has ascended from model scene maker up all the rounds—actor, director, exhibitor—and who has to his credit a book on the writing of the photoplay used a great deal as a text book, has now organized the Edison scenario department so that plays are handled with much greater dispatch and sureness, as to getting all worth while material.

Everett McNeil, who made a name as a literary free lance before he became interested in pictures, is one of the new members, while Edward H. Griffith, a well-known newspaper man, and Paul Sloan, are the other additions. Mr. McNeil recently came from the Vitagraph where he re-constructed and picturized many successes. He has just finished the scenarioization of "In His Steps," which will likely be called "The Crucifixion of Philip Strong." It will be a Kleine-Edison, five-reel feature, and Mabel Trunnelle and Robert Conness will be featured.

Mr. Griffith, who is doing original and reconstruction work, comes from the Cleveland Leader where he did the feature stories, and found time meanwhile for magazine writing and scenarioization. Mr. Griffith did commented-upon work on such occasions as Taft's and Roosevelt's tour about Ohio and similar important events.

VITAGRAPH SECURES EDNA MAY

Famous "Belle of New York" Is Induced by Albert E. Smith to Appear in Single Film Production—Will Donate Salary to Charity.

Edna May, the former "Belle of New York" and famous comic opera favorite of two continents, and the wife of a New York multi-millionaire, has been signed by the Vitagraph company for an early appearance in motion pictures, the name of her play to be announced later. Miss May it is claimed will receive the record-breaking sum of $100,000 for her appearance in the single production, and the entire amount will be turned over to the Red Cross and other charities, as Miss May would only consent to an engagement for films upon those conditions.

Edna May

Few actresses reached the heights of popularity, both in America and abroad, that Miss May attained as Violet Gray in the comic opera, "The Belle of New York." She was cast in the role by George W. Lederer and on the opening night of the production at the Casino theater, New York, her remarkable beauty, her grace, charm and ability made her a star over-night. Because of Miss May's personality, the play enjoyed a remarkable run in New York and played a long engagement in London at the Shaftsbury theater.

Following "The Belle of New York," she starred in "The Casino Girl," "An American Beauty," "Three Little Maids," "The School Girl," "The Catch of the Season," and other operatic successes both here and in London. In a revival of "The Belle," Miss May's reappearance was greeted with the same expression of popularity that made her loved in the role several years previous.

In January, 1907, Miss May created the title role in a new comic opera, "Nellie Neil," at the Aldwych theater, London, and won new honors. In June of the same year she was induced to forsake the stage for the privacy of married life, and wedded a New York banker, one of the wealthiest men in America. Since that time the theatrical public has had no glimpse of her, and her reappearance through the medium of the screen will be anxiously awaited by those who knew and loved her as "The Belle of New York."

Miss May was born in Syracuse, New York, and at the early age of seven appeared in a production of "Pinafore" in that city. Her first appearance in New York was as Clairette in the operetta, "Santa Maria," then showing at Hammerstein's. She played in Hoyt's "A Contented Woman" for a season and was then selected by Lederer for "The Belle of New York" company.

Michelena Cast a Strong One

According to reports from the Pacific Coast, the cast supporting Beatriz Michelena in "The Unwritten Law," now being produced by the California Motion Picture Corporation, is an exceptionally strong one. Among the members thereof are three who played prominent roles in "Salomy Jane," the first photoplay in which Miss Michelena appeared. They are Andrew Robson, William Pike and Clarence Arper.

The motion picture public will be impressed by the wide dissimilarity in each case between the parts played by the three in "Salomy Jane" and those they are assaying in the present production. Their success with both goes far toward evidencing the wide range of their histrionic versatility.

William Pike, who is playing opposite Miss Michelena in "The Unwritten Law," and appears in the role of a wealthy young candidate for governor, was Red Pete, the stage robber in "Salomy Jane." Andrew Robson is Larry McCarthy, the political boss, in the present picture, while in the former one he impersonated "Yuba Bill," the hale and philanthropic stage driver.

Some "Star" Extras, These

Heads of departments of the Gaumont Company at Flushing, N. Y., showed their versatility recently by appearing in a photoplay with Miss Cissy Fitzgerald. Director Edwin Middleton, at work on "The Widow Wins," required some extra men to fill a hotel lobby. As it was only a flash, the amateur actors from the office insisted on having a still taken to prove they were in the play. They feared that when their friends saw the play they would not have time to recognize them. In the picture, from left to right, are Charles Walsh, an actor; B. H. Bromhead, factory manager (holding a newspaper); back of him is C. M. White, assistant to the general manager; Charles Febvre, South American representative; W. G. Jenny, cashier; Harry King Tootle, publicity manager; Miss Cissy Fitzgerald, and Charles Craig, an actor.

A view of the star-supers.

Grace Valentine, the charming and popular young actress, who recently made her debut in motion pictures as a star, has been engaged for the stellar cast in the big Metro feature, "Black Fear."

LUBIN MAY JOIN FORD PARTY

Philadelphia Film Magnate Wires Henry Ford Offering Moral and Physical Support to Peace Conference—May Be Invited to Attend

Prompted by the magnanimity of the proposed peace congress being organized by Henry Ford, the millionaire automobile manufacturer, Siegmund Lubin, president of the Lubin Manufacturing Company, has telegraphed to Mr. Ford, placing at the disposal of that gentleman his own moral and physical support, and suggesting that motion pictures be utilized to their fullest extent in furthering the proposed propaganda to "get the boys out of the trenches before Christmas."

Mr. Lubin is thoroughly enthusiastic over the proposed trip of the Ford peace congress and is most urgent in his request that he be permitted to accompany the party as representative of not only his own sentiments but the motion picture industry, the greatest of all teachers.

The following telegram has been sent:

Henry Ford, Esq., Hotel Biltmore, New York City.

Myself and my organization with all the tremendous value that motion pictures may lend to your proposed peace congress are at your disposal in this latest and most magnanimous work in your career of world valued accomplishments.

I hasten to offer to you my entire moral and physical support with an earnest solicitation that I may be permitted to accompany you and your colleagues abroad in your proposed mission to effect universal peace.

Siegmund Lubin.

A reply from the secretary of Mr. Ford is to the effect that owing to Mr. Ford's presence in Washington, he is not replying personally but will do so on his return to New York. He has also expressed his confidence that Mr. Lubin will most certainly be a member of the committee and that his generous offer will be most heartily accepted. He expresses his appreciation of the able part which the motion picture may accomplish through the trip and is enthusiastic over the suggestion.

LeRoy Patent Sustained by Court Decision

On November 18, 1915, a decree was entered in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York by the Honorable Learned Hand, in the suit of Jean A. LeRoy, of 133 Third avenue, New York City, against Lewis Hetz, of 302 East Twenty-third street, New York City, sustaining the validity of Le Roy patent No. 864,314, of 1907, for independent framing devices for kinetoscopes, and ordering an injunction to issue restraining the defendant, Hetz, from further infringement of this patent by the manufacture, sale or use of this device. The case was referred to a master to take an account of the damages to be assessed in the case.

A few days previous a preliminary injunction was ordered to issue in another suit against Hetz based on LeRoy patent No. 1,075,215, of 1913, for automatically controlled fire shutter for kinetoscopes. This suit is also pending in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, the complainants being Jean A. LeRoy and Chester R. Baird, and the defendant being the same Lewis Hetz. The injunction order in this case was also made by Judge Hand.

It appears that the situation in this second suit is complicated by the existence of certain suits by LeRoy and Baird against moving picture houses in Buffalo, N. Y., using a well known make of projector, and the manufacturer involved in the Buffalo cases being desirous of making those the test cases, it was arranged that the suit against Hetz on this patent should be postponed, but that an injunction should be issued against him in the meantime.

Yep, They're Real Stars

The horse and the mule that had more to do with the event of "Don Quixote" and Sancho Panza's wanderings than they probably realized, are pictured herewith. Not, of course, the original lean and scrawny steed and long-suffering donkey, but those used today by De Wolf Hopper and Fay Tincher in the Triangle-Fine Arts filmization of the Cervantes classic.

Rosinante III and Dapple, two of the featured players in the Triangle, Fine Arts version of "Don Quixote."

Rosinante III is the name of the charger, the reason being that Mr. Hopper tried two and broke them down with his avoirdupois before he got this one, which fortunately combines scrawniness with strength. Dapple is the far-famed donkey and especial pet of Miss Fay Tincher who often takes the animal on a short excursion from the studio for a joy ride towards the orange groves of Los Angeles.

William Muldoon Acts for Raver

There are scenes in the Augustus Thomas production, "The Other Girl," which call for settings in a physical culture health resort. In the original stage production it will be remembered that these scenes were supposedly laid at the famous William Muldoon Health Farm at White Plains, N. Y.

It was with some difficulty that the Raver Film Corporation got Mr. Muldoon's permission to film these scenes on his property. Mr. Muldoon is considered somewhat of a czar on his farm. His command must be obeyed to the letter and he will not let anything interfere with the daily routine which starts at four in the morning and lasts until eight in the evening.

Mr. Muldoon had never seen pictures taken before, and was somewhat averse to having his system broken into when the players arrived and he learned what they required. However, when his old friend, James J. Corbett, who is being starred in this picture, appeared on the scene he readily gave his consent.

After watching the people at work for some time he became deeply interested, so much so that he consented to appear in one of the scenes and invited the players to stay for a week or so.

Many of the trainers and some of the exclusive paraphernalia to be found only on the Muldoon farm appear in the picture, giving the scenes the atmosphere called for in Mr. Thomas' script.

William J. Clifford With Horsley

The latest addition to the David Horsley player colony at the Horsley studios in Los Angeles is William J. Clifford, who for the past five years has been a prominent figure in the casts of photoplays. Mr. Clifford's engagement by Mr. Horsley is in the nature of a "home coming," for he was with his present employer at the time Mr. Horsley was making one of his first brands in the East.

William J. Clifford.

Previously Mr. Clifford had extensive stage experience having been identified with the classic drama. He appeared in the support of the best known Shakespearean actors of the day including Robert Mantell and Mildred Holland. He also supported Walker Whiteside and other stars. For a number of seasons he was featured in road attractions, among them "The Prisoner of Zenda," "When Knighthood Was in Flower," "King Robert of Sicily," "Othello," "Hamlet," "The Merchant of Venice" and "David Garrick."

In 1910 he made his bow as a motion picture player with Mr. Horsley. Later he was with Melies, playing leading business, and in sequence, in like capacity, with the New York Motion Picture Company, Universal and Metro. With the latter company he played the title role in "The Second in Command," a Quality release with Francis X. Bushman, Mr. Bushman playing Col. Anstruther.

Tom Moore Signs With Lubin

Announcement is made by the Lubin Manufacturing Company, that contract has been entered between that company and Tom Moore, one of the most popular men of photoplays, whereby that idol of the fans begins work with Lubin in the coming feature production "Dollars and Cents," where he will play opposite Ethel Clayton, the Lubin star.

"Tom" Moore needs no introduction to followers of motion pictures—he is known from one end of the world to the other and for more than the past six years he has held his position well at the top in the ranks of photoplay favorites. For many years Mr. Moore with Alice Joyce were favorites with the Kalem Company and quite recently his retirement came from that company, since which time he has resisted many flattering offers from this or that concern until Messrs. Singhi and Lowry for the Lubin Company made overtures which he confesses he could no longer resist.

Seattle Exchange Gets Publicity Dept.

Seattle has fallen! The great guns of publicity have battered a hole in the walls of the west coast city, which is by way of saying that the Progressive Motion Picture Company, 219-224 Central building, Seattle, the Paramount exchange for Washington, Oregon and Alaska, has opened a publicity department, placing M. N. Rouse, who for the past month or so has been one of its traveling representatives, in charge. Mr. Rouse has had considerable experience in both the exchange and exhibiting ends of the business and until recently was manager of the National theater in Portland. He is an adept at theatrical advertising and it is expected that he will be able to render valuable assistance to Paramount exhibitors in his territory.

In opening a special publicity department, the Progressive Motion Picture Company is following in the footsteps of a large number of other Paramount exchanges, including the Notable Feature Film Company of Salt Lake and Denver, the Famous Players Film Company of Philadelphia and Washington, the William L. Sherry Film Company of New York, and the Famous Players Exchange of Boston.

It is the desire of the Paramount Pictures Corporation that men of the undoubted ability of George E. Carpenter, J. S. Walraven, George K. Robinson, W. E. Lenshan, and M. N. Rouse be assigned to publicity work in all its branches, as the big advertising and publicity campaign, which it is now carrying on, require the fullest co-operation and localization of each exchange. Seattle has taken one more step to bring the newspapers of the west to the realization of the possibilities of the motion picture.

Fielding Heads Cactus Films

Romaine Fielding, author, actor, director, and manager, late of the Lubin Company, announces that he has decided to remain in Phoenix, Arizona, where he has built a beautiful home and studio and will produce pictures for the Universal under the title of the Cactus brand. The new organization of which Mr. Fielding is managing director is called the Cactus Films. One and two-reel subjects will be produced in which Mr. Fielding will be featured. He has retained the valued members of his former company and is quite busy now finishing the extensive alterations and improvements on the plant which he commenced some weeks ago.

Word comes from the Pacific coast that Neva Gerber will be missing from the "Beauty" brand pictures, in which her pretty face has been so familiar to the fans for many months now. Neva has other plans in mind, but will take a good rest before starting in again. It is said that she will return to Los Angeles, where she worked before going to Santa Barbara.

"Wise Exhibitors Book Known Products"

SO DECLARES FREULER

"BANKRUPT" and "fire sale" films are the greatest detriment to the progress and prosperity of the exhibitor today, according to President John R. Freuler of the Mutual Film Corporation.

Mr. Freuler has given out an interview full of strong terms and sharp words on the subject. He takes a parallel from the general merchandising field and applies it to the exhibitor's side of the film business.

The president of Mutual is particularly emphatic in denunciation of the "homeless feature" and the films peddled about by "free lances."

"Every exhibitor worthy of consideration is trying to build up a reputation for having the best film entertainment in the locality he serves," observed Mr. Freuler. "He wants his place to be known as always having a 'good show.'

"But too many exhibitors are being led astray and into bookings that break down all that they can build up simply because they are being offered so much 'bankrupt stock.' By that I mean the films that are being offered for rental from weakling and wabbling concerns of the prevalent but unpopular 'fly-by-night' character.

"I am very reliably informed that there are more than one million feet of negatives of films in New York alone that will never see the light of day.

"But somebody will be trying to sell these worthless films and some of them will be forcing their way into some of the theaters, to the ultimate loss and disappointment of the exhibitors unwise enough to book them.

"The wise buyer and the prosperous, successful dealers are those who buy and handle trade-marked goods—goods with a name behind them, a reputation built on sincere, consistent performance, a reputation to maintain.

"Just now the exhibitor is pursued by the fellow with desk room in a loft and a few reels of worthless film of uncertain ancestry. Until these 'fly-by-nights' are eliminated they will continue a menace to the unwary exhibitor.

"The wise exhibitors are those who follow the very plain law of common sense and tie up to known products—the films produced by well established, well known, successful concerns with reputations to uphold. The merit of their productions has been stamped into the public mind. Patrons of the picture theaters have been educated to demand the high standard of quality that marks the products of these substantial concerns and every house that tries to present the 'bankrupt' unknowns will suffer from the experiment.

"The exhibitor who deals with the Mutual Film Corporation knows that he is getting his film from a concern that has been in the business for years, a concern of established reputation, supplying a clean certain product of high standards, films that are standardized in character, that have passed the rigid inspections of a big staff of experts, experts qualified by all the experience that there is in the history of film production—and above all the film of a concern that the public knows and approves.

"Perhaps the exhibitor thinks that some of this 'bankrupt stuff' looks fairly good and that he can 'get away' with it by sandwiching it in with his respectable pictures. Any exhibitor who makes this experiment always pays a dear price for what he learns from it.

"Suppose that an exhibitor takes a chance on a print out of that million feet of stuff that is yearning for the light in New York.

"'It looks pretty fair and I guess it'll get by,' he decides. Then it goes on his screen. But he has not reckoned with his public, the people who year after year have been educated to appreciation of the best in films. Motion picture audiences are proverbially critical. The people know. Do not ever get the notion they do not. When this 'bankrupt' film goes on the screen they recognize at once its lack of art value, its low and indifferent quality. The exhibitor, however, if he is betrayed into the mistake of booking such stuff does not discover its weakness and lack of box office pulling power until the damage is done.

"Marshall Field, Altman, United Cigars, Tiffany and all the rest of the successful retailers do not sell any 'bankrupt stock,' they have no 'fire sale' goods. Rather, they handle trade-marked, reliable, well known products time-tried and worthy of the public confidence they enjoy.

"The motion picture exhibitor as a retailer of entertainment will do well to take a lesson from them. It is the plainest kind of common sense, which ought to be made a lot commoner."

Triangle's "All-Star" Mob

Nat Goodwin, Frank Sheridan, George Beban, Hal Forde, James Lackeye, Menifee Johnston, Morgan Coman, and many other prominent Broadway actors acted as volunteers last week at the Sharkey Athletic Club in New York for one of the principal scenes in the new Douglas Fairbanks play, "His Picture in the Papers," which John Emerson of the Griffith forces is producing for the Triangle Film Corporation. James Buckley, manager of the Sharkey Club, co-operated with Emerson in the purely professional pugilistic details of the affair. "The supers" mentioned and numerous other Lambs, Friars, Players, Greenroomers, Screeners, and so on did the rest. The uninitiated marvelled at the ease with which the mob responded to Emerson's requests to register enthusiasm or disgust. Only when it had been explained that the unusual throng had been recruited from the best of theatrical luminaries did they appreciate the quality of the entertainment offered. Fairbanks in his search for notoriety, commanded by his father, appeared as the challenger of a well-known light heavyweight, Jack Denning. The mob hooted the appearance of the unknown but at the end of the first round there was a noticeable change in its attitude. Later when he scored a clean knockout the entire house was with him. In his joy at the thought that at last he could get his picture in the papers he posed for numerous cameramen in the ring. But his hopes were to be dissipated, for, just as he was to depart with the diamond studded belt, the police raided the club, made several arrests, smashed all cameras and sent Emerson and his star out to devise new stunts to accomplish their purpose. The belt used in the production was the famous affair given to Terry McGovern in 1898, when he defeated Pedlar Palmer. Terry himself was on hand to act as referee and Joe Humphries, without whose ballyhoo abilities no New York boxing contest is complete, appeared as announcer and also got into the center of many of the scenes which will later be flashed on Triangle screens.

Rosetta Brice of Lubin

Few of the photoplay favorites of the present day have had a more meteoric rise to fame than Rosetta Brice, the beautiful little Titian haired divinity of the Lubin Company. Little more than three years ago Miss Brice, who was then a member of the Orpheum stock company of Philadelphia, attracted the attention of the Lubin management who immediately made overtures for her services which resulted in her joining their company. For many months she appeared in a series of character studies with Lubin which earned for her an enviable record and soon caused her to be one of the most demanded members of the Lubin staff.

Rosetta Brice.

Always with the intent to play ingenues and leads she accepted her commissions with an untiring zeal, begging at times that she be cast in a minor role until such time as she felt firmly convinced that her motion picture schooling had been nearly perfected and it was not until the question of casting the Lubin V. L. S. E. feature "The Rights of Man" arose, that Miss Brice presented herself to the inner office and announced that she believed herself ready for leads and that the part of Princess Lohra in that production was the one in which she preferred to begin her career as a leading lady. Her intention was warmly received and she was assigned the part. The success of her delineation has been written since that release and with the showing of "A Man's Making" in which Miss Brice assumes the leading lady role with Richard Buhler, another V. L. S. E. release of Dec. 6, more laurels are added to her record.

Kriterion Opens Boston Exchange

Among the recent accessions to the motion picture business in Massachusetts is the New England Kriterion Film Exchange at 205 Pleasant street, Boston, operated by the Kriterion Company of Boston. The office is located in the heart of the film district, convenient to the theaters and transportation companies, and furnished with new and up-to-date equipment of the most modern type. The entire plant is strictly fireproof throughout, and has two large vaults capable of storing several thousand reels. The exhibition room is one of the largest in Boston and is equipped with a fireproof, tile booth and the most approved system of ventilation. The company was organized to handle the Kriterion program, releasing eighteen reels per week.

The financial interests behind the exchange are represented by Thomas H. Mullen of Lynn, the president and treasurer of the Kriterion Company of Boston. Mr. Mullen is new in the motion picture world, but brings to the company a large and varied experience in general commercial lines. The manager of the exchange is R. Frank McKay, widely and favorably known among motion picture exhibitors of Boston. During the past fifteen years Mr. McKay was associated first with the General Film Company and then with the R. D. Marson film exchange. He has also managed a syndicate of suburban theaters and during the past summer has managed the motion picture exhibitions in the Massachusetts Metropolitan Park system in and about Boston.

Metro Boosters Eat Again

The Metro Boosters Club released another weekly food feature at Healy's gustable projecting room Tuesday night, November 23, in which thirty-five of the liveliest members of the Metro family appeared. The principal interior set used was the Jungle Room, where a practical grill was operated by emotional chefs and waiters, who dispensed real beefsteak and other things. Richard A. Rowland and Joseph Engel were the directors of the gripping feature production, which teemed with action and ran for five hours straight, without a cold screen. Mr. Engel furnished the copy of the spoken inserts and captions, introducing the principals as they appeared. With a shout of "Lights!" from Mr. Engel, B. A. Rolft flashed his ump-teen carat diamond ring, and the battery of cameras started to click. If any criticism could be made at all the story of the food feature did not contain suspense. But what it lacked in suspense, it more than offset with continuity and thrilling moments. Every member of the all-star Metro cast was provided with an adequate role, and met the occasion with the proper tempo.

Summed up, the fireside gathering of the happy Metro family was a unique and notable event. Numbered "among those present" were members of the executive staff, producers, exchange heads, directors, assistant directors, camera men, and the staff of the publicity and scenario department of Metro. Everyone was invited to "speak right out" and as a result a spade was called some very hard names. But the fraternal Metro spirit pervaded the gathering, proving the saving grace of the occasion. There wasn't a single "dumb act" on the bill, and it was nothing out of the ordinary to see a camera man bob up and proceed to scold and enlighten executive officers and directors alike with suggestions as to how the standard of Metro might be improved. Even the oft-times captious directors lost their temperamental dispositions and spoke in soft and modulated voices of their plans, their hopes and their ambitions.

The demand for the high class feature, the need of good stories, the importance of expert photography and direction, the importance of capable players, the value of honest and clean publicity; these and many kindred subjects were discussed at length.

MORE NOISE THAN A CIRCUS

Tom North, Seattle Manager for V. L. S. E., Inc., Gives "The Battle Cry of Peace" Big Send-off in His Town

What was undoubtedly the most distinctive reception ever given a motion picture in Seattle, was tendered the stirring Vitagraph feature "The Battle Cry of Peace," which V. L. S. E., Inc., is now releasing, at a private showing held at the Press Club in Seattle, last Wednesday. To Tom North, manager of the Seattle branch of V. L. S. E., Inc., belongs the credit for staging the notable introduction of this picture to the people of the northwest. No civic event of recent years has been handled in a manner calculated to arouse more enthusiasm and patriotism than the way in which Mr. North handled the presentation of "The Battle Cry of Peace."

The showing was preceded by a parade through the principal thoroughfares of the city, headed by a band, the mayor, the principal military and civil organizations and officials of the city. These included the Businessmen's Training Camp School, G. A. R., the Boy Scouts, Coast Artillery and Infantry, officers of the United States Army of the Northwest, the commanders and officers of the Puget Sound Navy Yard, the "Tilkums" which is Seattle's "booster" organization, the Press Club and representative citizens and bankers of the district. After the parade, an exhibition of "The Battle Cry of Peace" was given at the Press Club, and acclaimed with tremendous applause. In fact, it was stated that no picture had ever been shown which had aroused such enthusiasm. Two well-known ministers of the city who saw the production, based their Sunday morning sermons on it.

Newspapers of Seattle gave front-page stories to the picture, and for several days following the exhibition "The Battle Cry of Peace" was the principal topic of the hour in the northwestern cities. The picture will be shown to the public in Seattle, beginning Christmas Day, also in Portland and Tacoma—opening in the latter city early in December.

Howja Like to Be a Signal Player?

"Oh, thrill, where is thy sting?" is the adopted song of the Signal players. When the company starts out to take scenes for "The Girl and the Game" it is never doubted by any one of them that Director McGowan will, in his inimitable suave way, ask them to do something that is just on the margin of safety by about an inch, Mex.

And they all like it—that's why they are in the Signal company, because if anyone had the slightest fear—and that would be perfectly human—the proximity of Director McGowan would not be the most desirable place in the world for them.

If the director wants a train to go dashing madly down hill, the tops of the cars ablaze, or flying leaps to the ground from the cars or onto them from a station roof, there is not one in the outfit from Miss Helen Holmes, heroine-star of the story, down to the least known member, who will interpose an objection.

There is nothing that can disturb the equanimity of the cast. The other day some scenes were being taken over near Pasadena when of a sudden Miss Holmes' face and arms began to burn. A hurried trip to the nearest physician disclosed poison oak. Did the little heroine worry? Did she resort to that admitted feminism—hysteria? Not she.

"Now, what do you think of that?" she commented. "It cannot stop the picture, so I wouldn't care at all, except I am giving a dinner party tonight and the horrid old poison will surely show through my chiffon sleeves. Anyway, we got some great scenes this afternoon."

Also Leo Maloney. He never worries about getting all banged up as long as it adds to the realism of the scene. Mr. Maloney, who plays the heroic role in "The Girl and the Game," had a very narrow escape last week from serious injury.

He was working in a scene atop of a blazing freight car. The flames entirely circled him as it was intended to build up to an awesome climax, and that succeeded. But it was not intended that the roof of the car should fall in and carry Mr. Maloney down into the midst of the fire. That is what happened. When he was dragged out of the debris Mr. Maloney was cut and bruised and the hair on the left side of his head burned.

Was he peevish? Not he. Director McGowan just slapped him in a big-brother way on the back and Leo limped off to get fixed up, which was accomplished in three days.

Ivan Features Gertrude Robinson

Not so many years ago at the Biograph studios, Mary Pickford and Gertrude Robinson were alternating as leading lady in the productions made by that internationally famous stock company. As a matter of fact the star of the latest Ivan Film Production feature, "Concealed Truth," has been ever on a part with noted headliners of the screen and stage. From babyhood she has been uninterruptedly before the public.

Making her debut with Edith Talliafero in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," she later made an appearance with J. H. Stoddard in the "Bonnie Briar Bush." She then played with Edith Wynne Mathison in "A Midsummer Night's Dream," continuing through a long repertoire of plays including "Ben Hur," and culminating in "Rip Van Winkle" with Thomas Jefferson.

Her first appearance in motion pictures was made with the Biograph Company, where she also played opposite to Henry B. Walthall.

Just about this time an offer was made by the Reliance Film Corporation and she joined that company at the head of its stock players. With the Famous Players, she starred as "May Blossom" in the production of that name.

Miss Robinson is also the writer of some very popular film plays, one of which was produced by David Griffith himself, and another by Kirkwood, entitled "The Fur Smugglers," presented her in the dual role of playwright and star. For the last several months Miss Robinson has been resting, and now that she has made her reappearance under the direction of Ivan Abramson, all the celebrities will no doubt flock to "Concealed Truth" to witness her new debut.

"Concealed Truth" is makin ga wonderful showing in state rights selling. Practically all of the country has already been asked for and most of it sold.

The Ivan Film Productions, Inc., located at 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York, is already at work on its next feature, "Forbidden Fruit." No information can be obtained as to the names of the stars or the synopsis of the story, in regard to which the officers of the Ivan Film Productions are secretive.

PATHE GETS KIPLING STORY

"The Light That Failed" to Be Picturized for Gold Rooster Program—Edward Jose to Be the Producer—Great Cast Engaged

Pathe has acquired the picture rights to Kipling's greatest work, "The Light That Failed," and Edward Jose will start work on the production of it within the next two or three days. This is the first Kipling book to be put into pictures and is filled with excellent dramatic material. Mr. Jose has secured an excellent cast headed by Robertson Edeson, Jose Collins, Lillian Tucker, and Claude Fleming. "The Light That Failed" will be put upon the Gold Rooster program. Simultaneously with the making of this picture Mr. Jose will put on Sir Gilbert Parker's famous novel, "The Weavers," using the same cast in both. This is probably the first time in the business that such doubling has been done, and it is made possible in this instance by the fact that each novel has many scenes laid in the Soudan. Many hundreds of extras will be employed in each picture for the battle scenes. The Feature Film Corporation of which Mr. Jose is the managing director, has made arrangements with Pathe for the production of a twelve-chapter serial picture. Carroll Fleming, formerly stage director for the Shuberts at the Hippodrome and a master at obtaining big effects, has been engaged to direct this serial which will be under the personal supervision of Mr. Jose. The Feature Film Corporation is now conducting negotiations for the building of its own studio, and plans a considerable extension of its activities.

Jose Collins.

Billie Burke a "Regular"?

Miss Billie Burke's recent flying visit to the Ince studios in Southern California indicates to theatrical wiseacres that she contemplates becoming a regular Ince star. This will surprise a good many persons who thought that the picture play, "Peggy," was to be her first and only film play. As Miss Burke is said to be the most expensive stage star ever engaged for the pictures, not even excepting Sir Herbert Tree, her probable future re-employment at Inceville means that Triangle directors realize she is able to deliver the goods in proportion to her enormous salary. In "Peggy" the little star is surrounded by a wonderful cast, including the inimitable William H. Thompson, Charles Ray, Gertrude Claire and William Desmond, the last named her leading man. Her vehicle, "Peggy," is the fascinating story of the eternal conflict between the spirit of conservatism in an old Scottish community and the social revolution effected by the entrance of the New York girl, Peggy Cameron, on the scene. The Triangle will show it at the Knickerbocker shortly, with general release in January.

Nothing Daunts Helen Holmes

Helen Holmes, the heroine in "The Girl and the Game," performs some feats of daring in the forthcoming screen novel that have not been equalled by any other leading woman.

The accompanying picture shows Miss Holmes in a rescue scene which is typical of the thrill and "punch" in the Signal production. When this scene was taken the train was moving down hill at a speed of 35 miles an hour. A slip of the arm or an error in judgment on the part of either would have meant injury and perhaps death for both.

Taking the chances Miss Holmes does is a serious business. In "The Girl and the Game" the action is continuously thrilling and the heroine in imminent peril time after time, but like a regular heroine, Miss Holmes manages to escape, although there is none of the mollycoddle in her efforts to do so.

Helen Holmes and Leo Maloney in scene from "The Girl and the Game."

The speed with which the train moves and the constant peril in the path of a giant locomotive is incentive enough for everyone working in "The Girl and the Game" to be constantly on the alert, and none is more watchful than Miss Holmes, although to see her on the screen one would think she never gave the surrounding dangers a thought. The first release of "The Girl and the Game" will be made on December 27.

Pickford's Selig Debut December 27

Jack Pickford, the versatile young actor, will make his initial appearance in Selig productions in the forthcoming feature production, "The Making of Crooks," to be released through General Film Service on Monday, December 27. In "The Making of Crooks," which is a very unusual story, Mr. Pickford assumes the role of an unscrupulous pool shark who, through the instigations of the "pool room ring," entices the rising generation into ways that are dark and tricks that are vain. Mr. Pickford is supported by an all star cast of players and there are many exciting situations in the drama.

LASKY PRAISES "THE CHEAT"

Head of Producing Firm Believes Latest DeMille Production Will Surpass His Famous "Carmen." Fannie Ward Featured.

At the moment when the Lasky production of Geraldine Farrar in "Carmen," produced by Cecil B. DeMille, is creating national interest and laudatory criticism as one of the finest feature plays ever made, Jesse L. Lasky has written from the Lasky studios at Hollywood, California, to W. W. Hodkinson, president of Paramount Pictures Corporation, that, in his opinion, Mr. DeMille has rivalled or surpassed his recent production of "Carmen" in a new photoplay entitled "The Cheat," in which Fannie Ward is the star.

"My object in writing this letter," says Mr. Lasky, "is not to praise the Lasky company. It is simply to let you know, and through you the Paramount exhibitors, that they have something out of the ordinary in 'The Cheat.'" He writes further:

"'The Cheat,' in my opinion, is our masterpiece. In fact, the consensus of opinions of those present at the private exhibition last night in the studio was that Mr. DeMille had rivalled or surpassed his recent production of 'Carmen.'

"Fannie Ward, the star, will in this picture take her place as one of the few great emotional actresses on the screen. I doubt if her remarkable performance in 'The Cheat' has been surpassed. She runs the gamut of emotions, and in the most thrilling, dramatic scenes, so swayed her audience last night that she was applauded again and again. Right here I wish to prophesy that from the release date of 'The Cheat' Miss Ward will be recognized as the leading emotional actress of her type on the screen. The leading opposite role is played by Sussue Hayakawa. I was so impressed by his performance that I immediately signed him for a long term. But the real praise must be given to Cecil B. DeMille. In staging 'The Cheat' his genius would seem to have reached a climax. The picture should mark a new era in lighting, as applied to screen productions."

Stearn Replies to Bullock

Max Stearn, president of Ohio State Branch No. 1, has sent MOTOGRAPHY the following letter, which is his reply to Samuel Bullock's letter which was published in the November 27 issue of MOTOGRAPHY. Mr. Stearn writes:

I have no desire to enter into a lengthy controversy with you, or to seek any publicity for myself. I will try as briefly as possible to answer your charges. You state that Cleveland local No. 1, or any of its members, ever received as much as a postal card from me, during my term of office. I have in my files copies of letters sent to you, Mr. Morris, Ed Kohl and many other Cleveland exhibitors with reference to House Bill No. 288, introduced by Mr. Benedict, which bill provided that every motion picture theater having a stage must employ a stage hand. This bill, which was introduced in the last legislature, had passed its second reading when I heard of it, and was defeated through the efforts of your humble president.

Another bill which was introduced by Senator Lynch and threatened to become a law, was Senate Bill No. 260, which stated that any exhibitor displaying a poster or motion picture, which had a tendency to incite riot or promote race prejudice, was subject to $200.00 fine and imprisonment. This bill was also killed, largely through the efforts of your president.

With reference to the amendment to the censor law, I had absolutely nothing to do with it. If you and your friends were so much opposed to this amendment, why didn't you write me, or come down here and raise your voice in opposition?

Regarding "Birth of a Nation" and "Hypocrites," I positively did not send a single letter or telegram to any exhibitor; on the contrary the letters and telegrams were sent to me, urging me to call a special convention for the purpose of protesting against the action of the censor board in rejecting these two pictures.

Now, Mr. Bullock, my record is an open book. I challenge you to show me one single instance where I have ever done anything to injure an exhibitor or the motion picture industry. I have been connected with the organization since February, 1908, first in the capacity of secretary of the old Ohio Film Exhibitor's Protective Association, and later with the Exhibitor's League as treasurer and president. One thing I have never been guilty of, and that is to reduce the price of admission to three cents, and I understand that you are the only exhibitor who ever attempted to conduct a motion picture theater on a three-cent basis. The Majestic theater, of which I am the owner, helped to raise the standard of the motion picture business in the state of Ohio, by charging ten and twenty cents.

I am not surprised at your attack on me. Seven years' connection with the Exhibitors' League in an official capacity, without pay, has taught me one thing, namely, you must expect a great deal of criticism and very little praise. I could cite many more instances to prove that I have given freely of my time and money in the interests of our League. I will mention just one more and then close. Before Mr. Wilson and myself left for New York to bring back the body of poor Mr. Neff, I sent out notices to all exhibitors in the state of Ohio, requesting them to attend his funeral at Columbus, as a last mark of respect. Now, Mr. Bullock, you are always free with your pen, why didn't you sit down quietly and write us a little telegram or letter of sympathy? You have asked me what I have ever done for the League, now I want to ask you in all sincerity, what have you ever done for your fellow exhibitors, or the industry as a whole, except to rush into print whenever there was the slightest opportunity to get your name in the papers?

You may write as many letters as you please. I have answered you and will say no more. Yours truly,

MAX STEARN,
President Ohio Branch No. 1, M. P. E. L. of A.

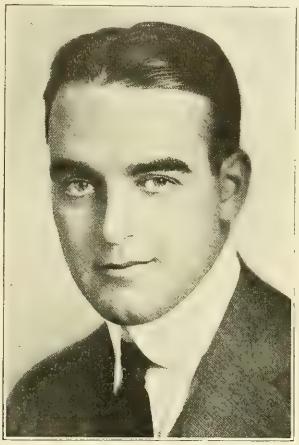
No Reporter's Notes in this Picture

Joseph Byron Totten, an Essanay leading man, who takes the role of a reporter in "The Private Wire," spent a week on one of the big Chicago dailies getting atmosphere for his characterization. Every night, Totten, through the courtesy of the city editor and the star reporter, accompanied the latter individual on his assignments. There was one murder, two big fires, an elopement, a burglar's reform, the rescue of a tiny waif from the lake, an interview with a national politician and the covering of a stormy meeting of the schoolboard. When Totten came back, his assistant asked him if he wanted the little pad and pencil that all reel reporters carry. Totten threw on him a look of pity. "No," he said, "just give me a pair of white cuffs and put a telephone in the set. I've been out with the boys that get the news and they are always too busy getting the news to take any notes on it."

Corbett Impressed by Vestrymen

For the sake of realism in the vestry scenes in the Thomas-Raver production of "The Other Girl," Director Percy Winter made arrangements with the Military Academy at Staten Island to use a number of interior settings. This was accomplished by installing lights.

The vestrymen had been found after a search through the more prominent theatrical agencies and were on hand waiting for the electricians to turn on the lights.



James J. Corbett, who is playing a leading part in the picture, was standing by waiting for Mr. Winter to call him for a subsequent scene. Seeing these men, Corbett imagined them professors of the academy and cautioned everyone to deport themselves like ladies and gentlemen so that the "professors" would have a good opinion of the company. He hardly knew what to make of it when Mr. Winter put them through a scene. But when their acting was filmed after a few rehearsals he was astonished and turning to Paul Gilmore asked him where the old fellows had learned to act. Gilmore replied that one of them had been with Booth, another with Mansfield, another with Barret and another had come from a booking office an hour before.

Corbett bought.

William Davidson of Metro

William Davidson, who plays the heavy lead in "A Yellow Streak," the big Metro feature in which Lionel Barrymore and Irene Howley are starred, is a new comer in motion pictures, and is known among his new friends at the Columbia-Metro studio as "The war baby of motion pictures." It was the present war that caused Mr. Davidson to take up his present profession, in which he has made such marvelous strides. When the war broke out Mr. Davidson enjoyed a successful exporting and importing business downtown. His business was practically ruined, and he began casting around for another line of work. Because of his remarkable physique and fine appearance a friend suggested that he try motion pictures. Mr. Davidson immediately set about with that end in view, and was successful in inducing William Nigh, the Columbia-Metro director, to give him a "type" part in "Emmy of Stork's Nest," in which little Mary Miles Minter is starred.

William Davidson.

Mr. Davidson made such a success out of a thankless part that Mr. Nigh arranged to give him the heavy lead in his very next picture, "A Yellow Streak." Mr. Davidson is a graduate of Columbia University, and was quite active as a student there. He was the hero of the famous Columbia University football eleven in 1905, the last team the university had until this year.

Other Fox Productions Under Way

Besides the Annette Kellermann picture, two other productions are being made in Jamaica for William Fox, and these are now nearly completed. They are "Terese Raquin," from the celebrated French play and novel, and "The Ruling Passion," which has an oriental coloring.

Violet Horner, a well-known Broadway favorite, is starred in "Terese Raquin," supported by Walter Miller. Mr. Miller will be remembered for his creditable work in support of Frederick Perry in the William Fox production, "The Family Stain." Claire Whitney, one of the most popular of photoplay actresses, is featured in "The Ruling Passion." With her are Hal De Forrest, Arthur Leslie, Ed Boring and a supporting cast containing many other favorites.

"Terese Raquin" is directed by Keenan Buel and "The Ruling Passion" by James MacKay, under the general supervision of Herbert Brenon.

Raver Suffers Through Accident

The Con. T. Kennedy Carnival which was making its way to Phenix, Alabama, by special train over the Central of Georgia Railroad, was wrecked last week when a passenger train coming from the opposite direction crashed into it. It is claimed that the loss of life is between twenty and thirty people, while all of the animals were either killed or escaped.

When the first rescue crew reached the scene of the wreckage but few of those found could be recognized. Those in the first few coaches were pinned under the wreckage and burned to death, while the more fortunate ones occupying the rear cars were unscathed.

The animals of the show were to be used in one of the future Raver Film Corporation productions. It is expected, however, that Mr. Kennedy will take immediate steps toward reorganizing the show to fulfill his many contracts. Mr. Raver, president of the Raver Film Corporation, upon hearing the sad news immediately wired his sympathies to Mr. Kennedy.

Unusual Cast for Triangle Play

Norma Talmadge, the youthful Fine Arts star, who is co-featured with Robert Harron in the Triangle play, "The Missing Links," and Seena Owen who supported Douglas Fairbanks in "The Lamb," will make their next appearance in an original screen story, "Martha's Vindication," based on an unusual story by Ella Woods, author of the recent Mae Marsh-Robert Harron success, "Her Shattered Idol."

Miss Talmadge and Miss Owen, with Tully Marshall, recent star of "The City," "Paid In Full," and "The Talker," will be supported by Ralph Lewis, who created the part of Stoneman, in "The Birth of a Nation"; Charles West, who plays with Jane Grey in "Mother of Seven," and Marie Doro in "The Wood Nymph"; Josephine Crowell, the prominent Griffith character actress; Edwin Harley, the veteran character artist; Kate Toncray, who plays the mother in "Old Heidelberg" and the same type of part in "Double Trouble"; Eleanor Washington, and the clever trio of Fine Arts children players, George Stone, Carmen De Rue and Violet Radcliffe.

The production of "Martha's Vindication" will be handled by co-producers C. M. and S. A. Franklin, who recently completed "Mother of Seven," starring Jane Grey.

B. N. Judell, special representative of the Mutual Film Corporation, and manager of the Chicago office of that film distributing company, on November 26 installed H. E. Johnson as manager of the Fargo office of the Mutual. Mr. Johnson, who succeeded B. E. Reed, former manager, has been in the film business more than two years, more recently having been connected with the Pathe organization in the northwest.

Director Must Work with Artists

BY FRANK POWELL*

I HAD two ambitions—one to be a surgeon and the other to be a stage producer. Not having money to study surgery but having the price of a gallery seat I studied stage methods from there. Afterwards, while working in a bank in Cleveland, Ohio, for one winter, I "suped" at the Opera House nights, getting 25 cents nightly, sometimes 50 cents, and from James O'Neil in Monte Christo for saying "aye" and "under it too," received the large sum of $6.00 for six performances.

Frank Powell.

After six and a half years in the bank I went on the stage with Eugenie Blair in "A Lady of Quality" for $20.00 a week and for $200 I bought from her leading man some beautiful costumes worth $20.00. That season I had thirty-eight weeks of one-night stands and four weeks half-salary. I enjoyed the scenery. The following summer I went into stock at $25.00 a week, but owing to the patience of my tailor the leading man borrowed my wardrobe. For several years, in the winter season, I was with first-class productions, playing small parts, but always watching the stage director. In the summer I went back into stock for experience; played leads for fifteen weeks, two bills a week at $20.00 a week under another name. Learned an awful lot—mostly lines. Then to New York.

Augustus Thomas made me assistant stage manager with "The Education of Mr. Pipp." During dress rehearsals he made me stage director. I stayed three years from the first to the last performance and then became stage director in different stock companies. Ellen Terry, who was then in America, engaged me as her stage director for her English tours, staging "Captain Brassbound's Conversion," and "Henry of Lancaster." After two years touring England, Ireland and Scotland with Miss Terry, I spent six months traveling through Europe, studying. As I did not speak or understand any foreign languages, it was a study of pantomime.

Coming back to America, I was immediately engaged as stage manager with Fannie Ward in "Lady Bantock." At the close of her engagement D. W. Griffith of the Biograph engaged me to act in pictures, paying me $15.00 a day, which was the first time any picture actor had received over $5.00 a day. Then I became his assistant and finally a director of comedies. For two years I made split reel and single reel comedies. Left the Biograph company, went to Paris for a vacation, and was engaged the day I arrived by Pathe Freres. I was immediately sent to London to establish a moving picture studio, being the first American director to make pictures in England. After staying a year with Pathe I tired of talking three languages, French, English and American.

Took another pleasure jaunt to Switzerland, Italy, Germany and Holland. More study. Came back to America; engaged by P. A. Powers, but after nine months' work took another trip to Europe. On my return to America was engaged by Pathe Freres American branch in Jersey City. Stayed one year to the day when they closed the American producing plant. Then I made George Kleine's first American-made picture, "Officer 666." Before the picture was finished was engaged by William Fox, with whom I have been associated for one year, and have now signed a contract to be associated with the Equitable Motion Picture Company for the year 1916. At the end of that year, if the war is over, I'm going to Europe and have a holiday.

Some of my successes? "The Stain," for Pathe; "Officer 666," for Kleine; for William Fox, "The Children of the Ghetto" and "A Fool There Was." Four different styles of pictures, aren't they? No, I don't believe a good director can specialize. For freshness and newness of treatment he must go to extremes, comedy and tragedy. You want to know my hobby? Studying life. It's a great pastime. Then I try to portray it on the screen. Do I believe in a censor board? Oh, yes, I do, but I would like to see just one National Censor Board, and that board grow in pace with the better manufacturers and directors of today, but as yet they haven't. What do I consider the greatest subject? Motherhood. Why haven't I produced it? Because the censor boards throughout the country would cut and mutilate my life's ambition beyond recognition, so I shall not produce it until the public, through its approval of motion pictures, shall demand that life be portrayed as life is, with its laughter, grief and its tragedy.

Pictures different now from what they were five years ago? Oh, yes. Then it was action and sight, now it is impression and imagination. The people do not go to see pictures—they go to feel them. They laugh with the comedies, suffer with the tragedies and not at them. Do I believe in realism? Yes, but not in portraying realism so that it is offensive. I believe we suffer more in hearing the cries of the child with a broken leg than in actually seeing the child. There's where the people enjoy the picture—through their imagination.

I think the day will come when pictures will be made without studio settings, by the aid of artificial lights and the personality of the director in obtaining the desired location. Scenes will be taken in the actual rooms or places necessary to the story. The director's reward? It comes through the approval of his players by the public. If a man or woman becomes a favorite or a star through one picture the director has been rewarded. Both are necessary to each other.

* Director with Equitable Motion Picture Corporation.

The more talented the artist the easier and the less time it takes to direct the said artist.

What is uppermost in a picture? The picture. A star cannot carry a poor picture. Many a good picture has carried a poor star. The future of the successful director? It will be in the public going to see his pictures the same as the public reads the work of its favorite author. What is necessary for the making of a successful picture? The author's idea, the scenario writer's construction, the ambition of the players, and of the working staff of the director, consisting of his assistant, his photographers and all branches of the studios, meaning by that, the technical directors, carpenters and scenic artists. To obtain that the director has the confidence of the manufacturer and the manufacturer has the confidence of the director. Under those conditions a successful picture is made.

What, more yet? The future of pictures? Upward. Advancement, improvement, cleanliness, exposing conditions of human existence by bettering them. Which is the harder for the actor, the stage or the screen? The screen. On the screen he fails to receive until after the picture is shown the approval of his performance and the inspiration of his audience. He develops imagination, expression and repose. His expression is natural because his speech is his own and not the words of another.

In my opinion the stage stars of the future will be those who have seen themselves in pictures and profited by it. My methods in directing? Very simple. I work with the artists and not at them. A director must have patience. The greatest artists of the world are those who have conquered themselves. One hour of temper destroys a month's practice of patience. Do I believe in the eccentricity of genius? Absolutely, no. We could all be eccentric if we could be tolerated, but in this day of competition we haven't time for toleration. Therefore, we haven't the so-called eccentricity of genius that there was a few years ago. What is necessary to be a successful director? Only that which is necessary to be successful in any walk of life. A happy home life, clean living, morally and mentally, a kindly spirit and the desire to do good to all and for all.

From left to right are seen Lew Fields, Sam Bernard, Mack Sennett, and Joe Eber taken at the Keystone Studio in Los Angeles, where all are at work.

Irene Howley of Metro

Irene Howley, the vivacious and charming little stage and screen actress, will be featured with Lionel Barrymore in "A Yellow Streak," a five-part feature picture produced by the Columbia Pictures Corporation, which will be an early release on the Metro program. William Nigh, who directed the superb Columbia - Metro production, "Emmy of Stork's Nest," with Mary Miles Minter in the stellar role, is directing "A Yellow Streak." Miss Howley was born in Brooklyn, and for several years was a headliner in vaudeville, and known throughout the country as "The Manhattan Girl." She made her debut in motion pictures with the Reliance company, and afterward was engaged by D. W. Griffith for the Biograph, where she remained two years.

Irene Howley.

Miss Howley was in the all-star cast of "The Moth and the Flame," produced by the Famous Players. She supported Hazel Dawn in "The Heart of Jennifer," and has appeared in other notable productions. In "A Yellow Streak" Miss Howley has the best role of her career.

World Opens Memphis Office

The World Film Corporation announces the opening of its twenty-fifth branch exchange at 129 Pontotoc avenue, Memphis, Tenn., where a complete line of the stock productions made by the Messrs. Shubert, Liebler & Co., William A. Brady, Charles K. Harris and the California Motion Picture Corporation can be rented. The new office is in the territory presided over by Joseph Klein, southern division manager. Within a week or ten days Mr. Klein expects to announce the appointment of one of the most successful exchange men in the south as manager of the Memphis office.

"Bush" to Lead Grand March

Francis X. Bushman, the famous star of the Metro Pictures Corporation, will lead the grand march at the fourth annual ball of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, at Philadelphia, on Wednesday night, December 8. Pauline Frederick will be his partner on this occasion, and the "Who's Who" of the motion picture world in the East will attend the ball, which is one of the biggest events of its kind given for exhibitors and motion picture artists.

INCE TO STAGE INDIAN PLAYS

Famous Western Producer Believes Time Is Ripe for Revival of Indian Dramas and Employs Big Indian Tribe.

A breath of the aboriginal West, carrying with it the picturesqueness that abounded in the days when America was yet an undiscovered land, returned to Inceville, this week, in the form of a tribe of sixty-five full-blooded Indians who have been engaged by Producer Thomas H. Ince to appear in forthcoming Triangle-Kay Bee productions made under his supervision. The redskins, garbed in their quaint and colorful costumes, arrived in the care of W. A. Brooks, through whom Ince consummated the deal for their employment. They were first escorted about the big plant and then ushered to their quarters—a complete village of tepees that has been arranged for them by Ince.

The arrival of the Indians means that Ince is going to attempt a revival of the Indian drama. It was through his "War on the Plains"—a spectacular Indian play—that the producer several years ago commanded the attention of the American play-going public. In this, he put on the screen the real West, the West as it was in the frontier days when a six-shooter was the court of last resort. The Ince output of Indian stories continued unabated for several years until the demand for lavish modern plays supplanted it.

Now, however, Ince is of the belief that the public again is willing and, moreover, anxious to have its emotions touched by the "call of the wild." He believes there is a national popularity in store for Indian drama. And to that end he has planned the production of a number of spectacular stories in which the redskin will play an important part.

The Ince Indians are splendid specimens of the Sioux tribe. They range in age from two months to 92 years, the youngest being a lusty-voiced papoose and the eldest a swarthy-skinned and well preserved old chieftain. Among their numbers are several interesting characters. One is an imposing looking old fellow who is reputed to be worth approximately a quarter-million dollars in land holdings. He claims a wardrobe, which in itself is worth, it is said, several thousand dollars. His name is Chief Two Lance.

A few of Inceville's Indians.

Another different, though equally interesting personality is a young Indian girl whose father is a white man. The latter was kidnaped by Indians nearly seventy years ago and reared in their customs. Later he married a squaw and they have had two children. It is the elder of these that is the attraction. She is about nineteen years of age and the common opinion in and around Inceville is that she is the prettiest Indian maid ever seen inside the studio.

Clara Williams and Margaret Thompson talking with Chief Two Lance, Ince's wealthiest Indian.

All the Indians seemed contented, upon their arrival, with their new environment, which is vastly different from their South Dakota reservation.

How Adler Won the Day

Bert Adler, manager of the Universal's Coytesville studio (in the borough of Englewood Cliffs, N. J.), received a neat editorial compliment in the Fort Lee Sentinel (official organ of the borough of Fort Lee, wherein most of the Jersey studios are located) on his manner of handling a successful fight on some police ordinances aimed at the picture manufacturers.

The editorial said:

The mayor and council had in mind a certain set of ordinances affecting certain features of moving picture taking. Most of the film companies operate now and then in Englewood Cliffs and one of them is located directly within the borough and operates almost exclusively within its confines.

When the mayor first proposed the ordinances, at the instance of one of his tax-payers, the manager of that particular studio didn't rave or rant at the mayor, nor start a 'we are persecuted' compaign.

He merely went to the mayor, told his side and asked for the appointment of a special committee—which request was granted. The special committee permitted the studio manager to write to the neighboring studios for their views in the matter. Then having got the tax-payers' side and the moving picture men's side, the special committee reported back to the mayor. The mayor recommended that the proposed ordinances not be enacted, until at least the studios had plenty of chance to show that they were necessary.

This speaks well for the art of quiet, sane procedure as against noise and mud-slinging. It also makes certain gentlemen who would precipitate the studios into politics go 'way back and sit down—hard.'

"Nation's" Run Extended

Even with extra morning matinees "The Birth of a Nation" was unable to take care of the belated patrons anxious to see D. W. Griffith's great spectacle at the Liberty theater, New York City, the past week. Owing to this unusual demand and the piling up of thousands of mail orders from out of town patrons, the engagement of this record breaking attraction has been extended for a limited period. The run will be maintained at the Liberty with matinees daily, the same as heretofore. The management had hoped to terminate the run on Saturday, but when it was found that the house was practically sold out for every performance the latter half of the week and numerous patrons were unable to make reservations, hurried arrangements were made with Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger to remain in the Liberty theater until the overflow can be taken care of.

Mirror Signs Nat Goodwin

Nat Goodwin is the latest acquisition to the forces of the new Mirror Films, Inc., and will begin work for that organization under a long term contract about the first of the coming year. The company of screen actors which will support Mr. Goodwin is being assembled by the Mirror and will be engaged to begin activities with him at the new studio at Glendale. Mr. Goodwin's company will be among the first to be started at Glendale. The engagement of the veteran actor by the Mirror was largely due to the long friendship which has existed between Goodwin and Clifford B. Harmon, president of the film company, for years. It was Mr. Harmon who is said to have prevailed upon Goodwin to give up the vaudeville tour which he had contemplated and to reconsider his decision not to appear before the camera again. Mr. Goodwin had done two pictures previously.

Nat Goodwin.

The screen story in which the actor will appear has not been announced, but it is known that it will be one of several which have been selected for him. His director has not been announced, but since Lawrence Marston has recently been engaged by the Mirror there is some reason to presume that he may be the one who will be selected.

Masonic Club Praises "Hypocrites"

A resolution drawn up and passed by the Board of Governors of the Masonic Club of New York City has been received by Special Representative Carl H. Pierce, of Bosworth, Inc., which speaks highly of the sensational film success, "Hypocrites."

The Bosworth, Inc., screen allegory was shown to the membership of the Masonic Club at the headquarters of the organization recently and proved a big success. In commenting upon the photoplay the resolution states that it was enjoyed not only because of its entertainment value, but because the picture drives home in a tremendously convincing way the contrast between Truth and the innate hypocrisy which is a part of all of us. The article, signed by Wilfred M. Thompson, secretary to the Board of Governors, further states that the film produced a very marked effect upon all who saw it and everyone present united in praising the masterful conception and the artistic presentation of it.

New Premier Program Sales Department

John W. Heaney has been appointed to the sales department of the Premier program. Mr. Heaney is widely known to the exhibitors and exchange men throughout the United States as the man who made a 300-foot picture into a feature—"The Japanese Torpedo Boat in the Storm"—the picture that was first shown at the Strand in New York under the able management of Mr. Rothapfel and was afterwards shown in every theater of prominence in the United States.

Besides this, John W . Heaney is a man who is universally known and liked throughout the entire industry. Mr. Heaney's first commercial experiences centered around Wall street, but the vigor and activity of the motion picture industry appealed strongly to him and he deserted finances for the amusement field and for many years past has devoted his energies to motion pictures.

Premier Program will handle the output of five producing companies and will release one five-reel picture weekly. It is a fairly comprehensive "job" for a man to organize a well balanced and efficient sales organization for a program of this kind, but John Heaney is already proving again as he has often proved before, his capacity and efficiency.

"MICE AND MEN" COMPLETED

Marguerite Clark and Famous Players Cast Back From Savannah After Filming Famous Story for Early Release.

Marguerite Clark and the supporting cast sent to Savannah, Ga., by the Famous Players Film Company to film the adaptation of "Mice and Men" for the Paramount program, have returned to New York after spending three weeks in the south.

"Mice and Men," which was written by Madeline Lucette Ryley, was first produced at the Royal Academy, Manchester, in 1901. As a result of its great success, it was again staged in London, at the Lyric. Its production in England is associated with the distinguished names of Sir Johnston and Lady Forbes-Robertson, who starred in the play on the other side. In 1903 "Mice and Men" made its first appearance in the United States at the Garrick theater when Annie Russell starred in the piece, supported by her own company, the play proving to be one of the season's greatest hits.

As the scene of the story is laid in the south, it was decided to send the company to Savannah in order to obtain the precise atmosphere required. Though it is comparatively easy to find a few Georgian-columned houses in the vicinity of New York, there still remains the genuine southern atmosphere to be caught and transferred, for high pillars are not the only things that characterize a real old-fashioned southern dwelling.

The subject was produced under the direction of J. Searle Dawley, and among those who comprised the cast in support of Miss Clark are Clarence Handyside, Charles Waldron and others of theatrical importance.

Becky Bruce Ideal for Part

Becky Bruce, who has been chosen to play one of the leading female roles in the Augustus Thomas production "The Other Girl," is not only the choice of Director Percy Winters but was also selected by Augustus Thomas as the ideal girl to play the part of Catherine Fulton. This role requires considerable of the natural art and personality. Miss Bruce enjoys a splendid reputation in theatrical circles. She was in the original production of "Prunella" and will be remembered for the part she played in "A Pair of Sixes" as well as in the "Show Shop." Miss Bruce is pretty and she is clever. Her part calls for much real acting and the preliminary scenes which have already been made bear out Mr. Winter's choice as having been good.

Becky Bruce.

REALISM IN THIS ESSANAY

Company Headed by Henry Walthall Will Visit Adirondacks to Secure Proper Backgrounds for Forthcoming Picture

Essanay is making extensive preparations for the taking of its coming five-act feature, "The Misleading Lady," adapted from the stage success written by Charles W. Goddard and Paul Dickey.

In order to make the play as realistic as possible, A. Berthelet, the director, accompanied by Henry B. Walthall, Edna Mayo and other leading characters will make a trip to the Adirondacks to take several scenes.

The scene in which the heroine is kidnaped by the soldier-of-fortune and taken to his mountain lodge takes place in the Adirondacks and will be staged there in the exact setting as in the play.

The homes of several of Chicago's wealthiest citizens will be employed in taking the house party scenes, and other scenes which take place in the homes and on the estates of the rich.

The play has a stirring theme, with a cave man in evening clothes, a woman, primitive as the first mother and the crashing, merciless battle of the sexes in the wooing of the pair.

Betty Nansen in a scene from Great Northern Film Company's "For Her Son."

New Title for Centaur Feature

Due to the fact that another work of the same name has been issued and in order to avoid that confusion which similarity of titles occasions, David Horsley has changed the name of the Centaur Star Feature release on the Mutual program for December 22 from "The Phantom of the Road" to "The Mystery of Carter Breene." The subject is a detective drama featuring Crane Wilbur, who is also the author of the story.

While it is not the dominant forte of the play by any means, an element of the spectacular has been introduced in "The Mystery of Carter Breene" that is sure to have its interesting side and will add to the general attractiveness of the offering. For instance, there is one scene in which an automobile, carrying a group of officers and an imprisoned girl, dashing over a hillside road, is swerved over a high cliff to the road below. The production has been staged on a big scale and presents the star, Crane Wilbur, and a well selected cast to best advantage.

Frederick Warde with Thanhouser

Frederick Warde, the eminent tragedian and Shakespearian actor, has at last succumbed to what he terms "the film inevitable." He has just entered into a contract with Edwin Thanhouser to appear in a film version of George Elliot's story, "Silas Marner," which will be released on the regular Mutual program.

One of the most peculiar circumstances of the entire affair is that Mr. Warde is to receive his initiation into the film world at the hands of his son, Ernest Warde, who is one of Mr. Thanhouser's regular directors. The younger Warde promises not to revenge himself for the punishments, deserved, of course, of his childhood days, although he vows that it will be unusual pleasure to put his parent through a few extra paces for the novelty of it.

Frederick Warde is one of the few survivors of the stage of the days of Booth, Keene and Barrett. He is known, too, in the world of Shakespearian playing. He was Richard Mansfield' stage director before that actor's death, and is schooled in the classic, as well as modern, stage directing.

Preparing Artistic Subtitles

In keeping with his intention to provide the most artistic productions possible for distribution through the Triangle, Thomas H. Ince has introduced another innovation at the Inceville studios. This is an expansion of his art department to the extent of making decorative sub-titles for each of his plays. For this work, the producer has engaged Charles Randall, a young artist of international repute, who has already arrived at Inceville and begun his unusual work. Randall will design between four and ten distinct backgrounds for the sub-titles of each story, the number depending on the number of different episodes occurring therein. The lettering will then be printed upon the background and the entire design photographed. Randall, who is working under the direction of Art Manager Clyde Tracy, as well as Producer Ince, expects the plan to meet with instant success, because of its originality.

Ralph Kellard Joins Pathe

Ralph Kellard, who has been signed by Donald Mackenzie for his Pathe Gold Rooster Play, "The Precious Packet," is one of those rarely found individuals, a native of New York City. He was educated in the city schools, and then studied law, just long enough to convince him that law was a profession better adapted for others than himself. He had always been fond of the stage, and being told that his fine personality, easy manner and dramatic instinct would put him a long way on the road to success, looked for a chance to break into the profession. He got one—in "The Eternal City," and played twenty-six weeks in one-night stands in the south. The fact that he survived this endurance test and stuck to the stage in itself proved a certain fitness for the work.

Ralph Kellard.

His first appearance on Broadway was with David Warfield in "The Music Master" at the Bijou Theater, and he remained with that company through the next season—forty-five weeks in all. Then followed a succession of good engagements—two seasons with "The Warrens of Virginia" under Belasco; one summer season in stock in Washington, D. C., with Charlotte Walker; leading man with Virginia Harned in "The Land of Hope;" leading man with "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" during the New York season; three seasons in the Ralph Kellard stock company in Syracuse, N. Y.

THANHOUSER FILMING NOVEL

George Eliot's Famous Story, "The Mill On the Floss," Will Soon Be Issued as a Mutual Master-Picture.

George Eliot's celebrated novel, "The Mill on the Floss," has been artistically screened by the Thanhouser company, and will be presented as a Mutual Master-Picture at an early date. The simple, pathetic story of Maggie Tulliver's stormy young life is a household classic. Invariably the performances which appeal most strongly to lovers of a photodrama are familiar subjects picturized, and the announcement of this latest achievement of the Thanhouser studios is bound to create a thrill of anticipation in every city and town where Mutual Master-Pictures are shown.

Mignon Anderson has been chosen to play "Maggie." Miss Anderson's name is synonymous with the success of countless big Thanhouser productions. Emotionally, she creates the very "Maggie" of our imagination. George Eliot's impulsive, warm-hearted, moody young heroine, whose devotion to her brother was the ruling passion of her life, actually lives and breathes for us in Miss Anderson's interpretation.

The entire play is admirably cast. Harrison Gordon supports the star, as Tom Tulliver; George Marlo makes a very appealing Philip Wakom; Arthur Bauer as the unscrupulous Lawyer Wakem, and Eugene Moore as Tulliver, the elder, have some strong scenes together. Steven is a convincing person in the hands of Boyd Marshall. Every character has effectively caught the atmosphere of the novel.

Notable Cast in New World Feature

The Kinemacolor Company has just started the production of a new five-reel feature which will probably be released through the World Film Corporation. It is to be called, "Her American Prince," and is a picturization of the play of the same name. It is a fiction romance on the order of "Graustark."

Arthur Donaldson is to be featured in the part of Baron Von Blumberg, which is a heavy lead calling for talent of a high order. Miss Ormi Hawley will play the leading feminine role, and will also be featured. In the supporting cast Bradley Barker has the leading male role, opposite Miss Hawley. The juvenile lead will be played by J. Frank Glendon, the promising young actor-athlete who has so recently come out of the west and attracted attention on Broadway.

With this highly competent cast, and with the fine adaptability of the play, the Kinemacolor management expects to secure a splendid feature. The company is working at the Colonial studio, New York.

New Orleans Paper's Daily Picture Page

The New Orleans Item, one of the popular daily newspapers of the south, which has recently given large space to the pictures, now has a regular daily motion picture department, in addition to its regular Sunday picture section, devoted to news of the film studios.

In the editorial columns of the issue dated Sunday, November 14, the Item calls attention to the fact that it was the pioneer among newspapers in that section to devote a page weekly to the pictures, and announces the beginning of a daily department dealing with the same subject. The editors assert that the Item will endeavor to present live news of the motion picture industry, together with brief news matter pertaining to the attraction playing at the theaters in the territory reached by the Item, together with brief biographical sketches of the popular players of filmdom.

Undoubtedly the Item's daily department will be warmly welcomed by the exhibitors of the south, who will find that daily publicity in a newspaper tends to improve both box office receipts and interest in film attractions.

"Bondwomen," the remarkable story written especially for Maude Fealy's film premier under the Kleine management, was given its finishing touches at the Bronx studios last week.

Arrow Film Corporation Reorganizes

BECOMES $350,000 COMPANY

In order to have the proper facilities for its increased output under contracts recently entered into with Pathe, the Arrow Film Corporation, of 71 West Twenty-third street, New York City, has been reorganized and enlarged. The new contracts call for the production of not less than ten five-reel Gold Rooster features a year, and the production of the new "Who's Guilty?" series and other Pathe pictures.

The Arrow Film Corporation originally was a New York corporation, with a capitalization of $30,000. It now has been re-incorporated under the laws of Virginia, and its capital stock increased to $350,000. Practically all of this stock was subscribed for and is held by the investors in the original Arrow Company.

The first meeting of the new company was held last week and the following officers were elected: President, W. E. Shallenberger; vice-president, Gaston Van Werveke; treasurer, Norman Conniers; assistant treasurer, Frank W. Lynch; secretary, Albert S. LeVino. These officers also are directors, and Howell Hansel and J. F. Shallenberger constitute the remaining members of the board. The executive committee consists of Messrs. Shallenberger, Hansel and LeVino.

W. E. Shallenberger is a heavy investor and an active participant in all the collateral branches of the film industry. He has large holdings in the Thanhouser, Mutual, American, Reliance, Majestic, Randolph and other motion picture organizations. He has owned several theaters in the central west, has operated his own exchanges, and is thoroughly familiar with the distributing and producing ends of the business.

Mr. Van Werveke formerly was secretary to Louis J. Gasnier, general manager of Pathe. Mr. Conniers is a man of broad sympathies and high artistic attainments, added to which he is an executive of high order. Mr. Lynch was auditor of the Thanhouser Syndicate Corporation and is rated highly expert in matters of finance and motion picture accounting.

In order to start work immediately on its Gold Rooster releases and at the same time resume work on the new scenarios of the "Who's Guilty?" series, the directors instructed the executive committee to relieve Mr. Hansel of all details of actual production at the present time and make him the director-general of Arrow productions.

The executive committee was told to co-operate with Mr. Hansel toward the selection of additional players, directors, assistant directors, cameramen, etc., who are to engage in the manufacture of the Arrow's Gold Rooster features and other products. Over all these artists Mr. Hansel will exercise a supervision similar to that of D. W. Griffith, and on his own account, will direct only the largest of Arrow productions.

The present quarters of the Arrow Company in Yonkers are not believed large enough for the increased output and Mr. Hansel now is on a search for new studios. It is possible that "Who's Guilty?" will be produced in the present plant and the Gold Rooster features in another studio. But it is hoped to acquire a building sufficiently large to accommodate at least four producing companies simultaneously.

The rights to a number of book and play successes have been acquired by Mr. Shallenberger for the Arrow Company. In every case they are literary products that give considerably more than their title or their author's names toward adaptation for screen purposes. In addition to these, the Arrow Company is in the market for original five-reel scenarios written by photoplay authors of established reputation. Mr. LeVino will have charge of this department in co-operation with Mr. Hansel.

Helen Eddy with Pallas Pictures

Pallas Pictures have given a permanent engagement to Helen Eddy, one of the most brilliant "finds" Pacific coast filmdom has ever developed. Miss Eddy's joining this firm is the dramatic sequel to her remarkable work in "The Gentleman from Indiana," the current Paramount Pictures release, when her acting was so remarkable that directors, actors and cameramen spontaneously applauded her at the end of a scene. She was placed under contract in twenty-four hours.

Helen Eddy.

Helen Eddy is just out of high school, but has already appeared with Margaret Illington in "Romeo and Juliet," when she read the prologue for the Shakespearean production at the age of thirteen, and also with Constance Crawley in "Francesca di Rimini," at the Little theater in Los Angeles. Her rise has been meteoric. She was not out of high school two weeks when she walked into one of the local moving picture studios and made such an impression that she was given a leading role in her first production, and played leads for the next twelve months. Pallas Pictures will give Helen Eddy an opportunity which in all probability will make a star of her.

Premier Engages Joseph Fredericks

Joseph Fredericks, whose work as a dramatic author is well known, has been added to the staff of the Premier Program in the capacity of scenario editor. Mr. Fredericks is the author of the three-act comedy, "Worry Partners," and has just finished an original dramatization of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," with a libretto, the music for which has been written by Arthur Pryor, and which will be produced in the near future.

For the present Premier Program will produce no original scrips, the pictures being taken and adapted from famous novels and plays, and at this work Joseph Fredericks has proven himself a master hand. He is a firm believer in the necessity of feeling the spirit of any story and maintains that both the script editor and the director must attune themselves fully to the ideas and essence of each story so as to produce the very best that may be in it.

In real life Joseph Fredericks' name is Frederick Joseph Chipman, but to the world and those who know him only through his writings he is only known as Joseph Fredericks.

Margaret Gibson in Centaur Releases

Margaret Gibson, one of the most beautiful women in motion pictures and an actress of rare emotional ability, who has been playing ingenue roles in David Horsley's productions for the past two months, has been elevated to a featured position in one of the companies producing Centaur Features. As such she will make her first appearance with the release of the two-reel Centaur Feature "The Arab's Vengeance," on the Mutual program, Dec. 16.

Margaret Gibson.

Miss Gibson's first appearance in motion pictures was made in 1912 when she joined the Vitagraph company. She then went with the New York Motion Picture Company, one of her appearances being in "The Coward," an Ince production featuring Frank Keenan. In September she joined Mr. Horsley. Her first part was that of the crippled sister in "The Protest," a Centaur Star Feature starring Crane Wilbur. Following this she played an important part in "Could a Man Do More?" another Centaur Star Feature with Mr. Wilbur.

Her splendid characterizations in these releases, coupled with her unusual attractiveness, led Mr. Horsley to conclude that she merited more than just a place in the cast and accordingly made arrangements to put her in a stellar position.

Thomas H. Ince rehearsing Billie Burke in forthcoming Triangle release.

Kleine to Make More Comedies

Another comedy company has been added to the six companies now working at the Kleine studios. This will be headed by George Bickel of Bickel & Watson and will produce a series of laugh-makers especially written for him. In certain character roles, such as that of the musician which he handled so successfully in the Ziegfeld "Follies" shows, Bickel has no equal. Characters of a shabby-genteel, old gentleman type will, in general, constitute his line of work.

Supporting Bickel are Millicent Evans, Eddie Boulden and Susan Westford. Millicent Evans is remembered as Douglas Fairbanks' leading woman in "Officer 666," as the dainty leading woman of "The Blue Mouse" and many other successes under the Klaw & Erlanger management. Her first appearance in Kleine film will be in the comedy headed by George Bickel. Miss Evans has had an extensive film experience, starring at different times in Universal and Biograph productions.

Beatriz Michelena Well Supported

Prominent among those in the cast supporting Beatriz Michelena in "The Unwritten Law" are Frank Hollins and Nina Herbert. Both Mr. Hollins and Miss Herbert have enviable reputations brought with them from the legitimate stage to pictures, and both have been prominently identified with various Michelena productions in the past.

Mr. Hollins played the Old Roue in Miss Michelena's "Salvation Nell," and Nina Herbert appeared in the same production as Nell's mother. Her admirable portrayal of this character in the introduction reel was declared to be one of the outstanding features of the remarkable film.

In "The Unwritten Law," Mr. Hollins plays the part of Fred Morley, the prominent attorney who is defending counsel in the big court room scene; and Miss Herbert impersonates the domestic Sadie, who is an accomplice of Larry McCarthy.

To Picture History of Colored Race

Some of the most prominent colored men in the state of New Jersey have in the past few weeks organized a corporation to be known as the Frederick Douglas Film Company, with $100,000 authorized stock. They plan to present the history of the American colored man in its entirety, through motion pictures. The officers of the organization are: Dr. Walter G. Alexander, Orange, N. J., president; Dr. I. Alfred Lawrence, vice-president; Anthony R. Mayo, secretary; Dr. William S. Smith, financial agent; William H. Purdy, assistant financial agent; Dr. George E. Cannon, Jersey City, treasurer. The board of directors are: James W. Roberson, William Simmons, William H. De Puer, J. E. Churchman, Walter Carter and William H. Farrell.

FILMING HUGE PRODUCTION

Fox Company in Jamaica Under Direction of Herbert Brenon Has Completed First Portion of Kellermann Production

Latest reports from Jamaica are to the effect that work is progressing satisfactorily on the photoplay, starring Annette Kellermann, which is being made there for William Fox. One reel of the mammoth production has been completed. It has already been developed in the specially constructed Fox laboratory and the results are most satisfying to Herbert Brenon, director of the colossal undertaking.

In order to insure the film's perfect development, filtered water and only the most costly chemicals were used. This was in keeping with the policy outlined by Mr. Fox before the taking of the picture began. He argued that it was useless to expend a fortune on a single film and then take a chance on marring it by inadequate laboratory facilities. Tropical climates exert a deleterious influence on film and chemicals; hence an enormous chemical laboratory was built and the chemicals used have been shipped from New York in small lots.

Because of the immensity of the production it is not expected that the picture will be completed for several weeks. Mr. Brenon, Miss Kellermann, the hundred mermaids and the scores of carpenters, masons, electricians, modellers, scenic artists, property men and other department workers, are going about their respective duties with a methodical painstakingness which insures the complete success of the finished picture.

The magnitude of the undertaking is almost beyond the comprehension of the average person. For the battle scenes two thousand suits of armor, helmets, spears and so forth have been used, and a tremendous array of glittering and startling costumes have been made for other scenes.

Director Brenon is utilizing locations in every part of the island. At Fort Augusta, a historic fortification some few miles from Kingston, he has erected acre upon acre of fairy-like structures and imposing buildings. These include a minaretted palace, a slave market and an oriental city with mazes of streets, bazaars and shops.

"The Rose Gardens," Kingston's celebrated amusement park of twenty acres, has been taken over and huge open-air stages built, dressing rooms for three thousand people constructed, and giant property rooms erected. At St. Ann's Bay a vast undersea city has been constructed. It is in this vicinity that nearly all of the mermaid pictures have been made in the crystalline depths, through which the coral sea bottom is plainly visible.

The entire Osborne Hotel at St. Ann's Bay has been taken over for the main headquarters of the Fox companies.

Notables Visit Balboa Plant

Because of its recognized importance to the city of Long Beach, California, the studio of the Balboa Amusement Producing Company was recently honored by an official visit of the members of the municipal administration. Those who participated were Mayor W. T. Lisenby, Commissioner of Works C. J. Hargis, Commissioner of Finance H. B. Riley, Commissioner of Safety J. R. Williams, Health Officer R. L. Taylor, and Fire Chief J. E. Shrewsberry.

After paying their respects to E. D. Horkheimer, secretary and treasurer of the Balboa Company, a thorough inspection of the studio was made by the city officials under the guidance of Norman Manning, business manager of the plant. Its completeness and compactness excited the admiration of the visitors. Although the studio has been in Long Beach for two years now, they had no idea of its magnitude.

In car on back seat, left to right: C. J. Hargies, commissioner of works; Mayor W. T. Lisenby; H. B. Riley, commissioner of finance; Dr. R. L. Taylor, health officer. On front seat, from left to right: J. E. Shrewsberry, fire chief, and Jr. R. Williams, commissioner of safety. Standing outside car: Norman Manning, business manager.

During the past year, the Horkheimer brothers have made many important additions to their plant. Half a dozen buildings have been erected and the whole place is kept in model condition. The surroundings are all parked and beautified, so that the studio is an attractive place.

FOX LEASES SELIG STUDIO

Edendale Plant Taken Over by Fox and Big Company In Special Train Is Now En Route to Coast to Begin Work

The Fox Film Corporation's invasion of California for the purposes of active studio work had its beginning on Wednesday, December 1, when Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager, William Farnum, Dorothy Bernard, and more than fifty photo players under Fox contracts departed for Los Angeles.

Coincident with their departure Fox Film Corporation announces that it has taken on a long time lease with the option of purchase, the large Selig studio located at Edendale, a Los Angeles suburb. This studio is one of the largest and most perfectly equipped in the country.

Mr. Farnum, Miss Bernard and their associate players will be on the coast until well into the spring, and perhaps for a longer period. While there they will work in three or four pictures which the Fox Film Corporation consider could be greatly aided by resort to the California environment.

Oscar C. Apfel, one of Fox's leading directors, left Los Angeles ahead of the special train party, accompanied by Lester Scott, his assistant, and A.

Gondolphi, his camera man. Mr. Fox has recruited a special technical staff who will operate the Edendale plant, and additional recruits will arrive from the East from time to time. The advent of practically one hundred eastern players with their directors, and the consequent employment of several hundred other local people will give considerable impetus to the growth of the moving picture industry in Los Angeles.

General view of the Fox Film Corporation's new California studio at Edendale (Los Angeles) to be opened by General Manager Sheehan next week.

General Manager Sheehan will remain in Los Angeles until the plant is working under a thoroughly systematized schedule. Five great studios are now in active operation under ownership or lease by the Fox Film Corporation. Three of these are located in New Jersey—at Fort Lee, Cliffside, and Jersey City. The fourth is under the direction of Herbert Brenon and is located in Jamaica, where more than twelve hundred persons are now busy appearing in the multi-reel Annette Kellermann feature to be released in the spring. The California studio makes the fifth in the chain.

Sixteen acres of ground have been purchased by the Corporation on Long Island for the erection of the largest studio to be found in the New York district, and one that will closely challenge comparison with the largest in America. This Long Island plant will be made the chief manufacturing headquarters of the great Fox picture enterprise. The ground is now being leveled and construction work will begin practically at once.

Final Curtain for Mrs. Barry O'Neil

Mrs. Barry O'Neil, known professionally as Nellie Walters, died at her home Sunday night, November 21. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Walters, born in Glasgow, Scotland, came to this country with her parents a baby in arms. She first appeared in her father's company as a child actress. Later she starred for many years through the West and South, being one of the most favored if not the greatest attraction at that time. About this time she met Mr. O'Neil, and a year later they were married. For a few years they played in the same companies. When Mr. O'Neil became interested in the moving picture field she retired to private life.

The funeral services were held Tuesday, November 23, at one o'clock, in the Church of the Transfiguration, Twenty-ninth street near Fifth avenue, New York City, Dr. Houghton officiating. The honorary pallbearers were: George D. McIntyre, Peter M. Lang, Gerald Griffin, Joseph W. Smiley, George Soule Spencer and William Norton. Among her many friends and associates of the theater who attended the church services were William Courtleigh, Shepherd of the Lambs Club; Edward Mackey, Charles Arthur, Henry Lotto, Philip Robson, William Randall, Emil Ankermiller, Hugh D'Arcy, Lyman O. Fiske, Martin Faust, Barclay McCullum, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Middleton, Lilie Leslie, Mr. and Mrs. Max Schneider, Mrs. Lang, Mrs. George Soule Spencer, Mrs. William Morton, Lawrence McCloskey, Robert E. Graham, Jr., Mrs. Ellen Lockhart, Mrs. Loughlan, Mrs. Dr. Chandler, Mrs. George Merle, Mrs. Julius Cohen, Miss Josie Bemesch, Mrs. Charles Weirman, Miss Marie Weirman, Mrs. Clark, Richard McFarland, Mrs. Chauncey Keim and many others.

Many beautiful floral tributes were in evidence. The noted tenor, Craig Campbell, sang "Lead, Kindly Light," the first hymn that Mr. and Mrs. O'Neil sang together, which appropriately ended the church service. Interment was made in Woodlawn cemetery.

Robson's Portrait of Michelena

Beatriz Michelena, the inimitable star of the California Motion Picture Corporation, was delightfully surprised one day last week when Andrew Robson presented her with an oil portrait, done of herself in the role of "Mignon." The picture, which is a remarkable likeness, was begun many months ago and has been finished with the utmost care. Mr. Robson is long to be remembered by followers of motion pictures because of the supreme pathos with which he impersonated Lothario, the demented father, in the Mignon production. It was while engaged with Miss Michelena on this production that he began the painting which he has just completed. Although the stage, and of more recent years the screen, have been first in Mr. Robson's affection, he is a portrait painter of an ability that has won recognition in some of the most pretentious exhibits of this country. While studying the drama abroad, he devoted much time to the pallette.

Michelena Portrait by Robson.

Triangle Films at Hearst Home

Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Hearst gave New York society a surprise Thanksgiving day, when, in an entertainment which followed a large dinner party in their home, they presented as the features not Caruso or some operatic star as formerly, but two of the most successful Triangle film plays yet shown at the Knickerbocker. Governor and Mrs. John Marshall Slaton of Georgia and other prominent southern people were present and for them Mr. Hearst offered Frank Keenan and "The Coward." For the guests from the Pacific was offered "A Submarine Pirate," with Syd Chaplin.

Clarissa Selwynne of World

Clarissa Selwynne is rapidly creating for herself the reputation of being the handsomest and cleverest adventuress on the American motion picture screen. Be sure when you see Miss Selwynne's name in the cast of a photoplay you are going to have an impersonation which will make your flesh creep. Of course, personally, Miss Selwynne is a charming as well as an attractive young lady. In England she worked on the legitimate stage under the management of Arthur Bourchier, Charles Cartright, Lyn Harding, Lena Ashwell. Two years of Shakespearean repertoire preceded her appearance in pictures. "Hearts In Exile" (World Film), "The Flash of an Emerald" (World Film) are some recent releases in which Miss Selwynne figured with beauty and distinction.

Clarissa Selwynne.

Like all clever, intelligent young actresses, Miss Selywnne recognizes that the picture is the ideal medium for artistic expression in acting. She adds grace and intelligence to any cast and will surely electricify her audiences when she gets her great chance.

Chaplin to Burlesque "Carmen"

Charles Chaplin has nearly completed another Essanay-Chaplin comedy and it will be released shortly. The title is "Charlie Chaplin's Burlesque on Carmen," in two acts. Again Chaplin is found in an entirely new role. There is less of the slap stick variety of fun and more of the subtle points of genuine humor.

Mr. Chaplin apparently is able to put over something new in almost every production. You look for him as he appeared last and you find that his make-up has disappeared and a new one donned. But it is the same Chaplin underneath, you find the same personality that has made him beloved all over the world.

It is largely this element of surprise that makes his fun of the top notch variety. You expect to see one thing and you are confronted with an entirely new phase of the mysterious Chaplin. But the surprise is always pleasing, as the fun is always there.

Tom Bret Gets Big Hand

For the first time in all the history of motion pictures a scenario writer has been called before the curtain for a speech. This singular occurrence took place at the premiere of "The Battles of a Nation" at the Park theater, New York, when Tom Bret, the author of the titles and the man who arranged the scenes for the American Correspondent Film Company, was forced to make his appearance on the stage in response to the insistent cries of "Speech! Speech!" Mr. Bret received a tremendous ovation from the crowd which had been thrilled by the exhibition of what is conceded to be the most remarkable set of war pictures yet produced. He appeared to be deeply touched by the enthusiasm and expressed his appreciation in a modest little speech.

Mr. Bret has just completed the titles for the latest A. C. F. production, "The Warring Millions," which began a four weeks' engagement at the Olympic theater, Chicago, on November 28.

Exhibitor's Unique Advertising

A. W. Ballinger, manager of the Dean theater, York, Neb., is the originator of a very clever "stunt" for the exploitation of the Lubin V. L. S. E. feature, "The College Widow."

This enterprising exhibitor built a goal post, in imitation of a real one, in front of his theater and hung the football eight-sheet on "The College Widow" between the uprights. Then he secured a large quantity of local high school and college pennants and decorated the posts.

Mr. Ballinger also decorated the stage especially for this production, using an interior setting, covering the walls with pennants, putting a study table with lamp and books, chair, folding screen, such as used in dwellings, a big U. S. flag for a table cover, etc., so that it looked like a typical student's room.

Persons Visits Selig Chicago Offices

Thomas Persons, superintendent of the Selig Zoo, Los Angeles, Cal., has returned to Los Angeles after a several days' business sojourn in Chicago, Ill. While here Mr. Persons consulted with William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, on business matters which are calculated to create wide interest among exhibitors of motion pictures at the proper time. In speaking of Pacific Coast production, Mr. Persons predicted a most prosperous condition of affairs by the first of the year. "I have been connected with the film business for many years," said Mr. Persons, "but I want to state that the productions now in course of preparation by the Selig Company at the Pacific Coast studios have never been surpassed. In point of plot, acting and photography they will prove to be of extraordinary excellence."

A Splendid Christmas Issue

Picture Progress, the monthly magazine issued by the Paramount organization under the editorship of Jane Stannard Johnson, celebrates the holidays with an unusually attractive issue. A good likeness of Edna Goodrich, the Lasky star, adorns the cover and the text pages are literally crammed with special features of interest to the photoplay fan. The editor herself is responsible for the leading story of the Christmas number entitled "Mary Pickford, Her Real Self," and some interesting sidelights are thrown on the personality of the ever popular "Little Mary." Next comes a breezy little description of one of the Paramount travelogues, well illustrated. Cynthia Marlowe offers an illustrated story of Pauline Frederick's "Bella Donna" gowns, and under the caption "Christmas in Screenland" a hint is given of how the Paramount stars will celebrate Christmas

WOODRUFF'S TRIANGLE DEBUT

Famous Star, Supported by Tsuru Aoki, the Japanese Actress, Will Appear in "The Beckoning Flame," an Ince Spectacle

Henry Woodruff, regarded as one of America's most popular matinee idols, and Tsuru Aoki, the celebrated Japanese actress, are soon to be presented by Thomas H. Ince, as co-stars in a spectacular drama of romance and adventure in India, entitled "The Beckoning Flame," a five-part Triangle-Kay-Bee feature.

Directed by Charles Swickard, under the supervision of Producer Ince, from a scenario by C. Gardner Sullivan, the production gives promise, it is said, of creating a sensation by reason of its general superlative qualities. It was made on the sands of the Mojave desert, where nature's endowments are akin to those of the Orient and it has been embodied with the very best of everything in the photoplay art. It is a stirring story of a native girl's sacrifice for the man she loves and the strength of its theme is equalled only by the picturesqueness of its numerous settings of splendor.

As Harry Dickson, a dashing young British army officer, Woodruff is declared to have contributed a most ingratiating characterization. The screen, it is said, has given pronounced expression to all the fire and youth that brought him fame on the stage. Miss Aoki, too, it is claimed, is a revelation. This demure little artist from the Flowery Kingdom gained her training from Ince and her work opposite Woodruff, in the role of Janira, a native East Indian girl, is said to excell anything she has ever done.

A notable cast of Ince players appears in the support of the stars. This includes Rhea Mitchell, J. Frank Burke, Louis Morrison, J. Sherry and Roy Laidlaw.

First Gonzalez Picture Completed

Lynn Reynolds, recently appointed producer of Myrtle Gonzalez features at Universal City, has completed his first production in which that little leading woman plays the stellar role and by that picture he has justified the company's judgment in placing him in a position of such responsibility.

"The Bride of the Nancy Lee" was written by Reynolds especially to meet the requirements of the company, and in its two reels is told a tale of unusual heart interest with artistic touches that would do credit to a much older producer.

Much of the action centers on ship board, on one of the rapidly disappearing types of ships—the old wind-jammers that used to ply between New York and San Francisco, before they were driven out by the more rapid and better equipped steam schooners.

More than that, in the story he has staged what is regarded by picture producers as one of the most difficult things to reproduce on the celluloid, viz., a wreck. And he has done it in a masterly way that leaves little to be asked for on the part of the spectator. Through the windows of the little cottage on the shore, the lightning may be seen flashing and lighting up the roaring breakers of the ocean. Then comes into the scene the ill-fated ship and, lifted high on an incoming wave, she rises high and plunges down on the rocks that line the coast.

FUNERAL OF AMERICAN PLAYER

Body of Leslie Reed, the Actor Who Leaped to Death While Appearing in a Picture, Is Laid to Rest

The funeral of Leslie Reed, the American Film company player, who met an accidental death near Santa Barbara, California, Friday morning, November 19, took place from the Grace Lutheran church Monday morning, November 22, at 10 o'clock. The services were conducted by Rev. George Philip Goll, and the remains were placed in a vault until the end of the war, when the body will be sent to England for burial. Mrs. L. Berg, a cousin, arrived from San Diego to attend the funeral.

All work was closed down at the studio during the hour of the funeral. The following acted as pallbearers: Carl Morrison, Peter Morrison, Charles Newton, George Webb, Richard Oliphant, George Armstrong.

An inquest was conducted by Coroner A. M. Ruiz at the Gagnier undertaking rooms and the following verdict was reached:

"That A. Leslie Reed came to his death from an accidental fall while attempting to jump from a stage coach over a cliff, near Chalk Rock at about 10:30 o'clock in the morning, November 19. We, the jury, exonerate the company from any blame."

The report circulated that the player's hands were tied at the time he made the leap from the stage coach, is entirely incorrect. In the story the hands were tied, being a prisoner of bandits, but that was not an actual condition at the time of the leap. That would have been absolute folly and served no purpose for this particular scene.

Poor Lyllian—She Fell for a "Retake"

In the filming of a scene for "He's In Again," the Vogue comedy which is being directed by Jack Dillon, Miss Lyllian Leighton, the character lead, was obliged to hang onto a street car and be dragged for a short distance.

She was then supposed to lift herself to the step and go on her journey. Her calculations miscarried, to some extent, and after being dragged the necessary distance she failed to make the step. Result, a beautiful fall. It really was a shame that the continuity of the story could not be changed to register her acrobatic stunt, but it couldn't be done, and she had to go right in and do the same thing all over again—except the fall, which was not in the script. Vogue comedies will be released on Mutual program.

Kleine Makes "The Scarlet Path"

"The Scarlet Path" is the title of a new Kleine feature under way. It is a story of New York's Great White Way, and will be told by a star cast with Guy Coombs in the lead. He will be supported by Anna Q. Nilsson, Della Connor and others of like caliber. "The Scarlet Path" contains a cabaret scene which for size and magnificence is probably unequalled. The entire floor of the big Bronx studio was given over to the staging of this scene. Several hundred people were engaged, and a balcony, mezzanine floor and grand staircase constructed. The entire production is characterized by a lavishness and wealth of detail.

Editors: ED J. MOCK and PAUL H. WOODRUFF
Associate Editors
Neil G. Caward Thomas C. Kennedy
John C. Garrett Charles R Condon
Advertising Manager: ALLEN L. HAASE

NEW YORK OFFICE, 1022 LONGACRE BUILDING
Forty-second Street and Broadway
Telephone Bryant 7030
CHARLES R. CONDON, Eastern Representative

This publication is free and independent of all business or house connections or control. No manufacturer or supply dealer, or their stockholders or representatives, have any financial interest in Motography or any voice in its management or policy.

Entered at Chicago Post Office as Second Class Mail Matter

MOTOGRAPHY
THE MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL
PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY
ELECTRICITY MAGAZINE CORPORATION
MONADNOCK BUILDING
CHICAGO, ILL.
Telephone: Harrison 3014—All Departments

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS
Changes of advertising copy should reach the office of publication not less than fifteen days in advance of date of issue. Regular date of issue, every Saturday. New advertisements will be accepted up to within ten days of date of issue, but proof of such advertisements can not be shown in advance of publication.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE
Per year $3.00
Canada - - - - Per year $4.00
Foreign - - - - Per year 5.00
Single copy - - - - - .15
FOR SALE AT ALL NEWS STANDS

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS
REMITTANCES—Remittances should be made by check, New York draft or money order, in favor of MOTOGRAPHY. Foreign subscriptions may be remitted direct by International Postal Money Order.
CHANGE OF ADDRESS—The old address should be given as well as the new, and notice should be received two weeks in advance of the desired change.
If Your News Dealer Will Not Supply You—Please Notify Us

Volume XIV CHICAGO, DECEMBER 11, 1915 Number 24

Little Things That Have Big Influences

A GOOD many successful exhibitors, if questioned as to the important principles of exhibiting, would give the prize to good programs and good projection. If that is as far as their observation goes, their success must be largely due to luck. Some one is attending for them to the little things they have overlooked.

The way a ticket seller makes change; the way the door-keeper takes the ticket; the way the ushers do their piloting; the way the proprietor or manager greets his patrons; in short, the human side of the business—what public utility corporations call "public relations"—may make or break a theater.

This thought is not original with us. "Roxy" Rothapfel has brought it out strongly in his missionary talks; but it is not original with him. Doubtless it is very old, and was discovered as soon as competition entered the show business. It is not peculiar to the show business, either; but neither is the show business peculiar enough to get along without it. When you have made your pile you can say "The public be damned" and get away with it, if you want to; but not while you depend on that same public for your business.

An indifferent, listless, supercilious or snippy ticket-seller, ticket-taker or usher is a killjoy—a crape-hanger. Don't pay wages to that kind of help. Give them one chance to cheer up, and if they don't make good, fire them. Your operator can be a grouch without hurting anybody's feelings but his own; but those of your staff who meet the public have no right to throw gloom on the joyous occasion.

People come to your theater for pleasure. It is an event—sort of a holiday, even if they come often. They try to leave care behind and enter with appropriate spirit into a visionary realm of brave deeds and true love and mighty adventure. By the time they reach the ticket window they are in a pleasantly expansive frame of mind. Then your proud and haughty ticket-seller douses them with spiritual cold water, the door-keeper glowers at them suspiciously and the usher finishes the funny story he is telling and yawns them to seats most convenient for him. By that time, instead of a glowing phantasmagoria of dream pictures, all they can see is a dirty screen, a flicker in the picture and a lot of defects in the action.

You think because your usher costs you hardly anything, and your ticket-seller and door-keeper are not holding out anything on you, you are running at high efficiency. Take our word for it, they may be holding out something far more valuable than a few dimes—the good will and friendly feeling of the people. Little as these employes are in your estimation—perhaps you never think of them as persons until pay day—they can do your house as much harm as you can yourself. Theirs is the negative influence. It takes a man with brains to bring success to your theater; but any fool employe can bring failure to it.

Get out on the sidewalk and watch the action of your human ticket machinery. You can see in one busy hour whether it needs a squirt of oil or not.

Nice and happy ticket-sellers and takers don't cost any more than grouchy ones. But they are worth infinitely more to you. Get the best.

Unambitious Exhibitors

EVERY little while we get a letter from a mere "fan," expressing the wish that some live exhibitor would come to his town and clean up the local theater situation. No doubt some of these correspondents are chronic critics who would never recognize the live exhibitor they want if he did come. But on the other hand, some of them must be right. We know there are towns well supplied with theaters and yet without a single house that could properly be called first class.

When a man is making good on what he has, it is pretty difficult to argue him into improving. A certain little four-wheeled gasoline cart now on the market gets a lot of criticism; but why should its manufacturer change it when he is selling more than any of his competitors?

Personal pride is a big factor in influencing improvement, especially such improvement as seems not to add materially to earning power. Curtis' Saturday Evening Post very likely would have as much circulation and as many advertisers if its type were set by machine instead of by hand, and if its illustrations and headings were laid out with a view to convenience rather than beauty. There are lots of locations where a picture theater will constantly show to capacity, even with poor projection and shabby furnishings. The publishers of the Post are proud of their product They enjoy striving for supreme excellence and beauty in their work. The motion picture exhibitor who has some of that same pride will make his house as attractive, as near to the ideal, as possible. The exhibitor who lacks that pride, and still is successful, is pretty apt to go his own gait regardless of advice.

Where a public desire exists, however, some one will generally come along with the material to supply it. Every community whose exhibitors are self-satisfied, and scoff at improvement, has a wide open opportunity for at least one more exhibitor who will not scoff, but will do his very best to show how good a picture theater can be.

Every industry, ever profession, every trade, has members whose sole ambition is to get by with as little effort as possible. Usually the more aspiring and enterprising members have to support these slack workers. But in business, fortunately, competition helps to equalize the condition. The earnest, enthusiastic exhibitor with a few ideals can find a profitable place wherever the best there is is inferior to what he can do.

The only way to teach the shiftless, slack, contented exhibitor his lesson is to go into his territory and beat him out at his own game. That is what he deserves; and the process is generally profitable to the teacher, who incidentally gives the community a new respect for pictures and thereby benefits the business.

An incomprehensible feature of this buying up of book rights is the lack of common business shrewdness displayed by some firms. The author of a certain series of popular detective stories, published in two volumes, with about a dozen stories in each volume, some time ago offered the photoplay rights on both volumes to a certain film manufacturer for $900. The offer was refused, because the stories were considered unavailable for picture purposes. Some months later the rights to the same stories were bought, the firm paying not $900 for the two volumes of fiction, but $300 a story!

Just a Moment Please

It's simply hopeless to even attempt to be funny this week, when that all-star performer, Henry Ford, is in action, and holding the exact center of the stage.

—

Henry seems, just now, to be the world's greatest jokester.

—

He's even being funny locally.

—

Can you think of anything funnier than the Ford Animated Weekly being run at both the Studebaker and the La Salle by J. L. & S. in connection with Triangle program and the Fox features?

—

BASEBALL DEPARTMENT.

We thought this triple play thing had been laid to rest for good, but another of the famous plays occurred this week. And this time it is Charley Condon, Uncle Sam and the famous "Mac" who participated, instead of Joe Finn, Pal Haase and the inevitable "Mac."

Charley mailed some stuff to the Chi. office. The envelope busted open and Uncle Sam pulled a boner by sending the matter to "Mac" at his Chicago headquarters because one of the enclosures bore the name of the celebrated Nichols-Finn Agency.

This leaves the standing at present, as compiled by the official secretary of the league, as follows:

	A. B.	P. O.	A.	E.	Pct.
"Mac"	2	0	1	0	1.000
Finn	1	0	1	0	1.000
Haase	1	1	0	0	1.000
Condon	1	0	1	0	1.000
Uncle Sam	1	0	0	1	.000

Who'll wobble next?

—

MODESTY, THY NAME IS VER HALEN.

The handsome Chas. Ver Halen, who recently cluttered up these parts but of late had adjourned to the offices of the Raver Film Corporation in Noo Yawk, sends us three beautiful photos of three of his leading players and slyly suggests, "I know it is going to be a terrible temptation to put them all in one issue, but one at a time will do."

—

Gosh Chas. we're glad you didn't submit a dozen or we'd have been compelled to print a special edition for you.

—

ATTENTION JOHN R. FREULER.

Please send us the grand prize in the "Diamond from the Sky" sequel contest. We know what happened to the "diamond," even though we can't tell how it got there. Marguerite Clark is wearing it in the current production of "The Prince and the Pauper." (Footnote: Give a look at Margy when she is crowned in Westminster Abbey.)

—

Gee, it's been three weeks since Ben Beadell has sent us a wheeze.

—

Whatsamatter, Ben?

—

Out of stamps?

—

OUR BURG.

Felix Malitz of the Effete East is a visitor to Our Burg this wk.

Winfield R. Sheehan and a bevy of other Fox notables is to give a luncheon at the Sherman House on Thurs. next, to which Ye Ed has been invited. Thanx fellers for the bid. In these just before Christmas times all these free feeds helps out considerable.

H. C. Hoagland is now occupying the Gen'l Mgr.'s desk at the Selig offices. Congrats Herb. More power to you.

Jessie Goldberg of the Ocean flitted in and out of Our Burg this wk. Jessie allows as how he's got a regler feature now and more to come.

Tom Persons of Los Angeles was a visitor to these precincts last wk. but has again departed.

H. Tipton Steck, the w. k. football enthusiast, is back to work once more, having seen the Johnny Harvards lick the sons of Old Eli in the Effete East.

First snow this wk.

—

Julian M. Solomon, Jr., writes us a postcard from sleepy old Philadelphia, hoping we'll mention it and give him some publicity. Gosh if he'll givealook at our Philly correspondence he'll discover they're on to him even there.

—

Eh, Jule? N. G. C.

Some Current Releases Reviewed

"The Prince and the Pauper"

Famous Players Picturization of Mark Twain's Story Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THOUGH the dual role of beggar and prince presented Marguerite Clark by Mark Twain's celebrated "The Prince and the Pauper" gives her a wonderful opportunity to hold charmed those who witness her screen portrayal, she means so much to this beautiful Famous Players production that one is at a loss to know whether Marguerite Clark gains more than she gives to the story or not. Perhaps some person may arrive at a conclusion either one way or the other, but the chances are all against it.

Marguerite Clark in a scene from "The Prince and the Pauper."

As long as Mark Twain's great work was to be screened, the admirers of this American author should be thankful, and those who see the picture will be, no doubt, that the two little characters on whom the plot depends for its appeal were entrusted to Miss Clark. They may also be thankful that the creation of an actual picture of the charming illusion created by Mark Twain's pen fell to such able directors as Edwin S. Porter and Hugh Ford, and to the producers of such high-class photoplays as the Famous Players Company.

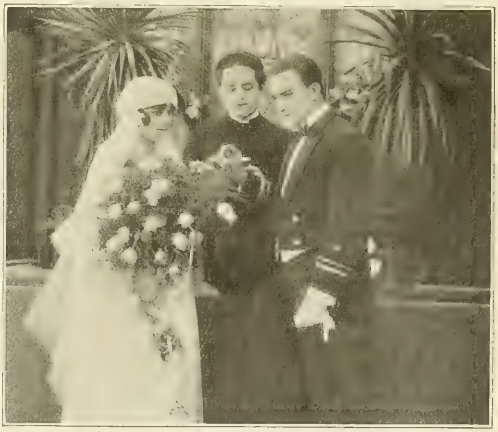
Every moment "The Prince and the Pauper" holds the screen the spectator's eye looks upon photographic effects that for sheer beauty have never been surpassed. Such surroundings as these, however, do not for a moment detract from the personal charm of Marguerite Clark, whose freedom and spontaneity make her seem more at home as the lovely character of some fairy tale than a girl or boy of reality. As the Prince in his royal raiment or his borrowed rags, she is truly majestic, and as the beggar in the robes of a prince as well as in his own clothes, she is always that which her part calls for. But she does all these things with such naturalness that at no time can there be found the slightest trace of "acting."

The story as told by the picture is most simple. The Prince of Wales and Tom Canty, the prince of paupers, who sleeps in a garret and whose father sends him out into the streets to beg, meet by chance. Tom's freedom to roam about the streets and to do all things a boy's mind desires to do, give the prince a longing to be but for an hour in his place. As the rich clothes and delectable food and beautiful palace are all wonderful to Tom, he consents to trade places with the prince for a time, feeling that he has all the best of the bargain.

Then when the king dies and the beggar is to be crowned king of England, poor Tom is in a sorry plight, for he is believed mad when he protests that he is not the prince. The prince, on the other hand, falls in with Tom's father, who, knowing full well his value as a provider by beggary and thievery, is loath to part with the child. Just as the crown is to be placed upon the head of Tom, the prince makes a forced entrance into Westminster Abbey and affairs are straightened out, so in the end the prince sits upon the throne of England and makes Tom a page in his court.

There is melodrama aplenty in the efforts of Tom's father and his associates to hold the prince, and in the equally determined efforts of Miles Hendom, Tom's friend, to free him from them. The play is interesting all the time, and, to repeat, the production is superb, and the delightful effect of this and Marguerite Clark is all that holds forth in the afterthought of "The Prince and the Pauper" of the screen. One feels that it is the work of Mark Twain when its title is thought of, and then only. If the adaptor strove to give the picture more than the author's title and bare plot, the attempt was in vain.

In the supporting cast William Sorelle as Hendon is commendable, and Alfred Fisher renders a splendid performance as Tom's father. William Barrows and Robert Broderick complete the efficient cast.



"The Great Goal"

Final Episode of the Pathe-Balboa Serial, "Neal of the Navy," Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

PATHE'S patriotic serial, "Neal of the Navy," by William Hamilton Osborne and produced by Balboa under the direction of Harry Harvey, is brought to a close with the completion of chapter fourteen, entitled "The Great Goal," whose two reels are filled with the quick, interesting action and prety scenic effects which characterized all of the former episodes. The outcome of the various complications laid in the previous chapters is marked by exciting situations and will no doubt prove highly pleasing to those who have followed the fortunes of Annette and Neal.

This serial has told an interesting story, and the situations have all been splendidly presented and acted. "The Great Goal," as did the former episodes, contains many evidences of Director Harvey's fine judgment in the selection of locations and settings for the action. The settings throughout the fourteen chapters are remarkable not only for their beauty but for the atmosphere and realism they have created about the players. The views of life in the United States navy, which are authentic and which were taken on board some of the largest battleships in the navy, and at the training station, have given the production added color and interest.

In the opening scene of "The Great Goal" Hernandez and Inez, after their escape from the cannibal island, reach the shore they have longed to set foot upon for a long time—Lost Island. Upon landing they are surprised to find that the island is inhabited by a pirate crew. The leader of the pirates offers Hernandez all the quicksilver he and his associates have taken from the rich cinnabar mines in exchange for Inez. In the meantime the ship carrying the Ilington party arrives at the island. During the trip the Brute regains his senses and turns out to be Annette's father.

The wedding.

Hernandez seizes his opportunity to kidnap Annette and he offers her to the pirate for the quicksilver. Her cries are heard by Neal and Ilington, who hurry to her rescue. Ilington has learned from Annette the many injustices done her and himself by Hernandez and when he discovers the smuggler, pursues him to the edge of a high cliff, where Hernandez plunges to his death. Inez desires to make reparation for her part in the conspiracy and enters a convent. With their enemy out of the way, the Ilingtons and the Hardins enjoy the wealth derived from the mines of Lost Island. The picture ends with the marriage of Neal, now an officer in the navy, and Annette.

Lillian Lorraine deserves praise for her good work in this picture, and William Courtleigh, Jr., in the leading male role, has done full justice to the part given him. William Conklin as Thomas Ilington and the mysterious Brute, played his difficult role effectively and with consistency. Edwin Brady as Hernandez, and Lucy Blake as Inez Castro are entitled to a large share of the honors won by this able cast.

"The Forbidden Adventure"

A Splendid Mutual Master-Picture Released Dec. 2, Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

CHARLES RAY and Louise Glaum, famous stars with the New York Motion Picture Corporation, who have recently made their debut as stars with the same organization on the Triangle program, once more appear on the Mutual screen in "The Forbidden Adventure." That is the Mutual Master-Picture scheduled for release on Thursday, December 2.

The story deals with the famous Arabian "City of the Dead," which lies just beyond the ancient city of Er Heb, and is visited by Herschal Mayall and Charles Ray in their roles of John Robbins and Cecil Weatherby, two adventurers who are exploring the Orient. Miss Glaum is cast as Ameera, an Arabian priestess in the temple, and her dark oriental beauty well adapts itself to the role of the priestess who lures her young English admirer to the brink of death.

As is always the case with productions of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, a spectacular climax is reached in the third reel, when one beholds the rope bridge across a deep chasm, and the escape of the hero across the swaying structure. The villain, Dhur, sets out to pursue him across the hanging bridge and Ameera deliberately cuts the suspending rope, sending Dhur crashing down upon the rocks at the bottom of the chasm. This scene is particularly well staged, and the audience beholding it is sure to be impressed.

Cecil Weatherby and John Robbins, two travelers in the Orient, approach the ancient city of Er Heb as the story opens, and Cecil boldly announces his intention of invading the city which no white man has ever been known to visit before.

Though Robbins seeks to deter him, Cecil invades the Moorish garden of the temple of the great god Bo. There, looking up, he sees through a barred window, the wide dark eyes of a beautiful priestess, and knowing a few sentences of the Arabian tongue, Cecil makes bold to speak to her. Ameera tells him he must not talk to her, as, being a priestess, she is forbidden to hold converse with mortal man. As he is leaving the garden, Cecil encounters Zymba, the high priest, who commands him to leave the city never to return, but Cecil, having fallen in love at first sight, makes bold that very night to again invade the precincts of Er Heb.

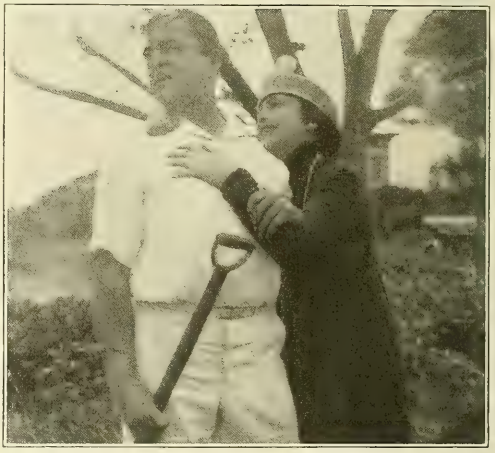
While again conversing with Ameera, Cecil and his lady are surprised by the temple guards, and after being arraigned before the counsel of high priests, are doomed to death by starvation in the "City of the Dead."

This is the famous execution place of the priests, and in reality is a small pocket in the cliffs, hemmed in by precipitous walls of rocks. The lovers are lowered by ropes, hundreds of feet down, into this pit, whose bottom is lined with the bones of previous victims.

Though Cecil is bound, Ameera's arms are free, and she conceals within her clothing a clasp knife, with which she is finally successful in freeing Cecil. Cecil discovers that the sides of the cliff are of such soft rock that by patience he may be able to cut steps by which he and Ameera may possibly reach the surface.

Hours later, when he and Ameera reach the brink of the pit into which they were cast, they find before them Dhur, the young priest who had loved Ameera, and who had been the means of betraying her upon Cecil's first visit. Dhur and Cecil engage in a desperate struggle at the very edge of the deep pit and Cecil, after overpowering the priest, flees with Ameera and crosses the rope bridge which connects the "City of the Dead" with the land on the other side of the chasm.

Though the lovers escape across the bridge, Dhur seeks to follow and Ameera, realizing that Cecil is too weak to again fight for their lives, deliberately cuts the rope and Dhur crashes down to his death.



Next morning Cecil and Ameera are found by Robbins, who was just about to depart with his caravan, and together they set out for civilization under the protection of Robbins and his followers.

"The Cave Man"

Blue Ribbon Feature Released by V. L. S. E. Nov. 29 Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE bare plot of "The Cave Man" may not be new to the screen but its effective treatment, excellent acting and production make this five reel offering entirely unusual. This Blue Ribbon feature, released November 29 on the V. L. S. E. Program, is an adaption from Gelett Burgess' story by Marguerite Bertch, who has prepared the scenario with consummate skill and keen appreciation for the best that is in the story.

"The Cave Man" sparkles with humor and should prove one of the most popular Blue Ribbon features. It is a comedy dealing with the idle rich, and the sham and pretense of those who are greatly impressed with their social standing, which, often as not, is based upon their rating in the big books compiled for the convenience of bankers and merchants, make delightful material for satire.

Robert Edeson in scene from "The Cave Man."

Robert Edeson's performance as the coal heaver who is dressed up and sent forth to be a social lion, ranks as one of his best, if not the best, of his screen portrayals. In this part which permits him to be both, he proves a splendid comedian as well as a forcible dramatic actor. In the stages of his development from laborer to a man of consequence he is consistently convincing in his ragged laborer's clothes, his bewilderment when he attends his first afternoon tea and as the man to whom there has come an ambition to accomplish things.

Mr. Edeson is surrounded by efficient players. Fay Wallace, the Miss Mischief who, for a lark, introduces the coal heaver into the home of her recently wealthy friend, where he is accepted as an especially learned man (Smagg deals in generalities) is a real Miss Mischief in appearance and actions both. To make such a decided impression while playing opposite Mr. Edeson as he appears in this picture, reflects credit on Miss Wallace.

Lillian Burns as Dolly Van Dream, who is willing to follow the lead of any person she believes can guide her to the path of culture, does very well. George de Beck; Frances Connelly; John T. Kelly and Charles Eldridge complete the cast. Theodore Marston is the director who has so capably produced "The Cave Man" and his efforts cannot be praised too highly. The action is smooth and most artistically placed and the settings particularly tasteful. There are some scenes, both interior and exterior, which were taken at a Pennsylvania steel plant and they are especially good from a standpoint of direction.

"The Cave Man" affords excellent entertainment and still there is truth in it. The action is so in accord with that which is natural that it seems as though the author after selecting his characters put them before the camera and allowed them to obey the promptings of their own minds, which is proof conclusive that "The Cave Man" is an exceedingly fine comedy.

"Faith and Fortune"

A Three-Reel Edison Drama Released December 10 Reviewed by George W. Graves

EDISON'S "Faith and Fortune," featuring Grace Williams and Curtis Cooksey, is a drama of considerable appeal to the sympathies. Under the direction if Frank McGlynn the three reels unfold their story with sufficient grip to prevent lagging interest and to convey the desired impressions to the spectator.

In contrast to Douglas Claiberne, the unworthy brother who takes advantage of his sister's devotion and squanders her savings, is Jerry Mason, a stalwart Westerner of noble instincts, in spite of the fact that he has lost several fortunes through gambling. Curtis Cooksey furnishes a strong, appealing characterization as Jerry Mason. Grace Williams is also very well cast as Molly, the wronged sister.

Douglas Claiberne, taking his sister's savings, travels west in search of the precious metal. Fortunately for Molly, she is cared for by an old friend of the family, Randolph Porter. Douglas becomes friendly with Jerry Mason and the two start out for the fields together. Jerry falls in love with Douglas' photograph of Molly and declares that she is his constant inspiration. In order to get the money to pay up gambling debts, Douglas writes his sister that he has struck gold and asks for funds to work the claim. Molly decides to go west, but before she arrives there, Douglas has been hunted down and killed for a murder he never committed.

When Molly arrives Jerry tries every possible means to keep news of her brother's death from her, and is successful for a time. The two are lovers from the start. Finally Molly discovers her brother's grave. The authorities find damaging evidence against Jerry, but the latter is saved from the noose by the timely arrival of his sweetheart.

The Current Triangle Bill

This Week's Offerings from Ince and Griffith Studios Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

WITH this week's bill the Studebaker theater goes under the management of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, though Triangle pictures still form the entertainment. With the new policy but two features are offered, a Keystone comedy and a five-reel feature. The other five-reel feature issued by Triangle, it is said, will be shown at the first two performances on Mondays, for the inspection of exhibitors, but the remainder of that day and the rest of the week a continuous showing of but two features will comprise the bill. Programs, sound effects, and the big orchestral accompaniment are also banished with the passing of the Studebaker from the Triangle management to that of J. L. & S.

"The Edge of the Abyss" from the Ince studios and "The Great Vacuum Robbery," a Keystone production, are the two attractions chosen for this week's offering by Jones, Linick & Schaefer and "The Penitentes," the Fine Arts picture, is the one that only gets a Monday morning showing.

Mary Boland, Willard Mack, Frank Mills and Robert McKim are the featured personages in "The Edge of the Abyss" and such sterling players naturally give a splendid portrayal of the interesting story C. Gardner Sullivan has prepared. Miss Boland makes her first screen appearance in this film and while at all times convincing and attractive she photographs better at a distance than in the "close-ups." Mr. Mack, as the burglar, holds one tense every moment that he is on the screen, and Frank Mills, as the attorney who defended the burglar, later as the husband of Alma, though forceful in his playing, never overacts his part. To Robert McKim falls the rather unwelcome role of Neil Webster, the

Mary Boland and Robert McKim in scene from "The Edge of the Abyss."

"other man" in the story, and he gives a most splendid interpretation of a hard role.

Several tremendously big sets are used in the society scenes and the Ince photography, as usual, is above criticism. The story in brief tells how Alma Clayton, a society butterfly, throws over Neil Webster, the young man of ordinary means who loves her. The reason for her change of heart is to be found in Wayne Burroughs, the rising young district attorney, who is already wealthy and so successful that his name is on everyone's tongue. After becoming Mrs. Burroughs, Alma discovers that her husband is so wrapped up in his career that he finds scant time to devote to her. When Alma suggests a divorce, the husband only laughs and moves his things to the club, declaring that he will reside there until she "has come to her senses." Neil, who is invited by Alma to call, again declares his love and suggests an elopement, but just then Jim Sims, a burglar, whom Burroughs had long ago defended, interrupts. Jim binds Neil to his chair, orders Alma to her boudoir and there relates to her the story of his respect for her husband. He points out to her the futility of defying society's laws and, thoroughly repentent, she orders Neil from the house, after he has summoned the police to arrest the burglar. Alma helps Jim to escape and then summons her husband home.

Orrin Johnson, Seena Owen and Paul Gilmore in scene from "The Penitentes."

Charles Murray, Slim Summerville, Ed Kennedy and Louise Fazenda create roars of laughter by their antics in "The Great Vacuum Robbery" which it is impossible to "review," in the ordinary meaning of the word. The meager plot concerns the efforts of two crooks to rob a bank by means of a vacuum hose that sucks the money out of the teller's cage, and the pursuit of the robbers by two dime novel detectives, who are themselves mistaken for the criminals, but it is uproariously funny. Harry Booker, as the landlord of the hotel, earns not a few laughs for his "bit."

The Fine Arts production "The Penitentes," though not being shown throughout the week, is both spectacular and interesting—in fact well up to the Triangle standard. Jack Conway is credited with the production and has splendidly staged this story of Mexico in the seventeenth century, and the strange tribe of fanatics known as the Penitentes.

Orrin Johnson makes his Triangle debut as Manuel, and acquits himself in a way which will make his future appearances events to be eagerly looked forward to. Seena Owen, as Dolores, scores as much of a hit as she did in her first appearance, and Paul Gilmore is a dashing Commandante. Irene Hunt capably portrays Senorita Carmelia, and A. D. Sears as the Chief Brother and Charles Clary as Father David have important roles.

Manuel, an orphan boy, who has been raised by the strange fanatical tribe of the Penitentes, though in love with Dolores, looks with favor upon his selection as the victim of the annual sacrifice when he is chosen to be crucified on Good Friday. Dolores, after vainly seeking to win Manuel from his faith, lays her troubles before Father David and sets the machinery in motion for summoning the troops to exterminate the Penitentes. Just as Manuel is about to be crucified the troops arrive, break up the weird ritual of the fanatics and then, at sight of Father David, Manuel's old guardian confesses that Manuel is not a member of the Penitente sect at all, but was kidnaped when a baby, in order that his possessions might fall into the hands of the tribe. Manuel, now thoroughly happy, renews his courtship of Dolores.

"The White Scar"

Five-Reel Universal Broadway Star Feature, Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

ALL the glory and wonder of the big Hudson Bay country that lies to the north of us in the Canadian northwest has been imprisoned in celluloid by the Universal Company in its five-reel Broadway Universal feature, "The White Scar," which is scheduled for release on December 6.

Hobart Bosworth, who already has won a high place for himself in the esteem of motion picture patrons, is cast as Nah-Tah-Wan-Gan, which is Indian for "The Great Trapper," and in a picturesque hunting costume, surrounded by his Indian followers, wins new laurels for himself in this unique character.

Practically all of the story is laid in and about the Hudson Bay post to which Nah-Tah-Wan-Gan brings his furs and where he, for the first time in many months, lays eyes on Janet, the daughter of the factor, who later becomes his wife.

Jane Novak as Janet, the factor's daughter, splendidly interprets the rather difficult role that falls to her lot, and though one may not be impressed by her ability at first, she grows more and more fascinating as the story proceeds, and ere it ends achieves a triumph. Anna Lehr is cast as the Indian chief's daughter, also in love with Nah-Tah-Wan-Gan, and it is she who unfolds the story of "The White Scar."

The picture, which was made under the direction of Ulysses Davis, is beautifully photographed and has for its backgrounds some of the most stunning views taken across a lake, whose shores are lined with big timber, that the screen has recently given us. Artistic frames for the subtitles lend interest to the story and the subtitles themselves serve to give atmosphere to the production through their quaint wording, modeled after the style of "Hiawatha."

Briefly, the story concerns Nah-Tah-Wan-Gan, who, after impressing the dusky daughter of an Indian chief with his prowess as a hunter, visits the Hudson Bay post where the factor's daughter learns to love him.

The assistant to the factor, whose Indian name means "Black Wolf," proves to be a thoroughly unscrupulous scoundrel, who steals furs from the post and profits greatly thereby. When suspicion seems likely to fall upon Black Wolf he boldly inserts some of the stolen furs in a mail sack which the factor's son is to convey to the distant fort, but when the factor, after summoning back his son, discovers the stolen furs and is about to order his son to be taken three days' journey from the post and there released in the forest without food or weapons, Nah-Tah-Wan-Gan, who suspects the young man's innocence, offers himself as a sacrifice, claiming that it was he, and not the factor's son, who had committed the theft.

Janet, who admires Nah-Tah-Wan-Gan and looks forward with terror on the journey upon which he is about to start, disguises herself in male attire, assists Nah-Tah-Wan-Gan in escaping from the post and accompanies him to the nearest missionary's hut, where they are married, afterwards journeying far into the northland.

In time the evil deeds of Black Wolf overtake him and the real thief is discovered. Black Wolf is taken three days' journey into the forest and released, and ere starvation fells him, is able to reach the hut of Nah-Tah-Wan-Gan and his wife, where he is given refuge and cared for. He repays the kindness by hurling Nah-Tah-Wan-Gan over a lofty height into the lake and later telling the factor's daughter that her husband is dead.

She consents to let Black Wolf escort her home, but learns too late that he has deceived her and is about to take her still farther into the northland as his wife.

The Indian maid, who found and tended Nah-Tah-Wan-Gan following his fall, nurses him back to health and then assists him in seeking out the wife whom he thinks has proven false to him.

Nah-Tah-Wan-Gan arrives in time to prevent the wedding of Black Wolf, and the latter, cornered, throws his knife at the Indian girl who betrayed his whereabouts and is then overcome and taken back to get his punishment.

As the Indian maiden closes the story which she has been telling to Nah-Tah-Wan-Gan's little son she explains that the white scar on her bosom is the memento left by Black Wolf's knife.

"The Water Carrier of San Juan"

American's Two-Reel Production to Be Released Dec. 6, Reviewed by John C. Garrett

A STORY within a story is the two reel production to be released by the American Company, December 6. In this unusual drama "The Water Carrier of San Juan" there is some very good locale atmosphere. The story is laid in a Mexican fishing village and many beautifully photographed scenes are prominent throughout the production.

Winnifred Greenwood again proves her versatility and emotional ability in a role which is different from former ones. In a becoming black wig and a fetching Spanish costume she makes a most charming Juanita, who is famed the country over for her dancing. Ed Coxen is a handsome Romela, who through his love for Juanita is blinded for life by one Pedro and is forced to become an humble water carrier. George Field does convincing work as Pedro, the itinerant musician who wins Juanita and afterwards deserts her.

Two strangers enter the eating house of San Juan and are approached by Romela, an old man who is blind and is a water carrier. After quaffing from the bowl which he gives them the owner of the eating house comes up to the strangers and asks them if they would like to hear Romela's story. He then sits down and relates to them the following tale.

Juanita, the daughter of poor parents, and Romela, the rich proprietor of a fishing industry, are sweethearts and their wedding day is close at hand. Pedro, an itinerant musician, comes into the village and by his grace and musical attainments captivates the heart of Juanita and arouses the jealousy of her lover.

Romela brings love tokens to Juanita.

Because he does not want to be absent from the girl he loves, Romela sends his fishermen out alone, cautioning them not to venture into the sea beyond the island. Some few days later he leaves San Juan to get the necessary clothing and presents for his approaching marriage. During his absence Juanita continues to see Pedro, the musician, and finally is persuaded to flee with him. Upon Romela's return he finds that his sweetheart has gone and also learns that his fishermen have been lost at sea. He vows vengeance and starts in pursuit of Juanita and Pedro.

After journeying a couple of days he comes upon the eloping pair and a pistol duel follows. Romela is shot and severely wounded, while Pedro and Juanita mount his horse and flee. Some days later Romela is discovered blind and half dead and because his fortune has been lost he is compelled to pass the remainder of his days living as a water carrier.

Some years pass and Juanita returns to San Juan worn out and half dead from fatigue. She is taken to Romela and after begging his forgiveness tells him the story of how she had been taken from camp to camp. As the years pass her grace grew less and her popularity was on the wane. Finally Pedro tired of her and left her to cast for herself. Her story told the girl passes away.

The proprietor finishes his story and just then a coach drives up to the door and everyone goes out to meet it. A well dressed dark complexioned man steps from the coach and Romela happens to be in his way and he pushes him aside and tells the proprietor to keep him from bumping into him. Romela recognizes the man's voice and with a cry springs on him and sinks his dagger in the man's heart. He is carried off to jail, but is happy as he has avenged the death of Juanita and Pedro lies dead.

"A Yellow Streak"

Five-Reel Metro Drama Released December 6, Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

WILLIAM NIGH is the author and director of "A Yellow Streak," a five reel Columbia production featuring Lionel Barrymore and released December 6 on the Metro program. The subject is an interesting one and it has received capable treatment by Mr. Nigh as author and director. The story centers about an especially interesting character. There is plenty of action and the melodramatic situations are finely presented. As is generally the case with stories in which the author has given most of his attention to characterization, "A Yellow Streak," as a play, is not perfectly smooth in its movement.

But Mr. Nigh has accomplished his purpose, and "A Yellow Streak" has much entertainment value in addition to presenting the spectator with an interesting bit of human nature study. It is the story of a man in whom the spirit of manliness, which he lacks, is instilled through association with his direct opposite, an outlaw who, if anything, is manly a bit to excess. Either Lionel Barrymore fits himself to the part admirably or the part fits him, as his characterization is excellent.

Mary discovers that the "parson" is no milk sop.

Mr. Barrymore is convincing both as the spiritless Dale and the Dale who is every inch a fighting-man. That such a change should come over a man through inspiration, is quite understandable for even in the beginning Barrymore, while clearly depicting cowardice, suggests with this an amount of ableness and capability. Though the change from coward to bravado comes over-night, not in one scene does he overdo either.

Dale, a broker, is financially ruined by his supposed friend and deserted by his faithless wife. Intent upon suicide, he leaves for the west. There he meets an outlaw, who knows no such thing as fear and who continues to be an outlaw because he loves to make other men show their fear. The outlaw and another chance companion, a traveling preacher, are killed. Dale resolves to make other men show "yellow" as he had shown it when his friend put him out of his own home. He impersonates both the notorious "black mask" and the parson.

As the parson he is considered more or less of a joke in the mining town where he forms a strong attachment for a girl, who has proven to him that she has no "yellow" in her make-up. The girl has little time for him. On one occasion she calls him a milk-sop. But later Dale renders her a real service, and one such as can be rendered only by a red-blooded man. Then she admires him and agrees to become his wife.

Irene Howley gives a most pleasing performance in the leading feminine role. She makes Mary Austin a girl of strong character and unyielding spirit, but with all her self-reliance she is always a woman. Niles Welch, William Davidson, R. A. Bresee, William Cowper and Martin J. Faust are prominent in the cast which includes Dorothy Gwynne, J. H. Goldsworthy and John J. Donough. In its consistently well chosen locations and realistic settings the production is highly commendable. If there is any room for improvement it is in the subtitles. Though they perform their mission in making clear the action and some of them add a welcome touch of humor, they are not of a quality as high as this excellent production deserves.

"The Night of Souls"

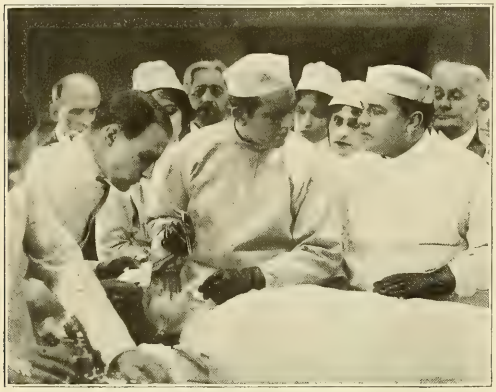
Essanay's Three-Reel Feature Released November 29 Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

IMAGINE a famous surgeon engaged in a delicate operation on the body of a child whom he has run down in his automobile. Imagine that same surgeon at the most delicate point in his operation receiving news that his own little girl, at her home, has just been badly injured and that his skill alone will be able to save her life. That is the big situation in Essanay's "The Night of Souls," the three reel feature released Monday, November 29.

Richard C. Travers interprets the role of Dr. Allison—the physician—and is supported by Warda Howard, as Mrs. Allison, and Harry Dunkinson as Dr. Sewell, an old friend of the family.

As the story opens, one is given a human glimpse of Dr. Allison's home life, the love and affection lavished on him by the wife and little daughter, and then, a few moments later, we see Dr. Allison speeding down a wide boulevard in his car, and are horrified to behold the serious injury of a little girl who runs into the road-way directly in the path of the flying car. Allison hurries the little girl to the nearest hospital, and there sets about his preparations for the operation which alone can save the life of the child.

Meanwhile, Allison's own little one stumbles at the head of the stair-way in her home and comes crashing down the whole flight. When Mrs. Allison summons Dr. Sewell—an old friend of the family—the latter quickly voices his opinion that the little girl will die unless her father, who is the most famous surgeon in the city, reaches her instantly and performs the necessary operation.



Word comes to Allison at the hospital just as he is at the most delicate point of the operation on the little girl he injured, and great indeed is his suffering, as he realizes that if he leaves his present patient to care for his own little girl the one he injured must die. Deliberately he chooses, and bravely goes on with the operation he had under way when interrupted.

At the earliest moment he can leave his patient, Allison hurries home, only to discover that his own little girl is dead, and to hear Mrs. Allison declare that he is nothing less than a murderer.

Next day Mrs. Allison leaves his home, and the physician, broken in spirit, and his mind dulled with sorrow, resorts to drink. As time passes, he sinks lower and lower until finally the medical fraternity forbid him to practice further, and then he reaches the lowest depths.

However, time works another change, and finally Allison determines to make a new start in life. Being without funds,

The doctor saves his wife's life.

he seeks employment of the humblest sort in a huge factory, and there one day one of the factory women is injured while at work at one of the huge machines, and the doctor who is summoned, after examining the patient, realizes that only such a great surgeon as Dr. Allison once was will be able to save the woman's life. He wishes that Dr. Allison might be there, and looking up is amazed to behold the very man of whom he had thought. Allison volunteers his services as surgeon. His hands now are steady, and he performs the delicate operation that saves the life of the factory worker. Finally Dr. Allison discovers the woman upon whom he had operated is none other than his wife. The film ends in a joyful reunion.

"The Warring Millions"

American Correspondent Film Company's Mammoth War Spectacle, Reviewed by John C. Garrett

ON Monday, November 29, the Olympic theater opened its doors for the performance of the American Correspondent Film Company's stupendous five-reel production, "The Warring Millions." This spectacular photodrama will attract much interest wherever shown as it depicts war as it really is in the countries in Europe which are pitted against each other in bloody strife. The American Correspondent Film Company are to be congratulated on the excellent photography they obtained and on the pictures as a whole.

Lyell Fox, Jack Everett and A. K. Dawson are the cameramen who went into the midst of the battle to photograph this production. They showed no little daring in some of the scenes which they have taken which are right on the battlefields and, in fact, too near to be a pleasant undertaking.

The picture as a whole deals with the preparation of the German armies for their attack on Ivangorod. The first reel depicts scenes in peaceful Poland, where the farm folk are at work mowing and reaping the fields and unaware of the disaster which is to be brought upon them. Then into this peaceful scene strides deadly Mars and soon wreaks havoc wherever he appears.

This wonderful production shows the German encampments on the river bank just beyond Ivangorod. It then depicts the building of a pontoon bridge over a river which takes seven hours to complete and when it is finished it is a "bridge of sighs" as the women and children from the town make an endless journey across, knowing not where they are going.

Later the army receives word that it is to attack and capture Ivangorod and then the battle royal begins. The town is bombarded with shells and when the infantry attacks are repulsed, reserve artillery is rushed to the front. The forts of Ivangorod which are massive structures are crumpled ruins as an effect of the shells hurled at them and soon the German army storms the town and captures it. It is then that we are led through the streets and shown the ruins which were but a few hours before large buildings, but which are now crumpled bits of masonry.

"Curly"

A Clipper Three-Reel Drama to Be Released December 11, Reviewed by John C. Garrett

LOTTIE PICKFORD does some of the cleverest work of her career in Clipper's three reel production "Curly" to be released December 11. In this screen drama Miss Pickford is given a chance to do some heart stirring dramatic work and she does it in a very commendable way, making an appealing little "Curly," a girl who is brought up in the slums under the care of Mrs. McCarthy, a woman who is very fond of whisky and abuses the little girl.

William Russell plays opposite Miss Pickford and is splendidly cast as Arthur Brewster, a young millionaire, whose name and money are coveted by Isabel Morrisey, which part is taken by Charlotte Burton, and her brother Roland Morrisey, George Periolat, also is desirous of obtaining Brewster's millions. Eugenie Forde does exceptionally good work as Mrs. McCarthy. George Clancey as Tim McGraw, Lizette Thorne as Flo Murray and Marie Van Tassal as Mrs. Brewster, complete this strong cast.

The story of this unusual drama deals with Arthur Brewster, a wealthy young man and worker in the slums, who has founded the Good Hope mission. He comes upon Curly, an attractive little girl, who lives in the slums and who is cared for by a drunken old woman, Mrs. McCarthy. He asks Curly to visit the mission some time and this she does, later becoming a devoted friend of Brewster's.

One night two bums who are resting in the Good Hope mission see Brewster take out a large roll of money and determine to follow him home and slug him in order to get the roll. Brewster on his way home passes Curly's house and stops to talk with her. She notices the two men following him and just after they have passed her they attack him and her screams bring a policeman and both his life and money are saved. Sometime after this Brewster gives Curly work at the mission.

Flo Murray is seen pawning the stolen ring.

Roland and Isabel Morrisey, brother and sister, have squandered their patrimony and have become social pirates living by their wits. Wishing to continue his social living Roland suggests that Isabel set her cap for Brewster. This she does and later succeeds in becoming the young man's betrothed. Roland who is in need of money converts some securities he has long held for the unknown heir of Captain Peters into money by selling them to Brewster.

Isabel notes with jealousy Curly's adoration for Brewster and she and her brother concoct a plot. Her brother meets with Flo Murray, a woman who is a victim of circumstances, and she manages to have Curly accused of stealing some rings belonging to Isabel. Things look pretty black for the girl until Tim McGraw, connected with the Good Hope mission, sees Flo Murray pawning the rings she accused Curly of stealing and she admits her guilt to him, and thus Curly's innocence is proven.

Mrs. McCarthy is taken fatally ill and on her deathbed she confesses that Curly is the rightful heir of Captain Peters' fortune. Brewster and Curly go to Morrisey's office where Roland and his sister are apprehended before they can flee with the Peters' securities and as the picture fades we see Brewster place a diamond circlet on the finger of Curly, the girl he has grown to love.

"I'm Glad My Boy Grew Up to Be a Soldier"

Selig Four-Reel V. L. S. E. Release of December 13 Reviewed by John C. Garrett

THE Selig Polyscope Company has for presentation on December 13, a screen version of the popular song hit, "I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier." This stupendous production is another one which is so necessary and apropos at this time. It deals with war and shows us some of the horrors which would be visited upon us in case we should be drawn into the conflict now raging in Europe.

The citizen-soldiers are called to the front.

Frank Beal was given the direction of this photodrama and has an able cast to enact the leading roles for him. His big battle scenes were registered exceptionally well upon the screen and the photography was excellent throughout.

This production gives just honor to the woman who is forced to give up her dear ones to the god of war and leaves her gazing into the fireplace while a vision of a great battleship firing a broadside of guns appears, later dissolving into a great thrashing harvesting machine, implying peace and industry and then the mother realizing that her sacrifice was for the good of the country is glad that her boy grew up to be a soldier.

Harry Mestayer as Jerry Warrington; Eugenie Besserer as Mrs. Warrington, his mother; Harry DeVere as James Warrington, Jerry's father; Guy Oliver as Frank Archer, Warrington's partner in business and Anna Luther as Mercy Archer, Frank Archer's daughter and the girl with whom Jerry is in love, are prominent in the cast of this production.

James Warrington, a successful architect, is happy with his loving wife and fine young son, Jerry Warrington. His partner in business, Frank Archer, who also resides in the house next to him, is a widower with a small daughter, Mercy.

The morning paper states that war has been declared and Archer informs Warrington that he is going to enlist as a volunteer and fight in defense of his country. Warrington, thinking of his wife and little son, hesitates, but his duty confronts him and he agrees to join a volunteer regiment with Archer and then comes the first note of sadness into the happy home. The regiment which includes Warrington and Archer marches away and Mrs. Warrington watches with tear-dimmed eyes.

Time passes and Mrs. Warrington receives no word from her husband. One day Archer arrives home and he has lost an arm while fighting in defense of his country. He calls on Mrs. Warrington and as Jerry and Mercy are playing together he tells her of the battle in which he was wounded, of how his faithful partner rushed to his aid and then of Warrington's death.

Seventeen years pass and Jerry has grown to young manhood, while Mercy has blossomed into a beautiful young woman and their childish affection has grown into love for each other. Again into the happy home comes word that war has again been declared and that the invaders have landed upon the coast.

The mother tries to keep the news from Jerry, but he goes to the office where he has taken up his father's duties and tells Archer that he is going to enlist. There comes a day when Jerry is sworn into his country's service and again the mother stands watching the soldiers march away just as she did seventeen years before. Mercy unable to stand the strain of separation from her lover goes to the front as a Red Cross nurse.

One day she returns and with her father goes to Mrs. Warrington's home, where she tells a story just as her father had told one seventeen years before. How she, sitting on the high rocks overlooking a battlefield, had spied Jerry in the forefront of the battle line; the men of Jerry's regiment leap from cover and advance upon the enemy; Jerry is suddenly stricken in the midst of the leaden shower and falls. He is taken to the Red Cross hospital dying and while Mercy holds her sweetheart in her arms he breathes his last with the word "Mother" hovering on his lips.

"Barbara Frietchie"

Metro Five-Reel Drama Released November 29, Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE Popular Plays and Players Company presents an excellent screen drama in picturization of the celebrated "Barbara Freitchie," by Whittier. This beautiful five part production was released by Metro on November 29, and it would seem that the title alone should insure it a large audience wherever it is screened. The picture is of the type that can be exhibited to large audiences with the advance assurance that it will please thoroughly and generally.

The adaptation was made from Whittier's poem and the play by Clyde Fitch, and the scenario should be mentioned, for it is a splendid one. The action is continuous and as a whole the story is well constructed. Toward the end, where the poem is picturized and excerpts from it are used as subtitles, the interest is brought to a point of excitement. But pleasantly so, one's emotions are stimulated, not disturbed as is the way with melodrama.

Mary Miles Minter has a part which makes demands upon her dramatic ability and she plays it to remarkable effect. This youthful actress established herself as a screen star some time ago. In "Barbara Frietchie" she acts with the spontaneity of youth and with the skill of an experienced actress. Miss Minter is Barbara the younger, in the picture there are two, and Mrs. Thomas W. Whiffen, a famous actress of the stage of years ago, is in the part of Grandma Barbara.

Barbara Frietchie, though she has no love for the Yankees, is captivated by Captain Trumbull, a Union officer. Her grandmother sides with the North and defends Barbara when her father demands that she have nothing more to do with the Yankee. Trumbull is of much assistance to the Frietchie family, as the town of Frederick is held by the Union army.

A scene from "Barbara Frietchie."

When the town is retaken by the Southerners, Trumbull is seriously wounded, and he is brought to the Frietchie home, where, later, he dies. Both Barbara and her grandma, in a frenzy, carry the stars and stripes to the window and wave the flag in defiance of the men. Several guns are aimed at the offenders, but are lowered at the command of General Jackson. One shot is fired, and that by a man who has been driven insane by jealousy. Little Barbara is struck by the bullet from the gun of her former sweetheart, and dies.

Though the play ends with the death of three of its most appealing characters, the ending is lightened by further scenes which, in double exposure, show Trumbull, Barbara and her grandmother visiting the places where the poem "Barbara Freitchie" is recited. The production is big. There are scenes in which Director Herbert Blache used hundreds of well drilled extras. The regiments of both Union and Confederate armies, and the locations give the play a true atmosphere. The interior settings are beautiful and the direction throughout is splendid.

Guy Coombs makes an attractive figure of Captain Trumbull and Fraunie Franholz is good in a character part as Jack Negly. Wallace Scott, Anna Q. Nilsson and Louis Sealy have the other important parts and play them well. The cast is completed by Frederick Heck, Myra Brooks, Charles Hartley, William A. Morse and Jack Burns.

"The Galley Slave"

Fox Five-Reel Feature Release of This Week Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

THERE'S a new Theda Bara on the screen. She's to be found in the current release of William Fox Features, entitled "The Galley Slave," and if comments overheard at the showing of the picture at the La Salle theater, in Chicago, which, under the management of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, this week begins the showing of the Fox program in Chicago's loop, is any criterion, she's going to be just as popular in the new style of roles as she has grown to be in the vampire type for which she is famous.

In "The Galley Slave" Miss Bara interprets the role of an artist's model, Francesca Brabaut by name, and is the wronged woman who is first deserted by her husband and later suspected of being the mistress of the hero. As the Italian girl she is as beautiful as ever, though in her tremendous scenes of denunciation, particularly in the close-ups of such scenes, her make-up seems a bit overdone.

Claire Whitney plays the American girl, whose happiness is spoiled by the suspicion cast upon her sweetheart when she finds him keeping a moonlight tryst with Francesca, and is most convincing in all of her scenes. She brings not a little beauty and a lot of real intelligence to her playing. Ben Hendricks, Stuart Holmes, and Hardee Kirtland are cast in important roles, and special mention is due little Jane Lee for her wonderful naturalness as the child of the model.

As the tragic little story unfolds we learn that Francesca, the daughter of proud parents, has married an artist who is considered beneath her by her father. Later she learns that her father's opinion was well founded, for the artist-husband sends his beautiful wife to plead with his uncle for funds. The uncle is of the belief that no woman is "good," and tells the nephew that if his wife proves to be as beautiful as she has been represented he may let her persuade him to change his will in the nephew's favor. Francesca proves her honor is above price and the uncle shamefacedly confesses that he misjudged womankind. After he has sent her away, he plans to add a codicil to his will providing for the woman and her child, but heart failure overtakes him ere he completes it, and the nephew comes into possession of the castle and title of his uncle, but the money goes to charity.

Francesca is then deserted by her husband and ekes out a bare living by posing for an American artist. Cecily Blaine, an American girl whose mother is anxious to marry her to a title, comes into the story as the sweetheart of the American artist, but Francesca's husband, now posing as a rich baron, seeks to win Cecily away from the American. In this plan he is aided by Mrs. Blaine and when Francesca would expose him to Cecily as a married man, he sends two decoy letters by which Francesca and the American artist are apparently shown to be husband and wife. Cecily, who witnesses their tryst, broken-heartedly departs and a few weeks later consents to marry the baron.

Later Francesca is sent to the galleys for theft, and the baron accuses the American also of stealing some jewels and bundles him off to the galleys where he again encounters Francesca. Ultimately, however, his evil deeds overtake the baron and he is exposed for the villain that he is. When he would kidnap his own child, a bullet from Francesca's revolver sends him to his death, and Cecily is once more free to marry her American lover.

"Detective Blackie"

Ninth Episode in Pathe's "Wallingford" Series Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

IN "Detective Blackie," ninth episode in the "Wallingford" series being produced for Pathe by L. D. and T. W. Wharton, the famous confidence men essay a difficult task. Instead of setting out to hoodwink one man they attempt, and their attempt meets with success, to beguile the scores of officials who govern the town of Spanglerville. The town seems to be run on a sort of brotherhood basis, but the spirit of brotherly love, which in turn harbors a sincere love for dollars, reaches to the town limits and not an inch further.

The town of Spanglerville was instrumental in bringing about the ruination of Violet Warden's father, and the amount by which it was enriched upon his death is the amount which J. Rufus and Blackie take away from it—if reluctantly accepting the $60,000 which a number of men run miles to give you can be called taking it away. Blackie and Wallingford play the roles of detectives and about two hours after their entrance into Spanglerville the whole town is sleuthing it about.

From the looks of them one would judge that minding other people's business and assuming charge of affairs that do not in the least concern them is an old trait with the townspeople. They spy so readily upon the one person in the town who has succeeded in keeping his own affairs to himself that if there is any truth in the adage about the old dog and the new tricks, the "detectives" merely applied a stimulant when they spoke in whispers and looked at some object calculated to be a few miles the other side of the gray horizon.

A scene from "Detective Blackie."

Blackie is in his heaven of delight for there is no end of opportunity to tell the rubes "fairy tales." This episode embodies as many funny incidents as the best of its predecessors. The officials of Spanglerville, hungry for information which they have no right to, are highly amusing as they walk on tiptoe and cast glances full of meaning at each other. Max Figman, Burr McIntosh and Lolita Robertson are supported by a fine cast. The support is so good that it is little wonder that their performances stand out. The settings show the same good judgment that prevailed in the staging of the former episodes.

"The House of Fear"

Pathe Gold Rooster Play Released December 2 Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE third of the "Ashton Kirk, Investigator," stories by John T. McIntyre, with Arnold Daly in the title role, and for release on Pathe's Gold Rooster program, is entitled "The House of Fear." There is deep mystery in the first scene and it is maintained up to the time Kirke explains, in the last reel, to the master of the house the cause of the strange happenings which have so upset him and the other members of his household.

So interested does one become in the numerous incidents that the last reel is reached before it is realized that the cause of them has not been even hintd at. Then the whole affair is explained in one conference betwen Kirk, who secludes himself, even from the audience, while he makes his deductions, and Cramp. Then there are pictures of events which happened years before and a quantity of subtitles. Everybody in the house harbors a terrible fear, but they, like the spectator, do not know what they are afraid of.

It is doubtful if one of the many people who see "The House of Fear" will feel the least desire to ever enter such a place. Charles Cramp, his sister, his aunt and a butler live there and each seems to feel as though the others know more than they care to tell. Kirk is interested in the house by his friend, Pendleton, who pays the Cramps a visit. At the end of his first two hours in the Cramp home he describes it very aptly when he says "some house." It is all of that.

The mystery is solved by Ashton Kirk, who discovers that Cramp's aunt is in league with a number of Mexicans who are anxious to secure some forged currency plates which are hidden in the cellar of the house. The Mexicans are a murderous looking lot and Kirk on one or two occasions is put to the necessity of using his brawn as well as his brains. The aunt, it transpires, is the wife of the leader, Alva, and she aids him in his attempt to obtain the plates. Kirk makes another discovery and that is that Grace Cramp is a very charming girl.

The picture has many exciting moments. It has been finely produced by Ashley Miller and Mr. Daly. The house, interors, and locations are almost weird in their somberness and they help as much as anything else to make the story as mysterious as it is. The search-lights which Cramp's butler plays about the grounds as soon as night comes on, and the peculiar sword, and harp which Miss Hoheno takes such excellent care of are other interesting features of "The House of Fear."

Scene from "The House of Fear."

Supporting Arnold Daly as Ashton Kirk, are Sheldon Lewis, Jeanne Eagles, Charles Laite, Ina Hammer and William Bechtel, in the important parts. Sheldon Lewis is presented with opportunities by his part, and this and the fact that he uses them to such good advantage makes Charles Cramp the most prominent character in the story. Jeanne Eagles is pretty and acts her part naturally.

"The Ogre and the Girl"

Lubin's Three-Reel Photo Drama to Be Released December 9. Reviewed by John C. Garrett

THE Ogre, a kind and wealthy man, is loved by all the children and feared by their parents. This man who has been blessed by the riches of earth, is cursed by an ugly countenance which is the cause of much unhappiness and prevents him from enjoying the wealth in his possession. His heart belongs to one girl, but she is young and beautiful and her ideal is a handsome youth, so the lot of the Ogre is surely a most unhappy one.

The above is the plot of Lubin's three-reel production, "The Ogre and the Girl." Bernard Siegel has been given the task of portraying the part of the Ogre and his work and characterization of this part are splendid. Geraldine O'Brien, a newcomer to the Lubin forces, does commendable work as the girl; Marie Sterling makes a lovable mother; James T. Daly is good as the father and Kempton Greene, as the hero of the story, does exceptionally clever work. The photography throughout the production is up to the general Lubin standard and some of the exterior scenes are beautifully portrayed.

Scene from "The Ogre and the Girl."

As the picture opens we are shown the mansion-like abode of the Ogre, a kind and wealthy man of forbidding face who has been given the name of the Ogre by those who do not know him. He is tired of loneliness and is in love with a girl, whose parents encourage his suit but she, lover of the beautiful and child of nature, shrinks from him and seeks the solitude of her beloved glens and brooksides. On one of her wanderings through the woods she meets a young surveyor and these two fall in love.

However, a discarded lover who has come back from afar to again press his suit, comes upon the two and a fight ensues in which the surveyor is injured and the girl has him taken to her home. A forest fire breaks out and soon spreads to the girl's home. Hemmed in by the flames and nearly choked by the smoke the girl attempts to carry her lover to safety. Her discarded suitor rushes in and carries the girl out, but leaves his helpless rival to die. The Ogre is standing near and the girl tells him she will marry him if he will save her lover's life and this he does.

The girl's family and the youth are taken to the Ogre's castle and here the youth recovers and learns that the girl has already promised to marry the Ogre and is making preparations for the wedding. The wedding day comes and the guests are assembled when from outside there comes the discordant pandemonium of a mob led by the discarded suitor, who has organized a charivari. The Ogre rushes into the garden and fires into the crowd, wounding the discarded suitor.

He is placed under arrest and returns to the drawing room where he places the hand of the girl in that of her lover and passes out into the night and two days later the youth and the girl are man and wife and the Ogre deeds to them his beautiful castle as a wedding gift.

"The Grey Mask"

World Film Drama in Five Parts for Early Release Reviewed by Hugh Hoffman

ONCE more the troubles that beset a chemist when he discovers a new formula for a high explosive are herein set forth. There seems to be a fate that pursues anyone who discovers a high explosive, and in this one the luckless inventor meets with all sorts of misfortunes at the hands of a desperate gang who are trying to obtain the formula for the representatives of a fictitious foreign government.

There are two valuable objects that gangs of crooks are always after. One is the formula for a new high explosive, and the other is some celebrated jewel. These being well-established facts, there is not a great deal of need to give the outline of this story. Edwin Arden is featured as the detective who runs down the gang and marries the girl. The girl is Miss Barbara Tennant. Miss Tennant always screens beautifully and her technique is invariably good.

Mr. Arden is most convincing as a detective of the brainy sort. He conveys the impression of ultra-shrewdness. and throughout the picture is altogether masterful in his handling of the part. All of the parts are very well played, and they lift what would otherwise be a commonplace story up into a high-class feature.

Johnny Hines is rapidly becoming known as one of the celeverest light comedians on the screen. His work is permeated with a most bizarre personality, which is at once pleasing and forceful. His skill as an actor is considerably above the average, and he shows up well in this production.

Jim Grath the detective behind the gray mask.

Buckley Starkey and Hugh Jeffries furnish a nice bit of character work as the two burglars. Frank Monroe, as the inventor, is well cast and plays his part extremely well. Georgio Majeroni, in the heavy part, as the representative of the foreign government, does some excellent work. He is an excellent type of the genteel heavy and his work in this picture should assure him many more engagements.

The production was staged by Frank Crane in a very adequate way. The settings are proper and the exteriors are very well chosen. The action has a nice continuity and as a whole the production is intelligent and ought to give satisfaction as a feature.

"The Run on Percy"

Selig Releases Another Bloom Center Chronicle Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

CONSTABLE PLUM, Postmaster Pash, Chubby Green, Percy Pinkham, Selina Tubbs, Margaret Tate and a number of the other unique characters who have made previous releases of the Selig series entitled the "Chronicles of Bloom Center," are all to be found in the latest release of this series called "The Run on Percy."

This time, however, it is Percy Pinkham, the boy printer, about whom the chief action centers, for Percy learns with surprise that his uncle, who is extremely wealthy, is going to leave him a fortune, providing he marries a Bloom Center belle within 24 hours, and Percy has to get some quick action in order to stand even an outside chance of landing that fortune.

Sidney Smith, who directs the Bloom Center series, again makes use of the familiar backgrounds that were used in previous releases of Bloom Center Chronicles, and the village print shop, the drug store, the watering trough that stands in the heart of the rural village, and Percy's home, are the principal scenes of the action, in the December 6 release of this series-serial.

As the story begins, Percy Pinkham, who has invested all his money in the Bloom Center Bugle, discovers that he is short of funds with which to settle the numerous bills which come pouring in upon him, and when he is embarrassed by discovering that he cannot even pay his colored washwoman, he writes to his uncle asking a loan.

In reply to the letter Percy's uncle arrives in person. Unfortunately he is in time to find Percy in a little session of poker. He is so indignant at discovering Percy's love for the cards, that he takes a room at the hotel and writes Percy a note, declaring that unless he agrees to marry a Bloom Center belle within 24 hours he will cut him off without a cent, but if Percy is successful in winning the love of some Bloom Center girl, he will be given the deed to one of the best farms in the country.

Johnny West, correspondent for the county seat newspaper, learns of the uncle's offer to Percy and prepares a front page story that startles Bloom Center to its most remote precincts.

When the county seat newspaper arrives, every nonmarried lady for miles around starts for Percy, and that young man has the time of his life in defending himself from the many who seek his hand in marriage. After barricading himself in his room, only to have the door broken in by the eager ladies, Percy escapes through the back door and visits Margaret Tate, whom he has long admired.

Margaret agrees to become Mrs. Pinkham, and the next day he receives from his uncle the deed to one of the finest farms in the county, the uncle explaining in a letter which accompanies the deed that his previous note was only a plot to make Percy realize the seriousness of life and the value of a good wife.

A humorous moment in "The Run on Percy."

Pathe Filming "The Precious Packet"

Donald Mackenzie, the Pathe producer, will soon start work upon "The Precious Packet," adapted from the novel of the same name by Fred Jackson. Lois Meredith, one of the most beautiful of the younger women upon the stage, and Ralph Kellard have already been signed for the picture. Mr. Mackenzie will have to take his entire company to a Maine lumber camp to spend several weeks there, since many of the scenes are laid amid such surroundings. In the meantime he is anxiously awaiting from correspondents in Maine reports of heavy snowfalls. The scenario requires deep snow, you see.

Robert B. Mantell, the eminent Shakesperian actor who recently deserted the spoken drama and entered into a contract of several years' duration with the Fox Film Corporation, will sail on Wednesday for Jamaica, British West Indies, where he will be photographed in a series of new Fox pictures. Mrs. Mantell, who is known both on the dramatic stage and in motion pictures as Genevieve Hamper, accompanies her husband and will be co-starred with him in each of the new productions.

HORSLEY TO FILM SPECTACLE

"Vanity," Eight-Reel Maserpiece, to Be Filmed Upon His Return to Centaur Coast Studios— New Camera in Use

David Horsley, the master-mind of the Centaur Film Company and one of the men who made pictures before the film business became an industry, arrived in New York a little over a week ago. Mr. Horsley admitted that he came all the way from his West Coast studios to attend the Screen Club ball, but inquisitive persistence revealed that the real object of his visit was to sign contracts with Mutual for additional productions. Further than that they will be five-reelers and come regularly and often. Mr. Horsley would not say, but he intimated that he might reopen his Bayonne studio while here and install a feature company to produce big dramatic subjects. It is probable that these latter will take the place of the present three-reel pictures now on the Mutual program. Alternating in release with them will be five-reel animal features with Captain Bonavita.

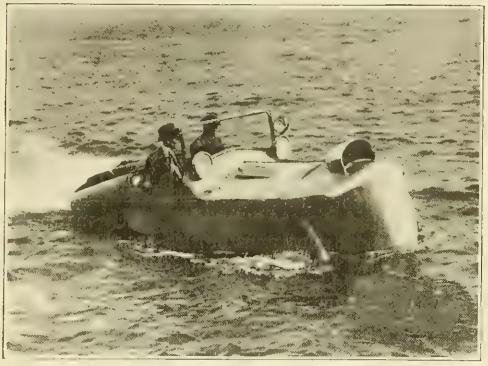
"As soon as possible after my return," said Mr. Horsley, "we will begin preparations for the production of a special feature to be called 'Vanity.' It will be fully seven or eight reels in length, and will be distributed through Mutual, but not in the regular service. The script, which was rewritten five times before meeting with the full satisfaction of myself and Miss Theodosia Harris, our scenario editor, is now ready for filming. There are three distinct leads in the cast. Just who will play them we have not yet decided. There is a possibility of this picture's being made in the east."

Reading from left to right beginning with fourth occupant of automobile are: Thomas R. Marshall, vice president of the United States; Mrs. Marshall; David Horsley, owner of the Bostock Arena and Jungle; Harry E. Tudor, general manager; C. M. Fais, controlled; and Captain Jack Bonavita, chief trainer. In the foreground is "Bryan, the scrapper," just Christened.

The value of good scripts cannot be overestimated, according to Mr. Horsley. "Good directors and actors are essential, of course," he said, in explaining his statement, "but the main thing is the story. The plot must be in the picture in order to make it a success. The name of a famous stage star at the head of its cast is not sufficient. Some stage celebrities have shown unquestionable talent before the camera, but the majority of them have not.

"For a time multiple-reel pictures were features only because they contained an expensive star, and they sold on that same asset, but those days are over. The people have taken to the four and five-reel length feature, and want good pictures. What the people want, the exhibitor needs—and it is up to the manufacturer to supply him. Good scripts in the studio form the foundation of a service which meets this demand. Sound, consistent stories are the first consideration; then comes the cast. And here, in most cases, experienced screen stars deserve preference over their stage cousins.

"Our feature company at the coast is at present engaged in the production of one of these five-reel pictures which will be released through Mutual under the new arrangement which goes into effect about the first of the year. We are also trying out a new comedian for light slapstick comedy. If our present plans go through he will be featured in short comedies much like the Ovey comedies."



The present forces of the Centaur studios, covering five acres of ground in the heart of Los Angeles, amount to five companies; two comedy, one dramatic feature, and two animal companies. An addition is being made to the plant to facilitate production. The arena, which is outdoors, has a convertible canvas roof, so that work can be carried on regardless of weather conditions. A balcony has been constructed over the dressing rooms, so that outsiders can see the arena and the jungles without being caught by the camera or interfering with the director. There are six separate and distinct jungle sets opening upon the arena.

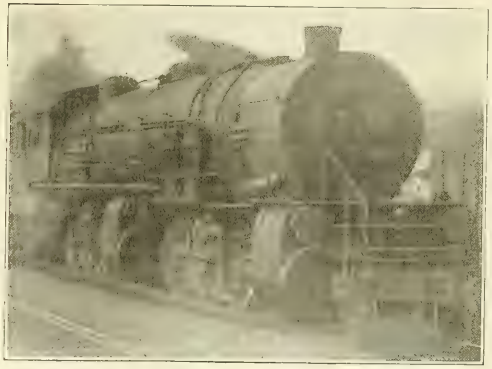
A part of Mr. Horsley's time while in New York was given to looking over the completion of several of his recent inventions, among which are his new printing machine and his light shifter. Mr. Horsley's double-exposure camera, which he invented some time ago, and which requires the films being run through but once, is perfected, patented, and in everyday use at the studio, but no arrangements have as yet been made for putting it on the market.

Milwaukee Exhibitors Incorporate

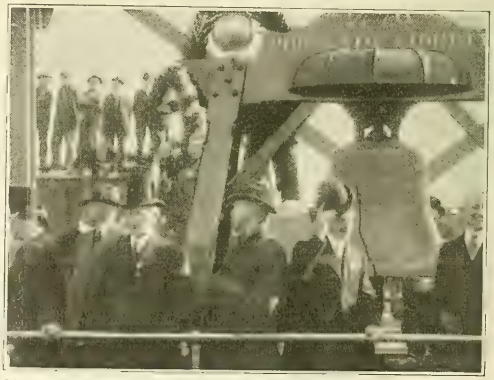
The motion picture exhibitors' association, of Milwaukee, organized without capital stock, has filed articles of incorporation in the office of the secretary of state. The purposes of the association, as stated in its papers, are to uplift the moral standard of the business of the motion picture exhibitors of Milwaukee, to promote the business interests of exhibitors and to maintain a strictly neutral attitude with respect to film manufacturers. Members of the association will meet in the Plankinton club rooms of the Plankinton hotel on December 3, to perfect the organization. Incorporators are: Henry Trinz, George Fischer, Philip O. Gross, Paul Langheinrich, Sr., Otto Anders, Richard Lauffer, Otto Treusser, Sr., B. K. Fischer, Charles H. Phillips, J. H. Filliman and H. D. Graham.

News of the Week as Shown in Films

Launching combination auto boat at San Francisco, Calif. Copyright, 1915, Hearst-Selig News Pictorial.



Dr. H. J. Haiselden, who refused to save the life of a mentally defective baby. Copyright, 1915, Pathe News.



Troops of Winnipeg, Canada, just before leaving for the scenes of war. Copyright, 1915, Universal Animated Weekly.

Mimic hotel burned as part of harvest festival at Atlanta, Ga. Copyright, 1915, Hearst-Selig News Pictorial.

Largest engine in the world put into service. Copyright, 1915, Pathe News.

Liberty Bell leaves San Francisco for Philadelphia. Copyright, 1915, Universal Animated Weekly.

Brevities of the Business

PACIFIC COAST NEWS

By "Capt. Jack" Poland.

Harry E. Aitken, president of the recently organized $5,000,000 Triangle Film Corporation, has been an interesting visitor to this city during the present week, guest of D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett, vice-presidents and producers of feature pictures for the new Triangle program. Mr. Aitken was splendidly entertained by prominent stars and producers of filmdom, and was a guest of honor at the Motion Picture Directors' Association Thanksgiving ball at Hotel Alexandria. After personally inspecting the several big studios in which his organization is interested, Mr. Aitken expressed himself as thoroughly satisfied with the magnificent productions being produced for the Triangle houses. He predicts even greater achievements and successes for 1916.

The most notable success in the social life of Pacific coast motion picturedom was the grand ball and bouffe given by the Motion Picture Directors' Association at Hotel Alexandria Thanksgiving night. It was a semi-social-charitable event, the funds to be used to provide two free beds at local hospitals for worthy and deserving film players who may need medical attention and are unable to pay for same. It was the initial event of the rapidly growing organization and nearly everyone of consequence in screen life now on the coast was present. The scene in the great Rose ballroom, with hundreds of celebrities of the professional world, caused many present to feel as though the Rialtos of New York and Chicago had been transplanted to Los Angeles. The ball and bouffe was a brilliant social and financial success, and the directors were recipients of hearty congratulations from their associates and guests. The following committees had charge of affairs:

Arrangement: Allen Curtis, chairman; Frank Beal, Joseph DeGrasse, William Robert Daly, and M. J. MacQuarrie. Reception: Otis Turner, chairman; Charles Giblyn, Robert Leonard, Walter Edwards, Charles Swickard, Reginald Barker, Al. E. Christie, Phillips Smalley, Travers Vale, William D. Taylor and Hobart Bostworth. Floor: Dell Henderson, chairman; Eddie Dillon, Jay Hunt, Frank Lloyd, Francis J. Powers, Charles K. French, Roy Clements, Raymond B. West, Lloyd B. Carleton, Henry Otto, Leon D. Kent and J. P. McGowan.

A splendid private showing was given at Woodley's theater last Monday night by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, under the personal supervision of Director-General Henry McRae, of the feature picture, "Undine," featuring Ida Schnall. The picture was produced under the direction of Henry Otto, and was pronounced by many critics and motion picture people attending as a most brilliant and artistic production. This picture will soon be released on the Universal program.

As an aftermath of extensive advertising of the famed picture, "Damaged Goods," by Exhibitor J. A. Quinn of the Superba theater last week, Mr. Quinn was arrested charged with unlawfully obstructing the sidewalks with crowds waiting to buy tickets. The house has been crowded at every performance. Mr. Quinn was fined by a local judge $100 and the sentence suspended. In the meantime crowds continue to flock to see the picture.

Mayor Charles E. Sebastian announces the following five as the new Board of Censors for Los Angeles: Austin C. Shafer, Neal P. Olsen, Clarence Ferguson, Mrs. M. E. Sherard and Mrs. Grace Mellus Thomas.

Phillips Smalley, that enterprising Universal director, has secured the services of the celebrated "Foxy Grandpa" cartoonist, C. E. Schultze, for a series of comic pictures for the Universal program. He is already at work under the Smalley tutorship and the Foxy expression is right there in evidence when payday comes and he lines up for the cash-erino. The pictures, however, are worth the price. This will be a new novelty for the Universal and Mr. Smalley has been heartily congratulated upon his success in securing such a notable character for his venture.

MID-WEST NEWS

By William Noble

Arkansas

In the chancery court at Fort Smith, Ark., the final decision was given in the equity case which has grown out of the sale of the old Lyric theater at that place. In October last the court gave a decree of judgment and foreclosure and sale to S. J. Rossmond as against Lawrence Wright et al. On Monday last the court gave a verdict in favor of Reutzel & Trusty for alleged differences in amounts of payments made by defendants in the purchase money of the property. The cross-complaint of Routzel & Trusty was based upon this character of claim.

Arizona.

Fire which originated presumably in defective electric wiring in a moving picture in Lovell, a suburb of Bisbee, Ariz., November 20, destroyed property valued at $65,000, including the theater.

Oklahoma

Dr. Phil C. Baird has installed a moving picture machine and booths in the First Presbyterian church in Oklahoma City and will show moving pictures in the church from time to time. The first picture shown was the Pathe three-reel picture, "The Life of Christ." Red lights for exits and cleared aisles will be conformed to and children under 12 years of age will not be admitted unless accompanied by their parents. Of course it goes without saying that nothing but censored pictures will be shown.

Missouri

Alleging that he was ousted from his position as manager of the New Grand Duchess theater, formerly the Hippodrome in St. Louis, and that despite the fact that he held a ten years' contract with the Walmar Theater Company, that he was forcibly thrown out of the theater when he attempted to enter, Mr. Bromley has entered suit against the theater company for $10,000 damages for breach of contract, and also for an injunction from being ousted as manager. Members of the company refused to discuss the filing of the suits further than to say there had been a disagreement over the contract, and that Mr. Bromley's services as manager had not been satisfactory, that Mr. Bromley had not been ousted from the theater, but simply had been refused admittance.

The Rialto theater of St. Louis, Mo., formerly the Delmar, has been purchased from Mrs. O. T. Crawford by Benjamin P. Stromberg, member of the school board and former trunk manufacturer. With the sale of the house went a three years' lease of the property. Mrs. Crawford declined to state the consideration in the sale of the Rialto to Mr. Stromberg.

Texas.

The jury in the moving picture show injunction case virtually decided November 18 that moving pictures could operate and give moving picture shows in Fort Worth, Texas, on Sunday. The jury decided in effect, after an hour's delibera-

Film Market Quotations and Financial Gossip

Supplied by R. D. Small of A. E. Butler & Co., Chicago.

	Bid	Asked
American Film Co., Inc....	95	99 †
Biograph Co.	41	56
Colonial M. P. Corp.....	1	3⅞*
Famous Players Film Co...	100	130
General Film Corp., pref...	40	45
Mutual Film Corp., pref...	48	51
Mutual Film Corp., com...	45	50
No. Am. Film Corp., pref..	71	75
No. Am. Film Corp., com..	67	72
New York M. P. Corp.....	50	59
Thanhouser Film Corp....	2	3½*
Triangle Film Corp.....	5½	6 *
Universal Film Mfg. Co...	190	..
Vogue Films, Inc.....	125	..
World Film Corp.....	4⅛	4⅜*

*Par $5.00

†Carrying the dividend.

American Film Co., Inc., has been in good demand, owing to the close proximity of dividend period, at 95.

Famous Players Film Co.: There have been some inquiries on this stock, although the issue has been fairly inactive. The spread between the bid and asked, however, is too large to permit of much trading.

North American Film Corp.: Reports up to the fifteenth of the month credited the "Diamond from the Sky" with a volume of business in excess of $900,000.

Vogue Films, Inc.: In order to perfect their plans on a more comprehensive basis, the first release—instead of being made in December—is now scheduled for the first week in January. Stock is in good demand, around 125.

tion, that Sunday shows would not depreciate the value of property. The verdict as technically expressed is for or against certain plaintiff property owners and defendant showmen. The next move on the part of the picture show owners will be to file a motion to dissolve the injunction now in force prohibiting picture shows in Fort Worth on Sundays, but in addition the showmen and citizens who favor Sunday shows will endeavor to secure a city ordinance to legalize Sunday shows in Fort Worth. To do this it will be necessary to order a referendum election, and petitions asking that it be done will at once be placed in circulation. It is not probable that any shows will open on Sundays, attorneys for the picture men stated, until the city has made it possible to do so without violating the law, although the injunction against it has been dissolved by the Sixty-seventh District Court.

NEW YORK NOTES

Bill Barry, advertising manager of the Nicholas Power Company, is the sole and disgruntled possessor of a cold. He has spent the past week trying to persuade it to "lay off," and, according to reports, is succeeding in his campaign.

J. H. Finn, president of the Nichols-Finn advertising agency, has returned to Chicago.

Lloyd D. Willis is now general manager of the Fox Film Corporation, taking the place of Winfield F. Sheehan, who has left for a six months' trip to California.

Robert E. Welsh has resigned from his position as editor of the motion picture department of the Dramatic Mirror, and can now be found in the publicity and advertising department of the Kalem Company. William Wright is still manager of that department at Kalem, but his present executive duties allow him very little time for taking part in its activities.

Dick Wallace, formerly editor of the motion picture department of the Morning Telegraph, has returned to the ranks of the theatrical press agents. He is now publicity representative for the Grace George company at William A. Brady's playhouse.

Claude Fleming featured in Pathe's "The Light That Failed."

John W. Grey, assistant to Albert E. Smith of the Vitagraphh Company, is responsible for the unique Blue Ribbon advertising novelties now being distributed among the exchanges and exhibitors. The new invention is called the "Vanitab," and consists of five or six thin layers of two-inch-square cotton generously sprinkled with face powder. The little pads are enclosed in sealed transparent envelopes, bearing the Blue Ribbon seal and stamped with the name of the theater at which it is given out and the Blue Ribbon feature which it is playing.

L. J. Rubinstein, publicity manager for the Thanhouer Company, is eagerly looking forward to the Boston exhibitors' ball, scheduled for December 1. Ruby is going to escort a group of Thanhouser stars to the affair, and significantly states that Boston people are going to know that they are there. If Ruby steals the ball from the Boston exhibitors the way he did the Bronx exhibitors' ball from that association, there is no doubt but that the Bostonites will know the Thanhouser representatives and remember them for a long time to come.

David Horsley, president of the Centaur Film Company, paid a brief visit to New York.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES

By P. J. Cropper

Morris Spiers has transferred the Royal, Twenty-sixth and Girard, to Ben Shillinger. It is understood the consideration was $15,000, of which $14,000 remains on mortgage. This house has the fiercest competition of any in the city.

There was some excitement in the Apollo last Tuesday. It appears the Fox "Carmen" had been booked to the Garden originally, and then canceled by the exchange, who claimed its contract entitled it to take this course on giving fourteen days' notice, while the Garden people, claiming they only received thirteen days' notice, threatened an injunction. On the right of the showing the officers of the Fox features exchange asembled in full force at the Apollo, where they were joined by Stanley Mastbaum and members of his staff. All arrangements had been made to allow the sheriff to seize the show, and after his departure to substitute a second copy. However, this went up in smoke, for no legal action had been taken, Goldstone and Mellon of the Garden being content to make the matter public in another way. Of course this has raised some indignation among the smaller exhibitors. The exchange man insists on having a contract, which he breaks if it pays him to. Sometimes, as is alleged in this case, he has to take orders.

Proprietor Earl M. Forte of the Sherwood has been taking a honeymoon trip to the Bermudas. He reports seeing two motion picture shows in St. Nicholas; open on Saturdays only, admission one shilling, and one and threepence (24 to 30 cents), General Film program, no feature of more than three reels!

As showing the state of motion picture business in Philadelphia, within one week four houses closed their doors. The Keystone on Morris, Columbia on Third, Frolic on Fifty-second, and Gladstone on Seventeenth.

Jake Becker, well-known downtown man, having sold his "Becker theater" on Fifty-seventh, has leased the Parkway on Fortieth.

Julian M. Solomon, late editor of the Susquehanna News, the Allentown Sightseer, Proverbs and the "Songs," blew into Philadelphia for Thanksgiving. His liberality in dining, wining and cigaring the motion picture press men of this city has caused a rumor to spread that he has rediscovered King Solomon's mines.

Since Harry Jordan replaced Manager McSween at the Chestnut street opera house, Triangle plays at $2 are a thing of the past. First showing prices are now 10, 15 and 25 cents.

The local exhibitors' ball is on the 8th. The two and only, Francis X. and Beverley, are to lead the grand march; among other celebrities attending are Viola Dana, Virginia Pearson, Mabelle Trunelle, Edward Earl, Robert Conness, Billie Reeves, L. W. McChesney, the Lubinites en famille, and many others.

CHICAGO GOSSIP

One of the finest tributes to a man that we ever heard was expressed by a film man the other day in a conversation about the departure of J. A. Berst from the Selig Polyscope Company. "Mr. Berst was only a name to me when he arrived in Chicago but when he left I felt as though I'd lost a chum."

George H. Sheldon and his pretty wife treated the ad-man to some instruction at "auction" this week. A return game on the Sheldon home grounds is scheduled at which we hope to trim the daylights out of them.

Henry B. Walthall of "The Raven" fame, together with some other Essanayites, went Nimrodding down around Beardstown during the Thanksgiving holidays.

Herbert Case Hoagland, formerly assistant to J. A. Berst at the Selig Polyscope Company, is now occupying the general manager's position with that firm. Mr. Hoagland has had a splendid schooling in the film business and his friends, joining in good wishes for him in his new capacity, expect to see him acquit himself creditably.

Clarence J. Caine, formerly of Motography, now engaged in editing film at the Selig Polyscope Company's plant, in company with his charming mother, paid the ad man a visit recently. Clarence is making a bid to fame by his articles in the Street & Smith picture magazine.

Aaron M. Gollos has been crowding war news off the front page of local newspapers recently. Aaron refuses to be the goat of any publicity man's schemes, thereby aiding and abetting said p. m. in his labors.

Adrienne Kroell has been made a splendid offer for a limited engagement at the Wilson theater. Adrienne has a wonderful voice which she had no opportunity of displaying while appearing in celluloid classics and being a very popular girl among North Side society folks Manager Lacolsi has made no mistake in tendering her the engagement.

The writer carefully pointed out in this column on October 23 that the Strand theater in its new location was going to make a lot of false prophets out of some very vehement exhibitors. President John Devine of "The Strand" theater beautiful is still "holding 'em out" and the evening performances have a "regular" attendance that any legit house would be proud to claim.

Pete "Sheriff" Schmidt by post card from Philadelphia complains bitterly that through publicity in this exhibitors' "vade mecum" he is being treated with contumely. Show them your star, Pete.

C. F. Hateley, the "Triangle" chief in Chicago, was host to Mme. Cavalieri and Lucien Muratore, the Grand Opera stars, at a box party at the Studebaker theater November 24.

The Illinois Naval Reserve attended the Thanksgiving eve performance at the Studebaker theater in full uniform. The submarine in the Keystone Triangle film "The Submarine Pirate" was the attraction for them.

NOTES FROM ALL OVER

The Green Room Club gave a beefsteak dinner to J. Stuart Blackton recently at the Forty-seventh street clubhouse, and the feature of the entertainment program, that was interspersed with the soup et al., was Miss Belle Storey, the prima donna of the Hippodrome, who sang a few songs to assist in making the occasion a memorable one.

The sales force of the New York exchange of the World Film Corporation will celebrate the first anniversary of Sol J. Berman's being in charge by giving a dinner in his honor on December 1.

James P. Cogan has been added to the staff of the Premier program in the capacity of scenario editor, because of his vast experience and thorough knowledge of this class of work. Mr. Cogan has done editorial work dating back to the days of the old Biograph company, when both Griffith and Sennett were with that company. For three years Mr. Cogan presided over the Twenty-first street studios of the Reliance and Majestic companies, and later joined the Universal, with which company he first served as picture critic, and later wrote many original scripts.

Now that the Lasky Company has acquired the rights to all of Mark Twain's works, it will immediately start work on the first, which is "Pudd'n Head Wilson," with Theodore Roberts as the star.

Two interesting new people joined the playing force of Balboa this week in the persons of Bert Ensminger and Elsie Randolph. The former is a well-known young player. Miss Randolph is a charming southern girl of promise in the realm of filmdom.

In the Augustus Thomas production, "The Other Girl," which is being filmed by the Raver Film Corporation, there is a scene where Paul Gilmore is required to put on the gloves with James J. Corbett. Gilmore says he believes he has now run the gamut of stunts that he has crossed fists with Corbett.

John Junior makes his initial appearance in motion pictures in Essanay's five-act feature, "A Daughter of the City." He plays the part of Dick Conklin, who rescues the innocent little girl from the vulture who has carefully planned her downfall. Mr. Junior has had extensive stage experiences, having played with some of the foremost players on the American stage. For three seasons he was under the management of the Frohmans, and will be remembered as having played the leading juvenile role in "Officer 666," which played at the Gaiety theater in New York for eighteen months. He had just finished an engagement with May Irwin in "Number 13 Washington Sq." at the Park theater in New York when he came to Essanay.

John W. Rankin, who has been actively connected with the general news publicity service of the Vitagraph Company, on Monday joined the press department of the Fox Film Corporation as publicity director. Mr. Rankin is experienced both in showmanship and publicity attendant upon it and enjoys a very large acquaintance in the picture trade field, as well as with dramatic editors of daily newspapers in New York and other cities.

Ever since her articles began to appear in the papers supplied by the McClure Syndicate, Mary Pickford has been deluged by letters from people of all walks of life demanding information on the most alarmingly varied subjects. If the Famous Players star were called upon to answer all of these inquiries, she would have to be a doctor, nurse, civil engineer, lawyer, architect, chauffeur, French chef, and ten or twelve other things all rolled in one.

Charles Chaplin and Bryant Washburn took Essanay's banner through the lists to the goal of a contest recently closed in a motion picture magazine. The contest was to decide the greatest cast in motion pictures. Chaplin was picked as male comedian by nearly two million votes and Washburn was assigned the villain's role by over a million and a half.

Charlotte Walker, the distinguished Lasky star, who made such pronounced hits in "Kindling" and "Out of Darkness," is expected at the studio this week to begin work on a series of photo-dramas.

May Allison had quite a nasty fall in the feature film, "The Other Side of the Door," at the American studios. She was supposed to jump from a window, a fall of five feet, she missed her reckoning and dropped a further ten feet and had to be carried home. She was in bed for several days and it is fortunate she was not badly injured.

Mona Ryan, who is interpreting the role of Mrs. Waterman in the Raver Thomas production, "The Other Girl," was chosen for type. Miss Ryan has had a long stage experience, playing with many of the big stars and herself appearing in prominent roles in some of the present-day big productions.

Mona Ryan.

Charles Miller, recently promoted to a directorship at Inceville, is this week staging the biggest scene he has ever undertaken since he began his theatrical career. It is an elaborate ballroom setting and is being used in the current Triangle-Kay-Bee feature in which Frank Mills, the notable Broadway star, is being starred.

Word comes from the west that Alan Hale, who has been with the Biograph Company for many moons, is leaving that company to accept a special engagement with the Lasky concern.

All preliminary detail for the production of "As in a Looking Glass," from the novel by F. C. Phillips, and chosen for the initial screen appearance of Kitty Gordon, the international star, has been completed. The production will start immediately under the direction of Frank Crane of the World Film staff.

Grace Cunard has had her little holiday and has returned to work at Universal City. She enjoyed the rest but is tickled to death to be back in the ring again—she could never rest for long, her temperament forbids. Francis Ford is still in the east, but will return soon, and until he makes his appearance, Miss Cunard is putting on a photoplay of her own and is taking the lead in it.

Anna Little snapped in a western scene at the American Company's studios.

Half a dozen prominent officials of the Salt Lake railroad, headed by F. A. Wann, general traffic manager, were recent visitors at the Balboa studios. Because of the steady growth in the volume of business done by the Horkheimer Brothers at their Long Beach plant, the transportation companies are vieing actively for their favors. It is coming to be more and more important.

At the dog show held in Los Angeles, Carlyle Blackwell's Great Dane won no less than six blue ribbons and a cup. Carlyle calls his dog "Babe," and it is an enormous animal. Babe misses her master sadly and is looking for him all the time, for two days she would not eat a thing.

That it pays to be married, even for two years, is the testimony of "Silent Bill" Haddock. On the second anniversary of his wedding, Friday, November 19, Mr. and Mrs. Haddock were presented with an expensive desk set by the members of the Rialto Star Feature Company, of which Mr. Haddock is director.

M. Tourneur, vice-president and general manager of the Paragon Film Corporation, says that it will be but a very short time now until the new company takes possession of the extensive quarters that have been preparing for them during the last few months right there in Fort Lee.

The Vitagraph studios at Santa Monica are almost dismantled, and a large part of the plant has been removed to the new location at East Hollywood. Only one or two buildings will remain on the old site, and they will follow the rest about March the first.

Ernest Maupain, who plays the villain's part in "The Law's Decree," Essanay's three-act drama, showed his enormous physical strength at the cost of a sprained hand and many severe bruises sustained by John Cossar, who is the hero of the story. Maupain and Cossar have a furious battle when the hero discovers that the villain has tricked him into buying worthless shares. The director of the picture determined that the fight should be most realistic. The two combatants were worked up into a high pitch of excitement in other scenes and when the fight was staged they sprang at each other with vim. When the dust cleared away, Cossar's hand was sprained and his back had been wrenched.

Allan Dwan and his lieutenants, Victor Demming, cameraman, and Arthur Rosson, assistant director of the Triangle Fine Arts.

Carter De Haven has begun the direction of his own company at Universal City in the production of a five-reel drama by Olga Printzlau entitled "The Ivory Box." In this story Carter and Flora De Haven play the leading roles.

Cecil B. DeMille has just completed the Fanny Ward production of "The Cheat," from an original photodrama by Hector Turnbull, former dramatic critic of the New York Tribune and now one of the photodrama writers at the Lasky studio.

The entire administration of Long Beach, headed by Mayor Lisenby, honored the Balboa studio with an official visit recently. This picture-making plant has by far the largest pay roll in the beach city, which it advertises so extensively. The municipality has been asked to make certain improvements to accommodate it. As a result of the visit, they are to be ordered.

Alma Hanlon, who made her film debut in George Kleine's film comedy, "The Fixer," will be given the lead in a story written especially for her by Max Marcin, the dramatist who wrote "The House of Glass," now playing at the Candler theater, New York. Work on the production is already under way at the big Kleine studios in the Bronx. Miss Hanlon, who has been referred to as the film star who "leaped into fame over night," is surrounded by a splendid cast, all the members of which are enthusiastic admirers of the pretty ingenue.

Plans for the dedicatory ceremonies that will mark the formal opening of the new Culver City studios being built by Thomas H. Ince were discussed again this week by Ince with representatives of the Culver City Chamber of Commerce. The result of the meeting was a decision to conduct a grand ball either on New Year's eve or New Year's night within the big glass enclosed studio now being erected at the plant.

Henry B. Walthall, Essanay leading man, is off on a duck-hunting expedition in the flats along the Illinois river near Beardstown, Ill., throwing off the glooms he acquired in playing the melancholy Poe in Essanay's six-act feature, "The Raven."

"Mother" Bensen, who is one of the most valuable among the members of the Big U organization at Universal City and who has endeared herself to thousands of film fans throughout the country by reason of her splendid protrayals of old women characters, met with an accident at the floral show recently held in Los Angeles and was confined to her bed for a week.

Director Frank McGlynn and company of some twenty players have returned from a week in the Catskill mountains, whither he had gone to get the mountain scenes in his next release, the feature, "Her Inspiration," in which Grace Williams and Curtis Cooksey are featured.

Through the thoughtfulness of Commodore J. Stuart Blackton and the cooperation of General Manager Walter W. Irwin of the V. L. S. E. and George Balsdon, manager of the Boston office of that organization, the inmates of the Rhode Island state's prison at Howard will be afforded diversion from their montonous routine this winter by the exhibition at the prison Friday night of each week of some V. L. S. E. feature play.

Maurice Tourneur, the Peerless director, who has had his company in Alabama for the last month, getting scenes for "The Genius," his latest play, in which George Beban, who is the author, has the title role, has returned to the Fort Lee studios of the World Film Corporation, where the rest of the scenes will be taken.

Earle Williams has been selected to head a cast of Vitagraph players who will enact a new serial story being produced by the Vitagraph Company under the direction of W. P. Earle.

Wellington Playter and Director Fred A. Kelsey motored from Los Angeles to San Francisco and from that point to Palo Alto recently, on their joining the Palo Alto Film Corporation. It took two days to make the trip.

Barney Oldfield, the speed king, was among the many well-known visitors at Universal City recently. It was Oldfield's first visit to the plant of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company and he inspected it from one end to the other, covering part of the two hundred and thirty acres of the plant in his car.

Charles W. Travis, who plays heavy roles in the Rialto Star Feature Company at Jacksonville, Fla., directed by Richard Garrick, has been under a doctor's care for a week. He is suffering from a severe cold, which it was feared might result in serious complications. He is now on the road to recovery.

B. B. Hardcastle is the new manager for George Kleine's Atlanta office. He left New York last week to assume charge of the Kleine interests in the southeastern states, after a record experience as a salesman traveling out of the Chicago office. Mr. Hardcastle covered Indiana with the Kleine productions and the good wishes of Hoosier State exhibitors follow him to his new sphere of action.

Thomas Bedding, who has been connected with the World Film Corporation, announces that he has resigned his position, due to "a change of policy obliging this company to curtail expenses."

Ethel Lynn, well known in musical comedy circles throughout this country, this week joined the Nestor comedy forces under the direction of Al. E. Christie at the Universal City studios.

Robert Leonard and his company of Universal Rex players are still at Arrowhead, Hot Springs, where they want to make a series of one and two reel pictures with Leonard and Ella Hall in the leading roles. Marc Robbins is playing the leading character roles with them.

Among a number of well-known members of the theatrical profession in New York City added to the working forces at the George Kleine studios last week was John Jarrott, long and familiarly known to the theater-going public of two continents.

Complete Record of Current Films

Believing the classification of film pictures by the nature of their subjects to be of greater importance to the exhibitor than classification by maker, MOTOGRAPHY has adopted this style in listing current films. Exhibitors are urged to make use of this convenient tabulation in making up their programs. Films will be listed as long in advance of their release dates as possible. Film manufacturers are requested to send us their bulletins as early as possible. Reasonable care is used, and the publishers cannot be responsible for errors.

General Program

Monday.

D	11-29	The Night of Souls	Essanay	3,000
D	11-29	The Luring Lights	Kalem	4,000
D	11-29	The Legend of the Poisoned Pool	Lubin	1,000
D	11-29	Just as I Am	Selig	2,000
T	11-29	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 95, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	11-29	One Plus One Equals One	Vitagraph	1,000

Tuesday.

D	11-30	Count Twenty	Biograph	2,000
D	11-30	The Losing Game	Essanay	3,000
C	11-30	Only a Country Girl	Kalem	1,000
C	11-30	Which Is Which	Lubin	1,000
D	11-30	Bad Man Boobs	Selig	1,000
D	11-30	The Mystery of the Empty Room	Vitagraph	2,000

Wednesday.

D	12-1	The Hungarian Nabob	Biograph	4,000
E	12-1	Microscopic Pond Life	Edison	1,000
D	12-1	The Magistrate's Story	Edison	1,000
C	12-1	The Fable of "The Low Down Expert on the Subject of Babies"	Essanay	1,000
D	12-1	A Voice in the Wilderness (No. 2 of the Stingaree Series)	Kalem	2,000
D	12-1	The Taint	Lubin	3,000
C	12-1	A Scandal in Hickville	Vitagraph	1,000

Thursday.

C	12-2	His Emergency Wife	Biograph	1,000
C	12-2	Jack Spratt and the Scales of Love	Essanay	1,000
D	12-2	The Silent Man	Lubin	2,000
D	12-2	The Love of Loti San	Selig	3,000
T	12-2	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 96, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	12-2	The Conquest of Constania	Vitagraph	1,000

Friday.

D	12-3	My Hero	Biograph	1,000
D	12-3	Blade o' Grass	Edison	3,000
D	12-3	Life's Pitfalls	Edison	3,000
C	12-3	The Burglar's Godfather	Essanay	1,000
D	12-3	The Key to a Fortune (No. 6 of the Ventures of Marguerite)	Kalem	1,000
D	12-3	With Stolen Money	Lubin	1,000
C	12-3	Love, Pepper and Sweets	Vim	1,000
C	12-3	The Home Cure	Vitagraph	1,000

Saturday.

D	12-4	The Magistrate's Story	Edison	1,000
E	12-4	Microscopic Pond Life	Edison	500
C	12-4	The Sufferin' Baby	Edison	500
D	12-4	On the Private Wire	Essanay	1,000
D	12-4	The Tramp Telegrapher	Kalem	1,000
C	12-4	And the Parrot Said	Lubin	1,000
D	12-4	A Jungle Revenge	Selig	1,000
D	12-4	Cal Marvin's Wife	Vitagraph	3,000

Monday.

	12-6	No release this week	Essanay
D	12-6	The Money Gulf	Kalem	3,000
D	12-6	The Other Sister	Lubin	1,000
D	12-6	The Run on Percy (No. 5 of the Chronicles of Bloom Center)	Selig	2,000
T	12-6	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 97, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	12-6	Her Last Flirtation	Vitagraph	1,000

Tuesday.

D	12-7	A Woman Without Soul	Biograph	2,000
D	12-7	The Power of Publicity	Essanay	2,000
C	12-7	Minnie the Tiger	Kalem	1,000
C	12-7	Playing the Same Game	Lubin	1,000
D	12-7	Order	Selig	1,000
D	12-7	Wasted Lives	Vitagraph	3,000

Wednesday.

D	12-8	A Poor Relation	Biograph	3,000
D	12-8	Mary	Edison	1,000
C	12-8	Dreamy Dud in Love: Scenic	Essanay	1,000
D	12-8	The Black Hole of Glenranald (No. 3 of the Stingaree Series)	Kalem	2,000
D	12-8	The Web of Hate	Lubin	2,000
C	12-8	Sunny Jim's First Love Affair	Vitagraph	1,000

Thursday.

D	12-9	The Masterful Hireling	Biograph	1,000
C	12-9	The Merry Models	Essanay	1,000
D	12-9	The Ogre and the Girl	Lubin	3,000
C	12-9	Forty-five Minutes from Nowhere	Mina	1,000
T	12-9	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 98, 1915	Selig	1,000
D	12-9	Sam's Sweetheart	Vitagraph	1,000

Friday.

D	12-10	The Painted Lady	Biograph	1,000
D	12-10	Her Inspiration	Edison	3,000
D	12-10	The Escape of Broncho Billy	Essanay	1,000
D	12-10	The Ancient Coin (No. 7 of the Ventures of Marguerite)	Kalem	1,000
D	12-10	The Stool Pigeon	Lubin	1,000
C	12-10	Strangled Harmony	Vim	1,000
C	12-10	Rooney's Pipe Dream	Vitagraph	1,000

Saturday.

D	12-11	The Lone Game	Edison	1,000
D	12-11	Blind Justice	Essanay	3,000
D	12-11	Crossed Wires	Kalem	1,000
C	12-11	Bashful Billie	Lubin	1,000
D	12-11	The Baby and the Leopard	Selig	1,000
C	12-11	Hughey of the Circus	Vitagraph	2,000

V. L. S. E. Program

	Sept. 20	The Circular Staircase	Selig	5,000
	Sept. 27	Tillie's Tomato Surprise	Lubin	6,000
	Sept. 27	The Great Ruby	Lubin	5,000
	Oct. 4	Dust of Egypt	Vitagraph	5,000
	Oct. 11	In the Palace of the King	Essanay	6,000
	Oct. 11	The Valley of Lost Hope	Lubin	5,000
	Oct. 18	A Black Sheep	Selig	5,000
	Oct. 18	The Man Who Couldn't Beat God	Vitagraph	5,000
	Oct. 25	The Rights of Man	Lubin	5,000
	Nov. 1	The Turn of the Road	Vitagraph	5,000
	Nov. 1	The Crimson Wing	Essanay	6,000
	Nov. 8	The Raven	Essanay	5,000
	Nov. 15	Sweet Alyssum	Selig	5,000
	Nov. 15	Heights of Hazard	Vitagraph	5,000
	Nov. 22	The Nation's Peril	Lubin	5,000
	Nov. 29	The Caveman	Vitagraph	5,000
	Dec. 6	The Alster Case	Essanay	5,000
	Dec. 6	The Man's Making	Lubin	5,000
	Dec. 13	I'm Glad My Boy Grew Up to Be a Soldier	Selig	4,000
	Dec. 13	The Price for Folly	Vitagraph	5,000

Mutual Program

Monday.

D	11-29	The Silver Lining	American	2,000
C	11-29	Foiling Father's Foes	Falstaff	1,000
C	11-29	Charlie's Twin Sister	Novelty	1,000

Tuesday.

D	11-30	The Crimson Sabre	Thanhouser	2,000
S	11-30	See America First, No. 12	Gaumont	500
C	11-30	Keeping Up with the Joneses	Gaumont	500
C	11-30	Billy Van Deusen and the Merry Widow	Beauty	1,000

Wednesday.

C	12-1	Lessons in Love	Rialto	3,000
C	12-1	Betty Burton, M. D.	Novelty	1,000

Thursday.

D	12-2	Stanley Among the Voo Doo Worshipers	Centaur	2,000
C	12-2	Checking Charlie's Child	Falstaff	1,000
T	12-2	Mutual Weekly No. 48	Mutual	1,000

Friday.

C	12-3	Broadcloth and Buckskin	Mustang	2,000
C	12-3	Spider Barlow Cuts In	American	1,000
C	12-3	A Shot Gun Romance	Cub	1,000

Saturday.

C	12-4	Film Tempo	Mustang	3,000
C	12-4	Making Over Father	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	12-5	The Stab	Reliance	2,000
C	12-5	A Tangle in Hearts	Casion	1,000
D	12-5	The House Party at Carson Manor	Thanhouser	1,000

Monday.

D	12-6	The Water Carrier of San Juan	American	2,000
C	12-6	Minnie, the Mean Manicurist	Falstaff	1,000
C	12-6	A Janitor's Joyful Job	Novelty	1,000

Tuesday.

D	12-7	His Vocation	Thanhouser	2,000
S	12-7	See America First, No. 13	Gaumont	500
C	12-7	Keeping Up with the Joneses	Gaumont	500
C	12-7	Pretenses	Beauty	1,000

Wednesday.

D	12-8	Her Mother's Daughter	Reliance	3,000
N	12-8	The Army and Navy Game	Novelty	1,000

Thursday.

D	12-9	The Winning of Jess	Centaur	2,000
C	12-9	Clarence Cheats at Croquet	Falstaff	1,000
T	12-9	Mutual Weekly No. 49	Mutual	1,000

Friday.

D	12-10	There's Good in the Worst of Us	Mustang	2,000
D	12-10	A Broken Cloud	American	1,000
C	12-10	Doctor Jerry	Cub	1,000

Saturday.

D	12-11	Curly	Clipper	3,000
C	12-11	Nobody's Home	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	12-12	The Wayward Son	Reliance	2,000
C	12-12	Curing Cissy	Casino	1,000
D	12-12	Her Confession	Thanhouser	1,000

Universal Program

Monday.

D	11-29	The Supreme Test	Broadway	5,000
C	11-29	Operating on Cupid	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

D	11-30	The Phantom Fortune	Gold Seal	3,000
	11-30	No release this week	Rex
C	11-30	Safety First and Last	Imp	1,000

Wednesday.

C	12-1	He Was Only a Bathing Suit Salesman	Victor	3,000
C	12-1	Lizzie's Watery Grave	L Ko	1,000
T	12-1	Animated Weekly No. 195	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

D	12-2	Gilded Youth	Laemmle	3,000
	12-2	No release this week	Big U
C	12-2	The Three Jeannettes	Powers	500
E	12-2	The Life of the Salamander	Powers	500

Friday.

D	12-3	His Good Name	Powers	2,000
D	12-3	The Devil and Idle Hands	Laemmle	1,000

Saturday.

D	12-4	The Connecting Link	Bison	2,000
	12-4	No release this week	Powers
C	12-4	Mrs. Prune's Boarding House	Joker	1,000

Sunday.

D	12-5	Under a Shadow	Rex	2,000
D	12-5	Does It End Right?	Laemmle	1,000
C	12-5	A Saphead's Revenge	L Ko	1,000
D	12-5	When a Queen Loved O'Rourke (No. 2 of the New Adventures of Terence O'Rourke)	Universal	2,000

Monday.

D	12-6	The White Scar	Broadway	5,000
C	12-6	Their Quiet Honeymoon	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

D	12-7	Idols of Clay	Gold Seal	3,000
	12-7	No Release This Week	Rex
C	12-7	Slim, Fat or Medium?	Victor	1,000

Wednesday.

D	12-8	The Awakening of Patsey	Victor	1,000
C	12-8	Sin on the Sabbath	L-Ko	2,000
T	12-8	Animated Weekly No. 196	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

	12-9	No Release This Week	Laemmle
D	12-9	The Sacrifice of Jonathan Grey	Big U	3,000
C	12-9	The Frolic of the Marionettes	Powers	500
E	12-9	Nature's Monstrosities	Powers	500

Friday.

C	12-10	The Little Lady Across the Way	Imp	2,000
D	12-10	The Power of Fascination	Rex	1,000
C	12-10	Keeping It Dark	Nestor	1,000

Saturday.

D	12-11	The Lion's Ward	Bison	3,000
	12-11	No Release This Week	Powers
	12-11	Title Not Reported	Joker

Sunday.

D	12-12	Juror Number Seven	Rex	2,000
	12-12	No Release This Week	Laemmle
C	12-12	Lizzie's Shattered Dreams	L-Ko	1,000
D	12-12	The Road to Paradise (No. 3 of the New Adventures of Terence O'Rourke)	Universal	2,000

Miscellaneous Features

The Whirl of Life	Cort Film Corp.	6,000
A Woman's Honor	Great Northern	4,000
Russian Battlefields	Indian Film Co.	4,000
Concealed Truth	Ivan Film Productions	5,000
Life Without Soul	Ocean Film Corporation	5,000
Thou Shalt Not Kill	Circle Film Corp.	5,000
For Her Son	Great Northern	4,000

Associated Service.

Released week of

Nov.	29	The Yellow Streak	Santa Barbara	2,000
Nov.	29	The Comeback	Ramona	2,000
Nov.	29	The Bitter Dregs	Alhambra	2,000
Nov.	29	The Rescue	Empire	2,000
Nov.	29	Ike With the German Army	Atla	1,000
Nov.	29	Elsie's Ambition	Federal	1,000
Nov.	29	Aunt Tillie's Elopement	Banner	1,000
Nov.	29	Rube's Delirium	Deer	1,000

Fox Film Corporation

Released Week of

Sept.	20	Regeneration		5,000
Sept.	27	The Wonderful Adventure		5,000
Oct.	4	Sin		5,000
Oct.	11	The Little Gypsy		5,000
Oct.	18	The Soul of Broadway		5,000
Oct.	25	The Family Stain		5,000
Nov.	1	Carmen		6,000
Nov.	8	The Blindness of Devotion		5,000
Nov.	11	A Woman's Past		5,000
Nov.	15	A Woman's Past		5,000
Nov.	22	Her Mother's Secret		5,000
Nov.	29	The Galley Slave		5,000

Kleine-Edison

Released week of

Oct.	6	Vanity Fair	Edison	7,000
Oct.	13	The Magic Skin	Edison	5,000
Oct.	20	The Green Cloak	Kleine	5,000
Nov.	3	The Sentimental Lady	Kleine	5,000
Nov.	10	Children of Eve	Edison	5,000
Nov.	17	The Politicians	Kleine	5,000
Dec.	1	Canavan	Kleine	5,000
Dec.	1	The Danger Signal	Kleine	5,000

Kriterion

Released Week of

Nov.	29	The Witness	Paragon	2,000
Nov.	29	Billy Puts One Over	Santa Barbara	1,000
Nov.	29	Big-Hearted John	Alhambra	2,000
Nov.	29	Sherlock Holmes Boob Detective	Santa Barbara	1,000
Nov.	29	The Keeper of the Flock	Santa Barbara	2,000
Nov.	29	The Unloaded 45	C. K.	1,000
Nov.	29	The Western Border	Monty	2,000
Nov.	29	Catching a Speeder	Punch	1,000
Nov.	29	Father and Son	Trump	2,000
Nov.	29	Such a War	Pyramid	1,000
Nov.	29	A Mask, a Ring and a Pair of Handcuffs	Navajo	2,000
Nov.	29	Syd, the Bum Detective	Alhambra	1,000

Metro Features.

Released week of

Oct.	4	Song of the Wage Slave	Metro	5,000
Oct.	11	The Stork's Nest	Metro	5,000
Oct.	18	The Final Judgment	Metro	5,000
Oct.	25	My Madonna	Metro	5,000
Nov.	1	Tables Turned	Metro	5,000
Nov.	8	Pennington's Choice	Metro	5,000
Nov.	15	The Woman Pays	Metro	5,000
Nov.	22	One Million Dollars	Metro	5,000
Nov.	29	Barbara Frietchie	Metro	5,000
Dec.	6	A Yellow Streak	Metro	5,000

Mutual Master-Pictures.

Released week of

Nov.	4	The Seventh Noon	Mutual	7,000
Nov.	11	The End of the Road	American	5,000
Nov.	18	Inspiration	Thanhouser	5,000
Nov.	25	The Strife Eternal	Mutual	5,000
Dec.	2	The Forbidden Adventure	Mutual	5,000
Dec.	9	The Buzzard's Shadow	Mutual	5,000

Paramount Features.

Released week of

Nov.	22	Chimmie Fadden Out West	Jesse L. Lasky	4,000
Nov.	22	Paramount News Pictures	Paramount	1,000
Nov.	29	Paramount News Pictures	Paramount	1,000
Nov.	29	The Prince and the Pauper	Famous Players	5,000
Dec.	2	Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo	Lasky	5,000

Pathe.

Released Week of

Dec.	6	New Adventures of Wallingford No. 10	Pathe	2,000
Dec.	6	Picturesque Hanoi (French Indo-China)	Photocolor	1,000
Dec.	6	Sugar Cane Growing (Mascarene Islands)	Globe	1,000
Dec.	6	Pathe News No. 98	Pathe	1,000
Dec.	6	Pathe News No. 99	Pathe	1,000
Dec.	6	A Foozle at a Tea Party	Phunphilms	1,000
Dec.	6	Max Hits the High Spots	Punch	2,000
Dec.	6	A Rose Among the Briers	Pathecolor	3,000
Dec.	6	The Greater Will	Gold Rooster	5,000
Dec.	6	Deep Dyed Dubs	Starlight	1,000

Triangle Film Corporation.

Released week of

Dec.	12	The Lily and the Rose; Lillian Gish, Rozsika Dolly	Fine Arts	5,000
Dec.	12	Aloha Oe; Willard Mack	Triangle-Kay-Bee	5,000
Dec.	12	The Village Scandal; Raymond Hitchcock, Roscoe Arbuckle	Triangle-Keystone	2,000
Dec.	12	The Great Vacuum Robbery; Charles H. Murray	Triangle-Keystone	2,000
Dec.	19	A Submarine Pirate; Syd Chaplin	Triangle-Keystone	3,000
Dec.	19	Jordon Is a Hard Road; Dorothy Gish, Frank Campeau	Fine Arts	5,000
Dec.	19	The Winged Idol; Katharine Kaelred	Triangle-Kay-Bee	5,000
Dec.	19	Crooked to the End; Fred Mace	Triangle-Keystone	2,000

World Features.

Released week of

Nov.	29	Not Guilty	Triumph	5,000
Nov.	29	The Sins of Society	Brady	5,000
Dec.	6	The Warning	Triumph	5,000
Dec.	6	Creeping Tides	Equitable	5,000
Dec.	6	The Gray Mask	Shubert	5,000

Brief Stories of the Week's Film Releases

General Program

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 95—HEARST-SELIG—NOVEMBER 29.—Thousands crowd Panama Exposition grounds to see Liberty Bell on its way to Philadelphia, San Diego; boy scouts gather at King's Park where members of various camps go through competitive drills, Jamaica, L. I.; funeral of Father Reaney, for years engaged on Uncle Sam's big sea fighters, is held with military honors, New York; syndicate begins work on million-dollar race course, Tia Juana, Mex.; novel combination boat and motor car rolls over road to landing, christened and then enters the water for maiden voyage, San Francisco; sixty-eight-mile gale strikes America's largest city and overturns wagons, halts traffic and sends pedestrians flying for shelter, New York; twenty-four of the forty-eight monster searchlights of the Panama Pacific Exposition are sold to the Russian Government, San Francisco; Maine wins most points of eleven teams in inter-collegiate cross-country race over six-mile course, but Yale man is first over tape, Boston, Mass.; crowd at Harvest Festival watches firemen give actual demonstration of life-saving methods when hotel is set ablaze, Atlanta, Ga.

Universal Animated Weekly No. 195—UNIVERSAL—DECEMBER 1.—Tornado leaves wreckage in Great Bend, Kansas; boy scouts in field at Jamaica, L. I.; fire department's efficiency test in Atlanta Ga.; Orange Day fete, New Orleans, La.; mine disaster at Ravensdale, Washington, kills thirty-five; women life savers give exhibition on Ocean Park, Calif.; the University of Illinois students in annual sack fight at Champaign, Ill.; Glenn Martin takes naval reserve officer on first flight in war biplane at San Diego, Calif.; Brand Whitlock, envoy, and his wife arrives from Belgium; French war carries army observers aloft to spy on enemy; loading and launching under sea weapon aboard U. S. destroyer, Ericson; U. S. fight Haytians at Port Au Prince, Hayti; Cartoon by Hy Mayer.

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 96—HEARST-SELIG—DECEMBER 2.—Monmouth Country Club holds fox chase, Red Bank, N. J.; children in San Francisco take a December swim in out-door pool; Atlanta pony farm owned by D. O. Smith furnishes children with free mounts; torpedo drawn to headquarters of Navy Defense League in New York and put on display; first cavalry of Chicago gallops thirty miles a day on annual test required by the government; J. M. Walker arrives in San Francisco completing last lap of his hike from Boston to the Pacific Coast, setting new world's record for pedestrians; canine bench exhibition at Boston, Mass.; Pacific coast suffrage leaders arrive in Boston seeking signatures to petition for amendment to Federal Constitution; actual war pictures of Serbian retreat before Teuton drive by staff photographer Varges.

The Burglar Godfather—ESSANAY—DECEMBER 3.—Featuring G. M. Anderson. The crook and his pal gain entrance to a home. They rob the man of the house of his personal belongings, then proceed to the upstairs, where they discover his wife, the mother of a new-born babe. The crook's heart is softened, and against the will of his pal, leaves the stolen property on a table. The crook later obtains employment in the factory of the man whose home he entered. He is not recognized until his pal reveals his past life. Instead of discharging the crook, his employer gives him a chance to start life anew, and furthermore asks him to be his child's godfather.

The Money Gulf—(TWO REELS)—KALEM—DECEMBER 6.—Featuring Alice Hollister and Harry Millarde. On the day of their marriage Ruth discovers that her sweetheart, Jasper King, is the proprietor of a gambling establishment and she denounces him and refuses to become his wife until he has given his ill-gotten wealth to charity. Ruth's brother Byron desters his wife because he fears his father will disinherit him for marrying beneath his station and attempts by gambling to win enough money to pay his debts. Jasper comes to the boy's rescue and when Ruth learns of her sweetheart's visit to the gambling house she is heartbroken. Later Byron's manhood awakened he confesses his guilt and Ruth thus learning of her sweetheart's visit to the gambling house forgives him.

The Other Sister—LUBIN—DECEMBER 6.—Featuring Joseph Smiley and Lillie Leslie. Sybil, a butterfly and the sister of Jane Forrest, marries Henry Arnold, the owner and manager of The Evening Blade, with whom Jane is secretly in love. Sybil finds life with Arnold rather dull and goes out with Donald Paulding, a former admirer and man-about-town, and upon their return home Jane surprises them in embrace in the hall way. At this point Arnold returns home and Jane saves Sybil by declaring Paulding had come with her. Later Sybil plans to elope with Donald, but Jane learning of this determines to thwart it. At a dance she appears stylishly gowned and ensnares Paulding and Sybil discovers him proposing to her sister. Realizing her mistake she rushes to her room and later when her husband returns she rushes into his arms.

Run On Percy—(Another of "The Chronicles of Bloom Center" series)—(TWO REELS)—SELIG—DECEMBER 6.—This story concerns Percy Pinkham, who appeals to his uncle for a loan and is promised a fortune, providing he marries within twenty-four hours. When Bloom Center learns of Percy's pending fortune, the young man is fairly mobbed by the unmarried ladies of the community. He finally wins Margaret Tate's promise to wed him, and he receives a deed to one of the best farms in the country. A full review appears on another page of this issue.

N. G. C.

The Power of Publicity—(TWO REELS)—ESSANAY—DECEMBER 7.—Edna Morris, the daughter of a banker, is left penniless when her father dies from the shock upon learning that his cashier has decamped with the bank's funds. She secures a position as assistant to Velma Tolliver, editor of the woman's page on the "News," and whose brother is owner and editor of the paper. One night Edna, dressed as a boy, hides in a room and overhears the conversation of some political crooks. She is discovered, but manages to escape with her "scoop." Tolliver, the editor, admires her courage and asks her to become his boss for life.

Minnie the Tiger—KALEM—DECEMBER 7.—Featuring Bud Duncan and Ethel Teare. Ethel promises to wed the captor of Minnie, an escaped man-eating tiger, and the count, who professes to be the greatest hunter in the world, and Bud set out to capture Minnie. When the count encounters Minnie he immediately takes to the tall trees. Bud meets the tiger and he finds urgent business elsewhere. The count reaches Ethel's home first and declares that he has killed the beast. Minnie takes a notion to appear on the scene and promptly the count flees with Minnie close behind. Ethel convinced that she always loved Bud anyway, falls into his arms.

Playing the Same Game—LUBIN—DECEMBER 7. Featuring D. L. Don. Mrs. Recentwed receives a note from one "Harry" Leiber and it is found by her husband, who becomes jealous. A friend tells him that the only way to punish his wife is to play her same game, and accordingly when his wife, that afternoon, enters the parlor with her college chum "Harry" Leiber otherwise known as Harriet Leiber, she discovers him making love to Becky. A bruised, tattered Mr. Recentwed was the result, but later he is forgiven by his wife.

Orders — SELIG — DECEMBER 7. — Featuring Thomas Santschi and Edith Johnson. Tom Daly, a traffic officer, although his child is dying, is ordered to stick to his duty and stop all traffic on the corner as a fire breaks out. A physician rushing to save his child in an automobile is stopped and also the automobile of the owner of the building is held up by Daly according to orders. Later when at the bedside of his stricken child he is told that there is such a thing as adhering too closely to rules, and is asked to send in his resignation. However, when it is told that he also stopped the automobile of the doctor en route to save his child's life, the story touches the heart of the police chief, and Daly is promoted, while the baby recovers its health.

Mary—EDISON—DECEMBER 8.—Margaret Prussing is featured as the girl who makes a great sacrifice in order that her friend, Laura, may find happiness with the man she loves, but with whom she has had a misunderstanding. The artist justly feeling that Laura does not wish to marry him puts her out of his mind and later proposes to Mary, but she, upon learning that Laura still loves Delevan, refuses him. Carlton King plays the part of the artist.

A Mix-Up in Black—EDISON—DECEMBER 8.—A one-reel comedy featuring Sally Crute and Raymond McKee, directed by Will Louis. Bob Banderbilt and Ann Whitney meet by chance. Both consider it destiny for they are mutually attracted. They part neglecting to ask for details so important to future meetings as names and addresses. Bob attends his club that night and takes his place in the dress rehearsal for a minstrel show. He has an engagement to attend a dinner and in order to catch the train leaves wearing his make-up. This leads to laughable situations which culminate in Bob and Ann meeting once more and thereupon announcing their engagement.

Dreamy Dud in Love—ESSANAY—DECEMBER 8.—Cartoon by Wallace Carlson, showing Dreamy Dud, who becomes susceptible to the charms of a little girl who makes eyes at him. He is sitting on a box singing lullabies to her doll when he is awakened by his father, who compliments him on his extremely fine voice. This reel also contains 500 feet of scenes taken in the Canadian Rockies.

The Black Hole of Glenranald—(TWO REELS)—KALEM.—DECEMBER 8. — An episode of the "Stingaree" series featuring True Boardman. MacBean, the owner of the bank at Glenranald, sets a trap for Stingaree, because of the huge reward offered for his capture. Stingaree learns of this trap through the loquaciousness of Fergus, a clerk, and turns the tables upon MacBean. After rifling the safe and beating off the mounted police, Stingaree and Howie, his partner, flee taking with them Fergus. Fergus makes an attempt to capture the bushranger, but Stingaree's horse throws the boy and on regaining consciousness he finds himself bound to a post and confronting death. Later the boy is found, but a note which Stingaree has pinned to a post saves the boy from disgrace when his employer and the troopers appear on the scene.

The Web of Fate—(TWO REELS)—LUBIN—DECEMBER 8.—Featuring L. C. Shumway, Melvin Mayo and Helen Eddy. Louisa Pardoni's father is killed by the members of a secret organization at the head of which is Otho Benfilo, whose son knows nothing of his father's connections. Louise swears vengeance and later when she meets Antonio Benfilo in a cafe, where she is dancing, she secretes a bracelet in his pocket and then sets up a cry of thief. The bracelet is found in his pocket and a free-for-all fight ensues. Antonio is severely injured and Louisa takes him to her home and nurses him back to health, her hate having turned to love. Later he is accused of having killed a policeman in the fight and is about to be killed when Louisa imposes her body between and takes the ball intended for him. He escapes, but remembering that Louisa cared for him when he was unable to care for himself, returns and with her in his arms he climbs the hill out of the shadows of hate into the sunlight of love.

The Merry Models—ESSANAY—DECEMBER 9.—Featuring Ben Turpin, Margaret Joslin, Harry Todd and Carrie Turpin. When the manager of the Brodiah cafe receives a telegram informing him that the marble statues which he ordered were destroyed by fire, he employs Bloggey and Mustang Pete to pose as statues in his cafe. The patrons are deceived and compliment the manager for his taste in the selection of the statuary. All goes well until both the wives of Bloggey and Mustang enter the cafe and recognize their husbands. A riot ensues in which the place is completely wrecked, and the two statues are chased home by the angry wives.

The Ogre and the Girl—(THREE REELS)—LUBIN—DECEMBER 9.—Featuring Bernard Seigel, Kempton Green, Geraldine O'Brien and Clarence Jay Elmer in a story of a girl who is encouraged by her parents to marry the Ogre. She encounters her ideal lover in the person of a young surveyor and after many exciting incidents they are finally married. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Faith and Fortune—(THREE REELS)—EDISON—DECEMBER 10.—Featuring Curtis Cooksey and Grace Williams. In this story the brother, a failure, preys upon his sister's devotion and sacrifice. He is finally killed for a murder of which he is innocent, while his sister, Molly, falls in love with Jerry Mason, a rugged Westerner, his partner in a gold claim. Finally Molly has a chance to prove her love for Jerry by saving him from the noose. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

The Escape of Broncho Billy—ESSANAY—DECEMBER 10.—Featuring G. M. Anderson. Broncho Billy is in love with the rancher's daughter. Her father disapproves of their affair and one day quarrels with Broncho. A few days later the rancher drops dead while at work. Broncho Billy's rival discovers the body and seeing an opportunity to implicate Broncho, shoots the rancher's body. Broncho Billy is accused of the murder and is in jail awaiting his sentence when a child who had seen the act committed, tells who fired the shot and Broncho Billy is given his liberty.

The Ancient Coin—KALEM—DECEMBER 10.—An episode of the "Ventures of Marguerite" featuring Marguerite Courtot. Dangler, who poses

Your Personal Subscription

for

Motography

America's Leading Film Magazine

$3.00

a year

would prove both a convenience and a means of real profit. Each issue is of vital interest and practical value to every man in the motion picture business. If you miss one copy, you may miss an article or an idea that would have a vital effect on your work.

As a regular subscriber, you would be able to read Motography carefully and systematically at your leisure, and to preserve a file of copies for reference and for binding.

Bound volumes of Motography form the best foundation for a reference library.

We suggest that you have the magazine sent to your residence.

Address

Motography

Monadnock Bldg., Chicago

as an agent for a foreign government, seeks to marry Marguerite and Enright, her old friend, dislikes the girl's sweetheart and tries to get her to dismiss him. Bob, her sweetheart, owns an ancient coin and passing an old beggar one day he gives it to him by mistake. Later he finds his coin in the possession of Marguerite's butler and this man informs Bob that Dangler had given it to him. Later Bob trails Dangler to an old shack and there discovers that Dangler and the old beggar are the same. Later Bob, together with Marguerite and a policeman, confronts the beggar as he stands on the street corner and Bob sweeps off his disguise and the man is dragged to the police station.

The Stool Pigeon—Lubin—December 10.—Featuring L. C. Shumway and Velma Whitman. Hickey acts as a police spy and threatened with the loss of his source of incoume because he is growing less useful to the police, he frames up a robbery and Joe King, a laborer, is the unfortunate whom he picks for the scapegoat. He notifies the police and King is arrested and later Benny is seen by Hickey robbing a woman's purse and he is also arrested. King and Benny are convicted on the same day and on the way to the penitentiary King tells Benny how he was tricked by Hickey. Benny manages to release both himself and his companion and they flee in opposite directions. Later King returns home just as Hickey is forcing his obnoxious attentions upon King's pretty wife and King deals him a smashing blow in the face and he falls three stories to the sidewalk. Later dying he confesses and King is set free.

Blind Justice—(Three Reels)—Essanay—December 11.—Featuring Henry B. Walthall and Elizabeth Burbridge with a strong cast. Elsie Harding becomes interested in the outcasts of the slums, and induces her father to take her to the night court. Here among other derelicts, she sees Jack Langdon, and attracted by him, asks her father to give him a position. Six months later finds Jack making good and greatly interested in Elsie. Their friendship is opposed by her father, so one night they elope. Mr. Harding is indignant, but as weeks pass and Jack proves to be a man of great business ability, he is reconciled. Finally Jack admits that when Mr. Harding found him in the slums he was merely gathering material for a book, and proves to be a well-known author.

Crossed Wires — Kalem — December 11.—An episode of the "Hazards of Helen" railroad series featuring Helen Gibson. Crossed telephone wires enables Helen to overhear a plot between Joe and Bill, escaped convicts, to join a number of Chinese who are being smuggled into the country in a freight train. She notifies the detectives and they capture the Chinese and take their place in the freight car. Helen, who has been following them in an auto, leaps from the speeding auto to the side ladder of the racing train and pursues the fugitives over the roofs of the car. They try to hurl her to the ground, but she levels a pistol at them and compels them to leap into the auto, which is driven by one of the detectives. Later Helen accompanies the officials when they raid the rendezvous of the smugglers and assists in capturing the entire band.

Bashful Billie—Lubin—December 11.—Featuring Billie Reeves and Carrie Reynolds. Billie, a bashful bachelor, at a reception meets the beautiful Miss Frances Walton and unaccustomed to ballroom chatter makes many slips. Restaurant food brings indigestion and Billie consults a physician, who recommends exercise and the name of Dr. Walton, a physical culture expert. When the doctor arrives Billie discovers the physical culture instructor is the beautiful Frances Walton of the reception. Gradually Billie falls in love with Miss Walton and with tremendous effort he hikes himself to the marriage license bureau and returns determined to win her on the next visit. When she comes he has not the courage to propose and in the excitement he drops the marriage license and Frances finds it and she summons a minister and they corner Billie in his gym and with the butler as a witness they recite "Love, Honor and Obey."

The Baby and the Leopard—Selig—December 11.—Featuring Edith Johnson and Lafayette McKee. Carl Snyder, an animal trapper, stops at the home of Fred Herman, a farmer in Africa, who lives with his wife and baby. Snyder tells Mrs. Herman that her painting talent is too great to be hidden in the wilderness and she agrees to go with him to the city. On the night of the elopement Snyder releases a wild leopard and lays a trail of meat to the room in which Herman and the baby are sleeping. Herman awakens, misses his wife and starts to search for her and the leopard steals toward the baby. Herman comes upon his wife just as Snyder is trying to kiss her and is just about to kill Snyder when they perceive the baby's peril. Herman rushes to his home and shoots the beast, while Snyder takes advantage of this action to make his escape, and Herman forgives his wife.

Mutual Program

Seeing America First—(Split Reel)—Gaumont—November 23. — A visit to Yale University, through the campus, a glimpse of the new bowl, and a trip to Hartford with the Mutual traveler.

Keeping Up With the Joneses, the animated cartoon drawn by Harry Palmer, occupies the second part of the film. In it, Pa McGinnis is again sacrificed on the altar of Ma's ambition to get ahead of their rivals, the Joneses.

See America First—(Split Reel)—Gaumont—November 30.—In the first part of this film the Mutual Traveler shows her spectators the historic Lake Mohonk. The scenes include many wonder spots between New York City and the lake.

On the same reel is "Keeping Up With the Joneses." The followers of the McGinnis family, still ardently striving to keep up with the Joneses, will have an unusual treat.

A Shotgun Romance—Cub—December 3.—Featuring George Ovey. Grace and Jerry are in love, but the latter has to overcome the enmity of his girl's father. They finally succeed in eloping to a spot in the woods, but are prevented from osculatory exercise by the interruption of two toughs. Father and Mr. I. M. Short, father's choice for his daughter, also meet with discomfiture at the hands of the toughs, being forced by them to exchange clothes. Some hunters then figure in the troubles of Short and Father, and at the end it is the privilege of Jerry to rescue the two men from their pursuers. Of course, Jerry and Grace receive the parental blessing.

Minnie, the Mean Manicurist—FALSTAFF—DECEMBER 6.—Two barbers, while arguing on the subject of "Votes for women" are so unpleasant to a woman worker that they arouse the ire of a customer. The latter tells the woman that if she can prevent the talkative barbers from voting against the suffrage amendment he will gladly contribute $500 to "The Cause." Minnie, the manicurist, comes to the aid of her colleague with a bright plan. This scheme finally works its full havoc and the two barbers are arrested. Fate arranges things so that they are brought before the judge who had offered the reward on the day before election. The barbers are forced to spend Election Day and many others behind the bars, while Minnie collects the $500.

The Water Carrier of San Juan—(TWO REELS)—AMERICAN—DECEMBER 6.—Featuring Winnifred Greenwood, Edward Coxen and George Field. This is a story within a story in which the owner of an eating house in San Juan tells the story of Romela, the water carrier of San Juan, to all newcomers. For a longer review see another page of this issue.
J. C. G.

A Janitor's Joyful Job—NOVELTY—DECEMBER 6.—"Fatty," the janitor, and Count Melville de Rose both are in love with Melinda Rousseau, who lives with her aunt. Melinda favors "Fatty," but her aunt does not share her views. As the count's tango lessons shake the walls and cause the janitor's hat rack to fall over, he puts it securely in place with a long spike. This penetrates the partition and enters the small of Melville's back. The count goes into spasms and his rival is called to the rescue. Early the next morning an inebriated gentleman hangs his hat on a gas jet. The smoke wakes the terrified dwellers. "Fatty" rescues Melinda. They are attacked in the hall by the jealous count, but make their escape. Alone at last, Melinda rewards her hero.

Pretenders—BEAUTY—DECEMBER 7. — Featuring John Sheehan and Carol Hollaway. Steve, a bank policeman, meets Mary Guffy. Steve tells the girl he is an officer in a bank, while Mary tells him that her father is a big engineer. The two become friends, a romance buds, then blooms, and they are about to be married, and then the horrible truth leaks out. Steve is an officer in the bank—a bluecoat officer with a shiny star, while Mary's father is none other than Mike Guffy, the 200-pound engineer in charge of the steam roller. However, the two are wedded and take up their abode under the Guffy roof.

His Vocation—(TWO REELS)—THANHOUSER—DECEMBER 7.—The girl falls in love with the man who saves her from drowning, but this man, who is a circus clown, goes off without even mentioning his love. After a long time of trying to forget, the circus comes to the girl's home town. Her baby sister, who has looked forward to attending the circus and seeing the clowns, falls ill. Finally it comes to the point where the doctor says his little patient must have any wish granted that will superinduce natural sleep and thus avert probable death. As the baby longs for a clown. Big Sister sends to the circus manager for one at any price. The girl's lover, although unrecognized, is the clown whose antics put the child's mind into receptivity for sleep. Thus the lovers are reunited, and the young man finds that his sweetheart is above discrimination of "caste" or vocation.

Stanley in Darkest Africa—(TWO REELS)—Seventh and concluding episode of "Stanley in Africa" series—CENTAUR—DECEMBER 9. In the hasty flight for shelter from a tiger, Ada manages to elude her captor. She unsuspectingly walks into the camp of the Babusosses, a band of crocodile worshippers. Ada commits an act of desecration to the idol. She is later rescued by Jack, her lover. Andrea sees this from afar off. Holding a peculiar power over the Babusosses, Andrea has them tie Jack to a stake, and sends for a witch doctor to marry the girl to him (Andrea). Preparations for the ceremony are well under way when Stanley's party arrives and a pitched battle takes place. The party is compelled to retreat and Stanley is captured. Jack and Ada escape. Andrea now sends word to Ada that unless she will surrender herself to him, he will put Stanley to death. At last, at their wits end, they meet Livingston. The forces of the two parties unite in routing the Babusosses, Stanley and Livingston meet, Ada and Jack are united, and the expedition ends successfully.

A Broken Cloud—AMERICAN—DECEMBER 10.—Featuring Vivian Rich and Alfred Vosburgh. Colonel Armstrong desires that his daughter Nellie marry Robert Joffrey, a lawyer. Nellie, however, dislikes the attorney, and loves Joe Bradley, an author. Joffrey arranges to have Nellie discovered in a compromising position and then plans to rescue her and in this way force her to marry him, but the girl is saved by Bradley and he obtains Colonel Armstrong's consent to marry his daughter. However, Armstrong is seized with an attack of heart failure and just before he dies pens a note to his daughter asking her to marry Joe. Joffrey changes the note to read "Joffrey," but his perfidy is discovered and happiness is in sight for Nellie and Joe.

There's Good in the Worst of Us—(TWO REELS)—MUSTANG—DECEMBER 10. — Featuring Anna Little and E. Forrest Taylor. Carol Danforth comes from the East to live in a western state and here she meets with Black Pete, owner of a notorious dive and den on civilization's border. Paul Winsley, her fiance, objects to the friendship between Black Pete and the girl. Ainsley visits the den and Black Pete reminds him of a promise made long ago that he would shoot him on sight. Ainsley flees and is killed by a fall from his horse and later Black Pete tells Carol how years before at college Paul had wronged his sister and as Black Pete tells his story Carol begins to realize that she loves him.

Nobody's Home—BEAUTY—DECEMBER 11.—Featuring Neva Gerber and Frank Borzage. Mabel's father objects to her love affair with Dick. The boy receives a letter from his father telling him that when he is married and settled down that he will start him in business. Dick and Mabel elope and in order to put up a prosperous appearance he rents a house from a real estate agent for one day. Dick's father arrives in town intending to buy a home for his son and his bride and in the meantime Mabel's mother has brought Mabel's father around to her way of thinking and they also conclude to buy a house for the young folks. Mabel's father and mother and Dick's parents set out to look at a house and it is the very structure in which the young couple are living on their one-day lease. However, all ends happily when parental bank rolls are pooled and the ease and comfort of the young folks are assured.

Curly—(THREE REELS) — CLIPPER — DECEMBER 11.—Featuring Lottie Pickford and Willliam Russell with a strong cast. Arthur Brewster, a wealthy young man and worker in the slums, comes upon Curly, a water lily in the mire of evil surroundings. She becomes his devoted friend and later he discovers that she is the rightful heiress to a fortune left by her grandfather. For a longer review see another page of this issue.
J. C. G.

Curing Cissy—CASINO—DECEMBER 12.—Cissy is athletic to such a degree that she annoys her father and causes Willie Waffles, who adores her, to pine away while contemplating the hopelessness of her suit. Dad is resolved to cure her. He persuades Oswald Boomer, a down-and-out actor, to pose as the leader of the "Back to Nature" cult. So Oswald, Cissy, Willie and Cissy's father don primitive clothes and take up their abode in a tent. The first night is full of disturbances. Father takes a shot at some dogs barking nearby, but succeeds in killing a cow, as he learns when the farmer turns up to collect damages. The farmer becomes quite threatening, but the day is saved when Willie thrashes him. Then it is found that Oswald has been caught in a noose trap which he had set for a bear the night before. With her idol shattered and Willie elevated in her eyes by his brave conduct, Cissy falls upon the neck of her faithful sweetheart.

The Stab—(TWO REELS)—RELIANCE—DECEMBER 12.—George Landon's wife, Ruth, visits Pauline, an old chum, and entrusts their child to Alice, a neighbor. Pauline is an actress, and Ruth fits perfectly into her friend's environment. Charles Clarke, a rich young good-for-nothing, falls in love with Ruth. Knowing that her husband is coming to take her home, Ruth warns Clarke not to come near the house. After a short quarrel between husband and wife, Landon steps outside on the balcony. Clarke, in a drunken rage, thinking that Ruth has jilted him, enters the room and kills her. At Landon's trial, Pauline's testimony frees him. He then returns home to his child, and to Alice, Little Alice's substitute mother consoles the heart-broken man.

Her Confession—THANHOUSER—DECEMBER 12.—This story centers about the love of an unsophisticated young country girl for an artist that

The Business Obligation

At the lowest estimate for weekly program rentals the subscribers to MOTOGRAPHY spend every week the astounding sum of

$417,860.00

If they use one feature each week in addition to their service, at a fair price for features, this sum is increased weekly to

$893,260.00

If these theaters spend a few dollars each week for supplies, posters, oil, rewinds, heralds, etc., the sum total of the average weekly expenditures of MOTOGRAPHY'S subscribers is

OVER

$1,000,000.00

exclusive of salaries, rent, light, etc.

To talk to this Million Dollar Crowd every week

Plant Your Advertisement

in

Motography

she meets and poses for. The man returns to the city, promising to send for her later so that they may be married. Months pass and there is no word. The time comes when to remain unwed means disgrace and ruin for the girl, and a broken heart for her mother from whom the affair has been kept secret. The deluded creature then journeys to the city, finds her faithless lover, and, in a fit of desperation, as she witnesses the artist's fascination for another woman, stabs him. Later, in a cell, the poor girl dies of grief after confessing to a priest.

The Secret Agent—(Three Reels)—Rialto—December 15.—Featuring Robert T. Haines. The story of the efforts of a secret service agent, Wilbur Clark, to prevent a valuable set of diamonds reaching America without paying duty. The diamonds are in the possession of the girl Clark loves, who is carrying them for her aunt. It is difficult for Clark to believe that his sweetheart is a party to the deception. In Paris, the secret of the diamonds has been learned by James Tawney, an international society thief. When Clark and the girl set sail, he also is on board and sees an opportunity to take the jewels from their hidding place. At last Clark confronts the thief, only to be balked by having Tawney declare that he himself is a secret service man. Tawney's credentials are proven false, but they are no more false than the jewels which he has trailed from Paris. It develops that the niece was merely carrying a set of paste diamonds to be used in making a setting for the original stones, which the purchaser intended to bring to New York later herself.

Universal Program

The Road to Paradise—(Two Reels)—Gold Seal—Adventure 3 of "The Adventures of Terence O'Rourke"—December 6.—J. Warren Kerrigan as O'Rourke, who receives a message by carrier pigeon from Beatrix, telling him of her forthcoming marriage to Duke Victor and asking for help. O'Rourke comes to the capitol and unknowingly falls into the hands of the Duke, who is resolved to show Beatrix that her lover is not worthy of her. Victor tricks O'Rourke into a scene with an Indian princess, who is made to believe that he has in his possession a priceless jewel for which she is searching. Beatrix witnesses the scene between O'Rourke and the princess, as per the Duke's intentions, and is convinced of her lover's faithlessness. Finally, one of the Adventurer's friends is the means of preventing a rupture between the lovers, and defeating the Duke's intended marriage.

Their Quiet Honeymoon—Nestor—December 6.—Lee makes a bet with his friend Eddie, that the first one to marry will pay the other $500. They both marry on the same day and slip off to what they think is a quiet hotel. Both husbands enjoin their wives to keep secret the bet. They all happen to be in the same hotel. The two friends meet in the bar and tell each other that they are still single. The fact that the bellboys hear this results in a raid. It finally takes a good deal of apology on the part of the officers to clear up matters. Eddie and his wife then go to Lee's room and declare that as the race was a tie, the bet will be called off.

Idols of Clay—(Three Reels)—Gold Seal—December 7.—Robert Leonard and Ella Hall. Ella, a young girl of twelve, sympathizes with her sad and lonely neighbor, Bob. He finally relates his story to her. The woman he had made an idol of deserted him and his friends proved faithless in the time of need. One day he gives his little neighbor a box of small idols and tells her that if she will sleep with them beneath her pillow, whatever she dreams will come true. She tries it the first night and dreams constantly of the lonesome man. A short time later Bob is arrested for his crooked partner's defalcations and is sentenced to ten years at prison. While grieving over this, Ella breaks one of the idols he has given her. After Bob has served his sentence he returns to the old home. Ella takes the broken idol to him and he tells her that he is sure the both of them can mend it. The picture closes with every indication that marriage will take place within the near future.

Slim, Fat or Medium?—Imp—December 7.—Slim Hoover, Charley Cupid and Harry Hazard are suitors for the hand of Betty Boniface. Father smiles upon Slim as he is the only one who possesses the means of support. Betty bestows her favors on Harry Hazard. Charley resorts to trickery in his efforts to "queer" Slim, who, he thinks, is his most dangerous rival. While Slim and Charley are scheming for each other's downfall, Harry and Betty elope. Slim receives an additional jolt when Sallie Sloppus gives him the "toss over."

Sin on the Sabbath—(Two Reels)—L-Ko—December 8.—Billie likes the girl, but her father doesn't have the same feeling about him, and he has to leave hastily when making a call. He goes back to his job at the soda fountain. Meantime Reggie thinks to make a hit with his girl's papa and takes him to the drugstore. Popper and Billie get more friendly than Reggie calculates, and the two even get to drinking something out of a bottle in the back room. Reggie puts a poison label on the bottle. The error is soon discovered however, and Bill, Popper and some other old scouts get busier than ever. Reg now calls the cops. They make a raid, but discover nothing but a church organ and the old scouts in a song service. Anyway, Popper gets his scare and lets liquor alone for some time.

The Awakening of Patsy—(Little Stories of Real Life—Second Incident)—Victor—December 8.—Patsy, a chorus girl, falls for Vincent Castleman, one of the idle rich. On the night of her expected marriage, she breaks the news to the other girls, and also to Mickey Donlin, her old sweetheart. The latter is broken-hearted. Later that evening Vincent calls and tells her that he has just furnished a dandy apartment for her use. But on Patsy's question, "When are we to be married," Castleman shows his true colors by saying, "Who said anything about marriage?" Patsy, blind with rage, drives him from the room. It is very easy later to understand why Patsy accepts Mickey, her old lover, and declares that she wouldn't marry Vincent on a bet.

The Sacrifice of Jonathan Gray—(Three Reels)—Big U—December 9.—Murdock MacQuarrie as Gray. Jonathan Gray, a shoe merchant in a small town, is deserted by his wife who elopes with a former lover to the city. She takes the baby with her and leaves Jonathan crushed. The man for whom she has sacrificed her husband proves a brute and at last the mother is forced to leave the baby at the door of Mr. and Mrs. Dillon, a wealthy couple. By this time, Jonathan has come to the city and is employed at a cobbling shop. After a tense meeting with his wife in which he learns the whereabouts of the baby, she and the other man disappear forever. The father lives to see his child, Helen, grow up and marry a worthy chap named Tom Wesley. The child of Tom and Helen and a rag doll with which Helen played years ago are finally the means of bringing Jonathan and his daughter together again, and insuring the happiness of the old man's declining years.

The Little Lady Across the Way—(Two Reels)—Imp—December 10.—Jane is a tomboy, taking little interest in anything except athletics. Aunty brings several young men to the house, but Jane refuses to have anything to do with them. To the house next door comes John Meadows. One day he chases her off his grounds and wrathfully accuses her of trespassing. The reason for John's bitterness towards women is because he has been thrown down by a woman in the city, whom he loved very much. At last the woman sends a pleading note to John, begging him to come to her. His old love reviving, he makes a dash for the station. On the way his car breaks down. Along comes Jane and takes him in her new car. Resolving to get even, Jane gets lost on purpose and makes the man lose his train. Luckily, for if John had gone to the city he would have been in danger of getting killed by his former lover's husband. In the end, John finds that the little tomboy is the only girl, and they pledge their troth in a unique manner.

Keeping it Dark—NESTOR—DECEMBER 10.—Harry and Stella, both middle-aged, fall in love and marry. They both have children away at school but try to keep the matter secret. Stella writes to her son in college and Harry to his daughter. The children, having minds of their own, worry about their respective parents and decide to be on the ground. Harry and his wife each receive letters from daughter and son telling of their arrival. Harry gets rid of the maid and Stella persuades the butler to take a much-needed rest. Before anything can be discovered amiss, the boy and girl are hustled into the places left by the absent servants. All is well for a while, but there is a final reckoning; the truth comes out, and the old folks thereafter have competition in spooning.

The Power of Fascination REX—DECEMBER 10.—Cleo Madison as Juniata, a beautiful girl of Spanish parentage, who is on the point of marrying Rafael, a rich land owner, to save her estate from ruin. Just at this point, Grey, a young American, arrives and offers Juniata $1,000 for a railroad right of way across her land. On seeing the two immediately fall in love, Rafael decides to do away with Gray. He finally stabs the American. Brooks, a member of Gray's surveying party, arrives soon after and scents trouble. With the help of Juniata, Brooks gets the drop on Rafael. The hidden body of Gray is then discovered and is found to be still alive.

The Lion's Ward—(THREE REELS)—BISON—DECEMBER 11. With Paul Bourgeois and Betty Schade. John Kronje, a Boer, gathers wild animals for zoos. Carl Kruger, his assistant, is in love with Mina, Kronje's daughter. Mina makes an enemy of her Arab suitor, Muji, by repulsing him. The latter changes places with a Voodoo priest and tells the blacks that they must have the white maiden to sacrifice. While Kronje and Kruger are on a hunt, Mudji leads the blacks against the Kronje farm and burns it. Mina's pet lion, however, escapes. After Mudji rescues the girl, who has taken refuge in an old shack, from the attacks of wild animals, he gives her the choice of marrying him or being sacrificed to the Voodoo idol. Mina's lion at last comes to her rescue and kills the Arab. Carl and his party, who have been beating the jungles for the girl, arrive. Kruger and Mina are later happily married.

Mrs. P. Prune's Boarding House—JOKER—DECEMBER 11.—Featuring Max Asher. Mrs. P. Prune falls in love with Signor Bingbanger, a ventriloquist, and an occupant of her establishment. The ventriloquist practices with a female dummy. Mrs. Prune looks through the keyhole, sees her lover beating a supposed woman, whom he knocks out; rushes for the police. Red paint, red ink, and a drunken man are the main factors that put the sleuths on the trail of Signor Bingbanger. In the meantime the latter has decided to leave, and is on his way when the crowd overtakes him. The dummy in his trunk clears up matters.

Lizzie's Shattered Dream—L-KO—DECEMBER 12.—Lizzie is a country girl, imposed upon by her cruel stepfather. She longs for city life, and when two strangers from The Big Town come along, she is an easy victim. She steals her father's savings and elopes with them (the strangers and the savings). Father emits a yell that can be heard all over the community, gathers his farm hands, and pursues. Lizzie and her friends take refuge in an abandoned house, where a hot battle takes place. The battle is a draw as everyone is badly banged up.

Juror Number Seven—(TWO REELS)—REX—DECEMBER 12.—Featuring Ben Wilson. As a rich, unprincipled character, William Ralston, has in his employ a young man named Watson, whose wife, Edith, is a beautiful woman. Ralston's advances to Edith failing, he frames up a criminal charge against Watson, with the help of Murray, a political boss. Everything works so well that when the jurymen file out of the courtroom things look bad for the young foreman. But Murray has hired a derelict, Jim Hunter, to do his "dirty work" for him and had this man drawn on the jury. It so happens, that the latter is an old victim of the home-wrecking Ralston and has him to thank for his present condition. His pathetic story moves the jury; Watson is acquitted, and Ralston and Murray arrested.

Feature Programs

Fox

The Broken Law—(FIVE REELS)—FOX.—Featuring William Farnum as Daniel Esmond, a young novelist, whose father upon his deathbed confessed that he had betrayed a girl member of the Romanies band of gypsies and that somewhere among them the young man would find a half-sister. The author becomes a member of the gypsy band and Ursula becomes infatuated with him. Later he falls in love with Isobel, much to the chagrin of Ursula and Lord Duncan, a profligate, betrays her, and the girl accuses Esmond of the crime. Later Ursula tells the truth to Gorgiko, who knows that she is Esmond's half-sister, and the two arrive at the home of Isobel just as she is about to become the wife of the nobleman and they prevent the affair from taking place.

Metro

Barbara Frietchie—(FIVE REELS)—METRO—NOVEMBER 29.—Mary Miles Minter is featured in this production of the Popular Plays and Players Company, based on the poem by Whittier and the play by Clyde Fitch. Herbert Blache directed the picture which tells the story of a Southern girl who causes the enmity of her father and the townspeople when she confesses her love for a Yankee officer. Captain Trumbull dies of a wound and little Barbara and her grandmother, who sides with the North, wave the flag of the Union in defiance of the Confederate soldiers. The words of General Jackson, immortalized by the poem, are obeyed by all the men but one. A former sweetheart of Barbara's, crazed by jealousy, fires and she is killed by the bullet. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

A Yellow Streak—(FIVE REELS)—METRO—DECEMBER 6.—Written and directed by William Nigh, this Columbia production features Lionel

"BUILT BY BRAINS"

MINUSA

You Can't Show a Beautiful Film on a Poor Screen.

When you buy a Minusa Screen you don't merely buy it by the square foot. Minusa Screens are "BUILT BY BRAINS" to suit all the particular requirements of YOUR particular theatre.

Write for our literature

Minusa Cine Products Co.

St. Louis, Mo. — Houser Building — Calgary, Canada — Grand Theatre Bldg. — San Francisco — 117-19 Golden Gate Ave.

New York — 19 W. 23rd St. — Chicago — 154 West Lake St. — Pittsburg — 422 First Ave.

Tell me how long your throw is, the size of your house and what size picture you want and I'll tell you

The Screen You Ought to Have

We make Rembusch Patented Glass Mirror Screens. Glasstransparent screens for rear projection and all kinds of cloth curtains for motion picture projection. Gold fibre screens. Silver fibre screens. Mirror cloth screens. White opaque screens. Seamless, with stretchers or rollers. Mirrors of all kinds and re-silvering. Poster frames.

FRANK J. REMBUSCH, Pres.

MIRROR SCREEN CO., Shelbyville, Ind.

Mr. Exhibitor:

We can convince you that the

Bartola Orchestra

is superior to any other for your Theatre. Give us a chance. Write for catalogue.

Sold on Easy Terms

Bartola Musical Instrument Co.

Chas. C. Pyle, General Sales Agent — 710-711 Mallers Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Factory: Oshkosh, Wisconsin

THE TALK OF THE MOTION PICTURE FIELD

Goes POSTERS

POST THEM AND PACK YOUR THEATRE

GOES—CHICAGO

The manufacturer who brands his films and advertises them in Motography is so sure of their quality that he is willing to stand the full force of possible complaints.

He is making something for which he is proud to be responsible. His trade mark secures for him the increased sales that result from satisfaction and identification. At the same time it secures to the great mass of exhibitors the certainty of quality which the known manufacturer must maintain if he is to continue to be successful.

When you book films, book films that are trademarked and advertised in Motography. The manufacturers of such films stand behind them. Your satisfaction is vital to the continued success of the trade-marked advertised films.

Trade marks and advertising in Motography are the two greatest servants in the film business today. Their whole tendency is to raise qualities and standardize them while reducing prices and stabilizing them.

Barrymore in a cast headed by Irene Hawley. Dale is ruined by his supposed friend who does so to win the affection of Dale's faithless wife. Contemplating suicide he leaves for the West. There he meets an outlaw whose viewpoint brings a change over Dale. He becomes an outlaw, but his actions are not malicious and finally marries a girl whose strong character greatly impresses him. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Mutual Master-Pictures

The Forbidden Adventure—(Four Reels)—New York Motion Picture—December 2.—Charles Ray and Louise Glaum are featured as an Arabian priestess and young English adventurer. Beautiful photography and a startling story make this rather an unusual motion picture. A full review appears on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

Paramount

Armstrong's Wife—(Five Reels)—Lasky.—Featuring Edna Goodrich as May Fielding, belle of a country town with two suitors, David Armstrong, her next-door neighbor, and Harvey Arnold, a gambler. She marries the gambler, who has a wife living and undivorced. Later her husband flees and Armstrong offers May the protection of his name. She weds him and the pair go to Northwest Canada to live, where Arnold again finds May and after a duel, which nearly results in Armstrong's death, learns that her heart has been his from the first and her liking for Arnold only a girlish infatuation.

Chimmie Fadden Out West—(Five Reels)—Lasky.—Featuring Victor Moore as Chimmie Fadden, who has as a sweetheart the little French maid of the Van Courtlandt family, where he formerly worked. He goes into Death Valley, where he is supposed to discover a gold mine, and the news of the supposed gold strike spreads broadcast and Chimmie is the idol of the hour. Later he discovers that it is a hold-up scheme and after being married to his sweetheart she refuses to have anything more until he pays back every cent Van Courtlandt has collected and in this way he wins his way back into the graces of his wife.

The Prince and the Pauper—(Five Reels)—Famous Players.—Marguerite Clark is featured in this picturization of Mark Twain's celebrated story produced by Edwin S. Porter and Hugh Ford. The story tells of the strange adventure which results from the meeting between the Prince of Wales and Tom Canty, the prince of paupers. The resemblance between them is so strong that when they decide to trade places for the enjoyment it will give each, the protestations of Tom that he is not the Prince and the Prince that he is not a beggar cause each, in his present surroundings, to be considered mad. The end finds the Prince in his palace and Tom enjoying a handsome and deserved reward. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Pathe

Pathe News No. 94—Pathe—November 24.—Scenes of the destruction after the tornado which swept the Central States; boy scouts give demonstrations of first aid methods at King's Park, Jamaica, L. I.; Christy Mathewson, famous baseball pitcher, finds clay pigeon shooting keeps his eye in trim; Dr. Harry J. Haiselden who refused to operate to save life of defective baby records his decision in the case, Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. and Mr. W. F. Estes start life anew in the Maine woods, depending on nature for food, clothing and weapons, Bangor, Me.; body of Booker T. Washington carried to its last resting place, Tuskogee, Ala.; students enliven football game between Chicago and Illinois by parading about the field in land boats, Chicago, Ill.; lads of the Lancashire Naval Training School celebrate Trafalgar Day, Wallasey, England; crew of two-masted schooner H. S. M. have narrow escape from drowning when vessel drives ashore during a terrific Atlantic gale, Swampscott, Mass.; barges on the River Seine are fitted out for Red Cross work, Paris, France; new giant crane which lifts bodily 200-ton locomotive, has been installed by the Belt Railroad, Chicago, Ill.

Neal of the Navy—(Two Reels)—Pathe-Balboa—November 25—Chapter Thirteen.—Annette and her party arrive safely on the cannibal island. Hernandez and the Brute are believed to be gods risen from the sea by the cannibals. While Neal is in the partly submerged wireless room of the wrecked ship, the Blacks, led by Hernandez, capture Annette and Mrs. Hardin. Returning to the island Neal searches for them and in the fight which follows the Brute is seriously injured. The arrival of sailors from a ship which received Neal's message saves the white party from recapture by the cannibals. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Pathe News No. 95—Pathe—November 27.—The jaguar takes the place of the cat as the ship's pet of the fruit liner Tenadores; the Woman's Peace Party receive a check for $8,000 given by Mrs. Henry Ford; Lord Mayor of England attends memorial services at St. Paul's Cathedral in London for Miss Edith Cavell; six military biplanes comprising the first Aero Fleet, U. S. A., begin a 500-mile trip cross-country flight; Pathe Paris fashions in natural colors; authentic scenes of actual war officially taken by the French government; Brand Whitlock, U. S. envoy to Belgium, returns to New York City with his wife; New York school boys organized as juvenile cops to protect their playmates at busy street crossings; Evacuation day celebrated by the historic Old Guard at New York City with reproduction of the first Union flag raising in Castle Garden, now called Battery Park.

Ragtime Snap Shots—Pathe-Rolin—December 1.—Lonesome Luke and his friend, after a long search, land a job in a photographer's shop. The first customer, a college graduate, proves that he knows more about the manly art than they gave him credit for. Later Harry Hardguy makes his appearance. Luke and Larkin attempt to square matters with him. When last seen they are running for safety.

The Gold Cobra—(Three Reels)—Pathe-Victory—December 1.—Colonel Douglas, returning to England after military service in India, purchases the estate of Frank Mallon. He presents his daughter with an image, a gold cobra, which he obtained from a sect in India. Mallon steals the image. The daughter's fiance, Hamilton, is called to Africa on business. In order to help him financially Kathleen "kidnaps" herself and writes to her father, demanding the gold cobra as a ransom. Learning that the image is in Mallon's possession, Douglas wearing a disguise, purchases it with a false check. The climax is reached when Mallon returns to Douglas house and is surprised by the police. He escapes in a balloon, but later is killed when he is thrown out by the pilot.

Neal of the Navy—(Two Reels)—Pathe—Balboa—December 2.—Fourteenth chapter, entitled "The Great Goal." In this the final episode of the serial, Hernandez and Inez, after their escape from the cannibal island, reach Lost Island, where they find a crew of pirates. The battleship bearing the Ilington party arrives there shortly after. On the way the Brute regains his senses and proves to be Annette's father. The pirates offer Hernandez a vast amount of quicksilver in exchange for Inez. The smuggler, upon learning that Annette is on the island, determines to capture her and give her as payment for the quicksilver. He is discovered by the party and pursued to the edge of a cliff, where Hernandez plunges to his death. With Hernandez removed, the Ilingtons and the Hardins enjoy the fortune derived from the mines, and Inez, wishing to make reparation for her part of the conspiracy enters a convent.

Hot Heads and Cold Feet—Pathe—Starlight—December 4.—Heinie and Louie, suffering the pangs of hunger, steal a brace of chickens. A mysterious hand, which they are unable to elude, leads them to the queen of a band of rogues, who directs them to kill a rival. When they return, their mission unfulfilled, she commands that they pay the usual penalty. They are pitched without ceremony into the tank reserved for such emergencies.

Detective Blackie — (Two Reels) — Pathe — Ninth Episode in the "Wallingford" series, featuring Max Figman, Burr McIntosh and Lolita Robertson. The confidence men visit the town of Spanglerville. The officials of the town are impressed when they learn that two celebrated detectives are in town and after a conference they conclude that they have come to investigate Henry Closby, the only man in the town whose business is not everybody's. When Wallingford learns this he leads them on with the result that they buy a certain invention from Closby, who has joined forces with J. Rufus, for $60,000. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

The House of Fear—(Five Reels)—Pathe.—A Gold Rooster Play produced by Arnold Daly. Charles Cramp and his sister live in a continual fear of somebody who sends strange warnings. Ashton Kirk is interested in the case by his friend, Pendleton. Kirk learns that a Mexican who desires to secure some forged currency plates which were engraved by Cramp's father, is the one responsible for the disturbances in the household. In the closing scene Kirk catches the Mexican in his attempt to steal the plates, which, unknown to Cramp are hidden in the cellar. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

The Rose Among the Briers—(Three Reels)—Pathe-Balboa.—This picture is in natural colors, which add materially to its beauty. Jackie Saunders is featured. It is a modern drama of a factory girl who is admired by two young men—one who works at a factory and a young physician. She fears that she is not well enough equipped by education to hold the love the physician offers her and refuses to marry him. Mary becomes a cabaret singer and meets a libertine who makes her believe that he takes a fatherly interest in her. When she learns his true intentions and is saved by the factory worker she decides to marry the doctor.

Triangle Program

Released Week of December 5.

The Golden Claw—(FIVE REELS)—TRIANGLE-KAY-BEE.—Featuring Bessie Barriscale in a story of a greedy woman who is raised from childhood to believe that money is all powerful and that without money life is scarcely worth living, but who later comes to understand that love is worth far more than gold and precious jewels. For a longer review see page 1030 of the November 13th issue of MOTOGRAPHY.

Double Trouble—(TWO REELS)—FINE ARTS.—Featuring Douglas Fairbanks as Florian, a Sunday school boy of the ribbon counter type and later as Eugene, a sporty politician, a plunger and a Romeo with a girl on every corner. For a longer review see page 1030 of the November 13th issue of MOTOGRAPHY.

The Best of Enemies—(TWO REELS)—KEYSTONE.—Featuring Joe Weber and Lew Fields, who, after quarreling over a debutante, separate, and Joe, to avenge himself upon Lew for winning the girl's heart, pretends to have been drowned by his enemy and sees Lew led away to jail. Later Lew succeeeds in escaping from his cell and Joe replaces him, is led into the execution chamber, and things end in a riot of complications. For a longer review see page 1030 of the November issue of MOTOGRAPHY.

A Janitor's Wife's Temptation—(TWO REELS)—KEYSTONE.—Featuring Fred Mace as a janitor of an apartment house and Marta Golden as his wife, who has troubles of her own and falls in love with Harry Gribbon, the artist. The final scenes in the restaurant when Mace is bouncing about like a rubber ball in the fountain are side splitting. For a longer review see page 1079 of the issue of November 20th of MOTOGRAPHY.

Universal Special

The White Scar—(FIVE REELS)—UNIVERSAL—DECEMBER 6.—Hobart Bosworth featured as a great trapper in the Hudson Bay country, who marries the factor's daughter after many misunderstandings and hair-breadth escapes. A complete review of this picture will be found on another page of this issue. N. G. C.

V. L. S. E. Inc.

The Cave Man—(FIVE REELS)—V. L. S. E.—NOVEMBER 29.—Robert Edeson featured as the laborer, who, equipped with handsome clothes and a few instructions as to deportment, becomes a social lion. When he realizes that he has been nothing more than a plaything for the young society woman who makes the experiment merely to satisfy a fancy, he is tempted to make her pay for the game she has played, but upon discovering that he really loves her he decides to go into the world and make a success. He realizes his ambition and marries the girl. The picture was produced by Theodore Marston. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

I Am Glad My Boy Grew Up to Be a Soldier—(FOUR REELS)—SELIG—DECEMBER 13.—Featuring Harry Mestayer, Eugenie Besserer, Harry De Vere, Guy Oliver and Anna Luther in a version of the great song hit, "I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier," in which a mother after losing her husband in the war objects strongly to sending her one and only son to the front. However, he enlists and is killed by an explosion of a shrapnel and as the mother sits brooding before the fireplace in her home she says: "I am glad my boy grew up to be a soldier." For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

World

The Warning—(FIVE REELS)—EQUITABLE.—Featuring Henry Kolker in a story which deals in the ending of good fellowship as the term is generally applied. Robert Denman is continually under the influence of drink, and on New Year's while drunk he meets "The Woman Who Smiles." He arrives home and goes into his son's room where in a drunken slumber his mind goes back to the street where he again meets the woman and neglects his family, loses his position and is discarded by her. His soul goes out into the depths which makes it recoil in fear and his entreaties for another chance are granted. He awakens from his slumber and upon joining the family circles resolves to heed the warning.

The Sins of Society—(FIVE REELS)—WORLD.—Featuring Robert Warwick as Captain Dorian March, who is affianced to Gwendolin, the twin sister of Marion. Noel Ferrers, who wishes to marry Gwendolin induces Marion to trick a pawnbroker and give him a box supposed to hold a diamond tiara, but which holds only a paperweight. The pawnbroker grows suspicious and Marion, to prevent Morris from finding out the deception drugs and robs him of the fraudulent box. Later Dorian is rescued by a tramp steamer and returns in time to prevent the marriage of Gwendolin and Ferrers.

NOTES FROM ALL OVER

W. A. S. Douglas, who is Charles Pathe's right-hand man, was a visitor at the Balboa studios last week. He came from headquarters to see the finishing touches put on the filming of "Neal of the Navy." While he had always had good reports of the Horkheimer Brothers' plant, he was scarcely prepared to see a studio of such magnitude and compactness. He said he could not find words to express his admiration.

The annual benefit for the Actor's Fund, which will be given some time during the month of January next, will be held at the Strand theater, New York. The Mark Strand Theater Company have donated the house and its entire working staff, as well as the large concert orchestra, for the occasion. Daniel Frohman, president of the Actor's Fund of America, has accepted the offer and elaborate preparations for the benefit are already in progress.

Stella Hammerstein is now at work at Jacksonville in a Gaumont production called "The Ace of Death." This thrilling photodrama is from the pen of O. A. Nelson and is being directed by William F. Haddock. Part of the play is located in a Central American city and "Silent Bill" Haddock has been fortunate in selecting locations about Jacksonville which accurately reproduce the tropical atmosphere.

Edwin Carewe, who is directing the elaborate five-part feature, "The House of Tears," in which Emily Stevens, the gifted emotional actress, is starred, broke his arm in two places while cranking his automobile in front of the Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc., studio. Despite the painful injury, Mr. Carewe did not miss a single working day, appearing the next morning with his arm in a splint. He will continue until "The House of Tears" is completed, then Mr. Carewe will take a brief vacation of a week or ten days.

Charles Giblin, the Inceville producer, took his players, which include the star, William H. Thompson, and Louise Glaum, for a trip down the lower California coast, the object being to take some scenes for his current production.

One hundred and fifty-three cartridges, more than he has ever used in one production since he became a photoplay star, have been shot, to date, by William S. Hart of the Ince forces in the current Triangle-Kay-Bee feature in which he is being starred. This does not mean that that many shots are fired during the action of the story, but that they had to be used in order that the camera might correctly register them.

Chaperoned by "Kid" Hogan, former prizefighter, and now chief property man at the Rolfe-Metro studios, forty-two members of the scenic and property working staff under the Metro banner celebrated Thanksgiving eve with a dinner and dance as Reisenweber's restaurant, near Columbus Circle. After the thé dansant, which preceded the dinner, the group of atmosphere creators marched in a body down Broadway, and were entertained at the Columbia theater with a box party.

Garry McGarry, one of the younger of the Vitagraph players, who is fast forging to the front as a screen star and whose latest photodrama release was with Maurice Costello in "Saints and Sinners," is also a popular entertainer on the concert stage. His latest appearance was in a program arranged for the Immediate Aid Society of New York, where his name appeared opposite two numbers, a baritone solo, "Thursday," and a recitation, "The Reckoning," from the Songs of Sourdough.

H. B. Warner, the distinguished young actor whose work in "Alias Jimmy Valentine" and other Broadway successes gained him international fame, has acquired the title, particularly among his associates at Inceville, where he is working, of the "best dressed man in America." The epithet likely has been inspired by reason of the fact that during the greater part of the time the actor has been appearing as star in a current Triangle-Kay-Bee feature under the direction of Charles Swickard he has worn evening clothes.

Sure enough, Balboa had another wedding at the studio this week. The high contracting parties were Richard Johnson and Lulu Bower. They were the first couple to be open and above board in the dispatching of their matrimonial affairs, as the previous instances were all elopements. The groom is a well-known character actor in Balboa features, while his bride has also taken small parts. The Johnsons are the seventh couple in four months. The Matrimonial Film Company keeps up its record.

Several of the interior and exterior scenes of "The Other Girl," the Raver-Thomas production, were recently staged by Director Percy Winter in and about the Staten Island Military Academy.

WANTED—Position as scenario editor and director by man of broad education, widely traveled, well read, newspaper and theatrical experience as New York dramatic critic, special and humorous writer, scenario author and playwright, and who believes that beauty, intelligent art, and clean virile drama hold the future of the film.

Box 300, Motography, New York.

HEADQUARTERS

FOR

MOVING PICTURE CAMERAS
TRIPODS
PRINTERS, ETC.

PATHE, MOY & PRESTWICK GOODS, ALWAYS IN STOCK

MOTION PICTURE APPARATUS CO., INC.
810 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY, N.Y.

This academy was founded by his father, William A. Winter, the noted dramatic critic, who is now eighty years old and still writing.

According to all reports, the Lasky production of "The Immigrant," in which Valeska Surratt is to star, will be something absolutely different from anything in which she has heretofore appeared.

Lydia Yeamans Titus, who essays the role of the wife of a provincial justice, a part carried by the venerable actor, Herbert Standing, in the first Anna Held production, now under way at the Oliver Morosco studio in Los Angeles, for the Paramount program, wears a choice bit of real old Irish lace in the production. She prizes it highly, not because of its intrinsic value so much as because it was given her by her mother, Annie Yeamans, famous some years ago as an Irish character woman.

SOME NEW THEATERS

Alabama.

The Strand, Trianon, both Odeons, Princess and Amuse-U motion picture theaters were the houses in the central part of Birmingham to take advantage of the city commission's toleration of the opening of the picture shows on Sunday, which took place November 14.

Arkansas.

Moving-picture Studio.—Ozark Film company, capital $15,000; incorporated by C. C. Rayl, J. A. Shogren and others; will build studio in Eureka Springs; main office, Tulsa, Okla.

California.

A motion picture studio is being erected by the Palo Alto Film corporation near Mountain View. Work is well under way and the company will begin to take pictures shortly.

Illinois.

The addition to the Castle theater in Havana has been completed. It now has a seating capacity of nearly five hundred.

Emil Mykofka has asked permission to open a motion picture theater at 1836 South Fifteenth street, Springfield.

Manager James J. Reilly has installed a Seeburg motion picture pipe organ in the Princess theater in Alton.

During the winter, Finley Park will have a motion picture show, the pictures to be shown every two weeks.

The Elmwood theater in the new Kessler building on Harrison street between Elmwood and Gunderson avenues, Oak Park, was opened a few weeks ago under the management of H. E. McDorman. The theater seats 400 people and has ample exits and a fine equipment, including the best safety operating booth. It will give performances every evening and Wednesday and Saturday afternoons.

H. B. Meyers has leased a portion of the Bailey building on Main street, Mt. Sterling, and carpenters are now engaged in remodeling same into a picture theater.

C. M. McIntosh has sold the Idle Hour theater at Farmington, which he has managed successfully for four years to David Prior of Nevada.

Indiana.

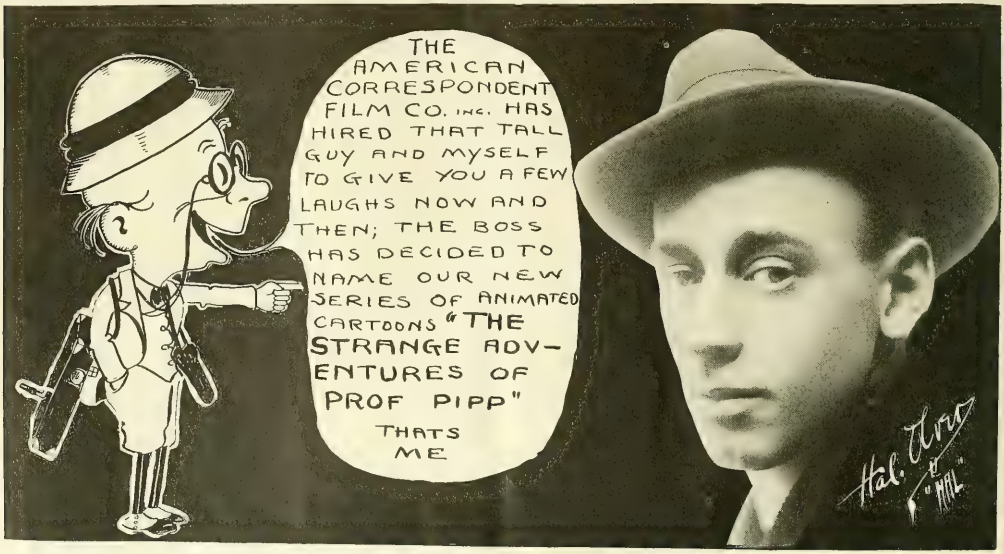
The Palace theater in Peru, owned by James Chandler, was destroyed by fire. The loss is $4,000, with no insurance.

Marion has a new motion picture show on Thirtieth and Washington streets, known as the Mirth. It is operated by Peter Alles, who has made the playhouse as comfortable and cheery as possible.

Mishawaka's new picture house, mention of which was made in a recent issue, is expected to be ready for occupancy by December 20.

Fire originating in the operating booth of the Royal theater in Frankfort November 12 destroyed seven reels of film and damaged the playhouse and equipment to the extent of $3,000. The management of the theater succeeded in getting the audience out of the theater without an injury. Ray Thayer, the operator, was seriously burned before he could leap from the booth.

Kansas.



Mankato is to have a new, modern picture theater. J. P. Fair, president of the Mankato National Bank, will build the new theater on a lot adjoining his bank. Plans are being prepared. The building will be twenty-five feet wide and one hundred feet long and two stories. The floor will be an incline and 350 opera seats will be installed. N. B. Morris and son, Verner, have leased the building and will operate the picture show. Mr. Morris expects to have the finest theater of this kind between Topeka and Denver.

A new motion picture theater with a seating capacity of about 300 was opened at Colony November 13 by E. H. Pearson, manager of the Star theater of Ottawa. Harry Brown, operator at the Star, will remain in charge. A new operator has been secured for the Star and it will be continued with the usual attractions.

The Aurora theater in Topeka, purchased by Ewell Shipp, of St. Louis, is now remodeled and presents an attractive appearance. Mr. Shipp announces a change in the policy, showing only the highest class pictures, many of which will be features.

Kentucky.

The Enterprise Film company filed articles of incorporation with a capital stock of $2,000, divided into shares of a par value of $1 and with authority to incur an indebtedness not to exceed the capital stock. The incorporators are N. M. Sweet, R. W. Conant and N. J. Shelton, each with three shares of the capital stock.

MOTOGRAPHY

The MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

DEC 11

JUNE DAYE
WITH LUBIN-V-L-S-E.

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, DECEMBER 18, 1915 No. 25

(E) for Edison Excellence (E)

Leonie Flugrath

the charming child star

and

Pat O'Malley

in

The 3-act feature

"BLADE O' GRASS"

A love idyl of a wood nymph child

A FATHER, embittered of man and woman and a world which has treated him cruelly, takes his beautiful daughter to secluded woods and there the wood nymph grows up, pure, innocent, and as sweetly refreshing as its own pine breezes. Then comes to her, life and love. Leonie Flugrath, favored by nature with a charming sweetness and talented to a pre-eminent degree, draws hearts to her in this appealing, well-fitting role. This little girl is causing the sensational heart landslide that she made when she swung from Broadway to coast on the stage, in featured roles. Friday, December 3.

"MICROSCOPIC POND LIFE." An Edison laboratory educational picture of the weird and strange life in lowest animal life. On the same reel with "The Sufferin' Baby," featuring Bob Walker and a bunch of comedians. Direction Will Louis. 1,000 feet in all. Wednesday, December 1.

"THE MAGISTRATE'S STORY," featuring Richard Tucker, Pat O'Malley and William West. Civil war drama. 1,000 feet. Saturday, December 4.

Thomas A Edison

INC. ORANGE, N. J.

General Film Company's

Regular Service

(E) for Edison Excellence (E)

What Triangle Offers for Week of December 12th

The production of consistently successful picture plays demands the highest resources of the human mind. You know what TRIANGLE PLAYS have done toward setting a high standard. It is time to tell you what some particular TRIANGLE products will do toward elevating it still further.

"The Lily and the Rose" with Lillian Gish, Roszika Dolly and Wilfred Lucas. This play, we believe, strikes an entirely new note in motion picture history. Everyone who has seen it comments on its wonderful charm and atmosphere. There are features of photoplay artistry in this production that make it of extraordinary attraction, and ultra novel appeal.

Then comes a distinctly new type of drama—one that makes full use of natural resources, "Aloha Oe," a powerful Hawaiian tale, with Willard Mack and Enid Markey in the principal roles. The storm at sea is acknowledged to be a triumph of motion picture artistry. In fact, the play has that extraordinary quality that makes a theater patron talk about it afterwards.

And then there are two Keystones. Any exhibitor knows what results follow the announcement of a Keystone Comedy. "The Great Vacuum Robbery" and "Fatty and the Broadway Stars." The first with Charles Murray and Louise Fazenda outdoes anything Mack Sennett has attempted for swift action. It is filled with real "Keystone Stuff." The second brings in Weber and Fields, William Collier, Sam Bernard, Joe Jackson, and the inexpressible Roscoe Arbuckle. That's one week's bill. Your patrons have a right to such service.

TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION
71 WEST 23rd ST. NEW YORK

Tsuru Aoki, the Japanese actress, and nautch girls in "The Beckoning Flame," a new East Indian play directed by Thomas Ince for Triangle.

MOTOGRAPHY

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED THE NICKELODEON

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, DECEMBER 18, 1915 No. 25

Boston Exhibitors' Ball Draws Thousands

AFFAIR BIG SUCCESS

IT is estimated that about 10,000 people attended the third annual ball of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Massachusetts, held at the Arena in Boston on Wednesday night, December 1. And what is not an estimation, but well known and actual fact, is that every one of the probable ten thousand, with the possible exception of an individual or two, had a corking good time, rush, crush, autographic delay and all considered. Who the single or accompanied individual was who did not corner some of the fun is not known, nor even is he reported to have been seen, but to be conservative in our figures we will leave ourselves that much of a margin. More is not needed.

From every point of view the affair was a much greater success than could reasonably have been expected—and the Massachusetts organization has been up and doing right along. Financially, it piled up green- and yellow-backs in sheafs. The presence of the governor of the state, mayor of Boston, and many other notables lent an air of importance and dignity which found reflection in the thousands present, creating the very correct impression that the Massachusetts exhibitors' ball was one of the red-letter events of the capitol city.

The Metro songsters.

From the publicity angle, the ball was a triumph for the various manufacturers. Press agents found an enthusiastic audience for their "stunts" in the fans, and loyal supporters in the Boston dailies. The papers issued on the night of the ball and on the morning and evening of the day following displayed many Metro headlines and pictures of Metro stars, due to the activities of Arthur James and Edward Corbett, as well as to Metro's importance. The day after the ball the Thanhouser beauty contest began to attract newspaper space, and for days afterward newspapers from all over the country, displaying front-page accounts of the contest and pictures of its winner, Sophie Sidowski, poured into the New Rochelle office of the sponsor of the contest, L. J. Rubinstein.

The main body of the New York aggregation of stars and executives arrived in Boston at six-thirty Wednesday evening on the Knickerbocker Limited, which left Manhattan around noon. The Metro crowd left earlier in the day, arriving in Boston shortly after three in the afternoon. This start on the rest of the film world was capitalized by a Metro parade which, led by a band or two, rode about the town and scared up optical acquaintanceships with people who previously had known Metro only through the screen. Those who arrived later paraded through the heart of the city to the Copley-Plaza hotel, where they were banqueted by the Exhibitors' League. The Metro body, who also made headquarters at the Copley-Plaza, had a banquet of their own.

At about nine o'clock the stars began to gather at the Arena. A crowd of fans had preceded them by an hour or more. After running the gauntlet of those gathered on the sidewalk and hastily shaking hands with and smiling at the hundreds who pressed about the door inside of the hall, the film favorites were introduced from the platform. The applause for each was as thunderous as the rush for introductions and autographs was spontaneous when the stars were seated in the boxes.

The place of honor at the head of the grand march was occupied by Governor Walsh and Clara Kimball Young, while in second place could be found Francis X. Bushman and Mary Miles Minter. The climax of the evening's events came in the Thanhouser Beauty Contest, the winner of which, Sophie Sidowski, a Portchester girl of about 18 years of age, is to be given an opportunity to become a Thanhouser star.

In the governor's party were: Major William J. Casey, Major W. J. Keville, Captain C. T. Dukelow, Captain F. N. Gunby, Lieutenant N. T. Very, Judge Thomas H. Connelly, Joseph F. Mellyn, and Major Thomas F. Walsh. With Mayor and Mrs. Curley were Mr. and Mrs. Francis L. Daley, Secretary and Mrs. Francis J. Brennan and a number of friends, besides members of the city government.

Among the stars were Clara Kimball Young, Gail Kane and others of the Equitable company; Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne, Valli Valli, Mary Miles Minter, Edmund Breese, Grace Valentine, Helen Dunbar, Jeanette Horton, Peggy Hopkins and George Le Guere from Metro; Flo La Badie, Gladys Hulette, Louis Emerald Bates, Ethel Cook and Harris Gordon representing Thanhouser; Viola Dana, Edward Earle, Metro crowd blocks Boston thoroughfare.

Mabel Trunnelle and Ethel Lawrence of the Edison company; Cissie Fitzgerald, Hal Forde and others from the Gaumont studio; King Baggot, Violet Mersereau, Ben Wilson and Dorothy Phillips of Universal; Earle Williams, Edith Storey, Virginia Pearson, Mary Maurice, Hughie Mack and Wally Van from Vitagraph; and Edwin August, Marguerite Courtrot, Christine Mayo and others of film fame and favor.

Among the executives who made the journey to Boston were: William T. Rock, Ad Kessel, Charles Kessel, Charles O. Baumann, William Wright, Richard A. Rowland, Joseph W. Engel, Len McChesney, Lewis J. Selznick, Carl Laemmle, J. S. Martin, A. Carlos, Sam Spedon, Arthur James, Harry Reichenbach, L. J. Rubinstein, Julian N. Solomon, Jr., Julius Stern, Louis Mayer and Charles Maddock.

The silent but active men in the background, to whom much credit for the ball's brilliant success is due, are Sam Grant, chairman of the executive committee, R. M. Brown, secretary, G. M. Clark, treasurer, and E. H. Horstmann, president of the state league.

Equitable Companies Scatter

S. E. V. Taylor, the latest addition to the Equitable's directorial forces, has taken the principals of his "Nan Perrine" company, with Molly McIntyre, the star, to Kingston and Port Royal, Jamaica, where a number of highly picturesque and exciting scenes are to be staged, with the great rocks of Port Royal harbor for a background. As Jamaica is a fortified British possession, the permission of the British government had to be obtained before the party's photographers could begin work, but armed with the permit there is every assurance that there is a treat in store for picture lovers.

"Babette of the Ballyhoo," another forthcoming Equitable feature, is to have the circus part of its scenes taken right where the outdoor winter shows are hatched and grow. Charles M. Seay, the director, has taken Muriel Ostriche, who is "Babette," and a number of principals to the sunny southland, where, with Athens, Ga., as his headquarters, he will join one of the big caravan shows for a fortnight, and get "atmosphere" at first hand.

The cave dwellers and the old cave habitations of New Mexico, and the great petrified forest of Arizona, where whole tree trunks, as well as the smallest twigs, have been turned into beautiful agate, will furnish the background for a number of scenes in "Her God," which E. Mason Hopper is directing for Equitable. The Zuni and Hopi Indian tribes will be among the participants in the scenes, with their native dances and costumes, and all their quaint and interesting ceremonials. Mr. Hopper started south on Wednesday and will make Albuquerque, N. M., his headquarters.

ANOTHER STUDIO FOR EQUITABLE

Big Horsley Plant in Bayonne, New Jersey, Taken Over by Triumph Company and Work Begins There at Once

Another big studio has been found necessary to keep up with the stage room demanded by the Equitable and to meet the increasing requirements, arrangements have been completed by which the great structure erected by the Horsley brothers in Bayonne, N. J., primarily for use by the Universal, has been taken over by the Triumph Company, the Equitable's producing ally. Edmond Lawrence, the director of "The Warning," has taken a company down to the big plant there, with Julia Dean as the star, and has started work on a big five-part production to be called "The Ransom."

The great building, which is on Avenue E, at the end of Sixty-ninth street, is almost entirely of glass, resting on a twenty-foot high foundation of brick, with a spacious cellar, in which the laboratories are located. It is completely equipped with everything necessary to producing photoplays of the most artistic type, and is a landmark on the path of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, down the narrow neck of land which leads to the long bridge across Newark Bay.

Boise "Fans" Get House Organ

The Idaho Amusement Company, Ltd., has sent Motography Volume 1, No. 3, of its new monthly magazine called The Photo Player. The publication numbers eighteen pages and cover, is well printed, and contains within its pages special articles by such writers as H. C. Weir, President H. E. Aitken of the Triangle Film Corporation, and H. H. Van Loan, besides brief reviews of some dozen or more special feature pictures, which will play during December at either the Isis or the Strand theater, which are controlled by the Idaho Amusement Company, Ltd.; the Isis showing Paramount films, and the Strand the output of Triangle, Metro and Universal.

The picture fans of Boise are certainly to be congratulated upon such carefully prepared advance information as they get in The Photo Play, and the Idaho Amusement Company is apparently finding it profitable, if one may judge by the amount of advertising the little house organ carries.

Palo Alto Corporation Begins Work

FAMOUS PEOPLE ENGAGED

JAMES CRUZE, Francelia Billington and Wellington Playter are playing the leading roles in the Palo Alto Film Corporation's five-reel picture now being made at the company's studio at Palo Alto, Cal. The script is an original one by the well-known scenario writer, Nell Shipman, and it is entitled "Wanda of the Red Street." Fred A. Kelsey, formerly of the Fine Arts studio, is directing the production, and W. Lee Ray, an experienced studio man, is technical director.

All of the above-mentioned bring to the Palo Alto company reputations for accomplishment in the world of films. The name of "Jimmie" Cruze brings to mind his several years' engagement with the Thanhouser company, his big role in "The Million Dollar Mystery" and in its follow-up serial, "The Twenty Million Dollar Mystery." It also recalls the recent across-the-state trip of Mr. Cruze by auto, and the thousands of people he entertained at the theaters en route and the thousands of hands he shook. Then followed an engagement with the Lasky company for one picture, and of three offers made him at the termination of this picture, he chose the Palo Alto affiliation.

Francelia Billington is the "Wanda" of the Palo Alto company's first five-reel picture. Her introduction to the screen occurred three years ago in a Thanhouser production in which Mr. Cruze played the lead. It was the picture in which Miss Billington, playing a bar-maid, was "discovered" by a critic on a motion picture trade journal, who advised that the charm of Miss Billington's personality deserved bigger scope. This the company gave her, and Miss Billington proved herself entirely capable. That was three years ago; since then she has adhered to the one connection, the Majestic company, and has played its leads for the last one and one-half years under D. W. Griffith's direction, leaving the Fine Arts studio for that of the Palo Alto company.

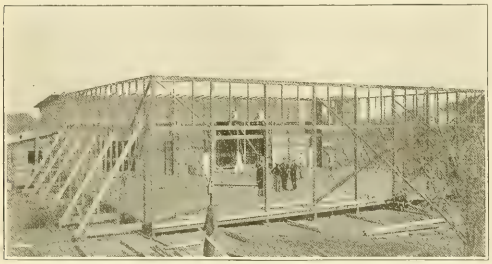
Wellington Playter's name associates itself primarily with Famous Players' productions, as his engagement with that company covered a year and a half and meant Mr. Playter's fine interpretation of many roles. He had the leading part in "A Daughter of the Hills" and had strong parts with Jack Barrymore, Bertha Kalich and other Broadway stars. Mr. Playter's finished work and his powerful physique make him a valuable screen personage; they led to his engagement with Kolb and Dill for a big role in their eight-reel picture, "Glory." Mr. Playter did not even have time to remove his make-up between the finish of the "Glory" picture and his start for Palo Alto, to play the heavy in "Wanda of the Red Street."

Nell Shipman, in giving this script to the Palo Alto company, contributed a strong foundation for the company to build upon; years of success in scenario writing has established her as one of the best-known writers for the screen. She is particularly fitted to produce logical scripts, as she has had experience in both acting and directing, and at present is playing the female lead in the Vitagraph company's Blue Ribbon feature "God's Country—and the Woman." During the past summer she co-directed with Jack Warren Kerrigan at Lake Tahoe on several scripts which she wrote for him.

Director Fred A. Kelsey, for the last two years, has been one of the directors at the Griffith studios. His work has received the commendation of press and public, and his offerings to the Mutual program have perhaps outnumbered those of any other one of its producers. His cameraman, C. Abel, accompanied him to the Palo Alto studio.

H. Tauber Goethe, president of the Palo Alto Film Corporation, is a Californian. He is a retired banker

James Cruze.



Francelia Billington.

Wellington Playter.

of Sacramento and has large cattle interests throughout California. He makes his home on a beautiful estate midway between San Jose and Palo Alto. Dr. Carl G. Wilson, vice-president of the company, is a lawyer of San Francisco; Melville Jeffrey, manager of productions, has had several years of theatrical and motion picture experience both in New York and on the coast. Professor H. C. Peterson, a member of the company's board of directors, is head of the Leland Stanford, Jr., museum and through him the university extends its good will and co-operation to the Palo Alto company. G. M. Herron, treasurer, and F. D. Macomber, secretary, are business men of Palo Alto.

Outdoor stage being completed by the Palo Alto Film Corporation at Palo Alto, Calif.

A market on a strong feature program has been secured by the Palo Alto corporation for its early releases.

Official Call for Executive Committee

Numerous requests having been made of President Fred J. Herrington for information regarding the time and place for holding the semi-annual meeting of the executive committee of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America I am directed by him to make a call for a two days' session of the above mentioned meeting, to take place on Wednesday and Thursday, January 5 and 6, 1916, at the La Salle Hotel, Chicago, Ill. First session to convene at 10:30 a. m. Wednesday, January 5.

Several matters of vital importance to the organization are to be considered at this meeting, including the selection of the city at which the national convention shall be held in July, 1916. Requests and liberal offers have been presented to the league by the following cities for the convention to date: Detroit, Mich., Chicago, Ill., Pittsburgh, Pa., and New York City.

In addition to the members of the executive committee, an invitation is cordially extended to all vice-presidents and state presidents of the league, and other exhibiting members of the league that may be at liberty to attend this meeting.

Prospects are that a good representative meeting will be had. President Herrington had very satisfactory results from his efforts in organizing a number of state branches since holding the office of national president, conferred on him July, 1915. Several states have already declared their intention of sending a representation to Chicago on January 5.

Any state league or member of the league wishing information pertaining to this meeting, or in any way relating to the league may secure same on applying to national headquarters, 238 Fourth avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa. James Delves, National Secretary.

WILLIAM FARNUM HONORED

Fox Star, with His Director, Oscar Apfel, and General Manager Sheehan, Are Guests of Honor at Sherman House Luncheon

William Farnum and Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of the Fox Film Corporation, were the guests of honor at a luncheon given on Thursday noon, December 2, at the Hotel Sherman, over which District Manager Worthington, of the Chicago office, presided as toastmaster.

Mr. Farnum and his director, Oscar Apfel, Aaron Jones, head of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, and Alfred Hamburger, of the Alfred Hamburger Theatrical Enterprises, were a few of those who sat down at the head table, while in the room were some thirty or more exhibitors and representatives of the trade journals and daily newspapers.

Following the luncheon, Toast Master Worthington introduced Deputy Commissioner of Public Works William Burkheart, who welcomed Mr. Farnum to the city in behalf of Mayor Thompson.

In reply, Mr. Farnum rose to his feet and, after explaining that he was about to be attacked by stage fright, briefly outlined the purpose of his trip to the west, where he, in company with Mr. Sheehan and Mr. Apfel, is going to establish a Los Angeles studio for a number of the notable Fox film productions. As a get-away, Mr. Farnum recited one of the stirring scenes from the "Prince of India," in which he was at one time starred on the legitimate stage.

Director Apfel and General Manager Sheehan, Aaron Jones, William J. Sweeney and several other prominent men present were called upon for brief remarks, and the meeting broke up with a general reception in honor of Messrs. Farnum, Sheehan and Apfel.

Those present included Aaron Jones of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, Alfred Hamburger of the Alfred Hamburger Theatrical Enterprises, William J. Sweeney, C. J. Schaefer, Joseph Trinz of the Vitagraph theater, Nat Ascher of Ascher brothers, Samuel Katz and Max Hyman of the Avon theater, Robert Levy of the Revelry theater, Fred Bartholomae of the Shakespeare theater, Archie Schwartz of the Rose theater, Mr. Karrigan of the Hyde Park theater, J. Tipton Steck of the Parkway theater, Abe and B. Balaban of the Circle theater, Sid. Smith of the Kedzie Annex, Mr. Vance of the Variety theater, Mr. Hirshberg of the Franklin theater, Mr. Morse of the Morse theater, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Weiss of the Clifton theater, Mr. Ross of Ross & Co., Mr. and Mrs. Burkheart of the Kenmore theater, all of Chicago; M. M. Rubens of the Princess theater, Joliet, Ill., V. T. Lynch of the South Shore theater, H. D. Burford of the Aurora theater, Aurora, Ill., C. E. Smith of the Grand Opera House, Terre Haute, Ind., Phillip Gross of the Strand theater, Milwaukee, Wis., D. Robinson, of the Apollo theater, Peoria, Ill., Messrs. Brentlinger & Mason, Orpheum theater, Ft. Wayne, Ind., S. E. Greenbaum, Casino theater, Davenport, Iowa, William Hollander, Chicago Daily News, E. W. McQuigg, Chicago Evening American, Miss Joclyn, Chicago Post, Walter Bloeser and Richard Little of the Chicago Tribune, Theodore Mead, of Motion Picture News, F. C. Zindler, Billboard, and Messrs. E. J. Mock, A. L. Haase and Neil G. Caward of Motography.

The Gaumont Company declares that the production entitled "The Secret Agent," which has, in some trade journals, been announced as ready for release on December 15, has been moved further ahead on the program, and in place of "The Secret Agent" Gaumont will release on December 15 a feature entitled "The Ace of Death."

GOFF IS ASSITANT MANAGER

Erstwhile Coast Division Head Given Second Big Promotion by V. L. S. E. Within Single Year—Assumes New Duties Immediately

An important change was made in the executive staff of V. L. S. E., Inc., this week when General Manager Walter W. Irwin announced the appointment of A. W. Goff, for the past three months in charge of the coast division of this organization, as the assistant general manager of the company. Mr. Goff is now on his way East, and will assume his new duties on Monday, December 13.

A. W. Goff.

His elevation to the direction of the V. L. S. E. sales force—which comprises the principal function of the position of assistant general manager of the V. L. S. E.—is the glowing recognition of the splendid work which Mr. Goff has done for the Big Four in the West, and of his noteworthy capacity to secure unusual results. It is the second appreciation of his capacity made within six months, Mr. Goff having been transferred from Cleveland, where he was branch manager for V. L. S. E., to San Francisco as coast division manager, last July.

In both Cleveland and along the Coast Mr. Goff made an enviable reputation for both himself and his company. He is dedicated to serving the exhibitor in the fullest sense of that word, and in every territory in which he has worked, he has come to be regarded by the theater managers both as their friend and as their counsel upon whom they might rely to help them build bigger and better business.

Mr. Goff is an ardent supporter of the "open booking" policy which is one of the fundamental business doctrines of V. L. S. E., believing that the best results are obtained for both the exhibitor and the distributing company if the exhibitor is permitted to book the particular feature he wants, when he wants it, for as long as he wants it, without tying him up with a contract that makes it obligatory to take features he does not want, and therefore limit the run of each feature.

In the appointment of Mr. Goff it is understood that Mr. Irwin desires more time for creative work, and therefore sought the lieutenant best suited to relieve him of much of the excutive detail in connection with the V. L. S. E.

Mr. Goff holds with General Manager Walter W. Irwin, who is responsible for the emphasis which V. L. S. E. gives to the "open booking" policy that there has never been a feature—a strong feature—exhibited long enough to give everybody interested an opportunity to see it. He has won hundreds of theater managers to this viewpoint, showing them that the cast-iron yearly contracts which prevent an exhibitor from re-booking and re-running the features that score big hits, have cost them thousands of dollars, and that they have lost a tremendous volume of word-of-mouth advertising by being forced to let these features pass on, in order to make a place for the next feature released on the program.

Mr. Irwin plans to spend more time with his different department managers and with his branch managers, bending every effort to make the Big Four's service of the highest possible efficiency to the exhibitor.

Original Scenarios Only for Equitable

"If the purchasing of dramatic stories and former stage successes at fictitious prices is the only way Equitable can succeed, Equitable is doomed to dismal failure."

Arthur H. Spiegel, president of the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, is the author of the above terse paragraph.

"We are going after original, unconventional, different stories with exceptional plots, unpictured situations, clean but powerful documents. We are willing to go a long, long way to procure an original story—but to buy in a dramatic piece, with a conventional plot and nothing novel, at a great big price, just because some well known writer is responsible for it, and it played a few months on Broadway—we will not do it!"

"We bought 'The Chain Invisible,'" said Mr. Spiegel, "only after our two scenario experts and one of the best directors we have, read and approved it. We were aware all the time that Richard Le Gallienne was a wonderful conceiver of plots and situations, but we cannot visualize reputations. We can only put the material on the screen."

In answer to a question, Mr. Spiegel said:

"We have contracted with Roy McCardell, who has written no less than two hundred successful film stories, to write a scenario for us, and Mr. McCardell will bear me out in the statement that before we treated with him at all he was asked to submit his plot, ideas and scene plots.

"Mr. McCardell was broad. He left our office on Monday and returned a few days later with his story entirely outlined. His work was thorough, he had met our request with a finished and detailed statement as to what could be done with the two thousand word synopsis he submitted. The result was that a deal was consummated and Mr. McCardell is now at work completing his scenario.

"Rachel Crothers, who is responsible for half a dozen big Broadway plays, is under contract with us to write scenarios—but before we concluded arrangements with her, we were satisfied in every respect that she was equipped and able to concoct stories that could be visualized.

"Our great trouble in the past," continued Mr. Spiegel, "was that producers have been buying stories written at the stage, and in which dialogue played the principal role. We must have stories written directly at the screen, and in which the dialogue is but a minor feature."

Speaking about stars fitting the plays Mr. Spiegel said: "We have all been wrong on that, too. It is a fallacy to say that such and such a play does not fit a star. An actor of merit is an actor of merit. He or she is being paid big money on the strength of his or her ability to portray various parts."

ESSANAY TO RELEASE SERIES

Chicago Film Concern to Produce "The Strange Case of Mary Page" With Henry Walthall and Edna Mayo

"The Strange Case of Mary Page," a drama of mystery, is being produced by the Essanay Company. Henry B. Walthall, probably the most finished actor in motion pictures, and beautiful Edna Mayo, whose dramatic ability equals her pulchritude, will be the stars. The drama will be issued in a series of episodes, the first of which is to be released early in January. Each episode will be complete in itself.

The production is announced as being "not a dramatized dime novel acted by acrobats," but a first-class drama with a notable cast and with direction and photography of the highest type. The story, which will be printed in serial form by nearly 500 newspapers, is by the author of that famous serial, "What Happened to Mary."

A feature of the photoplay, appealing especially to women, will be Miss Mayo's gowns. Her elaborate wardrobe, which includes costumes for every occasion —from boudoir to ballroom—is being designed by Lady Duff-Gordon (Lucile).

"The Strange Case of Mary Page" is the first series ever offered by the Essanay Company, which has kept out of this department of picture production until its officers were positive that they could release the best and most fascinating series of all time.

In addition to the publication of the series of tales in the newspapers, a monster advertising campaign in a score of magazines of the widest circulation has been launched. Among the periodicals that will be used are Cosmopolitan, McClure's, Ladies' World, Pictorial Review, McCall's, Metropolitan, Hearst's, Mother's, Collier's, Leslie's, Munsey's and all the motion picture publications.

"Red Circle" Director Well Qualified

Balboa's production of "The Red Circle," the serial photoplay soon to be released by Pathe, will, it is rumored, bear particular watching, for it promises to be one of the strongest features issued by that firm. Those responsible for the production are Sherwood Macdonald, director, and William Beckway, cameraman. Owing to their combined efforts a highly creditable piece of work has been turned out for the screen, Ruth Roland and Frank Mayo being the featured players.

"The Red Circle" consists of fourteen two-reel episodes. It differs from preceding screen serials, in that a natural story runs all the way through, which possesses the power of holding attention, without resort to spectacular situations, artificial thrills and the usual claptrap associated with this sort of production. Will M. Ritchey wrote the scenarios on the basic idea furnished by H. M. Horkheimer, head of the Balboa Company.

Director Macdonald is well fitted for putting on a picture of this sort. A native of New York, he first went to Philips Academy and then graduated from Yale in 1902. Following, he studied law at Columbia, after which he practiced his profession in the metropolis for seven years. Criminal law being his specialty, Macdonald gained first-hand insight for visualizing just such a story as "The Red Circle." While he liked the law, Mr. Macdonald could not resist the call of the camera.

Going west, he decided to learn the film business from the bottom up and started in as an "extra." Because he owned a dress suit and knew how to wear it, he soon got a chance to play a "bit." Joining Balboa, it wasn't long before the opportunity to direct was offered and he made good from the start. Among the many notable features put on by Mr. Macdonald recently was "The Adventures of a Madcap," with Jackie Saunders in the lead.

Left, William Beck, cameraman; right, Sherwood MacDonald, director who filmed "The Red Circle," Pathe's forthcoming detective photoplay.

Wiliam Beckway is Balboa's head cameraman. He has been with the Horkheimer brothers ever since they opened their Long Beach studio. Picture making is never work with Beckway, but an art. The effective "shot" is what he always aims for, not so much because it makes a pretty picture, but because it is the surest way to drive the thought home. Beckway never makes a commonplace exposure; and he refuses to be hurried. He firmly believes in taking time, though to the inexperienced it might seem to be wasting it.

He Has an Eagle Eye for Locations

P. Thad. Volkman, assistant to Director Edgar Jones, of the Metro staff, is so fortunate in finding suitable locations for motion pictures that his companions accuse him of using some sort of a divining rod. He was the first person to receive permission to use a prominent church in New York City for making interior scenes. In making "The Turmoil," which is now almost completed, it was necessary to have a big warehouse that would collapse under the weight of several men on the roof. For a time it appeared as if the Metro forces would have to build such a structure.

Thad. was put on the job to see what he could find, and true to form, he found a warehouse on the Boston Post Road, near Pelham, N. Y., that the owners were about to raze. Thad. has contracted to take down the building, which will fall with a crash while the cameras click, and three actors, including Ferd. Tidmarsh, who plays the role of "Jim Sheridan, Jr.," in "The Turmoil" will meet their doom.

Valli Valli is starred in "The Turmoil" and George La Guere, the talented juvenile, is featured. The feature was made from the famous novel of the same name, written by Booth Tarkington.

The Man Who Put Ninth Street on the Map

TOM MOORE'S CAREER

AFTER much persuasion a representative of Motography was able to secure an interview with Tom Moore, better known as the pioneer exhibitor of Washington. The word persuasion is used because Tom Moore is a hard worker, with whom every minute in the day counts and he is adverse to talking about himself, preferring his vast enterprises to speak for him.

Tom Moore.

Mr. Moore had just finished his morning mail when the interviewer was ushered into his cozy private office in the Garden theater building and his frank, cordial manner soon put the scribe entirely at ease. "It was after a successful vaudeville career and years previous to the opening of Washington's first regular motion picture theater that I began operations in the nation's capitol, my home town," said Mr. Moore. "I was heartily tired and sick of 'the road' with its hurried jumps and poor hotels, that I just naturally longed to settle down permanently.

"I started in rather a unique way. It happened at about the time when the Edison film of 'The Great Train Robbery' was first interesting the American public. Here, said I, is my opportunity, so I collected all of my available assets and bought a print of the film from an itinerant circus man for the sum of twenty-one dollars. Then I did some high financiering and traded the picture to a farmer for a horse, harness, buggy and a cow. I thought he was a farmer indeed, but after I got a slant at the bovine I concluded he was a wise guy. However, the farmer's hired man bought the cow for twenty-five dollars and I was satisfied, for this amount enabled me to fatten up the horse, which I later sold together with the harness and buggy for eighty-five dollars.

"This capital was immediately invested in other films. From this humble start I developed a 'live wire' exchange business, which I later sold to the General Film Company. While in the exchange business I gradually took over various local theaters and at one time my circuit comprised sixteen houses. About this time I began to see the enormous possibilities in the exhibiting end of the industry, and realized that large theaters were an absolute necessity.

"The Imperial theater on Ninth street, built for vaudeville purposes, having proved a failure for its promoters passed into my hands in August of 1912. For a while I ran vaudeville, but being a picture man myself and perceiving the handwriting on the wall, I established a straight film policy with a large orchestra. To the best of my knowledge and belief I was the first man in the east to have a symphony orchestra accompany pictures. I laid special stress upon the music, for the orchestra was composed of first-line soloists of the United States Marine Band, and when they gave concerts at the White House the second-line soloists played at the Garden.

At that time features of the big variety were almost unheard of, and I had to go out into the open market to find them; indeed very often I had to buy them outright. The direst failure was predicted for me by my fellow exhibitors, who claimed that I wouldn't fill the eleven hundred seats of the Garden once a day."

"Daresay they were bad predicters," interposed the interviewer. "Indeed, they were," replied Mr. Moore, "for the Garden opens at 10 a. m. and we practically play to capacity business all day long. Rather providentially for me, Messrs. Stair and Havlin, who had been operating the old Academy of Music, at Ninth and D streets, just below the Garden, tired of trying to sustain a losing proposition, relinquished their lease and I lost no time in taking over the house. The theater had been allowed to almost run itself, its clientele was of the most undesirable character, and its entrance was around the corner on D street and up a short flight of steps. I immediately started a paint-up-and-clean-up campaign, made the interior look like new and rechristened it Moore's Orpheum theater. No matter how strong an attraction I put in, no matter how hard I tried, they just wouldn't come in. I even had the huge stage relaid in bird's eye maple and instituted exclusive stage dansants after each performance, but the public still passed it by and crowded into the Garden. After a great deal of trouble and after a large expenditure of money I succeeded in constructing an entrance on Ninth street. Again I rechristened the house, this time calling it Moore's Strand theater, refurnished the entire interior and installed an augmented symphony orchestra of soloists. 'Cabiria' was the opening atraction under the new regime and after a short struggle and a heavy advertising campaign we wooed and won the fickle public and the Strand is now an even and consistent money getter."

Moore's Strand Theater.

The interviewer interrupted long enough to say, "You must be a great believer in Ninth street." "I am," replied Mr. Moore, "I've seen it develop from a side street into Washington's most important promenading thoroughfare and the street is fairly crowded with pedestrians both day and night. Locally I have been given large credit for its popular development. I have long since disposed of my other holdings and at present I operate the Strand, the Garden and the Plaza theaters, all situated on the same block of Ninth street."

"Have you other houses in prospect?" asked the interviewer. "Yes," replied Mr. Moore. "I intend to erect two more theaters in this immediate vicinity. I have already secured the property and will commence building operations in the early spring. One of the houses will be an exact duplicate of the Strand in New York, except that it will be larger in every respect. In all probability I will devote this theater entirely to high-class photoplays. The other theater will in large measure duplicate the Rialto, Rothapfel's new photoplay theater on the site of Hammerstein's in New York —indeed, I expect the plans from him in a week or so. This will be a straight motion picture theater and I have made arrangements with Mr. Rothapfel to follow his program at the Rialto. These two theaters will represent an investment of over a million dollars, and then I shall rest upon my oars for awhile."

Moore's Garden Theater.

But from the writer's observation rest and Tom Moore are absolute strangers, for by his own admission he has worked many a time twenty-three out of twenty-four hours. "What will be the capacities of these new theaters?" asked the interviewer. "Thirty-three hundred and twenty-five hundred, respectively. The attractions to be staged in the new houses will probably, as outlined by Mr. Rothapfel and myself, be specially staged. Orchestras in each theater will be composed of from twenty-five to thirty soloists, and prices of admission will probably range from twenty-five to fifty cents. Each theater will have a handsome ballroom and finely equipped roof garden with elevators and escalators leading to same."

"Now let me have some of your observations upon film plays and the motion picture industry," said the interviewer. "Well, to my mind," said Mr. Moore, lighting a fresh cigar, "the absolute success of the industry has been its cleanliness and progressiveness. Three years ago I predicted in an article in the Dramatic Mirror the exploitation of stage stars in pictures and their advent into the field was a great uplift to the business. I am a great believer in music and exercise the greatest care in the selection of our programs, which are carefully balanced. There is no excuse for an exhibitor playing a poor picture nowadays, for he has an abundance of features to choose from. The idea of pleasing the public is in large measure buncombe, for ofttimes the fickle public doesn't know what it wants and it's up to the exhibitor to display his showmanship ability. Good pictures, properly displayed, with correct musical accompaniment, will always attract the picture-going public, providing they are in the right house on the right street. I pay special attention to the running of my theaters and my managers are in thorough sympathy with me and endeavor in every way to carry out my ideas. Courtesy and refinement toward the public are two of our hobbies, and our employes are carefully instructed along these lines."

"What do you think the future of the motion picture drama will be?" was the next query. "That's a question that would require the services of a prophet. The pictures are mighty fine now, the photography and acting, in the main, first class. Some predict the return to one and two reels, but I don't think that would satisfy the public. It demands big things. To my mind the future will draw the speaking stage and the screen closer together; can't you imagine the effectiveness of a production wherein the indoor scenes are enacted by experienced players and the outdoor episodes depicted on the screen? Such a novelty may come to pass."

Film to Be Christmas Attraction

Another illustration of the inroads which the screen is making upon the stage is afforded in the announcement that the Lyric theater in Cincinnati, a Shubert house, will offer for its holiday bill the new Lubin drama, "The Great Divide," which is to be released through V. L. S. E., Inc., on December 20. This feature will run at this house during all of Christmas week, and will be extensively advertised in the same manner as Hubert Henck, manager of the Lyric, advertises the legitimate productions.

Exhibitors everywhere are looking forward with keen interest to the release of "The Great Divide." It is predicted that it will be one of the strongest features in its drawing qualities that the trade has ever been offered. Impartial critics who have seen the picture say that it should run for two years easily. The photographic effects reach the zenith of the art. The production itself is powerfully dramatic.

The Lubin Company, through V. L. S. E., Inc., is issuing some remarkable advertising on this feature. It has been prepared under the direction of R. W. MacFarland, the New York representative.

The Making of a Railroad Screen Novel

BY SAMUEL S. HUTCHINSON*

FROM the day that the idea of the power of steam was conceived in the mind of a boy sitting in his mother's kitchen, watching the stream of vapor rise from the spout of a boiling kettle, down to the present day of billions of dollars worth of railroad properties and the speed of the lightning express trains and powerful mogul engines, there has not developed a theme of greater popular interest than the railroad.

S. S. Hutchinson.

In all rural and suburban districts the people depend upon the railroads as a means of transportation. In the larger cities and the business centers of our civilization commerce depends upon the railroads. A large percentage of the working class is directly or indirectly in the employ of these great organizations and countless thousands of persons, great and small in our social scale, derive their livelihood from the earnings of these common carriers. Capitalists watch the earnings of these railroad enterprises, as well as legislation for or against them, as the chief barometer of the times. It can be well said that in the railroads beats the pulse of our national life. Therefore, to portray a railroad story on the screen requires that those who attempt it be the best in their line. Frank Hamilton Spearman, the author of "The Girl and the Game," made a study of railroad life which carried him into the innermost secrets of the financial and operating ends of our great transcontinental lines. He knows "the game."

James P. McGowan, the director, is a practical railroad man and his pictures have won for him the praise of railroad officials, the country over. Helen Holmes, the heroine in "The Girl and the Game," is ideal for the part. She possesses that deep and thorough understanding of picture values and ability to present exceptional dramatic interpretations, and the courage to take personal risks, to bring realism to the story, that places her in a niche all her own. Miss Holmes is fair and fearless—the heroine perfect.

In order that the director and his company might be accorded every facility for the taking of the unusual and spectacular scenes in "The Girl and the Game" I had erected a depot on the grounds of the Signal studios, practicable in every way, inside and outside, switch towers at various points on the Signal trackage and all the known safeguards, as well as hazards of the rail, were installed or provided for, including locomotives and rolling stock.

An idea of the completeness of the Signal studios may be gleaned from the fact that in the taking of the first chapter of "The Girl and the Game" Director McGowan, twenty minutes after the author's script had been given to him, had a train of Pullmans, parlor cars, diner, baggage car, day coaches and engine, all ready and waiting for the camera.

In the actual operation of railroads there is much that is romantic, much that is adventurous, bringing into the hearts of all a responsive feeling of compelling interest. Great writers have turned to the rail for their theme, but Mr. Spearman has felt the pulse of "the game" as has no one else, and a fertile imagination has enabled him to paint into all of its realism "the girl," dainty, charming and daring.

Mr. Spearman has deciphered the mysterious web entangling the operations of vast railroad enterprises, drawn it gently from off the statuesque shoulders of a pampered daughter of society, and hidden within it the piercing eyes of some charmer of another sisterhood, who has put her jewel laden hands into "the game."

It is because there is so much of the human element in the life of those of the rail that Mr. Spearman was attracted to it as a subject teeming with unusual heart interest. He is thrilled by the hum of the long steel threads and the chant of the telegraph key, distributing its messages of mingled hope, success and despair. It all means something to him and he has knowingly written what that meaning is. Were he not a writer, it would mean just as much to him, for his understanding of it all is beyond a suppression of feeling—something unconquerably big and undeniably dominant.

Thus in "The Girl and the Game" he gives you himself—his innermost self, wrapped up in lingerie of literary lace and a tremendous storm coat of vigorous thought, which Director McGowan with convincing realism has put upon the screen.

The keyboard of life lives in "The Girl and the Game" and author, director and star bring forth in natural continuity and definite sincerity the pictured chants of regret, and anthems of triumph, the great human notes of which are characters of blood and bone.

*President Signal Film Corporation.

Ince's New Plant Nearing Completion

Working like veritable beavers night and day, the contractors who are building the new "$250,000 studio at Culver City for Producer Thomas H. Ince announced this week that the plant should be in full operation before the first of next year. All the steel structure work has been completed and the only thing the builders are waiting for now is the settling of the concrete foundations. The eight stages and the glass enclosed studio are rapidly assuming shape and work on the erection of the mammoth administration building already has commenced. Under the direction of Business Manager E. H. Allen, plans are being made for the grand ball which will be a feature of the dedicatory exercises on New Year's Eve.

TWO OCEAN RELEASES A MONTH

General Manager Goldberg Announces His Company, Beginning January Fifteenth, Will Offer Famous Book Adaptations in Film

The Ocean Film Corporation, which has lately released its initial production, "Life Without Soul," is now actively engaged in the production of features, to form a part of its program to release two five-part features a month, adaptations from stage plays or popular novels, with legitimate or screen stars in the lead. The program will have its initial release about January 15, the program to be controlled by independent exchanges, to whom a franchise will be awarded at a convention of the exchanges, called for Saturday, December 11, 1915, at the Astor Hotel in New York City.

The Ocean Film Corporation has purchased, through the Paget Literary Agency, the rights to the internationally famous novel, "The Fortunate Youth," written by Edward J. Locke, which has been pronounced the most notable novel of the year, and has also secured options on sixteen of the foremost dramatic and literary productions placed before the public within the past ten years. Negotiations are also pending with legitimate stage and screen stars to appear in each of the coming releases of the company.

The definite plans of the Ocean Film Corporation, as announced at the executive offices of the company in the Candler building, are to produce the highest class features possible, without sparing expense in the producing end of the work, but eliminating every conceivable overhead charge that does not add to the wealth of the feature or is not indispensable to the proper working of the organization.

The formal organization of the company was completed Thursday evening, at a meeting of the subscribers to the capital stock, and the following gentlemen were elected officers and directors:

President and financial manager, John L. Dudley, who is a trustee of the Citizens Savings Bank of New York City, and a member of the New York Chamber of Commerce. Vice-president and general manager, Jesse J. Goldburg, who, prior to his association with the Ocean Film Corporation, was the organizer and secretary and general manager of the Life Photo Company. Secretary, George S. Brown.

The board of directors consists of the three officers above named and Francis R. Masters, of William Whitman & Company, one of the leading textile manufacturers of the country; Paul E. Rasor, one of the leading representatives of foreign insurance companies in America; William D. Judson, of Parker Wilder & Co.; R. C. E. Brown, formerly editor of the New York Tribune.

George DeCarlton, popularly known in the motion picture industry as one of the pioneers in the producing end, has been engaged, under a long term contract, as manager of productions. The present quarters of the company have been enlarged by the addition of six offices immediately adjacent to those heretofore occupied by the company in the Candler building. Plans have been drawn for the erection of an eastern studio and laboratory in Westchester county, the construction of the building to be under the personal supervision of Edward Barnard Kinsila, the architect who has planned and built most of the large motion picture studios in this country. The plans embrace innovations in the construction that permit of the conversion of an artificially lighted studio into an open-air studio, as well as a daylight studio. Major Joe Farnum has been engaged as publicity and advertising manager.

Jesse J. Goldburg, vice-president and general manager of the company, declares, "We have proceeded rather slowly in our organization work, in order to systematize the entire organization, and will not engage men with fancy titles in order to lead the exhibitors or the exchanges to believe that we intend operating their business. Every employee of this company will be a man who is engaged in the production end of the work. We feel that if we deliver to the exchanges a meritorious production, they, in their turn, knowing how to operate their business, will not require assistance by way of local advertising men, traveling inspectors, and the like."

Arthur Donaldson

Of the many legitimate players nowadays abandoning the stage and entering filmdom few are more thoroughly equipped than Arthur Donaldson, the well known actor, author and producer. Mr. Donaldson's first American appearance was made with a Swedish company in 1890. Finally his magnificent baritone voice gained for him an engagement with the Duff Opera Company, and subsequently with the famous singer, Emma Thursby, in concert tours under management of Major J. B. Pond. In 1893 he organized a Swedish stock company to play at the old Athenaeum in Brooklyn, and the following season he took his company of Swedish players to Chicago.

Arthur Donaldson.

In 1896-7 Mr. Donaldson was engaged by Fred C. Whitney to sing the title role in "Rob Roy," and the next season he starred as Baron De Grimm in "Madeline, or the Magic Kiss." He was then engaged for the Tivoli Opera Company in San Francisco, and after a very successful season there signed a three year contract with the late Augustus Daly to appear in his musical productions at Daly's Theater, New York.

In the summer of 1911 he went to Ireland with the Kalem Company to appear in the Irish pictures, and while abroad he accepted an offer to sing the leading baritone roles at the Oscar Theater, Stockholm, Sweden. For a year he produced and played in his own photoplays for the Swedish Biograph Company. On his return to Ameria he played for Pathe and Kalem. His last appearance with Kalem was as the great French general, Marquise De Montcolm, in the "Conquest of Quebec." His two most recent pictures are "The Salamander" and "The Land of the Lost," in which he played and directed.

Big Directors for Premier Program

Premier Program announces that four of its directors, who are at present at work on pictures, are George L. Le Soir, James W. Castle, Joseph A. Richmond and Hugh Reticker. All of these are prominently and favorably known as directors of marked ability. All have had extensive experience as motion picture directors and bring with them to the Premier Program the intimate and artistic knowledge requisite for the production of high grade pictures.

Castle is probably best known in the dramatic world as the man who produced "The Goose Girl" and "Graustark," and his recollection of things dramatic runs back through the time of Augustin Daly and extends to his first job as callboy in the Surrey theater, London, England.

Joseph A. Richmond started his theatrical career in the now classic production of "Ben Hur," later directing the summer stock in St. Louis, where such stars as Amelia Bingham, James K. Hackett, Henrietta Crossman and others came under his direction. His first motion picture experience was in 1908 with Selig in Chicago, from where he went to the Edison Company, later to join the Dra-Ko Film Company of the Premier Program.

George L. Le Soir comes to the Premier Program direct from Europe, having left Moscow, where he was producing Tolstoi's "Living Tomb." Previous to his Russian experience Mr. Le Soir directed pictures for the Art Film Company of London, and the Imp and Thanhouser Companies of this country. Pathe and Kalem have also availed themselves of his services as director. For the latter company he opened and managed the New Orleans studio. Mr. Le Soir is the founder and publisher of the Theater Magazine and previous to directing pictures was prominently known as an actor, having acted with John Drew, James K. Hackett and Bertha Galland.

Hugh Reticker started his dramatic career as stage director and after ten years of this joined the Motion Picture Sales Company, directing the old Yankee brand, later spending some time with Imp, Powers and Edison. His experience is wide and Ford Sterling is among those whom Reticker directed in the difficult art of motion picture acting. Recently he has produced several features, his last one being a baseball story.

ADDITIONS TO HORSLEY STAFF

Howard Millcrest, Edward Alexander, Irvin Martinas and Freddie Wade Engaged for Important Duties at West Coast Plant

Recent engagements by David Horsley for his playing forces at his studios in Los Angeles include Howard Millcrest and Edward Alexander, both well known photoplayers, and for his technical departments Irvin J. Martinas and Freddie Wade. Messrs. Millcrest and Alexander have been placed in Director William J .Bowman's company producing Centaur feature animal pictures, in which company William Clifford is featured. Mr. Martinas has been appointed Mr. Bowman's assistant, and Mr. Wade has been made cameraman for Ulysses Davis, who is also engaged in directing Centaur features.

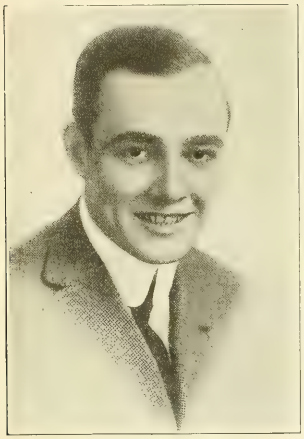
Mr. Millcrest has been in motion pictures for the past year and a half and in that time earned extensive popularity. Prior to his picture debut he followed the speaking stage as a vocation, appearing with the New York Hippodrome Company in "A Trip to Japan" and "A Trip Around the World" and other attractions staged at the big playhouse. He was also stage manager for Julia Dean. His first picture for Mr. Horsley is "The Terror of the Fold," which is to be released as a Centaur feature, December 30, on the Mutual program.

Like Mr. Millcrest, Edward Alexander also makes his bow as a David Horsley player in "The Terror of the Fold." He was, until recently, with the American Film Manufacturing Company at its Santa Barbara studios, where he portrayed leading characters in "The San Rat," "The Curse of the Black Pearl," "The Arm of the Law," and other productions. This engagement was preceded by a two and a half years' service with the Universal company.

Mr. Martinas, who is Mr. Bowman's assistant,

Joseph H. Richmond.

James W. Castle.



Hugh Reticker.

acted in a like capacity for the director during his term with the Quality company, releasing Francis X. Bushman pictures. Mr. Wade, the fourth acquisition, was for three years with the Vitagraph company. The first negative turned out by him is "The Arab's Vengeance," which is to be released as a Centaur feature on the Mutual program December 16.

Charles Ray of Triangle

When "The Coward" was exhibited on the Triangle program, Charles Ray came into his own. It was a psychological study of astonishing naturalness—that of the cowardly boy who was not the coward he thought he was. Such acting has seldom been seen on the screen. Other excellent roles he has given us include his parts in "The City of the Dead," "The Cup of Life," with Bessie Barriscale and "The Painted Soul" with the same clever actress.

Charles Ray.

Charles Ray is singular in that he has not acted first with one company and then with another. During his entire picture experience he has been under the guiding hand of Thomas H. Ince and has worked exclusively at Inceville by the Ocean. He has been with this concern for over three years now and has risen from ordinary juvenile parts to very considerable prominence. Charles has been very loyal and his loyalty has paid him well both in coin of the realm and in appreciation from his employers.

Charles Ray recently took unto himself a charming wife, who is not in the profession and they have a beautiful little bungalow in which they are making big plans for the happy tomorrow. He is very popular indeed with his fellows, is a fine swimmer and rider, loves tennis and is a fearless automobile pilot. Ray has much before him.

Cinema Camera Club Ball

On Saturday evening, December 18, the Cinema Camera Club will hold its third annual ball at the Palm Garden, Fifty-eighth street, near Lexington avenue, New York City. Cinema members promise that it will rival the Screen Club Ball in its splendor and costumes and in the number of motion picture celebrities present. Moving pictures will be taken of the grand march, and will be released in the different motion picture weeklies.

Boxes have been purchased by all of the leading companies in the industry, and will be filled with executives and famous stars. The grand march will be led by Anita Stewart, Vitagraph, and William Farnum, Fox. The advance sale of tickets indicates that this will be the most successful affair ever held by the club.

The Cinema Camera Club was organized on April 5, 1913, for the mutual benefit and welfare of the camera men. Its membership consists of the leading cinematographic artists of this country. The arrangement committee for the ball is composed of Phil Rosen, Walter Scott, A. L. Ausbacher, Arthur Edeson and George Lane. The purpose of the ball is not alone the frivolous one of affording a good time, which is assured those who intend to be among the present, but is to advance the camera men's club house fund.

Edison Folk Frolic in Studio

A big "house warming" and get-together party of the Edison folk was held Saturday evening, December 4, in the Edison studio, which was given over to the fun of the hour. Manager Leonard W. McChesney believes that all work and no play makes not for the best, so the Edison players, who have been particularly busy of late turning out features for the General Film Company's program and the Kleine-Edison Feature Service, made a playground of their workshop.

The officials of the Edison organization, at Orange, were invited, and Thomas A. Edison, C. H. Wilson, vice-president and general manager, and Second Vice-President William Maxwell, among many others, met the players.

The entire studio floor was cleared and especially prepared for dancing. A large orchestra furnished the music. A huge pie concealed favors for every one present, which came into view by each one pulling on his surprise string. Many felicitous speeches were made at the refreshment hour, after which all present were entertained by a rich burlesque on some of the officials and the leading players. Jesse Stevens surmounted physical differences and gave an imitation of the little star, Viola Dana, with laughable success. Under guise of an imitation of "Maple Prunella," sketched by Mabel Dwight, Miss Trunelle was easily seen. Raymond McKee imitated Edward Earle, Harry Eytinge took off "Dick" Weber, assistant to Manager Leonard W. McChesney; Julian Reed, an Edison official; while Richard Tucker picturized "Henry Fordham, the jitney actor." Mr. and Mrs. Brad Sutton "got away with" a mind reading act, and Messrs. Harris, Fables and McKee did a trained animal skit. Carroll McComas, well known on vaudeville and dramatic stages, rendered songs and a whistling act.

Prizes were awarded for the best dancers. John Rough, chief scene artist, gave some lightning cartoon sketches of players. About four hundred attended. The affair was informal and in charge of a committee consisting of Sally Crute, Jessie Stevens, Mabel Dwight, and Richard Tucker.

Triangle Service Multiplies Rapidly

The program service of the Triangle Film Corporaiton is increasing at the rate of 60 to 75 new theaters every week. The expectation that 1,000 theaters will be taking the service before the middle of the year is rapidly becoming a reality. A noticeable fact is the fairly equal distribution of the films all over the United States in proportion to population, showing that the work of Messrs. Griffith, Ince and Sennett is as strong in one section as in another.

Gaumont to Triple Present Plant

INCREASED FACILITIES REQUIRED

RECENT rumors regarding increased activity of the Gaumont Company by no means measured up to the magnitude of that company's operations as outlined in an authoritative statement just issued from the Gaumont headquarters at Flushing, L. I. It was understood that there would be alterations and improvements in the present plan, but large purchases of adjoining property have brought an acknowledgment that by spring Gaumont will have increased its present facilities at least three-fold. This is in addition to the thousands of dollars being invested in permanent winter quarters at Jacksonville, Fla.

Having quietly tied up practically all the Flushing property bounded by Linden, Myrtle and Congress avenues and Park place, last week the Gaumont Company completed the necessary purchases. Not only will the buildings upon these sites be torn down immediately, but the present administration building, the studio, open-air stage, shipping department and structures housing the staff of the technical director and properties will also be leveled to the ground in order to lay out the new plant to the best advantage.

When the Rialto Star feature companies, which make the Gaumont releases on the Mutual program, return from Jacksonville in the spring they will have great difficulty in recognizing the property where they worked last summer. A large plot will be devoted to the all-year studio, which will be erected on the Linden avenue side of the property. Here several companies will be able to work at the same time under glass and artificial light. The large space required for studio purposes under glass foreshadows the announcement that there will be companies at work all the year at Flushing, in addition to the Gaumont winter activities at Jacksonville.

There will be dressing rooms under the stage sufficient to quarter comfortably all the visiting stars, members of the several stock companies, and at least a couple of hundred extra people. These will be modern in every respect, having all the conveniences warranted by the magnitude of the Gaumont operations.

The directors will have offices close to the stages where they will work. The plans call for an open-air stage so large that half a dozen directors may work at the same time without interfering with each other. This will extend from a line near Myrtle avenue almost to the present factory site that fronts on Park place.

The work of the Gaumont technical director will be rendered easier by locating his workshops and property room between the studio and the open-air stage. The staff of artists employed by Cartoonist Harry Palmer to aid him in producing his humorous animated cartoon series, "Keeping Up With the Joneses," will be housed in this building.

"We are contemplating an expenditure of from $150,000 to $200,000," said F. G. Bradford, general manager of the Gaumont Company, in discussing the expansion of the interests which he directs. "The greater part of this money will go into our Flushing property, although I am frank to say if we consider our Florida winter quarters desirable that we shall put in many thousands of dollars of improvements there to establish a plant on a permanent basis.

"Through the Mutual Film Corporation there will soon be issued an announcement of the part the Gaumont Company will take in the new $8,000,000 program. I may say now, however, that to us will fall a larger share of production than we have enjoyed up to the present time. As you may readily imagine, our big additions and improvements are the necessary first steps.

"The performance of our program arrangement may be inferred from the fact that the members of our stock companies are planning to buy or lease homes in Flushing to be near their work. The Gaumont Company has the old-fashioned virtue of wishing to keep its people steadily in its employ. I look to see grow up in Flushing a pleasant colony of actor-folk, for whom we shall have a steady demand."

Contracts are now being made for construction work to begin soon after Christmas. When the Rialto Star feature companies return from Jacksonville everything will be in readiness for summer work. There will be no change in one pleasing feature of the Gaumont policy; each production will feature a new star. At present Malcom Williams and Miss Stella Hammerstein are being filmed at Jacksonville, the former in a Mutual Masterpicture. Now that producing must be discontinued at Flushing for a few months, new Rialto Star feature companies must soon be organized at Jacksonville.

Morosco Studios Continue to Expand

Shortly after completing the new additions to the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company plant in Los Angeles, this progressive Paramount producer indicates a continuance of its policy of expansion and improvement. The most recent development along this line is the purchase of a large bungalow property adjoining the studio proper. The grounds of the property allow for a waiting room for "extras" and the extension of scene docks.

It is planned to house the scenario department, technical staff and art director in the newly acquired bungalow, making room available for other needs in the offices vacated by these. The additional property adds to the appearance of Mr. Morosco's up-to-date plant, which has become known as "the model studio of the Pacific Coast."

The bungalow is a pretty, vine-covered home and is so desirable for office room that several heads of departments have made a plea for space in it. Carpenters and scenic artists are especially active at the studio at this time, building new scenery for the pretentious productions now in the making and contemplated. All scenery is to be made fifteen feet high to permit of longer "shots" being taken, while all sets will be of the most substantial construction in keeping with the studio policy to dress all productions properly.

Work is rapidly progressing on the Anna Held subject, "Madama La Presidente," and from all indications this film will be one of the most elaborate releases yet offered to Paramount patrons by Oliver Morosco. The famous star has cheerfully changed her mode of living completely and arrives at the studio every morning at nine o'clock accompanied by her well known daughter, Liane Carerra, who is stopping with her mother at Los Angeles at present. Both Anna Held and her daughter have become enthusiastic motion picture "fans" and visit local film theaters at every opportunity.

SELIG'S NEXT BIG FEATURE

Regina Badet, Known as "The Second Bernhardt" on Account of Her Emotional Roles, Will Play Lead in "No Greater Love."

"No Greater Love," a life drama of today, being the study of a woman's heart, will be released as a Selig Red Seal play in five soul-stirring acts through V. L. S. E. on January 10. The play was written by the famous author, William Le Queux, and features Miss Regina Badet, the wonderful French emotional actress, in the role of "Sadunah," the dancer. Probably never before has a photodrama marked with such beautiful emphasis the love of a mother for her child. "No Greater Love" is a drama of intensity throughout, revealing the wonderful power of mother love. Husband, fame, life itself are all surrendered in one glorious sacrifice for an only child. Sadunah, the dancer, has a beautiful daughter whom she wishes to defend from the perils of the world and see comfortably settled. Pursuing her sole ambition she marries a rich financier and when he gets into serious straits compels him to commit crime. But she, too, is ready to sacrifice, and the call coming, Sadunah, at whose feet the artistic world has paid homage, proves the Biblical adage of no greater love. Miss Badet has many opportunities for convincing emotional work and is supported by an all-star cast of players. The Selig Company is authority for the assertion that the grand climax of this Red Seal play has never been surpassed in thrilling interest.

A Record Breaking Attendance

What is perhaps the record for the percentage of attendance at a moving picture theater has been established by the American theater at Bellingham, Wash. This house, with a seating capacity of 2,000, was opened recently, having as its initial performance the Selig play "The Rosary," released through V. L. S. E., Inc.

Bellingham's population is 30,000. Of this number more than 20,000 saw "The Rosary" in the two days that it was shown. There was a constant crowd waiting for seats at all performances—this despite the fact that a 20-cent admission was charged. Perhaps one of the reasons for the remarkable attendance was the extensive advertising done by the new theater. "The Rosary" was billed and heralded all over the city, the stores carrying window cards and the newspapers getting good space and giving good press notices. More than one hundred one-sheet stands were used, and in addition to this there were also a large number of three, six and twenty-four-sheet stands.

Change in Triangle Releases

On account of the U. S. Government's using "A Submarine Pirate" to aid naval recruiting, the release of that unusual film by the Triangle will be delayed for a short period. To fill the gap in the releases of December 19, the Triangle offers what is literally the greatest all-star comedy ever produced. This is not press agent's exaggeration, but cold fact. This latest Keystone, "Fatty and the Broadway Stars," shows the stars playing themselves: William Collier, Mack Sennett, Weber and Fields, Sam Bernard, Joe Jackson, Bert Clark, Ford Sterling, Polly Moran, Mae Busch and others. It was a novel idea of Mr. Sennett's to present these distinguished winter guests of Keystone studio in their own proper persons in this travesty of motion picture studio life. It is predicted that it will prove one of the most popular Keystones ever presented.

Grace Williams of Edison

A new and pretty face appearing in Edison leads of late is that of Grace Williams whose work has been well received by critics and exhibitors. Though she has been appearing in Edison films for some little while, in minor parts, it was not suspected that so good material was so near by. Born and educated in New York, she still has the fairness of complexion of a country lass. She first appeared on the stage in stock. Much like girls out for a lark, she accompanied a girl friend who had a relative on the stage and landed in stock work. Later came an engagement with the "Coming Through the Rye" company while still a slip of a girl. In this she was introduced in a dance specialty which she does very well. Then came "The Land of Nod" engagement and back into stock work again. Other companies which she has been with are: "The Rose Maid"; with Weber and Fields, in their New York theater, in "Roly Poly"; with Christie McDonald in "Sweethearts"; and in "The War of Wars."

Grace Williams.

She had done some work for Reliance and the Biograph before she went with Edison. Some of her films are, the features, "Faith and Fortune," "The Truth About Helen," and "Waifs of the Sea" and "The Broken Word."

Maryland Exhibitors to Fight Censorship

The Exhibitors' League of Maryland held a stag get-together meeting on the evening of November 30 at the Hotel Raleigh in Baltimore. Fred J. Herrington delivered a very strong address on censorship, the bugbear which seems to confront the exhibitors of Maryland at the present time.

At the meeting the exchange men of both Baltimore and Washington signified their intention of assisting in every way they could in regard to the censorship question, and the exhibitors have asked the exchange men to become honorary members of the league.

Some Interesting Financial Facts

BY E. D. HORKHEIMER*

PICTURE producing is rapidly becoming one of the popular sports of the country. From the reckless manner in which people are plunging in, the prevailing impression seems to be that to succeed one needs only to make up his mind to become a screen impresario, get together a little money, hire a studio, and presto, change—the desideratum is achieved.

Stories as to the money-making possibilities of the film industry have been spread broadcast so alluringly that most people are consumed with a desire to share in the profits. As in the case of gold mining, only the winners are remembered by those tempted to invest. The fact that for every dollar taken out of the ground nine have been sunk by others is seldom thought of by the investor.

And much the same condition prevails in the moving picture field. True, many fortunes have been made out of it. But it is equally true that vast sums of money have been lost in it. Men of means, hoping to make more, have contributed their share—to say nothing of the army of those ill able to afford it, who have risked their small savings in the hope of enriching themselves, on the representations of smooth promoters, and lost.

"More Money in Moving Pictures Than in Standard Oil" and "Bell Telephone Profits Insignificant as Compared with the Returns from Motion Picture Investments" read the catchlines that have lured the "sucker money" from tin cans, old stockings and even safety deposit vaults. Some time ago, there was a big scandal over the way in which the dear public was mulcted by a wireless corporation. One day the fly-by-night picture concerns may be found a fruitful field of research for some investigator.

New York and Los Angeles are the two chief headquarters for moving picture producing companies. While there are no exact figures available as to the number of concerns incorporated for putting on photoplays in the past decade, it is safe for the purposes of this article to make the estimate 5,000. More than likely it is twice that number; for the reports from Albany and Sacramento show that from five to ten new companies are incorporated every week.

All of them start out bravely to put on film dramas. The majority make a reel or two and then quit, for lack of financial backing. But in the meantime a large sum of money has been squandered. It is time that a warning be sounded against people putting their money into moving picture producing companies, unless they know with whom they are dealing or can afford to risk it in a very hazardous undertaking. The small investor has very little chance, in spite of the millions of people who are daily patronizing picture shows.

Personally, I know of no more fascinating business than producing for the screen; but to make good at it one has to know the game. And it is changing so continually, that one must give his whole time to its constant study. Absolute control is necessary if you would make money out of any business. Of course, that is out of the question for the average investor in picture shares.

One of the biggest advertising campaigns of the present year was for the purpose of obtaining $5,000,000 to finance the ambitions of three of the leading picture producers. The success of the campaign is still the talk of financial circles; but it remains to be seen if the promises of the promoters to the investors can be made good. One part of the original program has already proved a failure, because the mass of people are not able to pay $2 for pictures, or else they do not feel the product offered them worth the price.

In Los Angeles, only recently, two companies have been formed to make "masterpieces," right off the bat. The heads of both organizations were each connected with another big production that is reputed to have been a considerable money-maker. This seems to have whetted the individual appetites; and so, in an effort to corral all the profits, each one has gone into the picture producing business on his own hook. The experience of both these undertakings will be watched with much interest by those active in the trade.

It remains to be seen if it is possible to get together an organization that will be able to attain maximum results immediately. To date, the experience of most picture makers has been to the contrary. It has been found necessary to build up a working force first. Like an intricate mechanism, the cogs must wear into each other, so in a studio, director, player, laboratory and the half dozen other essential departments must be carefully fitted before a harmonious film can be turned out. This takes time and patience. At least it has up to date. But, of course, the newcomers to the field may have a secret for getting the results the pioneers have been so long achieving.

Of late I have noticed a tendency to organize picture producing companies all over the country. In almost every city of any size the promoters are busy. They work upon the home pride of Minneapolis, Seattle, Cincinnati or Atlanta, calling upon local capital to get together and exploit the scenery and advantages to be found peculiar to each place in picture plays written to bring them out. Needless to say, many investors "fall" for the talk. But show me a film produced by any of these "home pride" companies that has made good.

After you have made your picture an outlet is necessary. This is the important thing that is overlooked by the average investor. He thinks that all you need to do is to make a picture; that, once finished, there are a million exhibitors clamoring to get it. He doesn't know that there are a dozen big selling agencies fighting frantically to dispose of the wares of widely advertised companies of national reputation, with unlimited capital, with whom he must compete. And just here is where the rub comes in.

In this day of business development, big industries have all become localized. The volume of shoes, iron, automobiles, etc., is each one produced in some specific place. And just so with moving pictures. There are economic reasons why New York and Los Angeles will always be the chief centers for their production. As it is possible to operate a woolen mill in Indianapolis, just so a company organizing there may be able to put out a few photoplays. But it is not reasonable to expect that city to become the locale of a big film producing industry.

Despite the efforts of Chicago, San Francisco and other cities to become important centers for putting plays on the legitimate stage, New York has always remained the undisputed leader in this regard. And so the film capital is fixed on the West Coast, particularly when it comes to big outdoor pictures. Indoor productions will continue to be made in New York by a number of companies. Yet California is the logical cinema locale, as is evidenced by the fact that all the important picture companies have studios here.

* Of Balboa Amusement Producing Company.

These points are brought out for the benefit of persons who may be thinking about putting their money into moving picture producing companies. There are some safe ones, just as there are some good oil wells in which stock is offered for sale. But lots of people have lived to regret their investing in "dusters." Unhappily, there have been many "flivvers" among the picture companies. Not due to the business itself, however, but because of the irresponsible men who have used the films as a bait to prey on the "suckers." For the benefit of this business, which, honestly conducted, is as clean and reputable as any other endeavor, this warning is sounded. No names are mentioned or fingers pointed. Just a few facts stated. Should they arouse any indignant outcries, remember that only the dog which is hit yelps.

The writer has no axe to grind, as the Balboa Company, with which he is associated, has no stock for sale and never has had. The foregoing facts are set forth for what they may be worth to any reader, as well as putting the moving picture producing industry right in the eyes of those with whom it has become discredited.

The Palace's Playroom

Manager Myers of the Palace theater in Waterloo, Iowa, has just discovered a new wrinkle for appealing to his women patrons. At the rear of his house are a number of loges and just back of these has long existed a long narrow room that has not as yet been used. Workmen are now busy cleaning up this room, carpeting and furnishing it, installing glass windows between the loges and this room, and when completed will throw it open as a nursery, reserving the loges for mothers with small children. In the past many ladies have doubtless been prevented from attending the pictures, on account of having children who might cry and disturb those about them, but in the new room they will be able to care for their little ones and at the same time enjoy the films. A competent matron will at all times be in charge of the nursery and Manager Myers is already receiving reservations for seats in the adjoining loges.

Thrills in Centaur Releases

The December releases of Centaur Feature animal pictures are exceptionally rife with stirring scenes enacted in part by members of the Bostock animal aggregation. Each of the five releases for the month contains a number of daring animal scenes but at the same time each carries a "bit" which stands out as evidence of animal training.

The first two subjects for the month, "Stanley Among the Voo Doo Worshippers," released December 2, and "Stanley in Darkest Africa," the last episode of the "Stanley in Africa" series, have already been seen by most exhibitors, so comment is unnecessary. The third subject of the month, "The Arab's Vengeance," scheduled for release December 16, introduces beautiful Margaret Gibson as the featured player in scenes with the Bostock animals that tax the courage of any actress.

"The Winning of Jess," released December 23, brings before the camera the Bostock grizzly bears and the Bostock pumas for the first time. With one of the former species Captain Jack Bonavita stages a realistic fight to save a child toward which the animal is lumbering. He also carries on an exciting scene with a puma, which in the end scurries off into the woods after a flying leap through an open window.

The release for December 30 brings the Bostock collection of pumas before the camera in a drama of the Northwestern woods, "The Terror of the Fold," in which William J. Clifford, recently added to Mr. Horsley's forces, is the featured player.

All of the animal scenes are supervised by the director of the picture but actually worked by the different trainers connected with the Bostock organization.

THE NEW EDISON PROGRAM

After December Twentieth Edison Will Release Only a Three-Reeler Weekly on the General Program—McChesney Welcomes Open Market

Under the new reorganization plan of the General Film Company, the weekly Edison program will consist of the release of one three-reel feature put through the regular service of that company, Manager Leonard W. McChesney has just announced. This is contrary to the recently made announcement of the General Film Company which stated that Edison would release a one-reeler on Tuesday and Wednesday of each week and a three-reeler on Friday. Edison's regular program, until this change, was the release of a one-reel on Wednesday and Saturday and a three-reel on Fridays.

Manager McChesney feels that the elimination of the one-reels will allow more time and concentration of effort on a three-reel feature which will, as a result, reflect the best in that length of feature.

This change dates from the week of December 20 and the first release under this plan will be "Blade o' Grass," on Friday, December 24, featuring Leonie Flugrath and Pat O'Malley. Next will be "The Matchmakers," on Friday the 31st, featuring Sally Crute and William Wadsworth.

In addition the Edison studios will continue to release two five-reelers each month, put through the Kleine-Edison Feature Service. In this service, Miriam Nesbitt and Marc MacDermott will once again be seen playing together in "The Catspaw," by William Hamilton Osborne, on Wednesday, January 12; Viola Dana and Edward Earle, a new combination, in "The Innocence of Ruth" on Wednesday, January 26; Mabel Trunelle and Robert Conness in "The Crucifixion of Phillip Strong," on Wednesday, February 19.

Manager McChesney welcomes the new order of things and is enthusiastic about what the open market will do for film betterment and the elimination of the unworthy picture.

C. Lang Cobb, Jr., manager of sales and publicity for Ramo Films, Inc., has placed his resignation in the hands of the president and directors of that company. He will leave, it is understood, on January 1, 1916. It was his intention to give up his duties on October 30, but he was persuaded to continue until the first of the year. Mr. Cobb has been the efficient manager of Ramo for three years.

Big Shakeup in West Coast Studios

MANY PLAYERS DISCHARGED

FROM word received from Los Angeles, it is evident "the motion picture capitol of the world" is undergoing a thorough shakeup, for already a number of the leading studios on the coast have made radical changes in their staffs, and it is rumored that still more sweeping changes are to occur in the plants not yet affected.

The Fine Arts Film Company, of which D. W. Griffith is the producing head, is said to have dismissed a number of directors and some thirty-five members of the stock company, the explanation given being that "we have been spending too much money, and the payroll was cut down to the people we actually need."

At the winter studio of the Biograph Company, which has been occupied for a week or two by some 125 directors, actors and stage helpers brought to Los Angeles from New York, less than a score are said to remain, including one director and some half a dozen or so of principals.

The Selig studios are said to be in line for retrenchment, and a number of changes are rumored as about to take place there.

One of the biggest happenings of the past week was the installation of H. O. Davis, former director general of the San Diego exposition, as head of the Pacific coast studios of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, with title of second vice-president.

An early rumor was to the effect that Mr. Davis, through lack of harmony with the twenty-six producing directors now engaged at Universal City, would eliminate the majority if not all of the men. He authoritatively stated, however, that there was nothing to the rumor, and that the organization would proceed as usual, only that he expected to place it on the same business basis as railroads and other great corporations are operated under. Speaking of the reported dismissals of many of the directors and players, Mr. Davis said to a Los Angeles reporter, "There will be no dismissals; rather the contrary will prevail, and within a year we will have brought our twenty-six producing directors up to fifty or sixty, and the addition of every director means an extension of the payroll, taking on of new actors, and the securing of new properties.

"Mr. McRae, who has been director general of the Universal, will leave for the Orient within a week or two with his company. One of our first steps will be to secure more scenarios. We are negotiating now with some of the largest publishing houses in America to secure the first dramatic rights to the big books and serials which they are to issue. The popular demand for films is daily increasing, and we are laying our plans to meet it.

"However, the producing end of the game is not in my line, and I shall not attempt the making of pictures. I am going to put the film game on a standardized business basis, a condition which has not been satisfactorily worked out so far, because the industry has grown more rapidly than it could be handled in that respect."

War Films Bring Conflict to Chicago

POLICE GUARD THEATER

THE numerous war films playing in the various loop theaters in Chicago have brought about a miniature civil war in that city, the conflict centering about the Olympic theater, which until last Saturday was showing a production entitled, "The Fighting Millions," which is being exploited by the Buffalo Times, owned by Norman E. Mack, who leased the theater for four weeks from Klaw & Erlanger for the purpose of showing these films.

On Saturday, the Daily News and Hearst newspapers advertised the showing of other war pictures, one entitled, "Fighting In France," put out under the auspices of the Chicago Daily News, and the other called "Fighting For France," and controlled by the Hearst publications.

The News film was advertised as going into the Olympic theater on Saturday night for an indefinite run, while the Hearst film was announced as the chief attraction at the La Salle theater beginning the same day. When John F. Miller, Mr. Mack's representative in Chicago, sought to continue his performance of "The Fighting Millions" on Saturday, he found the theater barred to him, and the property guarded by stalwart policemen.

At 8:30 Mr. Miller obtained an injunction from Judge Smith enjoining the owners of the theater from interfering with the exhibition. Armed with this, he went to the theater but found the doors locked and bolted. Police officers were summoned to prevent interference and Miller, with some twenty-five men to reinforce him, climbed the fire escape and shortly after 11 o'clock, put on his show.

In an interview with a reporter for the Chicago Tribune late Saturday night, William H. Rudolph, attorney for Mr. Miller, declared, "the real trouble is the Hearst people. They are showing French war pictures at the La Salle theater, and fear our competition with pictures fresh from the French fighting front would interfere with it, so they used their influence with Klaw & Erlanger in New York to fight us. The same trouble has occurred in New York and Boston."

By Monday morning things seemed to have quieted down and the Daily News pictures were shown at the Olympic, while the Hearst pictures were exhibited at the La Salle, but on Monday night Manager Harding of a local detective agency, accompanied by some two hundred representatives of the same agency, is declared to have assembled his army at the Hearst offices and marched them en masse to the Olympic theater with instructions to purchase tickets and occupy the Olympic gallery.

The Daily News, hearing of the plans, assembled one hundred or more Pinkerton detectives and a squad of policemen, and lined them up in the Olympic lobby, the result being that the management refused to sell tickets to the Hearst cohorts, under the assumption that, if they entered the theater they would attempt to cut wires, smash the projection machines, and otherwise break up the show. The Harding force had been routed by the Pinkerton men and a new injunction was obtained by which the Hearst party hopes to prevent the News from showing its French pictures, and as MOTOGRAPHY goes to press, the war still continues.

SECOND FARRAR FILM READY

Lasky Will Release "Temptation" Early in January and Famous Opera Star Is Expected to Duplicate Her Triumph

Geraldine Farrar's second photoplay appearance as a Paramount picture star will be the second release of the Paramount program for the month of January, according to a statement issued from the New York office of the big company. It is entitled "Temptation," and like "Carmen," was produced by the Lasky Feature Play Company under the direction of Cecil B. DeMille. The original scenario is from the facile pen of Hector Turnbull, formerly dramatic critic of the New York Tribune and now a member of the Lasky literary staff at Hollywood, California.

Following her immense success in the title role of the Famous Players-Paramount picture, "Bella Donna," produced from Robert Hichen's celebrated novel and play, Pauline Frederick will be seen in "Lydia Gilmore," on January 3, ushering in the new year.

The stars to be seen in the January Paramount pictures are among those of the legitimate stage who have been most successful in their new field as shown by records in the home office and those who are about to make their first photoplay appearance with every indication of success. They include, in the order in which their pictures will be released, Pauline Frederick, Marguerite Clark, Constance Collier, Blanche Sweet, Mary Pickford, Hazel Dawn, Cleo Ridgley and Wallace Reid, and Dustin Farnum.

The Famous Players Film Company contributes, beside Miss Frederick in "Lydia Gilmore," Miss Clark in "Mice and Men" on January 10, Miss Pickford in "Miss Jinny" on January 20, and Miss Dawn in "My Lady Incog" on January 24.

The Lasky Feature Play Company adds to its list of previous successes "Temptation" on January 6, Blanche Sweet in "The Ragamuffin" on the 17th, and Miss Ridgley and Mr. Reid in "The Golden Chance" on the 27th.

Oliver Morosco is represented on the 13th by Constance Collier's first appearance on any screen in "Tongues of Men," and Pallas contributes Dustin Farnum in "The Call of the Cumberlands," its second production for the Paramount program.

Leo Takes an Awful Chance

Leo Maloney, who plays opposite Miss Helen Holmes in "The Girl and the Game," makes a remarkable leap in the first chapter of the big screen novel, released December 27, as a Mutual special feature.

It is in a train wreck and it is a sure enough smash-up, for it took a Salt Lake wrecking crew, with crane and all the necessary mechanical appurtenances, two hours to clear the track.

Mr. Maloney as the engineer of the runaway train, like a regular hero, stuck to his post when the remainder of the crew jumped to safety. He is shown at the window of the cab when the runaway takes a switch at high speed, the giant engine careening dangerously, but finally righting and dashing on its way.

Suddenly there looms ahead, four empty box cars and into these the runaway crashes, sending two cars end first straight up in the air. On either side of the engine the wreckage piles up and out of it slides the heroic engineer. By waiting until the very last instant—even longer than the director told him to wait, Mr. Maloney develops the full measure of thrill and brings to the scene every possible ounce of realism, for it seems that he really is at the very center of the great pile of wreckage and debris, the result of the collision.

He emerges to be met by Miss Holmes whose hand had turned the switch that sent his train into the siding. Miss Holmes and Mr. Maloney, accustomed to each other's work and having full confidence in it, make an unusual leading couple performing feats rare on the screen and taxing the producer's bag of thrills to the utmost.

INCE STILL ADDING INDIANS

Many Copper Skinned Warriors Arrive at Ince Studios to Begin Work Before Cameras in Western Dramas

Additional proof that Producer Thomas H. Ince is firm in his intention to supply the amusement world with stupendous Indian spectacle dramas was furnished this week by the announcement that fifty more redskins have been added to the tribe now encamped within the big Inceville domain in the Santa Monica mountains. The half-hundred aborigines arrived, as did their brothers last week, in the care of W. A. Brooks and were immediately booked for work before the camera.

This announcement, important as it is, however, only half tells the story of Ince's plans. Negotiations, it is said, are now under way for the engagement of even more of the bronzed warriors and within a few weeks there will be several hundred, in all, at Inceville. To make really great Indian pictures, Ince contends, it is necessary to have virtually an entire reservation at his disposal and to that end the producer will, he says, continue to engage Indians until he has all that he can possibly obtain for the work. He has instructed his representative, Mr. Brooks, to comb the country for all available redskins and sign them up for appearance before the camera.

Preparations are already under way for the commencement of work on the first of the big Indian series. C. Gardner Sullivan, the gifted Ince photoplaywright, is hard at work putting the finishing touches on an elaborate drama of the frontier days in which each of the many redskins will have ample opportunity to pose in front of the lens. The property room at Inceville is daily being stored with divers Indian "props" and the supply will continue to be replenished until nothing is lacking.

Just what director will be assigned the task of handling the first big subject is still undecided.

Censor Board Lays Down Standards

PENNSYLVANIA BODY STRICT

J. LOUIS BREITINGER, chairman of the Pennsylvania Board of Censors, and his two assistants, Mrs. E. C. Niver and Ellis P. Oberholzer, have prepared a new set of "standards" which will govern the Board of Censors in its future deliberations. It is rumored that the new "standards," which were prepared in order to conform to the provisions of the recently passed censorship law that repealed the 1911 Censorship Act, have been fully approved by the office of Attorney General Brown and are even looked upon with favor by Governor Brumbaugh.

However, it must be frankly confessed, the "standards" are still so loosely worded and confusing that the exchangemen, manufacturers and producers are as much "up in the air" as to what can be shown and what cannot, as they were before the new rules were drawn up.

Film manufacturers are warned in the new set of regulations against showing any of the following "scenes of a debasing and corrupting character":

The rough treatment of persons by kicking, the use of pins, clubs, etc.

Suggestive rolling on women in slapstick and other farces and comedies.

Prolonged bedroom scenes in night dress.

Drunken foolishness as a sustained theme running through a comedy.

Excessive and suggestive wriggling of the body, whether of a man or a woman.

Loose clothing not properly fastened or ready to fall.

Making comedy of a woman's form and her clothing.

Taking hold of a woman's limbs in a suggestive manner.

Men looking lustfully at a woman's form in a way to attract attention.

Spitting in another's face.

Persons of the opposite six, though they may be man and wife, lying in bed together.

Suggestive action, while a woman sits on the lap of a man, or vice versa, or similar conduct.

The board says the general objects of the censorship are:

To establish standards on progressive lines and to keep motion pictures attuned to public opinion, and not necessarily in harmony with productions of the stage or newspapers, but rather to restrict the motion pictures to such as promise to afford clean, wholesome entertainment or amusement, and to eliminate everything which shall tend to debase morals or inflame the mind to improper adventures or to establish false standards of conduct.

The feeling of reverence for certain things or forces counted sacred is deep-seated and it should be carefully respected. Death and other depressing scenes unduly emphasized may be objectionable. Grewsome subjects in general should be avoided.

Bar room scenes, drinking and drunkenness have a legitimate place in the motion picture drama. Objection to them may be found in the large proportion which they may bear to all other scenes. If a photoplay requires such scenes to give it realism and color, and if these scenes are not of undue length and are used with discretion, they may be approved.

Frank exposure of the person may be less objectionable than partial exposure. To adolescent, as well as adult minds of arrested development, this may awaken the imagination and become suggestive of immorality and indecency. Disrobing and bedroom scenes should be avoided as much as possible. The dress of comedy characters must also comply with existing standards of propriety and must not be used for purposes of suggestion.

Plays which make light of, or cast discredit on the marriage vow may lead to dangerous results. The Board will insist that problems of sex shall be treated with seriousness and reserve. Plays which hold up to ridicule any sect (religious or otherwise), will not be approved. Slap-stick comedies if produced must be free from suggestiveness or vulgarity. Plays which indicate loose morals must be avoided.

The Board disapproves of showing a good woman doing that which would be considered a bad thing in the society of which she forms a part. The place the incident occupies in the picture and the final total effect will be the determining factors in the judgment of the subject by the Board.

Plays depicting underworld scenes, opium dens, objectionable dances, flirtations, questionable resorts, etc., may be condemned, and when scenes of this kind are produced it should be done in such manner that no one may be stimulated by the example to similar adventure or conduct. When the portrayal of scenes of this type is necessary to the development of a story the Board will require that it be truthful and complete and that it be given no false glamour with the effect of leading anyone to misapprehend their true character, but rather know the essential sordidness and shallowness, discontent and commercialism on which these scenes rest.

The use and effect of habit forming drugs is not considered by the Board a legitimate subject for motion pictures. When the whole story runs along this line it will be condemned and scenes of a like character in films will be eliminated.

The Board will require that deeds of violence be not degrading and the constant and undue use of weapons such as guns, revolvers, knives, clubs, etc., tending to a debasement of morals will be discouraged.

The Board will require respect for the law in the action as well as the spirit of pictures, and the work should be approached in a spirit of seriousness more than amusement or entertainment. The Board will not object to crime as is as essential as a good scenario. Because the basic product is right the clearest pictures are on Eastman Film. Identifiable by the stencil mark in the margin.

A clear picture

EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

such, but it will object to the display of crime being objective, instructive and grewsome. It will insist upon a sane balancing of the picture as a whole so that the final effect will be good or in any event harmless.

Suggestive, instructive and ingenious criminal methods should not be exploited, nor should there be introduced in films attempts at burning or wrecking; or torture scenes or suicide (unless the same is necessary to the logical course of the play); or murder or assassination or hanging or other execution.

The exhibition of the methods of using poison, drugs, "knock out drops," sleeping potions, hypodermic needles, etc., is prohibited. Reproductions on films of the names on labels of poisons or drugs used in committing murder, or suicide must not be made. This rule will be strictly enforced.

Obscenity, immorality or indecency in a picture are prohibited. Actions by the characters of a suggestive nature will be eliminated.

MAIL ORDER BOOKINGS LARGE

Manager of Sales Promotion System of V. L. S. E. Surprises All by Results of Mail Order Campaign to Secure Bookings

More and more those at the helm of things are beginning to appreciate the value of a two-cent stamp properly used in getting new business in the motion picture industry. Leon J. Bamberger, manager of the sales promotion system of V. L. S. E., Inc., who is credited with conducting one of the most successful mail promotion campaigns which has yet been started, by means of efficient follow-up letters, is booking from the home office, it is understood, several thousands of dollars' worth of business a week.

All the members of the sales force of the V. L. S. E. are enthusiastic over the mail methods of promoting business, as they have been developed by Mr. Bamberger, under the supervision of C. R. Seelye, assistant general manager of the Big Four, and many of the offices are adopting the system to a larger extent each week. It is held that if such campaigns are worked consistently and if the letters are prepared in a manner to help the exhibitor, practically the same amount of interest may be aroused as a personal solicitation, and at far less expense.

C. A. Meade, manager of the Dallas office of V. L. S. E., Inc., adopted the follow-up plan with marked success, in soliciting Thanksgiving business. Mr. Meade is the first manager who has reported a special holiday campaign. Mr. Meade's first letter brought him forty turkey day bookings. The final result from the campaign was more than one hundred.

Bray Cartoons for Paramount

Following the announcement that J. R. Bray, most famous of animated cartoonists, creator of "Colonel Heeza Liar" and other famous cartoon characters, had become associated with Paramount Pictures Corporation and that the products of the Bray Studio, Inc., would be seen solely on the Paramount program, it is now stated that Mr. Bray's schedule of releases for the first four weeks has been prepared and adopted.

The new year will usher in the first release on January 6, when Mr. Bray's own cartoon "Colonel Heeza Liar's Waterloo" and an educational "split" will have its initial unreeling under the Paramount banner. This is Colonel Heeza Liar's premiere as a star on the same program with Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Geraldine Farrar, Dustin Farnum and the other celebrated players associated with the various producers of Paramount Pictures.

On January 13, L. M. Glackens, one of Mr. Bray's corps of six assistants, will be represented by "Haddem Baad's Elopement," a cartoon, and also a part reel of educational material yet to be announced.

On January 20, a silhouette fantasy by C. Alan Gilbert, the noted illustrator, entitled "The Chess Queen," will be released with several hundred feet of educational film. This is the picture about which there has been so much talk and which Mr. Bray and Mr. Gilbert will soon be in a position to announce finally to the public.

C. T. Anderson, another of Mr. Bray's assistants, will prepare for the Paramount program on January 27, a cartoon entitled "The Police Dog on the Wire," and education films of entertainment value will be assembled with the cartoons. In this connection Mr. Bray has a very big plan which is so humorous and yet so deeply interesting, that he desires to work it out fully before allowing the details to become generally known.

The releases of the Bray Studio, Inc., herein announced, are in addition to the political cartoons and others which Mr. Bray will draw for Paramount Newspictures.

George R. Meeker, formerly manager of the rebooking department of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, has become editor-in-chief of Paramount Newspictures, and has succeeded in adding to his staff men of such national reputation that the success of his animated news seems a certainty.

Premier Simplifies Casting

Those who seek positions in motion pictures as actors and actresses usually find it extremely difficult to secure an interview with the man whose final judgment would be the deciding one for the applicant. It often occurs that generally meritorious applicants are unable to secure the coveted interview, owing to the poor judgment or inefficiency of a minor employe, while a less efficient but persistent applicant gains the coveted part.

To avoid errors of this kind Premier Program has arranged with John W. Mitchell, the theatrical agent, to meet and interview all applicants for parts and to tabulate the result of such interviews according to type, dramatic ability and physical qualifications.

In selecting the cast for any forthcoming productions a careful list of available people is prepared by Mr. Mitchell and arrangements are made for the final selection, with the director of the company producing that particular feature. John W. Mitchell brings to this work years of active experience in matters theatrical and a wide personal knowledge of available people.

A Nifty Exchange House Organ

Motography is in receipt of the second issue of Paramount Pointers, a little four-page house organ published weekly by the Famous Players exchange of 1321 Vine street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Paramount Pointers seems a most interesting little sheet, and conveys a number of suggestions that should be both interesting and profitable to exhibitors receiving it. Unquestionably it will aid the Famous Players exchange in Philadelphia in securing bookings on the famous attractions issued by the Paramount Film Corporation.

Editors: ED J. MOCK and PAUL H. WOODRUFF
Associate Editors
Neil G. Caward Thomas C. Kennedy
John C. Garrett Charles R Condon
Advertising Manager: ALLEN L. HAASE

NEW YORK OFFICE, 1022 LONGACRE BUILDING
Forty-second Street and Broadway
Telephone Bryant 7030
CHARLES R. CONDON, Eastern Representative

This publication is free and independent of all business or house connections or control. No manufacturer or supply dealer, or their stockholders or representatives, have any financial interest in Motography or any voice in its management or policy.

Entered at Chicago Post Office as Second Class Mail Matter

MOTOGRAPHY

THE MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY
ELECTRICITY MAGAZINE CORPORATION
MONADNOCK BUILDING
CHICAGO, ILL.

Telephone: Harrison 3014—All Departments

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS

Changes of advertising copy should reach the office of publication not less than fifteen days in advance of date of issue. Regular date of issue, every Saturday. New advertisements will be accepted up to within ten days of date of issue, but proof of such advertisements can not be shown in advance of publication.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE
Per year $3.00
Canada - - - Per year $4.00
Foreign - - - - Per year 5.00
Single copy - - - - .15
FOR SALE AT ALL NEWS STANDS

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS

REMITTANCES—Remittances should be made by check, New York draft or money order, in favor of MOTOGRAPHY. Foreign subscriptions may be remitted direct by International Postal Money Order.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS—The old address should be given as well as the new, and notice should be received two weeks in advance of the desired change.

If Your News Dealer Will Not Supply You—Please Notify Us

Volume XIV CHICAGO, DECEMBER 18, 1915 Number 25

Using the Local Newspaper

IN THE country village the general store has a monopoly. For that reason many people would say the country merchant would be foolish to advertise. The people of his community have got to come to him anyway. But the apparent condition is not the true one in this case. It has been proved by example that the general store, monopolistic in its territory, can increase its business by advertising. The people know the store is there whether it advertises or not; but the psychologist would say their knowledge was subconscious until the advertising made it active.

What the country storekeeper does not sell today he may sell tomorrow or next week. If it does not move then, he can hold a "sale" and get rid of it at a shorter but quicker profit.

The small town exhibitor is not a perfect parallel to the country merchant. He may have a monopoly; his patrons may know all about his show whether he advertises or not; but he cannot sell today's stock next week, nor dispose of it by marked-down sale next month. His business is not so flexible as that. If he figures he must average a four hundred daily attendance to get by, that does not mean he can show to one hundred a day for one week and to seven hundred a day the next week. He must keep his trade as regularly distributed as possible. Therefore he has more reason to advertise than has the storekeeper.

As a general rule every town big enough to have a picture theater has a newspaper. We recall some exceptions; but we doubt if there are many. These little newspapers are thoroughly read. Their advertising rates are low. Practically every one they go to is a prospective or actual patron of the theater.

The fact that the people know the theater is there does not make them go to it. No doubt a good many will go because they crave entertainment. But a good many others will not go because the craving is not strong enough to overcome their laziness or indifference. The exhibitor must stimulate their curiosity and imagination by telling them what a beautiful, thrilling or funny show he has prepared for them. The only way he can tell them is by advertising.

He must tell them more. He must keep them reminded that his theater is warm in winter and cool in summer; that the seats are comfortable and the air pure and the projection good. He must impress upon them that the show they are to see cost a lot of money and is popular in the big cities; for they do not know that.

There are several ways of advertising. Handbills or heralds, posters on fences, form letters mailed out, all come under that head. But we believe the local newspaper is the best medium, because the people buy it and read it carefully, and believe what it says.

And that last fact leads to another point. The advertising space bought and paid for is not the only thing the advertiser gets—or can get if he goes about it right. The editor of the paper will be glad to co-operate with a good customer by giving him "reading notices," write-ups of his house and reviews of his shows. These may be fully as valuable as the "display" advertising which is paid for.

Most film manufacturers are in a position to supply exhibitors with "copy" and cuts for local advertising, and a large amount of this stuff is used. But many exhibitors make the mistake of considering it sufficient without any "copy" of their own. They must remember that the theater itself is where their money is invested, and it should be made popular as well as the show.

The thing that must be driven home is not primarily that tonight's films are good, but that that particular theater always shows good films.

Legislating Admission Prices

IMAGINE being an umbrella salesman in a town where the people wanted silk umbrellas with gold handles, and then running up against a law that says you must not charge over seventy-five cents for an umbrella under penalty of a fifty-dollar fine. It can't be done, you say. Unconstitutional and all that.

West Point, Ga., has a population of two thousand, and one picture theater, the Vaudette, W. W. Jennings, manager. West Point also has a law. It says the picture theater shall not charge more than ten cents admission, under penalty of paying fifty dollars to the city.

We are not lawyers. We know, of course, that "public utilities"—meaning electric light, gas, telephone and railroad companies—may be regulated by law and their rates dictated. Where such regulation exists, the public utilities are usually protected from competition. That is, the city will not grant a franchise to a second company competing with the first. Picture theaters are not public utilities. They are not protected from competition. There is nothing to prevent anyone starting another picture theater in West Point, Ga., or six others. Since the city does not protect, what right has it to regulate prices?

As a matter of common sense we would say it has no such right. The theater is not a public necessity, at least in the legal sense. The people can go to it or stay away from it as they choose. If Mr. Jennings in West Point, Ga., wishes to charge a quarter or a dollar or two dollars instead of a dime, he has as much right to do so as the shoe dealer has to charge ten dollars for a pair of shoes. If the people don't like it they can go elsewhere for their shoes and their shows—or go barefoot if they prefer. When they did that an overcharging merchant, losing his trade and his money, would be brought to a reasonable rate at once.

But, assuming that Mr. Jennings pays the price of a good show, his town arbitrarily decrees that he shall sell it at less than cost. He has no choice in the matter. No difference what he paid for it, he must sell it for ten cents.

In other words, he is not allowed to buy programs costing over a certain modest figure. If he will not agree, he has the alternative of going out of business. Wonderful privilege of a free country!

If the West Point Vaudette is a member of a state or national association of exhibitors, that association unquestionably should take action in this case. Probably it is important only in a local way, for we cannot imagine any other community in the United States making the same kind of a bone play. But ridiculous as the situation is, an object lesson should be made of the town for the education of other foolish villages. A fair to average sort of lawyer should be able to do something interesting with it.

Just a Moment Please

"Many a fillim needs a vacuum cleaner," writes Bill Wright, the Selig Sage.

—

Ah, yes, Bill, and then again there's many of 'em quicklime only will provide for.

—

Of course Bill and us are discussing the other fellows fillims. That goes without saying.

—

TOM GETS BACK AT US.

A couple of weeks ago we fired a shot at Tom Hamlin's reference to Rothapfel as "The Napolian of M. P. exhibitors" in Amusements, his well edited little weekly. In his latest issue the sonofagun digs far back into the darkest pages of our past with the following result:

Doggone it, Neil, you must not forget the many times you asked us how to spell Ludifisk—Lutefisk—Lootfrish—when you came in the old Tribune office after covering a political meeting in the Sixth Ward. Besides I had a lullaby. I was sleeping. You will notice that the linotype had "Nap's" name all right in the story, but the hand-set man is a German and thought he'd slam the "Allies."

Since Tom admits he was enjoying a "lullaby," we believe we'd better "let sleeping dogs lie" and stop this argument.

—

We hasten to advise Lloyd R., Ben S., Jake W., P. A. P., Jay C., and the rest of the alumnae of the Caward Art Scollege that a new pupil has matriculated in the ivy-covered halls of the stately institution. His name is Harry Poppe and from present indications Mike Angelo will have to look to his laurels. Harry's first examination paper has just been marked and we'll publish his markings next week.

—

PRETTY PUNK, CHAS., BUT PERHAPS YOU CAN DO BETTER NEXT TIME.

Chas. Ver Halen, late of these parts, but now of Noo Yawk, advises that Paul Gilmore, who has been married four times, is now with "The Other Girl." Chas. frankly admits his contribution is "kinda rotten, but nevertheless a wheeze."

—

Take it from us, Pete "Sheriff" Schmid is one of the most versatile press agents alive. In his latest bulletin he attempts to render in type an imitation of Anna Held eating watermelon, with the following result: "Miss Held gurgles 's-l-u-g-h' as she struggles to——, etc." Now will some other inspired P. A. favor us with an imitation of an M. P. star drinking champagne through a straw?

—

GOSH, WHAT A CALANDER, "HEN"!

Henry McMahon of Triangle supplies a still picture of a coming production and writes on the back of it "Release of Dec. 50th."

—

OUR BURG

The European battle zone has nothing on Our Village this week, for these war fillims running in various opry houses in our loop, has resulted in a regular little civil war over who's to show 'em and where. The troops of Brigadier General Wm. Randolph Hearst has twice stormed the citadel of the Olympic theater and twice the Daily News' war strategists has thrun 'em out. And still the battle continues. If we can locate Col. Heeza Liar, our famous war correspondent, we shall send him instantly to the front and next wk. furnish our readers with an exclusive story of the conflict.

Harry Aitken, of Noo Yawk, what has been out to Los Anglaiz, flitted through Our Burg, headed for Broadway, last wk.

Looie Noto is said to have used up a half dozen lead pencils within the past ten days writing bookings on "The Girl and the Game." Keep it up, Looie, the pencil factories has got more.

—

SOME COSTUME, SAM, SOME COSTUME!

S. S. Hutchinson, Pres. of the Signal Fillim Corps., in his essay in another portion of this issue refers to Frank Spearman, the author of the new series of railroad stories, as follows:

He gives you his innermost self wrapped in a lingerie of literary lace and a tremendous storm coat of vigorous thought, which Director McGowan with convincing realism—etc.

—

Some authors we've heard of might be tickled pink to have even that much of a wardrobe, but we supposed the "ghost" walked often enough for Frank so that he could possess even a couple of suits of "soup and fish."

—

But perhaps not.

N. G. C.

William Randolph Hearst

to the

MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

says regarding the

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL

"The Improved Edition Goes On—Bigger and Better Than Ever—It Is My Order"

On the next three pages appears briefly the digest of what is surely the most important statement and promise ever made on the subject of news in motion pictures

The Memorable Interview with Mr. Hearst

SOMETHING over two years ago a motion picture man with a keen sense of values was able to win the attention of Mr. William Randolph Hearst. The publisher of the greatest newspapers and magazines and owner of the International News Service, with various subsidiary departments supplying all the important news publications in America with text, news and photography, had for years previously, appreciated and employed motion pictures.

The result of the interview was the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial. An arrangement was made with the Selig-Polyscope Co. of Chicago whereby that Company was to act as print manufacturer and distributing agent.

With the Hearst organization's advent in the field came a new meaning to motion pictures. With the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, exhibitors began to vie with each other in the presentation of "beats," "scoops," and it became no unusual matter for a motion picture audience to view great events immediately after their occurrence.

William Randolph Hearst having inaugurated the Hearst-Selig Weekly, through his great news gathering organization, produced the reel in every detail, watched its growth, and visualized its possibilities. The point should be made that there are opportunities in the news reels which so far surpass those of any printed medium that the field is as wide as publishing. The possibilities for making the news reel a tremendous power with myriad activities are unlimited.

The Hearst-Selig News Reel performed its work in its day, but after consultations with exhibitors, exchanges, the Hearst editors and camera men—a plan and prospectus for a greater and better news reel as it should be was laid out.

The proposition was revolutionary—as revolutionary as the modern day newspaper is over the small town four pager. It called for such sweeping improvements, changes and evolutions that even to encompass the scope of what was suggested was a task.

The plan was discussed and developed in every detail. Then the question of the expense of this gigantic plan was considered.

"What do you estimate this will cost?"—Mr. Hearst asked.

The spokesman hesitated.

The figure was a startling one but he mentioned it. The Chief thought for a space of not more than a moment and he wrote the attached memorandum.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST
NEW YORK

Dear Mr. MacManus:-

Following the brief outlined to me this evening, I authorize you to proceed and make the new Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial right.

The innovations are good — make them.

The enlarged scope is essential. Proceed to the limit.

I want you to hesitate at no point because of expense.

Make the Hearst-Vitagraph right.

Sincerely yours,

W R Hearst

Thus the greater news reel comes into being. On January 1st it is to make its first appearance.

In order to bring the manufacturing company closer to the Hearst headquarters, an arrangement has been made with the Vitagraph Co., embracing all its branches whose tremendous plant and well known facilities assure the success of the new plan. It is to be known as the

HEARST-VITAGRAPH
NEWS PICTORIAL
(Formerly the Hearst-Selig Weekly—Now Better)

The Greatest News Gathering Organization in the World

IN the publishing business editors look to the Hearst Organization for their news. They know that through Hearst news comes in the quickest and most accurate manner.

The International News Service supplies a thousand newspapers in addition to magazines of all types with a complete telegraphic report of the world's happenings.

The International Film Service, the allied company supplies these same publications with rush photographs of the most timely events. In addition to this William Randolph Hearst employs special staffs for each of his various newspapers, including the New York American, and Journal, the Chicago Examiner, San Francisco Examiner, Atlanta Georgian, Boston American, etc. In addition to this he employs correspondents, specially retained for his magazines including the Cosmopolitan, Hearst's, Harper's Bazar, Motor, etc.

The manner in which the Hearst organization maintains a vigilant watch of the world is unquestionably the greatest example of efficiency known. Talk about a governmental spy system! Why there is not a city, town or hamlet that appears on the map which has not its Hearst correspondent and photographer on the ground.

This is why if the Sultan of Turkey is passing through Bagdad, a photograph of him is made by the Hearst Photographer and rushed to America. This is why if there is an important event from Maine to Mexico as soon as the news can be dispatched a Hearst man takes the picture and the news with him.

This is why, to relate an actual instance—down in Philadelphia a short time ago when the Roebling fire occurred a Hearst photographer had his films delivered in New York City before even the Philadelphia men were on the ground.

When you are supplied by William Randolph Hearst and his news and photographic service you may be assured that no one can be ahead of you first and generally you are ahead of any one else.

The New Hearst-Vitagraph Offers Many Innovations

The news reel lives or dies on one essential—news.

THEREFORE, the new Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial will get you the news first—will get you the news right, will get you the news that is interesting; will get you "scoops."

But outside of this there are several points which are tremendously valuable to the exhibitor.

First—The Hearst Vitagraph News Pictorial will come to you independent of any other service. It is not going to be packed in as an adjunct to comedies and dramas; it is not going to be just one of several things that are handed to you indiscriminately. It must stand or fall on its own merit because you will buy it separately and insist on its making good separately.

Second—a system has been worked out whereby the exhibitor names his price for the service. It is the most revolutionary move made on the subject of releases, dates of release and prices concurrent with these dates and with the exhibitors territory.

Third—the country is to be divided into zones—that is to say that if you are located in San Francisco you are not going to be served with the same news as though you lived in New York. International news will be supplied to all the zones, but each zone headquarter will maintain its own individual news gathering establishment in its own territory and will supply local pictures along with state, national and international events.

Fourth—for those theatres desirous of obtaining it a "special extra" service will be added. It will consist of photographs of unusual importance. A section of film will be rushed by messenger, special, etc., to the exhibitor.

Not only will the Hearst-Vitagraph be made right but it will be given a popularity by a campaign of advertising which will send people to the theatres where the reel is shown.

Fifth—a system of lobby announcements and posters which will have the atmosphere of news, rush, telegraphic effect has been worked out.

A number of other ideas have been collated into a book which outlines the whole proposition of the new Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial.

Joined with the VITAGRAPH

(America's Greatest Producing Company)

MAN to man with the Hearst Organization, there will be working the great Vitagraph Company. Add to the camera staff of Hearst, the camera staff of Vitagraph. Add to the news gathering facilities of Hearst, the news gathering facilities of Vitagraph. Add to the Hearst institution the Vitagraph institution.

Thus you can gain a conception of the immensity and power of the new Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial.

The Vitagraph Organization has been noted as a producer from its inception averaging higher than any other always. Despite the fact that Vitagraph has in the past years given America master pieces and head liners, there has never been a single picture bearing the name of Vitagraph which has not been up to the mark.

To measure up to Hearst and his Organization, is not a difficult matter for Vitagraph.

But to Vitagraph of all the field, the selection was made for proper co-operation and masterly direction.

To Vitagraph all the honor that is Hearst's is equally given.

The Whole Story of the HEARST-VITAGRAPH News Pictorial

(Formerly the Hearst-Selig)

Exhibitors, desirous of learning the details are requested to send us their names for a copy of the book, which is now on the press, and is to be issued in the course of the week. This is confidential. It is therefore earnestly requested that the name of the manager of the theatre be mentioned.

This book outlines the various innovations and includes the price chart, which enables every exhibitor to "Make Your Own Price"

Every exhibitor, irrespective of what news service he is now using, should get this book. Write today to

HEARST-VITAGRAPH CO.

226 William Street, New York

The Hearst Organization
238 William Street,
New York

The Vitagraph Company,
Vitagraphville,
Brooklyn, New York

BOOK SENT ON REQUEST

Some Current Releases Reviewed

"The Buzzard's Shadow"

American's Mutual Masterpicture, Released Dec. 9
Reviewed by John C. Garrett

CONSISTENTLY good in photography, action and wealth of beautiful scenery is the five-reel American Mutual Masterpicture "The Buzzard's Shadow" to be released December 9. Thomas Ricketts is the man responsible for the direction of this splendid production and he has succeeded in obtaining excellent results in the screening of the big desert scenes which are most prominent in the picture. The illusions of the buzzard's shadow hovering over the desert are especially good. This photodrama is wholly enjoyable. The story deals with the life in a garrison of Sergeant Barnes and a young widow, who cooks and washes for the camp. The plot is logical and the story is well adaptable for screen use, having many satisfying qualities.

Alice bids Sergeant Barnes farewell.

Harold Lockwood, the handsome American leading man, portrays the part of Sergeant Barnes, who is in love with Alice Corbett, a widow who lives in the camp, which part is played by Mae Allison. William Stowell as Dr. Deschamps; Harry Von Meter as Unitah, the halfbreed; Betty Harte as Mrs. Sears, wife of Colonel Sears, which part is played by Dick LeReno; Alice Ann Rooney as Arreep, the squaw, and Virginia Fordyce as Barbara, Alice's small daughter, complete the strong cast.

Sergeant Barnes is stationed at a U. S. army post on the edge of the great American desert and here Alice Corbett, a young widow, lives with her small daughter and between Sergeant Barnes and Alice a warm friendship is formed which develops into love. As a birthday celebration for Colonel Sears an army ball is planned and at this affair Barnes discovers the colonel's wife in a loving tete-a-tete with Dr. Deschamps.

He later incurs the bitter enmity of Deschamps when he asserts that the latter must hand in his resignation to Colonel Sears or be exposed and another enemy is made in the person of Unitah, whom the sergeant knocks down when he discovers the halfbreed maltreating a horse.

Colonel Sears sends Barnes with a message to be carried to another fort across the desert. Deschamps takes a phial of deadly poison and proceeds to saturate some lumps of sugar which Sergeant Barnes is taking along for his horse and Unitah, the halfbreed, follows Barnes and while he sleeps empties his canteen and replaces the water with sand.

The next morning Barnes' horse dies and later the young sergeant discovers that his water is gone. At his feet he sees a strange symbol—a symbol of death, the shadow of a buzzard soaring round and round, patiently awaiting the moment when Barnes must fall exhausted to die on the sand. His reason flees, but he manages to reach the shining rails that mark man's conquest of the arid waste and there he is found.

He later recovers his health, but his mind as far as the past is concerned is a blank. One day upon seeing the stars and stripes floating in the breeze the chain of events of the past are revealed before his disordered brain and he leaves for th army post. Just before he comes into the camp Deschamps plans to leave, as also does Unitah. However, Deschamps is taken to the post and thrown into the guard house to be dealt with in the way the army treats a traitor, and the buzzard's shadow is seen hanging over the army guard house, while young Barnes and Alice are reunited and are happy in each other's love.

"The Labyrinth"

Equitable Five-Reel Production, Released Dec. 13
Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation's "The Labyrinth," a five-reel production released on the World Film Program, December 13, features Gail Kane, who has won success on the speaking stage and in pictures, presents a story of general appeal. Stories built around men or women of the theatrical profession seem to be of especial interest to the public, whose liking for pictures of this kind has long since been manifested. "The Labyrinth" centers about a girl who tricks a theatrical manager into giving her an opportunity to star in a production.

The plot has depth and while it contains numerous complications and developments, the action is clear and easily followed. It is a melodramatic romance and the situations are all rather "heavy," but the story and the characters are more convincing than melodrama usually is. The scenes of life in the underworld, while realistically shown have not been enlarged upon to make them over-real and repelling. E. Mason Hopper directed "The Labyrinth" with ability, and he has secured some novel scenic effects. The photography is good.

Scene from Equitable's "The Labyrinth."

The part interpreted by Miss Gale is well supplied with occasions for effective dramatic action. This character is well drawn and highly interesting. Flo Burke is a girl who commands admiration by her determination and her ability to reach a reasonable conclusion. Though her dealings with the theatrical manager are not altogether honorable, she deceives him for unselfish reasons, which, coupled with the fact that he is a man of few scruples, justifies her in the eyes of the spectator and as a consequence she is entitled to the sympathy her later trials arouse.

The play covers a long period of time. After her success on the stage, Flo meets the Reverend Fenton, who, after a short acquaintance, asks her to marry him. Because gossip connects her name with that of the manager's, she refuses, explaining that she is the sister of the notorious Flo Burke. A railroad accident brings them together again. Flo's sister is killed and a report is circulated that the actress is dead.

She marries Fenton. Morse later discovers that his popular actress is not dead. He threatens to make known her real identity to her husband if she will not return to the stage or pay him the large forfeit called for in the contract she forced him to sign. To protect his mistress from Morse, the butler struggles with him and Morse is accidentally shot. When she confesses to her husband, Fenton tells her that there is nothing for him to forgive, which makes her happiness complete.

Richard Neal as the Reverend Fenton, and Edward Roseman as Morse, head the supporting cast which includes Dolly Larkin and Polly Champlain.

"A Daughter of the City"

Essanay Five-Reel Drama Released by V. L. S. E., December 20—Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

MARGUERITE CLAYTON, throughout the five acts of this play, looks and acts like a big, beautiful doll. And this is exactly what she is required to be, in the role of Margaret Fowler, the innocent, obedient daughter of a poor dressmaker, who, embittered by poverty, is anxious to lift her daughter out of it by means of the girl's own loveliness. Margaret is very "easy to look at," and she is as good as she is beautiful, but beyond that she is as wax in the hands of other people. In the beginning her mother forces her to give up her devoted but far from rich young sweetheart, Dick Conklin, played by John Junior, and in the end her benefactress, Mrs. Bancroft, brings him back for her, and arranges her marriage. The girl's purity, however, keeps her from falling under the influence of the villain, Henry Bancroft, who is well depicted by E. H. Calvert.

In the story, on Margaret's beauty is based her mother's hope of winning for her daughter riches and a man, the riches being more important than the man. She is not at all averse to sacrificing the girl's real happiness, and sends away the man she loves. But when LeMoyne, the famous artist, through his portrait of Margaret, brings the girl to the attention of

Scene from "A Daughter of the City."

Bancroft, the employer of the young lover, a man of wealth and of evil life, the mother is pleased. Margaret herself resists the man. Then the portrait attracts Bancroft's wife, a woman charitably inclined, who wishes to adopt Margaret and take her into their own home. Poor little Margaret sees the trap she will be in, under Bancroft's roof, and tries to refuse, but the mother, although aware of Bancroft's character, seems ready to push her daughter into the danger. Miss Clayton portrays the fear and loneliness of the girl at this crisis very effectively.

It is Mrs. Bancroft herself, a fine charactered woman, who saves the girl from her husband, and, learning of the first sweetheart, she contrives to bring the young people together again, and we leave the fair Margaret safely married.

The defense of Margaret by Mrs. Bancroft is the most pleasing feature of the story. Her fineness of character is in striking contrast to the unpleasant, mercenary mother of the girl. Her real love for the helpless little beauty, instead of the usual jealous hate of the wronged wife is a touch of originality.

The story holds the spectator's interest throughout, and while the plot becomes complicated, the thread of the story is clear at all times.

The Current Triangle Bill

This Week's Offerings from the Griffith and Ince Studios, Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

"BETWEEN MEN" and "Cross Currents," the two big spectacular offerings of this week's Triangle bill at the Studebaker, in Chicago, are both so good that it is next to impossible to declare one better than the other. The exhibitor who would choose between them must decide for himself whether he wants a big, red-blooded production in which there is much in the way of physical conflict and rude, elemental passions, or a society story, splendidly staged, elaborately costumed and tremendously emotional. "Between Men" will appeal to every man patron, while the ladies will undoubtedly prefer beautiful Helen Ware and her wonderful array of gowns.

Courtney Foote, Sam DeGrasse and Helen Ware in a scene from "Cross Currents."

William S. Hart is the featured player in "Between Men," which was made at the Ince studios, and for once, at least, proves that he can wear a dress suit and play the gentleman as convincingly as he can portray the western types and characters for which he is so frequently cast. House Peters, another splendid actor, is Gregg Lewiston, Hart's rival for the hand of pretty Lina Hampdon. To J. Barney Sherry falls another of those grey-haired father roles that he knows so well how to interpret, and Bert Wesner and Robert McKim complete the cast.

The story concerns the possible ruin of Ashley Hampdon on the stock market by Gregg Lewiston, in order that Lewiston may be in a position to compel Lina Hampdon to marry him, to save her father's fortunes. At the critical moment Hampdon recalls an incident of the long ago when he staked Bob White (W. S. Hart) thereby permitting the westerner to retrieve his lost fortune. Out of gratitude White gave Hampdon a note authorizing the latter to call upon him for either physical and financial aid at any time that he might be in need of either. Hampdon sends for White, and the two set out to defeat Lewiston in his attempt to ruin Lina's father.

Lewiston, ever tricky, sends Rankin, his partner, to White under pretense of having quarreled with the broker and being now in a mood to seek redress for his wrongs. White, while pretending to fall in with Rankin's suggestion that he buy a certain stock, secretly places a dictagraph in Lewiston's office and thus learns of Rankin's treachery. After a wild day in the stock market White and Hampdon find themselves a quarter of a million dollars richer and Lewiston is on the verge of ruin. Meeting White in a club, Lewiston hints that he played the market for the purpose of "buying a wife" and White resents the insult to Lina by following Lewiston to his apartments and there fighting him until he is too exhausted to longer continue the combat.

Bob and Lina journey down the golden trail.

His mission completed, White starts for the west, believing that he has no chance of winning the love of Lina, but the girl and her father journey west on the same train and as the film ends Lina and White plight their troth on the observation platform of the limited train. The stock exchange scenes and the fight in Lewiston's apartment are two scenes that will long be remembered by film fans, and Hart will undoubtedly win new laurels in his latest role.

"Cross Currents" serves to introduce Helen Ware to Triangle patrons, supported by a cast which includes Courtenay Foote as Paul Beale, Teddy Sampson as Flavia, and Sam DeGrasse as Randolph, a man of wealth, in love with Elizabeth (Miss Ware). The story offers Miss Ware the best vehicle she has ever enjoyed in films and her array of stunning gowns will impress all by their beauty. She is particularly good in her emotional scenes with Flavia, just after she discovers the latter's love for Beale, and determines to break off her own engagement that her foster sister may be happy.

Elizabth Crane, a Washington society belle, engaged to Paul Beale, a rising young diplomat, breaks off the engagement when she discovers that Flavia, her foster sister, is head over heels in love with the same young man. After Flavia' marriage to Paul both sisters are invited to go on a cruise aboard the private yacht of Silas Randolph, a millionaire in love with Elizabeth. The yacht is wrecked and Flavia is picked up by a passing freight steamer, while Elizabeth and Paul are washed ashore on a desert isle. Later Randolph arrives at the same island, but displays so much of the brute in his character that Elizabeth, in self defense, is compelled to stab him. Paul and Elizabeth lead a Robinson Crusoe existence for many months, but in time Flavia has a vision of her sister still alive on the desert island and organizes an expedition to find her. Just as Flavia appears to claim Paul, her husband, Elizabeth renounces forever the man she loves and walks stoically out into the sea to her death. All of the principals are superbly cast and give the very best that is in them to an interpretation of the difficult roles assigned them.

After seeing "Crooked to the End," the Keystone offering of this week, one wonders if there is anything left in the way of a thrill for Keystone to stage. In this one production a head-on collision between two engines, some hair-raising stunts with an automobile, the hurling of a street car over a lofty cliff and a few more such spectacles are to be seen. Fred Mace and Lilie Leslie are the featured players.

"Jane"

A Five-Reel Morosco Comedy, Released December 5

Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THERE can be nothing but praise for the excellent production which the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company has given the film version of the celebrated Charles Frohman comedy, "Jane," released through Paramount. The staging of the play is in every sense artistic, and it has been made as realistic as a story of the kind can be. With Charlotte Greenwood and Sidney Grant, favorites of the musical comedy stage making their screen debut, and Forrest Stanley, Myrtle Stedman, Herbert Standing and Lydia Yeamans Titus in the cast, it can be readily understood that there are no acting opportunities permitted to escape unnoticed. The settings, particularly that of Shackelton's drawing room, are beautiful and in splendid taste.

In many particulars "Jane" is familiar to patrons of the screen, for though it was written and produced on the speaking stage long years ago its situations have been used in comedies of more recent date. Whether it has been done consciously or unconsciously, "Jane" has often been flattered, since imitation is the sincerest kind of flattery. The complications resulting from the visit of a wealthy uncle to his bachelor nephew, who, to secure an increase in his allowance pretends he is married, are almost countless. There are enough in the last reel of "Jane" to supply several plays with fine material for comedy. The story was written by W. H. Lestrocque and was presented in England and America with exceptional success by Charles Frohman. This Morosco production bids fair to enjoy the historical success "Jane" achieved as a stage play.

Jane and Shackelton prepare to meet uncle.

Jane is the maid in the house of Charles Shackelton, whose uncle informs him that his income cannot be increased unless he marries. Shackelton needs money badly and decides to marry Lucy Norton. He wires the news to his uncle and receives the increase, but Lucy's father objects, so there is no marriage. A year later the uncle decides to visit Shackelton, who, in a fix, offers Jane a nice reward if she will pose as his wife. This is not altogether pleasing to William, the butler, who has kept his marriage to Jane a secret. The uncle arrives and brings with him into the home of his nephew, all sorts of trouble. But out of this maze comes happiness to all.

Charlotte Greenwood is her usual angular self as Jane, and Sidney Grant has that most grateful part, William. William is an excellent part and Mr. Grant plays it most effectively, realizing all its possibilities with ease and a naturalness seldom found in a stage star's first performance before the camera. Forrest Stanley is the pleasure loving Shackelton and Myrtle Stedman plays Lucy Norton. Lydia Yeamans Titus gives a fine character performance as Mrs. Chadwick and Herbert Standing is seen as the uncle.

"The Solution of the Mystery"

An Unusual American Offering, Released Dec. 13 Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

A PICTURE quite unusual for the American studios will be offered by the American Film Manufacturing Company on Monday, December 13. It features Vivian Rich and Alfred Vosburgh, and is entitled "The Solution of the Mystery."

Reaves Eason is credited with the production, in which the most unusual things happen without any apparent explanation, and one's interest is keen indeed to discover what is going on, and what it is all about, but the picture lives up to its title, for, ere it finishes, a full solution of the mystery is supplied.

Those who care for the mechanical effects seen in out-of-the-ordinary stories such as "The Million Dollar Mystery," etc., will find secret passages, revolving picture frames, and other mysterious contrivances in this two-reel feature.

Wilbur Mitchell, crime investigator, is preparing a report on city vice conditions, and lives in a lonely house in the suburbs with his daughter Bessie, whose engagement to Franklyn Davis, a wealthy society man, has just been announced. Bessie, while writing to her fiance, senses the presence of someone else in the room, and turns about just in time to see a mysterious figure disappearing through the solid wall. Her father laughs when she relates the incident, and declares it a mere illusion, but is himself mystified to discover that an important page from his report has disappeared from his desk without any apparent means of departure.

Though Bess is expecting Franklyn to visit her, she receives a letter instead breaking off the engagement, and shortly afterward Jack Willard, who represents himself as an agent of the International Purity League, comes to confer with Mitchell, and instantly becomes interested in Bess, paying her much attention.

A scene from "The Solution of the Mystery."

Jack proposes to Bess, and is rejected and dismissed, and then without any apparent cause Bess bodily disappears from the house in less than a five-minute interval of being left alone.

At this time, when you are thoroughly mystified, the plot changes so as to explain the various odd happenings, and you learn with surprise that Franklyn Davis had been attacked by a band of crooks who forced him to write Bess breaking his engagement, their motive being to get Davis out of the way, and securing Mitchell's fortune by marrying Bess to Willard, who, is, of course, not what he represents himself to be.

Through secret passages the crooks gain entrance into the Mitchell home, and secure the documents from Mitchell's desk, spying upon Bess and her father, and even attacking the latter through an opening in a big picture which hangs just back of his desk.

Mitchell discovers one of the crooks behind the picture frame, and after Bess disappears succeeds in finding her with the asistance of Davis, for Davis, whom the crooks have told of their plan, secures a mirror, using it to reflect the sun with heliograph signals across the street to the Mitchell home.

Mitchell rescues Davis, and the latter takes him to the hiding place in which Bess is concealed, and there the other members of the band of crooks are rounded up and arrested.

"Nevermore"

First Episode of Pathe's Serial, "The Red Circle," Dec. 18, Reviewed by Tom Kennedy

ON December 18, the first episode of the new Pathe serial, "The Red Circle" will be released. This continued photoplay is being produced by Balboa under the direction of Sherwood McDonald and will feature Ruth Roland, the beautiful and accomplished screen actress who starred in the "Who Pays?" series and more recently co-star with William Elliot in "Comrade John," and Frank Mayo, who has appeared in many Balboa productions. One two-reel episode of "The Red Circle" will be released each week and there are fourteen episodes.

The story is an original one written directly for the screen by H. M. Horkheimer and Will M. Ritchey and if the episodes to follow are as good as regards the story it will be further proof of the superiority of stories written especially for visualization over adaptions from novels or stage plays. The first episode is entitled "Nevermore," which, in addition to introducing the important characters, contains much interesting action, and promises much in the way of developments of human appeal and dramatic situations in the episodes to follow.

Miss Roland plays the part of June Travis, a refined girl who lives with her mother, and Frank Mayo is cast in the part of Max Lamar, a former member of the Secret Service who is now a private detective. These two meet for the first time at the prison, which June with her mother visits to aid if possible any of the unfortunates who have served their terms, and Lamar to watch the first move of "Circle" Jim Borden, a dangerous criminal who has greatly annoyed the police.

June asks Borden if he intends to reform, at the same time questioning him if he has no one dear to him whose happiness may depend upon his conduct. He answers that he has a son, who is already a crook and threatens to strike June for meddling in his affairs. Lamar follows Borden and sees him speak with his son, but before long they elude him.

He is accidently led to the hiding place of the crook. Borden overpowers Lamar and after exhibiting a peculiar circle appearing as though it was painted in red upon his left hand, explains that he and his worthless son will cease to be a menace to society; for he has decided to kill both the boy and himself. But first he will kill the detective. Borden is killed in the struggle and the son dies as planned by his father.

At the time of Borden's death, June, in her home, experiences a strange feeling of unaccountable sadness. The next day Lamar, while standing near an auto sees a lady's hand resting on the door of the car which bears the mysterious red circle. As the auto moves away he makes a note of the license number.

The direction is highly commendable and the photography is good throughout. If the interest is sustained in the future episodes as it is in this, which tells a splendid story and does not depend upon scenic effects and an occasional thrilling stunt for its appeal, "The Red Circle" will be more in keeping with what the average screen patron of today demands and therefore will not fail to enjoy remarkable popularity as a serial offering. Daniel Gilfeather is seen as Borden and Edward Peters plays the part of the son.

"The Coquette's Awakening"

Selig's Two-Reel Production, to Be Released Dec. 13 Reviewed by John C. Garrett

KATHLYN WILLIAMS, Selig's ever popular and attractive leading lady, is cast in the two-reel Selig production to be released December 13 as a coquette. Miss Williams, whose versatility has been proven in former releases, portrays this character splendidly and later when she discovers that she really is "in love" her acting of the real woman instead of a flirt is equally as convincing. The story is a very unusual one, containing good action and photography which is up to the standard set by the Selig Company with fade-ins which are clear and steady.

Kathlyn Williams as the flirt is supported by Harry DeVere, who does splendid work as Ralph Warner; Guy Oliver, who is cast as George, another of the flirt's many suitors, and Charles LeMoyne, who portrays the part of Father Time and appears to a splendid advantage in many of the allegorical scenes which are prominent because of their rich settings.

The Flirt lives only to play the game of love for the delight of the gamble. Ralph Warner, who loves the Flirt dearly, is informed by her that she has merely tolerated him for the enjoyment of the game. Ralph then tells the Flirt that he is going to end it all that night. The Flirt laughs heartily, for she has heard this story before.

A pretty scene from "The Coquette's Awakening."

She falls asleep and dreams that she receives a message from Ralph that unless she telephones him before 10 o'clock that night he will take his life. The hands of the clock are pointing to the hour of 10. Overcome with remorse the Flirt beseeches Father Time to turn back the clock so that she may save Ralph.

Father Time takes the Flirt through the Garden of Love and shows her many examples of the loves of men and women and how Time destroys the unworthy and helps the worthy. Father Time shows her the true and false hearts and how even the primitive man sought the love of a good woman. With magic touch Father Time brings back the days of Antony and Cleopatra; of Romeo and Juliet, and ends by stating that unless she is true to the man who loves her, Ralph, Time will see that she is punished, for Time conquers all things.

The Flirt awakens and in the mirror sees a vision of herself as an aged woman, deserted by all her suitors. Ralph returns for his gloves, which he has forgotten, and the Flirt informs him that she regrets her actions and that she dearly loves him.

"The House of Tears"

A Five-Reel Metro-Rolfe Drama, Released Dec. 13 Reviewed by George W. Graves

THOSE who are paying their money to see a feature embodying all the acknowledged constituents that places it in such a classification and not a mere long film, will be perfectly content with "The House of Tears," produced by Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., for the Metro program under the direction of Edwin Carewe. The sparkling clearness of the photography is so marked that it is the first thing that comes to the thought on recalling the picture. The one or two "thrills" are such a natural part of the procedure that it is not necessary to ponder their significance. Hair-raising thrills here and there without acceptable reason for their presence have made more than one film an affair of sensation at the cost of sense.

Emily Stevens' acting is touching in the fullest degree as a wife whose husband pays more attention to the market than to her. This naturally results in Mrs. Collingwood's accepting the attentions of a Henry Thorns, and her subsequent discovery by her husband in a compromising position with Thorns. Henri Bergman is cast as Collingwood and Walter Hitchcock as Henry Thorns. Emily Stevens, who is now appearing in a Broadway success, is an actress of no mean talent, and it is doubtful if her art has ever reached the height in photodrama that it has attained to through the vehicle of "The House of Tears." We first see her as Mrs. Collingwood and later as Gale Collingwood, the child whom the divorce courts have given into the custody of her father. Soon after the separation, Mrs. Collingwood marries Thorns, accompanies him west and settles down to the humble life of a prospector.

Fifteen years later Thorns has tired of the woman he won by stealth. After winning $50,000 at faro he tells her that he is going back to Wall Street to start life again, but does not intend to take her. The woman's pleadings having no effect, she tries to force the money from him at the point of a revolver. In the following struggle a shot is fired. Thorns leaves the place believing that his wife was killed by a shot from her own hand.

The next we see of Thorns he is a man of great wealth, won through phenomenal success in investments. Gail Collingwood, her father long since dead, has grown to womanhood. She is known as Alice Gail, a reported on the Evening News. The girl is sent to interview Thorns, who is now using the name of "Edward North." The latter's heart nearly stops beating when he sees the close resemblance between this girl and his supposedly dead wife. Alice's admiration for the man soon merges into love and in due time their betrothal is announced.

'Way off in the mining town, Thorns' wife has been slowly regaining strength. Once more well, she determines to return to the scenes of her youth. She reads in the paper of Edward North's engagement to Jane Gail and loses no time in seeking out the residence of the girl. Here, Anne, the nurse, recognizes her and takes the poor, illclad woman in. Then the girl, for the first time since a baby, embraces her mother. Later, the two make Thorns face his past in a prearranged meeting at the old Collingwood home. When the man faces the sad-faced wife whom he has thought long since dead, he dashes from the house in a cold fear. In a crazed condition he runs his machine over a steep cliff and is crushed beneath the car many feet below.

Mrs. Collingwood's outside love affair is discovered by her husband.

"The Primrose Path"

A Five-Reel Universal Feature, Released December 13 Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

IN the Broadway Star feature of December 13 the Universal Film Manufacturing Company will offer Gladys Hanson, a recently acquired star, in "The Primrose Path," an adaptation of the play by the same name, which was written by Bayard Veiller.

The production follows closely the lines of the original play, and some of the settings are truly magnificent. The photography is above criticism, and the acting in many parts rises to really great dramatic heights. However, frankly, Miss Hanson seems to overlook certain chances for emotional work, or at least her features, as photographed, fail to register the suffering and agony which the character in the situation in which she is pictured must have suffered.

Hal Forde plays Ned Templeton, the artist husband of Joan, and William J. Welsh gives a splendid portrayal of Cartwright, the millionaire who seeks to win Ned for his own daughter, Helen, skillfully played by Anita Blake.

As stated above, the tragic little photoplay follows closely the lines of the famous legitimate production, beginning with the elopement of Joan, a simple country maid, with Ned Templeton, a young artist, and their establishment of a simple studio in Paris, where Ned continues his studies.

For a time both are happy, then poverty overtakes them, and Ned falls ill. An art dealer who has seen Joan falls in love with her, and offers her a large sum if she will visit his apartments, but Joan refuses until Ned is so seriously ill that the physician attending him tells her that he will undoubtedly die unless richer and more nourishing food can be provided, and Joan sacrifices everything in order to secure the necessary funds for Ned's nourishment.

Ned, on recovering, is led to believe that the money for his care came from Joan's father, and the girl, to avoid the art dealer, persuades Ned to return to America. But on shipboard Ned encounters Cartwright, the millionaire, and his daughter, Helen, who is much attracted by the good looking artist, and Joan once more finds her husband failing her.

As time passes, Cartwright induces Ned to paint Helen's portrait, and sets the young artist up in an elaborate studio, though making it conditional that Joan remain in the cheap flat which they rented upon their return to New York.

Joan temporarily accepts Ned's support, though remaining in the humble flat, but as Ned's visits to her grow fewer and fewer, culminating in a curt note enclosing a check, and explaining that he probably will not be able to see her for some time, she understands, and returns the check, explaining that she is his wife and not his mistress.

Joan returns to the studios as a model, and one day is astonished to meet Helen and Ned, and being recognized by Helen as the model of a certain picture Ned had painted, and which Helen's father had purchased. Then and then only, Helen learns that Ned is married, but her love for him is so great that she induces her father to offer Joan $100,000 to give up the young artist. Ned, concealed, overhears the offer, and when Joan, insulted at Cartwright's proposition, tells the true story of her sacrifice for Ned in Paris, the young husband is man enough to see that it is Joan he loves and not Helen. Rushing out, he embraces his wife and pleads for forgiveness, and Joan, seeing that his heart is hers again, leaves the mansion, deciding to begin life over again.

"The Inner Chamber"

Lubin's Three-Reel Production to Be Released Dec. 15 Reviewed by John C. Garrett

WITH a most fitting climax which adds greatly to its interest the Lubin three-reel production, "The Inner Chamber," is a thrilling romance. There is a breathless three minutes when the drug fiend, numbed and stupefied by drink and opium, rushes into the old mine which is to be blown into atoms within that short space of time, and one does not regain his breath until the man rushes out of the mine and pushes his own little girl whom he has imprisoned therein to safety.

Melvin Mayo as Ralph Morgan, a ne'er do well and later an incurable drug fiend, does some vivid playing. Helen Eddy as Marian Day appears to very good advantage, L. C. Shumway is most convincing as Guy Darwin, a cub reporter, and Adda Gleason as Fadette Devore, the deserted wife of Morgan; Ruth Hyatt as Hope and Adelaide Bronti as Mrs. Day complete this able cast.

When Fadette Devore returns home from her evening work, that of singing in the chorus of a burlesque show, she is met by her ne'er do well husband, Ralph Morgan, who takes her money and goes out on a spree. He meets a friend who persuades him to go to the city and there operate a bucket shop. Ralph returns home and finding Fadette asleep, packs his belongings in a suitcase and leaves a note telling Fadette that he loves her no more and is going to the city. However, she awakens just before he leaves and finds the note and although she pleads with him to stay with her because she is about to become a mother, he thrusts her aside and leaves her alone.

In the city Morgan is successful in his enterprise and is welcomed into society and wins the heart of Marian Day away from her humble suitor, Guy Darwin, a cub reporter. Fadette comes to the city and there Darwin saves her from committing suicide and she tells her story and he recognizes a picture she shows him to be that of Morgan who is that day to become the husband of Marian Day. He rushes with

Scene from Lubin's "The Inner Chamber."

Fadette to the church and arrives just in time to stop the wedding. Morgan is also wanted by the police for swindling and is sentenced for several years.

Some months later Marian becomes Guy's wife and Fadette dies shortly after her child's birth and Darwin and his wife promise to take care of the child, whom they name Hope. In prison Morgan acquires the drug habit and several years later when he escapes he finds a haven in an abandoned mine and one day he sees Marian and Guy, who have prospered, and thinking only of revenge, plans to steal the child Hope from them.

The opportunity presents itself and he takes the child with him to the deserted mine and there ties her in a room and then goes to gloat over Marian and Guy, who convince him that Hope is his own child. When Morgan arrives at the mine to release the child he finds that it is to be dynamited and the charge has been set to go off in three minutes. He manages to break into the mine, rescue the child and push her to safety and a few minutes later a fearful explosion takes place and his body is buried beneath tons of earth.

"Rosemary"

A Five-Reel Metro-Quality Drama, Released December 20. Reviewed by George W. Graves

THIS is a delightful play of "old England." The apparel and customs of the period are correct to the letter and, through the suggestion of atmosphere, keep one in the spirit of the story throughout its length. The interior of Minifie's Tavern is one of the most accurate and thoroughly convincing period sets ever shown. In it the English alcoved tables, decorations, etc., even to the stone slab floor, carry weight and force and emphasize the absence of that temporary and thrown-together appearance which many interiors have. All through the picture is the familiar dignified Metro polish, introduced through the efforts of the directors, William Bowman and Fred J. Balshofer. This picturization is adapted from the play, "Rosemary," which scored a big success on the speaking stage.

One of the essentials of a genuine success is to have the star suited to the leading role. Marguerite Snow is splendidly equipped for the portrayal of Dorothy Cruickshank, carries her part well, and gives an altogether pleasing performance. It would be difficult to bring to light a better English gentleman than the character portrayed by William Clifford as Sir Jasper. Paul Gilmore is also appropriately cast as Capt. Westwood, Dorothy's lover, while George F. Hernandez and Frank Bacon stir up a considerable bit of good comedy in their impersonations. They take the parts of Captain Cruickshank, and Professor Jogram, the latter being a landlubber authority on navigation. The captain's aspersions on Jogram's text-book lead to lively times. A very amusing scene is the one in which the two gentlemen wake up in the morning to find themselves in the same bed, having no recollections whatever of retiring together.

Sir Jasper gives Dorothy a sprig of Rosemary for remembrance.

Dorothy Cruickshank elopes with her lover, Captain Westwood, whom her parents have never seen. Soon after their departure a raging storm sets in and the two lovers are forced to accept the hospitality of Sir Jasper Thorndyke, at whose house they seek shelter. Not long after the elopement, Captain Cruickshank discovers his daughter's note and he and his wife set out in the thick of the storm in pursuit. They meet with an accident and also accept the hospitality of kind Sir Jasper, arriving after Dorothy and Westwood are safely in their rooms.

Sir Jasper arranges that Dorothy shall not appear at breakfast next morning and takes this opportunity to gain the parents' consent to a marriage between Dorothy and her lover. A happy party soon starts out for London, where the marriage is planned. Sir Jasper, who now loves Dorothy pays her many attentions, to the great discomfort of Captain Westwood. Sir Jasper reaches the point of wishing to declare his love to the girl, and his chances appear good in spite of his age when Professor Jogram impresses upon him the fact that his intrusion would ruin the lives of the two young people. Sir Jasper then manfully dismisses the thought from his mind.

Many years later, Captain Westwood and his family are seen in the happiest of circumstances, while Sir Jasper, an old man, is shown musing over the little sprig of rosemary that Dorothy had given him years before, saying: "Rosemary, that's for remembrance."

"Apples and Egg-Beaters"

Tenth Adventure in Pathe's "Wallingford" Series Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

IN the tenth episode of Pathe's "Wallingford" series, entitled "Apples and Egg-Beaters," J. Rufus and Blackie administer restoratives to the ill nourished business of one Pushman, inventor of the Pushman egg-beater, a device which its creator thinks well of, but which for some reason finds little favor with those who have practical use for such articles.

Theirs is a wonderful tonic, for in a few days the anaemic Pushman manufacturing concern revives and grows strong. All this is not done out of charity to either Pushman or his company. The confidence men have their own end in view and when the business booms to the extent that G. W. Slookum, apple grower and capitalist, willingly pays $60,000 for a controlling share in the firm, they feel that they have been justly rewarded.

In "Apples and Egg-Beaters" the characterizations of Max Figman and Burr McIntosh stand out in bolder relief than they have in any of the former episodes. The story in this release furnishes the cast with opportunities to walk into the picture and that is about all. If the situations provided the cast hold opportunities they have been passed unnoticed by both actors and spectator. But this is a resourceful cast and it is on occasions like this that its members prove their worth. "Apples and Egg-Beaters" is enjoyable because it is well produced and because Burr McIntosh, Max Figman and Lolita Robertson, though her part is a small one, render excellent performances.

Wallingford, Daw and the Warden sisters visit the country town for the purpose of making G. W. Slookum return the amount he swindled from old man Warden. Wallingford learns that the Pushman Kitchen Utensil Company is on the verge of ruin. He and Blackie, with Pushman's consent, assume active control of the business and in a few days wagonloads of cases are carried from the establishment. This sets Slookum to thinking and he is convinced when he sees the books that he can increase his holdings by gaining control of the business so he buys Pushman's share. The latter turns all the money over to Wallingford, who, after giving Pushman a nice profit, leaves town on the first train.

"A Man's Making"

Five-Reel Lubin V. L. S. E. Drama, Released Dec. 6 Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

LUBIN'S five-part V. L. S. E. production, released December 6, and entiled "A Man's Making," tells an interesting story, and is admirably produced and enacted by a cast headed by Richard Buhler and Rosetta Brice. The story concerns a young man whose wild living while at college exhausts the patience of his father, which determines him to make a place for himself unaided by his influential and wealthy parent.

A scene from "A Man's Making."

The theme has human interest, for it is the study of man, his weakness and his strength and the incidents in his life which influence him.

"A Man's Making" was written and produced by Jack Pratt. The story was adapted by Anthony P. Kelly. The story is well constructed and convincing in its portrayal of the various characters who sustain well the interest of the spectator. The action has picturesque settings which are finely photographed. This gives the play a delightful atmosphere. In procuring pretty effects and atmosphere, however, the director has allowed the action to lag in some scenes, and there are a number of scenes which appeal only because of their pictorial beauty. The two realistic fights between Graham and the jealous sailor are filled with action, yet one feels that they could be shortened, and there are one or two other instances.

In the opening scenes we see Harold Graham in college, where he is very popular as the star football player and also as one of the boys. He neglects his work for cards, gay parties, and athletics. His father keeps him well supplied with money until Harold gets his name in the papers because of an affair with a chorus girl. Then the elder Graham visits the college and informs his son that his allowance will be cut down since he cannot put it to better use. Harold possesses as much will and spirit as his father and refuses more help, assuring his father that he can go into the world and make as much of himself as he did.

After leaving college young Graham meets with many disappointments. He searches long but cannot secure a position which he deems he is worthy of. He wanders into a fishing village, where he meets for the first time a girl he feels he could really love. A few months later he is injured in a fight with Mary's former suitor, Bill Rose. He is visited by his father, who urges him to return home, but Harold refuses, he is determined to make good there. After organizing the independent fishermen and successfully fighting a trust he returns to help his father in his present financial difficulties. After materially aiding his father, Harold returns to Mary.

Richard Buhler uses to advantage the opportunities of his part of Harold Graham, and Rosetta Brice is a pretty Mary Haskell. Herbert Fortier, George Clarke, Nelson Hall and Wm. H. Turner make up the supporting cast. Praise for the fine artistry of the production and high quality of the photography cannot be too enthusiastic. In "A Man's Making" Jack Pratt has given the V. L. S. E. program a picture of rare beauty and a story of strong human appeal.

"The Blade o' Grass"

Three-Reel Edison Comedy Drama, Released Dec. 24 Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE appeal of "The Blade o' Grass" is the result of its simplicity of story, characters and treatment. This three-reel Edison comedy-drama of youth and the outdoors was directed by Burton George. It is Mr. George's first production since joining the Edison Company. He is widely known both as an actor and director. "The Blade o' Grass" is the story of a "wild flower" who grows to womanhood in the seclusion of the Maine woods. She later visits her aunt, a New York society woman, where she cannot become accustomed to the conventions and formalities.

She finally marries a wealthy city chap, which is the usual thing in stories of this kind. But as familiar as it is in general, "The Blade o' Grass" has much entertainment value. To make a story like this interesting and thoroughly pleasing requires good acting and pretty settings and locations. "The Blade o' Grass" has both. The outdoor scenes have excellently photographed backgrounds of expansive rolling country, and the action taking place in the city has settings whose beauty is the result of man's craft.

"The Blade o' Grass" is the type of offering which is greatly popular, and deservedly so. This picture has individuality, there is nothing about it that strikes one as being commonplace or worn out. Leoni Flugrath does very well as the girl. She has appeared in several Edison productions, but she previously has not been seen to such good advantage as she is in this. Her work shows an improvement, in that she attempts more and yet retains her naturalness.

Leoni Flugrath is seen as Dorothy Ward, the daughter of a man who has become embittered and cuts himself off from the world. After his wife leaves him for a reason that is no reason at all, he retires from business and lives with his little daughter in the Maine woods. When she approaches womanhood his sister persuades him to allow the girl to live with her in the city. In a short time she grows tired of society and desires to return to her father. She is followed by Jack Winthrop, who wins the father's consent to marry her when he saves her from a vicious woodsman.

P. H. O'Malley is Jack Winthrop, and Charles Sutton gives an excellent portrayal of the embittered father. Mabel Dwight, Guido Volucca and Mrs. Wallace Erskine complete the cast.

"The Greater Will"

Pathe Gold Rooster Play Released December 10 Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE father who cannot forgive the hypnotist who wrongs his daughter, and who finally enjoys the sweetness of the revenge he has lived for, is the part interpreted by Cyril Maude, the famous character actor of the speaking stage, in the Pathe Gold Rooster Play released December 10, entitled "The Greater Will." This five-part drama was scheduled for later release but was substituted for "The Beloved Vagabond" which was announced as this week's Gold Rooster Play.

Mr. Maude is a master of the make-up and in this picture he plays the part of an old man with his usual convincing appearance and expression. The story really gives him no great opportunity for dramatic action, as there are other characters more prominent who are presented with the dramatic situations provided by the play. "The Greater Will" was produced by Premo, under the direction of Harley Knoles, the author of the story.

The play deals with hypnotism and in most of its developments is quite simple. It is highly improbable and, as is the way with stories in which a subject of this kind is treated, it lacks conviction. But while the spectator feels that it is improbable "The Greater Will" is entertaining and sustains well the interest its characters create. Over a game of chess Professor Sloane, an antique dealer, answers his friend's question as to the mother of Sloane's little granddaughter, by telling him of the outrage done his daughter Peggy by a man named Watson.

This man uses hypnotic influence over Peggy and makes her believe that he has married her. A week later Watson deserts the girl, and she returns to her father. When her baby is born Peggy dies and Sloane is convinced that she was not married to Watson but that the latter had hypnotized her. Seven years later Sloane succeeds in meeting the hypnotist. Watson attempts to influence the professor but he instead is hypnotized by Sloane. Every evening thereafter Watson is haunted by a vision of the girl he wronged. The strain tells on him and he ends his own life.

Lois Meredith is charming and acts well the part of Peggy and Montagu Love is seen as Watson. The cast is completed by Charles Francis; Margot Williams, and N. T. Carleton. These are all well known players and they render effective performances.

"In the Sunset Country"

A Mustang Two-Reeler, Released December 17 Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

LIZETTE THORNE and Nell Franzen are featured in the melodramatic Mustang drama entitled "In the Sunset Country," scheduled for release on the Mutual program on Friday, December 17, the one as a school teacher and the other as a dance hall girl.

E. Forrest Taylor as Hal Newcomb, a prospector, acts and manly hero, and Werren Ellsworth makes a truly villainous boss of the dance hall, in his character of Mark Henley. The production was staged by Frank Cooley, and some splendid backgrounds are pictured, and there is stirring action aplenty in the production.

Madge of the dance hall is known among her companions as "The Lost Soul." Though Mark Henley, the owner of the dance hall, claims ownership of both her body and soul, she still retains a heart and a conscience all her own, for when the circuit rider urges her to give up the life she leads she finds courage to steal away, leaving a note that she is to begin life anew.

About this time, Helen, a school teacher, arrives in the country, and while awaiting the erection of the new schoolhouse, holds her classes in the open air. Hal, the prospector, meets Helen and spends much of his time in her company. Henley of the dance hall also is attracted by the school teacher, and forces his attentions upon her, though oftentimes rebuffed.

The rescuers arrive.

Madge, after setting out from the dance hall, is overtaken with fatigue, and Hal, the prospector, learning of her plight, gives her shelter for the night. Henley discovers Madge's presence in Hal's cabin, and makes haste to relate the incident to both the circuit rider and Helen. However, Henley is much put out when he finds that Hal means to defend Madge and to prevent her from returning to the dance hall. Helen misunderstands the girl's presence in Hal's cabin, and cuts the prospector cold when she meets him, but later the circuit rider explains to her his opinion of Hal's thoughtfulness for Madge, and Helen, repentant, goes to Hal's cabin to assist him in caring for Madge.

She arrives to discover that Madge, on finding that she is embarrassing Hal, has again departed, and is just in time to be seized by Henley, who, with some cow-punchers, has ridden over to Hal's cabin for the purpose of kidnaping Madge and returning her to the dance hall.

Finding Helen instead of Madge, Henley boldly seizes the girl, and carries her away to a lonely bit of woods and ties her to a tree. By chance, Madge, wandering through the woods, discovers Helen's predicament, and taking advantage of a moment when Henley and his followers are drinking, she frees Helen and sends her to bring help, while she herself takes Helen's place against the tree.

Helen succeeds in finding Hal and the circuit rider, who are searching for her, and brings them to the rescue of Madge. Henley and his followers are rounded up and driven out of the country, while Madge finds a home with Helen.

"Blind Justice"

Essanay Three-Act Drama, Released December 11 Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

"BLIND JUSTICE," in this story, is allied with the little blind god of love. For when a book bearing that title, dedicated to "The Under-dog," falls into the hands of Elsie Harding, daughter of William Harding, millionaire philanthropist, it so touches her that she wants to help a few of these outcasts, "under-dogs." She makes her father take her to a session of the night court, where she meets Cupid as well as Justice. Jack Langdon, one of the young men before the court, arouses her interest. Jack is played by Henry Walthall; so Elsie's choice is not to be wondered at. "If that man had a chance he would make good," she thinks, and she persuades Daddy to offer him a position in his office. With a very peculiar twinkle in his eyes, which we understand later, Jack accepts.

He makes good, and although Elsie's brother Walter and the Harding butler dislike to meet him socially, Elsie invites her protege to her birthday party. At the party, Elsie and Jack find that their interest in each other is very deep indeed, so deep that Jack asks Harding for his daughter's hand. The millionaire indignantly refuses, and the young people elope that evening. Harding is heart-broken and the son has a chance to remark, "I told you so." The son, however, has various little hobbies which cause his father much grief and worry.

Jack proposes to the girl.

Jack is allowed to keep his position in the office, and he and Elsie, in their tiny home, are happy. Then—Harding's name is forged to a check. Harding at once suspects Jack, whom he has never fully trusted. But Walter, the son, breaks down and confesses the crime.

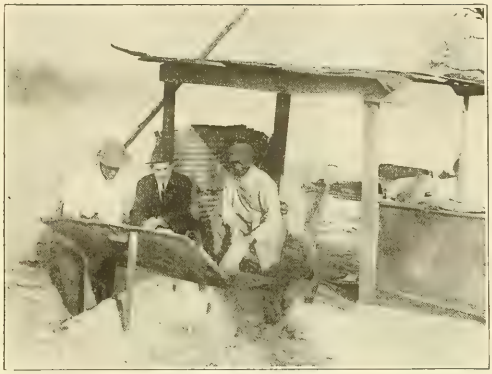
This is the big scene of the play, and it is handled very effectively. The father is bowed down by the knowledge that his own son, and not the supposed "reformed tramp" is the criminal, and by the fact that Walter's extravagance has endangered his entire business. The emotions of the four characters are well depicted, in a restrained manner, which "gets across."

Then Jack makes his confession. He is really a well known author, and he offers to put the father's business on a sound basis with money earned by his book, "Blind Justice," a sequel to which he was gathering material by posing as a tramp, when Elsie found and "rescued" him.

The play is interesting and clean. Elizabeth Burbridge, as the beautiful, petted daughter, whose heart has gone out to those less fortunate, is attractive and clever. The other parts are well taken.

Jack Wheeler to Edit Selig-Tribune

Jack Wheeler, who knows most all the notables by their first names, has been engaged as editor-in-chief of the Selig-Tribune, the new animated newspaper which will make its initial bow to public favor on January 3. Mr. Wheeler will take up his duties with a large staff of editorial assistants on December 13 at the general offices of the Selig Polyscope Company, Garland building, Chicago, Ill. Mr. Wheeler served for fifteen years in the United States Secret Service. During the past year he has been employed in Chicago as assistant superintendent of the United States Department of Investigation. Assignments to protect royalty visiting this country have fallen largely to Mr. Wheeler in the past and he accompanied Prince Henry, Grand Duke Boris of Russia, and others on their tours of Uncle Sam's domain. He was also assigned to the White House and had charge of all arrangements for tours of Roosevelt, Taft and Wilson. Wheeler traveled 134,000 miles with President Taft. Mr. Wheeler has also been actively engaged from time to time in diplomatic investigations for the government. He is a versatile newspaper man having served Collier's, the New York World, the Washington Post and other prominent publications. He has also had much motion picture experience. Mr. Wheeler is now touring the east renewing acquaintanceship with prominent personages in the interest of the Selig-Tribune.

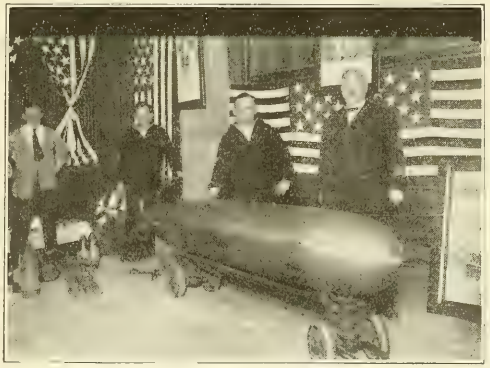


"The Girl and the Game" Booklet

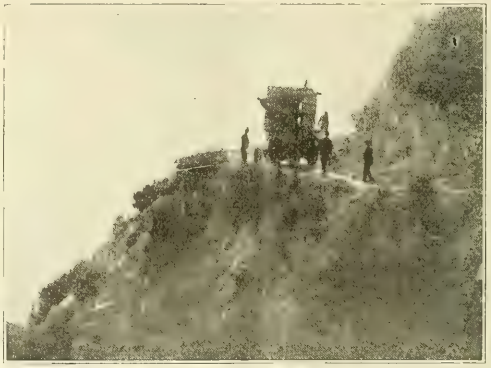
Uncle Sam's American mail is carrying this week thousands of advertising folders prepared by the Nichols-Finn Advertising Agency, descriptive of "The Girl and the Game," the big railroad film novel in fifteen chapters, produced by the Signal Film Corporation, and to be released through the Mutual at an early date.

The advertising folder is prepared in the form of an engine running at full speed, and cut out to conform with the shape of the engine itself. Inside are lengthy descriptions of the story, the director, the author, and the biography of Miss Helen Holmes, who will be featured in this series.

It is evident the folders have already begun to serve their purpose, for all exchanges of the Mutual Film Corporation report heavy bookings of the new series serial.



News of the Week as Shown in Films



Seeking pearls in slime of White River, Arkansas. Copyright, 1915, Hearst-Selig News Pictorial Results of the terrific tornado at Great Bend, Kansas. Copyright, 1915, Universal Animated Weekly.

Immense shell used on U. S. Warship. Copyright, 1915, Universal Animated Weekly.

Immense casting for world's largest telescope hauled to Carnegie Observatory, Mount Wilson, Calif. Copyright, 1915, Pathe News.

Ships ply at last on the Buffalo-Troy Canal after sixteen years' work and immense expenditure. Copyright, 1915, Pathe News.

Earl Cooper wins Exposition auto race. Copyrighted, 1915, Hearst-Selig News Pictorial.

Brevities of the Business

PACIFIC COAST NEWS

By "Capt. Jack" Poland

There is great rejoicing at Inceville this week. Thomas H. Ince, director-general and founder of this famed studio, reports the arrival of a handsome bouncing son. His second boy. Congratulations have been in order all the week, and an air of happiness reigns from the publicity department down the line of directors, stars, players and employes. All of them are fond of the directing head.

Charges against Judge A. P. Tugwell, ex-president of the local board of censors of Los Angeles, were dismissed at a public hearing Wednesday. Judge Tugwell and ex-secretary E. T. Jorgensen were both exonerated of all charges. The matter was up before the Public Welfare Committee of the City Council.

A meeting of Los Angeles motion picture exhibitors was held Wednesday for the purpose of organizing a permanent association to combat censor laws. The principle being to work for legislation and action by the National Board of Censors instead of having pictures censored and distributed by local people thoroughly unfamiliar with and out of touch with picture productions. The following officers were elected: J. A. Quinn, president; Thomas Dixon, G. M. Hutchinson and Jesse L. Lasky, vice-presidents; C. J. Morlen, treasurer and Dr. Sam Atkinson, secretary. This organization has already become an active factor for the good of the exhibitors' cause.

Proposed organizers of the Photoplayers' Club of Los Angeles held a rousing meeting at a local cafe Thursday night. It was called "the psychological moment meeting." To decide whether there shall be a club or whether the moving picture men are to go without one. Much pleasantry was indulged in by those attending and another meeting was called for next week.

Many members of the Los Angeles, Santa Monica, Santa Barbara, San Diego, and other Southern California motion picture colonies and studios are planning for the holidays. Some expect to get leave of absence and visit the loved ones at home. Others are making reservations for special tables at the big hotels and restaurants where special entertainments are being planned for them.

The wide awake people of Los Angeles have been quick to appreciate the importance and prestige, as well as social and financial standing and values of the people of this big industry, and they are received socially among the more prominent people who are glad to number the real people of the profession as among their friends.

Great preparations are being made by the New York Motion picture Company officials for a huge celebration at Culver City, the new city half way between Los Angeles and the Pacific Ocean, where Colonel Thos. H. Ince plans to spend some $250,000 for new studios for his big organization. The local chamber of commerce and the Incevillians have decided to hold the dedication either on Christmas or New Year's Eve. Thousands of invitations will be sent out and this will become a semi-historical event in the advancement and development of the industry which means millions of dollars in expenditures each year in this section of the country in the production of pictures. E. H. Allen, business manager of the Nymp, has taken personal charge of the festivities.

Publicity men of local studios, known as members of the Scream Club, were gaily entertained Wednesday night at a dinner party given in their honor by the Gamut Club, a famous organization of musicians and professional people, globe trotters and Bohemians. W. E. Wing, the well known scenario writer, had charge of the screamer end of the festivities and he called upon each one of the staff to make a speech, and the way they did Gamut in response to the winger's invite. Frank Woods of the Fine Arts studios told of the magnitude of the industry; Bennie Lubinville Ziedman told about how glad he was to be in California; M. G. Jonas of the Universal publicity staff made good by inviting everyone present to be a guest at Universal City, and he was backed up by "Buck" Massie, the visitors entertainment committee, who said he would do the rest. Kenneth A. O'Hara of Inceville told about his titled ancestry; Joe Murray of the Keystone told a joke on his superior officer, and J. Fred Ryan of Photoplayers' Weekly, said how glad it was to be a guest at feed time. Clark Irvine of Moving Picture World told a story about a whale he saw recently which he thought a submarine; J. C. Jessen of the Motion Picture News congratulated himself and the Gamuters because he was there, and modest C. W. Pope of the New York Morning Telegraph spoke feelingly of his youth and ambitions. And everybody seemed to enjoy it. Bill Wing proved the ideal master of ceremonies and president F. W. Blanchard of the Gamut Club invited all the boys to be guests at the Christmas Jinks.

Many startling changes are happening in the motion picture headquarters of Southern California this week. There seems to be a general shakeup in progress, and quite a number whose heads will go under the axe. Our often called "Motion Picture Capitol of the World," from a production standpoint, is in the throes of things doing every minute. It seems to be a starting of the much talked about efficiency movement which has been so repeatedly written about in previous issues of MOTOGRAPHY. No one knows what's coming next, and numerous changes have taken place.

Several companies, including directors, players and cameramen, have been let out at the Griffith Fine Arts studios, and it is reported that of the 125 members of the Biograph company recently landed in Los Angeles for the winter that more than half of them have been let out, including directors, some stars and players. Changes are reported at Selig's studio also, and the Keystone and New York Motion Picture Corporation have let some people go.

H. E. Aitken and Messrs. Griffith, Ince and Sennett of the Triangle organization and controllers of local studios, have been busy in consultations since the arrival of Mr. Aitken in California some ten days ago, and the end is said to be not yet.

Anyhow, when they meet many of those who feel insecure in the efficiency movement, the first question is "Has anything happened out at your studio?" Then they get silent or slip away in con-

Film Market Quotations and Financial Gossip

Supplied by R. D. Small of A. E. Butler & Co., Chicago.

	Bid	Asked
American Film Co., Inc....	94	98½
Biograph Company	42	56
Colonial M. P. Corp.....	1	3½*
Famous Players Film Co...	95	125
General Film Corp., pref...	40	45
Mutual Film Corp., pref...	48	51
Mutual Film Corp., com....	45	49
No. Am. Film Corp., pref.	69	72
No. Am. Film Corp., com.	65	69
New York M. P. Corp.....	50	56
Thanhouser Film Corp....	2¼	3½*
Triangle Film Corp.....	5	5⅞*
Universal Film Mfg. Co...190		..
Vogue Films, Inc.....126		..
World Film Corp.....	4	4½*

*Par $5.00

American Film Company, Inc.: It is rumored that, in addition to the December dividend, the company will pay an extra dividend of 2½% before the regular April 1 2½% dividend disbursement. This would amount to 7½% within a period of about four months. This possibly accounts for the strong demand for stock at the present time.

New York Motion Picture Corp.: Had a sharp decline of 5 points and stock can now be had around 56; best bids on the market at this time are around 50.

Apropos of the bookings of "Diamond from the Sky" and the new serial—"The Girl and the Game" (this latter put out by the Signal Film Corp.) the mortality of a good serial is thoroughly demonstrated by the last reports of the "Exploits of Elaine" put out by Pathe Freres of America, which claims business closely approximating $1,500,000. As they are now running 80 prints in England and 40 in France, this series promises to pass all records held by the "Million Dollar Mystery" which was in the neighborhood of $1,600,000.

Thanhouser Film Corp.: Is in good demand around 2¼ and 2½; cheapest stock offered on the market now is at 3½.

General Film Corp.: There seems to be absolutely no trading in this stock at the present time.

Triangle Film Corp.: Volume of business done on the New York Curb is in diminishing quantities.

fidential conversation. No one seems willing to talk and heads of departments and companies have nothing to say.

Official announcement made Tuesday by Director-General Henry McRae, acting upon authority from President Carl Laemmle of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company by direct message from New York, is that H. O. Davis, former director general of the Panama-California Exposition at San Diego, is now second vice-president of the company and he has arrived on the scene of action and taken over full general charge of Universal City, the $1,000,000 plant and movie metropolis of the company.

The advent of Mr. Davis into such an important position in local film circles was the surprise of the year. He comes, however, highly recommended as an efficiency expert and man of business training, achievements and success. He has already made thorough inspections of the big plant and is in full charge.

H. O. Davis.

It is rumored and openly stated that radical changes will be made in the entire personnel of the organization at Universal City. Many of the employes from the big fellows down are awaiting anxiously what the Christmas message will mean to them.

The new general manager has stated publicly that it costs lots of money to make moving pictures and this cost will be reduced by the Universal wherever possible. The cry seems to be that the company like other organizations in California has been spending too much money in its feature productions. Many important changes are being made, and the results are anxiously awaited.

Director-General Henry McRae, of the Universal, is now planning an early trip to the Orient, where he plans to carry out long cherished ideas and produce feature pictures for the Universal program filled with originality, charm and novelty.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES

By P. J. Cropper

Harry Schwalbe of the Electric Theater Supply Company has concluded one of the largest feature deals ever made in this city. He has contracted to handle the Triangle service for the ensuing twelve months, entailing an outlay of half a million dollars. It is stated first run will be removed from the Chestnut Street Opera House to the Arcadia. The Opera House has been paying twelve hundred dollars a week.

Jay Emanuel of the Ridge theater has put in four weeks hard on the Exhibitors' ball. Looks as if his efforts would be crowned with lots of free publicity.

Harry Berman, who controls the Penn, thinks of changing its name to Penitentiary; he would then be sure of getting regular meals.

"The Birth of a Nation" has played its 160th time, and has still four weeks to run.

The Liberty Film Company, making pictures up in Germantown, has gone out, oh, so quietly, in the moonlight. It is said to have given lessons to a lot of society's would-be stars, and raked in quite a pot of fees.

Jack Delmar, once black comedian, now manager of the Jefferson, celebrated his birthday at the Adelphia the other day. The guests arrived so late that Jack had paid for his cocktail and mizzled ere they got there.

MID-WEST NEWS

By William Noble

Arizona

"Every cowboy in Arizona is a moving picture actor; every roundup is a rehearsal." So said John Harmon, one of the wealthiest cattlemen of Arizona. His complaint is echoed by every other cattleman, for they are all losing their best hands for the motion pictures. "The cowboys imagine that they are stars of the first magnitude," stated Mr. Harmon, "and about the time that a man gets trained so that he knows the difference between a riata and a tapadero, he gets the picture bug into his noodle and after that he isn't worth two whoops as a cowboy."

Kansas

Fire destroyed the Orpheum theater at Pittsburg, Kansas, November 24, also a livery barn and three horses. Loss $20,000, with $15,000 insurance.

Oklahoma

Exhibition in the Met theater at Oklahoma City, Okla., of a film in which a celebrated artist's model appeared recently apparently naked, moved the Women's Christian Temperance Union to adopt vigorous resolutions condemning "the nude art." Demand upon the city for a strong board of motion picture censors, two of whom, at least, shall be women, is included in the resolution.

Whether or not Bartlesville is to have Sunday opening of moving pictures is the big issue now confronting the people there. About two years ago Sunday opening of moving pictures was stopped, but the question has again been revived and the issue will be fought to a finish on both sides.

New Jersey

Owners of moving picture shows which were closed Sunday night by police order, to show the alleged absurdities of "Jersey blue laws," took steps to summon to court a dry goods merchant for selling goods on Sunday, a constable for throwing dice for cigars in a store, ten conductors and motormen for operating trolley cars, 200 storekeepers for keeping their stores open on Sunday and one chauffeur for operating an automobile. The moving picture men will aid in the prosecution of three men arrested Sunday, two for selling gasoline for automobiles and one for buying it. The theater men assert that the city authorities show discrimination when they close the moving picture houses Sunday evening.

CHICAGO GOSSIP

The Kleine Optical Company is sending out its new catalog of educational motion pictures, 1915 edition. This is a splendid catalog of all the travel, educational and special feature films of the George Kleine Company. The matter was compiled by Mr. Miller of the Kleine Company. The book is one that should be in the possession of every educational institution making use of moving picture films in America.

H. L. Wallick and E. V. Sweet have started a new company to be known as the Republic Co-operative Film Company, not incorporated, to handle feature films. They have about twenty-five subjects of varying lengths, to take care of their present trade and are putting two men out on the road beginning Monday, December 13, to secure bookings. Mr. Sweet will be remembered as having covered the state of Michigan for F. O. Nielsen on "The Spoilers" and other Nielsen features.

E. B. Lockwood, formerly of Lockwood and MacGeary, has just signed a contract to become camera man for the Selig-Tribune.

Henry P. Caulfield, formerly auditor of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, in California, and Ivan B. Kahn, were visitors to MOTOGRAPHY's offices on Monday, December 6. These two gentlemen, who are well and favorably known in the film industry, have contracts with a number of the leading motion picture actors and actresses, giving them exclusive rights to the manufacture of novelties bearing their names or photographic likenesses, and have disposed of a number of the novelties to large candy companies. Their friends are sincere in tendering the best wishes to this enterprising couple for a big success.

J. E. O'Toole, one of the genial film representatives of the Mutual Film Corporation started on his travels to points east and west, his itinerary calling for South Bend and Fort Wayne, Ind., as well as Rock Island, Ill. Mr. O'Toole is the engineer of the Helen Holmes' special, put out by the Signal Film Corporation, entitled, "The Girl and the Game." All aboard!

W. H. Bell of the four B's is sending out cards of admission to a private showing of the proposed December releases of his company, which will be held at the Band Box theater, 107 West Madison street, on Thursday, December 9.

J. Skirboll of the Metro Pictures Corporation, Pittsburgh, was in Chicago December 6, and while here purchased the rights for Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia on A. M. Gollos' two-reel feature, "Sarah Bernhardt at Home."

A. M. Rosenthal, representing the All Features Distributing Company of 71 West Twenty-third street, New York, has been with us for a week and disposed of seven multiple reel subjects to A. M. Gollos of the Photoplay Releasing Company.

The friends of James MacGeary were invited to attend a "wake" given by Mr. MacGeary last Tuesday. After the last solemn rites were over, the last remains of the Renfax Musical pictures were packed into a box and consigned to New York.

Two young lady photoplay fans met on the west side the other day and the following conversation was heard, "What's your hurry, Mayme?" "I'm going to the Albany theater and I have to get there by one o'clock." "But what is that bundle under your arm?" "That's my lunch. The show starts at 1, but doesn't let out until 11. You know you get fifteen reels there for 5c."

A. M. Rosenthal of New York has purchased the rights on the two-reel feature, "Sarah Bernhardt at Home," for six New England states, and New York and New Jersey from the Photoplay Releasing Company of Chicago.

A great many complaints have reached the writer from exhibitors, who desire relief from a serious condition, all of them centering around the action of one Chicago exhibitor who makes a practice of giving from twelve to fifteen reels of features for 5c and 10c. These exhibitors, if they belong to the Exhibitors' Association of Illinois, should put their complaint in writing and present it to the Association, asking that action be taken by that body, in the form of a courteous request to the film exchanges to refrain from renting so many reels to a single customer for one location. This, of course, brings up the question of "three reels for a nickel and four for a dime," which was MOTOGRAPHY's slogan several years ago, when the effort was made to have exhibitors see the benefit of such an arrangement. The film exchanges at that time, with one exception, agreed to a policy of this kind. With the introduction of the five and six-reel feature film, it is impossible to limit service to four reels for 10c at the present time, but there must be some equitable basis on which the number of reels per unit of admission price can be arranged.

Director Edwin Carewe discussing a scene in Metro's "The House of Tears" with Emily Stevens, the star.

NOTES FROM ALL OVER

Margaret Greene, who has had some leading parts in Pathe Gold Rooster plays, has been signed for "Come on Charlie," John Cort's new play. Miss Greene last appeared in "Nedra," a Gold Rooster play produced by Edward Jose, which is making a hit everywhere.

Edwin Carewe, who directed the final scenes in "The House of Tears," a Rolfe-Metro picture, in which Emily Stevens, the famous emotional actress, is starred, will take a flying trip to his farm in Indian Territory to look after some business matters, before he begins work on his new Metro production. Mr. Carewe is one-fourth Chickasaw Indian, and inherited a farm of several hundred acres, through an Indian land grant, originally given his maternal grandmather. He has it stocked with high bred cattle and poultry, and in addition keeps a large herd of Indian ponies.

So important does Pell Mitchell, editor of the Mutual Weekly, regard the Ford Peace Expedition that he is sending his assistant, Lawrence Darmour, to act as cameraman for his motographic weekly. Mr. Darmour has been relieved from duty at the home office indefinitely and detailed to stay with the Ford party as long as it is engaged in its efforts to "get the men out of the trenches by Christmas"—even if that slogan means Christmas 1918.

Miriam Nesbit, Edison star, was tendered a dinner recently by Mary Rider, who has written a number of Edison successes, and Kate Jordan. It was a sort of welcome home dinner as Miss Nesbit but shortly returned from the west after a prolonged stay. Other guests were Hamilton Revel, Fuller Mellish of the Vitagraph, Russel Smith of the Equitable scenario department, and John Rumsey, well known play broker.

Mrs. Villa, wife of General Villa, together with a party of ladies and children, spent several days recently on a tour of inspection of the Selig Jungle-Zoo. Misses Ruth Harsley and Maud Bridson, accompanied by "Snookums," their fox terrier, also arrived at the Selig Zoo after a hike across the continent from Chicago, Ill.

Vivian Rich, the "American" Girl, will act in the immediate future under the direction of Frank Borzage, who will confine his energies to the producing end of the business. Included in the company will be Alfred Vosburg, George Periolat and Louise Lester.

The Gaumont Company plans to release on the Mutual program during the Christmas holidays a wonderful colored photodrama called "A Prince of Yesterday." This extremely beautiful film has been hand-colored.

Under the direction of E. J. Saint, William Garwood has practically completed his work in the production of the second installation of "The Journal of Lord John," by C. N. and A. M. Williamson, the scenario for which was arranged by Harvey Gates. This installment will be released in connection with the appearance of the original story in the January McClure's Magazine.

With the completion of the five-reel feature for V. L. S. E., Inc., release early in January, "The Wonderful Wager," the Ford Flivver comedy in which Raymond Hitchcock, Marion Sunshine and Jack Henderson appear in the leading roles, Rene Plaissety of the Lubin staff of directors has begun work on his second production under the Lubin banner. The story is one written by Daniel Carson Goodman especially as a co-starring vehicle for June Daye, the popular Lubin star, and E. K. Lincoln, the former Vitagraph star and head of the Lincoln players, who has just joined the Lubin Company and makes his first appearance as a Lubin player in this four-reel feature, "Revenge."

Louise Glaum is away from home for the first time in many moons. She is about fifty miles from nowhere on a wild, wierd coast in California where her director, Charles Giblyn, took his company for a feature which has the veteran William H. Thompson as its star.

Director Burton George, Edison, has returned from Phoenixville, Pa., where he spent a week, with a large company, staging the battle scenes for a pretentious three-reeler, "Coleste of the Ambulance Corps," in which Leonia Flugrath and Pat O'Malley are to be featured. The story is a war drama dramatically proving that, when really called upon by duty, the women of today are every bit as full of self-sacrifice as were the pioneer women. The scenes are laid in the Spanish-American war.

Irving J. Birsky, the versatile youngster who has been occupying the position of director of publicity for the Associated Film Sales Corporation, has been picked as a suitable party to represent his firm and several newspapers on the famous Ford Peace Expedition. He sails on the Oscar II at 2 o'clock Saturday from Hoboken. The Associated is to be congratulated on its pick, as there is no doubt in the minds of those that know Barsky, that he will produce the best possible results for them, if there are any results to be gotten at all. Mr. Barsky will take moving pictures of the expedition as well as stills, and will write articles which will be syndicated to newspapers by a firm specially incorporated for that purpose.

Three special deputy sheriffs are on duty at the Fort Lee studio of the World Film to safeguard against injury of any kind, what is probably the largest set ever used in a feature play. The same is in six sections, occupies more than half the studio floor and contains an abundance of priceless treasures in oil paintings. For a scene in "Camille," in which Clara Kimball Young will star, there is rpresented a French art salon, in which are displayed an unusually large number of oil paintings, the work of masters of the old schools in wide variety.

Frank Currier, well-known for his work in Vitagraph productions, has been promoted to the position of director. His first picture will be a one-part comedy written by Agnes C. Johnston, with William Dangman, Helen Guerney and Robert Turner portraying the important parts, and will be produced at the Vitagraph Studio at Bay Shore, Long Island.

"Ted Ross," eight-year-old son of Charles J. Ross and Mabel Fenton, gave a special treat to the alluring litter of puppies which comprise an interesting part of the live stock on the Ross-Fenton farm at Asbury Park. The occasion was the first showing of "How Molly Made Good" at Long Branch, New Jersey. Small "Ted" makes his first public appearance with his actor parents and ten other Broadway favorites in this feature film.

William Morse, a prominent artist of the Popular Plays and Players Metro forces, who commutes between Fort Lee, New Jersey and Yonkers, New York, in his own motor boat, was run down by an unknown craft and had a narrow escape with his life off the Jersey shore. The vessel, which appeared to Morse to be a small steam yacht, of an old type, did not carry lights. The yacht did not turn back after the accident, but glided away as Morse struggled in the icy water. He managed to keep afloat until picked up by a small boat which put out from shore, after witnessing the accident and Morse's predicament.

Creighton Hale, the Pathe player, who is now playing with Pearl White in the Wharton picturization of "Hazel Kirke," matriculated as a real "vamp" in Ithaca recently. The steamer "City of Ithaca" burned at her dock near the Wharton Studio last week, and Mr. Hale left pictures for a while to put on a fireman's helmet and hip boots and drag a hose through a swamp.

Grace Cunard having returned to Universal City from her vacation sooner than Francis Ford, the direction of that company has been placed in her hands for the time being. Her first production is a two-reel drama written by herself under the title, "Her Better Self."

The announcement of the Gaumont Company that it plans great expansion both at Flushing, N. Y., and the winter studios at Jacksonville, Fla., is borne out by news that Andre Barletier is known to the trade as the successful handler of the camera which caught Miss Annette Kellerman when she played "Neptune's Daughter" for the Universal. When Miss Kellerman went south recently to make another big picture, Mr. Barletier went to Jamaica with her to direct the camera work. Having finished that big picture, he was snapped up by Gaumont for its new Rialto Star Feature Comedy.

Mr. Lawrence Carey has been engaged by the Nola Film Company, whose output is handled by the Associated Film Sales Corporation, to play heavies. Mr. Carey has been engaged in the various fields of the legitimate and motion picture stages for years.

Joseph De Grasse and his company of Rex players this week left the Universal City studios for a trip to San Francisco, where they are to stage a number of exterior scenes in the production of a five-reel feature entitled, "Love Thine Enemy." After a few days' stay in the northern part the company is to return to the studios, where they will complete the film.

"The Adventures of a Madcap," the four-reel hand-colored Balboa-Pathe feature film, with Jackie Saunders in the leading role, recently released, has been acclaimed one of the prettiest pictures thrown on the screen. Much credit for the success of it is due to Sherwood Macdonald, the director in charge. The story though simple was interesting; and "the Maude Adams of the screen," which Miss Saunders has been christened, was the personification of joy.

Mr. Andrew Rogers, one of the oldest dramatic men in the game today, has been converted with the rest of the reformers to the silent drama. His former connections for the last two seasons have been as leading man in "Old Kentucky." His next appearance on the screen will be opposite Miss Leatrice Joy Zeidler in a Big "A" release, "The Turning Point," on the Associated Program.

Robert Henley, who had his ankle broken recently, is getting along nicely at the Universal Hospital. The twenty-second of November was his birthday, and it was also his mother's birthday. Curiously enough his younger brother has the same natal date as their father. Henley is receiving lots of callers, including many visitors from the east, and he is not losing any pluck even if he does lose a little sleep.

Thomas Santschi, Selig star, has laid aside his producing for the present in order to devote his entire attention to playing the leading role in a sea feature soon to be completed by Director Colin Campbell.

M. G. Jonas, head of the Universal's Pacific Coast publicity department, is this week under physician's care. Jonas had been suffering from a severe attack of bronchitis for two weeks, but refused to give up. At last he was pronounced on the verge of pneumonia and advised that an attempt to continue his work at the studio would perhaps result in serious consequences. Not unitl then did he consent to remain away from the studios.

The many friends and admirers of Sarah Truax will be sorry to learn that her mother is seriously ill. She was taken with a sort of scizure, and for some days her condition was most critical. She appears to be resting more easily now, but is not out of danger.

Little Mary Miles Minter, the fascinating young Metro star, will play Santa Claus to a number of poor children on Christmas Day by giving them a Christmas party at her home in Riverside Drive. The little ones will be the children of parents now identified with the stage or screen in minor capacities.

Holbrook Blinn, Fania Marinoff, Director Barry O'Neil and supporting members of the forthcoming World Film production of "McTeague of San Francisco," will shortly visit Death Valley, where several scenes of this absorbing drama will be completed. Accompanying them from New York will be George Cowl, now appearing in "The Rack," who has already experienced the sensation of traveling through and emerging from this renowned abode of death.

The little love bug has been scratching around again and this time it has joined forces with little "Babe" Cupid and directed the darts Lubinward, where the most unsuspected man of the plant, Daniel Ellis, the scenario editor, is the "victim." Daniel has succumbed to the wiles and charms of a fair one, and slying so too, for on Wednesday, December 1, taking with him a grim determination to end the lonesomeness of life and with the little shining band of gold safely tucked away in the lower left hand corner of the right side waistcoat pocket, he led pretty Anna C. Duffy, a charming daughter of "William Penn," to Baltimore, Md., where they pledged to one another to "love, honor and obey."

But a few scenes remain to be photographed at Universal City in the Smalleys' production of the five-reel story by Rufus Steele, "Hop." The story deals with the smuggling of opium into this country and the leading roles in it are taken by the Smalleys themselves, with Marie Walcamp, Juan de la Cruz, C. Norman Hammond and Eddie Polo supporting.

Gordon Sackville, who plays the chief of police in "The Red Circle," the detective serial produced by Balboa and soon to be released by Pathe, was at one time considered the handsomest man on Broadway. He had just returned from Paris and was Fritizi Scheff's leading man. When his voice gave out, Sackville naturally took to the screen and he has been seen in prominent parts in many Balboa features during the last two years.

George Le Guere, who is to be featured in "The Upstart," a Metro feature that will be put in production shortly, has gone to Savannah, Georgia, where many of the scenes will be photographed. "The Upstart" is a picturization of the very amusing comedy which had a successful run at the Maxine Elliot theater in New York city.

Miss Leatrice Joy Zeidler has been engaged to play leads in all future productions of the Nola Film Company, one of the releasing companies of the Associated Program. Miss Zeidler holds the unique distinction of being the only player of the Nola Film Company who has played in all of its productions and is held over for the Big "A" productions.

Word received from Mount Baldy this week from William H. Thompson and a company of Ince players, brought the information that the weather atop the historic resort is so cold that the cameramen are having considerable trouble with static. Under the direction of Charles Giblyn, Thompson and his associates are enacting some scenes for the Triangle-Kay-Bee feature in which the veteran actor will be starred.

Nell Shipman in Vitagraph's "God's Country and the Woman," which was directed by Rollin Sturgeon.

The title of the Carter De Haven five-reel feature now in course of production at Universal City was this week changed from "The Ivory Box" to "The Wrong Door." De Haven is directing this production himself and is sharing the honors for place with his wife, Flora Parker De Haven. The scenario was written by Olga Printzlau.

Louis Gottschalk, the notable composer, who recently was engaged by Producer Thomas H. Ince to write incidental scores for Triangle-Kay-Bee features, is this week laboring over his initial effort. He is composing the accompaniment for "The Despoiler," the next subject in which Frank Keenan will be starred and those who have heard the music played—as much of it as has been written—declare that it strikes a strong note in dramatic musical composition.

In casting about to find a suitable actor to play the part of a "tough" of the lower strata in New York city, who had pugilistic proclivities, Charles Horan, the director, happily found just the man he wanted in the Rolfe-Metro studio. Mr. Horan is directing Mary Miles Minter in her newest Metro feature, "The Rose of the Alley," a story of New York's underworld. One of the chief characters in the production is the aforesaid prize fighter, and "Kid" Hogan, who has charge of the property boys in the studio, is playing the role.

Sydney Ayres and his company of Universalites are still in the Bear Lake regions, where they have been for the past two weeks making exterior scenes in the production of F. McGrew Willis' three-reel drama of the Canadian Northwest, "John o' the Mountains." Sydney Ayres plays the title role with Louella Maxam, T. V. Henderson and Dixie Carr supporting.

To Colin Campbell, dean of Selig directors, has been assigned the duty of closing the famous Edendale studio. Campbell moved his company to the Selig Jungle-Zoo recently. His is the oldest Pacific Coast Selig company and it was agreed that this company should be the last to bid farewell to the first permanent studio on the Pacific Coast.

The California studios of the Vitagraph Company have been removed to the 11-acre site at Hollywood, Cal. Only two buildings remain at Santa Monica, the dark room and negative department buildings. These will remain there for a couple of months, during which time a modern up-to-date laboratory and film room will be constructed at Hollywood. The present office quarters are only temporary, but the plans for the new ones look very promising.

Becky Bruce, who is very fond of hunting, recently gave a duck dinner to her co-workers in "The Other Girl," the Augustus Thomas successful stage play, which is being produced by the Raver Film Corporation.

Lynn Reynolds and his company of Universalites this week left the Universal City studio for Mt. Wilson, where they are to stage exterior scenes in their production of a two-reel story of the mountains written by Reynolds himself under the title, "Missy." Myrtle Gonzalez, Frank Newburg and Val Paul appear in the leading roles.

Director T. N. Heffron and his company, headed by Miss Grace Darmond, arrived from Chicago last Thursday. The Selig Jungle Zoo studio will be their future headquarters. All the members of this studio stood by and gave the newcomers a good, old-fashioned welcome. Mr. Heffron, it will be remembered, staged some of the big features produced by the Klaw & Erlanger-Biograph concern.

One broken leg, several strained backs and countless bruises, was the toll in staging a big scene for "Rose of the Alley," the five-part Rolfe-Metro feature now in production. Little Mary Miles Minter is starred in the feature, which is a story of New York city's underworld. The big scene, in which so many persons were injured, is a raid on a dance hall by a large force of police. It was made at a dance hall on Broadway, and more than fifty persons were obliged to jump out of windows from the second story, twenty feet above the pavement.

The Premier Program publicity department is under the direction of E. A. Levy, whose previous connection with Favorite Players Film Company and Excelsior Film Company has introduced him to motion picture circles in the past.

SOME NEW THEATERS

Michigan

A new picture theater will be erected in Alma by Contractor Joseph Nordella.

Architect W. M. Clarke has prepared plans for a moving picture theater to be built in Grand Haven. Its location is next the State Bank building, and will be 35x110 feet, one story, absolutely fireproof. It will have a seating capacity of 500.

Bursma & Gannon of Grand Rapids have made application to the local common council for permission to erect a two-story building adjoining the Meyers Music store in Holland, which they will use as a motion picture house.

Thanksgiving, Main street's handsome new vaudeville and motion picture theater, the Lyric, was formally opened.

J. H. Reaper, owner of the Reaper theater, Monroe, is contemplating enlarging his theater.

E. N. Brown has opened the Stocking Avenue theater, which will be one of the finest and safest moving picture houses in Grand Rapids. The new theater is located at 634 Stocking avenue, and has a seating capacity of 600 persons. It is in an absolutely fireproof building and has the widest aisles of any theater in Grand Rapids. This will enable patrons to leave the theater quickly and safely. The building is steam heated and has an up-to-date ventilating system.

George Spaeth, who for several months has been treasurer of the Fuller theater in Kalamazoo, has been promoted to the management of the playhouse. Mr. Spaeth has already assumed his managerial duties. For some time the Fuller has been what is known as a combination theater, running moving pictures at times between the bookings of regular dramatic attractions. Hereafter it will be devoted to the moving picture business on an extensive scale, which will be shown daily except when some theatrical company is booked. In order to feature the pictures extensive alterations will be made in the Fuller. The house will be closed for two weeks after the engagement of Francis Starr on December 7. Then a concrete booth to cost $600 will be erected on the main floor of the theater. This booth will be both noise proof and fireproof and will house a double lantern and moving picture apparatus of the very latest type. The alterations will be from plans drawn by C. Edward Crane of Detroit.

Minnesota.

Directors of the Minneapolis branch of the Drama league have approved of the motion picture drama and hereafter will work in conjunction with other Minneapolis organizations that aim to obtain better motion pictures, especially for the children. The indorsement was given after considering a request from Mrs. C. W. Cartwright, vice president of the league, that the organization take such action. While the league does not indorse every picture show, it declares that the film has great possibilities as a means of artistic dramatic entertainment. Robbins Gilman, head resident of Northeast Neighborhood house, was named as chairman of a committee that will work out a line of activities for the league on the motion picture field.

Four applications for licenses to build moving picture theaters on Hennepin and Lyndale avenues, Minneapolis, were denied by the city council November 12 following the report of the license committee. The licenses denied because of protests from property owners and school and church authorities were for the following sites: 2021, 2307 and 2401 Hennepin avenue and 1816 Lyndale avenues. Because of petitions from the Tuttle school district against the erection of a moving picture house at 1515 Como avenue the council rescinded its action of two weeks ago granting a license to John P. Degnan.

The Purdy-Palmer Realty company has negotiated a lease for a new moving picture show house at Thirty-eighth street and Chicago avenue, Minneapolis, for P. E. Hays. The building to house it is now being erected for G. L. Hartsock.

Ludcke Brothers, managers of the opera house in St. Peter, have installed a Powers machine.

By a vote of four to three the city council refused to grant a license to Gilosky & Kelly for a motion picture theater at 646 Grand avenue just west of Dale street, St. Paul.

The Princess is the name of a new motion picture theater which C. O. Hannen will shortly open to the public in Glencoe. He has decided to remodel the property purchased from the Albers estate which he now occupies as a piano salesroom and in the manufacture of Glisto polish. These lines of business will be carried on in the annex portion of the building and the main structure will be remodeled into a theater.

W. H. Hodges has disposed of the Royal theater on South College street, Albert Lea, to D. K. Tomilson and F. E. Wheeler of Scotland, South Dakota.

Failure to find the original license of a motion picture theater at 4312 Upton avenue south, Minneapolis, almost caused the closing of the place. The license was found, however. Warren F. Backer, the owner, was selling the theater and the license had to be transferred.

Missouri.

Edward J. Carroll and William T. Findley recently purchased a lot on the southeast corner of Hodiamont avenue and Hamilton terrace, St. Louis, and propose to erect a combination business block and theater building.

Frank L. Newman will erect a $30,000 motion picture theater at 109-111 East Twelfth street, Kansas City. The building will be 38.6x78.6, steel frame, reinforced concrete, heat ducts in floor under each seat. H. Alexander Drake, architect.

The Center Amusement company of St. Joseph, owners of the Orpheum theater here and motion picture houses in several other cities, has further extended its circuit by the purchase several days ago of the National theater in Sioux City. The house will be remodeled and opened under the name of Strand. This gives the Center company four picture theaters —two in Sioux City, one, the Orpheum, in Atchison, and the local house.

The explosion of a film at the Gillis theater, Fifth and Walnut streets, Kansas City, caused damage to the building and about $1,000 on the contents.

The new photoplay house, the Delmar theater, St. Louis, which has been remodeled and redecorated, opened November 24 under the management of C. A. Maberry.

The Garrick theater, St. Louis, has been leased by the Cincinnati-St. Louis Amusement company and will be opened as a moving picture house November 28. A continuous show will be run at the Garrick from 10 a. m. until 11:30 p. m. W. F. Jackson will be manager.

Triangle photoplays will be shown at the Royal theater, St. Joseph.

Moving picture show tent of Michael Nash, of 2535 Howard street, at 2919 North Jefferson avenue, St. Louis, was recently destroyed. Loss, $1,000, including tent, chairs, films and machine. Not insured.

Montana.

The management of the Palace theater in Great Falls will show the Triangle Film company's program.

The Century Film corporation has selected a site near Roundup for a studio, where they will produce western films.

Nebraska.

Thanksgiving day Henry Rohlff opened his new picture theater on Leavenworth avenue, Omaha. The new theater is very modern and feature pictures will be shown.

The Empress theater in Gordon is scheduled to open December 10.

New York.

Uncle Sam Film Corporation, films, bookings, exchange, theaters, scenarios, $100,000; John J. Martin, Antonio Petraglia, James Knight, 1212 Times building, New York.

Motion Picture Corporation, Manhattan.—Motion picture and film business; capital, $25,000; incorporators, A. S. Werblin, M. S. Hirsch, J. Lichtenberg, 19 Cedar street, New York City.

The old Atlantic Garden property, at 50 and 52 Bowery, New York, will be made over into a vaudeville and moving picture theater at a cost of $10,000. The William Kramer's Sons Realty company is the owner of the premises.

Zenitz Pictures Corporation moving picture films, $25,000; J. Lichtenberg, M. S. Hirsch, A. S. Werblin, 19 Cedar street, New York.

Al Sherry, the new manager at the Colonial theater, Elmira, will install a Wurlitzer organ.

New York.

Frank Bonadid will start the erection of a picture theater on the site of the Franklin Arcade, Watertown, January 1.

Zenith Pictures Corporation, Manhattan.—Motion picture firm business; capital, $25,000. Incorporators: A. S. Werblin, M. S. Hirsch, J. Litchenberg, New York City.

M. H. Blackwell, Incorporated, Manhattan.—Motion picture business; capital, $225,000. Incorporators: M. H. Blackwell, 1890 Beverly Road; R. D. Tristram, 511 Lincoln Place, Brooklyn; H. Newfield, 557 West 124th street, New York City.

All motion picture theaters in New York have been reported safe so far as precautions against fire and the requirements of health, according to a report recently submitted to the mayor by George H. Bell, commissioner of licenses.

Concourse Theater company, Bronx, theatrical, musical, moving pictures, slot vending machines, $5,000. Jos. M. Baum, Milton M. Goldsmith, Charles M. Rosenthal, 35 Nassau street.

Mr. Foster, manager of the new Avon theater, Lafayette and Broadway, Utica, states that the opening date has not been decided upon.

The Rochester Motion Picture Exhibitors Association has been incorporated with the following directors: Willis C. Hubbard, Fred C. Gerling, William Wunder, Casimer Staley and Frank I. Simpson, all of Rochester.

A defective radiator in the Golden Gate moving picture theater, 130 Manhattan street, New York, managed by Martin Hemowitz, was the cause of scalding two persons and throwing the audience into a panic.

Gronenberg & Leuchtag have completed plans for a moving picture theater and stores to be erected at the northeast corner of Fordham Road and the Concourse, by the Fordham Road Corporation, Irving Judis, president, who has leased the theater section through M. & L. Hess to the Concourse Theater company for a long term of years at an aggregate rental of $75,000.

Express Films company, motion pictures, $25,000; Arthur S. Friend, Henry M. Wise, Solomon K. Lichtensen, 40 Exchange Place, New York.

The Mutt and Jeff News Weekly, motion picture business, capital no par value; Joseph L. Friedman, John N. Wheeler, Harry C. Fisher, 373 Fourth avenue, New York.

North Carolina.

The Pastime was the name chosen for the new motion picture theater on Union Square, Hickory.

Julius P. Taylor was recently made manager of the Royal theater at Wilmington.

North Dakota.

J. M. Ensor, head of the Southern Film Exchange, recently purchased the Crescent theater, 118 West Second street, Grand Forks, and opened it to the public the fifteenth of November. The Crescent was formerly owned by B. F. Shipp.

December 1, M. H. Rogers and A. J. Withnell will become owners of the Bijou theater in Jamestown, having taken over the lease from Mr. Kavanagh of Grand Forks.

C. L. Harrison has purchased the interest of his partner, J. P. Grady, in the moving picture theater at New England.

Work has been started on a new theater at Sentinel Buttle to be owned by J. H. Kane.

Wilton's handsome new Grand theater and moving picture house was opened to the public Thanksgiving day with a free afternoon performance and a packed house in the evening. The building, which is of presed brick, was erected by C. V. Danielson, one of Wilton's prominent business men, at a cost of $10,000. The new theater is electric lighted and furnace heated with a ventilating system of the latest improvement. The picture machine is an up-to-date model, and Mr. Danielson has announced the best films obtainable. The theater seats 375.

John Lein and Alfred Heen are the proprietors of the new De Luxe theater which was opened in Grafton a couple of weeks ago.

Ohio.

W. W. Kolb, 144 East Fulton avenue, Columbus, is contractor for a one-story addition to brick picture show at 1624 East Main street, to cost $1,700, for the Eastern Amusement company, in care of the Hall Hardware company.

The Gil-Ken Amusement company, Youngstown; $10,000; buying, selling and operating places of amusement, especially exhibition of motion pictures; Hugh E. Gilkeson, James D. Kennedy, W. Ed Crider, Jennie F. Gilkeson and George H. Kennedy.

At 9 p. m., in every motion picture show in Cleveland, a slide will be flashed upon the screen by order of Juvenile Judge Addams, ordering all elementary school children, not accompanied by parents or guardians to go home.

The Rex theater, Middletown, presents a very attractive and cozy appearance, many improvements having been made. The interior has been decorated and the screen set back, while the management has installed a Wurlitzer Photoplayer to add to his patrons' enjoyment.

The D. N. Grill company, investments, Williamson building, has reported that a Cleveland amusement company is being formed to build several new motion picture houses in Ohio. It was said two are to be built in Cleveland, one at Lorain avenue and Fulton road, N. W., and the other on Superior avenue, N. E., near East Fifty-fifth street. Each theater, it was said, is to have a seating capacity of 1,500 persons.

Complete Record of Current Films

Believing the classification of film pictures by the nature of their subjects to be of greater importance to the exhibitor than classification by maker, MOTOGRAPHY has adopted this style in listing current films. Exhibitors are urged to make use of this convenient tabulation in making up their programs. Films will be listed as long in advance of their release dates as possible. Film manufacturers are requested to send us their bulletins as early as possible. Reasonable care is used, and the publishers cannot be responsible for errors.

General Program

Monday.

	12-6	No release this week	Essanay
D	12-6	The Money Gulf	Kalem	3,000
D	12-6	The Other Sister	Lubin	1,000
D	12-6	The Run on Percy (No. 5 of the Chronicles of Bloom Center)	Selig	2,000
T	12-6	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 97, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	12-6	Her Last Flirtation	Vitagraph	1,000

Tuesday.

D	12-7	A Woman Without Soul	Biograph	2,000
D	12-7	The Power of Publicity	Essanay	2,000
C	12-7	Minnie the Tiger	Kalem	1,000
C	12-7	Playing the Same Game	Lubin	1,000
D	12-7	Order	Selig	1,000
D	12-7	Wasted Lives	Vitagraph	3,000

Wednesday.

D	12-8	A Poor Relation	Biograph	3,000
D	12-8	Mary	Edison	1,000
C	12-8	Dreamy Dud in Love: Scenic	Essanay	1,000
D	12-8	The Black Hole of Glenranald (No. 3 of the Stingaree Series)	Kalem	2,000
D	12-8	The Web of Hate	Lubin	2,000
C	12-8	Sunny Jim's First Love Affair	Vitagraph	1,000

Thursday.

D	12-9	The Masterful Hireling	Biograph	1,000
C	12-9	The Merry Models	Essanay	1,000
D	12-9	The Ogre and the Girl	Lubin	3,000
C	12-9	Forty-five Minutes from Nowhere	Mina	1,000
T	12-9	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 98, 1915	Selig	1,000
D	12-9	Sam's Sweetheart	Vitagraph	1,000

Friday.

D	12-10	The Painted Lady	Biograph	1,000
D	12-10	Her Inspiration	Edison	3,000
D	12-10	The Escape of Broncho Billy	Essanay	1,000
D	12-10	The Ancient Coin (No. 7 of the Ventures of Marguerite)	Kalem	1,000
D	12-10	The Stool Pigeon	Lubin	1,000
C	12-10	Strangled Harmony	Vim	1,000
C	12-10	Rooney's Pipe Dream	Vitagraph	1,000

Saturday.

D	12-11	The Lone Game	Edison	1,000
D	12-11	Blind Justice	Essanay	3,000
D	12-11	Crossed Wires	Kalem	3,000
C	12-11	Bashful Billie	Lubin	1,000
D	12-11	The Baby and the Leopard	Selig	1,000
C	12-11	Hughey of the Circus	Vitagraph	2,000

Monday.

	12-13	No release this week	Essanay
D	12-13	The Glory of Youth	Kalem	4,000
D	12-13	The Moment Before Death	Lubin	1,000
D	12-13	The Coquette's Awakening	Selig	2,000
T	12-13	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 99, 1915	Selig	1,000
C	12-13	Benjamin Bunter, Book Agent	Vitagraph	1,000

Tuesday.

D	12-14	Her Step-children	Biograph	2,000
D	12-14	Reckoning Day	Essanay	3,000
C	12-14	Almost a King	Kalem	1,000
C	12-14	The Great Detective	Lubin	1,000
D	12-14	On the Eagle Trail	Selig	1,000
D	12-14	A Question of Right and Wrong	Vitagraph	2,000

Wednesday.

C	12-15	Divorcons	Biograph	4,000
E	12-15	History of the Big Tree	Edison	333
C	12-15	The Black's Mysterious Box	Edison	333
C	12-15	The Hicks in Nightmare Land	Edison	333
C	12-15	The Fable of "Sister Mae Who Did as Well as Could Be Expected"	Essanay	1,000
D	12-15	To the Vile Dust (No. 4 of the Stingaree Series)	Kalem	2,000
D	12-15	The Inner Chamber	Lubin	3,000
C	12-15	The Faith of Sonny Jim	Vitagraph	1,000

Thursday.

C	12-16	Cupid Entangled	Biograph	1,000
C	12-16	Snakeville, Champion	Essanay	1,000
D	12-16	A Thief in the Night	Lubin	2,000
C	12-16	When the Snow Hit Watertown	Mina	1,000
D	12-16	The Golden Spurs	Selig	2,000
T	12-16	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 100, 1915	Selig	1,000
D	12-16	The Flower of the Hills	Vitagraph	1,000

Friday.

D	12-17	Fate	Biograph	1,000
D	12-17	The Hand of the Law	Edison	3,000
D	12-17	Broncho Billy's Marriage	Essanay	3,000
D	12-17	The Secret Message (No. 8 of the Ventures of Marguerite)	Kalem	1,000
D	12-17	Sweeter Than Revenge	Lubin	1,000
C	12-17	Speed Kings	Vim	1,000
C	12-17	The Deceivers	Vitagraph	1,000

Saturday.

C	12-18	Santa Claus Versus Cupid	Edison	1,000
D	12-18	A Christmas Revenge	Essanay	2,000
D	12-18	The Wrong Train Order	Kalem	1,000
C	12-18	An Unwilling Burglar	Lubin	1,000
D	12-18	Jungle Justice	Selig	1,000
D	12-18	A Man's Sacrifice	Vitagraph	3,000

V. L. S. E. Program

Sept.	20	The Circular Staircase	Selig	5,000
Sept.	27	Tillie's Tomato Surprise	Lubin	6,000
Sept.	27	The Great Ruby	Lubin	5,000
Oct.	4	Dust of Egypt	Vitagraph	5,000
Oct.	11	In the Palace of the King	Essanay	6,000
Oct.	11	The Valley of Lost Hope	Lubin	5,000
Oct.	18	A Black Sheep	Selig	5,000
Oct.	18	The Man Who Couldn't Beat God	Vitagraph	5,000
Oct.	25	The Rights of Man	Lubin	5,000
Nov.	1	The Turn of the Road	Vitagraph	5,000
Nov.	1	The Crimson Wing	Essanay	6,000
Nov.	8	The Raven	Essanay	5,000
Nov.	15	Sweet Alyssum	Selig	5,000
Nov.	15	Heights of Hazard	Vitagraph	5,000
Nov.	22	The Nation's Peril	Lubin	5,000
Nov.	29	The Caveman	Vitagraph	5,000
Dec.	6	The Alster Case	Essanay	5,000
Dec.	6	The Man's Making	Lubin	5,000
Dec.	13	I'm Glad My Boy Grew Up to Be a Soldier	Selig	4,000
Dec.	13	The Price for Folly	Vitagraph	5,000
Dec.	20	The Great Divide	Lubin	5,000
Dec.	20	A Daughter of the City	Essanay	5,000

Mutual Program

Monday.

D	12-6	The Water Carrier of San Juan	American	2,000
C	12-6	Minnie, the Mean Manicurist	Falstaff	1,000
C	12-6	A Janitor's Joyful Job	Novelty	1,000

Tuesday.

D	12-7	His Vocation	Thanhouser	2,000
S	12-7	See America First, No. 13	Gaumont	500
C	12-7	Keeping Up with the Joneses	Gaumont	500
C	12-7	Pretenses	Beauty	1,000

Wednesday.

D	12-8	Her Mother's Daughter	Reliance	3,000
N	12-8	The Army and Navy Game	Novelty	1,000

Thursday.

D	12-9	The Winning of Jess	Centaur	2,000
C	12-9	Clarence Cheats at Croquet	Falstaff	1,000
T	12-9	Mutual Weekly No. 49	Mutual	1,000

Friday.

D	12-10	There's Good in the Worst of Us	Mustang	2,000
D	12-10	A Broken Cloud	American	1,000
C	12-10	Doctor Jerry	Cub	1,000

Saturday.

D	12-11	Curly	Clipper	3,000
C	12-11	Nobody's Home	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	12-12	The Wayward Son	Reliance	2,000
C	12-12	Curing Cissy	Casino	1,000
D	12-12	Her Confession	Thanhouser	1,000

Monday.

D	12-13	The Solution of the Mystery	American	2,000
C	12-13	The Conductor's Classy Champion	Falstaff	1,000
C	12-13	The Book Agent	Novelty	1,000

Tuesday.

D	12-14	An Innocent Traitor	Thanhouser	2,000
S	12-14	See America First, No. 14	Gaumont	500
C	12-14	Keeping Up with the Joneses	Gaumont	500
C	12-14	A Girl, a Guard and a Garret	Beauty	1,000

Wednesday.

D	12-15	The Ace of Death	Rialto	3,000
C	12-15	A Musical Mix-up	Novelty	1,000

Thursday.

D	12-16	The Arab's Vengeance	Centaur	2,000
C	12-16	Bill Bunks, the Bandit	Falstaff	1,000
T	12-16	Mutual Weekly No. 50	Mutual	1,000

Friday.

D	12-17	In the Sunset Country	Mustang	2,000
C	12-17	Spider Barlow's Soft Spot	American	1,000
C	12-17	The Holdup	Cub	1,000

Saturday.

C	12-18	His Majesty the King	Than-o-play	3,000
C	12-18	Two Hearts and a Thief	Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	12-19	The Opal Pin	Reliance	2,000
C	12-19	Coccy's Innocent Wink	Casino	1,000
C	12-19	The Political Pull of John	Thanhouser	1,000

Universal Program

Monday.

D	12-6	The White Scar	Broadway	5,000
C	12-6	Their Quiet Honeymoon	Nestor	1,000

Tuesday.

D	12-7	Idols of Clay	Gold Seal	3,000
	12-7	No Release This Week	Rex
C	12-7	Slim, Fat or Medium?	Victor	1,000

Wednesday.

D	12-8	The Awakening of Patsey	Victor	1,000
C	12-8	Sin on the Sabbath	L-Ko	2,000
T	12-8	Animated Weekly No. 196	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

	12-9	No Release This Week	Laemmle
D	12-9	The Sacrifice of Jonathan Grey	Big U	3,000
C	12-9	The Frolic of the Marionettes	Powers	500
E	12-9	Nature's Monstrosities	Powers	500

Friday.

C	12-10	The Little Lady Across the Way	Imp	2,000
D	12-10	The Power of Fascination	Rex	1,000
C	12-10	Keeping It Dark	Nestor	1,000

Saturday.

D	12-11	The Lion's Ward	Bison	3,000
	12-11	No Release This Week	Powers
	12-11	Slightly Mistaken	Joker	1,000

Sunday.

D	12-12	Juror Number Seven	Rex	2,000
	12-13	No Release This Week	Laemmle
C	12-12	Lizzie's Shattered Dreams	L-Ko	1,000
D	12-12	The Road to Paradise (No. 3 of the New Adventures of Terence O'Rourke)	Universal	2,000

Monday.

D	12-13	The Primrose Path	Broadway	5,000
C	12-13	Her Speedy Affair	Nestor	1,000
D	12-13	Liquor and the Law (Graft Series No. 1)	Universal	2,000

Tuesday.

D	12-14	Lord John's Journal (Adventure No. 1, Lord John in New York)	Gold Seal	4,000
	12-14	No release this week	Rex
C	12-14	Almost a Papa	Imp	1,000

Wednesday.

D	12-15	The Widow's Secret	Victor	2,000
C	12-15	Blackmail in a Hospital	L Ko	1,000
T	12-15	Animated Weekly No. 197	Universal	1,000

Thursday.

D	12-16	The Bride of the Nancy Lee	Laemmle	2,000
C	12-16	Colonel Steel, Master Gambler	Big U	1,000
	12-16	No release this week	Powers

Friday.

D	12-17	The Vacuum Test	Imp	1,000
	12-17	No release this week	Victor
D	12-17	Where the Heather Blooms	Nestor	2,000

Saturday.

D	12-18	His Real Character	Bison	2,000
D	12-18	The Water Clue	Laemmle	1,000
C	12-18	Title not reported	Joker

Sunday.

D	12-19	The Bachelor's Christmas	Rex	3,000
C	12-19	The Doomed Groom	Laemmle	1,000

Miscellaneous Features

Russian Battlefields	Indian Film Co.	4,000
Concealed Truth	Ivan Film Productions	5,000
Life Without Soul	Ocean Film Corporation	5,000
Thou Shalt Not Kill	Circle Film Corp.	5,000
For Her Son	Great Northern	4,000
Joseph and His Brethren	Dormet Film	6,000
The World of Today	Reliable Feature Film	6,000

Associated Service.

Released week of

Dec.	6	A Slave of Mammon	Santa Barbara	2,000
Dec.	6	Cleansing Waters	Ramona	2,000
Dec.	6	When a Man Is Married	Alhambra	2,000
Dec.	6	The Rider of the Plains	Empire	2,000
Dec.	6	The Mishap	Atla	1,000
Dec.	6	Ike Captures a Fort	Federal	1,000
Dec.	6	His Middle Name Was Trouble	Banner	1,000
Dec.	6	A Silk Stocking Romance	Deer	1,000

Fox Film Corporation

Released Week of

Oct.	4	Sin		5,000
Oct.	11	The Little Gypsy		5,000
Oct.	18	The Soul of Broadway		5,000
Oct.	25	The Family Stain		5,000
Nov.	1	Carmen		6,000
Nov.	8	The Blindness of Devotion		5,000
Nov.	11	A Woman's Past		5,000
Nov.	29	The Galley Slave		5,000
Nov.	21	The Broken Law		5,000
Dec.	5	The Unfaithful Wife		5,000
Dec.	12	Her Mother's Secret		5,000
Dec.	19	A Soldier's Oath		5,000

Kleine-Edison

Released week of

Oct.	20	The Green Cloak	Kleine	5,000
Nov.	3	The Sentimental Lady	Kleine	5,000
Nov.	10	Children of Eve	Edison	5,000
Nov.	17	The Politicians	Kleine	5,000
Dec.	1	The Danger Signal	Kleine	5,000
Dec.	8	The Destroying Angel	Edison	5,000
Dec.	15	The Bondwomen	Kleine	5,000

Kriterion

Released Week of

Nov.	29	The Witness	Paragon	2,000
Nov.	29	Billy Puts One Over	Santa Barbara	1,000
Nov.	29	Big-Hearted John	Alhambra	2,000
Nov.	29	Sherlock Holmes Boob Detective	Santa Barbara	1,000
Nov.	29	The Keeper of the Flock	Santa Barbara	2,000
Nov.	29	The Unloaded 45	C. K.	1,000
Nov.	29	The Western Border	Monty	2,000
Nov.	29	Catching a Speeder	Punch	1,000
Nov.	29	Father and Son	Trump	2,000
Nov.	29	Such a War	Pyramid	1,000
Nov	29	A Mask, a Ring and a Pair of Handcuffs	Navajo	2,000
Nov.	29	Syd, the Bum Detective	Alhambra	1,000

Metro Features.

Released week of

Oct.	4	Song of the Wage Slave	Metro	5,000
Oct.	11	The Stork's Nest	Metro	5,000
Oct.	18	The Final Judgment	Metro	5,000
Oct.	25	My Madonna	Metro	5,000
Nov.	1	Tables Turned	Metro	5,000
Nov.	8	Pennington's Choice	Metro	5,000
Nov.	15	The Woman Pays	Metro	5,000
Nov.	22	One Million Dollars	Metro	5,000
Nov.	29	Barbara Frietchie	Metro	5,000
Dec.	6	A Yellow Streak	Metro	5,000
Dec.	13	The House of Tears	Metro	5,000

Mutual Master-Pictures.

Released week of

Nov.	25	The Strife Eternal	Mutual	5,000
Dec.	2	The Forbidden Adventure	Mutual	5,000
Dec.	9	The Buzzard's Shadow	Mutual	5,000
Nov.	11	The End of the Road	American	5,000
Dec.	2	The Forbidden Adventure	Mutual	5,000
Dec.	16	The Mill on the Floss	Thanhouser	5,000

Paramount Features.

Released week of

Nov.	29	The Prince and the Pauper	Famous Players	5,000
Dec.	2	Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo	Lasky	5,000
Dec.	6	Paramount News Pictures	Paramount	1,000
Dec.	6	Jane	Morosco	5,000
Dec.	9	The Unknown	Lasky	5,000

Pathe.

Released Week of

Dec.	13	New Adventures of Wallingford, No. 11	Pathe	2,000
Dec.	13	Climbing Mount Blanc	Globe	1,000
Dec.	13	Pathe News, No. 100	Pathe	1,000
Dec.	13	Pathe News, No. 101	Pathe	1,000
Dec.	13	Ruses, Rhymes, Roughnecks	Phunphilms	1,000
Dec.	13	Beloved Vagabond	Gold Rooster	6,000
Dec.	13	More Deadly Than the Male	Starlight	1,000
Dec.	13	The Red Circle, No. 1	Balboa	2,000

Triangle Film Corporation.

Released week of

Dec.	12	The Lily and the Rose; Lillian Gish, Rozsika Dolly	Fine Arts	5,000
Dec.	12	Aloha Oe; Willard Mack	Triangle-Kay-Bee	5,000
Dec.	12	The Village Scandal; Raymond Hitchcock, Roscoe Arbuckle	Triangle-Keystone	2,000
Dec.	12	The Great Vacuum Robbery; Charles H. Murray	Triangle-Keystone	2,000
Dec.	19	Jordon Is a Hard Road; Dorothy Gish, Frank Campeau	Fine Arts	5,000
Dec.	19	The Winged Idol; Katharine Kaelred	Triangle-Kay-Bee	5,000
Dec.	19	Crooked to the End; Fred Mace	Triangle-Keystone	2,000
Dec.	19	Fatty and the Broadway Stars; Roscoe Arbuckle	Triangle-Keystone	2,000

World Features.

Released week of

Nov.	29	Not Guilty	Triumph	5,000
Nov.	29	The Sins of Society	Brady	5,000
Dec.	6	The Warning	Triumph	5,000
Dec.	6	Creeping Tides	Equitable	5,000
Dec.	6	The Gray Mask	Shubert	5,000
Dec.	13	The Siren's Song	Shubert	5,000

Brief Stories of the Week's Film Releases

General Program

A Scandal in Hickville—VITAGRAPH—DECEMBER 1.—Featuring Anne Schaefer, Alfred Vosburgh and a strong cast. Ben Harkins manages to escape the sharp eyes of his wife and sneak away to meet Eben Dunn and go on a fishing excursion. Cy Denton, who has been ejected from the sheriff's home for courting his daughter, bumps into him, causing him to drop a big fish-knife he is carrying. Cy picks the knife up and runs wildly after Ben, and the village gossip sees this and tells a blood-curdling story to the other scandal-mongers of how Cy had chased Ben with a big knife and finally the women march to the Harkins home and tell Mrs. Harkins that Cy has murdered her husband. Poor Cy is locked up on the charge of murder, and then the discovery of the body follows. The doctor pronounces Ben is intoxicated, not dead, and the sheriff returns to the jail only to find that his prisoner has escaped and eloped with his daughter.

The Conquest of Constantia—VITAGRAPH—DECEMBER 2.—Featuring Flora Finch, Kate Price, Rose Tapley and Dick Leslie, Jr. Constantia Calthrope, an old maid, lives in a semi-detached cottage, with her housekeeper, Mrs. Carter, and maid, Nora. The cottage next door is taken by Grace Melleville, a young widow, and her little son, Teddy, who takes a great fancy to Constantia's cat. Several days later the cat is stolen by a couple of boys and Teddy follows them and manages to rescue the cat and gets lost himself in the woods. He is later found and Constantia upon learning how he had rescued her pet is completely won over.

The Home Cure—VITAGRAPH—DECEMBER 3.—Featuring Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew. Henry Souser has a strong friendship for booze and Mrs. Souser determines to cure him. She pretends that she herself has become addicted to the use of liquor and proceeds to carry out her plan by greeting her husband on his return from the office with the pretension of being slightly under the influence of liquor. The next morning she pretends to have a terrible headache and her husband seriously demands to know how long this has been going on. She carries her idea further by emptying the decanter on the sideboard and pretending to have drunk it all, while at the same time brazenly drinks liquor from her medicine bottle. Henry sees his friend, the doctor, who advises him to destroy every drop of liquor in the house, and he does. His wife later tells him and he finally acknowledges that she has won—he is cured, and by the "home cure" at that.

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 97—HEARST-SELIG—DECEMBER 6.—U. S. Marines leave San Francisco for Topolobampo, where Yaqui Indians threaten the safety of two hundred Americans; pirates' million-dollar treasure is unearthed in Central America and put on display by United Fruit Company; Massachusetts Red Cross make warm mittens and caps for men facing winter in trenches; pearl fishers drag beds of White River with tongs at Newport, Ark.; Cooper wins hundred-mile race that marks closing of motor season at Panama fair; blaze attacks lumber yard and warehouse in the heart of this city's wholesale season, San Francisco, Calif.; famous Bersaglieri are rushed to station and entrained for campaign in Goritz region on the Italian front.

Cal Marvin's Wife—(THREE REELS)—VITAGRAPH—DECEMBER 4.—Featuring Anne Schaefer, Mary Anderson and William Duncan. Cal Marvin's mother has never met Dolly, his wife, but hears how Cal had met her. Dolly had been a chorus girl in a theatrical troupe and she later left the troupe to marry Cal. They are happy for a while, but after the death of their baby she becomes despondent, and George, who knows the child is not Cal's, is relieved but keeps silent. Shortly afterward the theatrical troupe returns to town and the father of Dolly's child is again attracted to her and prevails upon her to elope with him. Cal, learning of this, attacks Harry, and Dolly backs away from the struggling and falls down the edge of a high cliff. She, however, is caught in a tree growing on the side of the cliff, and Cal rescues her and later forgives her and takes her into his heart, as does his mother, when she hears the story.

Her Last Flirtation—VITAGRAPH—DECEMBER 6.—Featuring Alfred Vosburgh, and Myrtle Gonzalez. Florence, the sheriff's niece, arrives on a visit to his ranch and meets Jim. She is the heroine of many heart conquests and a great flirt, so Jim falls an easy victim to her wiles. The young man finally proposes and is shyly accepted. A few days later Florence quietly starts back East, leaving a cruelly enlightening note for him. He springs on his horse, catches up with Florence and takes her by force back to the minister's and he marries her with the word, "You may treat men that way where you come from, but you can't do it here." Sometime later love finally conquers and Jim wins out.

Wasted Lives—(THREE REELS)—VITAGRAPH—DECEMBER 7.—Featuring Julia Swayne Gordon, Arline Pretty and Leo Delaney. Marion Stuart, who is crazed because of her husband's attentions to Ann Bogart, an opera singer, attempts to drown herself, but is rescued, and about an hour later she dies in giving birth to a daughter. Ann Bogart forces the people who had rescued Marion to keep the birth a secret in order that she and her son, Reginald, may inherit Graham Stuart's fortune. Later Stuart marries Ann and seventeen years afterwards Graham, Ann and Reginald return to America, where the boy meets Lois, Marion's daughter, and attempts to force his attentions upon her. Bobby Sharp, a young newspaper reporter, discovers that Lois is the missing daughter of Marion Stuart, and later Ann confesses the whole truth. Lois is reinstated as Graham's heiress and marries Bobby.

Sonny Jim's Love Affair—VITAGRAPH—DECEMBER 8.—Featuring Bobby Connelly and a strong cast. Sonny Jim notices the growing love affair between his Aunt Julia and Mr. Elder, Eddy's bachelor friend. He himself falls a victim to the charms of four-year-old Ruth and when he breaks her doll and she tells him she will never speak to him again he is terribly depressed and especially so when his rival, Eddy, usurps him in Ruth's affections. He talks it over with Mr. Elder, who tries to help him, but it does no good, but just in his darkest hour Mother Dear comes to the rescue by buying a beautiful new doll, which Sonny presents to Ruth and after which everything is bright and happy again.

Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 98—HEARST-SELIG—DECEMBER 9.—Steamship Great Northern leaves for Honolulu from Los Angeles; electrical convention held in Boston; automobile road from Los Angeles to San Diego opened; Ways and Means Committee assemble for opening of Congress at Washington, D. C.; street car strike in Wilkesbarre, Pa.; Dr. Ray E. Hall of Chicago constructs device that catches aerial correspondence and writes it on tape; American steamer Zealandia arrives in New York after having been chased by an unknown fighting cruiser off the Jersey coast; Ohio agriculturists march to Executive Mansion in Washington, D. C.; Oscar II, Ford's peace ship, leaves on errand of peace.

Sam's Sweetheart—VITAGRAPH—DECEMBER 9.—Featuring Carolyn Birch, Anders Randolf and Mary Maurice. While living with Sam, her guardian, Bab's father dies, leaving her an orphan, and Sam, who is in love with the girl, keeps silent because he thinks he is too old. Bab's aunt in the city plans with Lord Merton to take advantage of the fact that Bab will inherit her grandfather's comfortable fortune. Bab goes to the city to acquire style of living, and there she becomes engaged to Lord Merton. The night before the wedding Bab overhears the lord demand additional settlement, and stunned, she slips away and goes straight back to Sam, where, after a joyful reunion, Sam's ward becomes his sweetheart and affianced wife.

Rooney's Sad Case—VITAGRAPH—DECEMBER 10.—Featuring Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew. Rooney with dreary visions of Mrs. Rooney ordering him to stay out until he gets a job, dares not go home, and plans to adopt the "lost memory" plan. He rents a flashy suit and takes his stand near a park driveway and he is taken to the home of a wealthy man, and there the doctor pronounces his mind a blank and leaves him to the tender nursing of his soft-voiced daughter, Kitty. Rooney's eyes are bandaged so he can't see Kitty's awful face, but he imagines her beautiful. But a charming romance is interrupted by the entrance of his wife, and when he sees Kitty's face he regains his memory in a hurry and his pipe dream is shattered.

Hughey of the Circus—(TWO REELS)—VITAGRAPH—DECEMBER 11.—Featuring Hughey Mack, Flora Finch and Nitra Frazer. Hughey, while strolling down the village street, flirts with a heavily veiled lady and discovers she is a circus bearded lady. He then meets a young girl and finds that she is Miss Powell, who is staying with her aunt, Flora Powell. Hughey sends a bunch of flowers to "Miss Powell" and Flora, the aunt, gets them and keeps a tryst suggested in Hughey's note. Later Hughey, in getting away from Flora, winds up in the circus, where he tries to pass himself off as Fatima, the fat lady, and when given a chance between marrying Kate, the bearded lady, or Flora, he chooses the latter.

The Glory of Youth—(FOUR REELS)—KALEM—DECEMBER 13.—Featuring Inez Bauer. Unaware of the fact that Gay loves Hal, the athlete who is helping him regain his strength, Cairns, an elderly invalid, asks the girl to be his wife and when the girl, who is deeply indebted to Delores, her benefactor, is ordered to wed Cairns she consents and Hal heartbroken over the turn of events decides to leave the house. Zarth, the millionaire's valet, learning of the love affair between Hal and Gay tells his master and Cairns plans revenge. He manages to lock them together in a room planning to starve them to death and Zarth, who is secretly in love with the girl, is stationed outside the door. Cairns who has gone to his town house, repents of his deed and after notifying the police he slays himself. Later Zarth enters the room and attempts to embrace Gay, but the police enter as Hal and Zarth are engaged in a desperate struggle. The valet is overpowered and led away to jail.

The Moment Before Death—LUBIN—DECEMBER 13.—Featuring Melvin Mayo, Ada Gleason and L. C. Shumway. Cummings, a crazed scientist, jumps from the ledge of a tall building and as he is falling through space he receives the impressions of his life that led to his crime. He was working on a wonderful machine in his laboratory when he discovered what he thought to be a love affair between his wife and his assistant, Dr. Grant. His invention was at last completed and with its sensitive means of registering the blood pressure he could tell whether his wife was guilty or not. The instrument adjusted to her arm he accused her of loving Grant. She was guilty. Later he found a letter showing that the secret between his wife and Grant was the planning of a new laboratory for him. Realizing the enormity of his crime he opens the door of the room in which he had thrust Florence, but she seemed lifeless. The last scene shows the people rushing to the sidewalk where he has fallen.

The Coquette's Awakening—Selig—December 13.—Featuring Kathlyn Williams and Guy Oliver. Ralph Warner who loves the flirt upon learning that she has tolerated him merely for the enjoyment of the game, tells her he is going to commit suicide that night but she laughs at him and that night she falls asleep and dreams and is taken back through the garden of love and shown many examples of the loves of men and women and how time destroys the unworthy and helps the worthy. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

Benjamin Bunter—Book Agent—Vitagraph—December 13.—Featuring Ethel Corcoran, William Dangman, Templer Saxe and William Shea. Jonah Grundell, a retired sea captain, is in charge of his niece's fortune until she becomes of age, or marries with his consent. If she marries without his consent before she is twenty-one the fortune goes to Jonah. He hates to give the fortune up and so when Polly is twenty-one manages to keep her in ignorance of the fact. Benjamin Bunter, a fresh book agent, arrives in town, meets and falls in love with Polly and she with him. White, the family lawyer, digs up a birth certificate showing that Polly is twenty-one and forces Jonah to give his consent to their marriage.

Her Stepchildren—(Two Reels)—Biograph—December 14.—Featuring Charles Perley, Vera Sisson and a strong cast. Dr. Lambert's children, Rose and Frank, do not welcome his new wife into the house. Rose meets Philip Ray, a dissipated bachelor and Mrs. Lambert hearing her promise to come to his apartments follows her there. Frank, Dr. Lambert's son, owes a friend in the same apartment with Ray $100.00 for his gambling debts and he goes to pay the bill about the same time that Rose goes to Ray's apartments. Leaving his friends he sees his stepmother entering Ray's apartment and telephones for his father. Mrs. Lambert hides Rose behind the hangings and faces her husband as he enters and he refuses to listen to explanations and strides out. Time passes and Rose finally confesses to her father and he tries to find his wife, but cannot. Later her child is born and she leaves it on the doctor's doorstep. Just after leaving she faints and is found lying under the window. Reconciliation with those for whom she has made such great sacrifices later comes to pass.

Reckoning Day—(Three Reels)—Essanay—December 14.—Featuring E. H. Calvert and Elizabeth Burbridge. Gideon Winfield, a bank employee, after stealing money to pay his gambling debts, marries Clara Worthington, the daughter of a financier. The theft of the bank funds is discovered and Clara's father to avoid notoriety pays the defalcation and Winfield leaves town. Sometime later Clara marries after hearing that Winfield is dead. He is really alive, however, but is killed one night by a burglar when he enters Clara's home to threaten her.

Almost a King—Kalem—December 14.—Featuring Bud Duncan, Charles Inslee and Ethel Teare. King Gazabo who is threatened by a pair of gentle anarchists, takes refuge in a royal safety room and Pete is elected for substitute king. Bud falls into the anarchists' hands and is ordered to slay the ruler. Pete's eyes behold the fair Nicotina, the ruler's favorite tango artiste, and when Bud comes into the palace he appoints him assistant king, but his ire is aroused when he discovers that Nicotina is smitten with the little chap. King Gazabo decides to return to the throne and when he learns of Nicotina's fickleness he is furious and orders Pete and Bud thrown into the torture chamber where they are to be tickled to death. The queen discovering her husband's fondness for the dancer has him shot down the torture chute.

The Great Detective—Lubin—December 14.—D. L. Don featured. Hinky Dink swaps money for a tin badge from the Skinnem Detective School and becomes a full fledged sleuth. Later Mr. Scrapp who is henpecked by his wife pretends to commit suicide. Hinky tells of Scrapp's death and thinks that Mrs. Scrapps murdered her husband. Later he promises to marry Gwendolin Scrapp, slightly ancient in years, if she will hide him under the bed so he can look for more clues. After some time Hinky manages to escape to the woods, where he finds Mr. Scrapp, who is cold and hungry and he returns home to his wife and she seeing Gwendolin nestling in Hinky's arms, gives them her blessing.

On the Eagle Trail—Selig—December 14.—Featuring Tom Mix and Victoria Forde. Tom Merry, a stage coach driver, is in love with Vicky, daughter of Henderson, superintendent of the Eagle Mining Company. Jordon, who works in the office, proposes to the girl, but is refused and when he becomes insulting Henderson discharges him. As a result Jordon invites the men to a riot at the mining company's office and plans to hold up the stage which Tom drives on his return trip and get away with the pay roll. Vicky overhears the plot, goes to warn Tom and as the stage speeds by Tom throws the money to Vicky and arrives at the mining company's office just as the miners are about to wreck the place.

A Question of Right or Wrong—(Two Reels)—Vitagraph—December 14.—Featuring Maurice Costello and Leah Baird. When Grace is confronted with apparent proof that Paul Mathews, her sweetheart, is dead, she consents to marry Jason Caldner to save her father from financial ruin. Upon entering her new home Grace and her husband are confronted by Paul, alive and well. Caldner, seeing that there is love between his wife and Mathews, plots with Turner, an escaped convict, whom Dayton, a detective, is shadowing, to kill Paul. They argue over the matter of money and Turner hits Caldner over the head. Mathews comes upon the scene and when Caldner recovers his senses he accuses him of striking him. Meanwhile Dayton, seeing Turner escape from the house, arrests him and brings him back to the Caldner home and there everything is explained. Overcome by conflicting emotions and the shock of his injury Caldner staggers back and as Grace goes to his assistance he drops dead, pulling off her wedding ring. Mathews and Grace silently shake hands in their realization of future happiness.

Divorcons—(Four Reels)—Biograph—December 15.—Featuring Dell Henderson, Gertrude Bambrick and a strong cast. Henri Des Prunelles loves his wife, Cyprienne, but neglects her for experiments in his laboratory. The wife hungry for adventure accepts the love of her cousin, Count Adhemar. Des Prunelles catches his wife and the count together, but to their astonishment makes no move to harm them and later he tells the count he intends to give his wife to him. An easy divorce law passes the Legislature and Madame De Brionee and Monsieur Clavignac thinking Des Prunelles and Cyprienne interested call to discuss the matter with them. Later Madame De Brionee invites Des Prunelles to dine with her and Cyprienne gets the message. Cyprienne and her husband reconciled are dining happily in a private dining room when Madame De Brionee, Clavignac and Adhemar come into the cafe. Later Cyprienne returns home with her husband and proves to him that she has always loved him.

The History of a Big Tree—(Split Reel)—Edison—December 15.—The instructive value of this picture is second only to its value to afford excellent entertainment. The various operations a tree goes through from the time of its felling to its finished product in planks, boards, and moulding for building purposes are shown. At the end a panoramic view of impressive hills and valleys prompts the final sub-title, "Thus is grandeur sacrificed to utility," which is strikingly opportune.

The Fable of Sister Mae, Who Did as Well as Could Be Expected—Essanay—December 15.—Featuring an all-star cast. Two sisters lived in Chicago, the Home of Opportunity. Luella was a good girl and had taken prizes at the Mission Sunday School, but she was Plain. She found employment in a Hat factory. Mary was different. She lacked industry and Application. Finally she got a job as cashier in a lunch room. Soon her date book had to be kept on the Double Entry System. She turned them all down for a Bucket Shop Man, who had lots of Coin, and went to live in a flat with a Quarter-sawed Oak Chiffonier. She was Mae at this stage of the game, and took Luella away from the Hat factory and made her assistant cook. Moral: Industry and Perseverance bring a sure reward.

Snakeville's Champion—Essanay—December 15.—Featuring Ben Turpin, Lloyd Bacon and Margaret Joslin. Hotch, the world's greatest wrestler, arrives in Snakeville and stands ready to defend his title against all comers. Bloggie meets him on the street, and not knowing who he is, starts a fight. The result is that the champion sends a challenge to Bloggie. Bloggie immediately starts training for the match. Bloggie wins the first fall, and Hotch the second. Bloggie wins the third and deciding fall by tickling the bottom of his opponent's foot, and amid cheers is carried away on the shoulders of his admirers.

The Inner Chamber—(Three Reels)—Lubin—October 15.—Featuring L. C. Shumway, Helen Eddy and a strong cast in the story of Ralph Morgan, who deserts his wife and goes to the city, where he wins the heart of Marian Day. Later Marian's suitor with the help of Ralph's wife stops the marriage of Ralph and Marian and later upon Mrs. Morgan's death Marian and Guy promise to take care of her child and many years of trials follow. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

To the Vile Dust—(Two Reels)—Kalem—December 15.—An episode of the "Stingaree" series. On the verge of death in the desert Vanheimert is rescued by Stingaree and Howie. He is carried to Stingaree's gunyah and there discovers the identity of his rescuers and plans to betray them and obtain the reward offered for their capture. Vanheimert finds a loaded revolver, seizes it and crawls toward Stingaree who is apparently sleeping. However, the revolver is not loaded and then Ethel, Stingaree's sweetheart, saves Vanheimert from death at the bushranger's hand. Determined that justice shall be done Stingaree and Howie take the man back to the spot in the desert where the found him and leave him there to his fate.

The Faith of Sonny Jim—Vitagraph—December 15.—Featuring Bobby Connelly and a strong cast. Sonny Jim learns that there is no Santa Claus and is heartbroken. He will not be comforted by his mother and finally determines to prove the truth for himself. Sonny sits up in a big chair the night before Christmas, but soon falls asleep and dreams that a big gruff, cross-looking Santa comes down the chimney and carries him over the roof-tops to the great throne-room of King Santa Claus himself who reprimands Sonny for doubting his existence. He is then sent to Father Time, who tells him he must take away his youth, as only the old people do not believe, and he is placed in a big machine and he grows and grows until he is a great big man with a long white beard and grotesque features. Then Sonny awakens to find his stocking filled with toys and good things, and with a happy smile he tells his dog, Toto, that he will never again doubt Santa.

A Thief in the Night—(Two Reels)—Lubin—December 16.—Featuring Ormi Hawley and Earl Metcalfe. Caesar Lebrum brings his brother Louis, a famous surgeon, home to spend the night. As they enter Caesar's home they find Klyda, his wife, reading and Caesar observes her breathing is irregular. Caesar explains that Louis is to perform an important operation and suggests that Klyda show Louis to his room and immediately after they have gone he levels a pistol at the closet door and says sternly "Come out" and from the cupboard steps a man in evening clothes, who says that he entered the house to rob. Klyda enters the room and Caesar tells her that his brother is going to operate upon the stranger to relieve the pressure on his brain which makes him a criminal. He then forces the stranger into the closet and leaves to summons his brother and while he is absent Klyda tells the stranger through the door that she hates him and reproaches herself for allowing him to accompany her from the opera. Then Caesar enters the room and tells Klyda he overheard her conversation and is convinced of her purity and the stranger is ordered to leave.

Cupid Entangled—BIOGRAPH—DECEMBER 16.—Featuring Claire McDowell and Alan Hale. The actress in the country meets a country bumpkin, who falls in love with her and neglects his pretty little sweetheart. Discovering that the girl really loves the man the actress invites her sweetheart from the city and demands that he pretend to be in love with the country girl and thus arouse the rube's jealousy. He does this and he makes the rube jealous and when he comes to try to enlist the aid of the actress in reclaiming his sweetheart she laughs at him. However, the laugh is on her as her sweetheart falls in love with the girl and elopes with her.

The Golden Spurs—(TWO REELS)—SELIG—DECEMBER 16.—Featuring Bessie Eyton and Wheeler Oakman. Dick Belmont and George Favre, brother officers, are rivals for Helen Ryder's hand. Her brother Bert is in the power of Favre. Helen and Dick announce their engagement at a week end reception and Dick longs for a pair of golden spurs owned by Colonel Ryder, who declines to sell them. Bert is forced by Favre to steal the spurs and place them in Dick's room. Helen's father breaks his daughter's engagement with Dick, who is later dismissed from the military service. Dick lives in the solitude of the jungle and one day when Helen and Favre are out riding together Favre attempts to force his advance upon the girl and Helen frightened flees into Dick's shack. Later Dick and Helen are rescued from the cabin which is set afire by a torch and Favre is found dead the victim of a leopard.

The Flower of the Hills—VITAGRAPH—DECEMBER 16.—Featuring Carolyn Birch and Leo Delony. Jane, known as "The Flower of the Hills," is loved by Joe Dakes, a young countryman, but she meets Jack Brooks, a young city man, and falls in love with him. Later she goes to the city with Jack, and Joe follows her, and she prepares to leave with him because Jack's mother and cousin tell her he is ashamed of her. Later, when Jack learns of his cousin's and mother's duplicity, he follows her and she finally convinces Joe that she loves Jack, and that Jack loves her, and he renounces all claim on her and "The Flower of the Hills" becomes the bride of the city man.

Fate—BIOGRAPH REISSUE—DECEMBER 17.—Featuring Mae Marsh and Robert Harron. Sim Sloane whose only redeeming quality is his love for his son, is helped out by an old forester when he breaks his leg. Sloane's response to his kind treatment is to become drunk, insult his host and abuse the little granddaughter's pets. When the story of his brutality is made known he is made the butt of ridicule and he thirsts for revenge. He hangs about the cabin until the children have left for school and then enters and lays a fuse of shavings from the hearth fire to a keg of powder that stands in the inner room. A few minutes later the children return and Sim's son enters the house, drives out the children, ramsacks the larder and sits down to eat and drink. Just as Sloane reaches the scene there is an explosion which hurls his beloved son into eternity and Sloane remains to grieve over his devilish handiwork.

Broncho Billy's Marriage—ESSANAY—DECEMBER 17.—Featuring G. M. Anderson and Marguerite Clayton. Broncho Billy, while in a dance hall, goes to the assistance of the girl who is playing the piano, when a patron tries to force her to drink. As a result, the girl loses her position. A few days later Broncho Billy finds her wandering about the streets. She tells him the sad story of her life, and how through her innocence, she was led into a shameless life. Broncho Billy falls deeply in love with her, and shortly after asks her to become his wife.

The Secret Message—KALEM—DECEMBER 17.—An episode of "The Ventures of Marguerite." Shortly after Marguerite has been presented with a fountain pen filled with invisible ink she is ensnared by Bolton, head of a band of crooks, who demands $50,000 as the price for her release. Bob is arrested by a confederate of Bolton's, who has donned police attire, and taken to the rendezvous. Bolton orders Marguerite to make out a check for $50,000 on her bank and this done he has Marforth and Irene, another of his accomplices, accompany the heiress to the bank, where the check is to be cashed. The girl writes a brief message requesting help with the invisible ink and this done she uses ordinary ink for the purpose of writing "Heat this check." The chief of the criminals discovering that his plot has misfired attempts to kill Bob, but the timely arrival of the police saves the young man's life.

Sweeter Than Revenge—LUBIN—DECEMBER 17. Featuring a strong cast. Bess Bowen, saloon keeper in the miningtown and Molly McCall laundress, both select as a mate Joe Best, a prosperous miner. Joe finally proposes to Bess and Molly goes to him with the story that Bess is a desperate criminal and then it is that he transfers his engagement ring to Molly. Later Bess seeks refuge in the teppee of an Indian family and then swears to never cease her efforts until the five men most concerned in her disgrace have met their death. Two of them while crossing a stream fall in it and drown, the third is bitten by a rattlesnake, the fourth is cut to pieces by a passing train and for five years she searches for Joe Best and one day comes across him, but he tells her that his babies could not get along without him and she spares the husband of the woman she hates because of the children.

The Deceivers—VITAGRAPH—DECEMBER 17.—Featuring Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew. When Mr. Simpkins gets a raise his friend Jones advises him to "hold out" a five or ten-spot. He puts this money in his hatband and later slips it in a vase on the mantel shelf. That night he takes a chill and his wife tells him the quinine pills are in the medicine chest. After taking two he sees the fatal skull and crossbones on the box and thinks he is poisoned. He then confesses the truth of his "hold outs" and is surprised to learn that his wife has also been saving "hold outs" and then he learns from the doctor that the quinine pills had gotten into the wrong box and all ends in supreme joy and relief.

A Christmas Revenge—(TWO REELS)—ESSANAY—DECEMBER 18.—Featuring G. M. Anderson and Marguerite Clayton. Broncho Billy becomes enraged when a stranger comes to town and wins the affections of his sweetheart. On the night of the wedding he "shoots up" the church wounding the bridegroom and leaves a note to his rival telling him that he will finish the job Christmas night. On Christmas night Broncho Billy returns and dons the costume of Santa Claus which his rival was to have worn and thus gains entrance to the church with the intention of carrying out his threat. He suddenly relents, however, and lets his rival go unharmed.

The Wrong Train Order—KALEM—DECEMBER 18.—An episode of the "Hazards of Helen" railroad series. Torney is so upset over the message that his son has been injured that he delivers the wrong train order to the engineer of the freight. Helen, who is a passenger of the freight, climbs aboard the caboose and while the engineer and the firemen are trying to seat what is wrong with the train they are hurled to the ground. In the meantime Torney discovering his error phones, ordering the operator at the Arling station to flag the freight. The runaway dashes past Arling, however, and Helen seeing the operator vainly signalling senses something amiss. She climbs to the roof of the freight and fights her way forward atop the lurching cars. She climbs out on the pilot and a trackwalker throws open a siding switch and thus averts a wreck. By this time Helen has reached the emergency and applying the air brings the runaway to a halt.

An Unwilling Burglar—LUBIN—DECEMBER 18.—Featuring Billie Reeves. Mr. Henry comes home at 12 a. m. and is mistaken by a burglar for another one and at the point of a revolver is forced to try to break into his own home. He awakens his wife, the maid and the cook, and later the real burglar runs upstairs and into the room where the maid and cook are and tries to crawl under the bed. Later a policeman captures Spike, and Henry tells his wife he has been trailing Spike and takes all the credit for the capture.

Jungle Justice—SELIG—DECEMBER 18.—James Clinton, hunter of big game, incurs the enmity of Kahale, chief of the jungle. Nell his daughter receives word that her cousin, Laura Brandt, is coming to visit her and upon her arrival Nell's sweetheart, Captain Trent, becomes infatuated with her. Laura flirts with Kahale and he asks her to be his wife and she continues to flirt with Trent while Nells silently suffers. Kahale seizes an opportunity and kidnaps Laura. He ties her to a tree in the jungle and when found she is dead.

A Man's Sacrifice—(THREE REELS)—VITAGRAPH—DECEMBER 18.—Featuring Edith Storey, Evart Overton and a strong cast. Mary Alden rejects Andy Stevens, a worthy young man, and accepts Bob, who has a fondness for drink. Andy leaves for the gold fields and there prospers, while Bob loses his position through his love for liquor.

Andy arranges a job for Bob at the gold mine without revealing his identity, and in the mining town he tells Bob who he is and forces him to send home part of his wages to Mary. One night while under the influence of liquor Bob falls down a ravine and is killed and his body brought back to the village. Andy is shocked and not having the heart to tell Mary continues to forward the monthly salary installments. Several months later Mary learns of her husband's death and as she has received several months' money is mystified and worried, and after going West learns who it was who had helped her out and his unselfish devotion wins her heart and both find happiness as man and wife.

Mutual Program

Seeing America First—(SPLIT REEL)—GAUMONT—DECEMBER 7.—Housewives will delight in the first part of this reel. They will be taken by the pretty Mutual traveler to visit a flat silverware manufacturing establishment in Providence, R. I., where they will witness the making of all sorts of table accessories. The State House of Rhode Island will also be given its due share of prominence, as will the beautiful homes, parks and amusement spots in and around the city. On the same reel is:

Keeping Up With the Joneses—An animated cartoon drawn by Harry Palmer, the well-known cartoonist.

A Musical Mix-Up Novelty—DECEMBER 8.—Ella Lee gives piano and singing lesson. Edward Pickett, smitten with Ella's charms, opens a banjo school across the hall. The mischievous Miss Lee persuades two old farmers and a hulking country fellow to palm themselves off as deaf-and-dumb applicants for banjo lessons. They arrive in rapid succession, and Pickett is in despair. However, he notices that when he picks the strings of his instruments, the two old duffers cannot keep their feet still. At last the entire joke comes out. Pickett plans a sweet revenge upon Miss Ella. The revenge takes the form of ardent wooing—and a few weeks later a big sign reads: "Mr. and Mrs. Edward Pickett, Piano and Banjo Instruction."

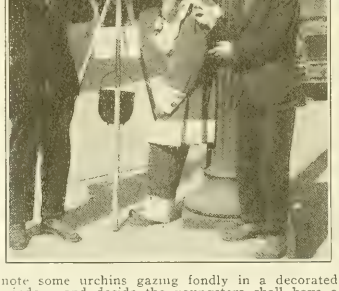
Army-Navy Football Game—MUTUAL—DECEMBER 9.—Exclusive motion pictures of the annual gridiron contest between the Army and Navy, played at the Polo Grounds, New York, on Saturday, November 28. The five Mutual camera men have caught every important play, as well as interesting snaps of President Wilson and the festive throngs.

Doctor Jerry—CENTAUR—DECEMBER 10.—Featuring George Ovey. Jerry plays a trick on father and poses as a doctor, thus gaining admittance to the daughter's presence. The young folks' merriment over their victory is of such a boisterous nature that father becomes suspicious. He puts his daughter to sleep and spots up her face a la small pox. Seeing his sweetheart in this state, Jerry flees in fright and meets Dr. George, from whom he appropriated the garb of doctor. The doctor chloroforms Jerry, decorates him with small pox spots and imprisons him in a quarantined house. The prisoner escapes, but after some chasing the police apprehend him. They are forced to acknowledge a mistake, however, for, during the chase, the spots have been washed off of Jerry's face. The officer then gives Jerry a roll of bills to buy his silence as well as to treat his wounds.

The Wayward Son—(TWO REELS)—RELIANCE—DECEMBER 12.—Featuring William Hinckley. C. Stuyvesant Brown's agent informs him that there is a Mexican claimant to his property in southern California, and advises Brown to send west an able-bodied man to protect the ranch. Brown sends his son, C. Stuyvesant, Jr., who has been trying to break the record for foolishness in New York society. Arriving in Los Angeles, young Brown is taken in charge by his father's deputies. On their way to the ranch they pick up a young Mexican girl of about ten years who seems to be lost. The little girl, it happens, is the claimant to Brown, Sr.'s property. She grows into a beautiful woman. Almost imperceptibly a romance interweaves itself with the man's progress and the "Mexican claimant" vanishes in becoming the young rancher's bride.

The Conductor's Classy Champion—FALSTAFF—DECEMBER 13.—Conductor 786, affectionately known as "Con," has outmaneuvered a rival for the affections of the woman he loved. The rival plans to start a rumpus in Con's car, and thus be the means of having him discharged. But Con falls in with a champion female hammer thrower, and she promises to help him. The muscular woman is on the car when the fight starts; takes the rival's two delegates and proceeds to make a long distance record with them. Afterward she accompanies Con to the superintendent's office and gives him all the credit.

A Girl, a Guard, and a Garret—BEAUTY—DECEMBER 14.—John Sheehan and Carol Hollaway are the featured players in this unique little comedy, concerning Jessie Fowler, daughter of a politician, and Billie, a reporter of a local newspaper, who love one another. After Billie has vainly attempted to elope with Jessie and her angry father has ordered a burly guard set about his daughter, the girl, locked up in the garret, opens an old trunk belonging to her father, and finds therein a number of photographs in which father appears in rather embarrassing, not to say compromising poses: the photos clearly indicating that father in his younger days was a gay young blade. Jessie at once sees the importance of these photos, and mails them to Billie with a hint that father might relent if a threat was made to publish the pictures. Billie at once prepares a lurid story and shows the proofs to father, who immediately relents, and as usual the picture ends with a "Bless you, my children."
N. G. C.



An Innocent Traitor—THANHOUSER—DECEMBER 14.—Twin daughters are born to the wife of an army officer, a doctor and a nurse being the only ones present at the birth. Both are secret spies of a foreign government. They abduct one of the twins and bring her up abroad, while the parents believe that there is only one child. Years later, the girl, who has been carefully brought up and schooled as a spy, is used to get some tracings of defense plans from her father, now a major. The girl's remarkable resemblance to her twin sister makes this easy. The major is on the verge of court martial, for it is believed that he is in league with his daughter to betray the defense secrets. But the other twin discovers her real identity, turns on the spies, leads them into the court at the point of a gun, and clears her father's name.

The Arab's Vengeance—(TWO REELS)—CENTAUR—DECEMBER 16.—Captain Vincent is in command of an outpost in Arabia. Mr. Calvin, a naturalist, on his way to the interior, presents a letter of introduction, as he wishes to leave his daughter, Carol, at the post, and to await letters of importance. The young captain assures the girl that she will soon become used to the peculiar ways of the natives. As the days pass, the young people become interested in each other. One day, the Captain has one of the servants whipped for stealing. The native in revenge conspires to kidnap Carol and sell her as a slave to a traveling band of Arabs. Soon after Mr. Calvin's departure for the interior, part of this plan is effected. Lieutenant Dagwell, learning of the abduction, hastens after the Captain and the girl's father. Meanwhile, Carol's captor is killed by a lion. The girl, pinioned in a hut, spends a night of horror, menaced by wild animals which try to enter. Just at daybreak the searching party approaches the hut, and a shot from the Captain's gun kills a lion, which has broken the door and is springing within.

Bill Bunks, the Bandit—FALSTAFF—DECEMBER 16.—The foreman and the ranch cook are in love with the ranch owner's daughter. The latter is disgusted with their attentions. One day the mail brings a copy of "The Matrimonial Fixer." This explains how, some time later, a rival for the girl's hand appears on the scene. How the Easterner defeats the desperados who lie in wait for him, makes a hit with the sheriff, and cuts a role of hero with his prospective bride, would be nothing short of miraculous to those who had known him in the days of the ribbon counter.

The Hold-Up Cub—DECEMBER 17.—Featuring George Ovey. In the beginning of this reel Bessie's mother "puts one over on" Jerry, her daughter's ardent lover. Some time later, however, Jerry saves Bessie's family from being robbed by a Mexican bandit, Cyclone Pete. This puts the hero in solid with father, but does not soften Mrs. Weston a bit. Pete is well on his way in accomplishing revenge at the country hotel, where Jerry and the Westons stop, when the police arrive and restore peace.

Spider Barlow's Soft Spot—AMERICAN—DECEMBER 17.—George Field is featured in this one-reel melodrama in the role of Spider Barlow, a burglar, a part that he has appeared in before. Spider and Spike—his pal—the night before Christmas note some urchins gazing fondly in a decorated window, and decide the youngsters shall have a Christmas worthy of richer children. They enter and ransack the home of the wealthy Perry family, and disguised in Santa Claus garb pass policemen unmolested. The youngsters of the slums have a merry Christmas indeed the following morning, and invite Spider and Spike to join them in such a dinner as they have never had before. Charles Bartlett directed the production.

N. G. C.

His Majesty the King—(THREE REELS)—THANHOUSER—DECEMBER 18.—Featuring the Thanhouser kidlets and Gladys Hulette. The young ruler, King Alfonso VII, is only a few months old. His uncle, the wicked Regent, usurps the kingdom. The baby king is saved by a young officer and the Lady of Honor and taken to a neighboring kingdom. The officer, however, is captured and taken back to the capital. The Regent at last finds out where the child is, and sends to have him slain. But with the help of the Lady of Honor and Princess Helen, the baby is again saved. Finally the followers of the rightful king, who have been secretly planning the Regent's downfall, gain ascendency over him.

Two Hearts and a Thief—BEAUTY—DECEMBER 18.—Frank Borzage and Neva Gerber are featured in this one-reel comedy directed by Jack Dillon. Jack Nelson and Neva Winters love one another, though Neva's father objects. When Jack is sent with a note from Mr. Winters to his brokers, he leaves by mistake a message intended for Neva, setting an hour for their elopement. As a result the broker returns the note to Mr. Winters, it reaching him after he thinks he is ruined by a fall in the stock market, of the stock which he had ordered his brokers to purchase in his original note. Jack's mistake saves his fortune, and Winters is so grateful that he consents to Ned's marriage, though Neva, who had been awaiting Jack to call for her, had been much embarrassed in climbing down a ladder she found, only to fall into the arms of a burglar, who was using the ladder to enter her home.

N. G. C.

Universal Program

The Three Jeannettes—(SPLIT REEL)—POWERS—DECEMBER 2.—A vaudeville act showing three agile and muscular gymnasts gowned in Dutch costume. Their act consists of tumbling, weight lifting and various other acrobatic tricks. The comedy is supplied by a little fox terrier who is a sort of Marceline character, managing to impede while attempting to assist. On the same reel is:

Life of the Salamander—An educational film taken under the direction of Raymond Ditmar, curator of the New York Zoo. In it the salamander is seen in all aspects, and its habits and method of hatching, etc., are given careful study.

Colonel Steele, Master Gambler—BIG U—DECEMBER 6.—In the village grocery store Colonel Steele, trying to make an impression on a young drummer who has just taught the village "cut-up" how to play craps, relates his life story. The later consists of how he saved a mine left to his friend's children from the hands of two scheming blacklegs. In it he sets forth how he was obliged to beat the men at their own game, and the thrilling experiences that followed in the wake of revenge. At the finish the young drummer is deeply moved and shows his admiration for such a brave man. His faith is rudely shaken, however, after Steele leaves. The storekeeper tells him that Steele is the biggest liar around there, and that he has never been outside his own country. As the drummer sheepishly leaves, Colonel Steele is seen at the rear of the store, absorbed in a lurid dime novel.

Universal Animated Weekly No. 196—UNIVERSAL—DECEMBER 8.—Ex-World's champion defeats famous Norse star in tennis, Long Beach, Calif.; the Governor of Texas visits Carranza on International Bridge at Laredo, Texas; Ways and Means Committee assembles for the opening of Congress at Washington, D. C.; thousands pay last tribute to Hillstrom, who was executed in Utah; Tennessee fox hunt at Columbia, Tenn.; women aid national defense, New York City, to obtain signatures to win Congress to "preparedness"; Lord Mayor's inaugural parade in London, England; memorial held for Nurse Cavell, London, England; Kitchener inspects 2,000 of London's volunteers; scenes from German front; Ford's peace pilgrims start for Europe in effort to end war; cartoons by Hy Mayer.

The Doomed Groom—L-KO—DECEMBER 9.—The groom is already late, and to make matters worse he encounters a beautiful lady while hurrying to the wedding. He gets in trouble with the latter's husband, who does not like to see strange men weeping on his wife's shoulder. The husband informs him that it will be healthier for him in another town and specifies the train on which he is to leave. On arriving at the bride's house the irate father makes it very plain that he had better remain in town. The groom fears the ill-tempered husband the most and tries to get away. But in doing so he runs afoul of both his persecutors. At last he decides on a slow death and has the ceremony rushed to a quick conclusion.

Slightly Mistaken—JOKER—DECEMBER 11.—Featuring Max Asher. Pa has two Susans in the house, one the cook and the other his daughter. The latter is saved by a brave sailor. After being made much of as a hero, the sailor accepts an invitation to visit the girl later. The cook's beau is also a hero and accepts a like invitation. The door to the cellar is under the icebox. The daughter goes thither and finds herself locked in by the careless cook. When "Blubber" Bill, the cook's sweetheart, arrives at the front door, he is taken by father for his daughter's rescuer and entertained. Meanwhile the daughter's hero comes in through the kitchen and starts a mild flirtation with the cook. By superhuman effort the daughter opens the cellar door, thus throwing the icebox upon the two. The family, hearing the crash, arrives; explanations are made, and the lovers are rightly sorted out.

Her Speedy Affair—NESTOR—DECEMBER 13.—With Billie Rhodes and Ray Gallagher. Billie is a speed maniac. When her father's secretary presents her with a diamond ring she converts it into cash, invests in stock and buys a racer with the proceeds. She runs circles around everything in the new racer. On the way home, Billie races another car in which is father. The latter is forced to allow her to retain the new car, but stipulates that she marry his secretary to hold her down.

Almost a Papa—IMP—DECEMBER 14.—King Baggot and Edna Hunter. While her traveling husband is out of town, his wife sells all of his old clothes and buys a dog. Receiving word that there is a new addition to the family, hubby returns with all possible speed. When he arrives at the house, his wife is at her mother's. Then hubby fixes up a nursery and makes all things ready. The man receives the jolt of his life when his wife at last discloses the contents of a clothes basket. There, in the eiderdown and silk, blinks up at him a cute little puppy. Later, taking his wife in his arms, he communicates to her that he has not given up all hope of some day becoming a real papa.

Blackmail in a Hospital—L-KO—DECEMBER 15.—The hospital patients love the beautiful nurse, but the latter has a sturdy admirer who sends them flying in all directions. Finally Cookie thrashes the muscular man until he is almost done for. His only chance for recovery is to have blood transfused into his veins, and the authorities offer $10 for a volunteer. A trustee has seen Cookie's rash act and demands $10 for hush money. Cookie gives his blood, but when the muscular one discovers the identity of his rescuer he forgets gratitude and beats him up.

The Bride of the Nancy Lee—(TWO REELS)—LAEMMLE—DECEMBER 16.—Featuring Myrtle Gonzales. Myrtle Fairchild is the daughter of a stern old sea captain. She is in love with Alden Whitaker but fears to marry him until the return of her father, who is on a long voyage. Jacob Kittle is also a suitor, but she repulses him. Finally she is married to Whitaker in secret, intending to be married publicly on the return of her father. When the old captain returns, Kittle plays his game of revenge, with the result that Captain Fairchild beats Whitaker, leaving him for dead, and then takes Myrtle off on a long voyage. Kittle embarks as a sailor. Months after there is a mutiny and the brutal captain and his mate are killed. Kittle and his men take charge of the boat and head it homeward. Reaching home, there is a wreck; Kittle is drowned and Myrtle and her child are saved from the black and wild tempest by Whitaker, who has ever been praying for her return.

The Widow's Secret—(TWO REELS)—VICTOR—DECEMBER 15.—Featuring Warren Kerrigan. Widow Rance is shocked one day when she first sees John Forrest, a millionaire, and an exact likeness of her dead husband. This makes her thoughts revert to the past. Her husband had died and left her and her child under the protection of Richard Harding. The latter had failed in his trust, and one day her little child was lost, and the widow lived on—alone. It develops that Mr. Forrest, the millionaire, is Mrs. Rance's son. At last he loses his fortune and his sweetheart throws him over. John is not left alone, however, for with him is the little mother who has always been true.

The Vacuum Test—IMP—DECEMBER 17.—Because his wife is much of the time with Robert Arnold, a former sweetheart, John Foster, an inventor and scholar, becomes jealous. At last, to put her to the test, he leaves home and returns unexpectedly. Instead of finding her in the embarrassing position that he anticipates, he is in time to capture a burglar. The latter's mistaking a vacuum apparatus for a safe nearly costs him his life, for Foster, thinking Arnold is hidden in the machine, begins to extract the air. In the midst of events, the wife screams that she is being delivered of her child. Foster is so excited, proud and pleased that he allows the thief to escape and forgets his suspicions against Arnold.

Where the Heather Blooms—(TWO REELS)—NESTOR—DECEMBER 17.—With Eddie Lyons and Betty Compson. Gordon McKay receives a letter from Scotland notifying him that it is the wish of a rich relative that he come to Scotland, marry the Lady Mary and become the owner of a vast estate. He leaves at once. Lady Mary, however, does not like the idea of marrying a stranger and persuades her mother to pose as Lady Mary while she impersonates a Highland lassie. Gordon realizes there is a drawback to the agreement when he sees the supposed Lady Mary, but he falls in love with the Highland lassie. After many adventures in the "haunted" castle and a thorough testing of Gordon's sincerity, the girl tells her real title and there is a happy reunion.

"BUILT BY BRAINS"

You Can't Show a Beautiful Film on a Poor Screen.

When you buy a Minusa Screen you don't merely buy it by the square foot. Minusa Screens are "BUILT BY BRAINS" to suit all the particular requirements of YOUR particular theatre.

Write for our literature

Minusa Cine Products Co.

St. Louis, Mo. Houser Building
Calgary, Canada Grand Theatre Bldg.
San Francisco 117-19 Golden Gate Ave.
New York 19 W. 23rd St.
Chicago 154 West Lake St.
Pittsburg 422 First Ave.

HEADQUARTERS FOR MOVING PICTURE CAMERAS TRIPODS PRINTERS, ETC.

PATHE, MOY & PRESTWICK GOODS, ALWAYS IN STOCK

MOTION PICTURE APPARATUS CO., INC.
810 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY, N.Y.

Mr. Exhibitor:

We can convince you that the

Bartola Orchestra

is superior to any other for your Theatre. Give us a chance. Write for catalogue.

Sold on Easy Terms

Bartola Musical Instrument Co.

Chas. C. Pyle, General Sales Agent
710-711 Mallers Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Factory: Oshkosh, Wisconsin

THE TALK OF THE MOTION PICTURE FIELD
Goes POSTERS
POST THEM AND PACK YOUR THEATRE
GOES—CHICAGO

His Real Character—(Two Reels)—Bison—December 18.—Richard Livingston, a wealthy cattle broker, in his earlier days had robbed his partner and made him a helpless cripple. The son of the cripple, Martin, has vowed to catch and wreak vengeance on his father's partner. Through Irene, Livingston's daughter, Martin (the son) learns that Livingston is the man he is after and starts out in a mad rage after him. Irene's brave and womanly efforts to save her father at last have effect on the brutal young Martin; she dissuades him from his idea of revenge, brings Martin and Livingston together and is successful in gaining the former's remission. Some time later the four leave for the city and a future which promises to atone for the past.

The Water Clue—Laemmle—December 18.—In the morning the door of the library is found locked and the butler finds his master's body inside. The investigation of the police develops the fact that the husband, wife, and a friend were in the room the night previous. Hot words ensued and the friend was ordered out of the house by the husband. As the butler is the chief witness, the friend is taken into custody. A detective, however, makes a clever discovery which leads to the conclusion that the man was killed by accident and not by human hands.

The Bachelor's Christmas—(Three Reels)—Rex—December 19.—Ben Wilson and Dorothy Phillips. Hugh Travers, a wealthy bachelor, is caused by his real estate agent to sign some papers in regard to the foreclosure of certain mortgages. Hugh, knowing little of business detail, signs the papers as a matter of course. Thus he is the cause of turning out Ruth Warren, a girl of eighteen, and her young sister and brother, children of the ages of four and eight, from their beautiful home. The three are forced to move into a flat, and Ruth obtains work in a chorus. Behind the scenes one night she meets Hugh. At Christmas time the children determine to do some shopping. Hugh meets the pair and accompanies them home. Ruth has lost her job because she is not the complacent kind required by the managers of the theater. Learning of the trouble that he has caused, Hugh makes good. He brings the children many toys and a Christmas tree, and it is apparent that not only will their beautiful home be returned to them, but that this will be Hugh's last bachelor Christmas.

Liquor and the Law—(Two Reels)—Episode No. 1 of "Graft"—Featuring Hobart Henley—December 13.—Dudley Larnigan's activities in trying to run a powerful graft trust to earth result in his mysterious death. His son, Bruce, swearing to avenge his father's death, determines to carry out his father's unfinished work. Murphy, head of the liquor trust, finally gets the young man into his den on the east side, either to make him commit himself to the service of the trust or to kill him. The fact that Dorothy, his sweetheart, is suspicious and notifies the police, saves Bruce, while Murphy is killed by mistake by one of his own thugs.

Feature Programs

Morosco

Jane—(Five Reels)—Morosco—A picturization of the well-known comedy featuring Charlett Greenwood and Sidney Grant. The supporting cast is headed by Forrest Stanley and Myrtle Stedman. Jane, the maid, and William, the butler, keep their marriage a secret. Their employer, a gay bachelor, writes his uncle that he needs an increase in his allowance because he is now married. When the uncle pays Shackleton a visit he induces Jane to play the part of his wife, which leads to several complications, but all ends well. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Mutual Master-Pictures

The Buzzard's Shadow—(Five Reels)—American—December 9.—Featuring Harold Lockwood and May Allison. The story of an army scout and a young widow, who makes a livelihood for herself and daughter by washing and cooking for the soldiers of the camp. The scout is sent across the desert and through the workings of Dr. Deschamps and Unitah, a half-breed, he nearly loses his life. However, after some trouble he returns to claim the widow as his wife. For a longer review see another page of this issue. J. C. G.

The Mill on the Floss—(Five Reels)—Thanhouser—December 16.—The Tullivers have owned "The Mill on the Floss" for generations, and there is a tradition that if the mill, instead of passing from father to son, is sold to another family the Floss will overflow its banks and destroy the mill. Mr. Wakem, a lawyer, finally gets the mill into his hands through trickery. Realizing that his family must be cared for, the miller consents to work for Wakem. Tulliver's last wish is that Tom, his son, shall buy back the mill. This Tom does soon after. Maggie, Tom's sister, has two suitors: Philip, the crippled son of Wakem, and Stephen Guest, the handsome son of a wealthy farmer. Stephen asks her hand in marriage, although he has already pledged himself to another girl. Gossip does its deadly work and finally Maggie is ordered from the house by her brother, Tom. Stephen, who has gone abroad, writes to his relatives, vindicating her. Realizing that it is best for both suitors to pass out of her life, Maggie's prayer is for the restoration of her brother's love. The next day the Floss overflows. Maggie makes a brave effort to save Tom, but the current is too strong for them. Some hours later their bodies are found in the wreckage in a close embrace.

A Man's Making—(Five Reels)—V. L. S. E.—December 6.—Produced by Lubin under the direction of Jack Pratt and featuring Richard Buhler and Rosetta Brice. The story tells of a young man who determines to make his own way in the world, when his father approaches him for his extravagance and mode of living. He becomes a member of the crew of a fishing boat and later grasps his opportunity to organize the fishermen and fight a trust which tries to force down the prices in the market. In the end he is reunited with his father and marries the daughter of his captain, Lem Haskins. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Pathe

Apples and Egg-Beaters—(Two Reels)—Pathe.—Tenth episode of the "Wallingford" series, featuring Burr McIntosh, Lolita Robertson and Max Figman. Slookum, another member of the swindling clique, receives a visit from J. Rufus Wallingford and Blackie Daw. The latter is introduced as the greatest salesman of egg-beaters in the world. Pushman, the inventor and manufacturer of the egg-beaters, is in debt to Slookum, who presses him for payment of the note. Pushman's business suddenly becomes very prosperous, and Slookum grows curious. He bribes Violet and Fanny, the office girls, with candy to allow him to glance over the books of the company. The books have been "treated" by Wallingford, so Slookum is certain after looking them over that Pushman's share is worth $60,000, which he pays. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

The Greater Will—(Five Reels)—Pathe—December 10.—Years ago Peggy Sloane, only daughter of old Cornelius Sloane, met a millionaire named Stuart Watson and was prevailed by his hypnotic power to go through a marriage ceremony with him. A week passed and she returned, broken in spirit and body. Later, when her baby was born, she died. One night, while playing chess, old Sloane learns of the return to America of this man Watson and resolves to be revenged. Accordingly, it is arranged to have Watson come to the house of the old man. Watson tries to subject Sloane to his hypnotic will, but the latter, by his superior will-power, rejects Watson. Coming out of the trance, Watson is told that every night at eleven o'clock a vision will appear to him. It so transpires, and later, driven to despair by the awful apparition, he takes an overdose of drugs and dies. Thus the Professor feels his revenge is complete. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

The Red Circle—(Two Reels)—Pathe-Balboa—December 18.—First episode of this new Pathe serial written by H. M. Horkheimer and Will M. Ritchey. Ruth Roland and Frank Mayo are featured. Max Lamar, a private detective, follows "Circle" Jim Borden, a notorious crook, to his hiding place. Borden exhibits the red circle on his left hand and informs the detective that both he and his worthless son will be a menace to society no longer as he is prepared to kill his son and himself. He tells the detective that he will kill him first. In the struggle Borden is killed and the son dies as planned by his father. The next day Lamar sees the hand of a lady resting on the door of her automobile and is surprised to note that it is marked by the red circle. As the car moves away he takes the license number. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

Triangle Program

Released Week of December 12.

Aloha Oe—(Five Reels)—Triangle-Kay Bee.—Featuring Willard Mack and Enid Markey in the story of a brilliant, but dissipated lawyer who becomes a worshipped member of a South Sea Island. He soon tires of the idyll-like life and returns to civilization, but when passing a restaurant he hears the song of "Aloha Oe" (Farewell) and then returns to the life he left among the palms and flowers. For a longer review see page 1079 of the issue of November 20.

The Lily and the Rose—(Five Reels)—Fine Arts.—Lillian Gish, Rozsika Dolly and Wilfred Lucas in a story of a girl who is called the Lily and is introduced to a man whom she later marries. He gradually tires of the girl and meets a sensational dancer, the Rose, who he finds to be shallow and fickle, but all too late as his wife has secured a divorce. For a longer review see page 1079 of the issue of November 20.

The Village Scandal—(Two Reels)—Triangle-Keystone.—Featuring Raymond Hitchcock and Roscoe Arbuckle in a story of a village fat boy who wins the affections of the village belle. A traveling trickster appears on the scene and wins the girl away from the fat boy. Later he sees the two laughing at him and turns the hose on them. For a longer review see page 1079 of the issue of November 20.

The Great Vacuum Robbery—(Two Reels)—Triangle-Keystone.—Featuring Charles Murray, Harry Booker and Louise Fazenda in the story of the robbery of a bank by means of a vacuum cleaning outfit. The man who gains access to the cashier's cage is followed by a couple of dime-novel detectives. Later when they disguise themselves as an old woman and the other as a tough and register at the hotel much excitement follows. For a longer review see pages 1241-1242 of the December 11 issue of Motography.

V. L. S. E. Inc.

A Daughter of the City—(Five Reels)—Essanay—December 20.—Marguerite Clayton and a strong cast featured in the story of a young and beautiful girl, who is a typical daughter of the city, and through her mother's aspirations for her future falls into the hands of a rich old man, but is saved from his clutches just in time to be happily reunited with her boyhood sweetheart. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

World

The Labyrinth—(Five Reels)—Equitable-World—December 13.—Gail Kane is featured as Flo Burke, the popular actress, who does not deny the rumor that she has been killed in the railroad accident which causes the death of her lame sister. Later the theatrical manager learns that Flo Burke is alive and is now the wife of the Reverend Fenton. To the minister she poses as Flo's sister. Morse threatens to expose Flo if she will not return to the stage. In a struggle with the butler, who has come to the assistance of his mistress, Morse is accidentally killed. Flo's happiness is complete when she learns that her husband knew the truth from the beginning. For a longer review see another page of this issue.

SOME NEW THEATERS

Arkansas.

O. C. Hauber, owner of the Amuse-U theater in Pine Bluff, has secured a ten-year lease on the Simmons building at Second and Pine streets, and will spend $10,000 remodeling it for a motion picture theater. Work on the remodeling will start at once and the theater will probably be ready for opening March 1. The new house will be a modern one and in addition to a commodious lower floor the theater will have a balcony with entrance on Pine street, to be used for negroes. The capacity of the house will be 1,200.

California.

W. D. Walker, formerly of Chico, and George E. Duke, former secretary of the United States Feature Film company of Oroville and Chico, have incorporated the Golden State Film company with a capital stock of $53,000. The company's place of business is in San Francisco. Walker and Duke recently were handling the Evans and Sontag film The Folly of a Life of Crime.

One of the most important business deals of the year in Oak Park was consummated November 18 when Mrs. C. Siebert took over the interest of Lester Foster and George Bilby in the Princess moving picture theater on Thirty-fifth street. Mrs. Siebert assumed the management of the show house on the following Sunday.

The free motion picture shows put on by the business houses of Chowchilla are drawing well each Saturday afternoon and evening.

Colorado.

E. D. Marquand has become the sole owner of the Isis theater in Longmont, purchasing the half interest of W. O. Fuller.

By the terms of a lease which has just been signed the historic Tabor opera house in Denver has passed into the control of an Eastern company which will run the famous old amusement house as a motion picture theater exclusively. The company which has taken over the Tabor is the Denver Amusement company, composed almost entirely of men identified with the big theatrical enterprises of the East. Peter McCourt is the only local man who is interested in the company. The president of the new concern is John P. Harris of Pittsburg, a member of the Davis & Harris Theatrical company. I. Lisbon of Cincinnati is vice president and the secretary and treasurer is B. L. Heidingsfeld, a Cincinnati attorney, who has long been identified with amusement enterprises. The date for opening has not been announced.

Connecticut.

The Grand theater, Middletown, which has just been completed at a cost of about $50,000, opened November 24. The house will be given over to moving pictures and vaudeville. It has a seating capacity of 1,125, including a gallery for 300 persons. The theater is built in the rear of the Donovan property on Main street, connection being had by a lobby seventy feet long. The proprietor is Salvatore Adorno. Mr. Adorno plans to have a six-piece orchestra in connection with the theater.

District of Columbia.

Announcement that Washington is to have a new theater has been made by Marcus Loew, manager of Loew's Columbia, who is in the city on business connected with the new enterprise. The seating capacity will be greater than that of any theater in the city. The plans are in the hands of the architect, and the building may be erected during the coming summer on the F. street site. The structure is to be thoroughly modern in its adaptation to comfort and convenience in film presentation. Excessive patronage, far in advance of what manager Loew had anticipated, has made this new building necessary.

Florida.

The Eagle Film Manufacturing and Producing company, through its president and general director, who are now in the city, is making a bid for a location in Jacksonville or its environs, and it is possible that a definite conclusion will be reached. A. S. Roe of Chicago, president, and H. A. Kelly, manager of the company, had several conferences with real estate owners preparatory to making their decision. They plan to have the largest motion picture producing concern in the South, as well as a plant where the film prints are made. A variety of subjects will be used in the repertoire of their productions.

Illinois.

Work on the new Photoplay house which is being erected by Herman Rigg in Walnut, is nearing completion. The front of the theater is now practically completed and is of a brown matt brick, with a rough finish like stucco and the beautiful archway, have a most inviting appearance. It is expected to be ready before Christmas.

The new Spencer Square theater opened Thanksgiving. The style of architecture of the Italian renaissance period has been carried out. The owners of the house have spent $10,000 on interior decorations. At the front of the theater there are two fountains which are lighted by hidden lights and the water sparkles with all colors of the rainbow. Just above the fountains are two life-sized statues designed by a leading sculptor from Chicago. The theater has a seating capacity of 1,000, the seats being very roomy and the rows are placed far enough apart that there is no crowding.

Bodkin & Keane, proprietors of the Star and Grand theaters, have added another picture house to their Evanston chain. They have closed a deal for the Main street house, to be known in the future as the Triangle. The Grand has closed its doors for a short time, while the decorators have full charge.

The opera chairs for the Garden theater which is being rapidly completed in Canton, have arrived and will be installed immediately. The work is being rushed on the new motion picture house and it is expected to have it ready for the opening not later than the tenth or fifteenth of December.

Fire in the LeGrand motion picture theater at 5241 North Clark street, Chicago, early December 6, threatened the entire block of business houses with living apartments above, the smoke driving flat dwellers and patrons of the stores to the number of almost a hundred, in a panic to the street. Crossed wires was given as the cause. Damage $1,000.

Indiana.

The Palace moving picture show, managed by W. H. Sawyer, on West Market street, Buffton, has been closed.

John Day, a well known theater man of Muncie, has leased the New Irvin theater in Winchester. Mr. Day has changed the name of the theater to the Orpheum.

Iowa.

C. E. Thompson has sold the Glidden motion picture theater in Tabor to Homer Boatright.

The workmen are pushing the work on the New Orpheum theater as rapidly as possible which will be a credit to Maquoketa when completed.

The Princess theater, Cedar Rapids, which has been undergoing extensive repairs, is now resplendent in its new decorations and patrons of this cosy little house will find it on a par with the more pretentious places.

Kansas.

A committee of women has taken charge of the opera house at Blue Rapids and propose to run first class pictures.

More than a thousand school children from Peabody and the surrounding community attended the first penny moving picture put on in Peabody November 19, under the auspices of the Peabody club women, and the child welfare contest association.

The Elite theater in Ellsworth has installed a new machine.

J. E. Beadle of Barnard has arranged to have a motion picture show in Tipon every Sunday night.

Kentucky.

Louisville's first moving picture show house in a strictly residential section of the city will be erected at the southeast corner of Second and A streets within a short time. A syndicate headed by Aaron Kohn, Walter I. Kohn and Col. J. J. Douglas, have purchased the vacant lot at that corner and expect to have the new building completed within ninety days.

Maine.

The Technicolor Motion Picture Corporation has been incorporated in Portland, to manufacture and deal in moving picture machines, appliances and supplies, with an authorized capital stock of $150,000. E. P. Thompson is treasurer and E. C. Ramsdell, secretary. The directors are R. S. Almeder and E. C. Ramsdell of Boston; P. E. Coyle and C. A. Hight of Brookline; E. P. Thompson, Arlington, Mass., and E. T. Sheehan and H. P. Sweetser of Portland.

Maryland.

The Walbrook Amusement company, Baltimore, has asked bids on the construction of a moving picture theater to cost about $25,000. J. E. Lafferty is the architect and the building will be of brick, two stories high, 50 by 121 feet.

Massachusetts.

H. A. Appleton of Boston, who conducts picture houses in Quincy, Woburn and Marblehead, has bought the New theater building on the Richardson lot at Wakefield, from Brooker & Glazer, the builders, at Wakefield.

Michigan.

The Orpheum motion picture house, Kalamazoo, changed hands recently when P. C. Schram and P. F. Marquette purchased the theater from the Kalamazoo Amusement company. It is the intention of the new owners to make extensive alterations in the near future.

Ohio.

The Ohio theater was formally opened to the patrons of Alliance, November 17. The theater is nicely arranged and seats about three hundred. It is managed by Mr. Tender.

The Dreamland theater in Marysville has installed a new machine.

The Columbia Film Manufacturing company, Cleveland, increase $10,000 to $15,000.

Massillon's new picture show, the Lincoln, has been opened by F. C. Kelly.

Miss Mary Barchard, of Columbus, recently became unofficially a state moving picture censor because of the illness of C. G. Williams, chairman of the board of censors. The board assigned Miss Barchard, who is chief clerk in the department, to the work of reviewing films after eliminations have been made.

Two picture machines and seven reels of film were destroyed by a fire in the operator's booth of the Orpheum theater, owned by Harry Paley, 8914 Wade Park avenue, Cleveland.

The Cambridge and Marietta Amusement company has opened the Strand theater in Cambridge. The theater cost $40,000.

Reserve Photo Plays company, Cleveland; $250,000; manufacturing and dealing in photographic films for projection on screen and exhibition of same; C. L. Warson, John Ray, Robert H. McLaughlin, M. E. Beckwith, Samuel Doerfler, Samuel T. Haas.

Rialto Amusement company, Akron. Increase from $500 to $25,000.

Oklahoma.

Ozark Film company, Tulsa. Incorporators: C. C. Rayl, J. A. Shogren, A. B. McFarlane, R. B. McFarlane and Earl Sneed of Tulsa. Capital stock, $15,000.

Oregon.

Management of the Vining theater in Ashland has been taken over by O. T. Bergner, of Portland.

Pennsylvania.

To Scully & Walsh, 1602 North Tenth street, Philadelphia. Moving picture theater (alterations), 1651-53 North Eighth street. For G. H. Ladner. Cost, $300.

Israel Krohn, manager of the Star theater, Easton, has taken a lease on the Neumeyer theater and will run feature pictures until the improvements to the building are begun next summer by the owner, John H. Neumeyer. Mr. Krohn will continue to manage the Star theater, which is owned by his father, Morris Krohn.

William G. Fisher, deputy state factory inspector, has ordered the Coover and Bubb's moving picture theater in Middleburg closed. It is alleged that the safety laws were not observed.

With forty cases of diphtheria in the Mountain City, Hazleton school board directed the closing of the schools for ten days and the city authorities shut up the nickelets and theaters for an equal period.

The Jewel theater, Palmerton, has been closed by state inspectors for lack of safety appliances.

H. L. Roberts, theater, to cost $650, southeast corner Lambert and Race streets, Philadelphia.

Thomas D. Hill, secretary and treasurer of the Union Amusement Association, which conducts a moving picture theater at 2711-13-15 Germantown avenue, Philadelphia, has filed suit against his partners, David J. Miller and William J. Smith, asking for the appointment of a receiver.

The Chestnut street opera house in Philadelphia is now given over to pictures.

Glen Jackson, who has managed the Euclid moving picture show in Reading for the past several months, has resigned and the owner, D. M. Wagner, is now conducting the place.

Forty-nine motion picture exhibitors, representing an investment of $3,000,000, met at Tamaqua and organized the Exhibitors' League, of Eastern Pennsylvania.

Frank P. Boyer has purchased the Ideal moving picture theater, 1216 Eighth avenue, Altoona.

Robert Ritchey and Emory Diehl of Blue Knob, are putting a moving picture show in the store room formerly occupied by J. M. Dibert of Claysburg.

A new moving picture theater for West Pittston is now being planned by T. H. Atherton, Jr., architect, and it is understood that the promoters have in mind a chain of similar theaters for the prosperous small towns in this vicinity. Morris & Rice, of the Second National Bank building, are promoting the scheme and W. C. Brenton, county commissioner, is one of those interested. The first theater, the one now being planned, will be built on the Carr property, Luzerne avenue, just off Wyoming avenue, West Pittston. It will have a seating capacity of about 600 persons, will have a terra cotta front, modern ventilating apparatus, concrete floors and will be fireproof in construction.

Rhode Island.

The What Cheer Film company, Oakland Beach, $100,000. Frank O. Lambert, Ben L. Robinson, both of Providence; William A. Connell, Pawtucket; manufacture motion picture films.

South Dakota.

The management of the Deadwood and Pastime theaters, Deadwood, has passed into the hands of H. B. Hurst, of Chadron.

Texas.

Five motion picture shows in Dallas were ordered closed for repairs November 11, to comply with the law for safety against fires. The order was issued by city authorities following an inspection by deputies from the state fire marshal's office and by city inspectors.

Harold C. Norfleet became the owner of the Dixie theater, Houston, November 6, having purchased same from Wicks & Company.

The down-stair room in the Masonic building, at the corner of Washington and Hefferman streets, Beeville, will be occupied, when the extension and renovations are completed, by a modern picture show. E. C. Robertson and J. T. Craddock, of Winnsboro, experienced picture show men, have leased the building for a period of five years, and will install a modern outfit in every respect. They have been advised by the contractors that the building will be ready for occupancy within three weeks.

Virginia.

November 22 the Bijou theater, Richmond, which has been running stock, will change to motion pictures. Jake Wells will install the Triangle films and will give two performances daily. A symphony orchestra of fifteen pieces will be a feature.

Granby Picture company, Incorporated, Norfolk. Maximum, $15,000; minimum, $5,000. Moving picture business. C. C. Jones, president; W. I. Priest, secretary and treasurer, both of Norfolk.

The Village Amusement Corporation, Hopewell, Va. Maximum, $5,000; minimum, $1,000; par value, $10. Moving picture business. J. M. Luke, president, City Point, Va.; Paul F. Barringer, secretary, Petersburg, Va.

Arrow Film Corporation, Richmond. Capital, $350,000. Moving picture business. W. W. Crump, president, of Richmond; Albert F. LeVine, secretary, of New York.

The new Virginia theater on Granby street, near Freemason, Norfolk, is well under way. The building is being erected for the Arcadia Realty company and measures 60x160 feet, and will cost about $27,000.

Washington.

E. L. Davenport, who is well known to Tacoma photoplay fans as the manager of local picture houses, has secured the exclusive control and management of the Liberty theater and will show the Triangle program.

West Virginia.

There was a slight blaze in the Park theater, Moundsville, the wood on the under side of the floor having caught fire from a pipe leading to the hot air heating furnace.

The Fenray theater on South Fourth street, Harper's Ferry, will be opened to the public about December 20. Work is being rushed.

Wisconsin.

The Unique theater on Main street, Waukesha, one of the first motion picture houses in this city, has been leased for two years by the Frellson Amusement company to the Unique Theater company, which will be managed by Charles C. Frellson. Exterior improvements will be made.

F. J. McWilliams has opened his picture show at West avenue and Jackson street, La Crosse.

M. E. Burns and A. J. Fraser, of Milwaukee, have asumed the management of the Crystal theater in Sturgeon Bay.

December 1 the new Hall theater in Readstown was opened. J. Willard Hall is the owner.

MOTOGRAPHY

The MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

EDWIN ARDEN
WITH
PATHE

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
DEC
18
1915
PERIODICAL DIVISION

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, DECEMBER 25, 1915 No. 26

LUBIN

Monday December 20th 1915
Beginning
The LUBIN-UNIT PROGRAM

THIS FIVE REEL UNIT

The Dainty Lubin Star

JUNE DAYE

in

Daniel Carson Goodman's original photo-drama of the shadows and sunshines of life in four acts

HEARTACHES

Produced by Joseph Kaufman

and

THE D. L. DON COMEDY

OTTO'S CABARET

in one act

Produced by Edwin McKim

FULL FEATURE QUALITY IN REGULAR SERVICE---BOOK THROUGH GENERAL FILM EXCHANGES

GENERAL FILM LUBIN RELEASES

Triangle Plays Make the Steady Patron

If you have fixed charges it is but reasonable to wish fixed returns to set off against these. A profit one week and a loss the next is unsatisfactory. What is needed is to turn the occasional patron into a steady patron. Steady patrons spell profits.

Satisfaction based upon value received—every time—produces steady patrons. The steady, week after week buyer of theater seats is the source of a balance on the right side of the bank book. You need that balance.

TRIANGLE PLAYS furnish satisfaction. They are based on superior quality. TRIANGLE Quality is coming to have an exact significance in the motion picture world. It means what "sterling means to silverware." You can bank on it. Its magic transforms the man or woman who "drop in" into "regulars."

Emerson said that if a man but made a better mousetrap than any other man the world would crowd its way to him. We believe that TRIANGLE PLAYS are the best motion picture plays that can be produced, and the world is discovering it. Moreover, it is paying cash for the discovery. It is clamoring in the lobbies of theaters where TRIANGLE PLAYS are shown.

There is much proof that TRIANGLE PLAYS bring increased box office returns. The only question that remains is—

Do you want more profits?

TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION
71 WEST 23rd ST NEW YORK

A stirring moment in the Centaur star feature "The Mystery of Carter Breene" featuring Crane Wilbur and Celia Santon.

MOTOGRAPHY

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED THE NICKELODEON

Vol. XIV CHICAGO, DECEMBER 25, 1915 No. 26

Mutual Announces New Feature Service

THREE MASTERPICTURES WEEKLY

THREE Mutual Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition every week—each in five reels. An additional three-reel feature for the Mutual's $8,000,000 program—a total of three 3-reel features a week.

These are the high lights in an announcement of new and important increase in the output of the Mutual Film Corporation, just issued from the New York offices by President John R. Freuler. This extraordinary development gives the Mutual a total of six multiple reel feature releases a week—the largest feature output of any releasing organization in the world today.

"Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition" is a re-cast of the established title-name of "Masterpicture." The change has been made to give the new name a meaning to cover and convey the exceptionally high standard of quality which, it is claimed, will characterize these coming features of 1916.

"Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition" will be released beginning the week of January 17, 1916. They will be most unusual in character—powerful picturizations of famous plays, world-famed books and works of fiction, and original scenarios by the most noted authors. Big increases in productive capacity have been made by the large group of manufacturers represented in the Mutual group. A large number of stars, famed in stageland and screenland have been put under contract for work in the array of additional companies which have been organized by the Mutual manufacturers. Studios have been built and new facilities for the printing, handling and shipment of film have been added. Work of preparation for the announcement just made has been quietly under way for months.

"I am speaking with a properly conservative estimate of values when I declare that this is the biggest development that has come in the history of the motion picture industry," President Freuler observed.

"It is part of the obvious destiny of this corporation and for what it stands in the motion picture business. While our announcement may and probably does come as a surprise in many quarters, it yet stands for just what any thoughtful student of the industry might have forecast. The vast increase in the Mutual output is the expression of a carefully evolved plan to meet the ever developing demands for the higher quality, the better pictures, the more appealing entertainment that is the continuously advancing goal of Mutual effort.

"When a few months ago we announced the new $8,000,000 Mutual program and thereupon proceeded to deliver it as an all-star, all-feature product, we found the exhibitors of the nation ready and anxious to receive it. It won the recognition and approval of the best exhibitors, the wisest buyers of film entertainment. We were not content merely with that announcement and the resulting product. It will be recalled that not long ago I was at some pains to tell the exhibitors of this country that the Mutual never would be done growing, that Mutual service was and would always remain a thing alive, virile, active. That is just what the announcement of today means—just another great big long stride ahead.

"But it is a well measured stride. We know where we are stepping and where we are going. The exhibitor can be sure that all of the great resources of the Mutual Film Corporation and its group of manufacturers are carefully aligned behind this new step in better, bigger film service. Every exhibitor can know that we deliver—that we can do, and do do, everything that we announce—that the product which appears with the Mutual name on it has to be of that high standard which makes it positively a box office guaranty.

"Our basic idea is to give the exhibitor the highest efficiency in picture service. That is what this move represents. It is just incidentally true that to do this it has been necessary for us to increase our releases to the point which gives us the biggest weekly feature schedule. Quality and efficiency rather than mere magnitude are our aims. It is a commercial coincidence that efficiency brings us to this vast volume.

"It is quite proper at this time, too, to direct the exhibitor's attention to the fact that the Mutual now has sixy-eight exchanges in the United States and Canada, all so located as to give the maximum of immediate service to each territory. We are taking the great facilities of the Mutual Film Corporation as close to the theater as possible."

Among the new Mutual Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition, in the release schedule now immediately ahead are:

"Silas Marner"—George Eliot's famous book, featuring Frederic Warde; "The Other Side of the Door"—Lucia Chamberlain's famous novel, featuring Harold Lockwood; "Vengeance Is Mine!"—featuring Crane Wilbur; "The Bait"—featuring William Clifford and Betty Hart; "The Idol of the Stage"—featuring Malcolm Williams; "The Five Faults of Flo"—featuring Florence LaBadie; "Lord Loveland Discovers America"—featuring Arthur Maude and Constance Crawley, and "As a Woman Sows"—featuring Gertrude Robinson.

IMPORTANT COURT DECISION

Motion Pictures of an Open Air Event May Be Taken by Anyone Holding a Ticket, Says Supreme Court Justice Philbin

A decision that will be of great interest to film manufacturers, particularly those who maintain "animated weeklies" of current events, was handed down by Justice Philbin in the Supreme Court in New York City the other day, which was to the effect that anybody, who has the price of a ticket of admission, may go to any public exhibition of an open air event and take all the moving pictures he desires.

Chester Norton, on an assigned claim of John Smith and the Sheepshead Bay Speedway Corporation, was asking for an injunction to restrain the Universal Film Manufacturing Company from exhibiting a film of the Astor Cup Races, held at the Sheepshead Bay track on October 9, last.

According to the papers, Smith made an agreement with the Speedway Corporation for the "exclusive rights" to chronicle that event in moving picture form. Imagine his surprise and chagrin, therefore, when he discovered, before his film was ready for presentation, that the Universal had "beaten him to it," in the language of the poet, and released about one hundred feet of the film in its "Animated Weekly."

Smith assigned his claim to Norton, who immediately filed an application for an injunction, alleging the Universal had flattened both Smith's prospects and pocketbook through its "unkind" action, said "unkindness" consisting in the taking of the picture, although detectives were watching the grounds to forestall just such an occurrence.

The defendant made a cross motion for judgment on the pleadings, on the ground that the complaint failed to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Justice Philbin also granted this motion.

In his decision, the court says: "The suggestion that the facts alleged show a breach of a contract, made when the defendant's employees became licensed spectators of the exhibition, and violated an implied obligation arising under such contract, cannot be sustained.

"The complaint expressly negatives any such claim when it sets forth that said employees entered the grounds without the knowledge and consent of the plaintiffs. The complaint fails to set forth a cause of action either upon the theory of common-law copyright or unfair competition."

Smith's agreement with the Speedway Corporation provided that, in consideration for giving him the "exclusive privilege" to the pictures of the cup race, he would turn over to the corporation one-fourth of his gross profits from the enterprise.

Vera Michelena Signs with Ocean

Following its successive announcement of purchasing the rights to standard dramatic productions, and popular novels for photoplay adaptations and the signing up of legitimate stage stars to appear in its future releases, the Ocean Film Corporation announces a long term contract with Miss Vera Michelena, who has heretofore resisted the lure of the screen.

The Ocean Film Corporation's offer appeared so attractive to Miss Michelena, as to cause her to reject all other offers and enter into a contract with that company. Miss Michelena is the daughter of Fernando Michelena, the famous tenor of the old Tivoli in San Francisco, and her father and sister, Beatriz Michelena, need no introduction to the theatrical and photoplay world. Miss Michelena was the prima donna for Ziegfeld Follies, and has had altogether rather a remarkable career. Her mother was a French actress.

She made her debut on the stage in New York at the age of 15, in the comic opera "Princess Chic," and at the age of 16 was promoted to stardom and was billed as "the youngest musical comedy star in the world;" later she appeared in the "Soul Kiss," "Girl in the Train," "Alma, Where Do You Live," and "The Lost Chord."

Her first production with the Ocean Film Corporation will form the third release of two five-part features a month, commencing January 15, 1916.

To Make Talking Pictures

Frederick W. Blanchard, a prominent Los Angeles business and club man, and president of the municipal art commission, last week purchased the Kallum talking picture plant at Edendale, Los Angeles, and announces that on that site he will erect a studio and film plant at an approximate cost of $200,000, for the purpose of producing phono films, which he explains are perfected talking motion pictures.

In an interview with a representative of a Los Angeles newspaper Mr. Blanchard said: "I shall combine what is high-brow with what is popular, combine the arts and public amusement. I intend to produce grand opera with the greatest opera stars of the world making the films and the records. In my new studio we will produce entire plays and operas with words and music perfectly synchronized with the films.

"Through the deal I have just finished, I have gained absolute control of phono films all over the country, and I anticipate making Los Angeles the home of one of the greatest film companies in the world. A number of very prominent Los Angeles capitalists are in the deal with me and interested in this company, but I cannot announce their names for another week."

Petrova to Remain in Films

Announcement is made this week that Lawrence Weber, president of the Popular Plays and Players, has signed a long time contract with Mme. Petrova to appear exclusively in Metro feature productions. Under the new arrangements Mme. Petrova will practically abandon the speaking stage entirely and devote all her time to the making of motion pictures.

Mme. Petrova has met with remarkable success since she made her debut in the silent drama. Critics have declared her to be even better in motion pictures than she was on the spoken stage. The Petrova pictures have proved to be among the most attractive productions on the Metro program, and there is an ever-increasing demand for them. Mme. Petrova is now working in the big five-part feature, "What Will People Say?", which will be the next release in which this inimitable emotional actress is starred. Among Mme. Petrova's recent Metro productions are "My Madonna," "The Vampire," and "The Heart of a Painted Woman."

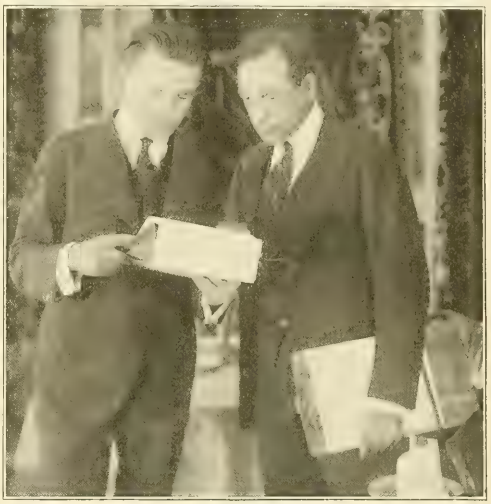
PATHE SECURES SAVAGE PLAYS

Henry W. Savage, the Famous Theatrical Producer, to Release Through Pathe Such Famous Successes as "Madame X" and "Excuse Me"

Right on top of the announcement of the acquisition by Pathe of the A. H. Woods plays comes the news that the same house has purchased the rights to Henry W. Savage's great list of theatrical successes. Mr. Savage has to his credit some of the most popular productions of the time, and two at least, "Madame X" and "Excuse Me" hold records as being the most successful drama and farce respectively of recent years. "Everywoman" also has made a great name for itself.

These two plays have already been filmed under the direction of George F. Marion, who originally produced them, and who has been Mr. Savage's chief producer for the past fifteen years. Practically the entire original casts were used in these pictures, Dorothy Donnelly starring in "Madame X" and George F. Marion in "Excuse Me." Both pictures will be placed upon Pathe's Gold Rooster Program in the near future. "Madame X," which was written by Alexander Bisson, enjoyed the tremendous run of seven seasons, and for eighteen weeks in New York played to an average of $20,000 weekly. It proved to be as popular on tour as it was in the metropolis, and many theater managers remember it as the biggest attraction they ever played. It will be released in six parts. "Excuse Me" ran for four seasons, a phenomenal record for a comedy-drama. It was written by Rupert Hughes and will be released in five parts.

Among the other famous Savage productions which before long may be seen in pictures are "The Shogun," "Little Boy Blue," "The Sultan of Sulu," "King Dodo," "Maids of Athens," "Woodland," "Somewhere Else," "Peggy from Paris," and the "Prince of Pilsen" (operas), and "Common Sense Brackett." "Behold Thy Wife," "Along Came Ruth," "The Stolen Story," and "Miss Patsy" (dramas).



Mr. Savage was (and is) one of Boston's most prominent business men before embarking in the theatrical business. It is said that it was by mere accident that he went into it. If true, it was a lucky accident for the amusement world, for he applied to his new business the same high principles that won him fame in a more commercial calling.

As a result of this deal Pathe becomes so strongly fortified with photoplay material as almost to be classed as a monopolist in the possession of stage successes.

Two Notable Young Men

These two young men, Anthony P. Kelly and Edwin Carewe are said to be today receiving the largest salaries paid to men of their ages for their respective kinds of work. While both worked hard and intelligently for several years, it was through the same great feature that they really "arrived." This was "The Soul of a Woman," written by Kelly and produced by Carewe for the Rolfe-Metro with Emily Stevens as the star. On the strength of this picture Carewe was handed a new contract with the Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., at a princely salary, and Kelly became the chief scenario writer for Lubin, at what probably is the highest annual stipend paid to any salaried writer for the screen. His income from this and his royalities from his stage and screen compositions will top $40,000 in the next twelve months. He is 23 years old.

Both are products of the West. Kelly is a Chicago boy, and the son of a well-known contractor of that city. He was educated in the Roman Catholic academies there and his first job was as a reporter on the Chicago Examiner. He went to Los Angeles and there came in contact with the motion picture studios which abound in that section. Carewe is one-fourth Chickasaw Indian and was born in Texas. He was a cow-puncher and an actor before he became a film director. He has directed some of the most prominent stage stars in the pictures, including Ethel Barrymore, Emily Stevens, Mabel Taliaferro, E. J. Connelly, J. Cooper Cliff, Walter Hitchcock, Percy Standing and Mahlin Hamilton.

Anthony Kelly and Edwin Carewe reading the script of "The Soul of a Woman."

Changes in V. L. S. E. Forces

Announcement is made that C. E. Shurtleff, formerly of the Atlanta office of the Big Four, has been transferred to Detroit, to take charge of the subbranch office in that city, which is under the supervision of Sydney E. Abel, manager of the Cleveland office.

Mr. Shurtleff has made a very enviable record by his work in the south, being consistently toward the top of the list in the efficiency tables, grading the work of the sales force of the V. L. S. E. as a whole.

Another addition to the Big Four's constantly increasing sales organization is that of Allan J. Bachrach, who will be attached to the Washington subbranch office, and will work in North Carolina and Virginia. Mr. Bachrach was a former exhibitor, who made quite a name for himself by reason of his advanced methods while manager of the Washington house of the Brylawski chain of theaters.

Mr. Bachrach entered the sales field of the industry when he became affiliated with the World Film office in Washington under Leon J. Bamberger, who was then its manager. Mr. Bamberger is now sales promotion manager of V. L. S. E., so that Mr. Bachrach will again come under the notice of the man who first introduced him to the marketing side of motion pictures.

FIRST PALLAS PICTURE A HIT

"The Gentleman from Indiana" Hailed by Press and Public as One of the Best Films of the Season

With the release of its initial production in the film world, "The Gentleman from Indiana," by Booth Tarkington and starring the popular Dustin Farnum, Pallas Pictures establishes itself among the foremost producers in the country, by presenting to the trade and motion picture public one of the best films of the season.

Judging from the results of early runs of this photoplay in Paramount houses throughout the country, this film will easily score as one of the best attractions shown for some time, not only from the standpoint of the box-office, but also in the eyes of screen patrons who are appreciative of clean photoplays of the higher class.

The trade and newspaper criticisms which have been accorded the first Pallas-Paramount release in themselves speak well for the future of this photoplay and its producers and are unanimous in their laudatory comment. The New York Evening Mail in its criticism of the Booth Tarkington film said: "For genuine atmosphere and human feeling it is no exaggeration to say that 'The Gentleman from Indiana' is a second 'Birth of a Nation.'" Other metropolitan newspapers were equally enthusiastic in their praise. Other reviews of particular commendatory vein were printed by film experts on the trade papers including MOTOGRAPHY, the Motion Picture News, the Telegraph, the Mirror, and other publications of import in the film world.

As its second release on the Paramount program, Pallas Pictures will offer Maclyn Arbuckle in a screen version of his former stage success, "The Reform Candidate," written by Mr. Arbuckle in collaboration with Edgar A. Guest. Supporting the star in this play are such popular film and stage players as Myrtle Stedman, Forrest Stanley, Charles Ruggles, Howard Davies and others of equal ability.

Raver Using Pilot Studios

The Pilot studios in Yonkers will be used by the Raver Film Corporation in the filming of some of its interior scenes. Harry R. Raver, president of the company, made arrangements for the use of these studios through the courtesy of Dr. Shallenberger of the Arrow Film Company.

This gives the Raver company added facilities for the filming of the interior scenes of "The Other Girl," the successful Augustus Thomas stage play, which it is producing. At the outset it was thought that the production could be completed with the use of but one studio. Up to the present time the Gordon studios on Staten Island have been used exclusively. This new arrangement will not only facilitate the making of interiors, but also the filming of the outside scenes. Many of the locations have been picked in Yonkers, while other desirable spots were found on Staten Island.

Iva Shepard Joins Gaumont

On December 27, Iva Shepard, the prominent emotional leading lady, will leave New York for Jacksonville, Florida, to join the Gaumont Company which is working under the direction of William F. ("Silent Bill") Haddock. Iva Shepard is a Cincinnati girl who left that city at the age of 12 and moved from one city to another with her parents until, at the age of 17, she found herself in Portland, Oregon, at which time she got work as an extra in the cast of "Quo Vadis," then playing there. She was suddenly picked out one day for a small part which she played acceptably, and from that time on has been acting continuously in the west.

Iva Shepard

Her entrance into moving pictures was made as suddenly as her debut on the stage. She was telegraphed for by the western Selig company, which needed a leading woman in a hurry, and one of her former leading men in stock advised the company to secure her. For two years she remained with the Selig Company playing not only leads but character parts. Of late she has had considerable success in Magdalen parts. Under the direction of Francis Boggs, she developed rapidly. Incidentally, she was standing just outside the door on the fatal day when Mr. Selig was wounded and Mr. Boggs was murdered by his crazy Japanese valet a few years ago.

Governor May Act for Selznick

At least $200,000 and perhaps more can be earned by Governor Walsh of Massachusetts if he accepts an offer to appear in a big motion picture. Lewis J. Selznick, vice-president and general manager of the World Film Corporation offered the governor $15,000 a week to play the leading part in the film, with 10 per cent of the gross receipts. The film would require seven or eight weeks to make, and 10 per cent of the gross receipts might readily amount to another $10,000, as the picture will be a $2.00 attraction.

The offer was made about three weeks ago, and Mr. Selznick says that the governor has practically indicated that he would accept. The picture is to be a peace drama. It is tentatively named "The Olive Branch." The scenario was written with Governor Walsh in view, and many of the incidents in the picture have had their replicas in his career. In the event of Mr. Walsh's acceptance work will be begun immediately, and trips will probably be made to Florida and the West Indies for some of the scenes.

An additional 10 per cent of the receipts, Mr. Selznick said, would be given to any peace commission or society that Governor Walsh designates.

New Year's Forecast of Walter W. Irwin

"OPENBOOKING" APPROVED

"WHEN S. L. Rothapfel, at the conclusion of his trip around the country, declared that 'the most successful moving picture theaters are those which are run on the open booking plan,' and that 'this plan undoubtedly is the answer to an exhibitor's greatest success,' he sounded the keynote of a policy which V. L. S. E., Inc., has advocated from its very inception, and one which has brought it such support on the part of the exhibitors that it has had a consistent gain from the very start, even during the hot weather season," declares General Manager Walter W. Irwin, of the V. L. S. E.

"That more and more exhibitors will profit by the success which has been achieved by those who have adopted this form of booking, and that the public, the theaters, and the producer will benefit thereby to a greater extent than ever before, is my prophecy for 1916," continued Mr. Irwin. "For the public, the open-booking method will mean better productions, and a greater consistency of quality, because every picture is booked absolutely on its own merit. For the exhibitor, it will mean increased patronage, through increased satisfaction on the part of his clientele and the prestige gained by showing the highest general average of productions; better prices, resulting from the presentation of consistently good features; longer runs, and more wide-spread word-of-mouth advertising. For the producer it will mean better prices—because of the increase in the exhibitor's profits—the proper revenue to justify the production of pictures with greater artistic quality and higher dramatic value.

"The policy of open-booking is the principle of the survival of the fittest. It forces the manufacturer to constantly improve his productions, and makes the exhibitor largely responsible for his own success. In other words, various exhibitors have various classes and kinds of people as a clientele—people with different ideas and temperaments. The exhibitor is the one best acquainted with the likes and dislikes of that clientele and so is the one best fitted to judge what will please them and what will not.

"Consequently, to ask an exhibitor to take every picture on a program is not giving service to that exhibitor, for the reason that all pictures cannot be of uniform merit nor of uniform theme, and if an exhibitor must take each picture on a program, it follows that he necessarily has to present to his audiences pictures which he realizes will not meet with their hearty sanction. The policy of this company is to invite, in fact, to urge that each exhibitor view the picture before he takes it. In other words, an exhibitor can have from our program what he wants, when he wants it, and as long as he wants it.

"This policy followed during the last seven months has proved itself to be the correct one, because it has made it possible for each exhibitor to get for his house, what he thinks will be the most pleasing to his particular clientele. This brings about longer runs; for when an exhibitor is always able to get pictures that are pleasing to his people, he is encouraged to run such pictures until the proper percentage of his people has seen them. And longer runs are one of the most potent factors to increased profits for both exhibitor and producer which we have to consider.

"The results it has produced speak for themselves—in the growth of this company—in the fact that exhibitors throughout the country are willingly paying the higher-than-average prices for V. L. S. E. features, because they have found from experience, not only that the pictures are in the front rank in their drawing powers, but that the service which goes with these pictures is an asset of incalculable value.

"The consistency of this service on the part of the sales force is insured by a profit-sharing plan, which gives to every man in our organization, one-fifth of every dollar of the net profits from the business which comes out of his territory, so that it is to his advantage to see to it that the exhibitor is aided to the fullest possible extent in making the most of the Big Four features.

"We will further augment and strengthen this service during the forthcoming year, and with our manufacturers excelling even their own past records for the production of superior features, and the exhibitors coming in ever-increasing numbers to an enthusiastic appreciation of the advantages of the open-booking system, as practiced and advocated by the Big Four, we can have only the most optimistic view of the prospects for the next twelve months."

ZUKOR OFFERINGS VARIED

Next Month's Contributions of Famous Players to Paramount Program a Compromise Between Play Adaptations and Original Stories

In view of the controversy which is rife among producers concerning the relative merits of the adaptation of successful plays and novels, as compared with original stories, to the motion picture screen, the announcement of the Famous Players releases on the Paramount program for the first month of the New Year proves particularly interesting.

Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players, is among the staunchest advocates of the desirability of adapting any meritorious dramatic material, from whatever source, to the requirements of the screen. But that his earnest advocacy of the play and the story has not closed his eyes to the power of the photoplay which is written expressly for the screen is clearly demonstrated by the fact that, of the next four films released by his company, two are adaptations and two are original scripts.

On January 3, Pauline Frederick appears in an adaptation of Henry Arthur Jones' great human drama, "Lydia Gilmore," the first Paramount release on the tenth, Marguerite Clark will be seen in an adaptation of "Mice and Men;" on the twentieth, Mary Pickford stars in "The Foundling," an original script, and on the twenty-fourth, Hazel Dawn plays "My Lady Incog.," another original photoplay.

Thus the score stands even between adaptations and original photoplays—a fact which is symbolical of the attitude of the Famous Players on this question which has been broadly agitated throughout the trade. As Mr. Zukor stated in a recent interview, the strictures which have been drawn on the adaptation of plays and stories by some manufacturers indicate that they have assumed the attitude that because a plot was used on the stage or has appeared in print, it is necessarily bad material for motion picture use.

It has been the contention of Mr. Zukor that the source of a plot or a theme was of absolutely no moment in determining its value for motion pictures, which must be based solely on the intrinsic merits of the individual plot, considered purely from the photoplay standpoint. The releasing of an equal number of adaptations and original subjects, though purely accidental in its arrangement, is concretely significant of the fact that this company is not prejudiced either for or against the one means of obtaining material as contrasted with the other.

Essanay Star Commutes for Gowns

Edna Mayo, Essanay star, wishes somebody would invent a plan for fitting gowns by telephone —a system by which a girl could get all the pleasure and none of the inconveniences that go with a fitting.

Edna Mayo.

Miss Mayo, like every other girl, loves to buy new gowns, but it's a terrible lot of trouble when one's work is in Chicago and one's modiste in New York. Lady Duff-Gordon (Lucile), who is designing Miss Mayo's wardrobe for the new Essanay series, "The Strange Case of Mary Page," is personally directing the making of Miss Mayo's gowns and asks that the film star appear every Friday for a month, for fittings. When Lady Duff-Gordon "asks" it is the same as a royal command and every Friday Miss Mayo must report, on time to the dot. So every Thursday afternoon Miss Mayo, who is appearing with Henry Walthall in "The Strange Case of Mary Page," now being filmed in the Essanay's Chicago studios, must tear away from directors and camera men and catch the Twentieth Century Limited for New York. On Saturdays she poses in New York for photographs in the new gowns and Saturday afternoon she boards a train that carries her back to Chicago, so she will be on hand early Monday morning to work until the next Thursday afternoon. Lady Duff-Gordon has completed eight of Miss Mayo's gowns, which will be worn in the early episodes of the serial picture.

J. Charles Haydon, who is directing "The Strange Case of Mary Page," visited New York last week to make drawings of the court room in which Harry Thaw was tried for the murder of Stanford White. This historic room will be reproduced in every detail at the Essanay studios, and will be the court room in which Edna Mayo as Mary Page will be tried for murder.

"Maciste" a Real Discovery

When a noted producer made arrangements to give "Cabiria" to the world in film form he was confronted with a most difficult problem. In order to give the picture that air of mysterious distinction and wonder that was brought out so forcibly in the story, he must find a character who was at once natural and supernatural, and yet the part was intended to be a minor one. Maciste, the Numidian slave, was the character, and in order to present the story as it was intended by the author, the man who should portray the role must be the possessor of miraculous strength, be able to handle crowds of men as one would handle so many flies, and do it in a manner that showed he really meant it, without bringing into play "camera tricks" that are easily discovered by the average film man.

The producer was a wonderful man, as all those who have seen his world famous "Cabiria" will admit, but his friends thought he had climbed a step higher than he could climb. He hunted his man for four years but in the end his untiring efforts were rewarded. He met Edward Pagano under most peculiar circumstances and he saw in the man all the brute strength he had dreamed of. Though Pagano was not an actor, it was not long before he was ready to assume the role allotted him and which later proved to be the star part in the film.

Because of his great success in "Cabiria" the picture company prevailed upon him to pose for one more masterpiece, which was to be written especially for him. The picture was titled "Marvelous Maciste" and was produced at enormous expense.

"Marvelous Maciste" is a wonder work of amazing and tantalizing thrills and stirring struggles. Maciste, the "superman," is seen fighting with scores of men, and seems to enjoy the battles. The film is both comedy and tense, exciting drama, and there is an element of mystery which holds, while the action moves with a speed that will bring the spectator to the edge of his seat.

This production is being exploited on the state right plan by the Hanover Film Company, Inc., New York City, under the direction of Samuel Grant and Charles E. Kimball.

Chatterton to Direct for American

Tom Chatterton, who has achieved a number of notable film successes, has been engaged in the capacity of actor-director by the American Film Company, Inc. Director Chatterton has been commissioned to produce one two-reel drama weekly to be released under the "Mustang" brand. Anna Little, Frank Borzage, Jack Richardson and other well known American actors and actresses will be under Chatterton's direction.

For a number of years Chatterton was on the stage. Recently he has been acting and producing pictures for another company at its California studios. His first production for the American is "The Cactus Blossom," a two-reel subject, in which Miss Little and Frank Borzage take the leading roles. "The Cactus Blossom" is scheduled for release December 31.

"RUBY" MAKES GIRL FAMOUS

Thanhouser Publicity Man Makes Doris Grey Famous Over Night at Boston's Film Ball—To Star in Pictures

Just how far a theatrical publicity man may go has almost been demonstrated, but the motion picture purveyor is still an unknown quantity. It is only known that the film P. A. can be the more spectacular of the two, a fact which has just been proven by Leon J. Rubinstein, director of publicity for the Thanhouser Company of New Rochelle. He turned the trick at the greatest motion picture event of the year, the Boston ball. While all the P. A.'s were striving to outdo one another, "Ruby" sat back with his trump card up his sleeve. It was not until after the grand march that he sprang the surprise. In the booming big voice with which he is gifted, he announced to the ten thousand people who packed the Arena that to the girl who was selected as the prettiest from among those present, Edwin Thanhouser offered a career in motion pictures. The sensation created was most satisfactory—even to "Ruby." With a jury composed of Florence La Badie and the dramatic critics of Boston's four great newspapers, the contest started and for a half hour this Thanhouser publicity work held the undivided attention of the great assemblage, including the governor of Massachusetts and his full staff. The lucky winner is Miss Sophie Sadowski, an eighteen-year-old Polish-American Boston girl. While a surging mob battled the police to congratulate the winner, it was decided that Florence La Badie select a nom-de-screen for her, and now she is to be known as "Doris Grey." The next day proved the value of "Ruby's" idea. Five evening papers carried Doris Grey's pictures on the front page, and all the others spread their space on her in double column pictures and special articles. Over night this obscure little girl had leaped into the limelight. According to the press representative of the ball committee (this is from his letter), "this stunt received more publicity than anything in the history of Boston, with the exception of 'The Birth of a Nation.'" When "Ruby" returned to New Rochelle he began to answer a stream of wires from papers requesting material for full-page features; also, two vaudeville offers for Doris Grey.

Leon J. Rubinstein

Doris Grey

Giving the girl a few days at home in which to recover from her sudden good fortune, "Ruby" then stirred the whole thing up again. Together with Mr. Thanhouser, he went up to Boston to bring Miss Grey down to New Rochelle. This time "the wizard of New Rochelle" took part in a great series of ovations. The girls from Miss Grey's high school gave her a farewell reception, after which she appeared on the stages of four big Boston theaters. In the evening Mr. Thanhouser gave a banquet to the press and the ball officials, to which the governor sent his personal greetings by his secretary. All this, of course, won more Thanhouser space in the daily papers.

Doris Grey is now one of the most widely advertised girls in the world, and has already begun her work in the Thanhouser studio. She is of medium height, slender, blonde, and has big brown eyes, and fair complexion. She will first be introduced on the screen in a five-reel picture entitled "What Doris Grey Did." It will picture the remarkable events which brought her to the screen. She will be directed by George Foster Platt, and Florence La Badie will take part in the production.

Picture Jammed with Thrills

"The Girl and the Game," heralded as the greatest thrill-filled screen novel thus far produced, will be released December 27. The first chapters have only been shown informally in Chicago, but received such a tremendous ovation from exhibitors that the prints which had been sent personally to Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the Signal Film Corporation, were kept busy all day, that the continually arriving exhibitors might view them.

The result is that "The Girl and the Game," even a fortnight before actual release date, has a volume of business rivaling the records established by "The Million Dollar Mystery" and "The Diamond From the Sky."

The theme of this new screen novel is such a tremendous one that the most unusual opportunities are afforded for logical thrills. The story is of empire-building—the reclamation of the great houseless tracts of the west by the railroad. It is a tale of battling interests, not merely two men fighting for a fortune with the ever-present sympathy-inspiring heroine's welfare as the prize, but a struggle of man-made forces, in which millions of dollars are involved, the future of a country at stake and the prosperity of thousands in peril.

Helen Holmes, as the heroine-star, Frank Hamilton Spearman, the author, and James P. McGowan, the director, offer a combination of genius seldom poured into the making of motion pictures.

In addition to this matchless combination is the guarantee of Samuel S. Hutchinson, master producer of "The Diamond From the Sky," that there will be a thrill in every chapter of the heart-stirring kind, and a reason for such thrill, too.

"This great railroad film novel in chapters, starring Miss Holmes, is built differently from any previously attempted picture," says Mr. Hutchinson. "There is no element missing necessary to make it a box-office attraction. I guarantee these thrills and want the exhibitors to watch for them. I will only attempt to point out those in the first four chapters. Here they are:

"In chapter 1—

Runaway train.

Helen's leap on horseback into river when her rescue mission seems foiled by open draw.

Terrific collision when Helen, by throwing a switch, sends a runaway freight into a siding.

"In chapter 2—

Train pursuit of the bandits.

Helen's mad leap from engine to engine.

Sensational capture of Spike, the crook.

"In chapter 3—

The burning train.

Helen's rescue of Storm, by stretching a rope across tracks from telegraph pole to tree top, as burning train speeds beneath. Storm is rescued by grasping rope.

Explosion of five cars of dynamite—biggest thrill of its kind ever attempted.

"In chapter 4—

The struggle on the edge of the cliff.

Helen's plunge into the ocean from the cliff.

Race between express train and speed launch.

"In my viewings of pictures I have never witnessed a greater exhibition of personal daring or a more thorough thrill than the leap Miss Holmes makes from one moving engine to another. It is the acme of realism."

THE NEW ANIMATED SUB-TITLE

How Lois Weber Conceived the Idea Which Is First Introduced in the Pavlowa Production "The Dumb Girl of Portici"

What are probably among the most unique sub-titles ever seen in a moving picture production have been introduced for the first time in the Universal Film Manufacturing Company's production of "The Dumb Girl of Portici." These animated sub-titles as they are called, were created by Lois Weber.

"Briefly, the new sub-titles were the result of a search for something original, or at least unusual. It was the result of attempting to find something new, some improvement on the old way, which is what we all must do if we expect our profession to improve as it should," said Miss Weber, discussing her achievement.

"While I was racking my brain for a new idea, I chanced to pick up and read some chapter in a novel of a generation ago. It was there that I got the idea. At the beginning of each chapter in the book there were quoted a few lines of verse, some from Shakespeare, some from Milton, none of them using the same names as the prose text, but each in its own way intimating something of the nature of the contents of the chapter that was to follow.

"Very well, I thought, if it could be done in a novel, there must be a way to do it in pictures. The animated subtitles were the result.

"Having arranged the wording of the titles, they were hand-lettered in white on a black background. Above the text matter we arranged a mirror. The camera itself was placed before the placard just as it would have been in making an ordinary sub-title. Then we turned the mirror just a trifle, swung it, in other words, so that the angle of incidence let it take in action which was going on away back of the camera and to one side, without showing any of the camera.

"Then by close attention to the work in hand and by much moving about of the camera and the people in the action, the drawing of lines within which space they must work, we were able to get a motion picture not of the action itself, but of the reflection of action which was going on. In other words, back of the camera and to one side of it, the action was taking place. That action was reflected from the mirror over the sub-title to the eye of the camera, where it was all taken.

"The greatest trouble was found in locating just the spot in which the action must take place to make the characters small enough to appear correct in the tiny space of the mirror. In the main, the idea, whether worthy or not, worked out about as we had figured. In a few instances, however, it fell below our preconceived ideas. For instance, when 'Fenella' was happy, the roses shown were full blown and perfect and when she was sad we arranged wilted and drooping ones in their place. This failed to register as we had hoped. The distance was a trifle too great. However, in the main it worked out as well as we had hoped.

"That really is all there was to it. But let me add that it was one of the hardest bits of direction I ever undertook."

Centaur Plant Not Taken Over

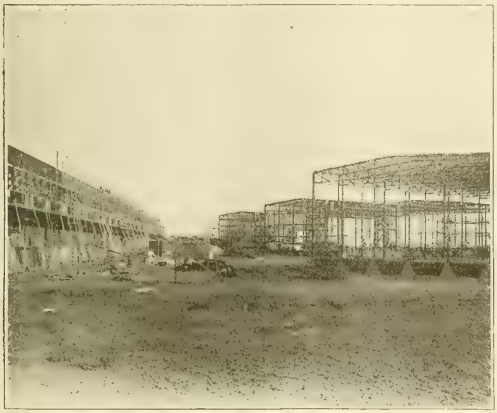
Editor, Motography, Chicago, Ill.

Note in your issue of December 18 story to the effect that the Equitable Film Corporation had taken over the entire Centaur plant in Bayonne.

This was a direct mis-statement; the Equitable Company, or one of its subsidiaries, rented one-half of the studio for a short term—I think one week only. They are not using the studio at present and at no time had they contract for the full floor space of the studio or for the factory and laboratory, as claimed in the story.

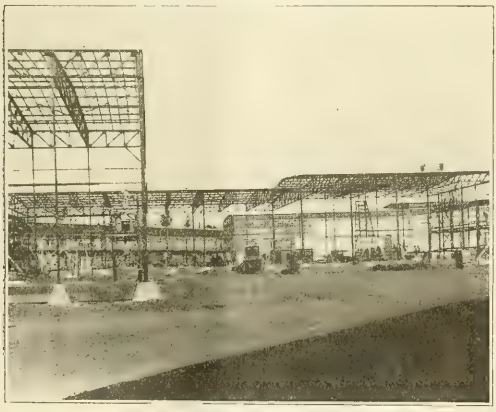
I am sure that this statement was made in the best of faith by Motography, but inasmuch as it is obviously hurtful to the interests of the Centaur Film Company, I will ask you to kindly make retraction at the earliest possible date.

Chester Beecroft, General Manager.



A quadrangle in the Griffith's angle of the Fine Arts Triangle in Los Angeles, California. The three on the left are star members of the scenario staff, and the fourth is the palpating publicity person. From left to right they are known as Bernaid McConville (Melodramatic Mac), Roy Somerville (Sob-Stuff Somer), Ted Browning (The Terrible Tod), and Bennie Zeidman (Bustling Bennie).

INCE IN PROSE AND RHYME



Walls of Culver City Studio Rise Whilst Its Famous Director General Warbles of Billie Burke in the Role of "Peggy"

The immortals who builded the lofty rhyme and at the same time carved monuments more lasting than brass, have nothing on Thomas H. Ince, the famous Triangle director, who, besides his directing activities, is engaged in building the immense new Kay-Bee studios at Culver City, Calif. These immense structures, an illustration of which is given herewith, are of the steel architecture that made skyscrapers possible. There is nothing about them reminiscent of the old shack period of studio development. They are constructed for all time, are thoroughly fireproof, light, airy and fitted with every modern equipment and appliance. A New Year's Ball is to be held at one of the studios, and feature films will be started within one of the completed edifices next month.

View of the new Ince-Triangle studios at Culver City as they look today.

Rapidly nearing completion.

But in addition to building and directing, Mr. Ince has found time to woo the muse, as instance a sample verse or two from his new song, "Peggy," which will be distributed in connection with the coming presentation of "Peggy," his film play starring Billie Burke.

In the Bonnie Scottish Hi'land
Where sweet heather grows,
Lives a lassie whom I'd willingly die for;
Ah! her hair is soft and golden,
Her lips like the rose,
It's the kiss that lingers there that I sigh for.

Chorus:

Peggy, Peggy, you're the sweetest girl I know;
The very soul of Scotland's in your smile.
If I knew 'twas I that pleased you,
Why, it's in these arms I'd squeeze you
Bonnie Peggie, Arlin'—I love you.

I can hear the Pipers playing,
They're calling me back;
Back to Scotland and the days filled with gladness
Oh! it's not the hills and valleys
That I long to see,
But it's Peggy; she's the cause of all this sadness.

Peggy, Peggy, you're the sweetest girl I know,
The very soul of Scotland's in your smile;
I would give my kilts and plaidie,
Just to be your Hi'land laddie,
Bonnie Peggy, my darlin'—I love you.

Vincent Serrano Engaged

For the difficult role of Dr. Gilmore in its adaptation of Henry Arthur Jones' great dramatic success, "Lydia Gilmore," in which Pauline Frederick is to be starred, the Famous Players Film Company has secured the distinguished actor, Vincent Serrano. Mr. Serrano is one of the few remaining stage notables who has never before appeared on the screen, though for the last two years one of the largest producing companies has been making frequent efforts to induce him to appear in its photoplays.

Though new to filmdom, the name of Vincent Serrano is well known in the theatrical world. Among his many achievements is the unique record of having played Lieutenant Burton in the celebrated war drama, "Arizona," over one thousand times. He was co-star in "A Little Brother of the Rich" and "On Parole" and was featured in "The Lure" and "The Revolt." He has been associated with many big Broadway successes, among them the famous "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots." Mr. Serrano is a native of New York and owes his striking name to the fact that he is half Irish and half Spanish. He has been on the stage for fifteen years, the last five of which have found him in the enviable position of never having to leave Broadway for an engagement.

Essanay Company Visits Milwaukee

Henry B. Walthall and Edna Mayo, the leads in "The Misleading Lady," and a troupe of players who were used in the big Essanay production, descended on Milwaukee for five days last week and took thirty scenes there. With the co-operation of the Milwaukee park commissioners and E. H. Bean, superintendent of the Milwaukee Park Zoo, the company made many scenes with a cub bear which was loaned them for the purpose. Nearly all the wilderness sets, excepting those taken in the Adirondack mountains, were taken in the country just five miles out of the Cream City. Miss Mayo stayed only one day, but the rest of the company crowded a week's work into five days. The bear was christened "Adversity" by the troupe because of its rough methods of showing affection. There wasn't a member who didn't have cuts or abrasions, for "Adversity" was wont to show his appreciation by biting, and the human countenance, not trained to meet his methods, suffered in the showing.

Metro Engages Scenario Writer

Harry C. Hoyt, who has had more than four hundred scenarios accepted and produced, and who is the highest salaried writer in the profession, has joined the Metro staff, and in the future will write exclusively for that company. Until he was attracted to the Metro forces Mr. Hoyt was scenario editor for the Fox company, and before that was on the scenario staff of Kalem and Biograph.

Henry C. Hoyt.

Mr. Hoyt's record as a scenario author is practically the history of the scenario field of endeavor. He began writing for motion pictures ten years ago, when he was still a student at Columbia University. He continued writing after he went to Yale, where he was graduated with a view of taking up the practice of law. A few months in a law office was sufficient for Mr. Hoyt, and the increasing demand for his scripts prompted him to give up his proposed career as a barrister, and devote all his time and energy to writing.

Mr. Hoyt is an indefatigable worker, and under high pressure recently made a picturization of Booth Tarkington's famous novel, "The Turmoil," for Rolfe-Metro, in thirty-six hours. Edgar Jones, who directed "The Turmoil," was obliged to have the script within that time, or else call for a postponement of the production. Mr. Hoyt proved equal to the task, though he was obliged to survive on three hours' sleep, and numerous quarts of black coffee.

Mr. Hoyt wrote the scenario of "The Man Without a Conscience," in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne will be starred, and which is now in process of production for an early release on the Metro program. This feature is being made by the Quality Pictures Corporation. Mr. Hoyt has also scenarioized the new and popular novel, "Big Tremaine," which Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne will also use for a starring vehicle.

Fox Organization Welcomed to "Los"

When general manager Winfield R. Sheehan of the Fox Film Corporation arrived in Los Angeles to establish a Pacific Coast studio and rendezvous for Fox companies, he received a royal reception and the stars and players accompanying Mr. Sheehan to the coast received such a welcome as they little dreamed of, and were made to feel at home immediately.

With Mr. Sheehan were William Farnum, the famous Fox star, and his leading woman, Dorothy Bernard, a former Los Angeles girl popular for her ability and worth, a number of directors and players of four companies.

Headed by Henry Leonhardt, Pacific coast manager for the Fox Corporation, the Sheehan-Farnum-Bernard party was met at the railway station by a delegation of several hundred people, led by acting mayor Martin Betkouski, Frank Wiggins, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce; members of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, representatives of civic bodies, dramatic schools and many members of the motion picture profession. A royal welcome to Los Angeles resulted, after which the party were dined at the city's leading hotel. This was followed by a theater party at Miller's theater, the home of Fox productions.

The Fox companies have taken over the former Edendale studios of the Selig company, among the best equipped in the city of Los Angeles, and productions will begin immediately starring William Farnum and Dorothy Bernard.

This adds another notable aggregation to the California motion picture colony and adds more prestige to Los Angeles as the moving picture producing metropolis of the United States.

Mr. Sheehan plans to remain in Los Angeles until everything is well under way, pictures being made and everybody happily located.

Exhibitors Not Giving Ball

Sidney Smith of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Illinois, in a letter to Motography calls attention to the fact that the International Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association wishes it distinctly understood that it is not identified in any manner, shape or form with the Movie Ball to be held at the Coliseum in Chicago on New Year's Eve, December 31, 1915. Neither is it connected with any of the promoters of this ball.

At the last regular meeting of the International Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, held on Friday, December 10, the following resolution was passed:

> That the Motion Picture Exhibitors Association of Illinois desires to go on record as unalterably opposed to the contemplated charge of a tax on gross receipts of moving picture theaters.

Dra-Ko Films on Premier Program

Premier Program announces the Dra-Ko Film Company will release its feature productions through Premier. Dra-Ko is already well known as a feature producer, having recently completed "York State Folks"—a picturization of the rural drama of that name. For release on the Premier Program five reel features will be produced, under the direction of Joseph A. Richmond, at the Dra-Ko studio in Tappan, N. Y.

"We have associated ourselves with Premier Program," said Henry Decker of the Dra-Ko Film Company, "because we believe that the policies as laid down by this company are sound in principle. We believe that its method of distribution is both economical and efficient, and are convinced that it serves the best interests of everyone connected with the motion picture industry, the manufacturer, the exchange man, the theater and the spectator."

Press Agenting a Real Art

BY RALPH T. KETTERING*

PRESS-AGENTING is an art! Without a semblance of exaggerated ego I make my cry far and wide that "press agents are born and not made." A man must have a knack for news in order to be a first-class, successful press agent. While the profession of press-agenting is an art, it is still more so a business. To anyone who has devoted his entire life to the study of press-agenting, is apparent more and more the need of pure unadulterated truth. Be honest with your city editor and your drama critic. Treat him as you would your employer. Give him the benefit of your newsgathering propensities. The real press agent knows how to smuggle an item about his particular star or theater between two others of real news he has picked up on the rialto. And, whatever else you do, don't knock! I know one chap, who is likeable and a very good press agent, who has lost the friendship of five powerful newspaper men in Chicago through knocking others.

"Every knock is a boost." Remember that, you readers, and play the game on the square. I have never belittled anyone in my life and just to show the yuletide spirit within me, all my knockers have my very best wishes for a prosperous New Year.

Plain English is another indispensable asset of the successful press agent. Fancy expressions or jawbreaking words mean nothing to the average newspaper reader. Hit him squarely between the eyes with simple, plain statements, without frills or adjectives. Tell him what you are selling and present it in a cheery, tempting way. You know how good pumpkin pie is, served plain. You would not eat it if it had whipped cream and chocolate icing over it. That is superfluous. What you want is just plain old homemade pumpkin pie. So does the newspaper reader. Be brief and simple.

"Kettering has a cinch," I have heard a dozen people say. That is because I wear clean collars and buy new shoes for my family regularly. They do not know of the hours spent nightly in the struggle to create real news that the papers will print. And that is no cinch, I can tell you. If a press agent's work were merely the act of writing notices and delivering them to newspapers, you may rest assured that every other man you meet on the street would be a press agent. Lobby displays, cards, billboard copy, newspaper ads and advance periodicals are only part of the press agent's duties. He has to wrack his brain continually for a new way of dolling up old dope.

In the three years that I have been with Jones, Linick & Schaefer we have played over three thousand different acts, and of that vast number only two furnished my office with photos clean or decent enough to present to a newspaper. They were Winona Winter and Truly Shattuck. And then acts wonder why they don't get their pictures in the paper and their names signed to more contracts. It has been a fight and a struggle to make headway against opposition houses with the material given. I will wager, however, that my friends, Fred Eberts and Harry Singer, who manage the houses I oppose every week in the papers, will give me credit for fair, square fighting always and more space than I am entitled to most of the time. A good press agent will create news. Not, however, at the expense of truth.

Personal friendships and companionships have a great deal to do with the success of a resident press agent. Theatrical data at your finger tips and information at all times regarding new productions or acts is a necessity.

Be the guiding spirit in your campaign each week. Be enthusiastic! Be simple! Be brief! And above all things, be honest and fearless. Make up your mind that you are right and then tear into them!

And right now let me take this opportunity to praise the man who encouraged me when opposition was strongest, who gave credit when it was due, pointed error out without bluster and beamed that marvelous smile of his in token of appreciation; my friend, Aaron J. Jones. I owe much to his guidance and thoughtfulness. And believe me, folks, that motto about knocking goes double with him. I know!

*Of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, Chicago.

FINE ARTS STUDIO GROWING

Many New Structures Added to Buildings That House Griffith Directors and Army of Players, Photographers and Writers

The site of the Fine Arts-Triangle studios, 4500 Sunset boulevard, Los Angeles, California, might be termed a veritable city, with the hundreds of people employed there in the production of pictures, and often still active through the night and into the morning under the large Cooper-Hewitt lights in the inside studio.

To those who have not had the opportunity of personally inspecting this large plant, some idea of its magnitude may be gleaned from the fact that approximately ten thousand feet of exposed negative film stock emanates from there each week. The producers are on the jump from morning to night, when occasion requires continuing their work in what is technically known as the electric light studio. More than one hundred dressing rooms are required for the large number of players permanently employed, bringing the weekly pay roll up into very high figures.

Two large open air stages, in size, one, 60x100 feet and the other 50x100 feet, are used for the staging of interior scenes when the sunlight is available. The electric light studio, a recent addition to the plant, lies adjacent to the largest of open air stages, its dimensions being 60x60, and twenty feet in height. So powerful is the generator of the electric light studio that, when the occasion requires, which is very often the case, five electric light stages can be operated at the same time.

The wardrobe and costume department plays no small part in the Griffith plant, for here are stored thousands of costumes in the care of skillful modistes, who are also continually designing new garments for the Griffith players to wear in scenes of feature plays.

The property room is almost an entire plant in itself, for here are located hundreds and hundreds of "props," so arranged that they are accessible the moment required.

The carpenters at the Fine Arts studio have been among the busiest people. The alarming rapidity with which they have to put up the fast increasing buildings have caused considerable comment about the fast growing plant. At the present, they are putting the finishing touches to an elegant new factory, where the film is developed, dried, printed, assembled, tested by means of projection, and canned in readiness to be shipped to the respective exchanges.

In charge of the Griffith factory are competent chemists, proven photographic experts, under the supervision of Joseph Aller and G. W. Bitzer, acknowledged America's premier photographer. Mr. Bitzer also has under his control a number of camera-men, who are duly assigned to the photographing of the various film productions.

Then there is the scenario department, guided by Manager of Production Frank E. Woods, who, besides overseeing and casting productions, keeps in touch with the literary market for material he believes suitable for picture purposes. This department employs a number of staff writers and adapters, who also conceive original scenarios.

Metro's Novel Foreign Advertising

One of the novel features used in advertising Metro pictures in Great Britain is a series of comic cartoons which appear in the newspapers and on window display cards. Ruffells, Ltd., distributors of Metro pictures in England and on the Continent, has engaged a well known comic artist to make the cartoons. A very talkative parrot, which has come to be known as the "Metro bird" on the other side of the water, furnishes the "spoken inserts" in the comics, and it suffices to say that the quality and merits of Metro pictures are fully extolled in the text. What "the bird says" seems to receive attention from all good photoplay fans.

A Sample of the Metro Cartoons.

Kleine Makes Channing Pollock Story

"Our Lady of Laughter" is the odd title of a story by Channing Pollock now in work at the Kleine studios in the Bronx, New York. It is a story of theatrical life on Broadway and will feature Arthur Hoops and Alma Hanlon. This popular twain will be supported by Frank Belcher, Herbert Hayes and others. The Pollock story is considered one of the scenario finds of the season and, in the opinion of those engaged in its making, will provide more thrills and sensations than is usually found in two ordinary five-reel features. "Our Lady of Laughter" will be released through the Kleine-Edison Feature Service.

S. Rankin Drew of Vitagraph

The descendant of a long line of men and women famous in the theatrical world, Sidney Rankin Drew, son of Sidney Drew and nephew of John Drew, is upholding the family honor in a splendid capacity as a producer for the Vitagraph Company. Reared in the atmosphere of the stage and well versed in all matters pertaining to that art, he is now considered one of the most capable directors of motion picture in the country today. This is in spite of his extreme youth, for he is but twenty-four years of age.

S. Rankin Drew.

Drew has just completed what he regards as a film masterpiece and a loving tribute to the memory of his dead mother. Mrs. Sidney Drew, who wrote under the name of George Cameron, dictated the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature, "Thou Art the Man," as she lay in bed, her life ebbing away. She never lived to know whether it would be produced. When the script came to the Vitagraph Company it seemed altogether fitting that the picture should be placed under the direction of her son for production.

His entrance into the field of motion pictures was due to the advice he received from Lionel Barrymore and the possibilities were presented in so attractive a manner that Drew made an application to the Vitagraph Company. He made good as an actor and showed such mastery of stage craft that some one-reel dramas were given him to direct. He more than justified the confidence of the Vitagraph heads and is now one of the Vitagraph's foremost directors.

Congress to See "Battle Cry"

At the instigation of Mrs. Storey, president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the members of the Senate and the House of Representatives will witness a private showing in Washington on December 17 of V. L. S. E.'s famous message on preparedness, "The Battle Cry of Peace." Mrs. Storey sought to secure the consent of the President to attend this performance, and was told that while Mr. Wilson feels that the picture is performing a wonderful work, he would have to forego the pleasure of viewing it, because of demands which would be made upon him to see other film productions.

METRO MOVING OFFICES

Film Corporation Has Outgrown Its Quarters and Will Next Week Move Across the Street Into Longacre Building

In order to meet the demand for greater office facilities, and provide room for an increase in the executive and clerical force, the Metro Pictures Corporation will move from its present location in the Heidelberg building at Forty-second street and Broadway, New York City, to the Longacre building, diagonally across the street, at No. 1476 Broadway. The rapid growth of Metro within the short space of time since its inception is indicative of the possibilities of the motion picture business and the growth of the industry. The proposed change from the present offices will be made on or about December 20.

In its present home Metro has been obliged to use two floors, the executive offices being on one floor and the publicity, magazine and mailing department on the floor above. In the new quarters the Metro company will occupy a large suite on the eleventh floor of the Longacre building, which is erected on one of the most costly pieces of property in the world. In all there will be 8,200 square feet of floor space, and each department will have its own offices opening on a general reception and waiting room.

One of the practical and most valuable additions in the new Metro location will be a large projecting room that will permit of a forty-five foot throw. This room will be done in old blue and white, and furnished with every possible convenience and comfort. The chairs, which are now being specially constructed, are craft wicker. There will be special tables for the use of those wishing to make notes, censors, newspaper and magazine critics, musical directors who arrange special programs for Metro pictures, and Metro employes desiring to make notes on corrections and suggestions on the pictures shown.

The new offices will be sumptuously and luxuriously appointed in every particular, and represent the last word in equipment and furnishing, in line with Metro's general plan in everything. Richard A. Rowland, president of the Metro corporation, will have his private suite of offices, and other private offices will include one for Joseph W. Engel, treasurer; W. E. Atkinson, general manager, and Charles W. Stern, auditor. Arthur James, director of publicity, will have his offices on the Broadway side of the building. Merritt Crawford, managing editor of the Metro Pictures Magazine, will also have his offices on this side, as will Henry James, business manager of the magazine.

The poster department, mailing rooms and kindred departments will adjoin the magazine and publicity suite. In this suite will also be located the scenario department, which is conducted under the supervision of Arthur James. Decorators, painters and carpenters are now at work remodeling the new offices to meet the needs of Metro. This work is being done under the personal direction of Treasurer Engel, who is especially fitted for the task. The lease for the new offices is for a term of years.

Gaumont's Colored Photoplay

Gaumont has never produced a more beautiful photoplay than "A Prince of Yesterday." It is a multiple-reel feature in original colors. In order to give the greatest value to the film, the play itself has been given in costume amid scenes of unsurpassed scenic beauty. This is a fitting photoplay for the Christmas season, since the warmth of color and beauty of investiture are wholly in keeping with the holiday spirit.

Reviewers who have seen this Rialto Star Feature declare that it is something they could not have believed had they not seen it with their own eyes. There is no wonder that the interest of motion picture patrons will be centered on this beautiful film in natural colors, since one of the greatest women's magazines, with over a million readers, has seen fit to devote laudatory space to scenes from the play.

As one description aptly says: "The pictures of gardens full of blooming flowers are masterpieces of the film-maker's art; the avenue of the princess's garden calls up the strongest feelings of all lovers of beauty. The interiors are unsurpassed. Seldom can such sights be seen in a picture gallery. The wonderful stained glass windows and the grain staircase, upon the walls of which are thrown rays of the moon, turned to wonderful colors as they pass through the windows, make one want to stop the film and allow the picture to rest on the screen so that its glories may be admired to the full."

Scene from Gaumont's "A Prince of Yesterday."

Barriscale's Next Vehicle

Bessie Barriscale and Bruce McRae are soon to be presented by Thomas H. Ince as co-stars in an absorbing drama from the prolific pen of C. Gardner Sullivan, entitled "The Green Swamp." The production has just been completed under the direction of Scott Sidney and will be offered as a Triangle Kay-Bee feature in five parts.

Miss Barriscale will be seen in a role in which she delights—that of a young wife who is given every opportunity for an expression of her emotions. Mr. McRae, too, it is declared, has a part that fits his capabilities to a nicety, and is expected to score new triumphs by his splendid interpretation of it.

"The Green Swamp" is a story of domestic dissention, founded on a woman's unjust suspicion. It unfolds a powerful lesson to those wives who ever are torturing themselves in the belief that their husbands are disloyal, and yet is so constructed that conditions adjust themselves to a happy and satisfactory ending. The story is simply another of the forceful considerations of family discord that have served to establish Producer Ince as "the preacher of the picture-world."

Settings of unusual splendor and elegance, it is said, are plentiful in the production. Among these is a mammoth ballroom scene in which several hundred beautifully costumed guests mingle at a masquerade fete. Another particularly realistic setting is that which depicts the operating room of a hospital. This has been picturized with great care and precision and it is claimed to be among the screen's most remarkable scenes.

The cast that appears in support of Miss Barriscale and Mr. McRae includes J. Barney Sherry, Lola May, Louise Brownell and Milton Ross.

Some New Books

"Who's Who in Motion Pictures," By Henri Armand de Masi. A neatly bound volume bearing the above title, containing some 200 pages, 6¼ by 4¾ inches in size, has just come from the press and as its title indicates contains, under alphabetical cataloguing, biographical sketches of people prominent in the motion picture industry. Included in the list are not actors and actresses alone, but executives, publicity men, scenario writers, exchange men, and other people who properly belong in a "Who's Who" of the trade. The biographies are just short and snappy enough to make them of interest to those seeking quick information about the accomplishments of those prominent in the industry, and give the vital information necessary. While the first edition of "Who's Who in Motion Pictures" is far from complete the author, in his preface, frankly explains that the second will contain more than one thousand names and biographies and the following ones an even larger number. The author, Mr. de Masi, was at one time with the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company and during his thirty-one years has been assistant editor of the Toledo Times, telegraph editor of the Minneapolis Tribune, "pony" editor of the Associated Press' St. Paul office, city editor of the Milwaukee Sentinel and Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin, news editor of the Chicago Journal, assistant news editor of the New York Press, and managing editor of the Havana (Cuba) American. He has also at various times been connected with the New York American, New York Telegram, Chicago Examiner, Chicago Record-Herald, Cleveland Plain Dealer, Cleveland Leader, St. Paul Daily News, and Joliet Evening Herald.

Henri de Masi.

"Making the Movies," By Ernest A. Dench. Published by the Macmillan Company. The author, who is well known in the motion picture industry, and who, besides contributing many interesting articles to monthly and weekly publications devoted exclusively to motion pictures, has already published one previous book, entitled "Playwriting for the Cinema," in this new volume describes in detail how the film dramas are made, explaining in simple language some of the technical problems the director encounters, and the means he takes to overcome them. Besides such interesting chapters as those descriptive of the handling of child players, the securing of free supernumeraries, the getting of permission to work on the beautiful estates of American millionaires, and the filming of wild animal dramas, the author treats of trick photoplays, the making of animated cartoons, the obstacles encountered in filming royalty, and a brief chapter on the film factories in which developing, printing and toning are done. The little volume is splendidly printed, illustrated with good halftones and so written as to be readily understood by the average layman.

Bessie Has Odd Dressing Room

Miss Bessie Eyton is probably the only motion picture star in the wide world who owns a dressing room on wheels. The Selig star has fitted up a Maxwell cabriolet automobile to use as a dressing room when out on locations. Curtains are hung on brass rods over all the windows; inside the doors are pockets to hold shoes, riding boots and other small articles. A take-down make-up table is arranged beside the steering wheel and over this is hung a three-way mirror. Hooks are fastened all around the inside at the edge of the top to hang her garments on. Miss Eyton's work calls her up to some of the canyons or at the seashore, where there are no dressing room facilities, consequently the idea to use her car as a dressing room was forced upon her. Now she says she doesn't see how she ever got along without it.

Board Appoints New Committee

The Motion Picture Board of Trade of America has just announced the appointment of a committee to represent its activities in Southern California. The committee includes Miss Mabel Condon, J. C. Jessen, Clark Irvine, and Kenneth A. O'Hara.

The committee held its first meeting last Tuesday and organized by electing Miss Condon as its presiding officer. Its duties will be to represent the Board of Trade in its campaigns for members and to take charge of Pacific coast publicity as well as to keep in close telegraphic touch with headquarters in New York on all matters affecting the industry as a whole.

The first activities will be in following up a list of approximately five hundred invitations that have been sent out to prospective members in Southern California. This list covers all branches of the film industry and is already producing flattering results.

The constituent members of the committee are so well known throughout the industry that it is hardly necessary to say that Miss Condon is a free-lance correspondent and publicity writer, while Mr. Jessen and Mr. Irvine represent respectively the News and the World on the Pacific coast. Mr. O'Hara is publicity expert for the New York Motion Picture Corporation.

Big Increase in Horsley Activities

MORE TALENT ENGAGED

SIMULTANEOUS with the news of the remarkable policy of expansion, as expressed in the announcement of the Mutual Film Corporation that it will release, beginning in January, three five-reel productions every week to be known as Mutual Master-pictures, de luxe edition, David Horsley, one of the big factors in the Mutual's manufacturing force, makes known his perfected plans for the production of such pictures as he will contribute under the expansion policy.

Just what Mr. Horsley's plans mean to the trade and to the fan may be gathered by the ambitious course he has mapped out, and which is outlined in the following paragraphs. It will be seen that these plans are in scope not only far reaching, but on such an elaborate scale that in their consummation the name of David Horsley productions will be synonymous with the very best the market affords.

Mr. Horsley has a complete plant in Bayonne, N. J., where everything used in picture production, except raw stock and chemicals, is made. This applies even to the making of cameras. He also owns a gigantic plant in Los Angeles, covering five acres of ground right in the heart of the city, equipped with every modern device that makes for the best results in film manufacture. The studio is of the latest type of construction, designed to create the highest point of efficiency. The big outdoor studio and the animal arena are cases in point.

In preparation for the production of his Mutual Master-pictures, de luxe edition, Mr. Horsley has just completed an indoor studio which will give him an additional studio floor space of 20,000 feet. This will give the required room to properly stage the increased amount of subjects that the Mutual's expansion policy, in its relation to David Horsley productions, entails.

A step in the right direction is the engagement of technical experts to supervise the construction of props and the building of sets to be used in Mr. Horsley's Mutual Master-pictures, de luxe edition. He has now on his pay roll, in Los Angeles, Frank Crompton, one of the best authorities on technical construction in the motion picture business; Frank Stammer, a furniture designer and builder for motion pictures of long experience; and Bhogwan Singh, an East India native, familiar with the customs and manners of the Oriental. These experts have a thorough knowledge of conditions in many climes and when a play is located in any country familiar to them suggestions are offered and accepted in selecting locations, sets, customs, etc. Carrying this idea along to the limit Mr. Horsley has opened negotiations with experts familiar with countries other than those now covered by his present staff and some interesting announcements in this regard will soon be forthcoming.

Under the expansion policy Mr. Horsley will have two Mutual Master-picture, de luxe edition, releases. One of these is to be animal pictures, featuring prominent photoplayers, assisted by the Bostock animals, and the other is to be dramatic features, presenting the popular star, Crane Wilbur, as the featured player. The first animal production is called "The Bait" and is scheduled for release January 22. Other pictures of the same nature will follow every three weeks thereafter.

Another example of Mr. Horsley's far-reaching efforts to make his Mutual Master-pictures, de luxe edition, the finest possible, is the arrangement just perfected by him with Roy L. McCardell whereby that famous scenario writer will supply all the scenarios for the animal releases. This arrangement was put through at a big outlay, as a clause in the agreement

Crane Wilbur.

William Clifford.

Captain Bonavita.

stipulates that Mr. McCardell is to furnish animal scenarios to Mr. Horsley exclusively.

Mr. McCardell's wonderfully vivid imagination has registered him one success after another. An instance of ability is pointed out in the fact that out of the 20,000 scenarios submitted to the North American Film Corporation for a serial Mr. McCardell's "The Diamond From the Sky" was selected. This work netted him the $10,000 prize offered. He is also the winner of scores of other prizes offered for unusual photoplays.

Mr. McCardell is at this writing at work on the first scenario for Mr. Horsley. It is to be a circus story, one of great breadth of interest, and at the same time one that will serve to bring in the Bostock animals in performances of their exceptional feats. The featured player in this play is to be Miss Margaret Gibson, considered by many the most beautiful woman in motion pictures, and an actress of rare accomplishments. She will be supported by a cast of unusual excellence.

The Mutual Master-pictures, de luxe edition, which Mr. Horsley will offer with Crane Wilbur as the star, will be released every four weeks beginning January 26. The first release is entitled "Vengeance Is Mine!" and reports from Los Angeles, where the subject is now being filmed, say it is one of the biggest undertakings ever attempted in motion pictures and will present the star in a role that is believed to be the best thing he has ever done. It is being directed by Robert Burke Broadwell.

The change into five-reelers means that the detective series announced for Centaur star feature releases, with Crane Wilbur as the star, will be abandoned. The scenarios were prepared as three-reel stories, so are unavailable under the new arrangement.

The Cub Comedies, which Mr. Horsley is also producing, will continue to be released as heretofore. One of these single-reel fun-creating pictures, with George Ovey featured, is distributed every Friday. Milton H. Fahrney continues as director. Mr. Horsley is now in New York, but will soon leave for Los Angeles so that he can supervise personally the work outlined.

Chaplin's Burlesque of "Carmen"

"Carmen," the classic tale of love and passion, written by a Spaniard and so appealing that it has been translated into every language in the world and made into a play and into an opera and finally into a photoplay by two different companies, is the vehicle that Charlie Chaplin has chosen for his next offering to the world of mirth.

All the world knows the story. A young lieutenant goes into a province of Spain to stop the smuggling that yearly costs the government thousands of dollars. He proves adamant to bribes and is the despair of the smugglers. But Carmen, a gypsy girl, beautiful, alluring and unscrupulous, guarantees that she will make Lieutenant Jose see reason. So the young soldier falls to her arts, kills a brother officer because of her and joins the gypsy band.

But he finds that Carmen is an individualist. She doesn't love him. She goes to Madrid with the popular toreador and accepts the plaudits of the multitude as her just due. Jose follows and kills her as she scorns him. Then he stabs himself.

The thing is so big that it lends itself readily to burlesque. And Chaplin, as the smitten soldier, uses Edna Purviance and the situations made by the story to such effect, that the play is continuous laugh. The situations aren't changed. But it is Chaplin, as the "low-brow" in the part, that makes it ridiculous. Edna Purviance is a beautiful, passionate Carmen, and Chaplin is a well-meaning and therefore extremely funny lover.

What Did the Camels Think?

Edward Jose, who is producing for Pathe the first Kipling book to be filmed, "The Light That Failed," discovered in his search for locations that Fayerweather's Island off the city of Bridgeport, Conn., offered remarkable opportunities for "real desert stuff."

Furthermore, the winter quarters of Barnum and Bailey's circus is in Bridgeport, so a big supply of camels, Arabian horses, etc., was right at hand. Therefore Mr. Jose took his company, headed by Robert Edeson and Jose Collins, up to Connecticut last week and made a profound dent in the ordinarily tranquil life of that enterprising community.

He needed "extras," many of them, and so announced the fact in the local newspapers. Many Bridgeporters could not resist the temptation to work before the camera, so rich and poor, a multitude of them, enrolled with eagerness under his banner, ready to work for "from $2.50 per day up." As Fayerweather's Island is no winter resort and biting gales were blowing in from the broad Atlantic, the camels must have had their own opinions about the Sahara desert they were supposed to be working in.

New Glass Studio Nearly Ready

The huge new glass studio being built by the American Film Company at Santa Barbara is fast nearing completion. The third floor of the structure already has been laid, and to external appearances, the giant building is practically finished. The new studio is said to be the most complete in existence, and the various members of the American corps of directors are anxiously awaiting the word from President Hutchinson to go to work in the new quarters. Every appliance for modern motion picture photography is being installed. It is hoped that the new studio will be in full operation by the first of the new year.

Lillian Gish, Elliott Dexter and Marie Doro at the Fine Arts' studio.

HALL ASSUMES NEW DUTIES

Famous Newspaper Man Who Helped to Put Hearst-Selig News Pictorial on the Map Now with Vitagraph

Ray Hall, news editor of the Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial and motion picture technician for the Hearst film interests, has arrived to establish the offices of the new weekly in Flatbush.

Mr. Hall, for many years in the general newspaper and news service field, including important assignments for the United Press and International News Service in various capacities from coast to coast, was made editor of the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial when it was founded in Chicago two years ago.

The newspaper head style of titles for motion picture topicals is said to have been invented by Mr. Hall, together with the slogan made famous by the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial—"The World Before Your Eyes." It was due to Mr. Hall's enterprise that the Hearst News Pictorial carried the famous scoop on the Eastland disaster at Chicago, shipping prints to every exchange receiving this service within seven hours after the great lake ship settled at her dock.

Mr. Hall is known the country over among newspapermen. His last big news assignment was covering the national conventions of 1912 for the International News Service. Notable among his newspaper performances was the Hearst scoop on the confession of the McNamaras at Los Angeles. He chanced to be hanging around the court room when it happened.

Mr. Hall's offices will be at the Vitagraph plant in Brooklyn.

Henry McRae Honored by Shriners

Just to show their appreciation of a magnificent fellow and brother Shriner, officials of Al Malaikah Temple, Los Angeles, visited the $1,000,000 motion picture metropolis, Universal City, Monday and presented Henry McRae, retiring director-general, with a diamond studded gold watch as a testimonial of their friendship and his loyalty to the Shriners.

Henry McRae, former Director General of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, who is to take a company to the Orient, exhibiting beautiful gold watch presented to him by the shriners of Los Angeles.

The watch bears the following inscription: "Presented by Al Malaikah Temple, A. A. O. M. M. S., to Henry McRae, in appreciation of his many courtesies in 1915." The presentation was made by the following delegation of Shriners from the Temple: General Robert Wankowski, Frank B Silverwood, R. A. Heffner and W. E. Bush.

The former Universal director-general will sail from San Francisco, January 8, on the palatial steamer, Tenyo Maru. He plans to make a world tour before returning, creating as he goes Oriental and world-wide features for the Universal program. It is stated that Anna Pavlowa, the Russian dancer, is to appear in Japan in a big feature directed by Mr. McRae. The picture to cost something like $250,000. The talented director has already secured a Japanese interpreter and is selecting a picked company of capable and well known players, the staff to be augmented from time to time with world celebrities.

A. C. F. Gets Noted Cartoonist

The American Correspondent Film Company announces that it has secured the rights to the exclusive marketing of the comedies of Hal Olver, the clever creator of animated cartoons. Mr. Olver is fresh at the game, though by no means a novice at cartoon work. He was for five years on the staff of the Boston Traveller and did noteworthy work for a newspaper syndicate in South America before he came north. Hal is a long-drawn-out person who just falls short of being long enough to keep the spirit of jollity confined within himself; for it keeps trickling out of the ends of his flippant fingers, making his pencil do ludicrous things. Mr. Olver is now preparing a serial entitled "The Strange Adventures of Professor Pipp," which will be released shortly. Pipp is a little man with a big purpose; he wants to tour the warring countries to see what is going on in the zone of fire. And he does. His traveling outfit is perfect. Not a detail is lacking to make him the tourist par excellence. Reports of a few slight topographical changes in Europe prevail upon him to leave his Baeddeker at hime; but that lack is easily overcome by field-glasses, folding camera, and rakish felt hat. Indeed, the leader of a brigade of Cook tourists, resolved to conquer Europe in three weeks, is no better equipped than Professor Pipp.

Hal Olver

Pathe Office Again Expands

Owing to the great increase of business Pathe has taken the twelfth floor at 25 West Forty-fifth street, New York City, and is now occupying two entire floors in that fine new building. The bookkeeping and clerical staff will be located on the twelfth floor, and the executive offices on the eleventh.

GRIFFITH'S MOTHER PASSES

Famous Director of the Silent Drama Called to Louisville, Kentucky, by the Sudden Death of His Parent.

The entire motion picture industry this week extends its sympathy to David W. Griffith, famous Triangle director, who was called to Louisville, Ky., by the death of his mother, on Sunday night, December 5.

The occasion of Mr. Griffith's journey to Kentucky is unusually sad, due to the fact that less than a week later he had expected to visit Louisville for the purpose of helping his mother celebrate her eighty-seventh birthday, and had long been making his plans with this object in view.

Mrs. Mary Perkins Griffith was the widow of a well-known Confederate general of the Civil War. A woman of great intelligence and culture, she had imparted her high ideals to her children. At her bedside on the day of her death were Albert G. Griffith, her youngest son, who came from London to Kentucky, and Miss Ruth Griffith, her only daughter. D. W. Griffith received the news of her fatal illness too late to reach there, but dropped all his activities, and immediately hastened to Louisville upon learning that her condition was serious.

Thousands of telegrams have reached the Los Angeles office of the famous director since his departure, all expressing sympathy and condolence to him in the hour of his bereavement.

Here's the Prize Winning Hint

Joseph F. Coufal of the Novelty Slide Company offered during November a prize of $5 in gold for the best suggestions submitted for booming the business of a motion picture theater, and the prize has been awarded to Mrs. F. A. Gould of the Rex theater, Reading, Pa. Mrs. Gould's suggestion is as follows:

In a small house where one cannot depend upon transient trade it keeps a manager constantly on the alert to think up new stunts whereby he can increase his attendance. From our own experience we find the first and best thing to do is to get the good will of all the children in the neighborhood; by doing this first, you win the older ones without much trouble, for the children are the very best boosters you can find.

Sometime ago we bought a large doll, and dressed it up in an outfit that would make any child sit up and take notice. This doll was placed in the box office where everyone could see it and each evening as a ticket was bought, the purchaser was given one letter of the alphabet, these letters were to be saved until a name for the doll could be spelled. The children could put in the box (which was placed at the entrance) as many names as they could make. This was continued for two weeks and the box had to be emptied a great many times. Mothers and fathers worked for their little daughters, brothers and older sisters would work for a little sister, aunts and uncles joined in the race until the whole neighborhood seemed to want the dollie. Every evening we saw an increase in attendance, all were anxious to get as many letters as possible and several nights during the week we would offer as many as five letters with each ticket.

The night of the drawing came and with it such a crowd it was impossible to accommodate them. Each child had been told to paste her letters spelling the name on a piece of paper and write his or her name on the back before it was deposited in the box. A little girl was picked from the audience to draw the name of the dollie from the box, the result was received with much applause and everyone went away pleased and happy. This contest proved a big business booster and the news of it spread and sure was a great advertisement for the theater.

For three years we have been giving the children Christmas parties and it is something the little ones look forward to with the greatest pleasure, needless to say Christmas is a good day and empty seats are hard to find. We advertised the party big and after a few nights it was the talk of the neighborhood. Christmas came with everything in readiness to treat the kiddies. The usual admission was asked and as the children entered were met at the door by Santa Claus, who had a jolly word for each and every one. In the theater a huge Christmas tree gaily lighted was another real surprise and delight to the many little eyes. After the show Santa appeared with his great pack, he was received with cheers and as the pack was opened and a box of candy given to each child their delight knew no bounds. It was a great day and is talked about from one year to another.

Another New One Enters Field

The Uncle Sam Film Corporation, with offices in the World Tower Building, New York City, has been incorporated by several well-known business and theatrical men who have unbounded faith in the future of the motion picture. James Knight has been elected president.

Quite a bit of activity prevails in the offices of the new company. Things are being whipped into line and arrangements are being made to begin operations the first of the year.

Negotiations are pending with men who have seen a number of years of active service in the motion picture field, and the personnel of the company, it is claimed, will assure solidity and success.

Several well-known plays which have been tremendously successful on the legitimate stage and which will prove equally popular on the screen, are under consideration.

BOSTON DAILY MIRROR

Night Special — Ball Extra

METRO WINS

Third Annual Ball of the M. P. E. L. of Mass. Attracts Record Crowd—Society, Politics, the Stage and Filmdom Turn Out En Masse—Thousands Turned Away—Affair Voted Most Brilliant Dance Pageant Given by the League.

METRO COMES ON SPECIAL TRAIN

Mayor Curley and City Officers Greet Metro Stars at South Station—Accompanied by Band the Party in Taxis Parades to Copley Plaza.

Front page of the Boston edition of the Metro newspaper.

The Science of Selection

BY JOHN W. GREY

FEW manufacturers realize that the most important point in photoplay production is what Albert E. Smith terms "The science of selection." That the selection of subjects is most important, cannot be refuted, and one of the great faults of the present mode of production is the fact that the heads of the producing companies do not interest themselves enough in the proper selection of subjects.

In ten years the business of producing has advanced with gigantic strides. From seven to eight reels a week, as a total output for the producing companies of the country, to one hundred twenty-eight reels a week, is an increase of over eighteen hundred per cent; but with this increase in ratio the heads of the organizations have sadly neglected the most important part of the photoplay. In present day producing circles the scenario head, as a rule, selects suitable productions for the director. These are then given to the director to produce, and in nine cases out of ten, the real head of the organization has little to say about what is going on.

It was Albert E. Smith, president of V. L. S. E., Inc., treasurer of the Vitagraph Company and treasurer of the General Film Company, who first instituted the method of selecting photoplays suitable for the directors under his supervision. At the Vitagraph Mr. Smith has adopted what is known as the unit system of producing, which is probably the most efficient ever evolved. This plan works successfully for the simple reason that each and every director, as well as every production that these directors make, is personally supervised by either Mr. Smith or Mr. Blackton. After the readers have read a script, the scenario chief, Marguerite Bertsch, then goes over it thoroughly, writes an opinion on it, and the script is then handed to Mr. Smith. Mr. Smith, in turn, reads the script, not only synopsis but scenario as well, and then decides upon the most suitable cast and director for the particular production. In that way a great many obstacles are overcome, particularly that of miscasting. After the script is decided on by Mr. Smith, he takes the director in hand personally and goes over each and every point with him. The cast is then selected from the Vitagraph stock company, and if necessary a stage star is used.

The director starts the production and every important scene is personally supervised by Mr. Smith himself. This same system is utilized by Mr. Blackton, Mr. Smith's associate, as Mr. Blackton has his coterie of directors as well, and devotes his personal attention to the productions which he reads and selects.

After the "takes" have been made, the negative is projected and if either Mr. Smith or Mr. Blackton decides that it is not satisfactory or does not thoroughly illustrate the point in question, a retake is ordered. In this way an average standard of excellence is maintained.

This particular method of production was at the basis of the new personally picked program, which is now being released by the Vitagraph Company through the General Film. This personally picked program consists of a four-reel dramatic subject and a single reel comedy. Great care is exercised in the selection of subjects to see that they dove-tail nicely and afford an evening's entertainment of the highest quality. In other words, it would be foolish to combine a comedy-drama and a slap-stick comedy, whereas a heavy dramatic subject will balance nicely with a slap-stick comedy. In other words, Mr. Smith has assumed the exhibitor's and the patron's viewpoint. He has not produced pictures for the sake of producing them, but has always had in mind the perspective of the audience. This same rule holds good in the advertising of productions, and Mr. Smith makes it a point to have his advertising written and created from the buyer's standpoint, not the seller's.

The personally picked program, which will be released through the General Film Company, will have many innovations and novelties in the way of advertising. A campaign has been outlined which will standardize all advertising in such a way that paper, heralds and lobby display will have a similarity, and will become recognized as the personally picked program. In other words, the newspaper "ads," the posters, slides, heralds, etc., will have the same similarity of design which will couple up in such a way that the patron will be able to immediately recognize this particular brand of entertainment.

The first of the personally picked program, as decided on by Mr. Smith and Mr. Blackton, is a combination of "On Her Wedding Night," and "The Patent Food Conveyor." "On Her Wedding Night" is a four-reel drama directed by William Humphrey, whereas "The Patent Food Conveyor" is a comedy directed by C. J. Williams.

Another policy which is advantageous to the Vitagraph is the fact that it is the intention and desire of both Mr. Smith and Mr. Blackton to have every Vitagraph release viewed before it is purchased. Mr. Smith is a firm believer in screen inspection, as in this way the exhibitor is enabled to act as the final judge in the selection of his program. For years Mr. Smith has advocated the open market system of distribution, as it is the only logical way to sell merchandise. Heretofore the exhibitor has often booked a subject, and been disappointed in its drawing power, whereas if he had an opportunity to see the picture on the screen before booking it, he would have had no one to blame but himself.

PICTURE MATERIAL AMPLE

Vast Fund of Published Fiction at the Disposal of the Film Manufacturer Has Hardly Been Touched, Believes Premier Executive

"Actual live story material is essential for motion picture production today. One of the men prominent in the feature film industry recently made the assertion in one of the trade journals that the number of novels, plays and stories available for motion picture adaptation grows constantly smaller. While this is of course actually true since each picture so adapted ceases to be desirable for further production, it is however, far from the actual conditions that prevail," declares G. Blake Garrison, secretary of the Premier Program Corporation.

"The vast fund of published fiction at the disposal of the motion picture producer has scarcely been touched. The surface only has been scratched. Some of the most famous works, of course, have been produced in motion pictures, but not only are there enormous quantities of unpicturized stories, plays and novels, but the actual increase in fiction produced well nigh equals that used by the motion picture manufacturers. It is true much of the fiction published is not available for motion pictures, much of it lacks action, much of it is dependent upon clever or amusing dialogue, all of which is of course lost in a picturization, but any real, vital story, any portrayal of deep emotion, active conflict, would prove valuable material for a photoplay, provided that material is ably handled and artistically produced.

"I speak authoritatively on the methods employed by Premier Program because with these I am familiar, and in selecting the staff for the scenario department we have selected men who have made a careful study of the public demands and whose knowledge of literature is wide and constantly widening. We demand of them that they find for us the very best stories from the motion picture point of view, not only in modern literature but in the literature of all time past—nor do we bar the literature of foreign countries.

"Careful consideration of the enormous supply of material at our disposal convinces us that there is and will remain for many years to come a seemingly exhaustless supply of material—material that has already proven its worth in one of the allied forms of literature and yet is capable of reproving its merit under the new interpretation of motion pictures."

Keenan's Finest Work Coming

Frank Keenan, the eminent American character actor, will make his second appearance on the screen under the Triangle banner, during December, when he is presented by Thomas H. Ince in an intense and forceful, yet pathetic tragedy from the pen of J. G. Hawks, entitled "The Despoiler." Just completed at Inceville under the direction of Reginald Barker and the personal supervision of Ince, the production gives promise, it is said, of provoking a world-wide sensation by reason of the potency of its theme.

"The Despoiler" is a preachment, yet contains all the other elements of entertainment that go to make up a successful play. It goes for its locale to the mythical country of Balkania and there is enacted without offense to the conscience of any existing government.

Never since he began his career as an actor—and he makes this declaration unhesitatingly—has Keenan contributed a greater characterization to the world of amusement. He plays the part of the Emir of Balkania, a fierce, fearless despot who holds sway over a band of wild mountain horsemen, and around whose barbarous attack upon the girls and women of a neighboring town the story revolves. A number of massive sets are employed during the enactment of the piece. One depicts the entire village of Tournaisse, which is raided by the barbarians, another the courtyard and exterior of the abbey and a third the interior of the abbey, where the big scenes of the production take place.

The principal feminine role is played by Enid Markey, who, it is said, challenges Keenan for first honors by her work, while the third important part is portrayed by Charles K. French. Music for this production was composed by Louis Gottschalk.

The big four at the Triangle studio, Mary Alden, Mabel Normand, Mae March and Lillian Gish, stealing a few minutes for a gab feast.

"Ne'er Do Well" Ready for Release

The Selig Polyscope Company is preparing a wealth of publicity material to accompany the release of "The Ne'er Do Well," which is to be released in ten or more reels, shortly after the New Year. Posters of unusual design and drawing power have been prepared and in addition there are beautiful heralds, press sheets, cut sheets, etc. Everything in the publicity line that will help the exhibitor has been prepared by the Selig Company. "The Ne'er Do Well" was written by Rex Beach, produced by Colin Campbell and features an exceptional cast of players including Kathlyn Williams, Wheeler Oakman, Frank Clark, Eugenie Besserer, Sidney Smith and others. "The Ne'er Do Well" is considered a worthy successor to "The Spoilers," which was written by the same author, produced by the same director, and realistically enacted by the same stars.

Fast Service on Pathe Weekly

Mr. Gerber of Gerber and Hass, operators of the Majestic, Dayton, closed a contract with the Cincinnati Pathe office recently for both releases of Pathe News for indefinite run. To give Dayton the fastest news service possible Mr. Holah, the Pathe manager, arranged with the studio and factories to ship the News each week direct to the Majestic theater as soon as released, which will give Daytonions news that is news in pictures about as fast as it ever can be accomplished. Wednesday's release in New York will be shown on Friday and Saturday and Saturday's release Monday and Tuesday. In other words if something happens of current news value during the week Dayton will have it on the screen about 48 hours afterwards. Considering the distance to be traveled between the two points this is a remarkable piece of work.

TWO METRO COMPANIES LEAVE

Marguerite Snow With Rolfe Company Goes to Savannah While Cast Headed by Mary Miles Minter Will Work at St. Augustine

Two Metro companies, one destined for Savannah, Ga., and the other for St. Augustine, Fla., left for the south last week to begin work on the exteriors for several important feature productions, which Metro will release early in the coming season. One company was from the Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., studio, while the other represented the best talent of the Columbia Pictures Corporation's forces.

Edwin Carewe, who has just finished "The House of Tears" for Metro, with Emily Stevens in the stellar role, is in charge of the Rolfe aggregation and will work in and around Savannah, while Edgar Jones will direct the Columbia company of players. Director Jones' assistant, P. Thad. Volkman, who recently resigned from the Lubin forces, preceded the company to St. Augustine by several days in order to arrange for the necessary "locations," so that work might begin immediately upon the arrival of his chief and the players under Mr. Jones' direction.

Marguerite Snow will be starred in the productions made in Savannah, which Edwin Carewe will direct, while little Mary Miles Minter will have the stellar role in the features directed by Edgar Jones, which have the Florida Everglades for a background. Director Jones, it is said, has been given instructions to look over the lay of the land around St. Augustine, and if conditions are favorable to motion picture making a permanent Metro studio for winter work may be established there. The same directions have been given Mr. Carewe in regard to Savannah and its environs, though it is not probable that studio sites will be selected at both places.

Miss Snow, upon her arrival in Savannah, will at once begin work on the vehicle selected for her initial venture under the direction of Rolfe Photoplays, Inc. This is an elaborate photodramatization of "The Upstart," which had a long run at the Maxine Elliott theater, being one of the most successful plays presented last season, and one which will offer Miss Snow opportunity to exercise her wide range of talents in an unusual degree.

George Le Guere, who has just finished portraying the role of "Bibbs" Sheridan in "The Turmoil," the Columbia-Metro picturization of Booth Tarkington's great novel of the same name, directed by Edgar Jones and starring Valli Valli, will be featured with Miss Snow in "The Upstart." He will also play across from her in another Rolfe-Metro feature picture, the exteriors for which will be taken in and around Savannah, which is as yet unnamed.

The Columbia-Metro aggregation of players, under Director Edgar Jones and with Little Mary Miles Minter as the star, whose destination is St. Augustine, left New York on a special Pullman car on Wednesday, December 8. They will at once begin work on two five-part features, "Dimples" and "A Scrap of Pasteboard," both of them original manuscripts of unusually high calibre.

Opie, the Operator — He Begins His Career

Tom J. Carrigan, a newcomer to the Metro forces, will be featured with Miss Minter in her two new pictures. Mr. Carrigan has won success on both the screen and the speaking stage and will make an ideal leading man for the popular young star. Besides Mr. Carrigan, Miss Minter will be supported by an unusually strong cast, including Harry Ford, Peggy Hopkins, Ferd Tidmarsh, Schuyler Ladd, Mae De Metz and William Tauscher. Besides this number, the party at St. Augustine also includes Mrs. Shelby, the mother of Miss Minter, Hal Rosson, the head cameraman and several assistants.

Malcolm Williams in Gaumont Picture

The startling announcement that the Mutual Film Corporation would inaugurate a policy of frequent releases of five-reel Masterpictures is coupled with one of the Gaumont Company that its first five-reel photo-drama of this character will be called "The Idol of the Stage." It will be released January 12th with Malcolm Williams, a favorite both of Broadway and the screen, in the title role.

Malcolm Williams.

The knowing ones who follow closely all the moves of the various producing companies recognized that a new Gaumont-Mutual policy must be under way when it was made public that Malcolm Williams had gone south to be filmed in a production which for the time was nameless. Mr. Williams is a sterling actor of long experience. From the stage he brought to the screen finished technique, artistic ideals and an engaging presence. Starting his stage career at the age of seventeen, within two years Mr. Williams had advanced to leading parts, being known as the youngest leading man in America. His first appearance in New York was in "The War of Wealth." Then he was engaged by David Belasco to support Mrs. Leslie Carter in "The Heart of Maryland." For three years he played with her, both in this country and England.

Then followed engagements in the Jacob Litt production of "Caleb West," the Liebler production of "Unleavened Bread," and "The Young Wife," Mr. Williams playing the part of the husband; to be succeeded in turn by a tour as co-star with John Mason in "The Altar of Friendship." Mr. Williams was then engaged as leading man with William Farnam in "The Renegade," with Wilton Lackeye in "The Stranger," and as the minister in "Polly of the Circus." After two successful years as Laroque, the adventurer, in "Madame X," he appeared as leading man with Walker Whiteside in "The Typhoon." Last year he returned to David Belasco to play the jealous husband in "The Phantom Rival."

Fight Film in Supreme Court

On the last day of November the government filed in the United States Supreme Court its answer to the appeal in the Jack Johnson fight film case, which concerns the constitutionality of the act of 1912 against importing films of prize fights for public exhibition.

The film magnates contend that the films were not brought into the United States for sale but for exhibition, and argue that the government has no right to prevent importation for such a purpose, but in its brief filed in answer to the defendants the government compares the fight films with the importation of women under the white slave act, and argues that there does not have to be an actual sale of the imported objects, but that the use of the objects after importation constitutes commerce, though ownership may be retained by the importers. The government goes so far as to argue that if the object imported is not used for public exhibition but only for private enjoyment the matter is disposed of by the law which deals with films that "may be used for public exhibition."

The brief adds: "Neither the purpose for which articles are imported or transported, nor the use to which they are to be put after transportation, is any test of the commercial character of the transaction. It is not what is done or is to be done with these films after they reach the United States, but it is the intrinsic nature of the article and the act of transporting or introducing them here from abroad for any purpose that brings them within the purview of the commerce clause."

Four New Plays in Production

Four new Triangle plays have been put into production at the Fine Arts California studio, each cast headed by a prominent player.

De Wolf Hopper in a high-class comedy, under the direction of Edward Dillon, with Fay Tincher chiefly in the support of Mr. Hopper.

Norma Talmadge, Tully Marshall and Seena Owen in "Martha's Vindication," under the direction of C. M. and S. A. Franklin, supported principally by Ralph Lewis, Charles West and the four Fine Arts' "kiddies," George Stone, Carmen De Rue, Violet Radcliffe and Francis Carpenter.

Wilfred Lucas in "Acquitted," under direction of Paul Powell, with a supporting cast that includes Bessie Love, Sam de Grasse, Mary Alden, F. A. Turner, Elmer Clifton and W. E. Freemont.

Mae Marsh and Robert Harron in "Hoodoo Ann" under the direction of Lloyd Ingraham.

Books Fifty-two Gold Rooster Plays

J. A. Broomhall, the well known and influential exhibitor from Hamilton, Ohio, together with his manager, John H. Schwalm of the Jewell theater, Hamilton, made arrangements with C. E. Holah, branch manager of Pathe's Cincinnati office for a big contract calling for 52 weeks' service of Pathe Gold Rooster Plays to be shown two days each week at his theater commencing December 22 and 23.

Where Is the Biggest Room for Improvement?

BY CARL HORTON PIERCE*

"WHERE is the biggest room for improvement in the photoplay industry today?" is a question that is naturally in the minds of everyone that is thinking of advancement in this industry which is leaping rapidly into first place among the world's most important activities.

The answer: "In the selling of his photoplays to his patrons, on the part of the exhibitor."

That the exhibitors of the world have made rapid strides in the presentation of their pictures to the public there can be no question. At a banquet recently given at Hotel Astor, one British agent said: "Britain used to lead the exhibitors of the world, but with the opening of the Strand in New York a new era was inaugurated which placed America in the forefront of the exhibitors of the world."

Such presentation of photoplays as is now given in this country, as illustrated by the Strand of New York, the Park of Boston, the Majestic of Detroit and other theaters of what one might call the "Paramount type" are excellent so far as they go. But the fact remains that not nearly as much is being done as might be done toward bringing to the attention of the patrons of the splendid points of the photoplays that are to be shown at the theaer.

If a man has merchandise to sell, he takes pains to acquaint his audience with the merits of the goods. If a theater manager is about to present a photoplay, he is usually content to take an excerpt from the press notices sent out by the publicity department of the manufacturer and try to get it inserted in the reading notices of the local papers. This notice, plus a small advertisement, is usually the limit of his activity. In this he is not to be blamed—especially during the days gone by—because he had no opportunity before the date of showing of the film of presenting his arguments to the public in advance of the showing. This practically amounted to his showing goods whose advantages he himself did not know, consequently he could not exploit them to his public.

Manufacturers, therefore, have become aware of the necessity of getting out a good sales-talk on the film, together with accessories that will enhance the interest in it—all of this well in advance of the showing of the picture.

This is only applying the principles in the film business that are used by every wide-awake commercial enterprise—but it is something that must be done more and more in order to properly "sell" the public in advance with the desire to see the picture.

Two things are essential to this progress: one that the manufacturers shall use every increasing activity in getting out of this sales-help; the other, that the exhibitor shall avail himself of the privilege thus offered.

The tendency on the part of the manufacturer to awaken to this condition is more noticeable as each day goes by. But the awakening of the exhibitor to the need of more intelligent representation of his goods to the public is one that seems to be only a gradual leavening process—forced in many cases, as the exhibitor finds that his business is decreasing. He probably is not able to give an answer as to why it is decreasing. He simply says, as one exhibitor said to me recently: "Last year I used to do a business of $1,500 a week. This year it has fallen to $1,000—and I cannot understand it. Times are good—everyone has plenty of money—but our business has fallen off $500 a week. I think it must be the photoplays."

Now, as a matter of fact, the photoplays offered him are constantly increasing in perfection and merit.

*Special Representative Oliver Morosco Photoplay Co.

Charles Marriott.

Charlotte Greenwood.

Sidney Grant.

Three featured personages in Oliver Morosco photoplay.

So evidently (since the pictures are meeting the demands of the increase in discriminaton on the part of his public) it is not the pictures. When I asked him what he is doing to advertise and shove his pictures, he replied: "Nothing. We have a regular trade. We don't need to advertise. Our customers, comprising the best people of this town, all know about us."

There was his answer; he did not recognize the increase in competition that had taken place during the year and was simply dying the natural death of the man who does not advertise—but rather stagnates until ossification sets in and death follows.

I asked him what photoplay he was about to run. He mentioned one that would particularly appeal to his public, which includes the patronage of a large university. I wrote a special circular for him, addressed directly at his college men. I told them what advantages they could derive from the seeing of this photoplay with its wonderful accompanying music.

As a result, instead of laying this photoplay on the shelf because he did not understand it or its drawing power, he played it to a record audience of satisfied patrons. An exhibitor not one hundred miles from him had a similar experience with the same picture.

What is the answer? It lies in the increase of merchandising methods in the presentation of films on the part of the exhibitor. If there is some point in the photoplay that will particularly appeal to the people of his locality, the exhibitor should pick up this point; either get it into his press notices, or include it in a throw-away; or in some manner properly exploit the subject so that the public will get the message and respond—or, more properly speaking, be given an opportunity to respond.

The exhibiting end of the business requires a rare combination of showmanship, business ability, integrity and acumen, and incessant activity. Some of our theaters are managed by men who possess all of these requirements. Such managers are making an overwhelming success. But there are other instances where a manager is either trying, without a press man, to cover so many details himself that his press matter neither has the punch to get over with the public, or he hasn't the time to even read the matter that is sent him so as to play up the strong points of the pictures he is to run.

From out of all this heterogeneous mass of unsystematic methods of handling pictures there will undoubtedly arise, due to the necessity of the times, a systematic handling and presentation of pictures which will greatly increase the revenue of the theater, thereby amply paying the managements that engage proper assistance in the advance exploiting of the motion picture features.

ENJOYABLE BEEFSTEAK DINNER

Adam Kessel Guest of Honor at Most Successful Informal Affair of Its Kind Given by Screen Club

Saturday evening, December 11, was the date of the latest beefsteak dinner given by the Screen Club at the club rooms, 165 West Forty-seventh street, New York. It was the most successful of all the beefsteak chewing affairs given by this popular organization, the more so, perhaps, because Adam Kessel was the guest of honor.

The new administration of the club expects to give a number of special evenings during the winter by way of promoting harmony and good fellowship. Billy Quirk, the club's new president, is living up to expectations by inaugurating a series of special nights, with some prominent club member as the guest of honor. One of the features of the evening was the remarkable expression of confidence by the members in King Baggot. When he arose to speak, in response to a call, the entire assemblage rose with him and cheered him without a stop for five minutes by the watch.

Speeches were delivered by Adam Kessel, Douglas Fairbanks, Sam Spedon, King Baggot, John Ince, William Steiner, Harry A. Palmer, Fred B. Murphy (of Boston), Norman Selby (Kid McCoy), Charles Kessel, Arthur Butler Graham and Frank Kugler. Recitations were given by Gladden James and George Beban.

Among those present were: Adam Kessel, Billy Quirk, Jules Burnstein, Alan Dwan, King Baggot, Douglas Fairbanks, Stanley Walpole, Eric Mayne, Lindsay J. Hall, J. W. Johnston, Harry Benham, Harry Reichenbach, Royal Byron, Gladden James, George Reehm, Al Mayo, Hugh Hoffman, Herbert Miles, Edward Roskam, John W. Noble, William N. Bailey, Frank Carroll, Hopp Hadley, George Ingleton, William F. Aldrach, Tefft Johnston, Harry S. Waldron, Harry Keepers, C. Jay Williams, Sam Pelzman, Harry Cohn, Ben Goetz, Syd Samson, Joe Smiley, Marshall Farnum, Thomas G. Wiley, William J. McKenna, Dallis Fitzgerald, Paul Scardon, Fred Sullivan, Lee Gainsborg, L. Levine, Sam Zierler, E. W. Kramer, S. B. Kramer, Harry A. Palmer, Fred B. Murphy (Boston), H. A. Sheldon, Harry McRae Webster, John Ince, Arthur Ashley, Harry Solter, Charles K. Ash, Julian Solomon, Hugh Jeffries, Walter McNamara, Matt Moore, S. A. Jones, William A. Suter, Oscar J. Lynch, W. J. Sandall, George J. Cooke, Walter Clifford, W. L. Schulman, Arthur L. King, S. J. Hamilton, Eddie Hardin, P. H. Hahn, Frank G. Kugler, Arthur N. Smallwood, Harry Jay Smith, William Steiner, Charles Kessel, Edwin Stanley, C. L. Ketcham, Elmer J. McGovern, Harry Spingler, William J. Rosenberger, William H. Tooker, H. J. Warner, Charles W. Ritchie, Kid McCoy, Arthur M. Werner, J. H. Gerhardt, Arthur Butler Graham, C. A. Willat, John N. Race, A. H. Byrd, Paul Panzer, Joe Phillips, George Beban, Duncan McRae, Lawrence White, Albert Dorris, Fred Nicholls, Sidney Bracy, Bert D. Corbin, William C. Chamberlin, Martin Fisher, A. P. Leibinger, James A. Timony, Howard G. Dorr, Anthony Merlo, Devore Parmer, Raymond L. Schrock, Harold Z. Levine, Henry Cronjager, Albert Roccardi, William Humphrey, Sam Spedon, Charles Eldridge, Edward Thomas and William Shea.

Bushman and Bayne with New Director

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, the popular Metro stars, have begun work on the marvelous and novel five-part productions, "The Man Without a Conscience," at the Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., studio, 3 West Sixty-first street, New York City. These stars are under contract with the Quality Pictures Corporation, one of Metro's producing companies, and since coming to New York from the Quality-Metro studio in Hollywood, Cal., have been using the Rolfe studios until suitable arrangements can be made for their accommodation elsewhere. During the absence in the south of the Rolfe and Columbia companies, headed respectively by Marguerite Snow and Mary Miles Minter, however, the Bushman-Bayne company will make the Rolfe studio its own.

Immediately upon the completion of "The Man Without a Conscience," these two stars will begin work on their next big feature, "The Red Mouse." This five-part feature was written by William Hamilton Osborne, the author of "Neal of the Navy" and other films.

Further Concerning the HEARST VITAGRAPH

NEWS PICTORIAL

Formerly Hearst Selig Weekly

The Greater News Reel

LAST week all motion picturedom sat up at the news of the discontinuance of Hearst-Selig and the entrance of its successor Hearst-Vitagraph. It was told how in a dramatic interview with Mr. William Randolph Hearst, foremost news authority in America, a plan for a greater news reel was evolved. It was told how this new outline was so revolutionary in its aspect that it was difficult to appreciate at one sitting.

As someone said, "The greater news reel is more than a news reel". It should be defined by another name. It might also be called the motion picture newspaper, for the Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial is to be run on the same lines as any of the Hearst newspapers. In other words, the Hearst-Vitagraph is to be bound by no traditions, no past rules—it is to be built on imagination, such imagination as governs only Hearst himself.

JANUARY the THIRD NINETEEN SIXTEEN

the first issue of the new Hearst-Vitagraph makes its appearance succeeding the Hearst-Selig.

Get your requests in now so as to permit no lapse in your news reel service. Every Hearst-Selig exhibitor should make it his business to book the Hearst-Vitagraph.

But this doesn't limit those who have not known the Hearst reel to take advantage of it at once.

See the Next Page →

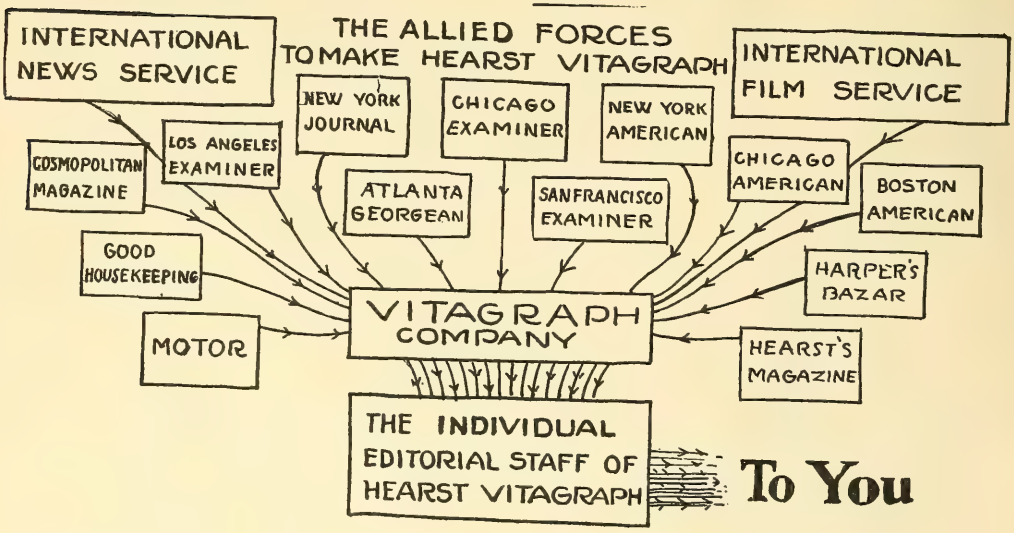
To-be-made-at-the-Fountai
Greatest-News-Gathering-Organiza

Survey your news field, consider where those men who furnish the real news, the newspaper news, get their material.

The Hearst Organization gathers and furnishes news not only to Hearst's many newspapers and magazines but through International News Service and International Film Service to over a thousand other publications.

Examine the map, prick it at any point and I will show you the name of the man who writes the news at that place and the name of the camera man who takes the pictures.

Gaze at the attached graphic representation of the Hearst news gathering organization. Each of these squares represents at least a dozen men. Jump down to the very last square on the page, illustrating the Individual Staff of the Hearst-Vitagraph and I will convince you that no other reel has any greater staff than that division alone.



Man for man, the individual editorial staff of the Hearst-Vitagraph measures up, man for man with the entire staff of any other news reel. And then from that point upwards through those other magazines and Hearst newspapers and news gathering institutions, there is nothing with which to compare the competitors.

When you want steel the U. S. Steel Corporation is the place to go for it. When you want oil the Standard Oil is the place to go for it. When you want news go to news headquarters—the Hearst Organization.

If you want to prove to yourself how infallible the Hearst Organization is from a news standpoint, take any newspaper in the country which doesn't use the Hearst Service and article for article, photograph for photograph—see which got there first with the news—the individual publisher or Hearst.

You can, therefore, imagine why Hearst-Vitagraph with this entire organization at our disposal, the best of every unit of it turned into the direction of the Hearst-Vitagraph, why it must immediately assume the uppermost position.

HEARST-VITAGRAPH NEWS PICTORIAL

ead-of-News-by-America's n - The HEARST Institution-

In Collaboration with
VITAGRAPH

Hearst for the news gathering. Vitagraph for the pictorial effects. There you have the ideal combination.

The Vitagraph Organization which has gained its supremacy as a producer, through sheer force of perfect productions, has gained this place because it has the inherent abilities. Therefore, realizing that Vitagraph not only assists in the news gathering and making up of this reel, it is important to realize its function in the refining of the film itself.

The exhibitor can scarcely appreciate the care and religiously zealous attention which is lavished on every foot of negative and positive in the Vitagraph Laboratory—the largest and most perfectly equipped of its kind in the world.

The Vitagraph staff which has earned its right to be known as the foremost technical group in the industry, has itself been responsible for numerous improvements in cameras, films and projection.

It is one thing to get a film, it is another thing to bring out its fullest value. Just as the artist works over his canvas until it is perfect, so the Vitagraph Laboratory men will work over the Hearst-Vitagraph negative.

Vitagraph as the print manufacturer and distributing agent will answer all questions regarding the reel itself—or for that matter any other question that might be addressed to it individually.

The Vitagraph Company of America

East 15th Street and Locust Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

You Book It Independently

NO! Hearst-Vitagraph is not to be bought on a program. The exhibitor who wants it must get it separately. This means that it is not to be packed away and bolstered up by anything else.

No good comedy or drama is going to save it. It has no aids, no helpers, no supporters. It comes to you absolutely unaided.

It comes to you as itself. You accept it in that way and this means that if it does not make good as an independent—out it goes.

Free On Request EXHIBITORS Guide Book

There is now on the press and will be ready for distribution inside of the next two or three days a complete analysis of the story of Hearst-Vitagraph.

This explains the reasons for the discontinuance of the Hearst-Selig for its successor the Hearst-Vitagraph; explains about the intricate workings of the entire news gathering organization, explains about the work of Vitagraph in the make-up of the reel, and explains the various ideas listed on this page.

The ZONE Idea

The exhibitor residing in San Francisco will have an entirely different service than the man in New York. The man in Pittsburg will have a different service than the man in Chicago.

Each territory will have its Hearst-Vitagraph organization. A distinct entity working independently of any other as far as local news are concerned—but supplying other sections with that which is of importance outside. In other words you will receive European and Eastern News from New York, Far East and Pacific News from San Francisco, interior news from Pittsburg and Chicago and then in addition your own local news.

Buy at Your Own Price

We have worked out a system whereby you absolutely make your own price. A chart most simple to understand enables you to select for yourself the date of your release and the price you are to pay.

Backed by National Advertising

When you take the Hearst-Vitagraph you thereby do more than merely show the greatest news pictorial — you attach to yourself the power of a tremendous national campaign, runnning in newspapers and magazines throughout the country, which is to send the multitudes to that theatre exhibiting Hearst-Vitagraph

This campaign will be the most astounding thing yet heard of in the advertising of motion picture features and we promise you that the publication power of William Randolph Hearst is at the disposal of the Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial. Analyze this and see what it means.

HEARST-VITAGRAPH

NEWS PICTORIAL

(Formerly the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial—Now Better)

226 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK CITY

Editors: ED J. MOCK and PAUL H. WOODRUFF
Associate Editors
Neil C. Gaward Thomas C. Kennedy
John C. Garrett Charles R. Condon
Advertising Manager: ALLEN L. HAASE

NEW YORK OFFICE, 1022 LONGACRE BUILDING
Forty-second Street and Broadway
Telephone Bryant 7030
CHARLES R. CONDON, Eastern Representative

This publication is free and independent of all business or house connections or control. No manufacturer or supply dealer, or their stockholders or representatives, have any financial interest in Motography or any voice in its management or policy.

Entered at Chicago Post Office as Second Class Mail Matter

MOTOGRAPHY

THE MOTION PICTURE TRADE JOURNAL

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY
ELECTRICITY MAGAZINE CORPORATION
MONADNOCK BUILDING
CHICAGO, ILL.
Telephone: Harrison 3014—All Departments

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS

Changes of advertising copy should reach the office of publication not less than fifteen days in advance of date of issue. Regular date of issue, every Saturday. New advertisements will be accepted up to within ten days of date of issue, but proof of such advertisements can not be shown in advance of publication.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE

Per year $3.00
Canada - - - - Per year $4.00
Foreign - - - - Per year 5.00
Single copy - - - - .15
FOR SALE AT ALL NEWS STANDS

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS

REMITTANCES—Remittances should be made by check, New York draft or money order, in favor of MOTOGRAPHY. Foreign subscriptions may be remitted direct by International Postal Money Order.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS—The old address should be given as well as the new, and notice should be received two weeks in advance of the desired change.

If Your News Dealer Will Not Supply You—Please Notify Us

Volume XIV CHICAGO, DECEMBER 25, 1915 Number 26

The Percentage System and the Censored Film

WHEN exchanges buy prints of all their maufacturers' productions, the loss on an unpopular subject is distributed over all the successful subjects. The many efficient, hard-working films support the few undesirable, and consequently idle, films. The degree of inefficiency of any one film is thus not directly perceptible to its manufacturer, who only knows in a general way that it is not going well.

There is more than one reason for the commercial failure of a film. The most obvious reason, of course, is that the exhibitors do not care for it and will not run it. But the same result is reached if the exhibitors want to run it but are not permitted to. A film rejected by all of the various censor boards operating in so many states and cities is apt to be commercially unsuccessful. This fact is not necessarily a reflection on the rejected film or its maker; it is an unfortunate condition which must be faced and allowed for until it can be corrected.

It is plain that a film rejected by the censors of Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois (Chicago) must be commercially crippled. However popular it may be in uncensored territory, it can never reach the heights of success it deserves. Those three states are responsible for a lot of business.

Under the percentage system of distribution the film manufacturer receives from the exchange, instead of a certain fixed price, a proportion of the gross rentals of each film. With this arrangement the maker himself becomes responsible for his product. He makes money on good films and loses money on bad ones—which is as it should be. When we say "bad" films, we mean, of course, films that do not bring enough rental money to be profitable. The fault may not be with the film itself; it may be that it is not sufficiently advertised, or it may be censored out of a profitable market.

This is not an anti-censorship argument. We have carried plenty of those, and doubtless will have more before the evil is eradicated. While it is with us—or rather against us—we must do business on a censorship basis. The value of a film lies in the number of theaters where it will be or can be exhibited.

On the percentage plan, the film manufacturer whose product is barred from exhibition loses money. In spite of popular opinion, there is not enough profit in film manufacturing to compensate for the total obliteration of several of the best states in the Union. When the burden falls directly on the maker of the film censored, complacency ceases to be a virtue.

If the censorship territory embraces ten per cent of the total and the censors eliminate ten per cent of the output, there is a net loss of one per cent. That, distributed over the whole business, is insignificant. Where the loss fell on the exchanges, it was inconsiderable. Were the whole one per cent to fall upon one manufacturer, who perhaps made only five per cent of the total output, his loss would be too great to stand.

These figures are not intended to be accurate. No one manufacturer could make all of the censored films even if he tried. But the principle remains. The curse of censorship has never been evenly scattered. Some manufacturers get more than their share of the censors' attention. When everybody chipped in and paid the bill, metaphorically at least, it did not matter much. But if he must pay the piper who dances, he must needs do less dancing.

To make stuff that is guaranteed censor-proof may look like a concession to the censorship principal. But the quickest way to eliminate censors is to make them useless and unnecessary. A board which can find nothing to eliminate will itself be eliminated in the ordinary evolution of things.

The manufacturer who didn't care before will care when every censored film knocks a hole in his pocketbook. He will be more careful to observe the rules of the censors—if they have any rules—however foolish they may be. And then some day the censor boards, atrophied by disuse, will drop off like the tail of an evoluted Darwinian monkey, and the picture's will be free.

It's an optimistic view of the situation, anyway. We hope it will work out that way.

"At Enormous Expense"

RECENTLY Mr. Goldfish said: "There is a belief at present that money, and money alone, will bring success in motion pictures. This belief will be dispelled. What will bring success in the future will be brains, artistic ideals and organization. And these things are not to be had for so much money."

No doubt there is too much tendency to talk in dollar marks. The habit is not peculiar to the film business. Some philosophers would call it an American characteristic.

But there is one phase of this practice that can be changed—and should be. The press agent who runs the paper cost of production up into fabulous sums should modify his hyperbole while he yet has the public's confidence.

It costs lots of money to make big productions. Everybody knows that. It does not cost as much as the press agent generally claims. Everybody is beginning to know that also. A million dollars invested in a film series, or a hundred thousand in a feature, must show in the picture or there is no use talking about it. Nobody but fools would pay to see a picture of a well down which it was claimed a million dollars had been dropped. On the other hand, if the cost shows in the picture, as it surely must, calling attention to it should be unnecessary.

Outside of a few vast spectacles which stand practically alone, motion picture history has not shown and is not now showing that the most expensive productions are the most successful or the most popular. The art of the author and the art of the producer are the only vital factors in production, and these in themselves are not costly. The enormous salaries paid for artificially inflated player reputations form no legitimate part of the true value.

Time will take care of the overpaid player, and probably no great length of time either. Let it also take care of the over-use of the dollar mark. There is nothing to gain by talking million dollar costs where they plainly do not exist. There is nothing to gain by paying thousand dollar prices for hundred dollar players. There is little to gain by mentioning money at all. But where, in good judgment, it is thought wise to put forward the dollar sign, let it represent a true and reasonable figure, not one calculated to brand the claimant as either wilfully exaggerative or unwisely extravagant.

Just a Moment Please

Well, that's over.

—

Christmas shopping all done!

—

Long sigh of relief.

—

Our anxiety over the Christmas shopping must, however, have been very slight compared with that experienced by the P. A. of the Liberty theater in New York, who proudly proclaims this week that "The Birth of a Nation" has reached its eight hundredth performance without a single change in the original cast, a single change in a syllable of its text, or a single slip on the part of any of the performers to appear when their cue was given. Now there's really something to heave a sigh of relief over.

—

SLIP US THE SECRET, "HEN."

Speaking of "The Birth of a Nation" reminds us that "Hen" Walthall is trying to win a bet this week by raising a moustache in two weeks, or so the truthful P. A. alleges. "Hen," it seems, in "The Strange Case of Mary Page" has to appear both with and without a moustache, and has been so bold as to lay a wager that he can play the part without the aid of a single false hair. Gee, if he does it, we'd like to have the secret and see if it would do anything for our bald dome.

—

Don't it beat all how one thing brings up another, as the man said when he leaned over the rail.

—

Anyway, the reference to Walthall's moustache reminds us that Jack Herman, the famous stage director of wrestling matches, boxing contests and six-day bicycle races, was lamped on Main street one day this week with apparently much of the famous "Crimson Rambler" which used to adorn his upper lip missing. Mercy, Jack, what's happened? Are they on your trail again?

—

ROMAINE FIELDING, PLEASE NOTE.

Phil Mindil, press agent for Ashley Miller, in his latest effusion loudly proclaims to all that Ashley, having decided to both make a film and a legitimate stage production of his latest brain child, is now entitled to the designation of actor-playwright-photographer-author-director-stage manager.

—

THE MOVIE SHOW.

(F. P. A. in N. Y. Tribune, Via Reel Life.)

I do not sing of ancient times or glories that are dead;
The feature reel, "The Present," I shall versify instead.
No need have I for ancient themes to give me food for rhyme;
We've thrills and throbs a-plenty 'round the corner—for a dime.

It's fine to be a scholar and to revel in the past,
But still the movies have the ancient pantomimes outclassed.
The libraries are full of books, but I prefer to go
For up-to-date instruction to the Motion Picture Show.

In reading classic novels you must struggle through the stuff
The author tries to masquerade as Philosophic Fluff;
It's different in the movies; when you watch a feature reel,
You make your own philosophy, and cut the author's spiel.

Then harken to my slogan with its cheerful rhythmic flow:
Go spend a dime this evening at the nearest Movie Show.

—

Jay Cairns is authority for the statement that when Helen Holmes and J. P. McGowan, her director, were capsized and nearly drowned last week in the harbor while taking a scene for "The Girl and the Game," they were rescued by sailors from the U. S. Cruiser Hancock. Gosh, Jay, has Uncle Sam got to have a part in this fillim? We thought it a railroad story, too, and not a tank drama. Next week you'll be ringing Annette Kellerman in on us, we suspect.

—

Now to hang up our stocking.

—

Come on, Santa Claus!

N. G. C.

Some Current Releases Reviewed

The Current Triangle Bill

Latest Offerings of Ince and Griffith Studios Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

ONE of the most enjoyable Triangle bills that has ever been offered at the Studebaker is presented by Messrs. Jones, Linick & Schaefer this week. It includes "Let Katy Do It," a Fine Arts production featuring Jane Grey and Tully Marshall; "The Corner," an Ince production featuring George Fawcett and Willard Mack; and "Fatty and the Broadway Stars." a two-reel Keystone featuring every notable at those studios, not excepting such stars as William Collier, Lew Fields, Joe Weber, Sam Bernard, Joe Jackson, Ford Sterling and Mack Sennett. All three of the pictures are now running the full week at the Studebaker, the management having decided it was impossible to pick merely the two best ones.

In "The Corner" a tragic story of a sociological nature is presented, the theme having to do with the attempt of David Waltham (George Fawcett). a millionaire food king, to corner the food supply of the entire country for his own profit. In carrying out his nefarious design the family of John Adams (Willard Mack) suffers cruelly, but in the end Adams is the means of bringing about Waltham's death.

Walter Edwards directed the production which is wonderfully convincing and leads gradually up to a tremendous climax. After Adams, made desperate through starvation, steals a loaf of bread, he is given thirty days in the workhouse and Mrs. Adams is compelled, in order to support her two children. to accept the attentions of a wily agent of her landlord's. Waltham grows richer and richer, while all over the city thousands are starving. Adams, returning from his stay at the city workhouse. discovers how his wife has suffered and swears vengeance. He seeks and finds work in one of the big food warehouses of Waltham and one night succeds in inducing Waltham himself to visit the place, alone. Adams securely binds the rich food magnate, fastening him so that he is unable to move, and then places food just beyond his reach.

Having made sure that Waltham cannot escape. Adams piles huge boxes of canned goods all about him and leaves him to die a slow and horrible death. Though the police frantically search for the missing man, nobody suspects that he is imprisoned within one of his own warehouses, and there. days later, he dies beneath a huge pile of cases and crates that he topples down upon himself during his struggles to reach the food just beyond the grasp of his hands. Although the story is a gruesome tale, it is splendidly played, Clara

Katy and her flock in "Let Katy Do It."

Williams as Mrs. Adams, doing her usual clever work and Fawcett and Mack making their roles wonderfully realistic.

The Keystone comedy relieves the tension worked up by the Ince offering and Roscoe Arbuckle gets laughs by the hundreds with his impersonation of a janitor of the Keystone studio. He butts into scenes where such stars as Sam Bernard, Weber and Fields and others are at work. splashes wet clothing all over William Collier and Mack Sennett, and winds up by falling alsleep and dreaming that he is the hero of the entire organization by rescuing several lives when the plant catches fire. He wakes up to discover that the fire is but a dream and ends his career by being ignominiously "canned."

Roscoe Arbuckle, Sam Bernard and Ivy Crosthewaite in a scene from "Fatty and the Broadway Stars."

Jane Grey makes her Triangle debut, supported by Tully Marshall, in "Let Katy Do It," produced by C. M. and S. A. Franklin, in what everybody concedes is one of the best offerings yet from the Griffith forces. Miss Grey makes of Katy Standish a girl who wins your instant sympathy. and as her responsibilities increase and she finds herself finally with a family of seven little tots to care for, you like her better and better. Tully Marshall. who is instantly recalled for his splendid work in "The Sable Lorcha," gives a new characterization as Oliver Putnam, but one which will win him many new admirers. Ralph Lewis is strong as "Uncle Dan" and Luray Huntley as Priscilla Standish and Charles West as Caleb Adams, give the very best of themselves in their respective roles. As for Violet Radcliffe, George Stone. Carmen de Rue, Francis Carpenter, Ninon Fovieri, Lloyd Pearl and Beulah Burns. the seven youngsters, they are all adorable and not a little of the success of the production is due to them. The Franklins have proven themselves nothing short of wizards in making these children "act" without the slightest appearance of acting on the part of the youngsters. Photographically. artistically, and in the wording of the sub-titles the picture is a gem.

Katy, as the story opens, is disclosed as the maid of all work at the Maine farm where she resides with her parents and sister. Priscilla. When the parents die and Priscilla marries Caleb. Katy is still the one upon whom all the work is shoved. The seven little tots born to Caleb and Priscilla demand most of Katy's time, and then, one day. the parents are killed in a convincingly staged railroad accident and Katy is left to mother the whole little brood.

Oliver, whom Katy had loved in her girlhood, has gone to Mexico with her Uncle Dan, and thither Katy and the youngsters journey upon Uncle Dan's invitation. The children prove little heroes and heroines when a band of Mexicans attack the cabin where they live, and alone and unaided they stand off the bandits until help arrives. Eventually Katy finds happiness with Oliver, whose Mexican mine proves a bonanza and they move to more pleasant surroundings.

Clara Williams in scene from "The Corner."

"Author! Author!"

Three-Reel Mustang Comedy, to Be Released Dec. 25 Reviewed by John C. Garrett

FOR its release on Christmas Day, the Mustang Company offers the fifth of the film versions of the incomparable Van Loan stories in three reels. "Author! Author!" is the title of this wholly enjoyable comedy featuring Art Acord as Buck Parvin; Rea Berger as Marcellus Peckinpaw, the author of the book which is to be screened and who insists on directing the production; Chief Big Tree as Peter Lone Wolf, and Larry Peyton as James Montague.

This offering is one which is not only full of humorous incidents and clean humor, but is interesting and instructive. The production gives an insight into the life of the motion picture actor. The scenes showing the camp laid in the mountain where the company are taking some of their outdoor settings, their eating tents, etc., all being true to life.

Art Acord as Buck Parvin gives a very fine exhibition of broncho busting and lariat throwing and finally shows his strength and skill by grabbing a monstrous bull by the horns and gradually putting him to the ground. Chief Big Tree does some good work as the real blood thirsty Indian, by the way a graduate of Harvard, and Rea Berger is exceptionally good as Marcellus Peckinpaw.

The Indian chief congratulates Buck Parvin on his lariat throwing.

Marcellus Peckinpaw, with his scant five feet of height, owl-eyed, and tortoise rimmed spectacled, is the celebrated author of a "best seller" book and when offered a handsome sum by the president of the Titan Motion Picture Company for film rights Peckinpaw insists that he be allowed to superintend the direction of the picture and accordingly he arrives in the West and here is the bane of Director Montague's existence with his "It isn't in my book."

The author insists on having things done his way and friction between author and director becomes acute. Montague declares that he will give $50 to be rid of the "pestiferous man of letters." Buck Parvin, overhearing this, concocts a plan. The next day he introduces Peter Lone Wolf, a real Indian, to Peckinpaw and takes the latter to Peter Lone Wolf's bungalow, where he has strung a few wigs on a string. He tells him that these are a few of the scalps that Lone Wolf has gotten in the last two or three years and further scares poor Marcellus by telling him that the Indian goes on a spree once in a while and that he has taken a keen dislike to Peckinpaw.

The next day while the company are taking one of the big scenes a rumbling roar is heard, then a whoop and over the hill in full war paint and feathers, comes Peter Lone Wolf. The whole company disperses. Montague takes refuge underneath the table, the property man buries himself in the haywagon and the rest of the company hide in whatever places they can find. The Indian singles out Peckinpaw and with tomahawk aloft, pursues the poor little man until at last on the verge of collapse he takes off his toupee and rushes into a marsh, where he hides up to his waist in slime.

When Lone Wolf returns to camp Buck explains to the company that it was his idea of getting rid of Marcellus and then all of the company are sore at him because they were not let in on it. Hours after dark, the author crawls back into camp and makes his way to the director's tent, where he hears familiar voices and hears Peter Lone Wolf in fluent and well chosen words of English, disparaging him as a writer and his book as a work and then a great light dawns upon him and he realizes that he has been duped.

The next morning he decides to return to civilization and Buck agrees to split "fifty-fifty" with Peter Lone Wolf.

"Father and the Boys"

Ade's Famous Story Released by Universal December 21. Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

ONE of the best comedies that has ever been screened will be offered Monday, December 20, by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, as its Broadway Universal feature of that week. It is "Father and the Boys," adapted from George Ade's famous comedy-drama of that title, and features Digby Bell in the role of Lemuel Morewood, father of the "boys," the same role which William H. Crane made famous on the legitimate stage.

Joseph DeGrasse is credited with the direction, and he has certainly crammed most of the incidents that made the spoken play famous, into this screen adaptation.

H. Ham as William Rufus Morewood, and Bud Chase as Thomas Jefferson Morewood, are ideal types for the personalities of the two boys, while Yona Landowska as Emily Donelson, and Mae Gaston as Frances Berkeley make pretty and winsome sweethearts for William and Thomas.

To Hayward Mack falls the role of Major Didsworth, and the way he plays that famous character brings screams of laughter, or at least it did when the picture was screened for Chicago exhibitors in advance of its release. Louise Carbasse makes of Bessie Brayton just the type of girl needed for that part, and she and Mr. Bell put over their scenes together in a wonderful fashion, getting every possible laugh out of the situations, without once playing their roles so broadly as to make them burlesque instead of straight comedy.

The story is so well known that it is unnecessary to comment at length upon it, other than to say that Lemuel Morewood, a wealthy broker, upon finding his sons more interested in boxing and society than in business, wakes them up with the assistance of Bessie Brayton, a western orphan who arrives in New York to become a society entertainer. He sets such a pace that the boys find it is hopeless to keep up with dad.

When Lemuel goes to Nevada to assist Bessie in getting her share of the Bluebird mine, the boys jump to the conclusion that dad has eloped with her, and set out to rescue him from she whom they think is a designing adventuress. On the way to Nevada Tom becomes engaged to Emily, and Billy to Frances, as their father had wished; therefore, upon their arrival after explaining everything, dad declares that after all he has the laugh on the boys. The boys, for their part, agree to return and take their rightful place as successors to dad in his business.

"The Unfaithful Wife"

Fox Offers Famous Star in Films, Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

ROBERT MANTELL, in the Fox feature offering of this week, which is entitled "The Unfaithful Wife," proves himself to be as good an actor in films as he has demonstrated that he is on the legitimate stage, and if Mr. Mantell, in his future appearances, can keep up the same high standard he has set in this unique production, it is a safe guess that Mr. Fox will retain him indefinitely as a screen star.

Gordon Edwards is credited with the direction of the production, which, though rather gruesome, is strongly dramatic, and filled with such intense situations that it scores a dramatic triumph.

Special mention is due the back grounds, which are both tasty and beautiful. The photography is well up to the Fox standard, and the supporting company includes Genevieve Hamper (who in private life is Mrs. Mantell), Stuart Holmes in the heavy role of Arturo Durazzi, and little Runa Hodges as Stella, the child of Count Fabian and Juliet, his wife.

Count Fabiano Romani, an Italian nobleman, discovers that his wife is in love with Arturo Durazzi, and shortly afterward is stricken with what appears to be cholera. The guilty couple, who have long been anxious to have the husband out of the way, bury him in the family vault of the Romani, but Count Fabiano, who was not dead, manages to escape from the tomb, and with the thought of breaking up the unfortunate affair between his wife and Arturo, disguises himself, and conceives the novel idea of winning back his wife from the man who has taken her from him.

Fabiano meets Juliet by posing as a rich friend of her dead husband, and succeeds in winning her promise to marry him. Arturo, furious at discovering her fickleness, challenges Fabiano to a duel, but on the duelling ground, Fabiano reveals his real identity, and then kills Arturo.

Shortly after her marriage, Juliet begs her husband to show her the hiding place of his wonderful collection of jewels and, the time for his revenge having come, Fabiano takes her, blindfolded, to the tomb in which she had imprisoned him and in one of the most powerful scenes of the photoplay, discloses to her the fact that he is her first husband.

In spite of her prayers for forgiveness, he confines her in the tomb, there to await the fate which she had planned for him.

"Sealed Lips"

Five-Part Equitable Drama, Released December 13 Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

FROM every standpoint the adaptation of Maxwell Gray's novel, "The Silence of Dean Maitland," produced by John Ince for the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation under the title of "Sealed Lips," is most satisfactory. The story has been effectively picturized, and, as all those who have read the novel know, the story appeals strongly. "Sealed Lips" features William Courtenay in a cast which includes Arthur Ashley and Adele Ray.

As a whole there is no department of this production which can be spoken of in terms other than those of praise. The settings, outdoor locations and general direction warrant the word excellent, while the members of the cast portray the characters convincingly. The characters are all interesting of themselves and it is little wonder that the players make such favorable impressions, for their parts furnish them with opportunities to win sympathy.

"Sealed Lips" tells its story directly and the interest it sustains so well is the result of thoughtful construction and steady development of the plot. The situations have real dramatic force and some of them are tense, as for instance Lee's discovery that the minister is the father of his daughter's illegitimate child. Here the direction is especially good. The scenes in the court room are among the most impressive in the picture.

Mr. Courtenay pleases with his dignity and ease in the dramatic moments as Henry Everard, the boon companion of Cyril Maitland, and the fiance of Lillian Maitland, who suffers public scorn and imprisonment for Cyril's crime. Arthur Ashley is Cyril Maitland, the spiritless minister who ruins Alma and remains silent when Everard is charged with his wrongdoing. When near his death he confesses his guilt from his pulpit to the parishioners who esteem him so highly. Adele Ray gives beauty and charm to her part as Lillian Maitland and makes admirable use of the opportunities presented her. Mary Charleson satisfies thoroughly as Alma Lee, and Marie Wells is seen as Marian Evarard.

Cyril and Harry Depoe.

"Heartaches"

Lubin's Four-Reel Offering for December 20, Reviewed by John C. Garrett

THE Lubin Company has an exceptional dramatic offering on the "Unit Program" for December 20. The story "Heartaches" is from the pen of Daniel Carson Goodman and the picture was produced by Joseph Kaufman.

This first production to be released on the new Unit Program will attract interest as June Daye, the clever young actress, who recently changed her name from Vinnie Burns to that of June Daye and who made such a big hit in the leading role of "A Desert Honeymoon," portrays the feminine lead in it. She does some very good work, being capable of registering joy and pathos in a manner which instantly effects her audience, causing them to enter into her mood.

The story is one which is rather improbable, but is of a highly melodramatic character and has many satisfying qualities. Supporting June Daye are Helen Green as Marion Nelson, a young society girl; Jessie Terry, Kate Merry's (June Daye) mother; Francis Joyner as Will Cairns, a young gambler; Arthur Forbes as Philip Nelson, Marion's brother, and Eleanor Barr as Mrs. Nelson, his mother.

Kate Merry, the beautiful daughter of a washwoman, when told by Will Cairns, a worthless fellow, that he has a lot of money and a good position, regardless of the fact that she does not care for him, marries him, but soon repents her rash act. He becomes a brute in his treatment of her and she soon leaves him, going to work in a department store. Here she meets Marion Nelson, a rich society girl, and the two become great friends.

Meanwhile Will Cairns gets a divorce for desertion after taking up a faster life than ever. One day he saves Marion Nelson from an automobile accident and a friendship springs up between the two. The girl falls in love with him and does not see the real character of the man.

Marion's brother, Philip, has grown fond of Kate Merry and insists that his sister invite her to a dance she is giving. This Marion does and Kate manages to fix up an old dress so it looks presentable and attends the party where she comes face to face with Will Cairns. Cairns tells Marion and her brother that Kate is no good and thereafter Marion's friendship for Kate is cooled.

At last, not being able to stand it any longer, Kate tells Marion to come to her home one evening at 8:30 and then writes a note to Cairns that she is willing to go with him. She secretes Marion in a room and when Cairns comes he shows his true character. Philip, who has stood the separation as long as possible, decides to seek Kate and comes upon the scene just as Kate is struggling against Cairns. He denounces the girl and starts to rush out when Marion, heartbroken after the revelation, comes out of her hiding place, denounces Cairns, and tells her brother the true state of affairs. As the picture closes all points towards happiness for Kate and Philip.

A scene from "Heartaches."

"The Clean Up"

Two-Reel American Production, Released Dec. 20 Reviewed by John C. Garrett

WINNIFRED GREENWOOD has as a co-star in the two-reel American production, "The Clean Up," to be released December 20, a new leading man, Frank Borzage, the young man prominent in recent Beauty releases. It seems rather strange to see Miss Greenwood without Ed Coxen, who has endeared himself to us all. Borzage, who takes George and his fiancee.

Coxen's place in the production because of his illness, does some very good work.

The story of this photodrama is one of absorbing interest dealing with the running wide open of gambling in a large city. The daughter of the wealthy politician is finally the means of his cleaning up the city because she becomes an habitue of one of the largest gambling resorts in the town. Winnifred Greenwood is cast as Miriam Barker, the daughter of John Barker, the wealthy politician, which part is played by Al Fordyce. Frank Borzage portrays the part of George Prescott, a young newspaper reporter. George Field as Allan Hale and Lizette Thorne as Claire Durand, two suave individuals who are growing rich through their gambling activities, complete the cast.

Miriam, the daughter of John Barker, a wealthy politician, is engaged to George Prescott, a young newspaper reporter, who is employed on a newspaper which represents the better interests of the city. Prescott is assigned to expose gambling conditions and by doing this incurs the enmity of his prospective father-in-law, who secretly profits by the gambling which flourishes in the city.

Miriam hears Prescott denounce her father as a grafter and breaks her engagement with him and to forget him she enters into "fast society" and is soon introduced at a fashionable gambling house conducted by Allan Hale and Claire Durand, who are secretly glad that they have gotten the daughter of the politician into their clutches.

The mania for gambling grows on Miriam and she becomes badly involved financially. Finally she sells her rings in order that she may be around the gambling table. Prescott comes upon the fashionable resort and a raid is planned. The day before the raid Barker realizes that the only way he can hush the paper would be to buy it out. He does this with the aid of some of the rich men of the city and the night the raid is planned on the resort they call on the editor of the paper to tell him that he must stop exposing gambling. The editor informs him that there is to be a raid on the fashionable gambling house that night.

Miriam, who has lost at cards, is in a private room with Hale and Claire and tells them that she will expose them unless they give her credit. This they refuse to do and Hale attacks the girl. Just then Prscott breaks into the room with two detectives. After rescuing the girl they put Hale and Claire under arrest.

Just at this point Barker arrives and when Miriam confesses her indiscretions, her father finally sees the evil that gambling can work and announces himself as a reform candidate at the coming election. "Clean-up" is his party's byword and through the energy of Prescott and his paper, the "Clean-up" party wins. Prescott and Miriam renew their friendship. They are soon betrothed, receiving the blessing of the grateful John Barker.

"A Price for Folly"

A V. L. S. E. Blue Ribbon Feature, Released Dec. 13 Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

FOR the beautiful and artistic manner in which the story is produced and the excellent interpretations of the characters, particularly the acting of Edith Storey, is a "Price for Folly" notable. This Blue Ribbon Feature was produced by George D. Baker from the story by George Dillenback. To procure the much desired happy ending, everybody seems to think that every other person desires the story to end happily. The real story is a visualization of a dream. The young man who is fast on the road to ruin reforms when he does bring sorrow to his parents and ruination upon himself in a dream.

The scenario was originally a single reel drama, but Mr. Baker and Vitagraph officials believed the plot productive of enough interesting action for five reels and when it was completed they judged it worthy of the V. L. S. E. Program, which it is. Neither in plot or treatment is the play exceptional. "A Price for Folly" is thoroughly interesting and it will appeal because it is so finely produced and acted. Blue Ribbon Features maintain a high standard as regards handsome settings and clear photography with rich lighting effects, and in the past there may have been Blue Ribbon productions which equaled "A Price for Folly" in this respect, but none have surpassed it.

Miss Storey is cast as Dorothea Jardeau, a dancer who is far from admirable in her dealings with men. She lends charm to the character which makes Jean's wild infatuation for her more than understandable. The part presents few dramatic opportunities but Miss Storey's portrayal of the character is vivid and at the same time artistic. Antonio Moreno in Jean de Segni has the most prominent role and his acting is exceedingly good.

Briefly the story is of a young man, who, after paying little heed to his father's pleadings that he change his mode of living, falls asleep and dreams his affair with the dancer, Jardeau, is the subject of several newspaper articles. His father, to spare the mother who adores her son a broken heart when she learns of his conduct, kills her. As it happens Jean is accused of the murder, but the father, who dies from shock acknowledges that he killed his wife. Financially ruined he is spurned by the dancer. In a duel with his rival, Jean is mortally wounded and Mlle. Jardeau, who witnesses the affair, laughs at him as he breathes his last. Upon awakening he promises his father to live a better life.

Scene from "A Price For Folly."

The supporting cast is an able one. Harry Morey is capital as Henri Langdon and Charles Kent accomplishes much in the trying part of Duke de Segni, Jean's father. It is no easy matter to act interestingly the part of a man who is subject to frequent heart attacks and is at the point of death all the time he is in the picture, and this is the kind of part Mr. Kent has. Louise Beaudet and Ethel Corcoran have the other important parts.

"A Stony Deal"

Eleventh Episode of the Pathe "Wallingford" Series Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

FOR the first time since the beginning of Pathe's serial, "The New Adventures of Wallingford," picturized from the George Randolph Chester stories by the Whartons, the closing scene finds J. Rufus thoughtful and in no sense the smiling, genial gentleman who, at this stage of the picture, is usually seen on the rear platform of a moving train, waving the while his well-wishes to some rube whose bank account is the leaner for having met him. The reason for this great change in the mien of the promoter is both sound and quite simple—for the first time in his eventful career he is bested in a deal.

But while Wallingford considers himself beaten by one of the most avaricious men in the world, Jonas Squibble, he makes all the money out of the scheme that he had planned. The thing that annoys him is that Squibble is shown the way to a fortune. In striking contrast is the smiling Blackie, who it seems is a remarkably good judge of men; for his first meeting with Squibble convinces him that no man can get the better of Jonas where money is concerned. Furthermore, he is willing to back his opinion with his watch against Wallingford's scarf pin.

This episode has very interesting moments and it also contains real humorous situations. There are a few scenes given over to Wallingford's potege, Toad Jessup, who is put in charge of the workmen, in which he, with fine bravado, employs and gives instructions to his father, a resident of the country town. These were written and produced with comedy as their intent. There are other and better situations, however, that will induce smiles.

A noteworthy feature of "A Stony Deal," which is the title of this the eleventh episode, is the characterization by the actor who plays the part of Jonas Squibble. These are parts which are usually over-done, but if this one is the actor does so to good purpose, as he is amusing in all his scenes. Burr McIntosh and Max Figman are, as usual, splendid.

"The Destroying Angel"

A Kleine-Edison Drama in Five Acts, Released Dec. 8 Reviewed by George W. Graves

EDISON'S "The Destroying Angel," conceived by Louis Joseph Vance and interpreted by Mabel Trunnelle, Marc MacDermott and a strong supporting cast, is a production worthy of the efforts of all concerned. First of all, the story is ingenious and full of dramatic possibilities. The fact that the spectator is not kept entirely in the dark as to the mystery does not detract in any way from the sustained interest, for the mystery still remains unsolved to the individuals in the play.

There are plenty of dramatic situations, affording numerous opportunities for forceful and expressive acting. Three of the fastest motorboats on the Atlantic Coast are one of the means used to introduce the thrilling element. The play, good directing, convincing acting and suitable environment and photography make a satisfying whole.

Mabel Trunnelle is most resourceful in her interpretation of the role of Mary Ladislas, many tensely dramatic scenes falling to her part. Marc MacDermott is always impressive. He is admirably cast as Hugh Whitaker. Other names appearing on the cast to its credit are George Wright and Walter Cravan. The latter, who is Max, the real "destroying angel," is an unscrupulous and scheming theatrical manager par excellence.

Mary Ladislas elopes with her chauffeur because of his sympathy for her dramatic ideals. The chauffeur is killed before they have a chance to get married. Hugh Whitaker, who has come west for his health, saves Mary from suicide and marries her out of pity, which is akin to love. He believes that he has not much longer to live. Hugh sends her to Drummond, his partner in the east, so that he may provide for her. The partner falls in love with Mary, but she refuses his aid. Mary receives a sad blow with the news of Hugh's death. Max, a theatrical manager, becomes interested in Mary and starts her on the road to success. Max cherishes her for her value as an attraction and evidently for other reasons. He is the mysterious cause of the death of David, an actor with whom Mary has become engaged.

Mary's husband reclaims her.

A few years later, Thurston, a millionaire who wishes to marry Mary, is pushed off of a ferry boat by Max and drowned. Drummond, who has long coveted Mary, pays attentions to her. His strange disappearance is another sure sign of the activity of Max's furious jealousy.

The report of Hugh Whitaker's death has been a mistake. Now a wealthy miner, his old sickness overcome, he returns to the east. By this time Mary has come to be called "The Destroying Angel." Fearing to lead Hugh into certain death, Mary conceals her love for him. Hugh is persistent, however. Max attempts to shoott him, but his bullets go wild. The lovers then prepare to leave for the west.

"The Siren's Song"

Five-Reel World Production, Released December 13 Reviewed by Hugh Hoffman

THE success of a feature picture from a trade point of view is determined by the number of copies that are eventually sold. A feature that would be acceptable for church work, as well as amusement, has always been considered successful. Occasionally there is a feature of this kind, and "The Siren's Song" may be considered such a picture.

Cast up by the sea.

It is a picture that deals with criminals, yet is one of the cleanest stories that has come along. That is to say, while there is a great deal of underhand work set forth, there is no exposition of the seamy side of life to a degree that would prohibit it from being shown to the rising generation. Most of the evil tendencies of the characters are suggested rather than shown. This relieves it of embarrassing features that form the principal reasons why the average feature is not available for churches or schools.

"The Siren's Song" is a very interesting story. Its characters are human and command anyone's sympathy at the start and keep it throughout. It is logically produced, and is free of gross improbabilities that frequently are found in feature pictures. It has a touch of nature in it that will appeal to those who look at it. The rustic simplicity of the fishing village, and the wholesome purity of the country church, where the ex-convict finds refuge, and later becomes the village parson, is all very exquisite, and its appeal is beautiful. When his evil city companions discover him there and attempt to expose the minister as a convict, the sympathy of everyone in the audience is certain to be worked up to a point of tensity in the hope that he will triumph over them.

The part of the new minister is played by Charles Trowbridge in a most satisfactory way. He has a strong personality, of the kind that wins audiences and holds them. The ingenue lead, Helen Weer, as Catherine Gordon, is a young lady who will probably be sought after by film manufacturers in the near future. She is a stunningly pretty girl and her acting for one of her tender years is one of the nicest things in the picture. She has beautiful teeth, beautiful hair, and a wondrous smile. The heavy part, Helen Granger, known as the siren, was remarkably well played by Mademoiselle Diana.

If the photography in this production were up to standard it would be one of the best features of the week. Even poor photography can be overlooked if the story is good, and in this case the story is altogether interesting. It contains plenty of good dramatics, quite a few thrills, some originality, but above all it can be recommended because it is clean, and a picture that could be shown in a theater or a Y. M. C. A. and be equally acceptable in either place.

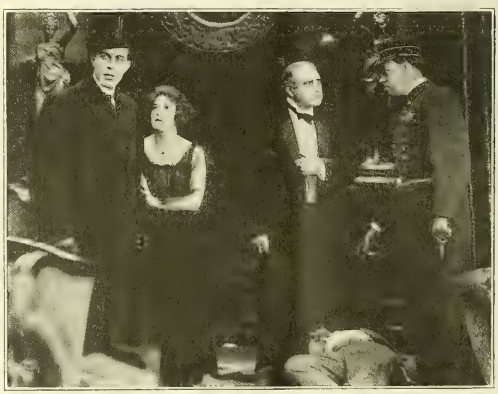
"The Beloved Vagabond"

A Six-Reel Pathe Gold Rooster Play Released Dec. 17 Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

IN the choice of Wm. J. Locke's novel, "The Beloved Vagabond," for picturization, Edward Jose, the producer, and Edwin Arden, who plays the title role in the Pathe Gold Rooster Play released December 17, made an ambitious selection, indeed. It was a selection wherein success would be emphatic and failure complete. "The Beloved Vagabond," the first Gold Rooster Play to be offered in natural colors, is a success and a rarely emphatic success. Let those who have read and reveled in the charm of the book be assured that the picture has really the spirit of Locke's work, because Mr. Arden's Paragot of the screen is in its entirety the character the author created.

It is also highly successful from a standpoint of photoplay production. Some slight changes in the story were necessary to make it so, and this was done judiciously. There is action continuous and with marked interest which testifies to the ability of the adaptor, George B. Seitz, and Mr. Jose, for "The Beloved Vagabond" is strictly a character study, therefore a bit tricky for screen adaptation. In the direction of this production, Mr. Jose, who is deservedly regarded as one of the foremost photoplay directors, is seen at his best, and little more than this could be said for the quality of direction. With such ease is every effect procured that one's feeling that the picturization of "The Beloved Vagabond" was a difficult task becomes a thing of the past with the opening scenes.

Then, since the story is so good, the direction something more than faultless and the acting nothing short of wonderful, what more can one demand of a picture? The settings, it seems needless to say, are beautiful and the photography is remarkably good. The coloring, too, is highly satisfactory. Edwin Arden dominates his every scene as the big hearted, irresponsible Gaston de Nerac. His characterization is one that will be spoken of most enthusiastically and live long in the memory. Bliss Milford as Blanquette and Katherine Browne-Decker as Joanna, score personal successes.



"Reckoning Day"

Essanay Three-Reeler, Released December 14. Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

IN "Reckoning Day," the three act feature scheduled for release on Tuesday, December 14, the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company is offering exhibitors one of the most gripping melodramas that has recently come from that studio.

The production was made by E. H. Calvert, who plays the leading role, that of Gideon Winfield, supported by Elizabeth Burbridge and Ernest Maupain, both of whom give a splendid portrayal of the roles assigned them.

Miss Burbridge, who will be remembered for her splendid work under the direction of Thomas Ince in pictures made at the studios of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, in "Reckoning Day" makes her second appearance as an Essanay star, and if her work in other productions continues on the same high standard as that she gives in this particular picture, she undoubtedly will soon be classed as the foremost Essanay leading woman. Probably her most dramatic scene is the one in the third reel when she faces Mr. Calvert, who, in his role of her first husband, returns after she believes he has been murdered. Miss Burbridge worked this scene up to a tremendous climax, ably assisted by Mr. Calvert, and there alone displayed enough talent to well entitle her to the prominent position in which she was cast.

A tense moment in "The Reckoning Day."

Special praise is also due Ernest Maupain, for his dignified portrayal of the old financier, and Sidney Ainsworth as Hemming, Winfield's friend.

The story in brief, tells how Gideon Winfield, heavily in debt, is induced by his room mate, Hemming, to appropriate some funds of Rutherford, their employer. Winfield is engaged to Clara Worthington, daughter of a wealthy financier, and it is the young men's plan to pay back the money borrowed after Winfield is married to Clara.

Before many months have passed following Clara's marriage, the girl discovers her husband's true nature and his real reason for marrying her. Clara's father refuses to advance Winfield funds and he and Hemming at last find themselves liable to prosecution for the theft they have committed.

In a tensely dramatic scene, Winfield admits to his wife that he is an embezzler, and then prepares to leave the city with Hemming. Clara's father, to protect his daughter's name, consents to make good the amount stolen by his son-in-law, on the condition that Winfield will permit Clara to get a divorce on the grounds of desertion.

Months later, Winfield and Hemming quarrel, and Hemming is knocked down and killed. Winfield in escaping takes the wrong coat, and later as a result of this the newspapers chronicle the death of Winfield and the escape of Hemming, getting the real identities of the men mixed.

Clara, believing that it is now unnecessary to get a divorce, marries a young doctor who pays her attention, and is horrified a few months later to enter the library in her home one night and there come face to face with Winfield, whom she had supposed dead. The man has come for the purpose of blackmailing his wife, and just as he is about to attack her, a hand steals through some portieres, and he drops dead, having been shot. The supposition is that Clara's father, having overheard the conversation in the library, killed Winfield, and one's whole interest centers on how the story will end, but the author has a clever surprise in store, for it is disclosed that the shot that killed Winfield was fired by a burglar who, on entering the house and overhearing the conversation, fired to protect the girl. The burglar's confession clears everything as the story ends.

"The Pitch of Chance"

Two-Reel Mustang Production, to Be Released Dec. 24
Reviewed by John C. Garrett

FRANK BORZAGE has at last "come into his own." This handsome actor who has been connected with the Beauty Comedy Company for some time has been given the direction of one of the Mustang Companies. He does some of the best work of his career in "The Pitch of Chance," a two-reel Mustang photodrama to be released December 24. In his direction of this picture Borzage has been very successful, having obtained excellent results in action and splendid photography, some especially beautiful night photography being prominent.

"Rocky" asks the girl to "really" marry him.

As "Rocky" Scott, a reckless young gambler, Borzage does commendable work; Helene Rosson's convincing mannerisms make her an appealing Nan; Jack Richardson, always good in such parts, is cast as Kentucky, the owner of a gambling resort, and Lizette Thorne in her portrayal of Kate, is sympathy arousing.

"Rocky" Scott, a reckless exuberant gambler, leaves for town to go on a spree. He arrives in the gambling joint of Kentucky, a calm mannered, cool gambler who has a member of his coterie in one Nan, who can't break away from his dominating spirit and lives in an irregular way with him.

Kate, the leader of the dance hall contingent, is infatuated with Kentucky and attempts to replace Nan in his affections. When "Rocky" Scott comes into the camp he becomes fascinated by Nan and wins all of Kentucky's money in gambling. Under excitement he proposes to Kentucky to stake all his winnings against Nan in a hand of poker and Kate, seeing a way to get rid of the girl, manages to fix the cards so that "Rocky" gets the winning hand, and he takes Nan from the dance hall with him.

That night they camp on the mountain side and "Rocky," ashamed and disgusted when she pleads with him, leaves her unmolested and the next morning tells Nan he will take her back to Kentucky, who has decided to hunt "Rocky" down and kill him. When Nan arrives in town she meets Kentucky, who tells her he is going after "Rocky" and the girl wheels her horse and madly rides after the young gambler to warn him of the approaching danger. He tells the girl to go back and tell Kentucky that he is on his way to meet him and later the two men meet each other on the twisted mountain road and after a pistol duel in which both men are wounded and Kentucky disabled, "Rocky" brings him back to his home. There Kate steps in and seizes the opportunity to express her devotion by taking her place at Kentucky's side.

"Rocky," thinking that Nan cares for him because she had gone back to warn him of his danger, goes to her and tells her he would like to place a wedding ring on her finger and she assents gladly to the proposal.

"The Hand of the Law"

Three-Reel Edison Offering, Released December 17
Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

A MURDER mystery combined with a pretty romance, with a rural locale, is the basis for a well acted and interesting melodrama, in the Edison release for December 17, entitled "The Hand of the Law." Edward Earle and Bessie Learn as the featured players in the well selected cast render such naturally effective performances that their acting is really a feature of this offering.

The story is a melodrama of the old school, if such it may be called, and the care with which it is developed, its logical situations, and the continuous action would make it seem as though the author is a veteran writer of melodramatic stories. The character parts introduced for the purpose of light or humorous moments have a place in the story and for that reason the scenes in which they appear do not cause a break in the action of the plot. In style "The Hand of the Law" is a melodrama of some years ago. It is thoughtfully put together and thoroughly entertaining.

Mr. Earle is the young lawyer who assists Betty Hazelton in clearing her father of the murder of which he is accused. The part presents no remarkable dramatic opportunities, but the author has drawn a convincing character and Mr. Earle makes Dan Chamberlain attractive and he is entitled to high praise for the acting he does in this picture. Miss Learn wins and holds firmly the sympathy as Betty Hazelton, the country girl whose father is a heavy drinker. Hazelton, while intoxicated, threatens Squire Evans and his partner, Hiram Gregory, and accuses them of having swindled him.

A short time after this Hiram is found dead in his office from a knife wound. Evans makes the discovery and he testifies that he saw Hazelton in the office. Chamberlain works all night in the hope of finding some evidence which will clear Hazelton. Evans knows the sheriff's past history and induces him to free Hazelton and then shoot the prisoner for trying to escape. This is overheard by Betty, who frustrates the plot. Then it is learned that Evans killed his partner. In the end Dan and Betty are married and Hazelton resolves never to drink again.

The picture was produced by Edward C. Taylor. The settings and locations give the play a realistic atmosphere. There is the old grist mill, farm houses that are typical whether the scene is an exterior or interior one, and a particularly good scene is the one showing the activities around the polls on election day. William Wadsworth, Bigelow Cooper, Nellie Grant, Brad Sutton, Jessie Stevens, Billy Ruge and James Fennimore are prominent members of the supporting cast.

"Body and Soul"

Five-Reel Frohman Production, Released Nov. 22 Reviewed by Hugh Hoffman

APHASIA in a word would describe the principal point upon which this drama turns. It is one of those stories of mental lapse which in this case is the affliction of the heroine. She wanders away from her home in the city, and turns up in a timber district, miles from her home. After a series of adventures with rough characters, whom she meets in the woods, she comes upon a cabin occupied by a New York hunter. He shelters her for about a week and then begins to look for some return in the way of affection.

While he is out one day, an impetuous stranger comes along and has no difficulty, in her weakened mental state, in embracing her. In the midst of this the huntsman returns and has a terrible fit of anger. He disfigures the girl on the breast with his knife as an evidence of his proprietary interest in her. He then sets the cabin afire and leaves, after which she crawls outside and faints.

Later she comes upon a ruffian who, in a struggle, throws her down an embankment. The shock of this fall terminates her aphasia and she finds her way back to her city home by making inquiries. At home her malady is understood and she is received gladly and especially welcomed by her fiance. By this time, the huntsman has returned to town and has located her by accidentally seeing her photograph in a Fifth avenue window. He at once begins to bother her with his attentions, but she does not remember him. As he seems to know all about the scar on her neck and as she knows nothing about it, out of sheer curiosity she accepts an invitation to visit his houseboat on the East river and hear the explanation of the scar. He explains the scar and then makes violent love.

In the struggle that follows she kills him with a dagger. Just at this moment her lover, passing in a rowboat, hears the commotion and on entering the house boat finds that she has once more gone back into her state of mental aberration. He gets her away quickly, but her scarf is left behind. A nephew of the murdered man traces her by this scarf and is about to notify the police when he realizes he is in danger of being discovered as the one guilty in another matter, so he decides to keep quiet. Some time later the girl marries her fiance.

"Perkin's Pep Producer"

Selig's Latest Bloom Center Chronicle. Reviewed by Neil G. Caward

THE odd types seen in previous Chronicles of Bloom Center, as issued by the Selig Polyscope Company, are all fairly outdone in the latest of the Chronicles, entitled "Perkin's Pep Producer," and scheduled for release on the General program on Monday, December 20, for rarely has a taller, slimmer and more unusual character appeared in film than is Orbie Farris as Slim Boggs, a prettier girl than Betty Nathan as Lucy Perkins, or a more convincing quack doctor than William Fitchett as Percival Perkin.

It is about these three that the story centers, and the producer has taken advantage of the odd physical characteristics of the men and the beauty of the girl in weaving his story. As a background the comedy has the now familiar Main street of Bloom Center, which, on account of its repeated appearances on the screen, must seem to many picturegoers like "home."

The quaint rural atmosphere, upon which the success of such a series of pictures as this depends, is striven for and in many cases attained, but more of the slap-stick is noticeable in this particular release than has been the case in previous installments of this series.

Percival Perkin, a peddler of Perkin's Pep Producer, is busy with the assistance of his wife, Lucy Perkin, and Slim Boggs, in distributing his patent medicine in the village of Pleasant Grove, when he learns that the neighboring town of Bloom Center is badly in need of a trained nurse. Perkin conceives the idea of sending Lucy to Bloom Center to act the role of a nurse, and at the same time spread some publicity for Perkin's Pep Producer.

Lucy attracts all the menfolk by her beauty and great is their delight upon learning that she is a nurse. One after another Constable Plum, Postmaster Pash, Johnny West and others are stricken, and Lucy is called in to care for them. The indignant wives of Bloom Center are considering, en masse, a means of getting rid of Lucy, when Slim, who has by this time arrived in the village, is taken ill and later attended by Lucy. The village doctor declares Slim a sufferer from smallpox and when the news spreads through the village that the nurse, who has been attending so many, is likely to have carried the disease, consternation reigns in many homes.

Just at the time when the inhabitants of Bloom Center are most excited, Perkin arrives with his wonderful Pep Producer, which he explains is guaranteed to take the "small" out of smallpox. His sales are enormous, particularly after the fair Lucy distributes samples of the marvelous remedy among the menfolk, the sample bottle containing whiskey instead of the Perkin remedy. Just as Perkin, his wife and Slim drive away, the male inhabitants of Bloom Center discover they have been stung and great is their indignation.

"Pity the Poor"

Second Episode of the Pathe Serial, "The Red Circle" Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy

THE second episode of "The Red Circle," Pathe's new serial of "heredity, romance and humanity," discloses the fact that the mysterious hand on which Lamar saw the red circle, the mark appearing on those members of the Borden family born with the hereditary taint of that clan, was the hand of June Travis. Besides being an interesting continuation of the first episode, this release, which is entitled "Pity the Poor," is replete with entertaining action and the suspense of it is admirably preserved.

A scene from "Pity the Poor."

"Pity the Poor" lives up to the great hopes aroused by the first episode of this continued photoplay, written by H. M. Horkheimer and Will M. Ritchey, and produced by Balboa under the direction of Sherwood McDonald. The production is excellent, having most appropriate settings and clear photography with pretty lighting effects. But the play's the thing, and the play in this case is entirely good. Of course, it is highly improbable that a mark such as the red circle would appear intermittently on the hand of the members of any family no matter how criminal, but what of that when the other developments are plausibly worked out and singularly interesting?

Ruth Roland is a pretty June Travis, who, it would seem, is related to the notorious Jim Borden. She proves herself a crafty thief. But if all crooks were to be of such material aid to unfortunates as June is in "Pity the Poor" the word would soon lose its awful significance to those whose hearts would be won by such charity. June steals a number of notes held by a loan shark. She destroys them and writes to the people who were bound by them to pay unlawfully high interest, telling them that they are no longer under obligations to the grasping George Grant.

"Over Night"

A World Film Corporation Five-Reel Feature. Reviewed by Hugh Hoffman

IF Charles H. Hoyt were alive, we could suspect him of having written this farce comedy under the nom de plume of Phillip Bartholomae. Evidently Phillip Bartholomae is alive, and very much alive, if he lives at any such pace as the characters in this comedy, which is credited to him. As Francis Marion is credited with having prepared the scenario, it is to be supposed that the screen version is an adaptation.

At any rate it is a corking comedy, and one that will probably be kept very busy before it finally goes to the shelf. It starts off a little slow, but it gathers momentum until at the finish it is like a rolling snowball of fun. It takes a couple of reels to lead up to the situations that form the last three parts, and then things begin to happen, and then happenings multiply until the grand climax at the finish.

The thread of the story follows the fortunes, or rather misfortunes, of two couples of newlyweds who are accidentally transposed, as in the shuffling of cards. On their honeymoon these two couples, who are strangers, take the same steamer from New York to Albany. The wife of one and the husband of the other, go ashore on some small errand, and are both left behind. The misadventures of the transposed husbands and wives, as they try to straighten out their tangled domestic relations, result in some screamingly funny situations.

The production was directed by James Young, and Vivian Martin is featured. She is very pretty and capable, and altogether pleasing. Yet she divided honors with other capable members of the cast, notably Sam B. Hardy, Herbert Yost, and Florence Morrison. It is rather a surprise to know that Mr. Young is such a good director of comedy. Those who have followed his work rather look for something in a serious dramatic vein. This comedy, however, is evidence that Mr. Young is well grounded in all sides of the producer's art.

The photography is brilliant throughout, which is owing to a number of very fine glimpses of Hudson River scenery. There are many scenes taken on board on a Hudson River steamer, and it would have been a pity to have any of the fine vistas spoiled by poor photography. The camera work was done by Edwin Corwin.

"The Mill on the Floss"

Thanhouser Five-Reel Mutual Master-Picture Released Dec. 16, Reviewed by John C. Garrett

ONE of George Eliot's most celebrated novels, "The Mill on the Floss," has been scenariozed and screened by the Thanhouser Company. This five-reel drama under the same title as that of the book featuring Mignon Anderson, is scheduled for release as a Mutual master-picture on December 16.

The story is one of the wholesome kind which makes a direct appeal to the spectator. The scenes laid around the "ye old mill" and the interiors of the Tolliver home are realistic. The photography is not wonderfully clear, but is good throughout.

Scene from "The Mill on the Floss."

Supporting Mignon Anderson, who does splendid work as Maggie Tulliver, are Harris Gordon as her brother, Tom Tulliver; W. Eugene Moore, as his father; Fannie Hoyt as his mother; George Marlo as Philip Wakem; Arthur Bauer as his father and Boyd Marshall as Steven.

The story of "The Mill on the Floss" begins with the lives of the miller Tulliver and his family who live happily at and own "The Mill on the Floss." This mill has been owned by the Tullivers for generations and there was a tradition that if the mill, instead of passing from father to son, was sold to another family, the floss would overflow the banks and destroy the mill. Tulliver's son, Tom, who inherits his father's hot temper and impetuosity, attends school while Tulliver's daughter, Maggie, who is a very affectionate child, but wild and mischievous, remains at home.

Maggie visits Tom at boarding school and there sees Philip Wakem, the hunchback son of Lawyer Wakem. Sometime later Lawyer Wakem resorts to trickery to accomplish the end of getting "the mill on the Floss." Philip, Wakem's son, pitying the Tulliver's plight, induces his father to make Tulliver the manager of the property which he once owned.

Maggie and Philip frequently see each other and the cripple's devotion for the miller's daughter becomes more marked, until she tells him that her family does not approve of their friendship and finally, when he asks her to marry him, she does not get a chance to answer him as her brother comes upon the two and tells Maggie to never see Philip again without his consent.

At last Tom makes an investment which returns huge profits and he announces to his father that the time is at hand when he can buy back the mill. When his father meets Wakem on the road his resentment against the lawyer flares up and a quarrel ensues in which Tulliver strikes Wakem to the ground. The miller becomes overwrought by his sufferings and his sudden triumph and dies that night, his last words being a solemn injunction to his son to buy back the old mill.

At her cousin's home Maggie meets Steven Guest, the son of a wealthy man, who is tall and handsome and is a direct contrast to the cripple. Steven and Maggie go rowing and the boy makes love to her and urges her to marry him, but she reminds him that he is pledged to her cousin, Lucy, and refuses to listen to him.

When they return to town the tongue of gossip has done its deadly work and life becomes very hard for Maggie and she goes to live with Bob, the former mill hand, where she is gladly welcomed.

The following day, after heavy rainfall for many days, the Floss overflows its banks and a raging torrent descends upon the land. Tom is alone in the mill, his mother having left the day before, and his little sister risks her life to save him. The current of the flood is too strong for Tom and Maggie to combat and several hours later their bodies are found in the wreckage in a close embrace.

Roskam Again with Commercial

Bernard Lowenthal has again appointed Edward M. Roskam as general manager of the Commercial Laboratories at Grantwood, New Jersey. "Eddie," as he is familiarly known to the entire trade, is perfectly at home in the laboratory and thoroughly understands the work in every department.

Backed up by ten years of practical knowledge and experience, the work that the Commercial turns out should be as nearly perfect as modern improvements, machinery and a perfect organization can make them.

Charles Kipper has been appointed superintendent of the laboratory and is without doubt one of the most capable technical film men in the business. Mr. Kipper has had seven years of experience in every department in a motion picture factory. Before joining the Commercial he was employed by the New York Motion Picture Company, the Reliance Company and the Eclair Company. He is conceded to be the best judge of timing negatives and positives in the industry. With his perfect negative, positive, tinting, and toning formulas the Commercial printing should be the best in the trade. In its title department, titles can be set up, photographed and delivered on the same day the orders are received.

The Commercial has no affiliation with any distributing organization or program, and every order is finished in regular rotation and each receives the same careful attention regardless of quantity or length.

IVAN ADOPTS STATE OPTION

New Method of Sales Created by General Manager Chadwick of the Ivan Film Corporation Works Out Well

State rights buyers no longer can purchase individual productions of the Ivan Film Corporation.

For, as the records of the past few weeks in the sale of "Concealed Truth" and "Forbidden Fruit" demonstrate, state rights buyers are eager for all Ivan Productions. Answering the requests of many of his customers General Manager Chadwick of the Ivan Film Corporation has evolved a new plan of selling his productions. He is disposing of options on his entire yearly output of a feature a month. He is connecting with the foremost state rights buyers in every territory where possible, and is guaranteeing features of Ivan one a month regularly hereafter. Statements to the effect that state rights buyers haven't the faith of their own convictions are belied in the present Ivan situation. These concerns are today placing deposits on their faith in Ivan's "making good." Announcements have not been made yet of the titles of the forthcoming Ivan productions. Nevertheless over half of the country has been sold on all Ivan productions issued during the coming year.

When interviewed Mr. Chadwick had this to say:

"State rights buyers are hungry for good reproductions. They are tired of this business of fussing about and rushing about every time a feature in hand is played out. They haven't the time for it, nor do they want to put the energy into finding new connections every week. It means satisfaction to be able to bank on features of a standard quality from a source which they know they can depend on.

"I have no doubt but that the present plan of Ivan will be followed in every instance. I hope it will be—not only for our own success but for the good of the industry. I venture to remark that by the end of the next year your best state right buyers will be sold out or will be stocked up for months in advance and that your good independent producers will have their market assured before they touch a pencil to paper in laying out their new productions. This is fine for the producer—fine for the state right buyer and fine for the exhibitor."

NEW ORLEANS WELCOMES NOLA

Southern City Believes Fame Will Accrue to Itself as Result of Operation of the Nola Film Company.

New Orleans, La., takes much civic pride in the fact that the Nola Film Company, which has recently been incorporated there, is about ready for business, with studios on the picturesque Bayou St. John, and will, it is believed, serve to advertise the city of New Orleans far and wide through the incorporation in its pictures of the many beautiful and notable places of interest in and about that city.

The Nola Film Company is headed by William J. Hannon, who has completed arrangements with the Associated Film Sales Corporation for the release of a five-reel feature picture every three weeks.

Mr. Hannon recently returned from New York City, bringing with him a new director and several actors and actresses. He announces that Miss Leatrice Joy Zeidler, who played the leading roles in all the Nola pictures made to date, will retain her post as leading woman. Miss Madlyn Nichols, who recently won the Chicago Examiner beauty contest, will be cast in prominent feminine roles, and Andrew Rodgers, recently a member of the Frederick Ward Company, will be seen in the leading male roles. Messrs. Lawrence Carey and George H. Rareshide will be respectively the heavy and character men.

The new director is Walter Morton, who has worked for some time at the Pathe Freres studios. Mr. Morton will be assisted by Norton (Doc) Travis, who acted as camera man on the William Fox production entitled "Lady Audley's Secret," in which Theda Bara appeared, and H. Guy Uyama as assistant camera man. The scenario editor of the company, and the assistant manager is William Morgan Hannon, who stepped from the practice of law into his present position. Mr. Hannon has won not a little notoriety by his recently published book entitled, "The Photodrama—Its Place Among the Fine Arts," which has been well received and favorably commented upon by newspapers and magazines of both the east and south.

The Nola Company is to have an outdoor stage, and a glass enclosed stage, 48 by 90 feet in size, in addition to carpenter shops, laboratories, developing and property rooms.

Barrymore to Long Stay with Metro

Lionel Barrymore has signed a long time contract to appear exclusively in Metro feature productions, according to an announcement made at the Metro offices. Mr. Barrymore recently finished playing the stellar role in "A Yellow Streak," a Columbia-Metro feature. It is his present plan to take a rest of several weeks before starting on his next picture.

Immediately upon his return to New York, Mr. Barrymore will begin work on the big five-part feature, "The Mysterious House," in which he will be co-starred with Marguerite Snow. "The Mysterious House" will be produced by the Columbia Pictures Corporation, for release on the Metro program. It is the first time that these two stars have been engaged for the same feature, and their joint appearance will be welcomed by a host of admirers.

"Birth of a Nation" Loses Its Suit

On Monday of this week the owners of "The Birth of a Nation" film lost their fight for the privilege of exhibiting the feature to minors in Chicago. The matter was up in Judge Foell's court, and the judge, after hearing the arguments of the lawyers, held the owners of the film in error in their writ of mandamus against the city authorities, but they were given permission to file an amended petition for unrestricted privileges. Charles J. Trainer, counsel for the film owners, informed the court that he would have a new petition ready for presentation within a day or two.

A Glance at the Past—a Hint at the Future

BY JOHN R. FREULER*

I HAVE set aside this hour to put down for Motography some personal views and opinions on the motion picture industry as we come to the close of this eventful year of 1915—or to put it more constructively, as we approach the promising year of 1916.

Looking ahead to developments in the photoplay world to come I can see nothing that looms as more important than the necessity for growth and betterments in the business of exhibiting pictures. Great, big, important strides have been made in the construction of pictures, in the distribution of pictures, in the advertising of pictures—and now there is a very great deal up to the exhibitor.

John R. Freuler.

Certain investigations made near the close of this year by the Mutual Film Corporation, looking into the operating methods of many thousands of theaters in all parts of the country, convince me that the exhibitor has many more opportunities for growth ahead of him than he has achievements behind him.

The art of "presenting" pictures to the public is just beginning to be recognized. Those exhibitors who have developed the business of "exhibiting" pictures into the business of "presenting" them have reaped big profits. I have yet to hear of a well conducted motion picture house losing.

The exhibitors as a class must be aroused to new efforts. The exhibitors as a vital factor in the industry are in danger of lagging behind both the development of the picture and the development of the public taste for the pictures.

Great responsibility for the growth of the motion pictures as an art and as the material of an industry rests with the exhibitors.

I do not wish to condemn—rather I want to inspire. I want to shout it so loud that every exhibitor in American can hear me, that they must more worthily give the pictures to the public.

And I speak here as a member of the great body of exhibitors who are responsible to the film following public for their entertainment. In every one of the several theaters in which I am interested we are working out problems of film presentation. The reports that come to my desk here in New York daily point to the necessity for persistent study and unrelenting application.

Nobody in the world knows how to run a perfect motion picture house. If there was any final and absolute standard or model the exhibitors' problem would be ended. But there are certain men in the vanguard of film theater progress and from their experience and successes we may all take inspiration and gather new zeal.

With this condition and these necessities in mind the Rothapfel-Mutual tour, which has been so thoroughly and intelligently dealt with in the columns of Motography, was conceived. I know that not every exhibitor can have a house on Broadway and that not every exhibitor can be an S. L. Rothapfel. But I do know that the energy and ingenuity with which he made his beginning from that Forest City, Pa., village show into the brilliant achievement of the Strand in New York can inspire every exhibitor. Mr. Rothapfel, and those who with him have achieved these remarkable successes, have no patent on hard work and sincere application and thought, or the use of common business sense.

The Rothapfel-Mutual tour has been concluded but a few weeks, yet I can say with considerable assurance that it has been a most effective contribution to the welfare of the motion picture theater, and worthy of a place near the top of the column of 1915's film events.

I have felt the keenest pleasure in reviewing the great array of reports that have borne to me the enthusiasm of exhibitors along the path of the Rothapfel-Mutual tour. I know now that the exhibitors to whom we must look as our representatives to the public have accepted this effort by the Mutual Film Corporation in the sincere spirit in which it was offered.

If I were to attempt the somewhat difficult task of enumerating the other important developments of the year in the motion picture industry I should name:

Mutual's Growth—Most recent of all the announcement of the release of three five-reel Mutual Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition, and the expansion of the $8,000,000 Mutual program to include a third three-reel feature—a development of big importance entirely aside from the particular interest of the Mutual Film Corporation or my personal interest.

Service Beyond the Films—The birth of a new relation between the distributors and the exhibitors of film, by which the exhibitors receive more than a mere supply of pictures but also aids in publicity, music cues, exploitation methods and general assistance in the successful operation of the motion picture theater. This service betterment is reflected in the increase of the number of Mutual branches to the present total of 68, covering the United States and Canada.

Higher Admission Prices—A strengthening trend toward higher prices of admission in a very large number of theaters, moving upward from the five and ten-cent level to the class of ten, fifteen and twenty-five-cent admissions—this resulting in part from the improving standards of the films and in turn resulting in the production of better films.

Better Picture Art—Generally more active attention among manufacturers to the plots and photography of the picture drama, resulting in the enlistment of writers of ability and note for the production of scripts, meeting and encouraging a rapidly improving public taste in screen art.

Censorship—The beginning of a public awakening to the evils and perils of censorship, exemplified importantly in a number of communities where public intelligence over-ruled the absurdity and prudery of censors who sought to bar "Damaged Goods" and other great feature releases.

*President of the Mutual Film Corporation.

Awakening of the Lay Press—The establishment of photoplay departments in many newspapers and other publications of general circulations, and a more intelligent treatment of the film drama among publications of all classes—a somewhat belated recognition of the increasingly important number of readers who are anxious for the news of the films.

The year has seen some remarkable successes, and, I trust, the foundation work for a great many to come. We are seeing the motion picture become more and more truly an art. It is growing more deserving of a place in the art life of the people. It has immeasurably extended and developed the art appreciation of the public. The films have put the world before the eyes of the stay-at-homes and have carried the genius of the stage to the whole people. The film is the magic carpet that carries them all to Broadway. The healthy permanence of the film drama is assured.

It is of particular significance that within the year just drawing to a close we have seen almost every American author of prominence become a writer for the motion pictures. It is only a few weeks ago that the Mutual Film Corporation announced "The Girl and the Game" as a Mutual special release, which is the first motion picture work of Frank H. Spearman, latest of the American novelists of real note to come "into the pictures."

This wholesale capture of the authors by the motion pictures can really be credited to the year 1915. It is true that there were a few in the film field in 1914, but those of that year were relatively so few in number that we may call them pioneers.

It is without the least intent of disparagement that I now insist that these writers have not yet learned the motion picture. They do not yet know this new craft of film expression. We have seen, however, some great work from their pens in film drama. Giving them acquired experience with this new medium and what may we not hope for in the future?

A review of the film history of the year can not, I think, discover a more significant development than the formation of the new Mutual program—the creation which we have been pleased to label the $8,000,000 program—and the more recent but closely related announcement of the Mutual Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition, three big five-reel features a week, and again, simultaneously the expansion of the program to take in yet a third three-reel feature.

I refer to these developments in Mutual service, not for the specific purpose of directing attention toward them or to what I deem the particular merits of Mutual service, but rather to point to them as markers of the film progress that has made the closing months of 1915 notable and as evidences of the trend which we may expect the coming year to follow.

Frankly, I came into the presidency of the Mutual Film Corporation most painfully aware of the then low ebb of program efficiency. As an exhibitor and as a distributor of motion pictures I have come to know that "programs" with their routine offerings were not giving the exhibitors the box office attractions that business necessity demanded. I determined to endow the word with a new meaning, to give the exhibitor feature service and feature quality in every release. The Mutual Film Corporation created the new program with the needs of the exhibitor in view, and looking back now over the past few months that we have been giving the exhibitors service, I am reassured of the correctness of our policy.

While we are taking an inventory of 1915, we find yet other evidences of the forces that are making for the progress of the industry. I turn again to the example of which I can speak with the most authority—that is the reorganization of the methods of operation of the Mutual Film Corporation. This has included the establishment of seven new branches, giving a total of sixty-eight Mutual exchanges for the service of the exhibitors of the United States and Canada. District management has been abolished and every branch has been made directly responsible to the home office of the corporation in New York. A corps of efficiency men has been put into the field to keep up constantly the close relation we have established between the home office and the exhibitors through the branches. A system has been installed by which confidential reports on films, attendance and all detailed theater statistics come to me from representative houses in all parts of the country, thus giving a direct "indicator reading" on our pictures and service, and enabling us to continually shape them to that which is proven successful in the final test of the box office report.

These activities of the Mutual are representative of the forward steps of the industry which are giving the exhibitor so much more than mere film. We can look only a little way back into the film past to recall a period when an exchange was a place where an exhibitor got so many reels of film, put them under his arm, took them to his theater, hung up a sign that said, "Admission, 5 cents," and proceeded to run off a "show." All he got from the exchange was the film, and on sunny days when the management was in a good humor maybe a few kind words.

Now the distributor of films is finding it to a vast advantage to his business, to his exhibitors and to the public to give the exhibitor every possible aid in the presentation of real entertainment. The Mutual exhibitor is not only supplied with better films, but as well with the methods and means of exploiting them, all kinds of publicity helps, posters, banners, lobby displays, publicity cuts, press matter, ad sheets, billboard and newspaper co-operation, and the service of a weekly magazine written especially for him.

Another important step this year has been the formation of the Motion Picture Board of Trade and plans for a concerted effort to free the motion picture from the shackles of censorship. This is not the place for my views of censorship, but I insist on saying that it is unAmerican, absurd and doomed to final destruction. We can recognize only one censorship and that is the opinion of the wholesome minded and intelligent public.

So looking ahead we can promise greater film prosperity, better plays, better theaters, better service to exhibitors and to the public. The motion picture atmosphere is being clarified. The business is gaining in standardization. The unfit are being eliminated. The future is bright and filmdom can look with expectancy on 1916.

Thanhouser Director Braves Arrest

W. Eugene Moore was determined to play with fire and the only day he could play properly was of a Saturday. On two consecutive Saturdays old Jupiter Pluvius took a hand in the game. But on the third, which happened to be December 4, was his patience rewarded, for the light was fine and conditions generally for outdoor scene taking were of the best. Moore is directing a future Thanhouser Mutual Masterpicture, and his script called for some scenes in and about a burning tenement, and to get some real scenes he was prepared to play with fire. Accordingly, he sent flames and smoke shooting from the windows of a building in Port Chester, N. Y.

The fire alarm was rung and the professional and business men who comprise the volunteer fire department of the town hurried to their machines. The engines (Port Chester has both motor and horse drawn trucks) reached the old foundry, as they call it up there, in record time. Ladders were up and streams of water were on the building before the firemen discovered that their actions were being registered by several motion picture cameras. Chief James

The fire staged by the Thanhouser director.

Merritt made inquiries. Mr. Moore stepped from the crowd, looked calm while he felt otherwise (Gene was flirting with jail and he knew it), and explained things to Chief Merritt and Assistant Chief Allen.

Then the firemen of Port Chester surprised Moore and his company. Not a man took off his coat or said anything about warrants or arrests. Instead they held life-nets for the jumpers, who dropped from all parts, even the roof of the building, to land in. Other daring rescues were made, one, a very agreeable job we should say, was the business of rescuing Mignon Anderson, who is being featured in the picture. George Marlo, who is playing the heroic role, was also quite active. Six cameras, a goodly portion of Port Chester's populuation and representatives of the motion picture trade press looked on.

PATHE CLUB FORMED

Department Heads of Big Film Organization Unite in Social Organization and Choose Charles Pathe as Honorary President

The department heads of the Pathe forces have gotten together and formed a club for social purposes. The organization is known as the Pathe Club, and is now being incorporated. That the Roosterites mean business is shown by the fact that the club starts out with a capital of $1,000 paid in, and has received the hearty support of Charles Pathe and General Manager Gasnier. Officers have been elected as follows:

Honorary president, Charles Pathe; president, Mr. Gasnier; acting president, W. A. Sholto Douglas; acting vice-president, Ralph Navarro; secretary, P. Allen Parsons; treasurer, Gabriel Bardet. To the board of governors was elected: M. Ramirez Torres, George A. Smith, J. K. Burger, George B. Seitz, and F. H. Knocke, the officers of the club also acting as members of the board ex officio. A dance and dinner has been planned for the middle of January, and club rooms are contemplated.

Serial Now Part of Regular Service

The release of "The Diamond from the Sky," the North American Film Corporation's picturized romantic novel, as a part of the regular Mutual Program, effective Monday, November 29, is directly in line with the Mutual Film Corporation's policy to give the exhibitor "service beyond the films."

The entire thirty chapters of this $800,000 serial from the pen of Roy McCardell may be had by the Mutual exhibitor in his regular service at no extra charge. All business will be handled by the Mutual branches, and not by special representatives stationed at the Mutual branches, as was done before the entire picture novel had been released.

The thousands of dollars spent on the exploitation of "The Diamond from the Sky" will thus stand behind every exhibitor who wishes to show this epoch making film in his theater, while the unprecedented newspaper co-operation, which enabled this stirring novel to be published as a continued story in hundreds of daily papers simultaneously with the appearance of each chapter of the film, has familiarized hundreds of thousands of people with the story who have never had the opportunity to see the picturized form.

To The Trade

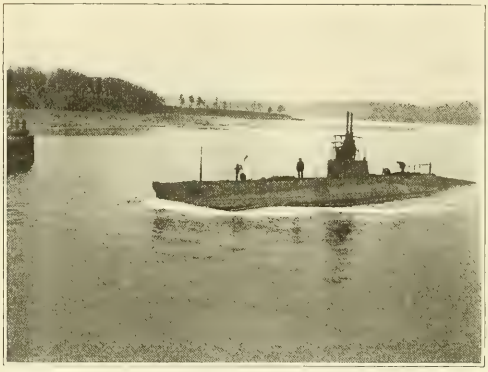
Bernard Loewenthal announces that the Commercial Motion Picture Company's Laboratory at Grantwood, N. J., has resumed operations.

All work will be under the personal supervision of Edward M. Roskam. Quality and prompt delivery guaranteed.

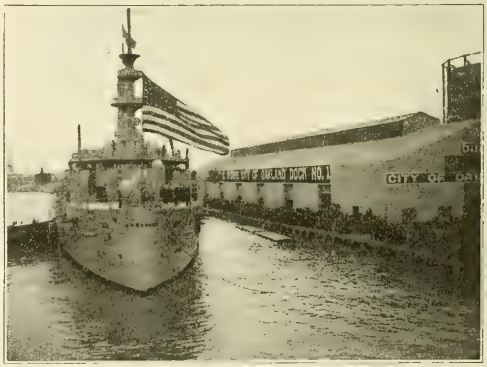
Commercial Motion Picture Co.

Laboratory, Grantwood, N. J.
N. Y. Office, 220 West 42nd Street

Where printing is an art and quality reigns supreme



News of the Week as Shown in Films



King George of England and the Prince of Wales in Northeastern France. Copyright, 1915, Pathe News.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford just before the Oscar II sailed. Copyright, 1915, Universal Animated Weekly.

Submarine ordered for Allies held in Charleston Navy Yard. Copyright 1915, Paramount News Pictures.

U. S. S. Milwaukee in new $1,000,000 dock at Oakland, Calif. Copyright, 1915, Mutual Weekly.

Baby carriages parked outside of a motion picture theater in Watts, Calif. Copyright, 1915, Pathe News.

Peace ship Oscar II leaves for Europe. Copyright, 1915, Hearst-Selig News Pictorial.

Brevities of the Business

PACIFIC COAST NEWS

By "Capt. Jack" Poland

Rains of the winter months and many of the gloomy dark days of fog are now prevalent in Southern California and the newly erected and protected studios that are glass covered or otherwise prepared have become most valuable allies to the producing organizations. Many interior sets are being filmed under the brilliant glare of huge electric systems and thousands of dollars are being saved by managers who had forethough to provide for such emergencies. Nearly all the larger studios and most of the smaller ones have their electric lighted winter studios in Southern California.

DeWolf Hopper is such a strong believer in the arts of motion picture productions that he plans to make of his ten-months-old son and heir, a famed star of motion pictures. At the Fine Arts studios he is already coaching the youngster how to keep quiet before a camera while doing expressions.

Weber and Fields have finished their star comedy engagements with Mack Sennett at the Keystone studios and are now arranging for an early appearance in vaudeville on the Orpheum. They express themselves as highly pleased with their work in films and plan a novelty stunt on the circuit based on their experiences in pictures.

Rollin S. Sturgeon, managing director of western Vitagraph studios is one of the busiest men in the game these days. Superintending the erection of new studio buildings at Hollywood and producing his great feature picture in the mountains of Bear Valley, keeps him hustling between locations. But he says the results are worth while.

Victor Moore is appearing in a film version of the Louis Mann play, "Elevating a Husband," at the Jesse L. Lasky studios. He promises to add new fame to his steadily growing prestige.

Mae Murray is one of the latest additions to the Lasky studio stars, having signed a year's contract to appear in films.

Director Albert Hale of the National forces who is personally looking after the productions of president "Bill" Parsons, comedian-promoter, is creating much atmosphere at the new National studios while producing specialties for early release.

Anna Luther, a Keystone commedienne, was painfully bitten on the cheek by a huge Russian wolf hound at the studio Tuesday. She was petting the big dog when he suddenly turned and attacked her. Before help drove the brute away Miss Luther was badly hurt. The bites were cauterized at the receiving hospital and the brave little star is rapidly recovering.

Our famous favorite of the wilds who roughs it so strenuously in motion picture scenes, Dustin Farnum, has been on the resting list since his return from his Maine home vacation. Shortly after returning to Los Angeles Mr. Farnum was stricken with an attack of inflammatory rheumatism which caused him to lose some twenty pounds. At last accounts he and Charlie Chaplin, the noted comedian, were talking it over at Hotel Alexandria.

Dorothy Davenport is again at Universal City studios playing opposite Francis Ford in two and three-reel dramatic pictures.

J. Farrell MacDonald is now director in chief at the local Biograph studios since the recent shakeup in which many members of the western companies were let out. He has charge of all California productions.

John Oaker, a Burbank theater actor, is now doing moving pictures at Horsley's studios, playing leads in drama and jungle scenes. He says it is a bit different however.

Edna Goodrich is negotiating with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company to appear in a series of pictures. Miss Goodrich has just finished a starring engagement with the Lasky organization.

Cleo Madison and company of Universal players have returned from a trip to San Francisco where they made exterior scenes for a five-reel feature, "A Soul's Crucible." The famed Barbara Coast section of the exposition city was untilized for some of the settings.

Mabel Condon, who represents a number of prominent screen artists and established scenario writers in a managerial capacity upon the Pacific Coast, manages to keep her people before the public through interesting items of real publicity.

H. O. Davis, former director of the San Diego exposition, has taken charge at Universal City. He claims that there is perfect harmony in the Universal ranks. We believe him. Davis is the sort of man who proclaims: "Let there be harmony," and there is harmony. Anybody who can run an affair like the southern exposition without trouble in the main tent or the side-shows has fully equipped himself even to manage the U.

Just to keep the censorship pot 'er boilin' Los Angeles' only woman member of the city council, Estelle Lawton Lindsay, now comes forth with an announcement in the daily papers that she is in favor of a censorship board of fifty people, chosen from the universities, churches and social clubs, these to take the place of the present body. She says, "As it is now the small board can destroy what it has taken thousands of dollars to produce."

The matter came up for discussion at a meeting Tuesday night of the Woman's Advertising Club at a local cafe, and the statement has created something of a consternation and sensation in film and club circles.

The exhibitors of the Mutual program were treated to a pleasant surprise on Tuesday, last. The "Mutual Girl," "The Girl of Mystery," was in Chicago, and came to the exhibition rooms. There she was warmly welcomed and everyone present agreed that Gaumont had picked a "winner" to appear in their "Seeing America First" series.

Film Market Quotations and Financial Gossip

Supplied by R. D. Small of A. E. Butler & Co., Chicago.

	Bid	Asked
American Film Co, Inc....	95	99
Biograph Company	42	54
Colonial M. P. Corp.....	1	3	*
Famous Players Film Co..	90	120
General Film Corp., pref...	40	44
Mutual Film Corp., pref...	47	49
Mutual Film Corp., com...	45	47½
No. Am. Film Corp., pref..	70	74
No. Am. Film Corp., com..	67	72
New York M. P. Corp.....	51	56
Thanhouser Film Corp....	2¼	3½*
Triangle Film Corp.....	5½	5¾*
Universal Film Mfg. Co...190		..
Vogue Films, Inc.....125		..
World Film Corp.....	4	4½*

*Par $5.00

Signal Film Corp.: It is reported that "The Girl and the Game" (produced by this company) has started forward on its right foot, with bookings approximating $200,000, thus indicating that the public still wants thrillers. Of course, the combination of Helen Holmes and Director McGowan had already made good in a previous serial. This, and the fact that "The Diamond from the Sky" (also produced through the American-Mutual combination) which has been an unqualified success—naturally had its due effect upon the exhibitor's mind.

Triangle Film Corp.: Report each week a steady increase in the theaters taking the service. However, the volume of trading is very limited.

Mutual Film Corporation: Has been decidedly easier during the last ten days with common at one time offered under 47 and preferred under 48. This, however, does not reflect the actual condition of affairs, as it is known the business has shown a wonderful increase each week in the last dozen weeks.

Some startling changes have taken place in the managements of some of the producing companies lately—managers, directors, assistant directors, etc., have been dismissed with a very free hand. This has applied particularly to some of the companies constituting the General Film Corporation and also to those constituting the Triangle Film Corporation and probably indicates an economy that has been much needed in the last six or seven years. It is a welcome sign that some of the companies are putting the film business on somewhat the same platform of standards as is to be found in other industries, and the "lavish hand" is not to be the "guiding hand" in the future.

New York Motion Picture Corp.: Continues weak with apparently no buyers in the market.

MID-WEST NEWS

By William Noble

Oklahoma

The Gaiety theater at Muskogee, Okla., has reduced the admission price from ten to five cents, and in the future all persons will be charged five cents admission, whether adults or children.

Negroes at Muskogee, Okla., have protested to the city authorities against the showing in Muskogee of the film picture "The Birth of a Nation." The city commissioners have taken the protest under advisement.

Arkansas

Claiming to represent five thousand negroes, four members of that race have entered a protest with the city authorities of Fort Smith, Ark., against the showing in Fort Smith of the picture film, "The Birth of a Nation." The protest recites that the play is a gross misrepresentation of negro character and calculated to stir up race hatred and prejudices. The city officials of Fort Smith have taken the protest under advisement.

Texas

TheYale theater at Wortham, Texas, has been sold by Allie Jones to a company composed of A. W. Helton, T. H. Hood, J. C. Hackney and Harry Hood. The theater is being put in first-class condition, having been repapered, repaired and refitted and will be an up-to-date theater in every particular.

CHICAGO GOSSIP

"Joe" Bloom, roadman for the Celebrated Players Film Company, is now handling Illinois, the territory formerly covered by Nathan Wolf.

One of our good subscribers from Plymouth, Wis., writes the following letter, illustrating the fact that it pays to advertise: "Motography, Chicago, Ill., Gentlemen: Would appreciate if you would inform me of different film exchanges in your city handling six, seven and eight-reel features. Thanking you in advance for your trouble."

George L. Cox is directing a multiple reel subject, scenes for which will be laid in various cities extending from Boston to the Pacific coast.

A private showing of "The Ne'er do Well" was given at the Selig Polyscope Company's projection room last week.

W. N. Selig and H. C. Hoagland went to New York, Friday, December 10, Mr. Hoagland returning on Monday and Mr. Selig stopping over in New York for a few days longer. He is expected to return on Thursday.

Fred J. Beecroft, advertising manager of the Dramatic Mirror, was a Chicago visitor during the fore part of this week in the interest of his publication. Mr. Beecroft is one of the best liked and most successful advertising men in this industry and to say that he was successful in his visit would be like "painting the lily" or "tinting the sunset."

Adrianne Kroell, who has long been a Chicago favorite in moving pictures, expects to leave January 2 for the Pacific coast for a stay of two months.

Aaron M. Gollos of the Photoplay Releasing Company, purchased seven multiple reel subjects from the All Feature Distributing Company of New York, among which were "Home, Sweet Home," "The Battle of Sexes," "The Mountain Rat," "The Great Leap," "The Dishonored Medal," "The Floor Above," and "The Gangsters of New York."

The Chicago Tribune, in an editorial, in its issue of December 11, burlesques the Chicago censors as follows:

Our Own Movie Bulletin

The Globe Photoplay Company is still having difficulties with the censorship over its importations of the scenarios of the German popular playwright, Willy Shakspere. A sensational melodrama called "Hamlet, Prince of Denmark," was considered yesterday and the following cuts and alterations ordered:

A view of the castle of Elsinore at night is approved, but scenes showing Hamlet, Horatio, and Marcellus carrying deadly weapons must be shortened to flash. The ruling followed a heated debate. It was objected by one of the members of the board, not a Mason, that the actors suggested an assembly of Knights Templar, uniform rank, and thus tended to arouse sectarian feeling, but a vote taken was unfavorable to this view, and a cut to flash was accepted as a fair compromise. The ghost is ordered out for obvious reasons, and the subtitle "Angels and ministers of grace defend us! Be thou a spirit of health or goblin damned" must stop at goblin, omitting the expletive "damned."

In scene of mimic play cut out view of player queen pouring poison in ear of player king. Scene between Hamlet and his mother and the killing of Polonius must all come out, as tending to encourage disrespect to parents and murder of old men. Scene in graveyard must be shortened. Cut out closeup of Hamlet holding skull, shorten to flash scene of burial cortege of Ophelia, and cut out Laertes and Hamlet in grave. Last act must be shortened by cutting out the fencing match and stabbing of king. Body of Hamlet on stretcher may be shown in flash and entrance of Fortinbras, though objectionable as of militarist character, tending to obscure the fact that war is horrid, may be retained.

On this point, the board is said to be considering the propriety of ordering the name of the playwright, Shakespear, to be cut out of announcements as savoring of violence and harmfully suggestive to impressionable youth. The representative of the Chicago Peace Society on the board suggests that it be replaced by the nom de plume Shakehands.

Ralph D. Small left on Wednesday, December 15, for a short trip to the South to recover from the effects of a siege of la grippe, which confined him to his bed for eight days. His friends wish for him a speedy return to complete health.

The Chicago Examiner will hold a motion picture pageant and ball at the Hotel Sherman on December 23 for sweet charity's sake. A number of Chicago motion picture actors and actresses will act as patrons and patronesses and this magazine bespeaks the earnest co-operation and support of the exhibitors.

Thomas Ince passed through Chicago hurriedly on his way to New York, Sunday, where he is discussing business matters with the Triangle executives.

In order to set all rumors at rest the writer asked Harry Weiss personally if there was any truth regarding his leaving the Metro Company and was emphatically assured that there was absolutely no truth to the story. The Metro offices are now located on the fourth floor of the Mallers building, the necessity for more space than they could obtain on the fifth floor being the reason for the move.

Roie C. Seary is enthusiastic over the way in which the Triangle service is booking in the Chicago territory and in a conversation stated that his office had already exceeded the estimated receipts originally planned at the inception of the Triangle Company.

President Devine, of the Strand Theater Company, made a trip down to Indianapolis the other day to look after the plans for building a new Strand theater in that city.

NOTES FROM ALL OVER

Jay Hunt this week completed what is regarded as one of the best Murdock MacQuarrie feature pictures of recent months. "X 3" is the title and in it MacQuarrie is starred.

Pretty Neva Gerber is thoroughly enjoying her holiday and is acting as chauffeur to Adelaide Wise, the sister of Tom Wise, who is selling books and plays and things to unsuspecting photoplay manufacturers on the coast. Neva and Miss Wise are great friends, hence the chauffeur act, said chauffeuring being done in Neva's car.

During his holiday at Portland, Me., Francis Ford produced two photoplays which will be interesting from the fact that he showed just what he could do with raw material. He owns to the fact that he worked all his own family into the plays and also made use of the chief of police and other officials of his town.

Everyone is sorry for that very nice lady, Sarah Truax. She had to have her mother removed to the Good Samaritan hospital and the doctors do not hold out any hopes of recovery at all. It is all the more sad when one considers that Miss Truax recently brought her mother on from the north and took a bungalow so that they could be together again.

Jacques Jaccard is still away from the Universal city studios, making exterior scenes in the production of a three-reel Mexican melodrama entitled "Across the Mary Anderson's right, two characters who amused the company during their stay at Randsburg, filming "Flower o' the Desert," Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, under the direction of Roland S. Sturgeon.

Rio Grande." Olive Fuller Golden is being starred in the production and William Gettinger is playing opposite her.

Theda Bara, the most widely known of the William Fox stars, the most universally admired, hated, scorned and loved woman of the screen, will bury her Vampire identity in a feature film, in which she is now working, in the character of a Russian peasant, a character entirely different from any in which she has heretofore been seen.

Leon Kent, famous for his daredevil western subjects, is this week staging another of that type of film, written by himself, under the title, "Buck Simmons, Puncher." Kent plays the title role, with Mina Cunard opposite.

No, Gretchen Hartman was not one of the many who were given their notices by the Biograph company in Los Angeles. Miss Hartman is still acting for J. Farrell Macdonald, and she is one of the "oldest inhabitants" in point of service, too.

"Her Mother's Secret?" a William Fox feature, starring the Adonis of the screen, Ralph Kellard, with Dorothy Green, will present these two players in one of the most powerful human interest dramas. Its potency for good, in a screen story, is said to be greater than "The Old Homestead" as an example from the legitimate stage. "Her Mother's Secret?" was produced under the direction of Frederick Thomson.

Rollin S. Sturgeon, the Vitagraph producer, made a hurry trip to and from Big Bear Valley and Santa Monica for business purposes. It is not easy to get into the valley at this particular season of the year. Mr. Sturgeon reports all well and good progress being made. Many obstacles have had to be overcome in the big feature the company is making for the V. L. S. E. program, but that the picture will be one of the best ever produced in the west is an assured fact.

There is an awful lonesome lady tapping the typewriter at the old Santa Monica studios of the Vitagraph. She is all alohone, for the Vitagraphers are all either at Bear Valley or at the brand new studios at Hollywood. Doris Schroeder is the only sign of life at the old haunts, and she will not be there for very long. In the meantime she writes and edits and telephones and does lots of other useful things.

William Farnum will be seen, later in the month, in a William Fox feature entitled "A Soldier's Oath," in which he will portray a French soldier sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of his own wife. The story was produced under the direction of Oscar C. Apfel, who employed real French and German soldiers in the war scenes.

Gail Kane and eighteen principals engaged for the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation's production of "Her God" left for Naco, Ariz., last week, to be gone four weeks. Miss Kane and her supporting players will live on the edge of the American desert for a few weeks and will then go to old Mexico.

Miss Cissy Fitzgerald has other claims to fame besides her famous wink and her success as a screen actress in Casino Star Comedies. She is an author. "The War Baby," from her pen, will appear in time to be given as a Christmas present. This is not a play. It is a book. It is not right to say that it is from her pen, since Miss Fitzgerald dictates all her stories.

Owing to his desire to devote his whole time to scenario writing rather than to editorial work, George B. Seitz has turned over to John Clymer the position of scenario editor for Pathe. Mr. Clymer has been a scenario writer for years, and was formerly publicity man for the Gaumont Company. He is also known as a short story writer and musical critic. Mr. Seitz will continue to devote his whole time to writing for Pathe.

Because of his excellent work in Casino Star Comedies, the Gaumont company has advanced "Budd" Ross to stardom. For his first vehicle, Director Edwin Middleton has secured a laughable scenario from Rennold Wolf, called "Hunting." Mr. Ross has had long experience as a comedian in musical comedy, and his screen work reflects his excellent training in this field. For some time he has been under Director Middleton's eye, appearing opposite Miss Cissy Fitzgerald in the screen work she has done for Gaumont. "Hunting" will be released on the Mutual program December 26.

Sadie Lindblom, owner and leading lady of the Liberty Company of San Mateo, Cal., is contemplating a business visit to New York in connection with her concern. Miss Lindblom states that she hates to leave her acting even for a short time, for she never enjoyed anything half as much before.

H. C. McClung, a well-known camera man, has joined the William Fox organization and will begin work immediately on a big feature now being started. Mr. McClung is the only camera man who ever succeeded in photographing scenes in southern China.

After a short stay on Mount Wilson, Lynn Reynolds and his company of Universalites this week returned to the Universal City studios and completed the final scene in their production of a three-reel drama entitled "Missy." Myrtle Gonzales is starred in the title role, with Frank Newberg playing opposite.

Hobert Henley has made a rapid recovery from the injury he suffered when his car ran into a post. He has left the hospital and although he will limp for a long time, he is going to take up his part in the "Graft" serial once more. His injury necessitated a new part being written into the serial and this is taken by Harry Carey.

Among the distinguished visitors of the week at the Fine Arts California studio were a body of prominent officers of the American Federation of Labor, with which are affiliated all the district labor unions. The party was headed by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, with main offices in Washington, D. C. This party were personal guests of Director-General Griffith, who escorted them on a sight-seeing tour of the entire motion picture plant. Mr. Gompers and party came to California to attend the annual convention, which was recently held in the Auditorium at San Francisco. Another assemblage of prominent visitors were Mrs. Fidel Avila, wife of General Avila, governor of the state of Chihuahua; Mrs. Escudero, wife of the minister of finance and fomento (war) in Mexico, and Gunther R. Lessing, attorney for the Villa government, and who is in charge of the Mexican international affairs.

Monte M. Katterjohn, the young Ince photoplaywright, is expecting to leave within a few weeks for an extended trip into the Kentucky mountains to obtain atmosphere for a story he has been nurturing for some time. Katterjohn declares the story to be tremendously powerful, but says he requires a broader knowledge of the habits and customs of mountaineers before attempting work on the continuity.

In "The Genius," starring George Beban, on the production of which Maurice Tourneur is now engaged, there is a duel in the dark with rapiers, between Pierre, "the genius" (Mr. Beban), and Lesar, the artist (John Davidson), in which the utmost care has to be exercised to prevent the actual wounding of one of the actors. To make assurance doubly sure, M. Tourneur has called in the services of M. Victor de la Tasse and M. Emil Chappelain, two celebrated fencing masters, to assist him in staging the scene.

Delightful little Bessie Barriscale has been given a three weeks' holiday and has gone to San Jose for a rest. She has been working very hard, indeed, and was feeling tired out. Thomas H. Ince, who keeps a fatherly eye over his artist, noticed it and told her to take a lay-off, so Miss Bessie is finding out how jolly it is to rest and be paid well for doing it.

Nan Carter, well-known leader of society's younger set and who but recently was a prominent member of the cast of "Miss Information" with Elsie Janis, has joined the William Fox forces. She will be seen in a feature picture as yet unnamed, now being produced under the direction of Raoul A. Walsh.

Billy Sherwood, the New Orleans actor-athlete, who played the juvenile in Kleine-Edison's "The Danger Signal" and the juvenile heavy opposite Marguerite Courtot in "A Night of Terror" in Kalem's "Ventures of Marguerite," has been engaged by Edison to play the juvenile lead opposite Grace Williams in a three-reel Edison drama.

Stage Manager Tom Brierly and his large corps of men are this week erecting another mammoth set at Inceville. It is illustrative of the barracks at Delhi, British East India, and is for use in many of the big scenes in the current Triangle-Kay-Bee feature in which H. B. Warner is being starred under the direction of Charles Swickard.

Nat. G. Rothstein, Universal advertising manager who prepared the advertising booklet on "Graft," commented upon on another page of this issue.

"Smiling" Billy Mason made a 140-foot drop from an aeroplane onto a chimney the other day in a Keystone picture, and coming safely to earth, was patted on the shoulder by a stranger and told he was a "Good boy, good boy!" "Thanks," returned Billy, continuing to brush the dust from his airman's uniform. "But who is he?" he asked as the pleased stranger marched away. "Him?" replied Charles Arling, who was standing near by. "O, he's only the president of the Southern Pacific, looking over the plant!". And for once Billy Mason forgot to smile.

Robert Harron, the Triangle featured juvenile actor, who has been identified with the Griffith film dramas ever since their Biograph inception, plays an interesting role opposite Mae Marsh in "Hoodoo Ann."

In order to finish their last picture for the Keystone Film Company, Weber and Fields, the famous comedy team, worked steadily for eighteen hours without even a halt for meals on the day their contract expired. Cloudy and rainy weather made it almost impossible to photograph, but a covered stage was hurriedly set up, several banks of lights arranged and the work proceeded in spite of the elements. Mack Sennett personally directed the comedians through the long siege, and his tireless efforts resulted in finishing the work long after darkness had fallen. At the last minute the tired pair were hustled into an automobile and rushed to the train with their make-up still on.

Mae Marsh, to add a touch of realism in her new Triangle play, "Hoodoo Ann," voluntarily burned her hand in a kitchen scene. The scenario called for the described action, and Director Ingraham rehearsed Miss Marsh once or twice and Miss Marsh, who is an artist through and through, was not quite satisfied with the counterfeit effect. At her suggestion, the gas range was lighted, and the realistic little star allowed her hand to touch the red hot stove. Her burned hand received immediate medical attention and at the present writing is practically well.

The Pathe delegation at the exhibitors' ball in Philadelphia, December 8, consisted of Lillian Lorraine, Marie Wayne, Bliss Milford, Lois Meredith, M. Ramirez-Torres, W. A. S. Douglas, H. M. Horkheimer of Balboa, G. A. Smith, Ed Hardin, George B. Seitz and Harry J. Walsh. The Pathetites nearly forgot good resolutions to stick to the water wagon when Lillian Lorraine copped off the lead in the grand march. Manager Atwood of the Pathe Philadelphia office went to the ball for pleasure, but found the opportunity so good that he spent most of the evening booking the new serial, "The Red Circle."

Cissy Fitzgerald in a scene from Casino's "Cissy's Innocent Wink."

Robert B. Mantell and his wife, Genevieve Hamper, who are both starring in William Fox's motion picture productions, sailed on Wednesday, December 1, for Jamaica, British West Indies, where they will remain until spring and appear in four or more photoplay productions to be made there under the direction of J. Gordon Edwards.

Joseph W. Smiley, chief director for the new Ocean film who has just completed "Life Without Soul," five reels in seventeen days, based upon Mrs. Shelley's classic, "Frankenstein," which will be an early 1916 release, is now engaged in forming his company for his second Ocean picture, "The Unfortunate Youth," Mr. Smiley's own scenario from the novel of the same name by W. J. Locke, the celebrated English author, who wrote "The Morals of Marcus," "The Derelict" any many other best sellers. He has engaged Lilie Leslie as the leading woman; Wilmuth Merkyl for the title role; William Cohill, John H. Smiley, Charles Graham and Sue Balfour.

Ralph Kellard, one of the William Fox stars, has organized a Happy Marriage club. The object is to bring the faults of the members to the attention of brides-to-be in the hope that it will lessen the divorce evil.

Lillian Lorraine, who has been starring in Pathe's "Neal of the Navy," has returned to New York from the Balboa studios on the coast and appeared last week at each of the Loew New York theaters coincident with the release of the last episode of "Neal."

The beautiful Mutual Traveler is now traveling toward the setting sun. She has just completed an interesting series of views of the blue-grass region of Kentucky for her "See America First" series, and is now in Chicago being filmed in picturesque and interesting spots in that city. In the release of December 14 the Mutual Traveler visits Pittsburgh, Pa., and the steel mills.

Frank Thompson, son and heir of the great Denman Thompson, whose immortal "The Old Homestead" is being adapted by the Famous Players, was an interested visitor at the company's studio while some of the scenes from the play were being enacted. Mr. Thompson, who appeared in the original play with his father, was particularly impressed by the work of Frank Losee, who is giving the beloved character of Josh Whitcomb its silent impersonation.

George Brackett Seitz, Pathe playwright, journeyed to Philadelphia to attend the Philadelphia Motion Picture Exhibitors' Ball. On the pullman he dashed off a scenario, thereby to earn the price of champagne bubbles—for other "thirsties." He was introduced as the youth who made life perilous for Pauline and who furnished exploits for Elaine.

Yvonne Chappelle who has attained great success as a dancer is now going to have a prominent position on the screen. Director Richard Garrick has signed her to play with one of the Mutual Masterpicture companies, edition de luxe, which Gaumont now has working at its winter quarters at Jacksonville, Fla. Miss Chappelle is the daughter of a prominent Chicago sculptor.

Joseph De Grasse and his company of Rex Players this week returned to the Universal City studios after a short stay in San Francisco where they went to stage exterior scenes in the production of a five-reel feature production entitled, "Love Thine Enemy."

Pursuing its policy of contracting with stage celebrities to appear in its forthcoming five-part feature releases, the Ocean Film Corporation, have contracted with Miss Georgia Caine to appear in an early release of that company. The feature in which Miss Caine will star has not been chosen, but several popular dramatic productions are under advisement. Miss Caine is by nature intensely dramatic, and it has been her aspiration to star in a dramatic production.

Edward Coxen, the leading man of the Coxen-Greenwood Company of "Flying A" players, is ill. Coxen contracted a severe cold recently, and complications have set in to such an extent that Ed has been forced to take to his downy couch for a week or two at least. Coxen's illness for a time was the cause of much apprehension among his confreres, but reports from the sick-room are now to the effect that threatened pneumonia has been averted.

Pauline Frederick is delighted at the prospect of changing from the Egyptian atmosphere of "Bella Donna" for the regular, calm and collected American atmosphere of "Lydia Gilmore," which will be the next photoplay in which the Famous Players star will appear.

Mary Boland, the beautiful speaking stage star, who has been working in Ince-supervised Triangle Kay Bee features for several months, completed her performances with Frank Keenan under the direction of Reginald Barker, this week, and has left for New York where she will take a prolonged rest before resuming her stage career.

S. E. V. Taylor, accompanied by Hollie McIntyre, the original of "Bunty Pulls the Strings," spent the past three weeks at Port Royal and Kingston, Jamaica, where many of the scenes in "Nan Perrine" are being staged.

Colin Campbell, Selig Director, together with his stock company including Thomas Santschi and Bessie Eyton, left for San Francisco on December 2. In 'Frisco special water scenes for a forthcoming Selig Special "Flotsam and Jetsom" will be filmed. Director Campbell and his "Ne'er-do-well" company were present at the opening of the Panama Canal, and therefore it is appropriate that Mr. Campbell and company should be present at the closing of the Panama Fair.

Alfred Vosburgh, who plays juvenile leads opposite Vivian Rich in "Flying A" dramas, has practically completed the script of a spectacular two-reel subject in which he and Miss Rich will take the leading roles.

Complete Record of Current Films

Believing the classification of film pictures by the nature of their subjects to be of greater importance to the exhibitor than classification by makes, MOTOGRAPHY has adopted this style in listing current films. Exhibitors are urged to make use of this convenient tabulation in making up their programs. Films will be listed as long in advance of their release dates as possible. Film manufacturers are requested to send us their bulletins as early as possible. Reasonable care is used, and the publishers cannot be responsible for errors.

General Program

Monday.

	12-13	No release this week	Essanay
D	12-13	The Glory of Youth	Kalem 4,000
D	12-13	The Moment Before Death	Lubin 1,000
D	12-13	The Coquette's Awakening	Selig 2,000
T	12-13	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 99, 1915	Selig 1,000
C	12-13	Benjamin Bunter, Book Agent	Vitagraph 1,000

Tuesday.

D	12-14	Her Step-children	Biograph 2,000
D	12-14	Reckoning Day	Essanay 3,000
C	12-14	Almost a King	Kalem 1,000
C	12-14	The Great Detective	Lubin 1,000
D	12-14	On the Eagle Trail	Selig 1,000
D	12-14	A Question of Right and Wrong	Vitagraph 2,000

Wednesday.

C	12-15	Divorcons	Biograph 4,000
E	12-15	History of the Big Tree	Edison 333
C	12-15	The Black's Mysterious Box	Edison 333
C	12-15	The Hicks in Nightmare Land	Edison 333
C	12-15	The Fable of "Sister Mae Who Did as Well as Could Be Expected"	Essanay 1,000
D	12-15	To the Vile Dust (No. 4 of the Stingaree Series)	Kalem 2,000
D	12-15	The Inner Chamber	Lubin 3,000
C	12-15	The Faith of Sonny Jim	Vitagraph 1,000

Thursday.

C	12-16	Cupid Entangled	Biograph 1,000
C	12-16	Snakeville, Champion	Essanay 1,000
D	12-16	A Thief in the Night	Lubin 2,000
C	12-16	When the Snow Hit Watertown	Mina 1,000
D	12-16	The Golden Spurs	Selig 2,000
T	12-16	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 100, 1915	Selig 1,000
D	12-16	The Flower of the Hills	Vitagraph 1,000

Friday.

D	12-17	Fate	Biograph 1,000
D	12-17	The Hand of the Law	Edison 3,000
D	12-17	Broncho Billy's Marriage	Essanay 3,000
D	12-17	The Secret Message (No. 8 of the Ventures of Marguerite)	Kalem 1,000
D	12-17	Sweeter Than Revenge	Lubin 1,000
	12-17	Speed Kings	Vim 1,000
C	12-17	The Deceivers	Vitagraph 1,000

Saturday.

C	12-18	Santa Claus Versus Cupid	Edison 1,000
D	12-18	A Christmas Revenge	Essanay 2,000
D	12-18	The Wrong Train Order	Kalem 1,000
C	12-18	An Unwilling Burglar	Lubin 1,000
D	12-18	Jungle Justice	Selig 1,000
D	12-18	A Man's Sacrifice	Vitagraph 3,000

Monday.

D	12-20	The Failure	Biograph 1,000
	12-20	No Release This Week	Essanay
D	12-20	Heart Aches	Lubin 4,000
C	12-20	Otto's Cabaret	Lubin 1,000
C	12-20	Perkin's Pep Producer (No. 6 of the Chronicles of Bloom Center)	Selig 2,000
T	12-20	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 101, 1915	Selig 1,000
C	12-20	Hartney Merwin's Adventures	Selig 1,000
C	12-20	Levy's Seven Daughters	Vitagraph 1,000
D	12-20	On Her Wedding Night	Vitagraph 4,000
C	12-20	The Patent Food Conveyor	Vitagraph 1,000

Tuesday.

D	12-21	Parker Jim's Guardianship	Biograph 2,000
D	12-21	The Danger of Being Lonesome	Essanay 2,000
C	12-21	The Bandits of Macaroni Mountains	Kalem 1,000

Wednesday.

D	12-22	The Tides of Retribution	Biograph 3,000
C	12-22	Canimated Nooz Pictorial	Essanay 1,000
D	12-22	A Bushranger at Bay (No. 5 of the Stingaree Series)	Kalem 2,000

Thursday.

	12-23	No Release This Week	Essanay
D	12-23	Beyond All Is Love	Lubin 3,000
	12-23	Title Not Reported	Mina
T	12-23	Hearst-Selig News Pictorial No. 102, 1915	Selig 1,000

Friday.

D	12-24	Blade o' Grass	Edison 3,000
	12-24	No Release This Week	Essanay
D	12-24	The Oriental's Plot (No. 9 of the Ventures of Marguerite)	Kalem 1,000
C	12-24	Mixed and Fixed	Vim 1,000
C	12-24	Is Christmas a Bore?	Vitagraph 1,000

Saturday.

D	12-25	The Woman With a Rose	Essanay 3,000
D	12-25	A Boy at the Throttle	Kalem 1,000
C	12-25	No Smoking	Lubin 1,000
D	12-25	The Sacred Tiger of Agra	Selig 1,000
D	12-25	The Thirteenth Girl	Vitagraph 3,000

V. L. S. E. Program

Sept.	20	The Circular Staircase	Selig 5,000
Sept.	27	Tillie's Tomato Surprise	Lubin 6,000
Sept.	27	The Great Ruby	Lubin 5,000
Oct.	4	Dust of Egypt	Vitagraph 5,000
Oct.	11	In the Palace of the King	Essanay 6,000
Oct.	11	The Valley of Lost Hope	Lubin 5,000
Oct.	18	A Black Sheep	Selig 5,000
Oct.	18	The Man Who Couldn't Beat God	Vitagraph 5,000
Oct.	25	The Rights of Man	Lubin 5,000
Nov.	1	The Turn of the Road	Vitagraph 5,000
Nov.	1	The Crimson Wing	Essanay 6,000
Nov.	8	The Raven	Essanay 5,000
Nov.	15	Sweet Alyssum	Selig 5,000
Nov.	15	Heights of Hazard	Vitagraph 5,000
Nov.	22	The Nation's Peril	Lubin 5,000
Nov.	29	The Caveman	Vitagraph 5,000
Dec.	6	The Alster Case	Essanay 5,000
Dec.	6	The Man's Making	Lubin 5,000
Dec.	13	I'm Glad My Boy Grew Up to Be a Soldier	Selig 4,000
Dec.	13	The Price for Folly	Vitagraph 5,000
Dec.	20	The Great Divide	Lubin 5,000
Dec.	20	A Daughter of the City	Essanay 5,000
Dec.	27	What Happened to Father	Vitagraph 5,000

Mutual Program

Monday.

D	12-13	The Solution of the Mystery	American 2,000
C	12-13	The Conductor's Classy Champion	Falstaff 1,000
C	12-13	The Book Agent	Novelty 1,000

Tuesday.

D	12-14	An Innocent Traitor	Thanhouser 2,000
S	12-14	See America First, No. 14	Gaumont 500
C	12-14	Keeping Up with the Joneses	Gaumont 500
C	12-14	A Girl, a Guard and a Garret	Beauty 1,000

Wednesday.

D	12-15	The Ace of Death	Rialto 3,000
C	12-15	A Musical Mix-up	Novelty 1,000

Thursday.

D	12-16	The Arab's Vengeance	Centaur 2,000
C	12-16	Bill Bunks, the Bandit	Falstaff 1,000
T	12-16	Mutual Weekly No. 50	Mutual 1,000

Friday.

D	12-17	In the Sunset Country	Mustang 2,000
C	12-17	Spider Barlow's Soft Spot	American 1,000
C	12-17	The Holdup	Cub 1,000

Saturday.

C	12-18	His Majesty the King	Than-o-play 3,000
C	12-18	Two Hearts and a Thief	Beauty 1,000

Sunday.

D	12-19	The Opal Pin	Reliance 2,000
C	12-19	Coccy's Innocent Wink	Casino 1,000
C	12-19	The Political Pull of John	Thanhouser 1,000

Monday.

D	12-20	The Clean Up	American 2,000
C	12-20	Toodles, Tom and Trouble	Falstaff 1,000
D	12-20	The Fiddler	Novelty 1,000

Tuesday.

D	12-21	Ambition	Thanhouser 3,000
S	12-21	See American First, No. 15	Gaumont 500
C	12-21	Keeping Up With the Joneses	Gaumont 500
C	12-21	Making a Man of Johnnie	Beauty 1,000

Wednesday.

D	12-22	The Mystery of Carter Breen	Centaur 3,000
C	12-22	The Innocent Sandwich Man	Novelty 500
S	12-22	Between Lakes and Mountains	Novelty 500

Thursday.

D	12-23	The Winning of Jess	Centaur 2,000
C	12-23	When William's Whiskers Worked	Falstaff 1,000
T	12-23	Mutual Weekly No. 51	Mutual 1,000

Friday.

D	12-24	The Pitch o' Chance	Mustang 2,000
D	12-24	Yes or No	American 1,000
C	12-24	Hearts and Clubs	Cub 1,000

Saturday.

C	12-25	Author! Author! ..... Mustang	3,000
C	12-25	That Country Girl..... Beauty	1,000

Sunday.

D	12-26	The Law of Success..... Reliance	2,000
C	12-26	Hunting ..... Casino	1,000

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

Universal Program

Monday.

D	12-13	The Primrose Path..... Broadway	5,000
C	12-13	Her Speedy Affair..... Nestor	1,000
D	12-13	Liquor and the Law (Graft Series No. 1)..... Universal	2,000

Tuesday.

D	12-14	Lord John's Journal (Adventure No. 1, Lord John in New York) ..... Gold Seal	4,000
	12-14	No release this week..... Rex
C	12-14	Almost a Papa..... Imp	1,000

Wednesday.

D	12-15	The Widow's Secret..... Victor	2,000
C	12-15	Blackmail in a Hospital..... L Ko	1,000
T	12-15	Animated Weekly No. 197..... Universal	1,000

Thursday.

D	12-16	The Bride of the Nancy Lee..... Laemmle	2,000
C	12-16	Colonel Steel, Master Gambler..... Big U	1,000
	12-16	No release this week..... Powers

Friday.

D	12-17	The Vacuum Test..... Imp	1,000
	12-17	No release this week..... Victor
D	12-17	Where the Heather Blooms..... Nestor	2,000

Saturday.

D	12-18	His Real Character..... Bison	2,000
D	12-18	The Water Clue..... Laemmle	1,000
C	12-18	Title not reported..... Joker

Sunday.

D	12-19	The Bachelor's Christmas..... Rex	3,000
C	12-19	The Doomed Groom..... Laemmle	1,000

Monday.

C	12-20	Father and the Boys..... Broadway	5,000
C	12-20	Love and a Savage..... Nestor	1,000
D	12-20	The Tenement House Evil (Graft Series No. 2) ..... Universal	2,000

Tuesday.

D	12-21	Christmas Memories ..... Gold Seal	3,000
	12-21	No Release This Week..... Rex
C	12-21	When Love Laughs..... Imp	1,000

Wednesday.

D	12-22	The Great Fear..... Laemmle	1,000
C	12-22	From Beanery to Billions..... L-Ko	2,000
T	12-22	Animated Weekly No. 198..... Universal	1,000

Thursday.

D	12-23	One Hundred Years Ago..... Laemmle	2,000
	12-23	No Release This Week..... Big U
V	12-23	Howard's Monarchs of the American Forest..... Powers	500
E	12-23	Wild Bird Life..... Powers	500

Friday.

D	12-24	The Terrible Truth..... Rex	1,000
C	12-24	The Tale of the C..... Victor	3,000
	12-24	No Release This Week..... Nestor

Saturday.

D	12-25	When Rogues Fall Out..... Bison	3,000
E	12-25	Where Uncle Sam Makes His Laws and Keeps His Relics ..... Powers	1,000
C	12-25	When Three Is a Crowd..... Nestor	1,000

Sunday.

D	12-26	Stronger Than Death..... Rex	2,000
C	12-26	Greed and Gasoline ..... L-Ko	1,000
	12-26	No Release This Week..... Laemmle
C	12-18	The Opera Singer's Romance..... Joker	1,000

Miscellaneous Features

Thou Shalt Not Kill..... Circle Film Corp.		5,000
For Her Son..... Great Northern		4,000
Joseph and His Brethren..... Dormet Film		6,000
The World of Today..... Reliable Feature Film		6,000
Marvelous Maciste ..... Hanover Film Co.		3,000
The Burglar and the Lady..... Sun Photoplay Co.		5,000
The World of Today..... Reliable Feature Film		6,000

Associated Service.

Released week of

Dec.	13	The Blight of Greed..... Empire	2,000
Dec.	13	Your Only Friend..... Ramona	2,000
Dec.	13	The Spectre ..... Santa Barbara	2,000
Dec.	13	The Man in Him..... Alhambra	2,000
Dec.	13	Ike Stops a Battle..... Federal	1,000
Dec.	13	Going -Going—Gone ..... Atla	1,000
Dec.	13	The Spooners ..... Banner	1,000
Dec.	13	Taking Chances ..... Deer	1,000

Fox Film Corporation

Released Week of

Oct.	25	The Family Stain.....	5,000
Nov.	1	Carmen	6,000
Nov.	8	The Blindness of Devotion.....	5,000
Nov.	11	A Woman's Past.....	5,000
Nov.	29	The Galley Slave.....	5,000
Nov.	21	The Broken Law.....	5,000
Dec.	5	The Unfaithful Wife.....	5,000
Dec.	12	Her Mother's Secret.....	5,000
Dec.	19	A Soldier's Oath.....	5,000
Dec.	26	Destruction	5,000

Kleine-Edison

Released week of

Oct.	20	The Green Cloak..... Kleine	5,000
Nov.	3	The Sentimental Lady..... Kleine	5,000
Nov.	10	Children of Eve..... Edison	5,000
Nov.	17	The Politicians ..... Kleine	5,000
Dec.	1	The Danger Signal..... Kleine	5,000
Dec.	8	The Destroying Angel..... Edison	5,000
Dec.	15	The Bondwomen ..... Kleine	5,000

Kriterion

Released Week of

Nov.	29	The Witness ..... Paragon	2,000
Nov.	29	Billy Puts One Over..... Santa Barbara	1,000
Nov.	29	Big-Hearted John ..... Alhambra	2,000
Nov.	29	Sherlock Holmes Boob Detective..... Santa Barbara	1,000
Nov.	29	The Keeper of the Flock..... Santa Barbara	2,000
Nov.	29	The Unloaded 45..... C. K.	1,000
Nov.	29	The Western Border..... Monty	2,000
Nov.	29	Catching a Speeder..... Punch	1,000
Nov.	29	Father and Son..... Trump	2,000
Nov.	29	Such a War..... Pyramid	1,000
Nov.	29	A Mask, a Ring and a Pair of Handcuffs..... Navajo	2,000
Nov.	29	Syd, the Bum Detective..... Alhambra	1,000

Metro Features.

Released week of

Oct.	4	Song of the Wage Slave..... Metro	5,000
Oct.	11	The Stork's Nest..... Metro	5,000
Oct.	18	The Final Judgment..... Metro	5,000
Oct.	25	My Madonna ..... Metro	5,000
Nov.	1	Tables Turned ..... Metro	5,000
Nov.	8	Pennington's Choice ..... Metro	5,000
Nov.	15	The Woman Pays..... Metro	5,000
Nov.	22	One Million Dollars..... Metro	5,000
Nov.	29	Barbara Frietchie ..... Metro	5,000
Dec.	6	A Yellow Streak..... Metro	5,000
Dec.	13	The House of Tears..... Metro	5,000
Dec.	20	Rosemary ..... Metro	5,000

Mutual Master-Pictures.

Released week of

Nov.	11	The End of the Road..... American	5,000
Nov.	25	The Strife Eternal..... Mutual	5,000
Dec.	2	The Forbidden Adventure..... Mutual	5,000
Dec.	9	The Buzzard's Shadow..... Mutual	5,000
Dec.	16	The Mill on the Floss..... Thanhouser	5,000
Dec.	23	The Painted Soul..... Mutual	5,000

Paramount Features.

Released week of

Dec.	9	The Unknown ..... Lasky	5,000
Dec.	13	The Cheat ..... Lasky	5,000
Dec.	13	Paramount News Pictures..... Paramount	1,000
Dec.	16	The Reform Candidate..... Pallas	5,000
Dec.	20	The Immigrant ..... Lasky	5,000

Pathe.

Released Week of

Dec.	20	New Adventures of Wallingford No. 12..... Pathe	2,000
Dec.	20	Pathe News No. 102..... Pathe	1,000
Dec.	20	Pathe News No. 103..... Pathe	1,000
Dec.	20	Animal Movements Analyzed..... Photocolor	1,000
Dec.	20	A Tea Plantation—Java..... Globe	1,000
Dec.	20	Peculiar Patients' Pranks..... Phunphilms	1,000
Dec.	20	The War God's Decree..... Victory	3,000
Dec.	20	The Board-Bill Dodgers..... Starlight	1,000
Dec.	20	The Red Circle No. 2..... Balboa	2,000
Dec.	20	Life of Our Saviour..... Pathe	7,000

Triangle Film Corporation.

Released week of

Dec.	19	Jordon Is a Hard Road; Dorothy Gish, Frank Campeau ..... Fine Arts	5,000
Dec.	19	The Winged Idol; Katharine Kaelred..... Triangle-Kay-Bee	5,000
Dec.	19	Crooked to the End; Fred Mace..... Triangle-Keystone	2,000
Dec.	19	Fatty and the Broadway Stars; Roscoe Arbuckle ..... Triangle-Keystone	2,000
Dec.	26	The Penitentes; Orrin Johnson..... Fine Arts	5,000
Dec.	26	A Submarine Pirate; Syd Chaplin..... Triangle-Keystone	4,000
Dec.	26	The Edge of the Abyss; Mary Boland, Frank Mills, Willard Mack..... Kay-Bee	5,000

World Features.

Released week of

Nov.	29	Not Guilty ..... Triumph	5,000
Nov.	29	The Sins of Society..... Brady	5,000
Dec.	6	The Warning ..... Triumph	5,000
Dec.	6	Creeping Tides ..... Equitable	5,000
Dec.	6	The Gray Mask..... Shubert	5,000
Dec.	13	The Siren's Song..... Shubert	5,000
Dec.	13	The Labyrinth ..... Equitable	5,000
Dec.	20	Over Night ..... Brady	5,000
Dec.	20	Sealed Lips ..... Equitable	5,000

Important Notice

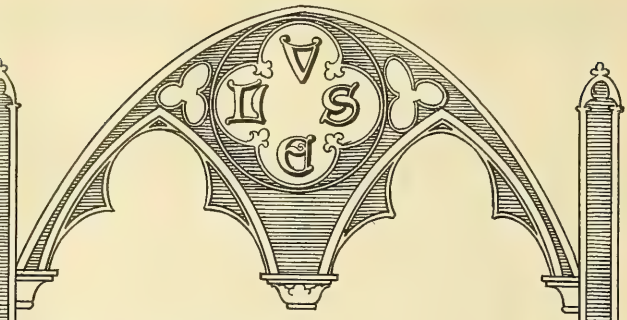
¶ The price of Motography beginning with the edition to be dated December 4, 1915, will be 15 cents for single copies, when purchased from a news dealer, or direct from the home office.

¶ To those who have been purchasing Motography at the news stand each week, we offer the suggestion to place your subscription in our hands. 15 cents a week for 52 weeks means an outlay of $7.80 a year.

¶ Regular subscribers to Motography get 52 numbers of their favorite Motion Picture Trade Journal for $3.00—thus saving the difference between $7.80 and $3.00. $4.80 a year is worth considering.

¶ By remitting direct to us, you get your copy of Motography from 24 to 48 hours earlier than you do through the news dealer. Let us have your order on this blank.

MOTOGRAPHY,
Monadnock Building,
Chicago, Ill.



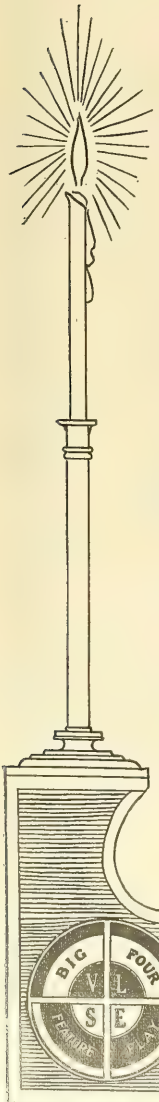
_____ 1915

Enclosed find Three Dollars for which please send Motography, the Motion Picture Trade Journal, to my address for 52 weeks.

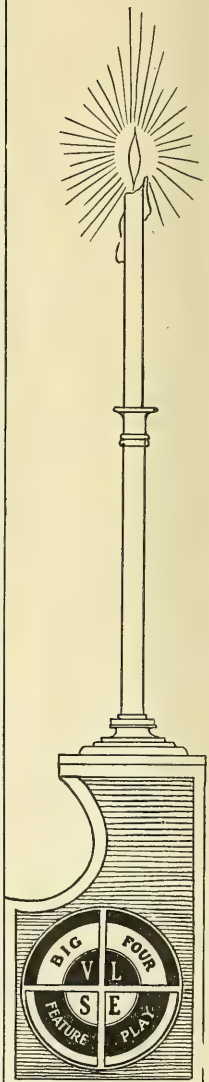
Name _____

Address _____

_____



The New Religion
As taught by
VITAGRAPH
LUBIN
SELIG
ESSANAY
Is an enlightened religion
Of efficiency
Of a square deal and
Of selling service



The New Religion
Is backed up by Productions of Merit
Honesty with the exhibitor
And all that Science
Money
And brains
Can give you
In photoplay productions to-day

The New Religion
Is founded on Confidence
Reliance
And productions that pay you profit

The New Religion
Helps the exhibitor
Help himself.
Help us by investigating
The New Religion.

V. L. S. E. Inc.
1600 BROADWAY

Releases

"Sonny Jim and the Great American Game"

Comedy ..... MONDAY, NOV. 15

Sonny Jim carelessly breaks a window playing baseball, for which he is kept in the house a whole week, but on Saturday he escapes in time to save his team from defeat and wins his parents' forgiveness. BOBBY CONNELLY as Sonny Jim.

"The Gypsy Trail"

Two-Part Drama, from "Gone to the Dogs"
TUESDAY, NOV. 16

A wonderful tale of romance and adventure is told by the young gypsy to his white friend; how he was saved from folly and disgrace and brought out into the sunlight of happiness and love. ANTONIO MORENO in the lead.

"Count 'em"

Comedy ..... WEDNESDAY, NOV. 17

Anita "just adores" counts, so Earle and his friends give her an overdose of counts. After some amazingly funny mixups, Earle wins out. EARLE WILLIAMS, ANITA STEWART and an all star cast.

"A Motorcycle Elopement"

Comedy ..... THURSDAY, NOV. 18

Jack elopes with Bessie in a motorcycle but finds the tables turned on him and his elopement is a laughable failure. JEWELL HUNT and ARTHUR COZINE are the leads.

"Diplomatic Henry"

Comedy ..... FRIDAY, NOV. 19

Henry prides himself upon his diplomatic ability but he makes one awful blunder, which starts a landslide of trouble his way. His wife and Aunt Becky permanently rid him of diplomatic aspirations. Featuring MR. and MRS. SIDNEY DREW.

"Heredity"

Three-Part Drama. Broadway Star Feature
SATURDAY, NOV. 20

An inherited criminal tendency manifests itself in an adopted child which reveals her real identity and restores happiness to the right girl. An all star cast.

Six a Week, Including a Three-Part Broadway Star Feature

"LOVE AND LAW" Comedy ..... Monday, Nov. 22
"SAINTS AND SINNERS" Three-Part Drama, Broadway Star Feature ..... Tuesday, Nov. 23
"SONNY JIM AND THE FAMILY PARTY" Comedy ..... Wednesday, Nov. 24
"GHOSTS AND FLYPAPER" Comedy ..... Thursday, Nov. 25
"ALL FOR THE LOVE OF A GIRL" Comedy ..... Friday, Nov. 26
"A 'MODEL' WIFE" Two-Part Comedy Drama ..... Saturday, Nov. 27

Vitagraph One, Three and Six Sheet Posters

Consistency

Is a by-word in program releases — a chain only as strong as its weakest link— and the regular releases, as a rule, are only as good as the weakest one.

VITAGRAPH Regular Releases Show CONSISTENCY.

They are all strong.

All above the average.

And the money is put in the film—not in advertising.

You get value received and you give your customers their money's worth when you use VITAGRAPH Regular Releases.

IT'S A VITAGRAPH —That's all you need to know about a film.

THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA
EXECUTIVE OFFICES
EAST 15TH ST. & LOCUST AVE., BROOKLYN, N.Y.
NEW YORK CHICAGO LONDON PARIS

YOU CAN BOOK THEM WITHOUT LOOKING AT THEM

That is because Essanay photoplays are all standardized. Essanay permits of no release that is not up to a high standard of excellence. It guarantees every drama and comedy.

HENRY B. WALTHALL

the world's greatest photoplay actor, and master of emotional drama, soon will appear in another great photoplay to be released through the General Film Co.

G. M. ANDERSON

is thrilling millions by his great western dramas. The latest are:

"BRONCHO BILLY'S LOVE AFFAIR"
Released November 26
and
"THE BURGLAR'S GODFATHER"
Released December 3

ESSANAY

The Latest

ESSANAY-CHAPLIN

picturing the great comedian, Charles Chaplin, in a new and funnier-than-ever role is

"A NIGHT IN THE SHOW"

in 2 acts

Released November 15, through the General Film Co.

DARWIN KARR

is presented in

"THE LOSING GAME"

3 act drama—Released November 30

★★★

Other Releases

"THE EDGE OF THINGS"
3 act drama
Released, November 27

"THE NIGHT OF SOULS"
3 act drama
Released, November 29

"THE FABLE OF THE LOW DOWN EXPERT ON THE SUBJECT OF BABIES" By George Ade.
Released December 1

"JACK SPRAT AND THE SCALES OF LOVE"
Comedy—Released December 2, through the General Film Co.

1333 ARGYLE ST., CHICAGO

George K. Spoor, President